

person immediately concerned, before we spit and roast him on behalf of the next century but one. I cannot feel sure how my voting will affect the condition of Central Asia in coming ages, but I have good reason to believe that the future population there will be none the worse off because I abstain from conjectural vilification of my opponents during the present parliamentary session, and I am very sure that I shall be less injurious to my contemporaries. On the whole, and in the vast majority of instances, the action by which we can do the best for future ages is of a sort which has a certain beneficence and grace for contemporaries."

ARTICLE V.

THE NEW TESTAMENT VOCABULARY.

BY PROF. LEMUEL S. POTWIN, WESTERN RESERVE COLLEGE, HUDSON, OHIO.

III.—NATIVE WORDS NOT FOUND IN CLASSICAL AUTHORS.¹

EVERY large telescope has its "finder," — a spy-glass attached to the great cylinder, by which the observer can easily discover the object upon which he would turn the full power of the larger instrument. The aim of this series of Articles is to be a "finder" for the larger instrument, the lexicon. In the present Article I have tried to gather together all the unborrowed words of the New Testament which belong to it as being later Greek. It would have been more interesting to some readers, and much easier for the writer, to have merely selected for discussion some of the more important words of this class; but, at the expense of considerable drudgery, and at the risk of being credited with mere mechanical scholarship, I have endeavored to present all of these words. If that is done, the reader can judge for himself of their importance, and draw his own conclusions from their number.

¹ I. Words in New Testament Greek borrowed from the Latin. — Bib. Sac., October, 1875. II. Words in New Testament Greek borrowed from the Hebrew and Aramaean. — Bib. Sac., January, 1876. The former Article seems to require the following changes. 1. ἀσάριον, instead of being a Greek diminutive from the Latin as, is probably the neuter form of asararius, as δηράριον is of denarius. 2. The following should be added: (a) λίτρα, "pound" (John xii. 5; xix. 39), from libra. Compare the formative endings -τρον, -τρον, -τρον, -τρα. (b) ξέστης, "pot" (Mark vii. 4), probably from sextarius. Compare ξύν and σύν. Here an interchange. Perhaps, also, μόδιος should not have been given without some explanation or defence, as the Lexicons under this word refer to Dinarchus (95), who was born B.C. 361. It will be found, however, that the text of the Teubner edition (ed. Blass) does not contain the word, but μόδιμοι instead. It would seem that nothing but idolatry of manuscripts could have retained μόδιοι so long; for it is certainly a Latin derivative from modus; and how could the word possibly be in use at Athens at that early period?

In drawing the line between classical and post-classical I have included Aristotle with the former, though his diction is on the boundary between the Attic and Common dialects. For those who prefer to exclude him there will be given in the Appendix a list of the New Testament words found not earlier than Aristotle.

Words used by the poets (down to the time of the New Comedy) I have not considered peculiar to the New Testament, even if not found in prose of the classical period; my object being simply to set before the student of the New Testament those words which he has never seen in the Greek classics, be he ever so thorough a student of them, because the words are not there. But the Iliad and Odyssey, the Prometheus and Alcestis are as familiar to the student of Greek as the Memorabilia and Phaedo. However, to give opportunity for a separate examination of this class, the Appendix will contain a list of the words found only in the poetry of the classics.

No attempt has been made to designate the poetical words used by prose writers, as Xenophon, and especially Plato. Hence, such words as εὐφροσύνη, πέτρος, αἶνιγμα, άλως, even θανατηφόρος, etc., are passed without notice. The occurrence of such words, even for once only, in prose is considered sufficient to give them good standing there.

The limits here set to the classical period exclude, of course, Theocritus, though a familiar author, and include Hippocrates, quite unfamiliar to most readers of Greek. As to the former, there seem to be but four words added to our list by the exclusion, viz. ἀγριέλαιος, οἰκτίρμων, σύρω, ταχινός. Words found only in the latter, in classical prose, are given in the Appendix.

In determining what are new, or late words, we have not considered difference of dialect sufficient to make a word new. The form of a word in Herodotus is accepted as equally authentic with the forms of Thucydides. Further, a change in declension, or a slight change in pronunciation, as γίνομαι for γίγνομαι, is not regarded as making a new word; but that the reader may not be suspicious of this somewhat indefinite class we give here the entire list: ἄλας, ἀνάγαιον, ἄψυθος, γίνομαι (Ionic), γινώσκω (Ionic), γνόφος, δυσεντέριον, ἔννουχα, ἐξάπινα, ἔσοπτρον, ἦχος, κατήγωρ, κηπουρός, μύλος, νοσσία, νοσσίον, νοσσός, παριστάνω, πατρολόφας, πολλαπλασίον, ποταπός, σαλπιστής, συκομορέα, ταμείον, ὠδίν. Adverbs in -ως are considered as belonging to the adjectives from which they are derived. Distinct formative endings are, of course, regarded as constituting distinct words.

The figures following each word indicate the number of times it is found in the New Testament. Those words which are found also in the Septuagint have (S.) after them. I have also designated the words used by Polybius (Po.), Josephus (J.), and Plutarch (Pl.), so far as I have met with them in express citations.

The text followed is that of Tischendorf. This will explain the absence from our enumeration of a few late words that belong to the Received Text, e.g. κατόρθωμα (Acts xxiv. 8), ἐγκοπὴ (1 Cor. ix. 12), στρατοπεδάρχης (Acts xxviii. 16), ἐπαντοφώρω (John viii. 4), and others.

To avoid a dead list of references I have given short quotations from the English Testament, so that the reader may recognize easily some of the passages in which the Greek words occur. If the word is used twice, both references are given; if more than twice, one reference, at least, is given for each different word used in translation.

It will be understood that no mention is intended to be made of classical words which appear in the New Testament with a change of meaning, however great. These are reserved for separate consideration.

With these explanations the following list is submitted, divided into (1) nouns, (2) adjectives and adverbs, and (3) verbs. Errors from the uncertainty of classical texts are, perhaps, excusable. I wish I could even hope that there are no others. It would be a great (though perhaps mortifying) pleasure to me to have them rectified. Will the critical reader, therefore, please consider the following pages as pilloried for public correction.

1. Nouns.

- ἀγαθοποιία*, 1. "Commit the keeping of their souls to him in well-doing." 1 Pet. iv. 19.
- ἀγαθωσύνη*, 4. (S.) "That ye also are full of goodness." Rom. xv. 14; Gal. v. 22; Eph. v. 9; 2 Thess. i. 11.
- ἀγαλλίασις*, 5. (S.) "Thou shalt have joy and gladness." Luke i. 14; i. 44; Acts ii. 46; Heb. i. 9; Jude 24.
- ἀγάπη*, 116. (S.) "God is love." 1 John iv. 8. "Charity never faileth." 1 Cor. xiii. 8. "Now walkest thou not charitably." Rom. xiv. 15. "The kingdom of his dear Son." Col. i. 13. This word is found in every book of the New Testament except Mark, Acts, and James; while the corresponding verb ἀγαπάω is found in Mark and James. It occurs the greatest number of times — eighteen — in first John. It is translated "love" eighty-six times, "charity" twenty-seven times, "charitably" once, "feast of charity" once (Jude 12), and "dear" once. In Wyclif's version it is represented by "love," or "loving" twenty-three times, — wherever the Vulgate (from which he translated) has dilectio, — elsewhere (except Jude 12, "feasting," "epulae") by charity, following invariably the Vulgate caritas. What rule our translators followed in the matter is not apparent.
- ἀγιασμός*, 10. (S.) "Holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." Heb. xii. 14. "Through sanctification of the Spirit." 1 Pet. i. 2.
- ἀγιότης*, 2. (S.) "Partakers of his holiness." Heb. xii. 10; 2 Cor. i. 12.

- ἀγωσίνη, 3. (S.) "The Spirit of holiness." Rom. i. 4; 2 Cor. vii. 1; 1 Thess. iii. 13.
- ἀγισμός, 1. (S. Pl.) "The accomplishment of the days of purification." Acts xxi. 26.
- ἀγνόημα, 1. (S.) "For himself and for the errors of the people." Heb. ix. 7.
- ἀγνότης, 1. "By pureness, by knowledge." 2 Cor. vi. 6.
- ἀδελφότης, 2. "Love the brotherhood." 1 Pet. ii. 17. "The same afflictions are accomplished in your brethren." v. 9.
- ἀδηλότης, 1. "Nor trust in uncertain riches." 1 Tim. vi. 17.
- ἀθετήσις, 2. "A disannulling of the commandment." Heb. vii. 18. "To put away sin." ix. 26.
- ἀθλοῖσις, 1. (Po. Pl.) "A great fight of afflictions." Heb. x. 32.
- αἵματεκχυσία, 1. "Without shedding of blood is no remission." Heb. ix. 22.
- αἶνεσις, 1. (S.) "Let us offer the sacrifice of praise." Heb. xiii. 15.
- αἰτώμα, 1. Received Text, ἀτίαμα, "Grievous complaints." Acts xxv. 7.
- αἰχμαλωσία, 3. (S. Po. J. Pl.) "Led captivity captive." Eph. iv. 8; Rev. xiii. 10.
- ἀκαταστασία, 5. (S. Po.) "When ye shall hear of wars and commotions." Luke xxi. 9; 2 Cor. vi. 5; James iii. 16.
- ἀκρατήριον, 1. (Pl.) "When Agrippa, was entered into the place of hearing." Acts xxv. 23.
- ἀκροβυστία, 20. (S.) "Men uncircumcised." Acts xi. 3. "Thy circumcision is made uncircumcision." Rom. ii. 25. "Though they be not circumcised." Rom. iv. 11.
- ἀλεκτοροφωνία, 1. "Or at the cock-crowling." Mark xiii. 35.
- ἀλίσηγμα, 1. "From pollutions of idols." Acts xv. 20.
- ἀλλοτριεπισκόπος, 1. "Suffer as a busy-body in other men's matters." 1 Pet. iv. 15.
- ἀμαρτωλός, 47. (S. Pl.) "Publicans and sinners." Matt. ix. 10. Of the forty-seven instances of its use, two are adjectives (Mark viii. 38, "sinful generation"; Rom. vii. 13, "that sin might become exceeding sinful,") and possibly two others (Luke v. 8; xxiv. 27). As an adjective it is found once in Aristotle (Nicomachean Ethics 2. 9). τῶν γὰρ ἄκρων τὸ μὲν ἐστὶν ἀμαρτωλότερον, τὸ δ' ἥττον.
- ἀμέθυστος, 1. (S. Pl. as adj.) "The twelfth, an amethyst." Rev. xxi. 20.

- συνειδήσις, 31. (S. J.) The following is ascribed by Stobaeus to Bias one of the "seven wise men" — Ἐρωτηθεὶς τί εἶη ἄφοβον ἐν τῷ βίῳ εἶπεν, "ἡ ἀγαθὴ συνειδήσις." Florilegium monacense, 25 (Meineke, Vol. iv. p. 269). Similarly F. M. 170 (iv. 280). Also F. "περὶ συνειδότης" (i. 346). There seem to be no other early examples of the use of this word, and is it not likely that Stobaeus, who lived in the fifth century after Christ, and may have been, for aught we know, a Christian, put this word in the mouth of Bias? At any rate, these sayings of a thousand years before his time must have made a large part of their journey by tradition only.
