ENGLISH CHURCH TEACHING ON FAITH, LIFE AND ORDER. Edited by CANON GIRDLESTONE, who contributes the section on the Faith of the English Church and a section on texts which are frequently misinterpreted or misapplied. The section on the Life of the Church is written by the Bishop of Durham, and that on the Order of the Church by the Bishop of Ripon.

"It is a book which many a clergyman may well take as a text-book through which to guide a class of young men or young women, and—may we add?—it is a book which no clergyman can fail to read with advantage, as a plain and simple statement, outspoken but loving, of the mind of the Church of England."—THE RECORD.

Through the generosity of a member of the National Church League this classical work is now republished at the nominal cost of 1s. . . . We recommend the book very heartily to the attention of those who wish to be well informed on the question that lies at the root of all our present differences."—CHURCH GAZETTE.

The DEAN OF CANTERBURY writes:—"These two Treatises by one of the most learned, accurate, and judicious scholars of recent years will be found, it is believed, of the highest value in a discussion, which has of late become more acute, respecting the nature of the authority of our Lord's statements in matters with which historical and literary criticism is concerned."

" We know of no handbook that puts so lucidly and convincingly the results of the historical investigation of the great scholars he passes under review. No one who wishes to know the strength of the case for the late appearance of the doctrine of the Apostolic Succession can afford to overlook Mr. Cohu's readable and informing booklet."—Church Family Newspaper.

" The Author's one aim has been to throw into a short, simple, popular, yet accurate form the invaluable historical facts bearing on the Christian ministry, which his authorities adduce. This is done with remarkable success, with commendable lucidity, and with considerable scholarship. . . . Mr. Cohu has done a great service to the unlearned in putting the case so simply and so convincingly."—The Churchman.

" A clear exposition of the historical facts that lie behind the development of the Episcopacy has long been desired. These facts have been put forward by Lightfoot and Westcott, Hort and Gwatkin, Hatch and Swete, but we know of no handbook that presents all the evidence in a compact form that appeals to the average student of Church history. . . . Having read carefully his argument and verified his references, we have no hesitation in recommending this thoughtful and convincing booklet to our readers."—The Record.

"At the present time there is, thank God, a wide and deepening impression on Christian people that we have entered upon the closing scenes of this dispensation, and that our Lord's return is really drawing near. How long the full development of the terminal events will take is altogether another matter. Many, therefore, are turning to the Word of Prophecy, and are earnestly searching for any indications it may give as to the course of final events. To help such in this praiseworthy effort is the purpose of the volume.

SECOND IMPRESSION.

PRESS NOTICES.

"This manual deals with the Church, its Ministry, its Sacraments, and other means of grace. It is written with Canon Barnes-Lawrence's customary clarity and charity. . . . Perhaps the strongest chapter is that on the Christian ministry, and one which will repay study in these days when reunion with other denominations of Christians is felt to be of such momentous importance."—Southwark Diocesan Chronicle.

"A book that cannot fail to be helpful, and we trust that our clergy and laity will place it in the hands of thoughtful young men and women. Its appearance at this time is particularly useful, for in the confusion of voices that surround them it is well that they should have a readable manual that will lead them to true conceptions of what our Lord came to accomplish and the means of grace with which He has provided us."—The Record.

"Is written in language that can be understood by the average Churchman. Free from technical expressions and more intent to awaken thought and to refer men to the sources of belief than to dogmatise. . . . It is a 'Tract for the Times,' as it deals with subjects that have made a very deep mark upon our contemporary Church life. . . . We sincerely hope that it will be widely read and be made the basis of Bible Class and Communicant Guild instruction."—The Church Gazette.

"In these days of mixed and incoherent theologies it is very good to have definite and clear statements which hold together and which are based on knowledge as well as on conviction. Canon Barnes-Lawrence has given us a manual of doctrine which well deserves a high position and a wide usefulness."—Canterbury Diocesan Gazette.

A HISTORY OF THE DOCTRINE OF THE WORK OF CHRIST In Its Ecclesiastical Development.

By ROBERT S. FRANKS, M.A., B.Litt., Principal of Western College, Bristol.

"In this necessarily cursory survey we see the thought of two thousand years circling round the supreme problem of the human mind, a problem focussed for ever in the death of Christ ; how can man be reconciled to God ? Some of the ablest minds of the world have believed life itself is inexplicable until some answer has been found to this question. And to read these volumes is to know what these strong minds have thought about this central problem. The writer's thesis, for which he gives good grounds, is that there has been a progress in theological thinking from Origen to Westcott, and though the ascent is spiral rather than vertical, the upward movement is real and discernible. And his book is a proof, if one were needed, that in comprehensive scholarship, in range of thought and accuracy of judgment, our theological scholars are worthy of their nation and their calling."—Glasgow Herald.

Canon of Salisbury.

"The purport of this book is to assert the positive grounds on which our faith rests, and to enforce its authority, a purpose which is as necessary in these days of unsettled belief as when the Lectures were first published. The Dean illustrates the necessity of supremacy of faith. . . . He goes on to vindicate its operation in those successive acts of faith by which the Christian Creed, as confessed by the Reformed Church of England, has been constructed. The book will be a valuable addition to any Library, and a useful gift to the younger clergy."

THE NICENE CREED

By CHANCELLOR LIAS. Price 2/- net.

"We hope this book will be extensively used in our training colleges."
—School Guardian.

"It will be a satisfaction to English Churchmen to welcome from the pen of Mr. Lias another volume, for his previous works have not only met with approval amongst the clergy, but have been widely appreciated by the laity. There is throughout the volume an absence of controversy, but that lends an extra chance to a thoroughly well prepared and thoughtful text-book for candidates for holy orders. The teaching and practice of the Church of England is maintained with a largeness of mind which will make this book of value to all schools of thought."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Chairman of Committee William McCall, Esq.

The Spanish and Portuguese Reformed Churches consist of Spaniards and Portuguese who have been led to Christ by the study of the Bible and the preaching of the Gospel. They are self-governing, and a Council consisting of Bishops of the Church of Ireland is responsible for Episcopal oversight.

The Churches consist of working men and women who contribute generously to their support, and the Society exists to supplement their self-denying efforts.

Funds are urgently needed.

"Written in an excellent spirit. . . . The book deserves high commendation for its lucid writing and for the spirit of charity which is manifest in every part of it."—Westminster Gazette.

"The book is one which is likely to be of real service, not only to the Church of England, but to the whole cause of Christian Unity."—The Churchman.

"The whole spirit of the book is worthy of its laudable aim."—Christian World.

Have you any conception what LIFE in LILLE is like at the present time ?

Famine stalks abroad, the German oppression is terrible, the roar of the guns is unceasing. Yet amongst the suffering remnant of the British inhabitants—women and old men—the Society's chaplain remains to comfort them and cheer them. This is one example of the work of the Society. It has chaplains for our own countrymen in Brussels, in Lille, in Holland, and all along the Western Front. In all our Colonies it has clergy ministering to newly settled, scattered or poor communities. It deserves well of all British Christians.

It is very badly off for funds.
Please help this deserving cause.

THE COMMITTEE hereby tender sincere thanks to the host of friends who through various channels have contributed to the L.C.M. Treasury during the financial year ending March 31. In soliciting further help they would point out that owing to the exigencies of the times the work is more than ever dependent upon the freewill offerings of the Lord's people. The sum required to maintain the normal and war-time operations, and to provide for the missionaries, their wives and children, approaches £1,000 weekly.

At this time of day, no one needs to be told what the London City Mission stands for. It is Protestant, pioneering, unsectarian; the friend of all evangelical communions and the rival of none. Its ministries were never more urgent, the people were never more ready to hear the Gospel message, and results were never more gratifying than in these dark critical days. Heartening records of City Mission toil and triumph appear month by month in the L.C.M. Magazine, copies of which may be had on application to the Mission House.

Readers of "The Churchman" are confidently urged to assist the Mission in the present emergency. The strictest economies are observed in every direction possible, and much prayer is being offered that our gracious God will incline the hearts of His children to sustain this supremely important work among the toiling multitudes, and the poorest of the poor in the slums.

Contributions (crossed Barclays Bank, Ltd.) to be made payable to the London City Mission, and addressed to the Secretaries, The Mission House, 3 Bridewell Place, E.C.4, or to the Editor of this magazine.
