

Making Biblical Scholarship Accessible

This document was supplied for free educational purposes. Unless it is in the public domain, it may not be sold for profit or hosted on a webserver without the permission of the copyright holder.

If you find it of help to you and would like to support the ministry of Theology on the Web, please consider using the links below:

https://www.buymeacoffee.com/theology

https://patreon.com/theologyontheweb

PayPal

https://paypal.me/robbradshaw

A table of contents for The Expositor can be found here:

https://biblicalstudies.org.uk/articles expositor-series-1.php men, but rejected. We are perhaps tempted to ask St. Paul's question, Is there unrighteousness with God? No; but there is more than meets the eye. Men see conduct; God sees hearts, and the real balance of good and evil. It may be lamentable that tares mingle with the wheat; it is worse when the soil bears no wheat at all.

Here is the true measure of man compared with man. What constituted the difference between these Brothers? Not station or class (as in the great opposites Lazarus and Dives); not knowledge or the want of it; not the endless diversities which make human judgment as to comparative merit in one's fellow-creatures impossible. The difference lay in no externals, but in the personal will and choice. With home and prospects and spring of life the same, each was free to shape his individual course. As we follow them out to the eventual crisis, we see that it is not Isaac that determines it, but God. The partial bias of the patriarch was overruled against his consent, without his conscious-The disposal of the Blessing was the predestination of God, and we are to recognize in it, as we may infer Isaac did recognize in it, his judgment. Whatever may be our prepossessions as to the personal desert of Esau and Jacob respectively, we may at least, if we extend our view to mankind at large, read in this record a clear note of the essential distinction between those who serve God and those who serve him not.

J. E. Yonge.

NOTE ON MATTHEW XVI. 18.

If the second clause of the sentence stood alone, then indeed we should be more than justified by the analogy of our Lord's form of speech in John ii. 19, in admitting a reference on our Lord's part to Himself in the words, $\hat{\epsilon}\pi\hat{\iota}$ $\tau a\acute{\nu}\tau \eta$ $\tau \hat{\eta}$ $\pi \acute{\epsilon}\tau \rho a$ $o\hat{\iota}\kappa o\delta o\mu\acute{\eta}\sigma \omega$ $\mu o\nu \tau \dot{\eta}\nu$ $\hat{\epsilon}\kappa \kappa\lambda \eta \sigma \acute{\iota}a\nu$. But in what sense such a statement, so understood, could be consecutive to the preceding $\sigma \grave{\iota} \epsilon \hat{\iota}$ $\Pi \acute{\epsilon}\tau \rho os$, I must confess, with all deference to the views of those more learned than myself, that I am unable to discover. It is hard to suppose the $\sigma \grave{\nu} \epsilon \hat{\iota}$ $\Pi \acute{\epsilon}\tau \rho os$ introduced only for the sake of a play upon the name which is positively misleading.

I am myself no Syriac scholar, but I believe that in the Syriac version the same word is repeated, so that there is not the same contrast as in the Greek between the $\pi\acute{\epsilon}\tau\rho\sigma$ s and the $\pi\acute{\epsilon}\tau\rho\sigma$. Nay, there is an implied identity; and this fact ought surely to carry some weight in the attempt to interpret the verse.

But admitting the distinction between $\pi \epsilon \tau \rho a$, the living rock, and $\pi \epsilon \tau \rho o s$, the fragment, I would suggest what seems to me a possible interpretation.

We may assume, in that case, that the $\pi \acute{\epsilon} \tau \rho \sigma$ implies a $\pi \acute{\epsilon} \tau \rho \sigma$ of which it is a sample, and with which it may be, to that extent, identified. We are all familiar with the expression, "a chip of the old block." The quality of the chip bespeaks a block of like quality. The chip is a pattern or sample of the block. In the same way the evidently durable $\pi \acute{\epsilon} \tau \rho \sigma$ calls up the image of a $\pi \acute{\epsilon} \tau \rho \sigma$ of like quality, as that which would afford an unrivalled foundation upon which to build. Thus when our Lord to his first utterance, "I say also unto thee that thou art petros," adds the words, "and upon this petra I will build my Church," it is like the farmer taking up the sample, and declaring, "With this corn will I sow my field," or the woman viewing the pattern, and saying, "Of this stuff will I have a dress."

"This corn," says the farmer, holding it in his hand, though may be not that handful, and certainly not that handful only, will be sown. "This stuff," says the woman, meaning stuff like this, the piece from which this pattern was taken. In like manner may we assume our Lord to mean, after the reference to Peter, that upon rock of this quality He would build his Church. I think we may take it to be implied that upon a $\pi \acute{\epsilon} \tau \rho a$ of some sort the building must be reared: a $\pi \acute{\epsilon} \tau \rho a$ of some sort must be sought for a foundation. The quality of a particular $\pi \acute{\epsilon} \tau \rho o$ s at this point takes the Saviour's attention. "A $\pi \acute{\epsilon} \tau \rho a$ of like quality to this $\pi \acute{\epsilon} \tau \rho o s$ is that which I shall choose on which to build my Church," is his instantly-declared decision.

A thought in part parallel to that here presented is to be found in Isaiah li. 1, 2: "Look unto the rock whence ye are hewn, and to the hole of the pit whence ye are digged. Look unto Abraham your father, and unto Sarah that bare you." Here "Abraham your father" is spoken of to the Jewish people as "the rock whence ye are hewn." Passing on to New Testament times, we learn from the teaching of our Lord and his apostles, that it is no longer those who merely trace their lineal descent from Abraham, but those who are partakers of the same faith, that are to be reckoned as his true children. He is "the father of the faithful" to whatever race belonging. Abraham the man of faith is as the quarry. It is a like faith that will be peak stones taken from that quarry. It is by their faith that their solidarity with Abraham is to be discerned.

Now the two passages are so far similar that in both there is implied $\pi\acute{\epsilon}\tau\rho\sigma$ and a $\pi\acute{\epsilon}\tau\rho\sigma$. They are dissimilar in this—that in the one case the $\pi\acute{\epsilon}\tau\rho\sigma$ is quarried to furnish $\pi\acute{\epsilon}\tau\rho\sigma$ for a building; in the other case the $\pi\acute{\epsilon}\tau\rho\sigma$ in its entirety furnishes the foundation on which the building is to be reared.

The different use of the figure in each case is governed by the fact, that in one case attention is concentrated on the single individuality of Abraham, "I called him alone, and blessed him, and increased him"; while in the other case, though Peter is singled out, it is not with any view that his position is to be as unique as that of Abraham—he is but one $\pi\acute{\epsilon}\tau\rho\sigma$; and it is the totality of such $\pi\acute{\epsilon}\tau\rho\sigma$, coalescing in thought into the one $\pi\acute{\epsilon}\tau\rho\sigma$, that will furnish a sure foundation for the Church that Christ will build.

In the one case the thought proceeds from the $\pi\acute{\epsilon}\tau\rho a$ to the $\pi\acute{\epsilon}\tau\rho a$; in the other case from the $\pi\acute{\epsilon}\tau\rho a$ to the $\pi\acute{\epsilon}\tau\rho a$; but the idea of the $\pi\acute{\epsilon}\tau\rho a$ is in both cases the same—the totality of "them that have obtained like precious faith" with Abraham and Peter (2 Pet. i. 1).

BRIEF NOTICES.

THE LIFE OF FREDERICK DENISON MAURICE, CHIEFLY TOLD IN HIS OWN LETTERS, Edited by his Son, Frederick Maurice (London: Macmillans). Biography hardly falls within our scope. Nor has this "Life" been sent to us for review. But it may be permitted to