The British Institute for the Study of Hebrew and Greek.

ON the lines of President Harper's Institute in America, and at Dr. Harper's suggestion, Correspondence Classes have been established in this country for the study of the original languages of the Old and New Testaments. The movement is at present under the guidance of Dr. Maclaren of Manchester, and Professor J. T. Marshall, M.A., with whom other scholars and professors are associated.

The need for such classes may not be so great in this country as in America, but it is great enough and deeply enough felt, by men who have entered the ministry as well as others, to give such classes a wide and sincere welcome. We have been asked to co-operate, and have willingly accepted the invitation. It may be found possible in future to bring the Guild and these classes more closely together. Meantime their purposes are distinct. The Guild seeks to encourage the study of Scripture, whether in the original or in the English translation, as members find it convenient—these classes aim to promote a knowledge of the original itself. One step in the direction of co-operation may, however, be taken at once. We shall not promise an examination in June of the portions chosen for the Guild, but shall consider if these examinations may take its place.

The Correspondence Classes will be conducted in the following way :—

The student must first decide which course of study in Hebrew or in Greek, or in both, he intends to begin with. Four courses have been arranged for in Hebrew, and two in Greek. The first course in Hebrew comprises the study of Grammar and of Genesis i.—iii. The second includes the critical study of Genesis iv.—viii., and selected passages of 1 Samuel, Ruth, and Jonah

The third covers Exodus i.—xxiv., and includes questions in archæology and exegesis. The fourth aims at the thorough mastery of the prophets Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi.

The books required for all the courses are Harper's Introductory Hebrew Method and Manual (D. Nutt, 6s.), and Harper's Elements of Hebrew (D. Nutt, 7s. 6d.).¹

In Greek, the first course comprises a knowledge of the Grammar and the study of John i.—iv. The text-book is Harper and Weidner's Introductory New Testament Greek Method (D. Nutt, 7s. 6d.). The second course includes the critical study of John v.—xxi., and the First Epistle of John.

Having chosen his course, the student will send his name and fee (21s. for each of Courses I. and II., and 25s. for each of the others) to Professor J. T. Marshall, M.A., Fallowfield, Manchester. His name will be enrolled, and he will receive the first sheet of printed questions, which will be his best guide to the nature of the study required. When he is in a position to answer these questions, he will send them to Professor Marshall. They will be corrected and explained by their proper examiner, and returned as speedily as possible, accompanied by another sheet of questions. There are forty such question sheets in each course.

Those are the main points, and will suffice for the present. With hearty recommendation, we refer our biblical students to Professor Marshall for his prospectus and advice.
