

EDITORIAL

In the last decade or so, there has been an increasing interest in theological education in the third world which includes the continent of Africa. Much has been said and written concerning the issue in question. Unfortunately, much of the contribution towards the issue has been done by those who have been outside the African context.

For about four years, EAJET has been attempting to deal with this very issue. The goal has been to help build the church in Africa by providing materials from sound biblical and evangelical perspectives.

In this issue, there are four articles all geared towards building the church of Jesus Christ here in Africa. Paul Bowers writes on the antiquity of Nubian Christianity, a distinctive of the church in Africa. Titus Kivunzi underscores the important question of Biblical basis for financial stewardship. Rob Cook investigates the fascinating subject of Ghosts. Udobata Onunwa deals with the ministry of the local church.

There are a number of important book reviews covering subjects such as theology church growth, Theological Education by Extension, etc. It is our sincere hope that you will be blessed by reading this issue.

Contributors to this issue

Dr. Paul Bowers is a Senior Lecturer at Daystar University College in Nairobi, Kenya and works administratively for the Accrediting Council for Theological Education in Africa. He previously taught at ECWA Theological Seminary, Igbaja, Nigeria. He holds the Ph.D degree from the University of Cambridge, England.

Rev. Titus Musili Kivunzi is the Principal of Scott Theological College and a consulting Editor to EAJET.

Mr. Robert Cook is a lecturer at Scott Theological College, Machakos, Kenya and EAJET's Book Reviews Editor. He holds a M.Th degree from London University, England.

Rev. Udobata Onunwa is a lecturer in the Department of Religion in the University of Nigeria. He also works part-time as Bible Study Consultant for the Nigerian Fellowship of Evangelical Students.