ARTICLE IV.

THE REVISION OF GENESIS.

BY THE REV. CHARLES R. BROWN, PROFESSOR IN NEWTON THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.

xxvi. 3. It is plainer here than in the similar passages that a telic force is to be given to it. The Rev. have not been particular to restore this force where it was missed by A. V. Cf. Lev. ix: 6; Amos v. 14. They have likewise (cf. xxvii. 10) not been particular to restore the force of 'strong' with the perfect where the A. V. wrongly attributes an idea of purpose.

xxvi. 10. 'might easily have lain' or 'had almost lain' or 'would soon have lain' would be an improvement.

xxvi. 22. 'can' for 'shall' would avoid the appearance of grammatical inaccuracy.

i. 17. Add 'that.'

i. 20. 'And' for 'But.'

i. 24. 'about to die' for 'die.'

i. Margin, 'was brooding,' for 'moved.'

i. 2. 'waste' for 'without form.'
ii. 2. 'heaven' for 'heavens.'
ii. 3. 'hallowed' for 'sanctified.'

i. 10. Change of order.
1. 'it may be that Joseph will for 'Joseph will peradventure.'

i. 17. Add 'that.'

i. 20. 'And' for 'But.'

i. 24. 'about to die' for 'die.'

i. Margin, 'was brooding,' for 'moved.'

This meaning is expressed in ii. 10; xv. 1, and elsewhere, and should be restored in vss. 5, 6, 29; iii. 20; vii. 10; xii. 10; xxxv. 5, 12, 13; xlvii. 28; xlix. 17; l. 9.

i. 6. 'expanse' for 'firmament,' as in marg. So render throughout.

ii. 1. 'Earth' should be 'Land.' So vss. 24, 25; ix. 2.

i. 21. 'the great sea-monsters' for 'great whales.'

In vi. 9; xxv. 19; xxxvii. 2, use 'family history' or the like; omit 'the LORD wherever found, and carry 'Jehovah' into the text, unless scholars can agree upon a proper transliteration of הַיהוָה, which is of course desirable. Perhaps enough has been said upon this point, but its importance must answer for an excuse for more. The Rev. show a hesitating policy in regard to this word which they can hardly justify. What, e.g., would they say to support their renderings in the sixth and seventh chapters of Exodus hereby cited?

vi. 2. the LORD JEHOVAH
vi. 3. JEHOVAH JEHOVAH
vi. 6. the LORD Jehovah
vi. 7. the LORD Jehovah
vi. 8. the LORD Jehovah cf. vi. 2
vi. 20. the LORD the LORD cf. vi. 6
vii. 17. the LORD the LORD cf. vi. 7

And, indeed, it being a proper name in all passages, nothing can be said anywhere in support of this solemn re-endorsement of an erroneous view of God.

ii. 12. Carry 'beryl' into the text.

ii. 14. If 'Hiddekel' means 'Tigris' the latter should be in the text; omit marg. 4

ii. 18. Marg. should come into text and into vs. 20.

ii. 23. Unless the reading of LXX., Sam., Onk., be adopted ('from her man'), 'a man' should here be substituted for 'Man.'

iii. 4. 'Ye shall not die at all' is better.

iii. 5. Omit 'then;' 'become like' for 'be as.'

iii. 6. 'eating' might here have been used for 'food.'

iii. 8. Adopt marg. 'sound' and 'breeze.'

iii. 10. Receive marg.

iii. 16. 'pain' would perhaps be better than 'sorrow.'

iii. 21. 'tunics' or 'gowns' for 'coats.'

It amounts to that, though, of course, the Rev. would repudiate direct influence of that sort. The protest of Am. Rev. should be mentioned.
The Revision of Genesis.

xi. 4. 'asphalt' or 'bitumen' for 'slime,' and omit marg.

xii. 5. 'movable property' or 'possessions' or 'goods' (xiv. 11) for 'substance.' So xv. 14. 'persons' for 'souls,' as xiv. 21.

xii. 6. 'terebinth' should be in the text. A comparison with Jud. ix. 6 and with marg. of Gen. xxxv. 4 shows that Rev. understood מָכָה for מָכָה. For מָכָה they have substituted 'terebinth' in Isa. vi. 13; Hos. iv. 13; why not, then, for its equivalent in Gen. xli. 6; xiii. 18; xiv. 13; xviii. 1; xxxv. 4. Attention might have been called to the fact that מָכָה may not be a proper name.

xii. 16. 'he received' for 'he had.' Similarly xiii. 5.

xvi. 12. Substitute first margin.

xviii. 5. 'lean' or 'recline' for 'rest yourselves.'

xviii. 6. 'dress' should not be trans.

xviii. 7. 'prepare' is better than 'dress.' So vs. 8. The word is rendered 'make' in xxvii. 7; 'took' for 'fetched.'

xxxvii. 18. 'sought to entrap him' seems more probable than Rev.

xxxvii. 25. Carry marg. (1st), to text.

xxxvii. 35. 'Sheol' should be in the text. So wherever it occurs. Of the 65 instances of its use (rend. in A.V. 'the grave,' 'the pit,' or 'hell') Rev. have restored it in 30, placing 'the grave' in marg.; 'hell' has been retained 13 times, and changed to 'the pit' 3 times; 'the pit' has been retained twice; 'the grave' has been retained 15 times, and actually changed to 'hell' in 2 instances. Rev. should have left the renderings of A.V. untouched, rather than so mislead the people.

In their attitude toward מַעַל and פִּלַּג the Am. Rev. contrast favorably with their English brethren. If in some other respects we are forced to leave them and follow the scholars across the water, let us be grateful for the plea they made for these words. It is difficult to see how any version can prove satisfactory which does not adopt their views in this direction.

IV. THE ENGLISH OF THE REVISION.

This is too much like the A. V. not to be good. Omitting details of arrangement, changes of pronouns, the use of capitals, omission of italics, and unimportant variations in punctuation, the following will represent our fourth head.

(a) Changes of Translation.

In a few cases "shall," "and," "will," "should," "would," "could," "might," etc., have been exchanged, but there are many more where this should have been done. See, e.g., xiii. 16; xxiv. 3, 7; xxxviii. 9; xl. 13; xlili. 16. To enumerate would require too much space.

The preferences of the American Revisers for modern English words and spelling will here be presupposed.

(b) Changes in the Transliteration of Proper Names.

Only a general remark can be made. Quite a number of slight changes have been introduced, most of them good ones, if it be considered desirable to apply their principle of change to all the list, which Rev. have not done. In a few instances the reason is difficult to detect. In some, there seems reason against Rev. These views will appear plainer by a few examples:

Salah becomes Shelah, and an unimportant (to us) individual Shaul receives his correct name, while the names of the first prophet and the first monarch of Israel are still pronounced according to the Ephraimitic method, with no marginal indication of the real nature of the sibilant which Rev. have furnished in the case of Seth and other names. Methuselah remains, but Enosh has replaced Enos. We have both Enoch and Hanoch, as in A. V. Tahash has replaced Thahash, but Thummim remains. Zarah becomes Zerah, but many such vowels are retained. Job (Gen. xlvi. 13) is changed to Iob, which is nearer to the pronunciation of the more familiar Hebrew name than to it.

V. The Margin.

In regard to the marginal readings and notes, it is sufficient to refer to the statements of Rev. and of their critics. It is already manifest that we have a mass of valuable material collected, in such a shape, however, as not to prove of the highest value to the unfamiliar English reader; e. g., the readings from the LXX. there quoted are of no greater value than many which are not alluded to; and there is no outward indication distinguishing alternative renderings of great value from the discarded ones of A. V. Cross references are sometimes given and sometimes not.

Conclusion.

A careful consideration of these facts leads the writer to the following opinions:

1. The Revisers show that they have been most painstaking in their effort, and have given us a multitude of minute changes, almost all of which improve the old version. The R. V. is a very great advance upon the A. V., except in regard to the Hebrew text employed.

2. The Revisers have been over conservative in their attachment for the A. V.; and this, too, when the more progressive policy of the New Testament Committee had in a measure prepared the public mind to expect serious changes. Not simply the young, but the old and gray-headed, have been astonished by this exhibition of conservatism.
3. In several respects the rules observed in revising the Old Testament were not those of the New Testament Company. It is desirable that editions for the people be conformed in both Testaments to the same treatment. The difference is, for the most part, to the disadvantage of the Old Testament Company, notably in regard to the choice of an original text.

4. Notwithstanding the great excellencies of the R. V., it is still so marred by inaccuracies as to make it probable that it will itself have to be revised before it can prove acceptable to American Christians.

5. The value of the Revisers' work does not depend upon the adoption of its results. For their unselfish labors of fifteen years the church is profoundly grateful, and the publication of these results, with the discussion thereupon, must surely awaken an additional interest in, and impart a more intelligent knowledge of, that most transcendent of books, the Bible.

ARTICLE V.

ANCIENT BOOK-MAKING.

BY THE REV. HENRY PRESERVED SMITH, D.D., PROFESSOR IN LANE THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.

The large place books have in modern society is evident to the most unthinking. We are so accustomed to dilate upon the advantages of the printing press, that we sometimes think of books as the peculiar possession of our own day, or at least of the modern age. But books were in existence long before printing was thought of. The newspaper, indeed, is a result of the printing press, and we may claim it as our own—our advantage over the ancients is evidently not so clear as we had imagined. And even in this respect, we may say that the private correspondence of the ancients took the place of the public press. The letters of Jerome or of Augustine give us a running chronicle of affairs in their time, briefer indeed than the newspaper accounts, but not less perspicu-
