tension, the records of Strict Baptists begin to separate themselves from other Particular Baptists, though it is not generally clear which General Baptists are New Connexion and which Old Connexion - Stow Bardolph General Baptist Church even managed to make its return on an Anglican form! The Chapel at Upwell seems to have some foreknowledge of how Horace Mann would attempt to convert attendances into attenders and so protests its position by observing, 'As the congregations of this chapel are composed more or less of persons who attend only one of the three services on the Sunday, the average number of attendants, considered in the aggregate may be estimated at 200': in fact the averages, excepting scholars, were 90 + 130 + 130, so the claim does not seem extravagant.

The introduction is generally well done, though this reviewer has some difficulty with parts of it, especially that on dissent where it is not clear that the figures given, which do not conform with those given on page 14, refer only to rural dissent, though this seems likely from the nature of the footnote reference. But one is extremely grateful for the volume and would commend the task of completing this series to those counties who have not yet published their section of the religious census.

OLD CHAPEL PLANS AND PHOTOGRAPHS

The Royal Commission on the Ancient and Historical Monuments of Wales, through arrangements with individuals, with Capel and other professional organizations, is co-ordinating the recording of the meeting houses and chapel buildings of Wales. We are at present carrying out a search for old photographs, drawn plans and specifications relating to buildings of 18th to early 20th-century date. Old photographs and original architect's or builder's proposals/working drawings and specifications, are occasionally retained on the premises or amongst Monthly Meeting or Presbytery records. These may relate to present or to previous meeting houses but, to us, such documents are invaluable in building up a picture of the approaches of previous generations to meeting house and chapel design and construction. We would be most interested to hear of any such documents and to note their existence and whereabouts on our Welsh chapels database. At a later stage in the project, may we ask to copy selected material for our public archive? We shall be delighted to hear from any ministers or church secretaries who can help us!

- 66 The saga is recorded in the Bloomsbury Deacons' Minutes, and church members remember how the business rankled with Howard. When Geoffrey Haden was dying, Howard told John Hough, 'I liked him and his company when away from the LBA context. After retiring he became the attractive person he sometimes felt compelled to conceal'. He seemed to equate the Metropolitan Superintendent with the London Baptist Association and may not have grasped the delicate relationship of the Union employee whose area was coterminous with the Association.

(Conclusion of review begun on page 364)

None of this should deflect the reader from appreciating what is good in this work. Professor Underwood expertly maps the contours of the dispute with its salient features, drawing widely on printed tracts, and almost a third of the book comprises notes to the text. This is a significant contribution to understanding the genesis of seventeenth-century radical dissent.
