PREFACE

BY THE GENERAL EDITOR.

The Greek Text upon which the Commentaries in this Series are based has been formed on the following principles: Wherever the texts of Tischendorf and Tregelles agree, their readings are followed: wherever they differ from each other, but neither of them agrees with the Received Text as printed by Scrivener, the consensus of Lachmann with either is taken in preference to the Received Text: in all other cases the Received Text as printed by Scrivener is followed. It must be added, however, that in the Gospels those alternative readings of Tregelles, which subsequently proved to have the support of the Sinaitic Codex, have been considered as of the same authority as readings which Tregelles has adopted in his text.

In the Commentaries an endeavour has been made to explain the uses of words and the methods of construction, as well as to give substantial aid to the student in the interpretation and illustration of the text.

The General Editor does not hold himself responsible except in the most general sense for the statements made and the interpretations offered by the various contributors to this Series. He has not felt that it would be right for him to place any check upon the expression of individual opinion, unless at any point matter were introduced which seemed to be out of harmony with the character and scope of the Series.

INTRODUCTION.

CHAPTER I.

THE AUTHORSHIP AND CANONICITY OF THE EPISTLE, ST JAMES THE LORD'S BROTHER.

I. External Evidence of Authenticity.

The Epistle of St James has not been admitted into the Canon of the New Testament without dispute. The most important early testimony in regard to its authenticity is found in Eusebius, H. E. ii. 23, where, after citing accounts of James the Lord's brother from various authorities, the historian adds that to him is attributed the first of the Epistles called Catholic, but that it is regarded by some as spurious, not many of the ancient writers having mentioned either this Epistle or that which is attributed to Jude, although they were both publicly read in the Churches. Further on, in another passage containing a list of the Scriptures which are acknowledged (ὁμολογοῦμενα) as well as of those whose authenticity is disputed (ἀντιλεγόμενα), the Epistle of St James is included in the latter group: τῶν δ' ἀντιλεγομένων, γνωρίμων δ' οὖν ὁμως τοῖς πολλοῖς, ἡ λεγομένη Ἰακώβου φέρεται καὶ Ἡ Ἰούδα. Eus. H. E. iii. 25.

On this testimony it may be remarked that the doubt as to the authenticity of the Epistle seems to have arisen not from any improbability of the alleged authorship, or from erroneous doctrine contained in it, but from the absence of citation by succeeding writers. But this is a fact quite capable of explanation in the case of an Epistle singularly free from controversial subjects and addressed to Jewish Christians, a community which shortly afterwards was either absorbed into the Churches of Gentile Christians, or became discredited by a lapse partly into Gnosticism, partly into a form of Christianity hardly distinguishable from Judaism.

In the catalogue of the Canonical books called the Muratorian Fragment, a document belonging to the end of the second century, the Epistle of St James is omitted. It is however found in the Syriac and Egyptian versions (with regard to which see below p. xlvii), and in the lists of Origen (†A.D. 254), Cyril of Jerusalem (A.D. 348), Gregory of Nazianzus (c. A.D. 381), Athanasius in his 39th Festal Letter (A.D. 367), in those of the Councils of Laodicea (A.D. 363) and Carthage (A.D. 397), and of the so-called Apostolic Canons. The authenticity of the Epistle is also recognised in the writings of St Jerome and St Augustine.

More important than the testimony cited above are the undoubted traces of this Epistle to be found in Clement of Rome (Ep. to Corinthi ans, A.D. 95; see c. 23, c. 30, c. 33), in the Didache, written probably early in the second century (see ii. 4, iv. 3, iv. 14 and other passages cited by Mayor, p. liii), and in Hermas, who wrote his allegorical work not much later. The presence of St James's influence in Hermas appears in a most interesting way, not so much by direct quotation as by a pervading sense of his teaching which penetrates the whole book, together with a constant use of his most characteristic terminology. A significant instance of this is the frequent occurrence of διανοεῖσθαι, διανοηκαί, διανοηκέω, words highly characteristic of St James but rare elsewhere. No one can read The Shepherd without feeling how great an impression the Epistle of St James had made on the writer's mind.

References to the Epistle are also discernible in the writings of Barnabas (c. A.D. 95), Ignatius (c. A.D. 115), and Polycarp (c. A.D. 155).

Such evidence enables us to trace the existence of this Epistle to the beginning of the post-Apostolic age. And if this be so it is hardly conceivable that at that early epoch any Christian writer would have ventured to put forth a forged epistle in the name and with the authority of St James. On the whole the external evidence leads us to infer that the Epistle, at first better known in the East than in the West, gradually won its way into full recognition by the Church, and in the fourth century was placed without question in all the authorised catalogues of the Canonical books.

II. Internal Evidence of Authenticity.

But if there are points of weakness in the external testimony to the genuineness of the Epistle, the internal evidence is unusually strong and convincing in favour of the authorship of St James the Lord's brother, in accordance with the traditional view stated by Eusebius.

(1) The relationship of the 'Brethren of the Lord' to Jesus.

The force of this evidence can be best appreciated by a survey of St James's life, of his relations to our Lord, of his position in the Church, and of the time and circumstances in which we may suppose the Epistle to have been written.

But two questions still remain: (a) whether James or Jacob the Lord's brother is to be identified with any one of those who bear the same name in the Gospel narrative, and (b) what relationship to the Lord is indicated by the term 'brother.'

The two questions are intimately connected and may be discussed together, for the identification of James the Lord's brother with James the son of Alpheus, and possibly also with James the son of Clopas, would probably never have been suggested except for the purpose of supporting one of the three theories respecting the relationship of the brethren of the Lord to Jesus, which may now be stated.

1 The grounds on which the authorship has been ascribed to James the son of Zebedee hardly deserve serious consideration. Little has been advanced to support this contention except a supposed probability that an apostle of so leading a position must have left some record behind him, and secondly that the close verbal similarity to the words of the Sermon on the Mount points to the evidence of one who had listened to that discourse. Of these arguments, the first applies with at least equal force to the brother of the Lord, and the second, so far as it has any weight, must fall before considerations named below.
(2) Early opinions on the subject.

Up to the fourth century after Christ two opposing views were held. By the great majority of Christian writers it was maintained that the Mother of the Lord remained ever Virgin, and that the Brethren of the Lord, whose names are given in the Synoptio Gospels (Matt. xiii. 55, Mark vi. 3), were sons of Joseph by a former marriage.

The other opinion was that the word ἀδέλφοι was used in the ordinary sense of brothers, and that 'the brethren of the Lord' were sons of Joseph and Mary, and younger brothers of Jesus. The fact that this view, although apparently the more natural and obvious one, received but little support among the more ancient Christian writers creates a strong presumption against it.

(3) Another view put forward in the fourth century.

Towards the close of the fourth century, however, a fresh suggestion was made. It was a time when the subject of celibacy was keenly disputed in the Church. And the assumed fact that sons and daughters were born to Joseph and Mary was urged strongly against the more rigorous defenders of a celibate life. This assumption therefore was opposed with great force by St Jerome, who himself put forth a third and new hypothesis as to the relationship of the Brethren of the Lord.

By this hypothesis 'the brethren' were first cousins of the Lord, being sons of Mary wife of Clopas, who was according to this theory, and by a possible inference from S. John xix. 25, a sister of the Virgin Mary. A further identification, etymologically possible, between Clopas and Alphæus (which was not however made by Jerome himself) would give the result that James the son of Alphæus, James 'the little' (ὁ μικρός, Mark xv. 40), and James the brother of the Lord were one and the same person.

The view was further strengthened by supposing the expression, Ἰούδας Ἰακώβου, which occurs in the lists of the Apostles, Luke vi. 16 and Acts i. 13, to mean Judas brother of James. For then James the son of Alphæus (or Clopas) is shewn to have brethren named Judas and Joses, the three names corresponding to those of the names of the 'Brethren of the Lord.'

(4) Arguments against this view.

Apart from the novelty of this view, in itself a considerable objection, the extreme improbability of two sisters bearing the same name seems to be fatal to it. The theory also involves a strain on the meaning of ἀδελφοί, for even if ἀδελφοί be used to signify 'cousins,' it is most improbable that St Paul would employ the word ἀδελφός with that signification in the singular number to indicate the relationship of St James to our Lord.

As to the identification of Alphæus with Clopas, and consequently that of James the son of Alphæus with James the son of Mary and Clopas, one argument adduced in support of it by the translation of Ἰωάννα Ἰακώβου by 'Judas the brother of James' is, to say the least, extremely doubtful. But a more serious objection against this identification of James the son of Alphæus and James the Lord's brother lies in the statement of St John, (vii. 5) that 'even His brethren did not believe on Him,' which precludes the possibility of any of the Lord's brethren being among the number of the Twelve. This being so, the identification of Clopas with Alphæus, which, as stated above, was not recognised by Jerome himself, would weaken rather than strengthen his theory.

In addition to these arguments it may be said that the close and intimate relation in which 'the brethren' stand to the Mother of the Lord is wholly against the probability of St Jerome's hypothesis.

If, then, we reject the ingenious hypothesis of St Jerome, which would probably never have been advanced except for the purpose of controversy, the dispute must continue to lie between the antagonistic views which were opposed to each other before Jerome's argument was put forward.

(5) Argument in favour of the view that the 'Brethren' were sons of Joseph and not of Mary.

And although the dispute is one which admits of no certain solution, the theory that the brethren of the Lord were sons of Joseph and not of Mary has the support of a very ancient and scarcely contradicted tradition in its favour. The very existence of such a tradition in spite of what seems to be the more obvious meaning of the Evangelist's words is in itself strong evidence for its truth. For it cannot be said that the tradition originated from a desire to exalt the virtue of celibacy, although it was undoubtedly used for that purpose in the fourth century.

It is a theory which gives a natural meaning to the term Θηλαφόι. Indeed those who were regarded as half-brothers of our Lord could be designated by no other term, as is shown by the familiar instances of the twelve patriarchs, who are repeatedly called brethren, though sons of different mothers.

Again, the allusions to the brethren of the Lord in connexion with Jesus tend to the inference that they were older rather than younger 'brethren.' The phrase 'Thy mother and thy brethren seek thee' (Matt. xii. 47) seems to suggest authority in the brethren as well as in the mother. The more natural explanation of the references to the brethren in the Synoptic Gospels is that they were better known, and therefore older than Jesus: 'Is not this the carpenter's son? Is not his mother called Mary? and his brethren James, and Joses, and Simon, and Judas? And his sisters are they not all with us?' (Matt. xiii. 55, 56. Comp. Mark vi. 3.) And the unbelief of the brethren mentioned by St John (vii. 5) suits the natural disregard by the older sons of a younger brother's opinion or claims.

But perhaps the argument which weighs most against the nearer relationship of the brethren is that which is drawn from our Lord's words from the Cross, in which He committed His mother into the charge of John the son of Zebedee. It is improbable that Jesus would have withdrawn His mother from the natural protection of her own sons if that close tie had existed. But if we suppose that the sons of Zebedee were first cousins of our Lord, the relationship was closer with John than with 'the brethren,' who (according to this view) were not strictly speaking related.

The evidence of the Apocryphal gospels sustains the hypothesis that 'the brethren' were sons of Joseph born before his espousals with Mary; and this evidence is so far valuable that it points to the current opinion in the second and third centuries after Christ.

If the opinion be adopted that Jesus was younger than ‘the brethren,’ interest is added to the parallel between the position of Jesus in the family at Nazareth and that of Joseph among the sons of Jacob, and of David among the sons of Jesse. In each case there are traces of wonder and jealousy in the choice of the younger son.

(6) The childhood of St James and the influence of the home at Nazareth.

But even if it be admitted that the brethren of the Lord were not kinsmen according to the flesh, their relationship to Joseph and their close association with Mary and her divine Son which is apparent in the Gospel record, would bring them under the same educational influences in which the child Jesus grew up.

It is these influences which in their depth and subtilty form a part of the link between the mind of Christ and the words and thoughts of James. For the life and teaching of Christ were the outcome of those silent years of education in which He in-

1 See St James, in Camb. Bible for Schools, Introd. § vi.

The objection has been raised: How could our Lord through Joseph have been the heir to David’s throne (according to the genealogies) if Joseph had elder sons? A sufficient answer is that the succession among the Jews was not always carried on through the elder son. There are conspicuous examples to the contrary in Bible history—Jacob himself, David and Solomon are instances. The principle is stated in the words of Jehu, ‘Choose out the fittest of your master’s sons.’ It has also been asked what became of the six young motherless children when Joseph and the Virgin first went to Bethlehem, then to Egypt; and why are the elder sons not mentioned on the occasion of the visit to the Temple? The answer to the first question is that there were near relations in Galilee, and that the absence of Joseph and the Virgin was unexpectedly prolonged; the answer to the second is that there was no occasion to mention the elder brethren if they had been in Jerusalem, but that the occasion was a special one for Jesus, Who might therefore have come alone with His mother and Joseph. See Edersheim, Life of Jesus the Messiah, vol. i. p. 364.
increased in wisdom. And in those years the brethren of the Lord must have known Him as no other men knew Him. And when conversion revealed the full meaning of that close intercourse to James and his brethren, words, looks, thoughts and acts must have come back with all the vividness of early impressions.

It is this subtle infusion and penetration of Christ in St James's character which gives an indefinable force to his teaching. It is probably rather to these recollections of intercourse and interchange of thought in youth and early manhood than to express quotations that the parallelism is due between St James's writings and the Sermon on the Mount.

What these influences were we partly learn from the opening chapters of St Luke's Gospel, which present to us, as closely associated with the early life of Jesus, a group of pious Israelites whose hearts had been divinely prepared for the revelation of the Messiah. Simeon, with evident reference to Isaiah xl., was waiting for the consolation (παράκλησις) of Israel; Anna, a prophetess, spake of the child Jesus to all them that were looking for the redemption of Jerusalem (ii. 38). The hymn of Mary brings into prominence two leading Messianic thoughts—the exaltation of the meek and lowly and the unitedness of Israel—and Zacharias connects the Messianic hope with the house of David with the oath sworn to Abraham, and with the extension of the gospel to the Gentiles (i. 79); and His last thought is emphasized in the Song of Simeon. Two other characteristics are discernible in this part of St Luke's Gospel as belonging to that circle which immediately surrounded the infant Saviour, both of them features of the religious life of Israel which were largely developed in the post-Exile period, one of these is 'righteousness,' the other 'wisdom.'

Righteousness in the technical post-Exile sense (see Deut. vi. 25) consisted in an exact and scrupulous performance of the requirements of the Law. It was the corner-stone on which the whole system of Judaism was reared. It was in virtue of his righteousness that James was called 'the Just' (ὁ δικαίος); it is expressly attributed to his father Joseph (δικαίος ὁ, St Matt. i. 19), and to Zacharias and Elisabeth (δικαίος ἀμφότεροι ἐναντίον
INTRODUCTION.

It is interesting to trace in the names of the 'brethren of the Lord' some indication of such Messianic thoughts as the reunion of the twelve tribes of Israel and the restoration of the kingdom. Jacob (James) and Joseph, Simon and Judas, are representative names. Jacob by his second divinely imparted name is the eponymous hero of Israel, Joseph the second founder of the race: to shew they signify the restored unity of Israel, comp. 'O thou Shepherd of Israel, thou that leadest Joseph like a sheep,' Ps. lxxx. 1. Simon and Judas are memorable Maccabean names; Judas, the warrior who organised victory for his people, B.C. 166, and Simon, the mighty high-priest and king in whose reign the sovereign right of coining money was secured for the Jews, B.C. 142. And that hopes of a Maccabean restoration, or of a kingdom restored on the lines of Maccabean sovereignty, were mingled with the hopes of a Davidic monarchy in the Messianic expectation appears among other proofs from the title with which the Epistle opens; the excellence of wisdom (σοφία), ch. i. 5, iii. 15; the reverence for the Law; the exaltation of the poor, the attribute of peace, St Luke i. 73, ii. 14 (comp. St James iii. 18); and above all the gift of poetical expression conspicuously present in this Epistle. See infra p. xli.

(7) The unbelief of the 'Brethren' during our Lord's Ministry.

Soon after Jesus entered on His ministry Nazareth ceased to be His home. He left His mother and His brethren 'for the sake of the Gospel.' In John ii. 12, we read that after the miracle in Cana He 'went down to Capernaum, he and his mother and his brethren and his disciples: and there they abode not many days.' But when Jesus returned from Judaea (John ii. 43, 54), and revisited Nazareth, He was rejected by His fellow-townsmen (Luke iv. 16—30), after which He made Capernaum His home (Matt. iv. 13; Luke iv. 31).

The reason for this separation from His kinsfolk may be traced in His answer to one who told Him that His mother and His brethren desired to speak with Him: "Who is my mother? and who are my brethren? For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother" (Matt. xii. 47—50; Mark iii. 32—35; Luke viii. 20, 21). The tone of rebuke for unbelief discernible here is intensified even to indignation on the occasion of a second visit to Nazareth (Matt. xiii. 54—58; Mark vi. 1—6), when His own brethren having joined in the rejection of Jesus, He exclaimed, "A prophet is not without honour, but in his own country, and among his own kin, and in his own house": St Mark (vi. 4) adds: "He marvelled because of their unbelief." This prepares us for the explicit statement in St John vii. 2—10, "Even his

'King of the Jews,' which dates from Maccabean times, and is not found in the earlier history of Israel.

That this nomenclature cannot have been accidental appears from the fact that three out of those named appear in the group of friends and disciples who immediately surrounded Jesus, and in comparatively few instances beyond that group. Of the twelve Apostles, two are named Simon, two Judas, and two James or Jacob.
brethren did not believe on him” (οὐδὲ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ αὐτοῦ ἐπιστευοῦ εἰς αὐτόν); the tense indicates the persistent unbelief.

The passage, however, shews continued intercourse between Jesus and His brethren, while indicating a profound difference in religious position, and inability on their part to recognise Christ or to understand His work: “The world cannot hate you; but me it hateth, because I testify of it, that its deeds are evil.” The context marks the intention of Jesus to be independent of His brethren, in action—which like elder brethren they endeavoured to control. The answer to them is the same in effect as the answer to Mary at the marriage in Cana. Comp. John vii. 8, with John ii. 4.

(8) The Conversion of St James.

We now pass to the days which followed the Resurrection. When the Eleven Apostles were gathered together after the Ascension the brethren of the Lord were with them (Acts i. 14). A momentous change had taken place in their spiritual lives, of which very little is said in Holy Scripture. One expression, however, of St Paul explains everything. Speaking of the risen Lord St Paul writes (1 Cor. xv. 7): “then he appeared unto James; then to all the apostles.” The result of that appearance of the risen Lord was a changed life and a changed belief. James was received without hesitation among the number of believers; and shortly afterwards we find him occupying the highest position in the Church at Jerusalem. “He was,” says Eusebius (H. E. ii. 1), “the first to be entrusted with the See (θρόνον) of the Church in Jerusalem.”

A strange tradition is preserved in The Gospel according to the Hebrews that the Lord went to James and appeared unto him, for James had sworn that he would not eat bread from that hour wherein he had drunk the cup of the Lord, until he saw Him rising again from the dead...bring a table and bread...and he took up the bread and blessed and broke and afterward gave to James the Just, and said to him, ‘My brother, eat thy bread, for the Son of Man is risen from them that sleep.’ (Nicholson, The Gospel according to the Hebrews, pp. 66—68.)
From the great difficulty of supposing the presence of James the brother of the Lord at the Last Supper, Bishop Lightfoot has suggested that the true reading is Dominus not Domini, the familiarity of the expression 'the cup of the Lord' having misled the scribe. In that case the words would be, "wherein the Lord had drunk the cup." (Lightfoot's Galatians, p. 266.) The tradition may contain a substratum of truth. Substantially indeed it falls in with St Paul's record of the Lord's appearance to St James referred to above.

(9) Position in the Church of Jerusalem.

The circumstances of St James's election to the presidency or bishopric of the Church in Jerusalem are not narrated in the Bible. But it is not difficult to conjecture the motives which led to the choice. The brother of the Lord had now become a believer, he had been honoured by a special revelation from the risen Christ: he had already gained a reputation for sanctity of life both among the disciples and the Jews. The rest would follow naturally. His near kinship to the Lord—possibly the nature of the communication when He appeared to His 'brother'—possibly a resemblance of voice and manner and looks such as is found in those who have been associated from childhood—would combine to give to St James an authority and position in the Church which would be tacitly and unhesitatingly admitted by all the brethren.

The few direct references to St James in the Acts and Epistles point to his leading position in the Church. The news of St Peter's release from prison is sent expressly and at once to "James and the brethren" (Acts xii. 17). He presides and pronounces the decision at the Conference held at Jerusalem on the admission of Gentiles to the Church (Acts xv. 13—21); and again

1 So high was this reputation with the Jews that his death was assigned as one of the causes which called down the wrath of God upon Jerusalem that ended in its destruction. St James held a position which was only once possible in the history of the Christian Church.
at a gathering of the brethren, to receive a report of St Paul's mission work, the preeminence of St James is indicated by the language of St Luke: "And on the day following Paul went in with us unto James; and all the elders were present" (Acts xxii. 18). In Galatians ii. 9, St James is named before Cephas and John as one of those "who were reputed to be pillars." In this passage the division of mission work is named, "that we (Paul and Barnabas) should go unto the Gentiles, and they unto the Circumcision." An injunction very characteristic of St James is added: "Only they would that we should remember the poor."

The passage shews complete agreement between the two great leaders, St James and St Paul, and is also quite in harmony with the decision of the Conference at Jerusalem (Acts xv. 18). The expression however in verse 12 of the same chapter of Galatians, τινός ἀνὸς Ἰακώβου, and the incident which follows, seem to point to a deepening difference between the Jewish and Gentile divisions of the Christian Church. The words, however, have been unduly pressed, and it is quite possible that the envoys or disciples of St James may have gone far beyond St James's own views in their language and acts.

(11) His ascetic life.

Some further particulars of St James's life are recorded in a fragment of Hegesippus preserved in Eusebius (H. E. ii. 23), "He was holy from his mother's womb, he drank not wine nor strong drink (σικέα, Heb. ἑγαρ): comp. St Luke i. 15), nor did he eat flesh; no razor came to his head, nor did he anoint himself with oil, nor use the bath. To him alone was it permitted to enter the holy place, for his clothing was of linen, not of wool. Alone he used to go into the temple (ναόν) and would be found upon his knees praying for the remission of his people's sins, so that his knees became hard like those of a camel through continuously bending them in the worship of God. On account of his exceeding righteousness he used to be called δικαίος καὶ ἀθλίας." The meaning of the second word is explained to be περιοχὴ τοῦ λαοῦ καὶ δικαιοσύνη.
His death.

In the end the Scribes and Pharisees finding that the faith of Christ greatly increased through the preaching of St James, persuaded him to stand on the pinnacle of the Temple, in the hope that he would there dissuade the people, from following the Crucified One. St James, however, cried with a loud voice: "'Why ask ye me concerning Jesus the Son of Man? He is seated in Heaven on the right hand of the mighty power, and He will come on the clouds of heaven.' Thereupon they flung down the Just One, and then stoned him, since he was not killed by the fall. Then he turned and knelt, saying, 'I beseech thee, Lord God, Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do.' Then one of the priests of the sons of Rechab cried saying, 'Cease, what are ye doing? the Just One prayeth for us.' And then one of them, a fuller, took the club with which he beat the clothes and smote the Just One on the head. And in that manner did James suffer martyrdom." Hegesippus adds: "And they buried him in the place beside the Sanctuary (τὸ ναὸς)."

There is no reason to doubt the substantial accuracy of this account. The narrative is natural and unforced and describes a death in harmony with what is known of the life of St James.

Agreement of the Contents of the Epistle with the above facts.

Tested by the features and incidents of that life which are known to us, the internal evidence for the authenticity of the Epistle is both strong and subtle. Strong in direct harmony with acknowledged circumstances of his life, and subtle in undesigned coincidence with position and antecedents.

Of the topics of the Epistle, some are precisely such points as might have been referred to the Bishop of the Church in Jerusalem, points on which direction from him might have been expected. Some of them irresistibly recall the spirit of religious thought which pervades the utterances of the group of pious Jews to which the holy family belonged. Among these are the praise of wisdom, the doom of the proud, the excellence of poverty, the indifference to external rank. Other expressions again suggest, without verbally repeating, the teaching of the Lord Jesus in such a way as to indicate the result of long familiar intercourse rather than the express reproduction of a scholar. Other features of the Epistle reflect the personal character of the author. The ascetic tone—the contempt of riches—the sense of freedom and of spiritual independence—the stern attitude towards the rich oppressor—the pious belief in the efficacy of prayer—the joy in conversions.

An argument against the authenticity of the Epistle has been drawn from the excellence and originality of the Greek style in which it is written. But such an argument implies a preconception of the possibilities of learning available for James, which does not rest on evidence. At the same time the perfection of the style has been exaggerated. Full of force and vigour it undoubtedly is—words and phrases are admirably suited to the exact expression of the ideas intended to be conveyed. But the form and idiom are for the most part Hebraic. There is an absence of the more delicate uses of Greek construction, and certainly an absence of that facility of expression and idiomatic usage which are characteristic of a writer using his native tongue.

The subject-matter and some features in the style of the Epistle may be explained by the position held by St James and the circumstances of the time.

We have seen that it was to St James that the news of St Peter's escape from prison was first conveyed, and that when St Paul went up to Jerusalem after his conversion he saw none of the Apostles except Cephas and James the brother of the Lord. Again, when St Paul revisited Jerusalem on his return from Greece and Macedonia St Luke tells us that, 'on the day following he went in with us unto James, and all the elders were present' (Acts xxi. 17). What was done by St Paul must have been done by thousands of Christians who came up to Jerusalem. Bishops and Elders from distant Churches would find that the greatest interest of a visit to Jerusalem centered in the person of the Lord's brother. Every question concerning the welfare of the Church, every dispute in doctrine, each instance of persecution or suffering would be referred to the Bishop of Jerusalem.
In these circumstances it would be natural to expect from St James an authoritative message to distant communities of Jewish Christians such as this Epistle contains. There is a certain abruptness of style, an absence of introduction and of constructive links between the topics treated of which would be naturally characteristic in a letter written, not as a treatise on Christian doctrine, but in answer to appeals made from a distance to a central living authority. The variety and range of subjects and the emphasis laid on special points may well be due to the same cause.

(14) Recent objections to the authenticity of the Epistle noticed.

From the fifth century downwards the claim of this Epistle to Apostolic authority was scarcely questioned, until in the 16th century the early doubts were revived on entirely different grounds. In his prolegomena to the New Testament (A.D. 1522) Luther terms the Epistle of St James, ‘an Epistle of straw’ (eine recht strohende Epistel), partly (1) because of its supposed antagonism to Pauline doctrine and its assertion of righteousness by works, partly (2) because of the absence of such important topics as the sufferings, the death, the resurrection and the ascension of Christ. It is shewn below (ch. v.) that the first of these objections rests on a misconception of St James’s argument and its relation to St Paul’s teaching. (2) The argument from omission is always precarious and in this case the circumstances in which the Epistle originated would fully account for the omissions noticed by Luther.

More recent criticism has laid stress on: (1) the difficulty of finding an occasion for the Epistle: why, it is asked, should St James have written to the Dispersion? (2) the improbability that St James, the Lord’s brother, should have written in opposition to St Paul; (3) the supposed inconsistency between St James ii. 25 and Hebrews xi. 31; (4) the improbability that a Galilean peasant like St James should possess the power of writing in the Greek style of this Epistle.

The answer to these questions will, it is hoped, be found in the foregoing remarks. On (3) it may be added that there is no real opposition between righteousness by faith and righteousness by works that spring from faith.

On the whole the ancient tradition may be confidently reaffirmed. The weakness of the external evidence is more apparent than real, and the internal testimony is indisputably strong and cogent.

CHAPTER II.

THE DATE OF THE EPISTLE AND THE CIRCUMSTANCES IN WHICH IT WAS WRITTEN.

If we admit the validity of the argument for the authenticity of this Epistle the question of date is confined to a narrow limit of time. Nevertheless it is important to determine, if possible, whether St James wrote before or after the Epistles of St Paul had become widely known in the Church, as this is a point which bears on the exegesis of the Epistle: and further whether he wrote before or after the great Conference held in Jerusalem A.D. 52, in regard to the admission of the Gentiles into the Christian Church.

There are two considerations which point to a very early date for the Epistle:—(1) the Judaic type of Christianity apparent in it; (2) the absence of controversy on subjects which came into dispute about the time of the Conference in Jerusalem or soon afterwards.

1. It may be safely asserted that, for some years after the memorable Day of Pentecost and the birth of the Christian Church, there was no visible and external separation between the disciples of Christ and the Jewish community. The Christians still worshipped in the Temple and in the synagogues, and practised circumcision.

In this the first disciples followed the example of the Lord Jesus Christ, who uniformly taught in the synagogues, or in the Temple, and with His fellow-countrymen observed the appointed feasts and ordinances of the Law.

St Paul himself, to whom the Apostleship to the Gentiles was divinely entrusted, was no exception to this rule. In every city which he visited in the course of his missionary journeys he resorted in the first instance to the synagogues of the Jews (Acts xiii. 14 ff., xv. 1 ff., xvi. 13, xvii. 1, 10, xviii. 4). Moreover when the larger infusion of Gentile converts had excited the wrathful jealousy of the Jewish Christians (Acts xxi. 20), St Paul by the advice of St James and the other Apostles took certain men who were under a vow, and “purifying himself with them went into the temple, declaring the fulfilment of the days of purification, until the offering was offered for every one of them” (Acts xxi. 26); thus purposely and conspicuously declaring his adherence to the ancient rites.

It is clear then that even after the Conference at Jerusalem A.D. 52, the Jewish converts as distinct from the Gentiles were expected to observe exact conformity with the Law. Before that Council, and at the period in which we are disposed to place the date of this Epistle, the Church in Jerusalem must have consisted almost entirely of converts from Judaism among whom the question of separation from their brethren had not yet been stirred.

Such was the condition of the Judæo-Christian Church over which St James presided and from which the Jewish communities of the Eastern Dispersion derived their Christianity. It may be noted that this phase of Christianity was not destined to last long. At the date when the Epistle to the Hebrews was written the Christian Church appears at any rate to have been dissociated from the Temple services, and the fall of Jerusalem finally broke the link between Judaism and the form of Christianity allied with it. What remained of Judæo-Christianity lapsed into Ebionism and various forms of heresy.

The very circumstance of the limited duration of Judæo-Christianity serves to fix the date of the Epistle to St James; if our contention be correct, that it was addressed to a Christian community whose relations with Judaism were still close, and at a time when Christianity had not been generally recognised as hostile to the synagogue and Temple worship.

One specially interesting indication of the early epoch in the history of Christianity at which the Epistle was written is the occurrence of the word 'synagogue' to denote the Christian place of assembly (ch. ii. 2). Nothing is more natural than that, in the circumstances which we have sketched, the new brotherhood should form synagogues of its own. This was no unusual thing. Hundreds of small communities in Judaism had separate synagogues. The Rabbinical writers counted 480 of these in Jerusalem alone: and, although the number may be exaggerated, the fact that small bodies of Jews like the Libertines and the Cyrenians had their own synagogues in Jerusalem confirms the substantial truth of the statement (see Acts vi. 9).

The Christian synagogue would answer precisely to the meeting place of one of these Jewish communities. In its main features the service would follow the pattern of the Jewish synagogue ritual. Indeed traces are discernible in the 2nd chapter of the Acts of the formation of such a Christian synagogue in which the disciples met for instruction and worship and the celebration of the Eucharist.

The Christian synagogues like those of the Jews would be open to all who chose to enter. And to the poor Christian Jews it would be a temptation, which can be understood, to welcome the appearance of a rich man—a possible convert—within the walls of their little synagogue.

It is easy to believe that a Church constituted on these principles and having its origin in Jerusalem would look for guidance and inspiration to the brother of the Lord. All questions of difficulty would be referred to him for decision, and by means of the frequent communications between the Jews in Jerusalem and their brethren in distant provinces, St James would be kept informed of the spiritual condition of the Churches of the Dispersion. Such an Epistle as this which we possess would be the natural outcome of questions and information of this kind: its informal character—the abruptness of its beginning—the variety and to a certain extent the simplicity of the topics treated of may be explained on this hypothesis.

The existence of persecution is supposed to point to a later date for this Epistle. But the persecutions alluded to are of a primitive type and such as that which arose after the death of St Stephen, a persecution which extended as far as to the distant settlement of Jews in Damascus. It was such a persecution as that in which St Paul himself engaged in his unconverted days; such as he too himself was exposed to when he taught that Jesus is the Christ in the cities and synagogues of Pisidia and Macedonia. It was persecution not by the Gentiles as yet, but by the Pharisaic party among the Jews, who resented that which appeared to be an attack upon the Law and the traditions. It was persecution of the poor by the unscrupulous and irresponsible rich, such as had appeared in every period of Jewish history, and which was specially denounced by the Hebrew prophets when it shewed itself among the ancestors of the Jews of the Dispersion.

That persecution under the form of judicial process (ch. ii. 6) was possible is shewn by recently discovered inscriptions, which prove the autonomy of Jewish communities in the cities of the Roman Empire previous to A.D. 70, but not after that date.

2. It is by referring the Epistle to this primitive stage in the history of the Christian Church, that we are able to account for the absence of much of the controversial matter which enters into other Epistles. There were no Judaizers to be attacked, because as yet Gentile Christianity had not taken a recognised position in the Church, and Judaism did not yet exist in that hostile form which it afterwards assumed. Nor as yet had such heresies crept in as were afterwards found at Colossæ—no false doctrine about the resurrection as at Corinth—no despondency as to the delay in the Advent of Christ, and therefore no need of such warnings and consolations as were addressed to the Thessalonians or to the Hebrews a few years later.

CHAPTER III.

THE FIRST READERS OF THE EPISTLE. THE TWELVE TRIBES IN DISPERSION.

The dispersion of Israel originated in the deportation of the inhabitants of the Northern Kingdom to Assyria after the conquest of Samaria by Sargon (B.C. 722). The cities in which the captives were placed, Halah and Gozan, point to the districts known to Ptolemy as Chalcititis and Gauzanitis; and Habor, 'the river of Gozan' (2 Kings xvii. 6), is identified with the Khabour, an affluent of the Upper Euphrates. In a little more than a hundred years from the captivity of Israel, Judah shared the same fate, and, with the exception of a small remnant, was carried in captivity to Babylon and the adjoining regions.

The successive returns under Zerubbabel (B.C. 537) and Ezra (B.C. 458) left a large proportion, probably the vast majority of Israel and Judah, in Babylonia and the surrounding countries.

Hence the captivities of Israel and Judah, which were in the first instance penal, resulted in the permanent settlement of large and flourishing Hebrew colonies in the regions bordering on the Euphrates and the Tigris.

At the fall of Jerusalem the stream of Jewish migration began to flow into Egypt. And subsequently many thousands of Jewish families sought refuge in that country from the persecution of the Syrian kings. In Alexandria two of the five quarters of the city were chiefly inhabited by Jews. And in Egypt generally there were according to Philo hardly less than a million Jewish settlers, οὕς ἀποδέοντει μυριάδων ἐκατόν οἱ τῆς Ἀλεξάνδρειας καὶ τῆς χώρας Ἰουδαίων κατοικοῦντες ἀπὸ τοῦ πρὸς Διότην καταβαθμοῦ μέχρι τῶν ὄρων Ἀιδιωπίας, Philo, in Flaccum, § 6. From Egypt numbers of Jews found their way to Cyrene. In 340 B.C. Artaxerxes Ochus carried Jewish captives from Egypt to the settlements of their kinsfolk in Babylon, and to Hyrcania and the shores of the Caspian Sea.
Subsequently Antiochus the Great (223—187), who shewed the utmost consideration to the Jews, removed 2000 of their families from Mesopotamia and Babylonia to Lydia and Phrygia with the view of infusing a loyal element in the disaffected population of those countries. The same system of deportation pushed the Dispersion still further west, for in the year 63 B.C. Pompey caused thousands of Jewish prisoners to be conveyed to Rome, where several gained their freedom and settled in the Trastevere (Philo, De Leg. ad Caium, p. 1014, § 23). But there was another cause which tended in the same direction. The Jew had now become a keen and experienced trader. With this object he passed from city to city and from province to province. Syria and Asia Minor, the Greek islands and Roman colonies were frequented by Hebrew merchants. In this way the Jewish race gained a footing in every region of the civilised world, and not being confined as other nations within the limits of a single region in many places almost outnumbered the native populations.

The list in Acts ii. 9—11 indicates the extent of the Dispersion both in the East and West. But between these two branches there was a wide and well-marked difference which it is important to note. The Western Dispersion were Hellenists separated in language and in mode of thought and manner from the strict Hebrew-speaking Jews who constituted the Eastern Dispersion, and who in common with their Syrian and Palestinian brethren bore the honourable title of 'Hebrews,' or even in a special sense 'the Dispersion,' as distinguished from 'the Dispersion of the Greeks'—comp. St John vii. 35, μή εἰς τὴν διασπορὰν τῶν Ἑλλήνων μέλλει πορεύεσθαι, καὶ διδάσκειν τοὺς Ἑλλήνας; see also Acts vi. 12.

1 In Antioch and Damascus and other Syrian cities there was an enormous Jewish population (Joseph. Bell. Jud. ii. 20. 2, vii. 8. 7), and in the provinces of Asia Minor they were almost if not quite as numerous. Comp. Joseph. Antt. xiv. 7. 2; Bell. Jud. ii. 16. 4, vii. 8. 3; also πᾶσα δὲ γάια σέβεται πλήρης καὶ πᾶσα θάλασσα, Orac. Syb. III. 27; see Philo, de Leg. ad Caium, p. 1023 B.

2 Edersheim's Life and Times of Jesus the Messiah, vol. i. pp. 7, 9, 14.
Rabbinical expressions are cited\(^1\) shewing the equality of the Israelites dwelling in the Eastern Dispersion, and even their superiority over the Jews of Palestine. "Unlike the heathen countries, whose very dust defiled, the soil of Syria was declared clean like that of Palestine itself. So far as purity of descent was concerned, the Babylonians indeed considered themselves superior to their Palestinian brethren. They had it that when Ezra took with him those who went to Palestine, he had left the land behind him as 'pure as fine flour\(^2\)."

It is reasonable then to suppose that when St James writes to 'the twelve tribes which are of the Dispersion,' without any qualifying addition that he addresses himself to the Eastern as distinct from the Western or Hellenist Dispersion: in other words, to the Jews settled in Syria and Babylonia, who were in a preeminent sense 'the Dispersion.' How vast that population was in those regions may be gathered from the words of Josephus: Ἄλλα δὲ δέκα φυλαὶ πέραν εἰσίν Ἐδορᾶτον ἐκεὶ δὲ χριστὸς μιράδες ἀνεφορὰ καὶ ἀριθμῷ γνωσθέναι μὴ δυνάμεναι, Joseph. Antt. xv. 2. 2.

It is apparent also that the Christians to whom St James wrote belonged to the poorer classes, the rich who are alluded to in the Epistle being unconverted Jews and not members of the Christian Church; see notes on i. 10, ii. 1, iv. 13. This condition of things corresponds with what we read elsewhere of the early Church. The relief of the poor became the first act of Church organization, and notwithstanding the generosity of wealthier members the Church in Jerusalem relapsed into poverty and stood in need of pecuniary assistance (Acts vi. 1; Rom. xv. 26). Probably too St Paul's description of the Church of Corinth (1 Cor. i. 26—28) applied to many other Christian communities. During the first decades of its history then the Church was the Church of the poor. Moreover it was a persecuted Church. This appears both from the Epistle of St James and from the Acts of the Apostles.

Further than this internal evidence does not permit us to specialise. We cannot say to what particular Church or Churches, Syrian or Babylonian, the Epistle was originally sent, or even whether it was strictly speaking encyclical, as the opening words suggest, or called forth by definite circumstances of a special community. A certain vividness and force of expression seems to indicate actual occurrences. The incident of the rich man entering the synagogue (ch. ii. 1—4) reads like the description of a scene from life, the wavering of some, the views of others concerning faith and temptation, the description of internal quarrels and particular acts of oppression—all these seem drawn from the actual experience of some one Christian community. At the same time what was specially applicable to one Church would be full of lessons to all where the general circumstances and characteristics would be similar.

It is, however, an interesting and important point that in addressing his Epistle to the twelve tribes St. James expresses the belief in a still complete and united Israel, which appears as a settled conviction in post-Exilian thought.

Thus in the letter of Aristeas relating to the LXX. translation the high-priest Eleazar is represented as sending to Ptolemy Philadelphus seventy-two men, that is, six from each of the twelve tribes; and though four only of the priestly courses returned from exile (Ezr. ii. 36) the original representative number of twenty-four was restored. In the New Testament the same belief appears in the number of the twelve Apostles, and in the promise that they should sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel (Matt. xix. 28; Luke xxii. 30); in the twelve gates of the heavenly Jerusalem (Rev. xxi. 12); and in the sealing of the twelve tribes (Rev. vii. 4, foll.). St. Paul speaks of 'the twelve tribes (τὰ δώδεκα φυλὰ) earnestly serving God day and night,' Acts xxvi. 7; and in Rom. xi. 25 the Israel alluded to includes all the children of Abraham.

Long after the Apostolic age the Talmudists made legal enactments in regard to intermarriage with the ten tribes, whose settlements they still recognised in the regions of the Euphrates, to which they had been first carried in captivity (Lightfoot, Hor. Hebr., Addenda to 1 Cor. xiv. ch. iii.).
INTRODUCTION.

This survival of Israel in its completeness is in accordance with such Old Testament predictions as that of Amos ix. 9, 'I will sift the house of Israel among all the nations, like as corn is sifted in a sieve, yet shall not the least grain fall upon the earth'; and that of Isaiah xi. 12, 'He shall assemble the outcasts of Israel and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth....Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim.' See also Hosea i. 11, 'The children of Judah and the children of Israel shall be gathered together, and they shall appoint themselves one head, and shall go up from the land.' Comp. also Hosea iii. 5, 'Afterward shall the children of Israel return, and seek the Lord their God, and David their king.'

CHAPTER IV.

THE CONTENTS OF THE EPISTLE.

The informal character of the Epistle renders a logical analysis difficult. It is not a formal treatise, but an authoritative reply to questions which had arisen, a bishop's ruling on incidents and questions of Church life and discipline which had been reported to him.

It may be regarded as a discourse on two practical rules of the Christian life: (a) Resistance to temptation, or ἰπομονή: temptation being a necessary condition of the Christian life. (b) Activity in the Christian graces, of which πίστις and ἀλειφ are leading examples.

The various topics of the Epistle may be exhibited more in detail as follows:

Introduction. i. ver. 1.

1. Temptation. (a) From without, i. 2—4. (1) Wisdom, prayer, stedfastness, the Divine helps in temptation, 5—8.
   (2) Temptation, implying oppression, introduces the connected subject of the rich and poor, and the Old Testament problem of the prosperity of the wicked (as a cause of
INTRODUCTION.

1. Temptation or trial), 9—11. (b) The reward of victory over temptation, 12. (c) Temptation from within, moral or religious error, 13—18.

2. The Christian life and character and worship, incidentally arising from the thought of temptation as moral or religious error, 19—27.

3. Christian equality—the sin of preferring persons practically a transgression of the whole Law—a fresh topic probably suggested by letter or conversation, but connected with the preceding paragraph, especially with the thought of worship, ii. 1—13.

4. Faith, a subject suggested by the consideration of Christian law. Its true condition; fruitfulness in works; faith as isolated and separated from its works an impossible conception, as impossible as charity without charitable acts, mercy without almsgiving, or wisdom without its practical result in conduct. This idea of faith is consistent with the great, familiar, often-quoted examples of Abraham and Rahab. In fact without works there is no vitality in faith, any more than there would be vitality in the body without breath, ii. 14—26.

5. Temptations of the tongue. (a) Ambition to become teachers (Rabbis). (b) Vain or slanderous speech, iii. 1—12.

6. The two wisdoms, earthly and heavenly; a topic arising from the thought of a right and wrong use of the tongue, iii. 13—18.

7. Contention and strife; an expansion of the preceding subject. (πόλεμος, the keynote of the paragraph, stands in immediate contrast to ἐλπίς, which is a note of the heavenly wisdom.) The struggle against the flesh, which is the root of evil contention, iv. 1—12.

9. Longsuffering in temptation and the great motive for this—the parousia of Christ, v. 7—11.

10. Conclusion: a summary statement of points in Christian life and conduct, generally connected with the leading subject of the Epistle, and more immediately with the teaching on the right use of the tongue. (a) Swearing, v. 12. (b) Prayer, 13—18. (c) Conversion, 19, 20.
The ethical and practical character of the Epistle is a note of the earlier stage of the Christian Church, when the first and most necessary step was to secure pure and honest and noble lives in those who were members of the brotherhood.

That the great Christian teachers of the first generation should have felt it especially needful to guard the moral side of the Christian life, can surprise no one who has even an elementary knowledge of the society out of which the Christian convert had emerged. On all sides there were in Greek, Roman and Oriental civilization moral evils of the gravest kind. In every city to which the Jewish Christian trader went he would find some fresh form of vice, some new kind of 'temptation' for protection against which the Apostolic warnings were hourly needed. See Dollinger, Gentile and Jew, p. 356 n.

But the preponderance of this ethical teaching certainly points to a period in which controversy had not yet become acute. Hence the absence in this Epistle of that developed Christology which is found in the later N. T. writers. In this Epistle there is no mention of the Incarnation, or of the sufferings and Crucifixion, or of the blood of Christ or of the Atonement or the High-priesthood of Christ, or of prophecy or of Baptism or the Eucharist. And in other regions of thought there are no less striking silences: there is no mention of the Christian attitude to slavery, or to magistrates and rulers: no discussion of questions of marriage, or of the Christian ministry. Such omissions are, however, all explicable in view of the special circumstances which seem to have called forth the Epistle, and are indeed if properly considered evidences both of its genuineness and of its early date.

CHAPTER V.

ST JAMES AND ST PAUL—FAITH AND WORKS.

The supposition of an antagonism between St James and St Paul on the subject of faith and works rests on a very slender foundation, and would probably have had very inconsiderable influence on Christian thought had it not been for the great influence of Luther.

If indeed the words of St James (ch. ii. 14, foll.) are an attack upon St Paul, the immense significance of them can hardly be underrated. For to oppose St Paul on this point, and to assert the saving efficacy of the works of the law, would be to advocate Judaism in the Christian Church. It would mean that this Epistle contains a protest against the position authoritatively maintained by St Paul and sanctioned by the conscience of Christendom throughout the Christian centuries—a wholly untenable proposition. And yet those who see in these words an argument against the Pauline view of Christianity can take no middle course. St James is either the advocate of that form of Jewish Christianity which St Paul condemns, or he is not.

But if it is to be supposed that these words contain a deliberate argument against St Paul's position, what an inadequate treatment this would be of that great crucial question! Again, is it conceivable that the Church would have sanctioned and left in the Canonical Scriptures two contradictory views of this essential matter?

Happily it is only a very superficial view of the passage that demands an hypothesis of this kind. No 'reconciliation' is needed; for the arguments of the two great Apostles are not on the same plane. The errors attacked are fundamentally different.

St Paul's argument is in opposition to those who claimed to be justified by an exact performance of an external ritual, and who desired to carry into Christianity the whole Jewish ceremonial law. St James, on the other hand, is opposing the conception that faith without works is possible or that in any sense it can be the saving and central principle of the Christian life. The teaching of St James is that of the Epistle to the Hebrews, where the activity of a living faith is shewn to have been the inspiring principle of Hebrew history from Abraham to the time of the Maccabees. It is also the teaching of St Paul, comp. Titus iii. 1, 8, 14: the Christians must be: πρὸς πᾶν ἐργον ἀγαθὸν ἐτοίμους....Titus is to exhort ὧν φροντὶζων καλῶν ἐργῶν
INTRODUCTION.

προϊστασθαι οἱ πεπιστευκότες θεῷ, and see as strictly in accordance with St James's teaching, Rom. ii. 13, οὐ γὰρ οἱ ἀκροαταὶ τοῦ νόμου δικαιοῦ παρὰ τῷ θεῷ, ἀλλ' οἱ ποιηταὶ νόμου δικαιοθήκονται.

Up to this time indeed the observance of the Law was unquestioned by Jewish Christians. The controversy in which St Paul was engaged originated when the growth of the Gentile element in the Church and the rise of the Judaizing faction created the necessity of a further development of Christianity, and of a clearly defined relationship to Judaism, which had then assumed an attitude of hostility to the preaching of St Paul.

The danger against which St James directs his argument is, that an unfruitful theoretical belief should take the place of activity in good works. The danger corresponded, indeed, to Pharisaism in the Jewish Church. With the Pharisees 'dead works,' the mechanical carrying out of defined rules uninspired by a living faith, ruined true religion. The corresponding danger against which St James contends was, that a dead or dormant faith without works should destroy the vital energy of the Christian life.

The two Apostles have indeed the same moral standpoint, and whenever a close similarity of expression occurs it is probable that the original teaching is to be referred to St James rather than to St Paul. St James was a follower of Christ before St Paul. And when St Paul visited Jerusalem after his conversion, the exposition of Christianity by St James with the authority of the Lord's Brother may well have contributed to the moulding of his faith.

CHAPTER VI.

SOME LEADING THOUGHTS IN THE EPISTLE: ὁσφία—πίστις—πειρασμός—ἐπομονή.

If this Epistle is the earliest of Christian documents which has descended to us, it becomes of special interest and importance to examine the leading words and expressions which occur in it, and to consider more fully than is possible in the notes the thoughts and associations which are attached to them.

1. Twice in the Epistle St James speaks of σοφία or wisdom; in ch. i. 5, where with a kind of abruptness, as though σοφία would be acknowledged as the first object of desire, it is mentioned as a subject of prayer, and in ch. iii. 13—18, where there is a contrast between σοφία ἀνωθεν κατερχομένη and ἐπίγειος σοφία.

The inquiry to be made then is, what was St James's conception of σοφία, and what is meant by the distinction between the two wisdoms (iii. 13—18)?

The term σοφία conveyed a very definite series of meanings to the Greek mind before it came in contact with Hebrew thought. It meant first of all skill in any art or handicraft in its most excellent and subtle form: αὐδὲν ἄλογο σημαίνοντες τῷ σοφίαν ἢ ἐπὶ ἀρετῆς τέχνης ἑστίν, Eth. Nic. vi. vii. 2. In a higher sense it is the most exact of sciences, ἀκριβεστάτη τῶν ἐπιστημῶν: lastly it is a science of that which is most prized, the highest of existences, that is, the Divine existence of pure immutable being.

In some of these senses the use of σοφία and σοφὸς in the LXX. is synonymous with their use in Greek philosophical literature. Oholiab and Bezalel are σοφοὶ, just as Phidias and Polycletus are σοφοί. And the highest conception of σοφία in Greek thought approaches very nearly to the 'wisdom from above' described by St James. But the Hebrew idea of σοφία has a meaning and history of its own. The Hellenic σοφία is indeed deliberately set aside by St Paul as alien to the Christian system, 1 Cor. i. 18—28; and in Phil. iv. 8 the leading philosophic terms ἀρετῆ and ἐπανοικοῦσα are named with evident disparagement. When St James therefore speaks of σοφία in this Epistle it is the σοφία of Hebrew thought and literature. It was a conception of great beauty, which grew up in the later part of the post-Exile period. When, side by side with the zeal of Judaism for a minute and careful observance of the Law, a passion had arisen for the pursuit of wisdom, σοφία, the most comprehensive word of Greek thought, had been chosen to represent this purely Hebrew conception, which is embodied and illustrated in the sapiential books of the Bible and the Apocrypha. But the Hebrew chokmah or wisdom has a far wider signification than the Greek σοφία. According to the author of the Wisdom of Solomon it is the most perfect principle of guidance in human action: πρὸς ὑμᾶς ὕπνος, οἱ τύμανοι, οἱ λόγοι μου, ἵνα μάθητε σοφίαν καὶ μὴ παραπέσῃτε...λαμπρὰ καὶ ἀμάραντός ἐστιν ἡ σοφία, vi. 9, 12. Step by step σοφία leads to union with God: προσοχὴ δὲ νόμων (observance of the laws) βεβαιώσεις ἀφθαρσίας· ἀφθαρσία δὲ ἑγγὺς εἶναι πουέθει θεοῦ, 18—20...τιμήσατε σοφίαν ἵνα ἐστὶν τὸν αἰῶνα βασιλεύσητε, 21. It is a direct emanation from God: πᾶσα σοφία παρὰ Κυρίου καὶ μετ' αὐτοῦ ἐστὶν ἐκ τῶν αἰῶνα, Ecclus. i. 1; and the breath of His power and the reflexion of His brightness: ἀτμίς γὰρ ἐστιν τῆς τοῦ θεοῦ δυνάμεως...ἀπαύγασμα γὰρ ἐστιν φωτὸς ἁρίδου καὶ ἐσοπτρον ἀκηλίδωσον τῆς τοῦ θεοῦ ἐνεργείας καὶ εἰκών τῆς ἀγαθότητος αὐτοῦ, Wisdom of Solomon, vii. 25, 26.

This exalted view of σοφία gives a depth of meaning to the description of the Lord’s growth: καὶ Ἰησοῦς προέκοπτεν τῇ σοφίᾳ κ.τ.λ., Luke ii. 52, and ὅ δὲ παιδίον ἠὔχανεν, καὶ ἐκραταιότο, πληρούμενον σοφία, ii. 40.

This then, we cannot doubt, was the glowing picture present to St James’s mind when he spoke of σοφία as the most exalted subject of prayer, and as that which cometh from above. This latter expression sounds like an echo of the phrase in the Book of Wisdom where σοφία is described as ‘an influence flowing from the glory of the Almighty’ (ἀπόρροια τῆς τοῦ παντοκράτορος δόξης εἰληκρίνης), vii. 25.

It is less easy to determine what the Apostle means us to understand by that opposing ‘wisdom’ which he describes as earthly, sensual, devilish, ἐπίγειος, ψυχικῆ, δαμασκιάδης.

While it is true that the notes of the psychic wisdom as given by St James are, from a Christian standpoint, a justifiable criticism of the prevailing philosophic systems, the question arises whether such a warning against the dangers of Greek philosophy would be specially needed in those Hebrew communities to which the Epistle was addressed, and whether St James’s argument is not rather directed against dangers to be found in the distinctively Jewish tendency to a spirit of zeal.
and fanaticism. At this early stage of Christian history the evils which threatened Judaism equally threatened the Judæo-Christian body. 'Zeal for the Lord' was an historic word with the Jew and had inspired great actions, and the Maccabean victories were still a practical argument of success. But this noble enthusiasm of former days had now degenerated into a blind hatred of foreign domination, and was rapidly tending to the fierce spirit which broke out in wild excesses at the siege of Jerusalem.

Therefore, though a more general interpretation need not be excluded, it is probable that by the false wisdom of which St James speaks, and which is clearly associated with zeal and contention and rivalry (ἐρήθεια), is primarily meant that other system of life which found many supporters at this period and which Josephus expressly calls a φιλοσοφία, Antt. xviii. i. 1, τῇ δὲ τετάρτῃ τῶν φιλοσοφιῶν ὁ Γαλιλαῖος Ἰουδας ἡγεμὼν κατέστη κ.τ.λ. This φιλοσοφία represented the mundane and material side of the Maccabean revival. It fostered the expectation of an earthly kingdom, and of a Messiah who should overcome the armies of the aliens and free Israel from Roman domination; it was ἐπίγειος. It looked to a time of material prosperity and to the satisfaction of desires: it was ὑποχεία and not πνευματική. Again, the moving energetic element in this system, that spirit of enthusiasm and desperate resistance to foreign power or to any infringement of the national religion in its extreme phase, exhibited characteristics which closely approached the phenomena of demoniacal possession: it was δαιμονιώδης.

2. Another leading thought in this Epistle is embodied in the word πίστις. So far from this conception being absent, or unimportant, in St James's scheme of the Christian life its pre-eminent position is implied from the first, ch. i. 2. The object of St James's teaching is not to eliminate faith as a leading principle, but to secure the sacredness and efficiency of it, and to guard against the danger of esteeming faith to be merely an intellectual assent to a creed, or a belief in a fact which a man might hold without receiving vital inspiration from it.

Faith as conceived by St James then is an active principle—the energy of the soul in its relation to God. It implies work achieved under an invisible and eternal influence which it instinctively apprehends and appropriates. It is the same inspiring quality of great and holy men which the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews enlarges upon as the key to the Divine history of Israel. Accordingly works that spring from faith justify in virtue of the inseparable union with a living faith.

3. And if faith is thus the essence and determining quality of the Christian life, so that \( \text{o\;\text{\iota\;\pi\iota\sigma\tau\epsilon\upsilon\vartheta\omicron\nu\epsilon\tau\epsilon\upsilon\varsigma} } - \text{the believers—the possessors of \( \pi\iota\sigma\tau\iota\) form the Christian community, it follows that conditions must exist by which \( \pi\iota\sigma\tau\iota \) should be continuously exercised and tested. If the Christians as a body are \( \text{o\;\pi\iota\sigma\tau\epsilon\upsilon\vartheta\omicron\nu\epsilon\tau\epsilon\upsilon\varsigma} \), they are also \( \text{o\;\pi\iota\rchi\alpha\zeta\omicron\omicron\omicron\omicron\nu\omicron\iota\nu} \). Through \( \pi\iota\rchi\alpha\zeta\omicron\omicron\omicron\omicron\nu\omicron\iota\nu \) faith becomes an \( \iota\nu\epsilon\pi\rho\gamma\epsilon\iota\alpha \), instead of being simply a \( \delta\nu\alpha\omicron\iota\varsigma \). That this was the condition of the Master's life is shewn by the expression: \( \iota\mu\epsilon\varsigma \; \delta\iota \; \epsilon\iota\tau\epsilon \; \iota\delta\iota\mu\epsilon\mu\epsilon\nu\iota\kappa\iota\tau\epsilon \; \mu\epsilon \; \epsilon\omicron\nu \; \epsilon \; \tau\iota\varsigma \; \pi\iota\rchi\alpha\zeta\omicron\omicron\omicron\omicron\nu\omicron\iota\nu \), Luke xxii. 28. It also agrees with St Paul's important rule: \( \ddot{o} \; \ddot{\omicron} \; \ddot{\pi} \; \dddot{\omega} \; \pi\alpha\mu\omicron\nu\omicron\nu \; \ddot{\theta} \; \dddot{\lambda} \; \ddot{\iota} \; \dddot{\varphi} \; \dddot{\omicron} \; \dddot{\nu} \; \dddot{\epsilon} \; \ddot{\iota} \; \ddot{\varsigma} \; \dddot{\epsilon} \; \dddot{\tau} \; \ddot{\nu} \; \dddot{\beta} \; \dddot{\alpha} \; \dddot{\iota} \; \dddot{\lambda} \; \dddot{\iota} \; \dddot{\epsilon} \; \dddot{\theta} \; \dddot{\iota} \), Acts xiv. 22, and with many other passages of Holy Scripture.

4. But from this exercise of faith, in which it is being continually tested by different forms of trial (\( \pi\iota\rchi\alpha\zeta\omicron\omicron\omicron\nu\omicron\iota\nu \; \pi\omicron\kappa\iota\lambda\omicron\upsilon\omicron\varsigma \)), there results another quality highly and specially characteristic of the Christian life, namely, \( \upsilon\omicron\mu\omicron\omicron\omicron\nu \), patience or resistance. \( \pi\iota\sigma\tau\iota \) represents the active principle, \( \upsilon\omicron\mu\omicron\omicron\omicron\nu \) the passive principle, though in \( \upsilon\omicron\mu\omicron\omicron\omicron\nu \) there is also an element of action. \( \upsilon\omicron\mu\omicron\omicron\omicron\nu \) engages itself in resisting evil, \( \pi\iota\sigma\tau\iota \) in producing good—in activities which result from the divinely illuminated attitude of the soul.

CHAPTER VII.

THE POETICAL ELEMENT IN THE EPISTLE.

Poetical form is so marked a characteristic of this Epistle and bears so close a relation to the interpretation of it in parts, that some explanation of the principles and laws of Hebrew poetry seems to be required in an Introduction. Certain poetical elements, such as beautiful and exact expression of observed facts in life and nature, suggestiveness, imagination, taste, delicate choice of words, find a place in the poetry of all nations and of all times. But in regard to form there is great diversity. For instance, metre, the chief characteristic of Greek and Latin verse, does not in its strict sense of measured syllables regularly disposed enter into the art of the Hebrew poet, and rhyme, which gives a special charm to much of modern European poetry, is also absent from Hebrew poetical composition. At the same time the examples quoted below exhibit lines of corresponding length, and there are many instances where a play on the sound of words produces an effect similar to rhyme.

One characteristic device of Hebrew poetry is a system of acrostics exhibited in several of the Psalms, of which the 119th is a specially complex and ingenious example. Other instances are Prov. xxxi. 10—31, and Lamentations i. ii. iii. iv.

But by far the most distinctive feature of Hebrew poetry is parallelism; by which is meant a correspondence by way of likeness or dissimilarity of words, thoughts and clauses, a response of line to line and word to word. (1) The commonest form of parallelism is where the thought of the first line is repeated in the second and emphasized (a) by intensified expression; as,

The wicked watcheth the righteous,
And seeketh occasion to slay him.
I have seen the wicked in great power,
And spreading himself like a green tree in his own soil.

Ps. xxxvii. 32, 35.

(b) Or by contrast as:

The full soul loatheth an honeycomb:
But to the hungry soul every bitter thing is sweet.

Prov. xxvii. 7.

(2) Sometimes the parallelism consists of identity of structure without either contrast or necessary similarity in sense, as:

Fire and hail, snow and vapour;
Stormy wind, fulfilling his word:
Mountains and all hills;
Fruitful trees and all cedars. Ps. cxlviii. 8, 9.

These are examples of parallelism in its simplest form. But the scheme is capable of great variety and extension. Sometimes from four to eight lines are required to complete the system, sometimes the parallelism is shown in triplets or in stanzas of five lines, as:

Let that day be darkness;
Let not God regard it from above,
Neither let the light shine upon it. Job iii. 4.

Sometimes the first line answers to the third and the second to the fourth, as:

As the heavens are high above the earth,
So high is his goodness over them that fear him:
As remote as the east is from the west,
So far hath he removed from us our transgressions.
Ps. ciii. 11, 12.

A still more complex structure, called by Bishop Jebb 'inverted parallelism,' is when the corresponding lines in a stanza are the first and fourth, and the second and third, as:

My son, if thine heart be wise,
My heart shall be glad, even mine:
Yea, my reins shall rejoice,
When thy lips speak right things. Prov. xxiii. 15, 16.

Other instances of this complex character are Psalm lxxxiv. 5—7, where the stanza consists of six lines: "Blessed is the man...appeareth before God in Zion": and Psalm cxxxv. 15—18, an instance where eight lines are required to complete the parallelism: "The idols of the nations...every one that trusteth in them."

Many other examples might be given of the various modes in which the parallelism of Hebrew poetry is exhibited. It was a system which required the same constructive skill as the classical system, and created a pleasure in expectancy of response at least equal to that of the rhymed couplet of English poetry.

It may also be observed that Hebrew poetry loses less by translation than the poetry of any other nation. It is quite possible to retain in a foreign language many of its chief characteristics—length of lines, position of words, the response (or contrast) of thought to thought, and even the rhythm which gives it its special charm and grace. It is indeed chiefly this underlying poetical form and diction of the original to which the English Bible owes its strength and beauty of style.

The strain of poetical inspiration in the Old Testament revived in the New. Evidence of this continued gift meets us at the opening of the Gospel. In the hymn of Zacharias and Simeon and in the Psalm of the Blessed Virgin Mary, the beauty of artistic form and expression and the peculiar charm of Hebrew parallelism reappear in perfection. And it is with the deepest and most solemn interest that we trace the same vein of poetry in the discourses of our Lord. This is especially observable in the most momentous utterances of the Gospel. As instances of these may be cited: Matt. x. 34—39, xi. 28—30, xx. 25—28, and even in the hour of the Passion, Luke xxiii. 28—31. But nowhere is this characteristic more completely and beautifully exhibited than in the Sermon on the Mount, which is indeed from first to last thrown into the form of a varied and impressive poem, the artistic structure of which can be shewn by analysis 1. It is significant and deeply suggestive that in this poetic structure, next to our Lord’s own discourses, this Epistle of St James, the brother of the Lord, ranks highest.

The whole argument is more like the argument of a poem than of a regularly constructed treatise. The gradual evolution of ideas, one springing from another by which it is suggested, the linked digressions and the repeated return to the original and pervading thought, bear the same character of a noble and artistic poem.

Among other examples of genuine poetical excellence are the vigorous passages on the evils of the tongue (iii. 3—13), the scene in the Christian synagogue on the entrance of the wealthy Jew (ii. 2—4), the vivid description of trade activity (iv. 13—v. 6), and of the cruel and miserly landlord, with the picturesque personifi-

INTRODUCTION.

...cation of the rust or tarnish on the hoarded gold, or the hire of the labourers unjustly withheld, itself crying out in accusation. And throughout this work there is the poet’s grasp of what is real and eternal, in contrast with the false and fleeting character of human opinion.

Some further remarks on the poetical passages of the Epistle will be made in the notes, but two points of special interest may be indicated here. (a) The revival of a poetical gift in a marked and striking way in the family of the poet king David is a memorable fact. We have seen that it was a characteristic charm of our Lord’s discourses, that it is noticeable in those hymns and psalms which celebrated the events and significance of His birth, and that it is found again richly developed in the Epistle of the Lord’s brother. All this implies in that family or group of families the study not only of the words but of the form of ancient prophecy, and a proficiency in the same Divine art which must have been cultivated in the ancient schools of the prophets. (b) It is a fair inference from this ordered beauty of form and artistic diction that such an Epistle as this is not a hasty or desultory composition, but the finished result of natural powers carefully trained and divinely illuminated. And we may further believe that it was purposely moulded in a poetical form with a view to the deeper impression and more lasting memory which such a form would ensure.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE GREEK TEXT OF ST JAMES.

The text of this Epistle, like other portions of the N.T., rests on the evidence of the ancient mss., Versions, and quotations in the works of early writers and liturgies.

Of the mss. the following important Uncials are referred to in the notes.
INTRODUCTION.

K. Codex Sinaiticus, assigned to the middle of the 4th century. Of the correctors Kα was probably a contemporary, Kβ belongs to the 5th century, Kε to the beginning of the 6th century. This valuable Codex was recovered by Tischendorf in an interesting way from the convent of St Catharine on Mt Sinai in the year 1859. It is now at St Petersburg.

A. Codex Alexandrinus, 5th century.
   This ms. was presented to Charles I. in 1628 by Cyril Lucar, Patriarch of Constantinople, formerly Patriarch of Alexandria. It passed with the royal collection to the British Museum in the year 1753.

B. Codex Vaticanus, 4th century.
   This is the oldest vellum ms. of the New Testament in existence, and of great value and authority in determining the text. As the name implies, it is in the Vatican Library, where it has been so jealously guarded that for a long time no complete collation was possible. Recently however an excellent facsimile of the whole has been published.

C. Codex Ephraemi, a palimpsest of the 5th century, of great critical value, now in Paris.

The following 10th century mss. are also cited in these notes. K. Codex Mosquensis, in the Library of the Holy Synod at Moscow. L. Codex Angelicus Romanus, in the Angelican Library of the Augustinian Monks in Rome. P. Codex Porphyrianus (a palimpsest), so called from Bishop Porphyry of St Petersburg, to whom it belonged.

The Versions cannot be used except rarely for the verification of Greek words, but they give evidence of the presence or omission of words or clauses, and in some cases are so literal that their testimony is available for the order of words. The following are of the greatest value:

I. Latin. There is very little evidence for a Latin version of the Epistle of St James earlier than the 4th cent. It is not quoted by any early Latin writer, and it is absent from the Cheltenham Stichometry, which probably dates from about 400 A.D. It has however a place in the Claromontane Stichometry, and it is quoted, though rarely, by Latin Fathers of the 4th cent.

Of 'Old Latin' texts we have \textit{ff} = Cod. \textit{Corbienijs}, saec. ix, formerly at Corbie in Picardy, now at St Petersburg. This MS. now contains the Epistle complete, preceded by Ps. Tertullian on Jewish Meats and the Epistle of Barnabas. It is not therefore a Biblical MS. It ascribes the Epistle to James the Son of Zebedee.

\textit{m} = quotations in the 'Speculum Augustini,' a collection of Biblical extracts arranged under headings.

The text of \textit{ff} agrees with the quotations of Chromatius of Aquileia, a friend of St Jerome. The text of \textit{m} in this Epistle is almost identical with that of the quotations of Priscillian, a Spanish heretic of the 5th century. Both our non-Vulgate authorities may therefore claim the title of Old Latin, though it is obvious what a different meaning and authority the term Old Latin has here compared with the case of the Gospels where the forms of the 'Old Latin' can be traced back to the second century.

We have also in the Vulgate an already existing text slightly revised by St Jerome. The best MS. of the Vulgate are, as in the other books, \textit{am} (= Cod. \textit{Amiatinus}, circ. 700 A.D.) and \textit{fuld} (= Cod. \textit{Fuldensis}, 546 A.D.).

There are exhaustive essays on the Latin texts of the Epistle by Bishop John Wordsworth and Dr Sanday in \textit{Studia Biblica}, I. (1885).

II. \textit{Syriac}. “There are three stages in the history of the Syriac Canon. The first ignored the Catholic Epistles [including therefore our Epistle] altogether. This is represented by the \textit{Doctrina of Addai} and by the Homilies of Aphraates, which are definitely dated between the years 336—345. The second stage is marked by the Peshitto Version, which has been called the Syriac Vulgate. As far back as that version can be traced it included three of the Catholic Epistles, St James, St Peter, 1 St John. How far this stage overlapped the first it will need closer investigations than have yet been made to determine. The great body of the Syrian Church accepted the three Epistles which are found in the Bibles alike of the Nestorians and of the Jacobites who broke away from orthodox standards in the fifth and sixth centuries” (Dr Sanday, Studia Biblica, III. pp. 245, 246). The third stage was the reception of all seven Catholic Epistles.

It will be seen from this that our Epistle, though not at first received by the Syrian Church, gained for itself a place in that fourth century revision of the Old Syriac N.T. which is commonly called the Peshitto. Whether any translation of the Epistle existed before the 4th cent. must therefore remain doubtful. The Epistle is of course included in the Harklean revision of A.D. 616.

III. Egyptian. The two most important Egyptian Versions of the N.T. are the Bohairic and the Sahidic. The Bohairic (formerly called Memphitic) was spoken in Northern Egypt, the Sahidic (formerly called Thebaic) in Southern Egypt. The date at which the N.T. began to be translated into these dialects is uncertain. As far as the Gospels are concerned some scholars place it as early as the end of the second century. The two Versions represent distinct types of text, the Northern Version being the purest, the Southern having some remarkable interpolations. The Sahidic Version of St James is known to us only in fragments.

1 For the notes on the Latin and Syriac Versions the Editor is indebted to Mr F. C. Burkitt; for that on the Egyptian Version to Mr Forbes Robinson.

2 τολμᾷ γὰρ πταίσας ἀπαντεῖς· εἰ τίς ἐν λόγῳ οὐ πταίει, οὕτως τέλειος ἄνήρ, δυνατὸς χαλαρωγῆσαι καὶ ὅλον τὸ σῶμα.

3 εἰ δὲ τῶν ὑπ' πονον τοὺς χαλινοὺς εἰς τὰ στόματα βάλλομεν εἰς τὸ πείθεσθαι αὐτοῖς ἡμῖν, καὶ ὅλον τὸ σῶμα αὐτῶν μετάγομεν.

4 ἴδοι καὶ τὰ πλοῖα, τηλικαῦτα ἄντα καὶ ὑπὸ ἄνεμων σκληρῶν ἐλαυνόμενα, μετάγεται υπὸ ἐλαχιστοῦ πηδαλίου ὅπου ἡ ὀρμὴ τοῦ εὐθύνοντος βούλεται. 5 οὕτως καὶ ἡ γλῶσσα μικρὸν μέλος ἐστὶν καὶ μεγάλα αὐχεῖ. ἰδοὺ ἡλίκιον πῦρ ἡλίκιν ὤλην ἀνάπτει. 6 καὶ ἡ γλῶσσα πῦρ, ὁ κόσμος τῆς ἀδικίας, ἡ γλῶσσα καθίσταται ἐν τοῖς μέλεσιν ἡμῶν, ἡ σπειροῦσα ὅλον τὸ σῶμα καὶ φλογίζουσα τὸν τροχὸν τῆς γενέσεως καὶ φλογιζόμενη ὑπὸ τῆς γεέννης. 1 πᾶσα γὰρ φύσις θηρίων τε καὶ πετεινῶν ἐρπετῶν τε καὶ ἐναλίων δαμάζεται καὶ δεδάμασται τῇ φύσει τῇ ἀνθρωπίνῃ, 8 τῆς δὲ γλῶσσας οὐδεὶς δύναται ἀνθρώπων δαμάσαι: ἀκατάστατον κακῶν, μεστὴν ίοῦ θανατηφόρου. 9 ἐν αὐτῇ εὐλογοῦμεν τὸν κύριον καὶ πατέρα, καὶ ἐν αὐτῇ καταρώμεθα τοὺς ἀνθρώπους τοὺς καθ’ ὁμοίωσιν θεοῦ γεγονότας. 10 ἐκ τοῦ αὐτοῦ στόματος ἐξέρχεται εὐλογία καὶ κατάρα. οὐ χρῆ, ἄδελφοί μου, ταῦτα οὕτως γίνεσθαι. 11 μὴτὶ ἡ πηγὴ ἐκ τῆς αὐτῆς ὁπῆς βρύει τὸ γλυκὸ καὶ τὸ πικρὸν; 12 μὴ δύναται, ἄδελφοί μου, συκῆ ἔλαιας ποιῆσαι ἡ ἀμπελος σῦκα; οὔτε ἀλκοὸν γλυκὺ ποιῆσαι ὄδωρ.

13 Τῆς σοφὸς καὶ ἑπιστήμου ἐν ὑμῖν; δειξάτω ἐκ τῆς καλῆς ἀναστροφῆς τὰ ἔργα αὐτοῦ ἐν πρατήτηι σοφίας. 14 εἰ δὲ ξῆλον πικρὸν ἔχετε καὶ ἐριθείαν ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ ὑμῶν, μὴ κατακανάσατε καὶ ψεύδεσθε κατὰ τῆς ἀληθείας. 15 ὅπου ἐστὶν αὐτὴ ἡ σοφία ἀνωθεν κατερχομένη, ἀλλὰ ἐπίγειος, ψυχική, δαιμονιώδης. 16 ὅπου γὰρ ξῆλος καὶ ἐριθεία, ἐκεῖ ἀκαταστασία καὶ πᾶν φαύλον πρᾶγμα. 17 ἡ δὲ ἀνωθεν σοφία πρῶτον μὲν ἀγνὴ ἐστὶν, ἔπειτα εἰρήνική, ἐπιεικής, εὐπειθής, μεστὴ ἐλέους καὶ καρπῶν ἀγαθῶν, ἀδιάκριτος, ἀνυπόκριτος. 18 καρπὸς δὲ δικαιοσύνης ἐν εἰρήνῃ σπείρεται τοῖς ποιοῦσιν εἰρήνην.

4 Ἐπέθεσα σῦνεμοι καὶ πόθεν μάχαν ἐν ὑμῖν; οὐκ ἐντεύθεν, ἐκ τῶν ἡδονῶν ὑμῶν τῶν στρατευομένων ἐν τοῖς μέλεσιν ύμῶν; ὡς ἐπιθυμεῖτε, καὶ οὐκ ἔχετε· φονεύετε καὶ ξηλοῦτε, καὶ οὐ δύνασθε ἐπιτυχεῖν· μάχεσθε καὶ πολεμεῖτε· οὐκ ἔχετε διὰ τὸ μὴ αἰτεῖσθαι ύμᾶς. ἢ αἰτεῖτε καὶ οὐ λαμβάνετε, διότι κακῶς αἰτεῖσθε, ἣν ἐν ταῖς ἡδοναῖς ύμῶν δαπανήσῃ· ἡ μοιχαλίδες, οὐκ οἴδατε ὅτι η ἡμέρα τοῦ κόσμου ἐχθρα τοῦ θεοῦ ἐστίν; ὅτε οὖν ἑαυτῷ βουληθῇ φίλος εἶναι τοῦ κόσμου, ἐχθρὸς τοῦ θεοῦ καθίσταται. ἢ δοκεῖτε ὅτι κενῶς ἡ γραφὴ λέγει· Πρὸς φθόνον ἐπιποθεῖ τὸ πνεύμα διακόκισεν ἐν ἡμῖν; ἡ μείζονα δὲ δίδῳσιν χάριν. διὸ λέγει· Ὁ θεὸς ὑπερηφάνους αὐτοτάσσεται, ταπεινοὺς δὲ δίδῳσιν χάριν. ὁ ποτάμι ὁ τῷ θεῷ· ἀντίστητε δὲ τῷ διαβόλῳ, καὶ φεύξεται ἀφ' υμῶν· ἐγγίσατε τῷ θεῷ, καὶ ἐγγίσα ὑμῖν. καθαρίσατε χεῖρας, ἀμαρτωλοί, καὶ ἀγνίσατε καρδίς, δέψυχοι. ταλαιπωρήσατε καὶ πενθήσατε καὶ κλαύσατε· ὁ γέλως υμῶν εἰς πένθος μεταστράφητος καὶ ἡ χαρὰ εἰς κατήφειαν. ταπεινώθητε ἐνώπιον Κυρίου, καὶ ὑψώσει ύμᾶς.

Μὴ καταλαλεῖτε ἀλλήλων, ἀδελφοί· ὁ καταλαλῶν ἀδελφὸν ἡ κρίνων τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ καταλαλεῖ νόμον καὶ κρίνει νόμον· εἰ δὲ νόμου κρίνεις, οὐκ εἰ ποιητῆς νόμου ἀλλὰ κριτῆς. εἰς ὅτι ὁ νομοθέτης καὶ κριτής, ὁ δυνάμενος σώσαι καὶ ἀπολέσαι· σὺ δὲ τίς εἰ, ὁ κρίνων τοῦ πλησίου;

Ἀγε νῦν οἱ λέγοντες· Σήμερον ἡ αὕριον πορευόμεθα εἰς τὴν τὴν πόλιν καὶ ποιήσομεν ἕκει ἐναυτοῦ καὶ ἐμπορευόμεθα καὶ κερδήσομεν, οἴτινες οὐκ ἐπιστασθε ὁ τῆς αὕριον· ποία γὰρ ἡ ξωὴ ύμῶν; ἂμει γὰρ ἐστε ἡ πρὸς ὁλίγον φαινομένη, ἐπειτα καὶ ἀφανιζομένη· αὐτὶ τοῦ λέγειν ύμᾶς. Ἐὰν ὁ κύριος θελήσῃ καὶ ζήσομεν, καὶ ποιήσομεν τούτῳ ἡ ἐκεῖνο. νῦν δὲ καιράσθη ἐν ταῖς ἀλαξονεῖαις ὑμῶν· πᾶσα καύχησις τοιαύτη ποιηρά ἔστω. 17 εἴδοτι οὖν καλὸν ποιεῖν καὶ μὴ ποιοῦντι, ἀμαρτία αὐτῶν ἐστιν.

5 Ἀγε νῦν οἱ πλούσιοι, κλαύσατε ὀλολύζοντες ἐπὶ ταῖς ταλαιπωρίαις ὑμῶν ταῖς ἐπερχομέναις. 2 ὁ πλοῦτος ὑμῶν σέσητεν, καὶ τὰ ἡμᾶτα ὑμῶν σητόβρωτα γέγονεν, 3 ὁ χρυσὸς ὑμῶν καὶ ὁ ἄργυρος κατίωται, καὶ ὁ ἴδιοι αὐτῶν εἰς μαρτύριον ὑμῖν ἔσται καὶ φάγεται τὰς σάρκας ὑμῶν ὡς πῦρ. ἐθησαυρίσατε ἐν ἔσχάταις ἡμέραις. 4 ἰδοὺ ὁ μισθὸς τῶν ἐργατῶν τῶν ἀμησάντων τὰς χόρας ὑμῶν ὁ ἀφυστερημένος ἀφ’ ὑμῶν κράζει, καὶ αἱ βοιαι τῶν θερίσαντων εἰς τὰ ἁτα Κυρίου Σαβαώθ εἰσελήλυθαν. 5 ἐτρυφήσατε ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς καὶ ἐσπαταλήσατε, ἔθρεψατε τὰς καρδίας ὑμῶν ἐν ἡμέρᾳ σφαγῆς. 6 κατεδικάσατε, ἐφονεύσατε τὸν δίκαιον· οὐκ ἀντιτάσσεται ὑμῖν.

7 Μακροθυμήσατε οὖν, ἀδελφοί, ἐως τῆς παρουσίας τοῦ κυρίου. ἰδοὺ ὁ γεωργὸς ἐκδέχεται τὸν τίμιον καρπὸν τῆς γῆς, μακροθυμῶν ἐπὶ αὐτῷ ἐως λάβῃ προϊμον καὶ ψυμον. 8 μακροθυμήσατε καὶ ψυμοὶς, στηρίξατε τὰς καρδίας ὑμῶν, ὅτι ἡ παρουσία τοῦ κυρίου ἡγγακεν. 9 μὴ στενάξετε κατ’ ἄλληλον, ἀδελφοί, ὡς μὴ κριθητε. ἰδοὺ κριθής πρὸ τῶν θυρῶν ἔστηκεν. 10 ὑπόδειγμα λάβετε, ἀδελφοί, τῆς κακοπαθείας καὶ τῆς μακροθυμίας τοὺς προφήτας, οἱ ἐλάλησαν ἐν τῷ ὁνόματι Κυρίου. 11 ἰδοὺ μακαρίζομεν τοὺς ὑπομείναντας· τὴν ὑπομονὴν Ἰώβ ἤκουσατε καὶ τὸ τέλος Κυρίου εἶδετε, ὅτι πολυπλαγχυὸς ἔστιν ὁ κύριος καὶ οἰκτίρμων.

12 Πρὸ πάντων δὲ, ἀδελφοί μου, μὴ ὁμιλεῖτε, μήτε τὸν οὐρανὸν μήτε τὴν γῆν μήτε ἄλλον τινὰ ὅρκον· ἦτω δὲ ὑμῶν τὸ Ναὶ ναῖ, καὶ τὸ Ὑεύ ὅ τι, ὡς μὴ ὑπὸ κρίσιν πέσητε.
Κακοπαθείτες εν ὑμῖν; προσευχέσθω εὐθυμεῖτις;
ψαλλέτω. Ἀσθενεί τις εἰς ὑμῖν; προσκαλεσάσθω
τοὺς πρεσβυτέρους τῆς ἐκκλησίας, καὶ προσευχάσθωσαν ἐπ’ αὐτὸν, ἀλείφαντες αὐτὸν ἐλαίῳ ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ κυρίου. ἐκεῖνοι ἐγερεί αὐτὸν ὁ κύριος; κἂν ἀμαρτίας ἦ πεποιηκὼς, ἀφεθήσεται αὐτῷ. Ἐξομολογεῖσθε οὖν ἄλληλοι τὰς ἀμαρτίας, καὶ εὐχέσθε ὑπὲρ ἄλληλων, ὡσα ἰαθήτε πολὺ ἰσχύει δήσεις δικαίου ἐνεργομένη. Ἡλίας ἄνθρωπος ἦν ὁμοιοπάθης ἡμῖν, καὶ προσευχὴ προσηύξατο τοῦ μὴ βρέξαι, καὶ οὐκ ἔβρεξεν ἐπὶ τῆς γῇς ἐνιαυτοὺς τρεῖς καὶ μῆνας ἦξ. Ἐκαὶ πάλιν προσηύξατο, καὶ ὁ οὐρανὸς ἔδωκεν ύπόν καὶ ἡ γῆ ἐβλάστησεν τὸν καρπὸν αὐτῆς.

Αδελφοί μου, ἐὰν τις εἰς ὑμῖν πλανηθῇ ἀπὸ τῆς ἀληθείας καὶ ἐπιστρέψῃ τις αὐτὸν, γινωσκὼ ὅτι ὁ ἐπιστρέψας ἀμαρτωλὸν ἐκ πλάνης ὅδοι αὐτοῦ σώσει ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ ἐκ θανάτου καὶ καλύψει πλῆθος ἀμαρτιῶν.
NOTES.

CHAPTER I.

Title. Ἰακώβου Ἑπιστολή, as in BK and in the subscription of Ν, which has no title, and of Α where the title is lost. In C both title and subscription are lost.

12. The T.R. inserts ὁ κύριος with KLP (C has κύριος) as subject to ἐπιγγέλλω against the leading uncialς ΝΑΒ. This reading is clearly a gloss, as is partly evidenced by the variant ὁ θεός, which appears in some cursives, the Vulgate and other versions.

17. Ν*Β have the curious error τροπὴς ἀποσκίασματος.

19. ἵστε. So Ν*ΑΒ𝐶 and old Latin (scitote) and Vulgate (scitis). KLP have ὅστε. The change from ἵστε to ὅστε was probably the correction of an expert who inferred some error from the occurrence of the Attic syncopated form ἵστε (from ἵσμα), a form not elsewhere found in the N.T.

20. ὁκ ἐργάσιμα with ΝΑΒΧ and many cursives, against C*KLP and others, which have ὁκ κατεργάσιμα. There is a tendency in language towards the use of strengthened forms.

CH. I. 1. INTRODUCTORY ADDRESS.

1. θεοῦ καὶ κυρίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ. καὶ is here disjunctive. James (or Jacob) is the δοῦλος of God and also of the Lord Jesus Christ. Grammatically it would be possible to regard θεοῦ καὶ κυρίου as a joint qualification of Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, but the usage of the N.T. is against this; comp. Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ καὶ θεοῦ πατρὸς κ.τ.λ. (Gal. i. 1). See, however, St John xx. 28 ὁ κύριος μου καὶ ὁ θεός μου, where both terms are applied to Christ.

κύριος, frequent in LXX. as the Hellenistic equivalent for Jehovah, as well as in lower senses, is applied in N.T. as a title of reverence to Christ, ‘the Master,’ and is so used almost as a proper name, ‘the Lord; hence the absence of the article as here and frequently, especially when κύριος is governed by a preposition, or when it is in the genitive case, or when it precedes ἰησ. Χριστός. Winer, πι. xix. 1, p. 154. Here it is correlative to δοῦλος. Therefore, although the use of κύριος here may not distinctly prove the truth of the Godhead of Christ, yet the associations of the word certainly tend to connect the Lord Christ of the N.T. with the Lord God of the O.T.

δοῦλος: (a) in reference to a king, a subject, all subjects of an Oriental monarch being slaves: καὶ ἰδοὺ οἱ δοῦλοι μου μετά τῶν δοῦλων σου, 1 Kings v. 6; ἤρεβοδομί δοῦλος Συλομώντος, 1 Kings xi. 26, and frequently. So in N.T. ὡμοιότηθι ἡ βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν ἀνθρώπων βασιλεία ἡ ἡθέλησεν συνάραι λόγον μετὰ τῶν δοῦλων αὐτοῦ, St Matt. xviii. 23; where the δοῦλοι are satraps, or provincial governors. In Demo­thenes the subjects of Philip are δοῦλοι, in contrast to the free Athenians: καὶ αὐτὸς μὴ παρῆ τοὺς δοῦλους ἀγωνοθετήσων τέμπει, Phil. iii. 32; (b) in reference to a master, a slave; and in a special sense (c) a slave consecrated to a god, ἱπρόδοος, a term applied to the Nethinim, Joseph. Ant. xi. 5. 6: comp. εἰς οὕτως διὰ θείας | λατρείας μη παραλάμβην, ἣ | παραλάμβην ἀγαθῆ μορφ. Eur. Ion 151—153. All three are Christian thoughts: (a) connects δοῦλος with the conception of the βασιλεία τοῦ θεοῦ, (b) with the thought of personal service to a Master, (c) who is divine.

St Peter calls himself δοῦλος καὶ ἄποστολος ἰησ. Χριστοῦ, 2 Pet. i. 1. So St Paul, δοῦλος ἰησ. Χριστοῦ, κλητὸς ἄποστολος, Rom. i. 1; and in conjunction with Timothy, Παύλος καὶ Τιμόθεος δοῦλοι Χριστοῦ ἰησοῦ, Phil. i. 1.

The simplicity of this self-designation and the absence of any authoritative title tend to prove the authenticity of the Epistle.

tαῖς διάδεκα φυλαῖς. This conception of the solidarity of Israel is a point in the enthusiasm of the Maccabean revival. Our Lord recognises it in the number of the Apostles and in their destination as judges of the twelve tribes of Israel. See Introduction, p. xxxii.

ἐν τῇ διασπορᾷ. Though the expression would include the vast area over which the Jews were scattered, when used without any qualifying words it had the special meaning of the Eastern dispersion in Syria, Mesopotamia, Media and Elam, and other districts in the region of the Tigris and Euphrates. See Edersheim, Life and Times of Jesus the Messiah, Vol. i. p. 6 ff., and Introduction, pp. xxix., xxx.

διασπορά, lit. a scattering of seed, is not classical but is frequent in LXX, in the sense of (a) scattering or dispersion, Deut. xxviii. 25; Jer. xxxiv. 17: (b) collectively, the Israelites dispersed in different parts of the world, ‘the Dispersion.’ τὰς διασποράς τοῦ Ἰσραήλ ἐπισυνάξει, Ps. cxlvi. 2. τὴν διασπορὰν τοῦ Ἰσραήλ ἐπιστρέψαι, Is. xlix. 6. μὴ εἰς τὴν διασπορὰν τῶν Ἑλλήνων μέλλει πορεύεσθαι; John vii. 55. See also 1 Pet. i. 1.

There is no single fixed term in Hebrew for ‘the dispersion.’ Therefore in using the recognised expression ἡ διασπορά for a variety of Hebrew words the LXX. translators defined and specialised the meaning of the prophetic passage.
NOTES.

I. 2.]

Infinitive for imperative, where possibly λέγει or some similar word is to be supplied. Ἐλεῶν ἦμας τῷ κρατήστῳ ἀγερτοῖς Φήλικε χαίρεν, Acts xxiii. 26. Sometimes χαίρεν λέγει is to be supplied, Πάππος τάσιν τοῖς ἄγιοι...τοῖς οὐσίν ἐν Φίλιπποις, Phil. i. 1. Winer, iii. lxiv, p. 735. Comp. also ύπείρ ἄλλοι περί τοῦ ἐρήτου ἐπέσετο, II. ii. 75. Such uses however may be connected with the original use and derivation of the infinitive as a dative of purpose. See Monro, Hom. Gram. § 242.

The same simple salutation is used in the encyclical letter addressed to the Gentile brethren by St James and the Church in Jerusalem, Acts xv. 23. St Paul's salutation is usually χάρις καὶ εἰρήνη, Rom. i. 7; 1 Cor. i. 3 and frequently.

2—18. (a) Temptation from without, 2—4; (1) Wisdom, Prayer, Stedfastness, the Divine Helps in Temptation, 5—8; (2) A Special Form of Temptation—Oppression by the Rich—the Old Testament Problem of the Prosperity of the Wicked, 9—12; (3) Victory over Temptation, 13.

(b) Temptation from Within—Moral and Religious Error, 14—18.

2. πᾶσαν χαίραν, all joy, nothing but joy, all that constitutes joy—numerum gaudium. Comp. ἐν πᾶσῃ ὑπομονῇ, 2 Cor. xii. 12. μετὰ πᾶσης προθυμίας, Acts xvii. 11. πᾶν κέρδος ἦγου ζημιουμένη φρεν, Eur. Med. 454, 'pure gain.' For the use of πᾶσαν compare also χάριν σοι ἡχεῖ πᾶσαν, Arrian Epict. iii. 5, 'I am entirely grateful.' Winer, P. m. § 18. 4. For the thought comp. 1 Pet. iv. 13 καθὼς κοινωνεῖτε τοῖς τοῦ Χριστοῦ παθήμασιν χαίρετε, ἵνα καὶ ἐν τῷ ἀποκαλύψει τῆς δόξης αὐτοῦ χαρῆτε ἀγαλλιώμενοι.

ἀδελφος. The special word for the Christian community, ύμεῖς ἀδελφοι ἐστε, St Matt. xxiii. 8: εἴξθανεν οὐν ὁ λόγος εἰς τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς κ.τ.λ., St John xxi. 23; ἀπαγγέλατε Τακόνῳ καὶ τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς, Acts xii. 17; just as it denoted the brotherhood of the Jewish Church: εἴξθανεν πρὸς τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς αὐτοῦ, Ex. ii. 11. καὶ δέχουσιν τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς ὡμόν ἐκ πάντων τῶν θεῶν, Is. lxvi. 20.

ὅταν περιπέτευσε. The aorist points to the several occasions of temptation in each single instance, as often as,—a single act—ye fall, &c., consider it all joy.

περιπέτευσεν, to fall around or upon, generally, perhaps always, in connection with things evil: τοιοῦτῳ μὲν πάθει...περιπέτευτες, Thuc. ii. 54. ποσιματε περιπέπτωμεν, Xen. Cyg. vi. 2. 27. έαυτῷ περιπέπτεν, 'to fall into one's own snare,' Hdt. i. 108. λησταίς περιπέτευσεν, St Luke x. 30. 'The word brings out the externality of the temptation,' Mayor.

πειρασμός. Not classical, a proof, putting to the test, trial, temptation, not primarily in the sense of enticement or allurement, though this thought is not excluded, enticement to pleasure being a 'trial' as well as pain or persecution. πειρασμός in LXX. is used to translate Hebr. مساذا, Ex. xvii. 7 καὶ ἐπωδήμασεν πειρασμός καὶ λοιδόρησιν. In the N.T. it is used in an important passage speaking of our Lord's pecrasmol: ὡμεῖς δὲ ἔστε οἱ διαμεμενήκτες μετ’ ἐμοῦ ἐν τοῖς pecrasmoiς μου, Luke xxii. 28. Comp. ἀκριβῶν καὶ pecrasmoiν, Acts xx. 19. Satan is called ὁ pecrasmov Matt. iv. 3 and 1 Thess. iii. 5, where the reference is especially to a test of faith, as here.

ποικίλως. So also 1 Pet. i. 6 ἐν ποικίλως pecrasmoiς. Here greater prominence is given to the variety of trials by the position of ποικίλως at the end of the clause and by its separation from its substantive. The pecrasmol of the Christian are varied; spiritual, intellectual, sensual. The whole Epistle may be regarded as a treatise on pecrasmol, and this first clause is in brief the apostle’s answer to the suffering Churches of the dispersion. pecrasmos is necessary to the active exercise of πλησις, and without it υπομονή is impossible. The emphatic position of πάσαιν χαρᾶν shows the importance of the thought.

3. γνώσκοντες. The part. has a causal force giving the reason for πάσαιν χαρᾶν γνώσασθε, 'inasmuch as ye recognise,' &c. The tense implies a constantly recurring recognition.

οτί το δοκίμιον, κ.τ.λ. Πλωτις, here assured belief in Jesus Christ, is the supreme energizing principle of the Christian life. Christian life therefore consists in activity of faith, but this activity or exercise of faith is rendered possible by pecrasmol, or trials which are the test or touchstone (το δοκίμιον) of faith: the complete and perfect result (the compound κατεργάζεται gives the force of completion) of an active faith is υπομονή, patience, or endurance, or capacity of resistance to evil.

For το δοκίμιον see 1 Pet. i. 7, where the same expression occurs.

υπομονή is the principle of firmness in resistance to evil which fences in and gives security to the spiritual life. The word is rare in the classical period, but comp. υπομ. λύπης, Plato Deff. 412 c: τὴν τής μακαρίας ὑπὸ τῶν πληγῶν, Polyb. xv. 15. 8, where we have an important shade of meaning—there is a sense of activity in resistance as well as of capacity of resistance. It is not a mere passive quality, comp. the use of υπομένειν, Xen. Mem. ii. 6 τῶν πραγμάτων δεσμῶν δώναι τοις [χρῆ] υπομένειν: Ign. Polycarp 6 ἡ υπομονή ὑπ ταυτελία. In N.T. the word both in its verbal and substantival forms receives an accession of meaning from its use by our Lord Himself: ὃ υπομείνας εἰς τέλος σωθήσεται, Matt. xxiv. 13; or, as the saying is reported in Luke xxii. 19, ἐν τῇ ὑπὸ ὑμῶν κτήσασθε τὰς ψυχὰς ὑμῶν, and in Luke’s version of the parable of the Sower καρποφοροῦσιν ἐν υπομονῇ, viii. 15. The word does not occur in the other synoptics or St John’s Gospel, but is frequent in the Pauline Epistles; see especially Rom. v. 3 εἰδότες δι’ ἡ θλίψις κ.τ.λ., a passage strictly parallel to this, ἡ θλίψις corresponding with the το δοκίμιον τῆς πλοτεως of St James. And, as in Aristotle’s system, the repeated act produces the habit, from which in turn corresponding action springs.

So completely had υπομονή become identified with Christian character that it gave point to the Emperor Julian’s sneer, when the Christians complained of their treatment by pagan governors: “Bear it patiently,” he said, “as your God commands you,” Socr. H. E. iii. 14.
NOTES.

4. ἴηγὸν τέλειον, a perfect result, that result which is the τέλος of ὑπομονῆς, its final cause; opus consummatum O.L., a. perfectum V. The character that repels and quenches evil results in perfectness and completeness. Each act of resistance strengthens character and develops new force, so completeness of resistance results in completeness of character.

τέλειοι are those who attain the aim or purpose for which they were intended and for which they were created, ὅλοκληροι (here and 1 Thess. v. 23 only in N.T.), those who retain all that was allotted to them from the first; comp. Acts iii. 16 ἡ πίστις ἡ δι' αὐτοῦ ἐςωκεν αὐτῷ τὴν ὅλοκληραν ταῦτην, all this (physical) completeness. ὅλοκληρος is used (Ezek. xv. 5 LXX.) of a vine branch that is unimpaired: οὐδὲ ἐκ αὐτοῦ δότος ὅλοκληρον ὅκ τεστι εἰς ἐργασίαν, and very beautifully of perfect righteousness: τὸ γὰρ ἐπιτασσαθαλ σὲ ὅλοκληρον δικαιοσύνης, Wisdom xv. 3.

The germ of this thought is in our Lord's words, Matt. v. 48 ἐσεθε σὺν υἱῶν τῶν τέλειων ὡς ὁ πατὴρ ὅμων ὁ οὐράνιος τέλειος ἐστιν. Comp. 2 Sam. xxii. 26 (Ps. xviii. 25). It is noticeable and suggestive that in the parallel passage, St Luke vi. 36, οἰκτίρμοις and οἰκτίρμων take the place of τέλειοι; and τέλειοι. See also for τέλειοι Eph. iv. 13 μέχρι καταντήσωμεν...εἰς άνδρα τέλειον. Col. i. 28 άνθρωπων τέλειον ἐν Χριστῷ.

5. The clauses are connected, λειτόμενοι...λειτεται.

σοφίας, a term far wider in signification than the Greek conception of σοφία. A whole cycle of Hebrew literature is devoted to the praise and definition of Wisdom. According to the author of the Wisdom of Solomon σοφία is the most perfect principle of guidance in human action: λαμπρὰ γὰρ καὶ ἀμάραντός ἐστιν ἡ σοφία (vi. 12); it is won by those who seek it: εὐχερὸς θεωρεῖται ὕπο τῶν ἀγατῶν ἀντί, καὶ εὑρίσκεται ὕπο τῶν ζηροτῶν ἀντί—an expression closely bearing on this passage. Step by step σοφία leads to union with God: προσοχῇ δὲ νόμων (giving heed to her laws) βεβαιώσεις ἀφθαρσίας, ἀφθαρσία δὲ ἐγγὺς εἶναι ποιεῖ θεοῦ· ἐπιθυμία ἡ σοφίας ἀνάγει ἐκ βασιλείας, vi. 19, 20; ...τιμήσατε σοφίαν ὅταν τῶν αἰώνα βασιλεύσητε. Again ch. vii. 25 ἀτρὶς γὰρ ἐστιν τῆς τοῦ θεοῦ δινάμεως...ἀπάγαγα ἀγρ ἐστιν φωτὸς ὁμίου, καὶ ἐσπαρτον ἀκήλιδυτον τῆς τοῦ θεοῦ ἐνεργείας. Human wisdom is conceived of as an emanation from the divine wisdom which was with God at the creation of the world, πάσα σοφία παρὰ κυρίον καὶ μετ' αὐτοῦ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα, Ecclus. i. 1.

ἀιτήτω. In the Wisdom of Solomon prayer is indicated as the effectual means of attaining σοφία, διὰ τοῦτο νηξίαμεν καὶ φρονήσεις ἐδόθη μοι, ἐπεκαλεσάμεν καὶ ἠθέν μοι πνεύμα σοφίας, Wisdom vii. 7. Comp. also Ecclus. ii. 13 ἐξήγησα σοφίαν προφάνων ἐν προσευχῇ μοι. In St Matt. xi. 19 (Luke vii. 35), ἔδικαιωθῆ ἡ σοφία ἀπὸ τῶν ἔργων αὐτῆς, the meaning of σοφία seems to be the plan of divine wisdom which rules and governs all things. For the construction comp. γνώμας λειτουργεῖ σοφᾶς, Soph. El. 474.

In the prominence which St James gives to σοφία we trace the surpassing influence of the Wisdom literature in this age. In a question of completeness or perfection of religious equipment it would be natural to treat of σοφία as the highest religious excellence, without which perfection was inconceivable.

So also St Paul places σοφία at the head of spiritual gifts. 1 Cor. xii. 8 ὃ μὲν γὰρ διὰ τοῦ πνεύματος διδασκα λόγος σοφίας, ἀλλὰ δὲ λόγος γνώσεως κ.τ.λ.

attēτω. aitēin, Lat. peto, generally, though not always (see Luke i. 68; John iv. 9), used of requests made by an inferior to a superior. See Matt. vii. 9 τὸς ἐστιν εἰς ὑμῶν ἀνθρωπός διὰ αἰτήσεις ὁ οἰδὲι αὐτοῦ ἄρτον κ.τ.λ.; Acts iii. 2 διὰ ἐπιθυμίας τοῦ αἰτῆσθαι εἰλημέσον; Acts xii. 20 ἐπιτίθεντο εἰρήνην. Hence our Lord never uses aitēσιν of His own requests to the Father, but ἐδέχθη (Luke xxii. 32) and ἐρωτήσα (John xvi. 26). See Trench, N.T. Syn. sub voc. on the important passage Joh. xvi. 23 εἰ δὲ οὐκ ἐρωτήσητε οὐδὲν...διὸ τι αἰτήσητε τὸν πατέρα δώσει ὑμῖν ἐν τῷ ὑμῶν κατοικίᾳ μου.

ἀπλῶς, with simplicity, without secondary motive, simpliciter, O.L., rather than afluenter, V. Comp. ὁ μεταδίδωσιν ἐν ἀπλότητι, Rom. xii. 8; διακέφαλοι τῶν θεῶν ἐκ τῆς ἐνοτατος...καὶ ἀπλότητι τῆς κοινωνίας εἰς αὐτοῦ καὶ εἰς πάντας, 2 Cor. ix. 13. In the classics ἀπλῶς is opposed to what is deceitful, ἀπλὰ τῆς ἀληθείας ἑτη—ἀπλῶς ὁ μῦθος, Aesch. Cho. 554; ἀπλῶς τρόποι opp. to δόλος, Ar. Plut. 1158.

καὶ μὴ ὑναιδίττω, not reproaching, for ingratitude. The two elements to be avoided in giving are: (1) secondary motives on the do ut des principle; (2) complaint on account of favours unreturned, τοις εἰ παραδόντιν οὐκαναί τῆν χάριν, Libernus, D. xxxii. (quoted by Wetstein): Odiosum sane genus hominum beneficia reprobantium, quae meminisse debet in quem collata sunt, non commemorare qui contulit, Cic. Lael. 20.

From these two human defects divine gifts are absolutely exempt. (1) Interested motive is impossible with God; and (2) man's ingratitude is no barrier to divine love: δι' αὐτοῦ χρηστὸς ἐστιν ἐκ τοῦ δώρων καὶ πονηρῶς, Luke vi. 35.

6. ἐν πίστει. pístei here, reliance on a promise, trust in the character of God, the faith which was the necessary condition of a miracle.

διακρινόμενος. In middle voice διακρίνεσθαι to get a thing decided, to decide for oneself, to set two issues before oneself; so to doubt, to be in a critical state of mind. The thought is of judicial hesitation which ceases when the verdict is given; hence, to dispute. See Acts xi. 2 διακρίνοντα πρὸς αὑτὸν. Jude 9 τῷ διακρίνομεν. The tense implies a continuance of hesitation which is not a Christian attitude. Comp. Matt. xxii. 21 ἦν ἐγένετο πίστιν καὶ μὴ διακρίνθη, οὐ μόνον τῷ τῆς σκυθῆς πνεύματε κ.τ.λ., a passage reflected here. πορευόμαι ὁ δὲ αὐτοῦ μυθέν διακρινόμενος, Acts x. 20. See Page on Acts loc. cit. and St Matthew in this series loc. cit.
I. 8.]

NOTES.

The absence of the article with this word is very rare. See Winer, P. iii. § 19, and comp. ἄχοις θάλ. καὶ σάλων, Luke xxi. 25. κυνόνοις ἐν θαλάσσῃ, 2 Cor. xi. 26. κύματα ἄγρια θαλάσσης, Jude 13.

dυμηλοβένω καὶ δριμηλοβένω. qui a vento ferrer et circumfertur, V. Neither of these words is found in LXX. or elsewhere in N.T. dυμηλοβέβαια is ἄπαξ λεγ., but comp. for the thought καλαμών ὑπὸ ἀνέμων σαλευόμενον, Matt. xi. 7. δριμηλοβέβαιος is used in Aristoph. in the sense of fanning a flame: τεμάχη δριμηλοβεβαια, Eccl. 842. ῥητή expresses any rapid movement of wave, wind, fire, stars, μπαι αστέρων, Soph. El. 106: the verb here possibly of the tide. ὑπαλικας ἄνεμον τε, Pind. P. iv. 346. Comp. the proper name Ἑδρωτος, where the tide ebbed and flowed with unusual violence; hence the word is applied as here to an unstable man: τῶν τοιούτων γὰρ μὲν τὰ βουλήματα καὶ οὐ μεταβητὶ ὀσπερ Ἑδρωτος, Eth. Nīc. ix. 6. 3. See also Eph. iv. 14, where κλυδωνιζόμενοι (ἄπ. λεγ.) καὶ περιφερέμενοι παντὶ ἄνεμῳ expresses the same idea and is possibly modelled on these words or similar words in St James' teaching.

7. γὰρ. See Winer, LIII. 3. The ἐμα in γὰρ draws the inference, the γε corroborates it. 'Let not then that man,' &c.

8. δίψυχος. Not classical, and here only in N.T.; it does not occur in LXX.; possibly a word coined by St James himself. (In Ps. cxix. 113 the Hebr. for 'them that are of a double mind' is vaguely rendered παρανήμους in the LXX.) ψυχή is regarded as the seat of desires, volition; hence δίψυχος, one who is torn by conflicting desires. The word, elsewhere rare, is very frequent in Hermas' Pastor, so much so that the treatise reads like an amplification of St James' teaching. As one instance out of many bearing the impress of this passage, comp. ἄροι ἀπὸ σου τὴν διψυχαν καὶ μηθὲν διὼς διψυχής αἰτήσασθαι παρὰ τοῦ θεοῦ, Herm. Past. M. 9. It is difficult to decide whether ἄνιψρ δίψυχος is to be taken as a subject with ἀκατάστατος as a predicate, or whether both are in apposition to ὁ ἄνθρωπος ἐκεῖνος. On the whole the latter view seems preferable.

ἀκατάστατος. Here only in N.T. The noun ἀκατάστασις and the adjective are classical in the sense of political instability and confusion; in Polybius ἀκατάστατος is used of youthful fickleness: διά τε καὶ φύσει μὲν καὶ ἀκατάστασιν ὑπάρχειν [τὸ μερίκιον] ἐστὶ δὲ μᾶλλον ὑπ' ἑκείνων τότε μετεωρισθέν, viii. 4. 6. In this sense also Luke xxi. 9. See also 1 Cor. xiv. 33.

The separation between ὁ ἄνθρωπος ἐκεῖνος and ἄνιψρ δίψυχος gives emphasis to the words in apposition: comp. τὸ πάσαxa ἡμῶν ἐτύθη Χριστός, 1 Cor. v. 7; Rom. viii. 28; 2 Cor. vii. 6.

ἔν πάσας ταῖς ὁδοῖς αὐτῶν. Comp. ἱντρ. v. 11 ἐν ταῖς πορελαῖς αὐτῶν. The figure is so frequent in the O.T. as hardly to need illustration: διδάξει πραξις ὁδοῦ αὐτῶν, Ps. xxv. 9. νομοθέτωσον με, κύριε, ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ σου, Ps. xxvii. 11. ὁ ὀφθαλμόν μου ἐπὶ τάσας τὰς ὁδοὺς αὐτῶν, Jer. xvi. 17. Hence Christianity or the Church is preeminently ἡ ὁδὸς,

ST JAMES.

Acts xix. 9 κακολογοῦτες τὴν ὄδον, and 23 τάραξος ὅπερ ὀλγος περὶ τῆς ὄδος.

9. κακασθανώ Στ ὁ ἀδελφὸς ὁ ταπεινὸς κ.τ.λ. The transition to the contrast between rich and poor is quite natural here. For the problem of the prosperity of the wicked and the suffering of the righteous is one with which the Wisdom literature occupied itself more anxiously than with any other. It is, for instance, the theme of the Book of Job.

The rejoicing in ταπείνωσις is parallel in spirit to the rejoicing ἐν πειρασμοῖς. The ταπείνωσις of the rich (his becoming poor) will save him from the fate of the rich. Comp. 1 Sam. ii. 10, LXX. (a passage not found in the Hebrew), μὴ κακασθάνω ὁ φρόνιμος ἐν τῷ φρονήσει αὐτοῦ, καὶ μὴ κακασθάνω ὁ δυνατὸς ἐν τῷ δύναμει αὐτοῦ, καὶ μὴ κακασθάνω ὁ πλοῦτος ἐν τῷ πλοῦτῳ αὐτοῦ.

10. ὅς ἄνθως χόρτος. Comp. τάσα σάρξ χόρτον, καὶ πάσα δόξα ἄνθρωπον ὡς ἄνθως χόρτον. ἔξηράθη ὁ χόρτος καὶ τὸ ἄνθος ἐξέπεσεν, Is. xi. 7, 8. ὡσπερ ἄνθως ἄνθρακαν ἐξέπεσεν, Job xiv. 2. ἄνθρωπος ὡςι χόρτος ἵνα μέραι αὐτοῦ, ὡσι ἄνθως τοῦ ἀγροῦ ὅπως ἔξαθησε, Ps. ciii. 14. See also Ps. xxxvii. 2. The whole Psalm is parallel in thought to this passage.

χόρτος. See note on St Matt. vi. 30 in this series. The first meaning of the word is (1) an enclosed place, especially for feeding cattle: αὐλή ἐν χόρτῳ, Hom. Il. xi. 774. Hence (2) provender, hay, δηρῶν ὄρεων χόρτον οὖν ἱππων λέγει, Eur. Alc. 495. Then (3) vegetation generally, flowers and grass, and even brushwood, which when dried are used for fuel in the East. Matt. vii. 31. In this sense χόρτος is not classical. The derivation is from a root meaning 'to seize,' hence 'to enclose'; it is cognate with χόρος, 'an enclosed place for dancing'; hortus, 'garden,' 'yard,' &c. Curtius, Gk Etym. § 200. Skeat, Etym. Dict., under 'Yard.'

11. ἀνέταλεν...ἐξῆραν...ἐξῆται...ἀπελέτο. The use of the aorist here is to express the instantaneous effect produced by the καβάων. In English the present tense would be used to express this point of time; but the greater exactness of Greek thought and language places the events in the past. They are past in the very moment of describing them. See Winer P. p. 311, § xl. 1, p. 346, and notes on St Matt. in this series, and compare 1 Pet. i. 24 ἔξηράθη ὁ χόρτος καὶ τὸ ἄνθος ἐξέπεσεν. By some grammarians these are cited as instances of the gnomic aorist. See Mayor ad loc. and Burton, N. T. Moods and Tenses, p. 21. Winer however does not recognise this use of the aorist in N.T.

σὸν τῷ καβάων. The καβάων is the hot wind or sirocco blowing at sunrise from the Eastern desert. ἐπάθει καβάων ἀνέμον (urentem ventum, V.; Hebr. יְרֵץ דֶּבֶר, east wind) ἐκ τῆς ἔρημου, Hos. xiii. 15. ἀναλυμένης γὰρ αὐτῶν καβάων. Job xxvii. 21. καὶ ἐγένετο ᾠμα τῷ ἀνατέλαι τῶν ἠλιῶν καὶ προστάταξεν ὁ θεὸς πνεύματι καβάων συγκαλοτι, Jon. iv. 8. It was this wind that made the early morning hours so burdensome to the labourers, τοὺς βασπάσαι τὸ βάρος τῆς ἡμέρας καὶ τὸν καβάων, Matt. xx. 12, where see notes.
NOTES.

A beautifully exact word to describe the dropping of the petals or corona out of the calyx, as an effect of drought, which would be more strikingly sudden under the hot eastern sun than in a temperate climate like ours.

εὐπρέπεια, here only in N.T. Comp. ἐκ Σιών ἢ εὐπρέπεια τῆς ὕπατης αὐτοῦ, Ps. 1. 2. For the general sense of this passage comp. τὰς τὸ ὕφον ἑαυτὸν ταπεινωθήσαται, δὲ ταπεινῶν ἑαυτὸν ὑπερθάνεια, Luke xiv. 11. One of the notes of the Kingdom was the exaltation of the poor: 1 Sam. ii. 8; Pss. ix. 12, 18, lxii. 2, 4, 12, 13, cvii. 41, cxiii. 7, 8. In Is. xxv. 3 the LXX. version, εὑλογήσει σὲ δ λαὸς δ πτωχὸς, where the Hebr. is ‘the strong people shall glorify thee,’ is suggestive. See also Luke i. 52, vi. 20. The Gospel is especially a message to the poor, Matt. xi. 5. The rich are regarded as synonymous with the wicked, the poor with the righteous. See Is. liii. 9; Ecclus. xiii. 3; Luke xvi. 19—31. Comp. Pss. x. and xi.

This aspect of the rich and poor respectively is a vein of thought which runs through all the prophetic writings. It is a social result which has ensued in many epochs, when the wealthier class unrestrained by any unselfish principle gave themselves over to every indulgence of pride and passion. It is a view which finds support in some of the words of Christ: εἰ θέλεις τέλειος εἶναι ὑπαγε πώλημα σου τὰ ὑπάρχοντα καὶ δὲ τῶν πτωχῶν καὶ ἐξεις ἑαυτοῦ ἐν ὑμαθοί, Matt. xix. 21. See also vv. 23, 24. It took effect in the earliest organisation of the Church. Acts ii. 44, iii. 6. It was part of the religious thought of the day, as shewn in Essenism and Ebionism, the latter name being derived from a Hebr. word meaning ‘poor.’ One of the great lessons of Christianity has been to teach the responsibility of wealth and its place in the service of Christ, whether by noble use or self-sacrificing abandonment.

ἐν ταῖς πορείαις αὐτοῦ, in his ways, possibly in a literal sense (1) in his journeys for traffic or business, (2) but more probably in the ordinary figurative sense of way or path in the O. T. Comp. κατάρασις τὰ διαβήματά μου ἐν ταῖς τρίβοις σου ἵνα μὴ σαλευθῇ τὰ διαβήματά μου, Ps. xvii. 5.

12. This verse closes the paragraph which begins with v. 2, referring back to the original thought of temptation and endurance.

τοῦ στέφανου τῆς ἱωῆς, the crown of life. τῆς ἱωῆς, gen. of apposition denoting that in which the crown consists. The life, i.e. eternal life, is the promised crown. στέφανον, not the imperial or royal crown (διάδημα), but the garland of victory and civic worth, or military valour, woven of oak, ivy, parsley, pine or olive; see however Rev. iv. 4, ix. 7, xiv. 14, στέφανος χρυσοῦ. στέφανος is used of the kingly crown, Matt. xxvii. 29 and parallels. But there the word suited the material of which the crown was composed. See Trench, N.T. Syn. sub voc., and Bp Lightfoot on Phil. iv. 1. Comp. κομμεῖεθε τὸν ἀμαράντων τῆς δόξης στέφανον, 1 Pet. v. 4; πᾶς δὲ ἀγωνιζόμενος πάντα ἐγκατατέθη, ἐκεῖνοι μὲν οὖν ἵνα φθαρτὸν στέφανον λάβωσιν, ἣμεῖς δὲ ἀφθαρτοί, 1 Cor. ix. 25; ὁ τῆς δικαιοσύνης στέφανος, 2 Tim. iv. 8, where see the context which is parallel to this passage. Still more closely parallel is Rev. ii. 10 ἰσούν πιστῶς ἄχρι θανάτου καὶ δύσω σοι τῶν στέφανων τῆς ἰώσις. Comp. also Wisdom v. 16.

The thought is finely illustrated by a noble statue of James, the brother of the Lord, on the porch of Amiens Cathedral. Above the head of the apostle, not on his head, but at a distance from it, is represented a crown, to show that the crown is not yet attained; it is the inspiring hope of life to be struggled and fought for through temptation and trial. This last thought is signified by a shield which the apostle holds in his hand, on which is inscribed a banner or flag such as used to be carried in the very forefront of battle. Such is the teaching of St James here. See Ruskin, The Bible of Amiens.

ον ἐπηγγελματίον. The suppressed subject of ἐπηγγελματίον can only be ὁ κύριος or ὁ χριστός. And the question arises: Is this promise a saying of our Lord's not recorded in the Gospels? Or is it another form of Matt. x. 22, ὁ δὲ υπομείνας εἰς τέλος οὗτος σωθήσεται or Luke xxii. 19, ἐν τῷ υπομονῇ ὑμῶν κτίσῃ σε τὰς ψυχάς ὑμῶν? The connexion between ὑπομονή and ὑπη is the same in both expressions, and the form of the expression here may be due to St James' love of poetical imagery. On the other hand it is perhaps most natural to regard it as a direct citation of words of our Lord remembered by St James, which distinctly conveyed a promise. For though the word of promise is only explicitly stated here, it is clearly indicated in the form of each of the above cited passages. See Resch, Agrapha, logion 52, p. 130.

τοῖς ἀγαπῶνις αὐτῶν. Comp. τοῖς ἡγαπηθείς την ἐπιφάνειαν αὐτῶν, 2 Tim. iv. 8.

13. πειράζομενος, while tempted, in the course of temptation. Such a primitive form of error may have arisen from an overdrawn inference from the petition in the Lord's Prayer: μὴ εἰσενεχθῆτε ἡμᾶς εἰς πειρασμοὺς, Matt. vi. 13. St James' words reveal the secret of temptation. However external the inducements to it may appear, its root is within. Comp. Ecclus. xv. 11 ff.

ἀπὸ θεοῦ. ἀπὸ denotes origin simply, not agency. Winer, P. iii. § xlivi. b note 2.

ἀπελάρστος, for classical ἀπελάρστος. κακῶν, genitive of source, 'untempted by evil.' Comp. ἀκλαύτος φίλων, Soph. Ant. 847; κακῶν ἀτρώμων, Aesch. Theb. 875; Winer, P. iii. § xxx. 4. Others render as R.V. mary, 'untried in evil.' But ἀπελάρστος is clearly in connexion with the attendant verbs πειράζομαι, πειράζει, and must have the same signification which they bear. There is no real theological difficulty. Absolute freedom from the power of temptation precludes the possibility of tempting others.

14. A parable of sin and death. ὑπὸ implies direct personal agency. Man is regarded as tempted by his own lust or desire, here personified. The offspring of this union is sin; sin when mature becomes the mother of death. Comp. for the thought generally: τὰ γὰρ ὑψών τῆς ἀμαρτίας θάνατο, τὸ δὲ χάριμα τοῦ θεοῦ ζωής αἰώνιας ἐν Χριστῷ Πάση τὸ κυρίῳ ἡμῶν, Rom. vi. 23; τὸ γὰρ φρόνημα τῆς σαρκὸς θάνατος, Rom. viii. 6.
NOTES.

17. (1) Either with Bede, cited by Mayor: abstractus a recto itinere et illectus in malum; two processes in temptation are indicated: persuasion through some strong motive to leave the right path, allurement to sin: comp. έγκρατειαν ος τω μαλιστον, ἀν φευ και κελθας, ει αυτος ἐπιδεικνυομη εαυτων μη ὑπν των παρανακτικων ηδονων έλκους απο των άγαθων, Xen. Cyr. viii. 1. 32; or (2) the figure is drawn from the capture of fishes. The words are here in the order of thought; in act δελεαζοντες would precede. Comp. Moriamur et in media arma ruamus, Verg. Aen. ii. 353; Castigatque auditque dolos, ib., vi. 567; έξελξαι here only in N. T. δελεαζοντες ψυχας, 2 Pet. ii. 14; δελεαζομαι en έπιδυμασι, 2 Pet. ii. 16; γαστρο δελεαζομαι, Xen. Mem. ii. 1. 4; ἢδονη κακον δελεαρ, Plat. Tim. 69 ν.

άποκειται, brings forth, R. V.

17. πάσα δόσις, κ.τ.λ. Note the hexameter rhythm here, πάσα... τέλεω; for similar instances see Heb. xii. 13; John iv. 35.

δόσις, strictly an act of giving. Comp. Phil. iv. 15 οιδεμα μικρης έκκλησιας έκκωινομην εις λόγου δόσισι και ληήσεως, where, as Bp Lightfoot notes, δόσισι και ληήσεως are used in the technical sense of 'credit and debit.' In the classics δόσις appears to signify the thing given, a gift, according to the lexicons, but in many of the examples quoted the active sense is still apparent, e.g. Hom. Od. vi. 208, δόσις δ' ολιγης τε, φληγη τε, δόσις may well signify a giving rather than a gift, and this original and proper signification gives a real distinction between δόσις and δώρημα, which is lost if δόσις is rendered 'a gift' and becomes synonymous with δώρημα. δόσις is the act or mode of giving, which may be right or wrong, and δώρημα is the gift itself.

The position of άγαθη and τέλεω gives the force of an adverbial clause; if it be good or perfect it is a divine gift.

άνωθεν άθιν. This is rightly regarded as the predicate rather than άνωθεν έστιν καταβαλλον. See however Winer, iii. xlv. 5, where the second view is supported. άνωθεν from above, from heaven. See ch. iii. 15, 17 and John iii. 31, xix. 11, and comp. Col. iii. 1 τα άνω ζητειτε. Philo de Profug. Τ. i. p. 571. 2 speaks of σοφιαν άνωθεν ομβρηθειαν ατ' ουρανοι.

του πατρος των φωτων, the Father of lights. Primarily perhaps the Creator of the heavenly bodies, but also in a wider sense Father and Creator of light in all its manifestations; Giver of all gifts, spiritual, intellectual and moral, beauty of nature and excellence of art. For this use of the plural denoting the parts of which a whole is made up, comp. προφυλάττεσθαι ψυχη ή διάλυτη, attacks of cold and heat, Xen. Mem. i. 4. 13. So in Latin: artes, Art in its various forms, works of art; regna the various elements in the regnum &c.

Although the expression του πατρος των φωτων cannot be precisely paralleled, the association of light with the idea of God may be abundantly illustrated: the first creative word of God is "Let there be light," Gen. i. 3; comp. Is. xliv. 6, 7 "I am Jehovah, there is none else, that form light and create darkness": ἐγὼ ὁ κατασκευάσας φῶς καὶ πονήσας σκότος. So in the manifestation of Jehovah the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun, and the light of the sun shall be sevenfold as the light of seven days, Is. xxx. 26. Comp. also ἐν ἑωί φώτι σου φύμεθα φῶς, Ps. xxxv. 9; σύ κατηρήσως ἥλιον καὶ σελήνην, Ps. lxxxiii. 16; καὶ ἀνατελεῖ ὤμιν ἡλιος δικαιοσύνης, Mal. iv. 2. In 1 John i. ὁ Ἰησοῦς is absolutely φῶς, and in Heb. i. 3 Christ is regarded as the effulgence (ἀπαύγασμα) from the Father. So in Wisdom vii. 26 σοφία is described as being ἀπαύγασμα φωτὸς αἰῶνος.

παρ' ὁ οἶκ ἐν π., with whom there is no possibility of change. Lit. 'there is no room for.' See Lightfoot on Gal. iii. 28, who agrees with Winer (P. ii. § xiv. p. 96) that ἐν is not a contraction for ἐνεστι, but a form of ἐν or ἐνι with the accent thrown back as ἐν, πάρα, &c. See also Col. iii. 11.

παραλλαγή, transmission from one condition to another, change, as π. κάλλους πρὸς αἰχμός, Arr. Epict. ii. 23. 32. So here perhaps simply change from light to darkness, in which case the predominant thought both in this and the following expression would be absolute brightness, the negation of darkness—rather than absolute immutability, the negation of change. The context of the passage however suggests that παραλλαγή may be here used in a scientific sense, or at any rate in a way suggestive of the scientific term parallax. It is true that no instance is cited of such a use of παραλλαγή before the date of this Epistle, but neither is there an instance cited of παράλλαξις used in this sense earlier than Proclus, who, c. A.D. 440, wrote a paraphrase on a work of the astronomer Ptolemy (fl. A.D. 139), and the Modern Greek term for parallax appears to be παραλλαγή, not παράλλαξις. See Sophocles, Modern Greek Lexicon sub voc. This may represent a very ancient usage.

Parallax "may be defined in the most general way as the difference between the directions of a body as seen from two different points," or, "apparent change in position produced by movement of the earth," Newcomb's Popular Astronomy, pp. 165 and 206. "The parallax of the sun was calculated, though erroneously, by Aristarchus c. 250 B.C. and Hipparchus 162—127 B.C., a calculation adopted by Ptolemy and adhered to for twelve centuries." Young's Text-Book of General Astronomy, § 666. The thought therefore would be familiar in St James' time. Moreover he was writing to men living in regions where astronomy had flourished from a remote antiquity. That astronomical phrases were known to the Greek-speaking Jew in the post-exile period appears from various passages in the LXX. αὐτός γὰρ μοι ἠθοποιών τῶν ἐνεπίτευκτων δόξων ἁμήν ἀγαθῆς, ἐδέξατο εἰς αὐτούς συνεσθησαι κόσμου καὶ ἐνέργειαν στοιχείων, ἀρχὴν καὶ τέλος καὶ μεσόπτα ταχύνων, τροπῶν ἀλλαγάς καὶ μεταβολῶν καὶ τίτλων, ἐναντίων κύκλων καὶ ἀστέρων θεών, Wisdom of Solomon, vii. 17; καὶ θ' ὁραν γεγυμνάσας ἥλιον τροπῶν καὶ ἀντ' συνόδων μνήμων, Deut. xxxii. 14; ἐπιστασαι ἤ τε τρανήν ὠφανεία, ἢ τὰ ὑπ' οὐφραντον ὄμοιο μακαρίων γνώμενα; Job xxxviii. 33.

In the Book of Enoch, ch. lxxi., there is an elaborate treatise on the laws and movements of the heavenly bodies, and the expression 'Father of the lights' finds a parallel in such phrases as: 'The seasons, the years, and the days, Uriel shewed me; the angel whom the Lord of glory appointed over all the luminaries of heaven in heaven, and in the world,' &c. ch. lxiv.

If this view of the meaning of παραλλαγή be accepted, the expression would indicate the immutability of the Eternal Father, and the thought would be intensified by the results of modern science, according to which the apparent displacement of the great majority of the fixed stars, due to parallax, is so minute as to elude our investigation. The παραλλαγή of the stars indeed is incalculable; with the Father of the lights παραλλαγή is inconceivable.

It is difficult to decide with certainty between these two possible senses of παραλλαγή. It is in favour of the first that the same thought of light and darkness would be retained in both expressions —παραλλαγή and τροπή ἀποσκλαμ. The second introduces the further thought of unchangeableness.

τροπή, turning or revolution, or perhaps the setting of a heavenly body. The genitive τροπής denotes occasion or cause.

ἀποσκλαμ. is the shadow projected from one body on to another, or in any way caused by the movements of a body.

Hence τροπής ἀποσκλαμ. is either (1) the shadow of night caused by the rotation of the earth, or, in popular phrase, by the setting of the sun (comp. οὖθ᾽ ὁποῦ ἐκεῖ ὧν στείχεσθαι πρὸς οὐρανόν ἀποσκείεται | ὀὖθ᾽ ἐκεῖ ὧν ἐπὶ γαίαν ἀπ᾽ οὐρανόθεν προτράπηται | ἄλλ᾽ ἐπὶ νῦς ὅπος τέταται διελθοὶ βραχών, Od. x. 17—19; τροπὰι ἡλίου, ib. xv. 404, which Eustathius interprets of the west, τέλεια μέρη, the region of sunset): or (2) the shadow of eclipse caused by the revolution of a planet or its moons: a far more frequent occurrence in some parts of the celestial system than in the experience of our own planet: e.g. four of Jupiter's satellites are eclipsed at every revolution, i.e. at intervals varying from 12 hours to 7 days for the different satellites. The created luminaries suffer eclipse by projected shadow or darkness by turning from the source of light: with the Father of lights there is absolutely undimmed and continuous splendour: "the shadows vanish in the light of light." Tennyson.

Schleusner, following some of the Greek interpreters, takes ἀποσκλαμ. as equivalent to οὐρα, and renders it ne levissimum quidem mutationis vestigium, 'not a trace or vestige of change.' There is however no authority for this use of the word ἀποσκλαμ., and by this rendering the important conception of darkness or overshadowing, as a defect in the mundane luminaries, is lost. So also O. L. renders modicum obumbrationis, vicissitudinis obumbratio.

18. Βουλήθεις, of His own wish, denoting absolute freedom from necessity or external cause of any kind. Βουλήθαι and Βουλήθεις are strictly used of the end, not of the means to the end: εἰ δὴ τὸ τέλος ἐστὶ τῶν πρακτῶν δὴ δὴ αὐτὸ βουλήθεια, Arist. Eth. N. i. 2.1; ἡ μὲν βουλήθεις τοῦ τέλους ἐστὶ μάλλον, ἡ δὲ προαίρεσις τῶν πρὸς τὸ τέλος, Eth. N. iii. 2.9. See Stewart's Eth. N. ad loc. cit.
The recurrence of this rare word (see above, v. 15) throws into forcible contrast the generation of sin, and the new birth from the Father of lights. This is the more striking as ἀνωθεν is a word strictly used of the mother, not as here of the Father, ‘begat.’ The word generally used in this sense is γεννάω. Comp. the use of τίττευσιν, II. ii. 742; Aesch. Eum. 630.

The aorist points to the single act of regeneration, as in 1 Cor. vi. 11 ἀλλὰ ἀπελυσασθε, ἀλλὰ ἐγεννήθη, ἀλλὰ εἰδικώθητε ἐν τῷ ὑνήματι τοῦ κυρίου, κ.τ.λ.

λόγῳ ἀληθείας, by the word of truth, the instrument by which the work is effected.

λόγος ἀληθείας is the word or message which conveys the truth, the revelation of the truth. Comp. ὁ λόγος τῆς σωτηρίας ταύτης, Acts xiii. 26; ὁ λόγος τῆς ἀληθείας τοῦ εἰσαγγελου, Col. i. 5; ὁ λόγος τῆς ἀληθείας, 2 Tim. ii. 15; ὁ ἰν α' ἀρχής ὁ ἀληθειαμ...περι τοῦ λόγου τῆς ἱερας, k.τ.λ., 1 John i. 1. Comp. also the frequent ἀμήν λέγω of our Lord (note the variant ἀληθῶς λέγω, Luke xii. 44); in St John always the repeated ἀμήν ἀμήν λέγω. See especially, as bearing on this passage, St John iii. 3, 5 ἀμήν ἀμήν λέγω σοι, ἐάν μη τις γεννήθη εξ ὀδασι καὶ πνεύματος ὁ ὄνται εἰσελθείν εἰς τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ θεοῦ.

In the passages quoted above ὁ λόγος τῆς ἀληθ. or τῆς σωτηρίας is the Gospel, that divine revelation by which God regenerated the world in Christ,—a sense which it bears here; but there is a nearer approach to the personal λόγος of John i. 1 here than in the other passages. The message of truth in Christ is proved to be the regeneration (ἡ παλιγγενεία) first of Israel, then of the world. The repeated ἦμας points to the privilege of Israel.

cis τὸ εἰναι. A final clause denoting the end or object of the spiritual creation.

ἀπαρχὴν τινα, a kind of firstfruits. τινα qualifies the boldness of the expression, Winer iii. 2 a. In the Hebrew ritual ἀπαρχή meant the firstfruits of men and cattle and harvest, consecrated and offered to God: οὕσετε το δράγμα ἀπαρχὴν τοῦ θερμανου ὑμῶν πρὸς τὸν ἱεραν, Lev. xxiii. 10. See also Deut. xxvi. 2; Ex. xxiii. 19: ἀπαρχὴ therefore besides the primary meaning of ‘firstfruits’ as the promise of harvest and dedication of the coming harvest carried into the New Covenant the thought of consecration to God. Comp. οὐδεὶς τὴν οἰκίαν Στεφανᾶ, δι' ἐστιν ἀπαρχὴ τῆς Ἀχαλας, 1 Cor. xvi. 15; οὐδοὶ ἐγεννήσανται ἀπὸ τῶν ἀνθρώπων ἀπαρχὴ τῷ θεῷ καὶ τῷ α', νω, Rev. xiv. 4.

tῶν αὐτοῦ κτισμάτων, His creatures. The gift of the Incarnation is literally and truly a new life, and the result is a new creature: οὕσετε εἰς τὸν Χριστόν καὶ τὴν κτίσιν, 2 Cor. v. 17. See Gal. vi. 15. Thus Christ is πνεῦμα ἱωνοανίων, 1 Cor. xv. 45, because it is by the spiritual communication of His own life that the new creature is effected. With this conception of the new birth as a gift of the Father of lights comp. the use of φωτίζειν, φωτίσωμαι, φωσιμός, as baptismal expressions: εἰ φωτισόμενοι ἑτὰ ἡμέρας λαμπροφοροῦμεν, Suicer, sub voc. φωτίζειν.
NOTES.

19—27. THE CHRISTIAN LIFE, CHARACTER AND WORSHIP.

This theme incidentally arises from the thought of temptation, as moral or religious error, and is immediately connected with the expression ἀποκρυφὰς τοὺς αὐτοῦ κτισμάτων, v. 18.

It is a description of the life in union with Christ on the practical side. In view of prevailing pagan immorality and even of the ethics of philosophic paganism, the importance of moral teaching in the early Christian Church can hardly be over-estimated. The contrast between the Christian ideal and the pagan Society from which it was separated accounts for the repeated warnings even against gross forms of sin.

19. ἐστιν. For the reading see above. The classical form ἐστε for the Hellenistic ὠδαρε is found here only in N.T. 'Ye know it' refers to what precedes, emphasizing that, and leading on to its consequence—a new life.

ταχύς ἐς τὸ ἀκοῦσαι. ἐς signifies aim or tendency; ταχύς is constructed also with the infinitive alone: ὥσ θελοντα μὲν μ᾽ ἔχεις, Eur. Hec. 861—3: ταχύς ἐν τῇ ἀκούσει σου, Ecclus. v. 11. One of the sayings attributed by Mahommedan writers to Christ is, 'Asked by some how to win Paradise, He said, "Speak not at all." They said, "We cannot do this." He said then, "Only say what is good."' (Margoliouth, Expository Times, Dec. 1893). Comp. γλῶσσα ἀνθρώπων πτώεις αὕτη, Ecclus. v. 18.

20. ὀργή γὰρ ἀνδρῶς κ.τ.λ. There is a suggestion of irony in this expression. ὀργή, primarily 'passionate impulse,' is as far as possible removed from justice in any case. How much greater the contrast between human ὀργὴ and divine δικαιοσύνη! On the other hand ὀργή θεοῦ is used of divine justice in its manifestation towards sinners, Rom. i. 18.

πᾶσαν ῥυπαρίαν. πᾶσαν, in its whole extent. ῥυπαρίαν, ἅπ. λεγ. in N.T., uncleanness, comp. σαρξ ἀπόθεσις ρύπου, 1 Pet. iii. 21; ὁ ῥυπαρός ῥυπαμοθῇ ἐτί, Rev. xxii. 11.

περισσεύειν κακίας, excess of wickedness. περισσεύειν not classical:

ἐν πράσινῳ, with meekness. πράσινος is a note of the Kingdom. Pss. xxv. 9, xxxiv. 2, xxxvii. 11, lxxvi. 9, cxlvii. 6, cxlix. 4.

Christ calls Himself πράσις Matt. xi. 29, and places the πράσινος in the forefront of those who are 'blessed,' Matt. v. 4 (or 5). πράσινος as an ethical term is concerned with anger, it means absence from resentment, meekness in suffering; it is mentioned with very faint praise by Aristotle, who says, ἐπὶ τὸν μέσον τὴν πράσινητα φέρομεν πρὸς τὴν ἐλλειψιν ἀποκλίνουσαν, and again εἰπερ δὴ ἡ πράσινη ἐπιμενεῖται. It is therefore one of those distinctively Christian terms which, like ὑπομονή, μακροθυμία, ταπεινοφροσύνη, point the divergence from pagan ethics. Closely associated with προφήτης in N.T. are, ἐπισκέπται, 2 Cor. x. 1; ἐγκράτεια, Gal. v. 23; ταπεινοφροσύνη and μακροθυμία, Eph. iv. 2; Col. iii. 12; ὑπομονή, 2 Thess. iii. 5. Comp. also 1 Cor. iv. 21; Gal. vi. 1; Titus iii. 2. With the exception of this passage and 1 Pet. iii. 15 προφήτης (προφήτητης) is a Pauline word.

τὸν ἐμφυτὸν λόγον, the implanted word. The word that becomes a part of the φύσις or character, that is worked into the nature just as the elements which go to form the plant are absorbed in it, and tend to its growth. ἐμφυτὸν is formally proleptic here; it is implanted after its reception. But in fact it expresses a constant quality of the λόγος and forms with it a single compound noun.

τὸν δυνάμενον σώσαι κ.τ.λ. Comp. ἐνθρα. iv. 12 ὁ δυνάμενος σώσαι. The power there attributed to God is here attributed to the implanted Word, and in fact the implanted Word is scarcely distinguishable from the indwelling Christ.

22. τοιητάλ λόγον. τοιητής is a characteristic word of St James, occurring four times in this Epistle, elsewhere in N.T. once in Romans ii. 13 τοιηταλ νόμου, and in Acts xvii. 28, where it bears the classical sense of 'poet,' τῶν τῶν καθ' ώμᾶς τοιητῶν. In Tit. i. 12 St Paul uses the word προφήτης of a poet: εἰπὲν τις ἐκ αὐτῶν ὠνόμασε αὐτόν προφήτης.

παραλογιζόμενοι ίαυτοὺς, deceiving yourselves, 'making a false or erroneous estimate': for this sense of παρά comp. παράστημος of a coin imperfectly stamped: δύναμις παράστημος αὐνοι, Aesch. Agam. 730, power falsely stamped with praise; παραπεπείθει, to persuade with fraud; παρακοδει, to misunderstand; παράγει, to lead astray; σφωνία δὲ κλέπτει παράγοντα μήδεσ, Pind. Nem. vii. 34.

23. ἀκροατής λόγου, 'he who only hears the word,' is compared to a man who by looking into a mirror observes (κατανοεῖ) the face of his γένεσις—his true individuality—the real meaning of himself (κατενόησεν γὰρ ἑαυτὸν), but who instantly departing forgets what manner of man he was. That is, if a man listens for a time only to divine teaching and is made to understand himself, to see himself in God's word, and then abandons it, the impression made by reading or instruction is momentary. He is like the seed that fell in stony places or among thorns. On the other hand the τοιητής λόγον, he who does the word, looks into the perfect law, the law of liberty, i.e. the word of God, and there sees reflected as in a mirror his own personality as it was created in the likeness of God (comp. ch. iii. 9); he abides in it, continues that earnest gaze, never losing sight of his ideal, of that which he was intended to be according to the purpose of his γένεσις or creation. "Is it not remarkable that St James dwells not on what the man learns about God in the Scripture, but on what he sees of God's law of liberty. It is an idiom which secures attention to the anarthrous noun. See Winer iii. § xx. 4 and Green p. 34, and note the following examples: εἰρήνη ἄφιμη ὑμῖν, εἰρήνη τὴν ἐμήν δίδωμι ὑμῖν, John xiv. 27; εἶ γὰρ ἐδόθη νόμος ὁ δυνάμενος ἰσοποθεῖναι, Gal. iii. 21, where see Ellicott; ἐν πλεῖστῃ ὑπὸ τοῦ ὕπο τοῦ θεοῦ, Gal. ii. 20.

Τὸν τῆς εἴλευθρας. The freedom of the law of Christ is contrasted with the bondage to minute precepts which characterized the developed Mosaic system: τῇ εἴλευθρᾳ ἡμᾶς Χριστὸς ἠλευθέρωσεν' στήκετε ὦν καὶ μὴ πάλιν ἡγεῖτε δουλεῖαν ἐξείσαθε, Gal. v. 1; γνώσετε τὴν ἀλήθειαν καὶ ἡ ἀλήθεια ἠλευθέρωσεν ὑμᾶς, John viii. 32; comp. with this λόγῳ ἀληθείας supra n. 18; εὰν οὖν ὁ ὑπὸ ἡμᾶς ἠλευθέρωσεν ἄνως ἠλευθέρωσεν ἐσεῖς, John viii. 36. See also Rom. viii. 15. Christians are children of God, liberi not servi. Comp. cui servire regnare est, 'whose service is perfect freedom.' Collect for Peace, from Sacramentary of Gelasius.

The law of Christ then is called a perfect law because it is final and complete, as distinct from the Mosaic law which was transitory and imperfect; it is called a law of liberty because it is the expression of a Father's love for his children, not of a Master's law for slaves.

καὶ παραμείνας. The secret of Christian service is constancy, fixedness on the ideal self discovered in the perfect law: ὑς ἰδίατον τὸν νόμον σου, κύριε, δὴν τὴν ἡμέραν μελέτη μον ἐστίν, Ps. cxix. 97.

Ἄκροατῆς ἐπιλησμὼν, a forgetful hearer. A Hebrew construction frequent in N. T., as πάθῃ ἄμιλας, Rom. i. 26; κριτῇ τῆς διδασκαλίας, Luke xviii. 6; οἱ οἰκονόμοι τῆς ἀδικίας, Luke xvi. 8. The idiom is partly due to the vividness of Oriental speech, partly to the comparative paucity of adjectives in Hebrew. There are however parallels in the classics: μέλαινα δ' ἀστρων...εὕρην, 'starry night,' Soph. El. 19; Νευκῆς χιόνιος πτέρυγι, Ant. 114, 'a snowy wing'; Winer, P. iii. § 34 b; Green, p. 90; Donaldson, Greek Gram. 454. ἐπιλησμὼν not classical, and here only in N. T.

ποιητῶς ἐργοῦ. The condition of abiding in the law of liberty is activity in the exercise of it. Hence the transition to true worship or service.

μακάριος ἐν τῇ ποιήσῃ αὐτοῦ. See John viii. 31—34, the thought of which passage underlies this, εὰν ὑμεῖς μελέτη ἐν τῷ λόγῳ τῷ ἐμῷ ἀληθῶς μαθηταὶ μοῦ ἔστε, καὶ γνώσετε τὴν ἀλήθειαν, καὶ ἡ ἀλήθεια ἠλευθέρωσεν ὑμᾶς...ὁ ποιῶν τὴν ἄμαρτίαν (comp. with ἐν τῇ ποιῇσε αὐτοῦ) δοῦλος ἐστίν. Sin and righteousness are regarded as creations. If the 'maker' keeps his eye fixed on the model—abiding in that steadfast gaze—he will be happy in his making, as every artist or maker of things true and beautiful knows. His making will be true to his γένεσις.

ποιησις. Here only in N. T. Comp. καὶ ἐν πάσῃ σοφίᾳ ποιήσῃ νόμον, Ecclus. xix. 20.

26. καὶ τις δικαι, is thought to be, has the reputation (δόξα) of being.
NOTES.

I. 27. [NOTES.] μὴ χαλιναγαγών. μὴ not oū, because the sentence is hypothetical, ‘if he does not bridle &c.’ It may be noticed however that in Modern Greek μὴ is invariably used with participles, and that there is a tendency to this use in the N.T. It is the grammatical expression of a more subjective method of stating facts. See Winer, P. iii. § lv. 5.

Among instances where the explanation on classical principles is difficult are: μὴ ἔχοντας αὐτοῦ ἀποδοθῆναι ἐκλέψεων αὐτῶν ὁ κύριος αὐτοῦ πραθήκην κ.π.λ., Matt. xviii. 25; ὅταν γὰρ θυγία τὰ μὴ νόμων ἔχοντα φώσε τὰ τοῦ νόμου ποιῶν, Rom. ii. 14; καὶ ἦν ἡμέρας τρεῖς μὴ βλέπων, καὶ οὐκ ἔφαγεν οὐδὲ ἔπειν, Acts ix. 9.

χαλιναγαγών. Only here and iii. 2 in N.T., and elsewhere only in late Greek authors. Comp. ἁγαλλόν κεκτημένοι τὸ στήμα, Plato de Legg. 701 a; ἁγαλλών στομάτων | ἁγόμον τ’ ἀφρούνας | τὸ τέλος διστυχια, Eur. Bacch. 385—387.

27. ἰρηνκελα. ἀπ. λεγ. in N.T. Cultus, religion in its external aspect, the outward observance of religious rites as opposed to εὐθέμεα or piety. "St James is not here affirming, as we sometimes hear, these offices to be the sum total, nor yet the great essentials of true religion, but declares them to be the body, the ἰρηνκελα, of which godliness or the love of God is the informing soul." Trench, N.T. Synonyms. Here St James reflects the most enlightened spirit of ancient prophecy: see especially Is. i. 13—17; Micah vi. 7, 8; and comp. Matt. xxiii. 23.

There is a special interest in this definition of ἰρηνκελα by St James, whose assiduity in the ἰρηνκελα of Judaism earned for him the title of ὁ δίκαιος. For the classical use of the word comp. Herod. ii. 18 ἄχθωμεν τῇ περὶ τὰ ιρὰ ῾ηρηνκηλί (τῶν Ἀγνυτίων), and ii. 37 ἄλλας τε ἰρηνκηλὰς ἐπιτελέουσι μυρίας.

Εἰπωνετσθαι ὁφανοῦς καὶ χήρας. Visitare pupillos et viduas in tribulatione eorum, V.; κρινε το ὁφανὺ καὶ δικαιώσατε χήραν, Is. i. 17. The care of widows was one of the earliest notes of the Church, it went on side by side with the continuous worship in the temple. See Acts vi. 1; 1 Tim. v. 3. It is a mark of the divine loving-kindness, Ps. lxvii. 5, cxlv. 9; and on the other hand the helplessness of the orphan and widow made them at all times victims of oppression: Ps. xci. 6; Is. x. 2; Jer. vii. 6, xxii. 3; Zech. vii. 10; Ezek. xxii. 7; Mal. iii. 5. The Pharisees, who made a boast of ἰρηνκελα, devoured widows' houses, Matt. xxxii. 37.

δοσιλὸν. See 1 Tim. vi. 14 τηρήσαλ σὲ τὴν ἐντολὴν δοσιλὸν: 1 Pet. i. 19 ἀμοῦ ἀμόμου καὶ δοσιλὸν Χριστοῦ; and 2 Pet. iii. 14 δοσιλὸ καὶ ἀμώμιτοι. Comp. Eph. v. 27 ἵνα παρατηρήσῃ αὐτὸς ταῦτα ἑνδοξῶν τὴν ἐκκλησίαν, μὴ ἔχοντας δοσιλὸν ἡ ὑπίδα ἢ τὰ τοιούτα, ἀλλὰ ἵνα ἄγα καὶ ἀμόμου. δοσιλὸ belongs to later Greek: Lob. Phryn. 28 τούτο φιλάττων λέγε δὲ κηλίς.

κόσμου. Originally, order, εἶ κατὰ κόσμον, Hom. ll. x. 472 and frequently in Classical Greek: Herod., Thuc., Plat. and the poets, order in government, conduct, dress. So ornament, 1 Pet. iii. 3 ἐξωθεν ἐμπτοκῆς τριχῶν...κόσμοι: possibly the meaning of the word in ch. iii. 6. Then applied by Pythagoras and his followers to the order of the Universe, as opposed to chaos, hence the world. So Plato, Gorg. p. 508 φαίνεται δὲ σαφῶς καὶ ὁπλανὸν καὶ γῆ καὶ θεὸς καὶ ἄνθρωπος τὴν κοινωνίαν συνέχεια καὶ φιλίαν καὶ κοσμίωσην καὶ συφυ­ sὸν καὶ δικαιότητα καὶ τὸ δῶμα τούτο διὰ ταῦτα κόσμον καλοῦν. Comp. Plin. H. N. ii. 3 Quem κόσμον Graeci nomine ornamenti adpelle­ verunt, eum nos perfecta absolutaque elegantia mundum. Comp. also Tertullian, Lib. Apol. c. xvii. Deus, qui totam molem istam...de nihilo expressit in ornamentum majestatis suae: unde et Graeci nomen mundo κόσμος accommodaverunt. This sense does not appear in the Canonical books of the O.T., but in the Book of Wisdom we find ἐδέναι σύστασιν κόσμου, vii. 17; καὶ κτίσατα τὸν κόσμον ἐξ ἀμόρφου ὕλην, xi. 17. This is also a N.T. use: ἀπὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου, Matt. xxv. 34; Luke xi. 50; Hebr. iv. 3; πρὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου, 1 Pet. i. 20; ὁ κόσμος δι’ αὐτοῦ ἐγένετο, John i. 10. But in the N.T. κόσμος has the further significations of: (a) the world of men and women into which we are born, and in which we live: ὅπεστὶ ὡς τὸ φῶς τοῦ κόσμου, Matt. v. 14; ὁ δὲ ἀγρός ἐστιν ὁ κόσμος, Matt. xiii. 38; ἔρχομεν ὑπὸ τῶν κόσμων, John i. 9. (b) The world as opposed to God, the wicked world: ἡ βασιλεία ἡ ἐγὼ ὁ ὅσιος ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου, John xviii. 36; ἐν τοῦ κόσμου ἄρχων, John xiv. 30; ὑπὸ τὸ πνεῦμα τοῦ κόσμου ἐλάβομεν, 1 Cor. ii. 12;

οἱ χρήσμοι κόσμω τούτῳ, 1 Cor. vii. 31; with this comp. πρὸς τοὺς κοσμοκράτορας τοῦ σκάτους τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου, Eph. vi. 12.

CHAPTER II.

2. τὴν omitted before συναγωγὴν with Ν*BC: AKLP and almost all the later authorities insert the article.

3. οὐ στήθι ἐκεῖν καθὼς. B places ἐκείν after καθὼς, so also ff, an O. L. codex. The T. R. has ἀκείν after καθὼς with Ν*ΚΛΠ and many versions: the omission of ὅστις is supported by ΑΒ* ff and V.

4. οὐ διεκρίθητε with ΝΑΒ* and most cursives. B* omits οὐ, so also ff. ΚΛΠ and others have καὶ οὐ.

5. τοῦ κόσμου with ΝΑ*Β*C*. The T. R. τοῦ κόσμου τοῦτου has very slight support; τοῦ κόσμου appears in ΑΒ*ΚΛΠ and other authorities. It is an instance of the more difficult giving place to the easier reading.

13. The reading varies between ἀνέλεως ΝΑΒΚΚ, ἀνέλεως L and many other MSS. and Fathers, and ἀνέλεως and ἀνέλεως in a few codices.

19. ἀτρικτά εἶς ἐστίν ὁ θεός: the reading of ΝΑ, the Vulgate, Peshitto and other versions: εἶς ὁ θεός ἐστιν Β: εἰς ὁ θεός, some versions: ὁ θεός εἰς ἐστιν Κ*Τ*L.

20. ἀφράτης, supported by Β*C*, some cursives, O. L. (vacua) and some other versions. On the other hand νεκρά is read in ΝΑΒ* and later uncials, the Vulgate and several other versions. But the tendency to bring this verse into agreement with v. 26 probably accounts for νεκρά.

22. συμφράγμα, so W. H. with Ν*ΒΚΛΠ and the Vulgate (coopera­

NOTES.

1—4. THE SUBJECT OF ἑρμηκεία naturally leads to the Thought of the σωματική, closely connected with which is the Spiritual Danger of προσωπολημψία, against which St James now warns his Brethren.

1. δεδόθη μοι, the name itself is a protest against the sin of προσωπολημψία.

μη...ήκετε is pointed interrogatively by Westcott and Hort. This construction however is regularly used only where a negative answer is expected, and even if there are exceptions to the rule, the imperative is more forcible and more characteristic of St James’ style. See Winer, iii. 67, 3 b.

ἐν προσωπολημψίαις, with respect of persons. Do not let those personal distinctions and differences continue to find a place in religious life. The plural denotes the different ways in which προσω-πολημψία shews itself, the various acts and instances of deference to persons. See note i. 17. The compounds προσωπολημψία, προσωπολημπτεῖν, προσωπολημπτής are first found in the N.T. They are among the earliest purely Christian words.—πρόσωπων λαμβάνειν is a Hebraism ἐνώπιον Φω,—l. to lift the face (opposed to making the countenance fall); hence to be favourable to: translated by ἐθαυμασά σου τὸ πρόσωπον, Gen. xix. 21: hence in N.T. always in a bad sense of shewing favour or preference to persons on account of external advantages, rank, wealth, power: οὐ λαμβάνεις πρόσωπον οὐδὲνδε, Luke xx. 21, in parallels οὐ βλέπεις εἰς πρόσωπον ἄνθρωπον, Matt. xxii. 16, Mark xi.
14; comp. οὐ γὰρ προσωπολημπτής ὁ θεός, Acts x. 54; θαυμάζοντες πρόσωπα, Jude 16. For προσωπολημψία itself, see Rom. ii. 11; Eph.
vi. 9; Col. iii. 25.

Τὸν πιστίν τοῦ Κυρίου κ.τ.λ., the faith in the Lord Jesus, that faith of which He is the object, in virtue of which the disciples were called ὁ πιστευόμενες.

Τῆς δόξης. Comp. Hebr. xii. 11 where δικαιοσύνης has the same emphatic position qualifying the whole phrase. For the expression see 1 Cor. ii. 8 οὐκ ἀν τῶν κύριων τῆς δόξης ἐσταυρώσαν, and comp. John
i. 14 ἑθεσάμεθα τὴν δόξαν αὐτοῦ, δόξαν ὡς μορφογονίας παρὰ Πατρός.
See also John ii. 11, xvii. 5, 22, 24. In the LXX. δόξα is used of the Shekinah or glorious manifestation of Jehovah in the tabernacle, e.g.
kai δόξης Κυρίου ἐπλήσθη ἡ σκηνή, Ex. xl. 35—a signification closely connected with the use of the word by St John; see Bp Westcott on John i. 14 and comp. Book of Enoch, ch. xli., ‘my eyes beheld all the sinners who denied the Lord of glory.’ The construction of τῆς δόξης with πιστίς, which is possibly suggested by the marginal reading in W. H., has the support of some interpreters, who render: (a) belief in the glory of the Lord Jesus or (b) faith proceeding from the Lord Jesus in the glory (about to be revealed). The expression however of πιστίς
Ἰσ. Χρ. varied sometimes by the construction of ἐς or ἐν is so usual (see Rom. iii. 22; Gal. ii. 16; Col. ii. 5) that it is natural to take these words together and to regard τῆς δόξης as added with special reference to the subject under discussion.
2. ἐὰν γὰρ εἰσέλθῃ. ἐὰν is virtually equivalent to ὅταν. The supposed case is presented vividly and distinctly, Goodwin, p. 102.

de συναγωγὴν ἵματιν, into a synagogue (or assembly) of yours. It is natural to suppose that the first Christians would take the name of Synagogue to designate their place of assembly for worship interchangeably with ἐκκλησία, which afterwards came to be the prevalent expression. It is at any rate clear that the συναγωγή here mentioned is a Christian and not a Jewish place of assembly. It is used in a distinctively Christian sense in Herm. Past. M. xi. 9 συναγωγήν ἀνθρώπων, and Epiphanius says of the Ebionites, συναγωγήν οὕτως καλοῦσι τὴν ἑαυτῶν ἐκκλησίαν, Lightfoot, Phil. p. 190. Like any other synagogue among the Jews its doors would be open to any Jew or proselyte who chose to enter. And from what St James says it appears to have been a grave spiritual danger and temptation for the poor Christian communities of the Dispersion to welcome with special honour a wealthy unconverted Jew who may have been prompted by curiosity or sympathy to enter their assembly. See Lightfoot, Phil. loc. cit. and Hort’s Judaistic Christianity, p. 150.

χρυσόδακτυλος, wearing a gold ring or rings. As luxury advanced the wearing of rings became increasingly the fashion. Rings were worn on all except the middle finger (Plin. H. N. xxxiii. 6). See Wetstein, who quotes Lucian, Nigrin. 21 οἱ πλουτωτοὶ αὐτοὶ καὶ τάς πυρφυρίδας προφανεῖται καὶ τῶν δακτυλίων προτεινοῦται; Aelian, V. H. iii. 9, δακτυλίους πολλοῦς φέρον ἐκκλησία έπὶ τοῦτο; Seneca, N. Q. vii. 31, Exornamus annulis digitos et in omni articulo gemma disponitur; Mart. xi. 60, Senos Charinus omnibus digitis gerit nec nocte ponit annulos nec dum lavatur. Comp. also Juv. Sat. vii. 139, Ciceronii nemo ducentos nunc dederit nummos nisi fulserit annulus ingens. Note the ingens; it would be seen at a glance. Rings were even hired to give the appearance of wealth; i.e. conducta Paulus agebat | Sardonyche, Juv. Sat. vii. 143. G. F. Watts in his impressive picture, ‘He had great possessions,’ has rightly noted this indication of great wealth. According to Clemens Alex., who forbids luxury in Christians, a special exception is made for the ring which was considered necessary for the purpose of sealing, Paed. iii. 11—57 f. This however is clearly distinct from the ostentatious use of rings referred to by St James.

3. ἐπιβλέψεις. ἐπὶ indicates an earnest, fixed look. The rich man at once attracts attention.

σὺ κἀγὼ αὐτε καλῶς. Sit thou here in a good place. The classical phrase is εἰν καλῷ. Dr Field, Otium Norv., quotes ἀγεί με τίς λαβίων εἰς τὸ θέατρον, καθίσας εἰν καλῷ, Alciph. Ἐρ. iii. 20. Comp. Matt. xxiii. 6 φιλοῦν...τὰς πρωτοκαθεδρίας εἰν ταῖς συναγωγαῖς and Mark xii. 39; Luke xi. 43, xx. 46.

κἀγὼ. See Veitch sub voc. κἀθημαυ. This form for the more classical κἀθημα occurs in the Comic writers of the classical period and in late prose, as here and Ps. cx. 1 (cited Matt. xxii. 44 and
5. the words are now placed in the mouth of one person, perhaps the ἀρχισυνάγωγος.

4. οὐ διεκρίθητε. For reading see critical notes. Did ye not make a distinction among yourselves (though you are ἀδέλφοι), and thereby shewed yourselves to be judges whose reasonings are evil? διεκρίθητε though passive in form has here a middle or intransitive meaning. This appears from the two other passages in the N.T. where the same form occurs, Matt. xxi. 21; Mark xi. 23. Compare the prevailing N.T. form ἀτεκρίθη in place of the far rarer ἀτεκρίθατο, which last occurs four times only in the synoptic gospels, and three of these are in the parallel accounts of the Passion.

There is a tendency in later Greek to the disuse of middle forms. In Modern Greek the middle voice has ceased to exist. There are also instances in Hellenistic Greek of recurrence to original forms, and "the aorist stems in -γ and -θη appear to have originally had an intransitive sense of which the passive sense was a growth or adaptation." Monro's Hom. Gram. § 44.

But apart from these arguments from the history of language the passive rendering fails here to give good sense.

diaλογισμῶν πονηρῶν. See on ἄρροατης ἐπιλησμονής i. 25. διαλογισμοῖ, reasonings, never in a good sense in N.T., διαλογισμοὶ πονηροί, Matt. xv. 19; οἱ διὰλ. οἱ κακοὶ, Mark vii. 21. See also Rom. xiv. 1; Phil. ii. 14; 1 Tim. ii. 8.

5—14. The Royal Law of Love is infringed by the unjust and scornful treatment of the poor described in the preceding section, and thus the whole Law is broken.

5. ἄκοινοτε emphasizes the important reasoning which follows; comp. our Lord's frequent formula ἦ ἔχων ὅτα ἄκοινον ἄκοινον.

ἐξελέγατο. Comp. 1 Cor. i. 26—28 βλέπετε γὰρ τὴν κλῆσιν ὑμῶν, ἀδέλφοι, ὅτι οὐ πολλοὶ σοφοὶ κατὰ σάρκα, οὐ πολλοὶ δυνατοὶ, οὐ πολλοὶ εὐγενεῖς. ἀλλὰ τὰ μωρὰ τοῦ κόσμου ἔξελέγατο ὁ θεός, ἵνα καταιχύνῃ τοὺς σοφοὺς, καὶ τὰ ἀσθενή τοῦ κόσμου ἔξελέγατο ὁ θεός, ἵνα καταιχύσῃ τὰ ἵσχυρα καὶ τὰ ἄγενη τοῦ κόσμου καὶ τὰ ἐξουθενημένα ἔξελέγατο ὁ θεός, κ.τ.λ. But the statement rests immediately on the first beatitude: Μακάριοι οἱ πτωχοὶ, διὶ ὦμετέρα ἐστίν ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ θεοῦ, Luke vii. 20. In Acts ii. 39 the Godward side of the thought is expressed: καὶ πᾶσι τοῖς εἰς μακρὰν δοσάς ἄν προσκαλέσῃται Κύριος ὁ θεός ἡμῶν. Comp. also διὰ τοὺς ἐκλεκτοὺς οὓς ἔξελέγατο, Mar. xiii. 20, and ἐκλεκτόν frequently as those chosen out to do the work of Christ in the world. So St Paul is σκεύως ἐκλογής, Acts ix. 15.

τῷ κόσμῳ (for the reading see critical notes), in respect of the world, in the world's regard. Comp. ἀστείον τῷ θεῷ, Acts vii. 20; δυνατὰ τῷ θεῷ, 2 Cor. x. 4; μὴ καν πᾶσι τοῖς κριταῖς, Aristoph. Aves, 445; θεοῦν οὖσιν κανδράσων βρυάσπιδες, Aristoph. Fux 1186, 'in the judgment of.'
For κόσμος see on i. 27.

πλούσιοι εν πίστει, i.e. not that their riches consist in faith, but that faith is the sphere or region in which they are rich, in which their riches lie, they are rich as being οἱ πιστεύοντες. In fact εν πίστει qualifies πλούσιοι much as τῷ κόσμῳ qualifies πιστοῖς. See Beyer-schlag ad loc. and Bp Westcott on Heb. xi. 2 ἐν ταύτῃ γὰρ ἔμαρτυρήθησαν οἱ πρεσβύτεροι. The expression is to be distinguished from πλούσιοι ὄν ἐν ἑλέει, Ephes. ii. 4, where the genitive would be required in the classical idiom, as πλούσιος κακῶν, Eur. Or. 394.

ἡ ἐπιγγέλασις. The reference may be to an ἀγγέλων or unrecorded saying of the Lord’s, possibly of the Risen Lord to St James himself. But the words of the first beatitude cited above are the words of a promise, see also Matt. xxv. 34. For the attraction of ἡ into the case of the antecedent comp. Acts i. 1 περὶ πάντων ὧν ἡρῴατο ὁ Θεὸς ποιεῖν τε καὶ διδάσκειν.

6. ἡττιμάσατε. The aorist points to the particular instance cited by the Apostle. You dishonoured the poor man—deprived him of his due τιμή or rank and dignity in the kingdom of heaven. The more technical term in this sense is ἀτιμῶν.

οὐχ οἱ πλούσιοι κ.τ.λ. Not only did you degrade those whom Christ honoured, but you honoured those who have shewn themselves unworthy.

καταδυναστεύοντι ὑμῶν, lord it over you; oppress you. See Acts x. 38 τοὺς καταδυναστευομένους ὑπὸ τοῦ διαβόλου, the only other passage where the word occurs in N.T., but comp. κατακυριεύω, Matt. xx. 25, Mark x. 42, Acts xix. 16, 1 Pet. v. 3, and κατεξουσιάζω, Matt. xx. 25, Mark x. 42.

The oppression of the poor by the unprincipled rich was an inveterate evil among the Israelites denounced from first to last by the Prophets. The widening breach between the Jews and Christians tended to deepen this hostility. See Pss. x., xi. and xli. 12, 13. See also Cheyne on Isaiah, iii. 9.

αὐτοῖς, with its proper sense of contrast, ‘they on their part’ in contrast with you who place them in the best seats of the synagogue.

ἐλκοῦσιν, drag with violence. ἐλκὸν αὐτῶν ἐξω τοῦ λειχῶν, Acts xxi. 30. Comp. also Acts ix. 1 ὅπως ἐὰν τις εὕρῃ τής ὑδάτων ὑπάρχῃ, ἀνθρώπως τε καὶ γυναῖκας, διδέμενοι ἀγάγγῃ ἔλεγον τοῖς ἱεροσαλημί.

ἐς κρίμα. See 1 Cor. vi. 2, 4; also Matt. x. 17, Acts ix. 2, xxi. 11. These were not heathen tribunals but Jewish courts which were recognised and permitted under the Roman government.

7. τῷ καλῷ ὄνομα. Not the name of ‘Christian,’ as some have thought, but the name of Jesus Christ into [or in] which they had been baptized; see the first instance of baptism, Acts ii. 38, βαπτισθήτω ἐκαστὸς ὑμῶν ἐν τῷ ὄνομα Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ εἰς ἀφέσιν τῶν ἁμαρτιῶν ὑμῶν.
II. 10.]

NOTES.

Usually εἰς τὸ ὅνομα, Matt. xxviii. 19; Acts viii. 16; 1 Cor. i. 15, and frequently.

The use of the word ἰδασφήμεν implies the divine character of the name.

τὸ ἐπικλῆσθαι ἐφ’ ὑμᾶς, called or invoked upon you at baptism. Comp. Jer. xiv. 9 καὶ τὸ ὅνομα σου ἐπικληθῃ ἐφ’ ἡμᾶς. See also Deut. xxviii. 10; 2 Chron. vi. 33, vii. 14; Amos ix. 12. These instances associate with the expression the thoughts of ownership and service. A freedman bore his master's name and soldiers that of their general, especially the bodyguard of an emperor, as Augustiani, Commodian. To these may be added Sebastianus, a soldier in the bodyguard of Diocletian (Σέβαστος being the Greek equivalent of Augustus). So Christiani, soldiers of Christ the King.

8. μάτια; rare in N.T.; 5 times in St John; also 2 Tim. ii. 19; Jude 8. It introduces a concession. If however ye fulfilled the royal law (which you transgressed by dishonouring the poor through προσωπολημψία) ye do well.

νόμον...βασιλικόν. The position of βασιλικόν is emphatic, and distinguishes the law of Christ, the βασιλεία, from the Mosaic law. Compare Plato, Ep. p. 1297 εἰς βασιλέως δ’ εἶδος πειράζαι μεταβάλλειν καὶ δουλεύειν νόμους βασιλικοὺς, and 2 Macc. iii. 13 δι’ ἃ εἶχε βασιλικὰς ἐντολὰς, i.e. the laws or commands which a king makes and issues, the meaning here and not, as has been suggested, 'the law which even kings obey.' The expression does not occur elsewhere in the N.T., but it is natural that the thought of the βασιλεία, the kingdom, or, as it would mean to a contemporary, the empire of Christ, should be especially present with the Apostle, who was himself of the royal line of David. It is a phrase which bears upon it the stamp of an original writer summing up a leading point of Christian teaching, and not by any means one likely to have been invented by a late writer.

Ἀγαπήσεις τὸν πλησίον σου ὡς σεαυτόν. See Levit. xix. 18, and Matt. xix. 19, and comp. Rom. xiii. 9 τὸ γὰρ ὁδ ὑμῖν ἀπέκτεινε... καὶ εἰ τις ἐτέρα ἑνεκτῇ, ἐν τῷ λόγῳ τούτῳ ἀνακεφαλαίοιται, ἐν τῷ Ἀγαπήσεις τὸν πλησίον σου ὡς σεαυτόν κ.τ.λ.

καλῶς ποιεῖτε, γε ὡς well, i.e. you are right, comp. Aristoph. Plut. 859 καλῶς τοῦτον ποιῶν ἀπόλλυται. So, "Di bene fuerunt inopis me quodque pusilli finxerunt animi," Hor. Sat. i. 4. 17. See also Acts xv. 29 εἰς διατηρούντες ἑαυτοὺς εἰ πράξετε.

9. τοῦ νόμου. Here the law of Christ which makes no distinction between rich and poor.

10. Regarded as a whole law is the expression of the divine will; therefore infraction of the law in one particular is transgression of the divine will, and so a transgression of the whole law. The instances cited are cases of transgressing the Mosaic law, but the principle is of universal application. It is a different principle from that taught in the Rabbinical schools, according to which each particular act of obedience to each law has its assigned reward. The law was not treated as a whole but as a series of separate enactments. "Who­soever fulfils only one law, good is appointed to him, his days are pro­longed and he will inherit the land." Kiddushin i. 10, quoted by Schürer, Gesch. des jüd. Volkes, ii. § 28 (Eng. Trans. Div. ii. Vol. ii. p. 92).

On the other-hand Wetstein ad loc. quotes sayings agreeing with St James' teaching, e.g. Si faciat omnia unum vero omittat unum et singulorum reus est, Sabbat. f. 70. 2; again R. Johanan dicit, omnis qui dicit: Totam legem ego in me recipio praeter verbum unum, hie sermonem Domini sprevit, et praecepta ejus irrita fecit. One false note destroys the harmony, and a broken link destroys the chain. For our Lord's word on this see Matt. v. 19.

... τυρίζῃ, πταλη. In Classical Greek ὅστις ἂν would be usual. The omission of ἂν however removes the indeterminate character of the expression; it is conceived as an actual case. Comp. Horn. Od. viii. 523 ὅσ τῇ γυνῇ κλαίετι φίλον τόδε ἀμφιπεσοῦσαν ὅσ τῇ ἰης πρῶτον τόδος λαῖν ὑπὸ τὸ πέσαρον, Soph. Oed. Col. 395, γέροντας δ' ἀρθρών φλαίρων ὅντες πέσας, Ant. 1025, ἐπεὶ δ' ἀμαρτη. So also in prose Thuc. iv. 17, ἐπιχύρων ὅν ἢμιν οὗ μὲν βραχεῖς ἀρκῶν ἡπ πολλοῖς χρήσθαι. See Campbell, Soph., Essay on Lang. § 27 and Goodwin, § 62, n. 3.

πάντων ἐνοχοῖς. Comp. ἐνοχοῖς ἀνατο, Matt. xxvi. 66; ἐνοχοῖς τοῦ σώματος καὶ τοῦ αἵματος τοῦ κυρίου, 1 Cor. xi. 27. ἐνοχοῖς bound or held, from ἐνέχεσθαι: πάντων is a genitive of cause. The construction follows that of verbs of prosecuting and sentencing: (Μεταθεσία) ὁ ἐξερχο ἐδικαίων τυραννίδος τῆς ἐν Χερσονήσῳ, Hdt. vi. 104; ὁχ ἐλλεκταί γυνημαρτυρῶν, Arist. Rhet. i. 15. 17, ἦδη § 501. See also Winer (253) iii. xxx. a who connects the construction with verbs of taking hold of &c., where the Greek idiom requires a genitive, as: τὰ κρείσσονα καὶ ἔχμενα σωτηριάς, Hebr. vi. 9.

11. εἶ δὲ οἴς μοιχεῖς. This use of οὗ for μὴ in the protasis of a conditional sentence is not infrequent in the N.T., especially when there is an antithesis between a negative and affirmative sentence as here. As Dr Moulton notes on Winer, p. 601, the expression is equivalent to εἶ οὐ μοιχεῖς ἢγ, φανεῖν δὲ. εἶ οὐ μοιχεῖς = 'if thou art guiltless of adultery.' Comp. εἶ τοῦθαντὰς ὁν οἶ δι βάπτειν, Soph. Aj. 1131; εἶ ἀποστῆται Ἀθηναίων ὁδ ηθελήσαμεν, Thuc. ii. 55; εἶ ἄλλος οὐκ εἰμι ἀπόστολος ἄλλα γε ἢμιν εἰμι, 1 Cor. ix. 2.

In Modern Greek εἶν δέν (the modern equivalent to οὗ) is the regular idiom. 12. διὰ νόμου ἐλευθερίας μελλοντες κρίνεσθαι. See note i. 25.

13. ἡ γὰρ κρίσις κ.τ.λ. The judgment implied by κρίνεσθαι διὰ νόμου ελευθ. is pitiless to him who shews no pity. But neglect of the poor, or absence of ἔλεος, is implied in deference to the rich or προσωπολογια. The law of liberty condemns such distinction. Therefore the προσωπολογία will find no mercy under that law the principle of which is ἔλεος. But even divine compassion does not extend to him who has no compassion on his fellow-creatures, the lesson of the parable of the merciless servant, Matt. xviii. 23—35. Θεος the contrary principle rejoiceth over judgment because there is nothing for judgment to condemn, Θεος like δ' γάτη being the fulfilling of the law. ἔλεημοσύνη indeed is nearly equivalent to δικαιοσύνη, see the various readings St Matt. vi. 1 and comp. Dan. iv. 27 τὰς ἀμαρτίας σου ἐν ἔλεημοσύναις λύτρωσε καὶ τὰς ἀδικίας ἐν ἀληθινοῖς περίτοις. ἄφενες for the classical ἀφένεις or the more purely Attic form ἀτέλεις, in Homer νηλείς, see Lob. Phryn. 711. For the reading here see crit. notes.

14—25. The relation between πίστις and ἔργα.—A subject suggested by the preceding paragraph, but also probably by one of the questions referred to St James for solution. Such questions were frequently put to Rabbis as to our Lord (see Matt. xviii. 21, xix. 3, xxii. 17, 36). So St Paul decides the relations between πίστις, ἔργα and ἔγατη in Cor. xiii., assigning the leading position to ἔγατη which is closely akin to Ἐσεος.

Probably as a reaction from justification by works of the law a fallacy had sprung up among the Jewish Christians that faith in Christ existing as an inactive principle, a mere speculative belief, would suffice without works. St James shews what an impossible position this is. Ἐσεος is regarded as the practical result and test of πίστις as it is in Matt. xxv. 34—40, a passage probably in the Apostle's mind here. The works of which St James speaks are works of πίστις not of the Mosaic law. Such ἔργα Christ himself sets forth as required in the Christian life in the Sermon on the Mount and in such passages as Matt. vii. 20, ἀπὸ τῶν καρπῶν αὐτῶν ἐπηρώθησε αὐτὸς; Matt. xxvi. 10, γραφεὶς δὲ τὸ Ἰσραήλ εἴπεν αὐτοῖς, Τί κόπους παρέχετε τῷ γνωστῷ; ἔργον γὰρ καλὸν ἡργάζετο εἰς ἔμε, and others. It is noticeable also that when our Lord enjoins keeping of the commandments Matt. xix. 18—20 the instances of observances are taken from the second table only, comp. with this Rom. xiii. 8 ὁ γὰρ ἄγαθος τῶν ἐρευνῶν κόμων πιτέλρυκεν. St James's teaching here is the teaching of Christ and of St Paul.

15. ἀδελφός ἡ ἀδελφή, a recurring reminder of the relationship of the disciples to one another.

γυμνὸ αὐτῆς κ.τ.λ., comp. Matt. xxv. 35, 36. In later Judaism the duty of almsgiving was vividly realised. This is one of the post-exile religious ideas which strongly influenced thought at this period. See Tobit iv. 8 f. where the Hebr. text has: 'Every one who occupieth himself in alms shall behold the face of God, as it is written, I will behold thy face by almsgiving,' Ps. xvii. 15, almsgiving being as elsewhere substituted for righteousness. So Ḥasidim, the pious, are those who exercise Ḥesed, mercy.

St James's one injunction to St Paul when he recognised his mission to the Gentiles was 'to remember the poor': μόνον τῶν πιτέλρυκων ημάς μνημονεύωμεν, Gal. ii. 9, and the Church over which he presided proved its first enthusiasm by acts of charity.

With the Stoics Ἐσεος was reckoned among the defects or vices: it was a disturbing element that broke in on the philosophic calm: ὁ ἀνειδῶν τὴν θελὴ διοικήσει ἦσε παρεινόμε, ἦσον δοῦλος, λυπεῖσθα, φθονεῖτο, ἐλέητα, Epict. Diss. iii. 24. 13. Comp. Virgil's picture of the happy man; among his blessings is the absence of pity: neque illius aut doluit miserans imopem, Georg. ii. 498.

τῆς ἐφιμέρου τροφῆς, of the day's supply of food, as distinguished from τῆς καθ' ἡμέραν τροφῆς. Field, Otium Norv., ἀπῆλθεν ἐκ τῆς οἰκίας μόνος...ἀδούλος, ἄπορος, οὐδὲ τὴν ἐφιμέρον ὅ δόστην ἐκ τῶν έαυτοῦ χρημάτων τροφῆν (ne unius quidem diei viaticum) ἐπαγέμενος, Dion. Hal. Ant. viii. 41 (Wetstein).

16. χορτάζειν, from χῶρον, see note i. 11, and for the verb note on Matt. v. 6 in this series. First of cattle, 'to feed,' βοσκεῖσθαι υἱουθ...βόσκωταί χορτάζομεν, Plato, Rep. 586: then, as a coarse comic word, of man, 'to eat.' In later Greek χορτάζειν means to satisfy, so frequently in synoptic gospels; elsewhere in N.T. only here and John vi. 26; Phil. iv. 12; Rev. xix. 21.

17. οὕτως καὶ ἡ πίστις κ.τ.λ. The conclusion is drawn by analogy. It is inconceivable that ἔλεος, pity, or compassion, can exist without results, so is the conception of faith without works an impossible one. νεκρὸν καθ' ἑαυτῆς, dead in itself, right through itself, thoroughly dead, ineffective and non-existent. Works are a condition and evidence of life. But these are very different from the works of the law, minute observances each separately meritorious against which St Paul's argument is directed.

18. ἄλλ' ἐρεῖ τις. The objector denoted by τις is virtually St James. The ἄλλα is adversative to υν. 15, 16. Shew me the faith without works, i.e. Shew me a faith which is consistent with standing aloof and bidding the hungry begone and feed himself and the naked clothe himself. Such faith is indeed a thing inconceivable. But I will shew you my faith as evidenced and proved by works of ἔλεος.

ἐκ τῶν ἔργων, as an inference or deduction from its works.

19. The ineffectiveness of faith regarded as merely intellectual assent is shewn by the example of belief in the unity of God, a belief which even devils hold.

ὅτι εἰς ἑστὶν ό θεός, that God is one. The central belief of Judaism, Deut. vi. 4 ἀκούει, Ἰσραήλ, Κύριος ὁ θεός ἡμῶν Κύριος εἰς ἑστὶν, the fundamental principle of faith. For reading see crit. notes.

τα δαιμόνια, the evil spirits who by their submission to the word of Christ recognised the One true God. δαιμόνιον is the neuter of the adj. δαιμόνιος and means literally that which proceeds from a δαιμόνιον or god. εἶ μὴ τί δαιμόνιον εἶ, 'unless there were some hindrance from the gods,' Xen. Mem. i. 3. 5. So Demosthenes, Phil. iii. § 54, speaks of the divine power or force which seems to be hurrying on the Hellenic race to destruction: ἔπελεύθη καὶ τιτο φοβεῖσθαι μὴ τί δαιμόνιον τὰ πράγματα ἐλαύνῃ. The δαιμόνιον of Socrates is the divine warning voice which apart from his own reasoning faculties checked him from entering on dangerous enterprises. See Xen. Mem. i. 1. 2. It is defined Plut. Symp. 202 υ το δαμονιαι μεταξον εστι θεου τε κα θησιον...εμπευον κα διαπορωευον θεοι τα παρε άνθρωπων κα άνθρωποι τα παρε θεων. Hence δαμωνιαι are deities of an inferior order. One of the accusations against Socrates is, καινα δαμωνια εκφερεν, Xen. Mem. i. 1. 2, comp. Acts xvii. 18 εξειδ δαμωνιων δοκει καταγγελον ευαι. In the LXX, δαμωνια is used to designate the false gods of the surrounding nations; Deut. xxii. 17 επνων δαμωνιων κα δυθι θεων, a sense attributed by some to the word in this passage; but certainly not on good grounds, for how could faith in the true God be predicated of them?

In N.T. language το δαμωνια is the unseen evil force or influence (comp. δαμωνιη όρμη, Hdt. xiv. 18) which, gaining possession of a man, like a separate personality, impelled him to evil and afflicted him with disease. See note on S. Matt. ix. 33.

φροντουν. απ. λεγ. in N.T.; properly to be rough, to bristle, then to shudder with fear; in Plutarch especially of awe in the presence of a god.

A faith which involves 'shuddering fear' is widely removed from the justifying faith of St Paul which brings peace, Rom. v. 1, and which is closely allied with that perfect love which casts out all fear, 1 John iv. 18.

20. ο δνωπτη κενε. A comparison with Matt. v. 22 will shew that the first generation of Christians did not observe obedience to the letter, ρακα in that passage being probably literally equivalent to κενε here.

δι τη πιστε χαρις των ερων αργη έστιν. On the surface a verbal argument; for αργη (α and εργον) is synonymous with χαρις των ερων. But αργη carries with it a moral stigma, των ρημα αργων (where ρων ηρηνων is a variant), Matt. xii. 36; ουκ αργον εγθε ακαρπων, 2 Pet. i. 8.

The argument is this: the ωνωπτη κενε might appeal to the faith of Abraham as an example of faith without works, faith purely and simply in the One true God. St James shews that even then justification was a result not of an inactive belief but of works in which faith was manifested, and which implies a great deal more than an intellectual assent to a proposition. It implies that grasp of unseen realities and that instinctive love and trust in God which go to form the conception of faith in the Epistle to the Hebrews, the leading and inspiring characteristic of the heroes of Israel.

21. θυσιασθη. The strict meaning of δικαιον is to make δικαιος, so to justify or acquit. The further meaning 'to regard as righteous' is not etymologically justifiable and rests on supposed theological necessity. But the theology of this Epistle and indeed of the N.T. generally points to the possibility of τελειων by an exact conformity to God's will such as Abraham exhibited.
δαιμόνια, comp. Gen. xxii. 9 ἡ καθαρσίς ἐκ τ' Ἀβραὰμ τὸ δυναστήριον, xxii. 13 ἀνήγεγκαν ἐπὶ διακάρπωσιν ἀντὶ Ἰσαὰκ, and so frequently of the sacrifices of the old covenant. In N.T. of the sacrifice of Christ: τούτῳ γὰρ ἐποίησεν ἐφάπαξ ἑαυτὸν ἀνήγεγκας (al. προσενεύκας), Heb. vii. 27; αἵρεσις ἡμῶν αὐτὸς ἀνήγεγκεν, 1 Pet. ii. 24: of spiritual sacrifices, ἀνήγεγκαι πνευματικὰς θυσίας εὐφροσύνης ἑάνω διὰ Ὀσίου Χριστοῦ, 1 Pet. ii. 5. In liturgical language the ἀναφορά in the Eastern Church, answering to the Canon of the Western Church, signified the second portion of the Eucharistic service in which the consecration of the Elements and the Communion are included.

θυσιαστήριον, the altar of Jehovah is carefully distinguished from βωμὸς an altar of false gods both in LXX. and in N.T. where βωμὸς occurs once only, Acts xvii. 23 βωμὸς ἐν ἡ ἐπεγέγραπτο ἁγνώστῳ ἑαυτοῦ.

22. ἡ πίστις συνήργει, faith was all along cooperating with. The works were an exercise of faith, and the result of them was perfection of faith. So Gideon was stronger in faith after the exercise of his faith. For the principle comp. the Aristotelian doctrine, ἐκ τῶν ὁμοίων ἐνεργεῖσιν αἱ εἴσεις γίγνονται, Eth. Nic. ii. i. 7.

23. ἐπιτυγχάνειν δὲ Ἀβραὰμ κ. τ. λ. The quotation is from the LXX. of Gen. xv. 6. The example of Abraham’s faith is cited Eccl. xli. 20, 21 and 1 Macc. ii. 52 and in N.T. Rom. iv. 3, 9, 22; Gal. iii. 6. The prominence given to this illustration is another instance of the influence of post-exile thought in the N.T. The faith of Abraham became a leading topic with Philo and the Alexandrian school as well as with Rabbinical writers at the Christian era. See Bp Lightfoot, Galatians, p. 156 f.

ἐλογίσθη αὐτῷ εἰς δικαιοσύνην, was reckoned or counted to him for righteousness. That is according to divine reckoning Abraham’s faith was righteousness. There is no need to seek any other meaning in the words than their exact and literal sense. St Paul quotes the words (Rom. iv. 3, 9, 22; Gal. iii. 6) to prove justification by faith, St James quotes them to prove justification by works which spring from faith and are inseparably connected with it.

eἰς δικαιοσύνην. In some instances of this use of εἰς in the N.T. it can be illustrated from the classics (Winer iii. p. 229, xxix. a). In others where it is more clearly influenced by the Hebrew idiom with נב still retains its proper sense denoting aim or result or the state into which a thing passes; comp. the German machen zu. Instances are έφορναι αἱ δύο εἰς σάρκα μίαν, Matt. xix. 5; αἱ γλῶσσαι εἰς σημεῖον εἰσὶν, 1 Cor. xiv. 22; ἡ ἀκροβυσσία αὐτοῦ εἰς περιτομὴν λογισθήσεται, Rom. ii. 26. See Green’s Grammar, p. 212.

φιλος θεῷ ἡκλίθη. The precise expression is not found in the LXX.; but comp. Is. xli. 8 στέρμα 'Αβραὰμ ἐν γῆς ἡγαπήσα, semen Abraham amici mei, V., and 2 Chron. xx. 7 'Αβραὰμ τῷ ἡγαπημένῳ σου; Hebr. ἡβήν: ‘thy friend,’ R.V.
III.

NOTES.

Kalēthē. kalēthē is not merely equivalent to the substantive verb, but implies (1) prestige, as ὁ πᾶσιν κλειστὸς ὁδηγός καλωθέναι, Soph. Oed. R. 8; (2) permanence in a class, τάδε γὰρ ἄλλα καθήσεται, Soph. El. 230. See Jebb on the last passage and Ellendt’s Lex. sub voc.; (3) recognition by others, comp. Luke i. 76; Rom. ix. 26.

24. θέλεις. Note the change to the plural from πιστεύεις...θέλεις...θέλεις. The conclusion is addressed to the brethren, no longer to the ἀνθρώπως κενός.

25. Ἡραβή ἡ πόρνη. See Heb. xi. 31.

ὑποδεδεχόμην, having secretly (ὑπὸ) received them as guests. In Hebrews the simple verb δεδεχόμην is used.

ἐκβάλλωσα expresses energetic action, eagerness and impatience in sending them at once. See Matt. ix. 38 διὰ τὸ ἐκβάλει ἑργάτας ἐλς τὸν θερισμὸν αὐτοῦ. Mark i. 12 καὶ εὐθὺς τὸ πνεῦμα αὐτῶν ἐκβάλει εἰς τὴν ἑρμήν. xi. 15 ἤρθατο εκβάλλειν τοὺς πωλούντας κ.τ.λ.

26. ἀντιπερ τὸ σῶμα χωρὶς πνεύματος κ.τ.λ. The illustration is important. The union of faith and works is as close as the union of body and spirit. In each case the union is that which we call life. Separation of the two elements means death. Body (σῶμα) and spirit (πνεῦμα) is an exhaustive division of the human individual. Sometimes indeed man is regarded as consisting of spirit, soul (ψυχή) and body, as 1 Thess. v. 23. But in this passage and elsewhere as Rom. viii. 9 ff., where body or flesh (σάρξ) and spirit are spoken of as alone constituting the human entity, ψυχή is included in πνεῦμα, which is divinely infused life in its highest manifestation by virtue of which man became a living soul: καὶ ἐφισάσθην εἰς τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ πνοήν Ἰάως· καὶ ἐγένετο δ ἀνθρώπος εἰς ψυχῆν Ἰάων, Gen. ii. 7. Comp. πᾶσα σάρξ ἐν ἣ ἐστὶν πνεῦμα Ἰάως, Gen. vi. 17. The ψυχή though including all lower forms of life is in its perfect state one with πνεῦμα. Bodily life and spiritual life are made of one high principle of life. See Delitzsch, System of Biblical Psychology, p. 281 f. (Eng. Trans.). Life consists in movement and energy; but these under present conditions are impossible without σῶμα. So faith is inconceivable without works, and works without faith.

CHAPTER III.

3. τὸ δὲ with NABC (δὲ) KL and many others, also O.L. and Vulgate (si autem). ἵδον is read in a few cursives and has the authority of several versions.

5. μεγάλα αὐχεῖν with ABC*P; μεγαλαυχεῖ in ΝC3KL and later MSS. ἦλικον, for ὄλγων of T.R., with ΝA3BCP; ὄλγων, a change to an easier reading, has a good deal of later support, A*vιdC3KL &c.

6. καὶ ἡ γαλάζωσα: so ΝcABCKLP &c. Tischendorf omits καὶ on the authority of Ν*, and on the same unsupported authority reads καὶ σφιλοῦσα for ἡ σφιλοῦσα below.
8. ἀκατάσχετον with NABP, Old Latin and Vulgate &c. ἀκατάσχετον of the T.R. is read in CKL and many later MSS.

9. κύριον with NABCP, Old Latin and other versions; KL and a majority of later authorities have θέαν. But it is more probable that θέαν should have been substituted for κύριον, than that the reverse should have happened.

10. ὁδε ἀλώκον γλυκὸ ποτήσαι ὁδόρ with Ν (οὔδετ) ABD, Old Latin and Vulgate. The T.R. has the support of KLP and later MS. authority and some versions in reading ὁδεµέτα πηγή ἀλώκον καὶ γλυκὸ ποτήσαι ὁδόρ. The reading in the text is an instance of the rule that a reading is to be preferred out of which all the rest may have been derived, although it could not have been derived from any of them.

17. The insertion of καὶ in T. R. before ἀναπόκρητος is against the best authority.

1. A FURTHER TEMPTATION OR SPIRITUAL DANGER CONNECTED WITH THE SYNAGOGUE IS AMBITION FOR THE OFFICE OF TEACHER OR RABBI.

2—12. FROM THIS THOUGHT OF THE TEACHING OFFICE AND ITS RESPONSIBILITIES AND FAILURES THERE IS A NATURAL TRANSITION TO THE USE AND GOVERNMENT OF THE TONGUE. YET SO PASSIONATE AND AGITATED IS THE REBUKE, THAT WE MAY IMAGINE IT TO HAVE BEEN OCCASIONED BY AN ACTUAL EXPERIENCE OF GROSS SLANDER OR GRIEVIOUS INCONSISTENCY OF CONDUCT.

1. Two results are noted from the intemperate or unconsidered use of language: (1) The swiftness with which the evil spreads from an insignificant beginning. (2) The vast influence of words, which have large issues. A chance word which gives pain or which stimulates may influence a life. The thought of the irretrievable character of the word once spoken comes out in the Homeric phrase τοίνυν σε ἐκ τοὺς φίλους ἔρκος ἐδύνατον II. iv. 350 and frequently. Comp. Virgil’s account of fama—a thing spoken.

μὴ πολλοὶ διδάσκαλοι γινέσθε, do not become many (of you), do not put yourselves under instruction with the view of being, teachers or Rabbis. The temptation to become a διδάσκαλος was great; for to no other class of the community were higher honours paid. “To speak with the teacher, to invite him to be the guest, to marry his daughter, Israel was taught to consider the highest honour. The young men were expected to count it their glory to carry the Rabbi’s burdens, to bring his water, to load his ass.” Hausrath, N. T. Times i. 105, Eng. Trans. Rabbi ben Joezer said: “Let thine house be a meeting-house for the wise; and powder thyself in the dust of their feet, and drink their words with thirstiness.” Pirke Aboth, i. 4, quoted by Hausrath.
In these circumstances to become a Rabbi was the ambition of every Israelite of leisure and ability. Even married men and those advanced in life became disciples in the synagogue schools, in order to obtain this dignity. Our Lord foresaw this danger for the Christian Church which St James denounces, Matt. xxiii. 5–8. Note especially v. 8 εἰς γὰρ ἐστιν ὑμῶν ὁ διδάσκαλος, πάντες δὲ ὑμεῖς ἀδελφοὶ ἦστε, a word which St James seems to recall here by the introduction of ἀδελφοὶ μού.

We learn from Acts xiii. 1, 1 Cor. xii. 28 and Eph. iv. 11 that the office of διδάσκαλος was recognised in the Christian Church or synagogue.

κρίμα, a severer judgment, a keener censure, than those who are not teachers. See Mark xii. 40 and Luke xx. 47, ὅτι λήμψονται περισσότερον κρίμα, the context of which brings it into close connexion with this passage.

κρίμα is in itself a neutral word—a judgment or decision which may be either of acquittal or condemnation, ὃν τὸ κρίμα ἐνδικὸν ἔστιν, Rom. iii. 8, whose judgment or verdict, here of condemnation, is just. οὐ δὲ ἀφθαρσίαῖς ἐκαθοῖς κρίμα λήμψονται, Rom. xiii. 2, sentence of condemnation human and divine. ὁ γὰρ ἐσθίων καὶ πίνων κρίμα ἐκεῖ ἐσθίει καὶ πίνει μὴ διακρίνων τὸ σῶμα, 1 Cor. xi. 29, where the context, especially v. 32, shews that ‘damnation’ or even ‘condemnation’ is too strong a word. κρίμα is here a divine judgment that disciplines and corrects in this world.

As regards the accent the only authority for κρίμα is the length of the first syllable in a single passage, Aesch. Supp. 397. κρίμα is rightly preferred. See Dr Vaughan on Romans ii. 2 and Dr Moulton’s note, Winer p. 57 (p. vi. 2).

λημψόμεθα, the use of the 1st person plural implies the authority of St James as himself a διδάσκαλος.

2. πολλά, in many ways apart from speech.

εἰ τις ἐν λόγῳ οὐ πταλεῖ. Comp. γλώσσῃ σὺ δεινῷ ἀνδρᾷ δὲ οἴδαν' οἶδ' ἐγὼ [δικαιὸν ὅτις εἰς ἀπαντός εἰς λέγει. | ΚΡ. χωρὶς τὸ τ' ἐπεί τι πολλά καὶ τὰ καθιστά, Soph. Oed. Col. 806–808; si volumus sequi omnium rerum judices esse...hoc primum nobis suadeamus neminem nostrum esse sine culpa, Seneca de Ira II. 27; ἀνθρωπος οὐκ ἐστι δικαιος ἐν τῇ γῇ δὲ ποιήσεις ἀγαθὴν καὶ οὐχ ἀμαρτήσεις, Eccles. vii. 20.

For the use of οὗ after εἰ, see note ii. 11.

τέλειος, see note i. 4. The respect in which he is τέλειος is defined by the following clause διώκεται—σῶμα. Control over the tongue implies perfect control over the whole body.

For χαλιναγωγησάται, see i. 26. The word suggests the illustration which follows.

3. εἰ δὲ τῶν ὑπῶν κ. τ. λ. A man’s tongue or speech is regarded as a force distinct from himself, just as his body is. If he can bring his tongue under control, he can bring his body under control; just as one who controls the horse’s mouth or the ship’s helm guides the whole horse or ship. τὸ σῶμα, the body, including its members, forces and affection. Comp. Rom. vi. 12 μη ὁδὸν βασιλευτῶν ἕ ἀμαρτία ἐν τῷ θνεῖ οὐκ οὕτως σώματι εἰς τὸ ὑπάκουεν ταῖς ἐπιθυμίαις αὐτοῦ κ.τ.λ. See also Rom. vii. 23; 1 Cor. ix. 27.

tὸν ἑπτάν depends directly on τὰ στόματα not on τῶν χαλινῶν. If we put their bits into horses' mouths &c., καί marks the apodosis. For the thought comp. Soph. Ant. 483 σμικρῷ χαλινῷ δ' οἴδα τῶν θυμομένων | ἑπτάν καταρτυνέται.

μεταγομεν, drive or lead in different directions, μετά implies change of place.

a. ἴδον, in later Greek little more than a vivid particle of transition.

ὑπό, generally used of personal agency: ch. i. 14 is hardly an exception to this. Comp. 1 Cor. vi. 12 ἀλλ' οὐκ ἔγω ἐξουσιασθένομαι ὑπὸ τινός. Col. ii. 18 εἰκ' φυσιώδεσιν ὑπὸ τοῦ νοὸς τῆς σωμάτος αὐτοῦ.

μετάγεται. Singular according to the rule where the subject is regarded as a class: contrast with this ch. ii. 19 τὰ δαιμόνια πιστεύουσι καὶ φιλοσοφοῦσι, where τὰ δαιμόνια are regarded as separate personal agencies.

δρμη, voluntas O.L., impetus dirigentis V., impulse, will, desire of the steersman. In N.T. only here and Acts xiv. 5, where it probably bears the same meaning: see Page on that passage.

5. μεγάλα αὐχεῖ, boasteth great things. There is no thought of an unfounded boast. The achievements on which the tongue prides itself are real achievements.

1. ἴδον ἴλικον πῦρ κ.τ.λ.: a third similitude. The tongue is like a spark that sets on fire a mighty forest.

-strokes, how small. Like quantulus in Latin, ἴλικος has both meanings, 'how great,' 'how small.' The var. lect. ὄλγον points to the latter signification here. Alford compares Lucian, Ηέρμωτ. 5 παται, ὅ Ἐρμίτιμε, ἴλικος ἤμας ἀποφαίνετο, οὔτε κατὰ τοὺς πυγμαίους ἐκείους, ἀλλὰ χαμαίπετει παντάπασιν ἐν χρῷ τῆς γῆς.

-ίλικην ὡλην ἀνάπτει, in quam magnum silvam incendit V.; 'how great a matter' A.V.; 'how much wood' R.V.; 'how great a forest' R.V. marg. The A.V. rendering 'matter,' i.e., a mass of materials, timber, firewood, etc., is a frequent and classical meaning of ὡλη from Homer downwards: Od. v. 257 πολλὴν δ' ἐπεχεῖσατο ὡλην (shipbuilding material), so ὡλη ναυπηγησίαν Plato Legg. 705 c. But the prevailing use of the word in the sense of forest, and the aptness and frequency of the illustration, are in favour of that interpretation here: comp. II. xii. 155 f. ὅς δ' διε τῷ πῦρ ἀδηλόν ἐν ἀξίωσ ἐμπέσῃ ὡλη' | πάντῃ τ' εἰληφῶν ἁμεῖς φέρει, οι δὲ το βάμωσ | προβόντοι πίστους ἐπεγγυο­μένου πυρὸς δρμή. Pind. Ἱμμ. πp. 36 πολλὰν δ' δρεῖ πῦρ εἶναι | στέρματος ἐνθόδον ἀδιάστος ὡλην. Plut. Symp. viii. p. 750 e τό πῦρ τῆν ὡλην ἐξ ἦς ἀνηρθήνη μητέρα καὶ πατέρα οὐκαν ἔσθε. Ps. lxiii. (LXX.) 14 ὅσει πῦρ δ' διαφλέξει δρµοῖς, ὅσει φλὸς κατακαύσαι δρη. See also Virg. Georg. p. 303, Aen. p. 304, x. 405, xii. 521. The passage in the Georgie indicates the hidden, unnoticed beginning; in Aen. the terror; in x. the swift progress; in ii. and xii. the violence and destructive fury. Comp. also Lucr. v. 1243 f. ignis ubi ingentes silvas ardores cremaret...quaenunque e causa flammae ardor | horribili sonitu silvas exederat altis | ab radicibus et terram percoerat igni.

6. καὶ ἡ γλῶσσα τῶρ. For the general sense of the difficult passage which follows, comp. Prov. xvi. 24—30, especially the expressions:

καὶ δὲ τῶν έαυτοῦ χείλεων θραυμίζει τῶρ, v. 27; λαμπτήρα διὸν πυρεί σε κακοῖς (not in Hebr.), v. 28; κάμων ἐστι κακίας (not in Hebr.), v. 30: and Eccles. xxviii. 10—26, especially ψίθυραν καὶ διγλωσσὸν καταράσωσθε, πολλὸς γὰρ εἰρημένων ἀπώλεσαν. γλῶσσα τρεχὴ πολλὸς ἑσάλευε καὶ διέσηκεν αὐτοῦ ἀπὸ ἑθνῶν ἐλ πόλεις ὀχυρᾶς καθεῖλε, καὶ οἰκίας μεγαςτάδων κατέστρεψε, vv. 13, 14.

A consideration of the structure of the sentence, the poetical form in which the thoughts are cast, also throws light on the meaning. From this it appears that the first thought is resumed and expounded in the last two lines, while the centre doublet contains a parallelism in itself. The effect is that of an underground flame concealed for a while, then breaking out afresh. Thus φλογίζουσα and φλογιζομένη refer to τῶρ, and σκιλοῦσα to κόσμοι, though grammatically these participles are in agreement with γλῶσσα. A somewhat similar relation between the beginning and end of a clause may be noted in ch. ii. 5 ἀγαπητοὶ...τοῖς ἀγαπῶσίν αὐτῶν. The subjoined arrangement of the words may assist the reader:

καὶ ἡ γλῶσσα τῶρ,

ὁ κόσμος τῆς ἀδίκιας, ἡ γλῶσσα καθωστάται εἰν τοῖς μέλεσιν ἦμῶν,

ἡ σκιλοῦσα δύο τὸ σῶμα

καὶ φλογίζουσα τὸν τροχὸν τῆς γενέσεως

καὶ φλογιζομένη ὑπὸ τῆς γενέσεως.

ὁ κόσμος τῆς ἀδίκιας, universitas iniquitatis V., i.e. the sum total of iniquity. The world of iniquity’ R.V., ‘that world...’ R.V. marg. This rendering, adopted by most editors ancient and modern, is open to question, (a) from the abruptness and difficulty of the expression itself, (b) from its want of relation to what follows, (c) from the presence of the article, (d) from the want of N.T. parallels for this signification. In the O.T., Prov. xvii. 6 is cited as the only instance: τὸν πιστοῦ δίος ὁ κόσμος χρημάτων. The expression occurs in the LXX. only, not in the Hebr. It is true that as Beyeschlag remarks κόσμος is used to translate Κόσμος; but in these passages it refers to the order of the heavenly host, not to the number or mass of it.

But ὁ κόσμος τῆς ἀδίκιας may also be rendered ‘the adornment’ or ‘embellishment of iniquity,’ that which gives it its fair outward show and yet conceals its inner foulness, the tongue or speech “robbed to allure and fanged to rend and slay” (W. Watson). Comp. “Vice no longer made repulsive by grossness, but toned down by superficial refinements and decked in the tinsel of false chivalry.” Bp Stubbs, Const. Hist. ii. 336. In favour of this rendering it may be urged (a) that it offers no strain on the sense of this passage, but falls in naturally with the context: (b) that it is the prevailing meaning of κόσμος in the O.T. and is so used in 1 Pet. iii. 3, 4 ἐξωθεν ἐμπλοκής τριχῶν καὶ περιθέσεως χρυσίων ἢ ἐνδύσεως ἰματίων κόσμος: (c) that the guile and deceitfulness of the tongue, though the most obvious and dangerous evils of speech, if not included in this expression would be absent from St James' description. This is indeed the predominant meaning of 'to gloze' and 'gloss,' words directly derived from γλώσσα: "glozing the evil that is in the world" Jer. Taylor: "so glozed the tempter" Milton: "lay these glozes by" Shakspere: "false glozing paradise" South. Comp. with this Eur. Troad. 981 μὴ ἀμαθεῖς πολείς θέας τὸ σῶν κακῶν κοσμοῦσα: Med. 576 εὐ μὲν τῶν ἔκκοσμησα λόγους: Ion 834 ἀλαρθέντες τά δικαία μηχαναί κοσμοῦσι. Comp. also 1 Thess. ii. 5 οὐδὲ γὰρ ποτε ἐν λόγῳ κοσμοῦσα ἐγενήθημεν, καθὼς ὁδηγεῖ, οὕτω προφάσει πλευστείας, and in Latin: Ætn. rv. 172 conjunxit vocat, hoc praestitit nomine culpam; Ov. Met. v. 69 speciosaque nomina culpae | impolitis. Comp. also Pss. v. 9 (with this Matt. xxiii. 29), xii. 2, xxviii. 3, lxii. 4; Is. v. 20; Jer. ix. 8. The sentence thus interpreted might have been written ἣ γλώσσα...κοσμοῦσα τῆν ἄδικιάν καὶ σπειρῶσα δλον τὸ σῶμα. The evil tongue adorns and embellishes iniquity and yet it defiles and stains the whole body or personality of a man.

σπλοθοῦ from the post-classical σπλῶς, a stain, for which the classical word is κῆλος: Lob. Physn. 28.

With φλουσίουσα there is a return to the metaphor of πῦρ. φλουσίουσα is ἀπ. λεγ. in N.T.

τὸν προχνα τῆς γενεσεως, rotam nativitatis V. τρόχος, a wheel, is to be distinguished from τρόχος, a course. Comp. ἐκ τρόχων πεταμένοι Eur. Med. 46, and σφόνες τ' ἄνω τροχῶν ἐκηδὼν, Eur. Hipp. 1285. Here τὸν προχνα τῆς γενεσεως is the wheel or revolution of a man's life to which he was destined from his γένεσις, that for which he was created in the image of God, the natural life in the highest sense, comp. Tennyson's "I was born to other things," In Mem. oxx. Or, in a wider sense, the world's divinely appointed course. This ordered life of the individual or of society the tongue has often set aflame by speech that curses (see below v. 9) or stirs passion or suggests evil or creates slander and suspicion. On such words and their results, tragedies like Othello and Romola are founded. The metaphor suggests fierce and violent disturbance and ruin, φλόξ being often used of fire in its destructive aspect: Ζηρός ἀγρυπτος βέλος | καταβάτης κεραυνός ἐκπέτων φλόγα, Aesch. P. V. 359: ναυσὶν ἐμβάλει φλόγα, Eur. Rh. 120: τὰν φῶνον ἔχετε φλόγα, Eur. Troad. 1318.

For this sense of τρόχος comp. τρόχος ἀρματος γὰρ ὅτα βλότος τρέχει κυλιοθεῖς Anacreon, rv. 7.

Some have seen in this passage a reference to the astrological use of γένεσις. Comp. Lat. 'natalitas' and Eng. 'nativity,' in such expressions as 'to cast a man's nativity'—his destined life. The Clementine Homilies shew how prevalent such thoughts were in early times.

πλογιζομένη ὑπὸ τῆς γεννήσης. Gehenna, valley of Hinnom, or of the sons of Hinnom, a valley to the south of Jerusalem, where in the days of Ahaz children were made to pass through fire to Moloch. Hence in after times accursed and regarded as the earthly type of the place of torment for the ungodly. See Matt. v. 22 τὴν γεννήσην τού πυρὸς. Comp. also Book of Enoch, ch. liii., 'I beheld a deep valley burning with fire; to this valley they brought monarchs and the mighty.'

For the poetical form of the whole of this passage see Bishop Jebb's Sacred Literature, § 14.

7. γὰρ introduces a further fact in illustration of the preceding thought—the indomitable character of the tongue. v. 7 is subordinate to v. 8, and might have been expressed by a concessive clause, 'for though all creatures are subject to man, yet cannot he tame the tongue.'

ἐρπτην. Heb. וינ. Gen. i. 24, 25; Acts x. 12; Rom. i. 23.

Σαμαήσεται καὶ σεδάμασται. The act is characterised as not only present, but as past with abiding result.

τῇ φύσει τῇ ἀνθρωπίνῃ. The dative is here instrumental. Note how St James exalts the dignity of man's nature. He recognises an original and inherent superiority in that nature over the lower animals.

Comp. Soph. Antig. 332 ff. πολλὰ τὰ δεινὰ κοινὲς ἀνθρώπου δεινότερον πέλει | ...κοιϕωνὸν το φυλον ὑπεθέν ἀμφιβαλὸν ἄγει | καὶ θηρῶν ἀγρίων ἐθνη, πάντων τ' εναλλαν φύσιν | σπείραις δικτυκλώστοις | περιφράδης ἄνηρ.

8. ἀκατάστατον, restless, disquieted. ἀκατάστατον, uncontrolled, unruly. For the reading see critical notes. For the thought comp. Hesiod, "Ἠργα 761 δεινὴν δὲ βροτῶν ὑπαλέον φήμην" | φήμη γάρ τε κακὴ πέλεται κοῦφη μὲν ἄεραι | βεία μάλι ἄργαλεν δὲ φέρειν χαλεπῇ δ' ἀποθέσθαι. | φήμη δ' ὅστις πάμπαν ἀπόλλυται ἣν τίνα πολλον | λαοὶ φημίζουσι· θέοι νῦν τις ἐστι καὶ αὐτῆ.

μετή λοῦ θανατοφόρου, comp. Ps. cxii. 3 ἰδὸ ἀστίδων ὑπὸ τὰ χείλη αὐτῶν.

9. ἐν αὐτῇ. The instrumental use of ἐν in N.T. is generally to be attributed to a Hebraism, introduced from the LXX., or due to the writer's familiarity with the Semitic idiom: e.g. εἰ ποιάξεις ἐν μαχαίρῃ; Luke xxii. 49: ἐὰν ὁμολογήσῃς ἐν τῷ στόματι σου, Rom. x. 9: ἀποκτείναι ἐν τῇ μομαίᾳ, Rev. vi. 8. But in many instances this use of ἐν may be explained on classical principles: comp. ἐν τῷ ἄλοιπῃ σεται; (in what, &c.) Matt. v. 13, and ἐν φόνω μαχαίρῃ ἀπέθανον (in slaughter of the sword) Heb. xi. 37, with δέσα ἐν πέταισ Xen. An. iv. 3, 8, καθ' ἐκείνου ἐν τῇ ράβδῳ Lucian Dial. Mort. 23. 3. See Winer 485, and specially Dr Moulton's note 3.
The collocation is unusual. God is regarded in His power and in His love (Beyschlag).

God has here the O.T. sense of Jehovah. This designation conveys the gravity of the sin of cursing; it is a sin against God Himself. “Remanet nobilitas” Bengel; the image of God is not lost even through sin.

It is not right or fitting. It is not the same as δεί, which implies moral obligation, duty. Here the unfitness or incongruity is expressed.

An argument from natural analogy. This inconsistency of blessing and cursing with the same mouth is unnatural. We are reminded of Aristotle’s argument against usury—the unnaturalness of ‘barren metal’ bearing, having offspring (τόκος) as it were.

The thought is similar but not quite parallel.

Another line of thought, also springing from the topic of teaching (v. 1), is the right use of wisdom and knowledge (v. 13), contrasted with a perverted use of them (v. 14). Then follows a description of the false wisdom (vv. 15, 16) and the true wisdom (vv. 17, 18).

For a further treatment of σοφία in its N.T. sense, and of the distinction here drawn by St James between ἡ ἀνωθέν σοφία and that designated as ἐπιγένεσις, ψυχική, δαιμονιώδης, see Introduction, p. xxxviii. Here it will suffice to say that ἡ ἀνωθέν σοφία is that beautiful conception of wisdom or Chōmē, which had sprung up among the Jews after the return from Babylon, and which is embodied chiefly in the books of Wisdom, Ecclesiasticus, Proverbs and Job. By the contrasted earthly σοφία appears to be meant not Hellenic or Graeco-Roman philosophy, degraded though it was on its practical side at this epoch, but rather the principles of the Zealots—that conception of the kingdom of God and consequent plan of life which Josephus himself terms a φιλοσοφία (Ant. xviii. 1. 1) and which by its passionate and misguided zeal and mundane view of the destiny of Israel precisely answers to this description.

13. τὸς σοφὸς καὶ ἐπιστήμων. St James is here thinking of σοφία and ἐπιστήμη as practical systems of life. σοφία as well as πίστις and ἔλεος must have its ἔργα. Comp. Eph. v. 16 βλέπετε οὖν ἄκριβῶς τῶς περιπατεῖτε μή ὃς ἀποστεί ἄλλ' ὃς σοφὸς, where the Apostle indicates a philosophy of life. σοφία, ἄκριβεια and ἐπιστήμη are closely connected terms; see Aristotle Eth. Nic. i. vii. 18. Comp. Eccles. xvi. 26 ἐν ἄκριβεια ἐπαγγελω ἐπιστήμην. σοφὸς καὶ ἐπιστήμων are also connected

Deut. i. 13, 15, iv. 6: δότε ἐαυτοῖς ἄνδρας σοφοῦς καὶ ἐπιστήμονας καὶ σωτερίας εἰς τὰς φυλὰς ἤμων. Comp. Is. xxxiii. 6 σοφία καὶ ἐπιστήμη καὶ εὐσέβεια πρὸς τὸν Κυρίον, Dan. i. 20 καὶ ἐν παντὶ ήματι σοφίας καὶ ἐπιστήμης ὡς ἐξήτησα παρ' αὐτῶν ὁ βασιλεὺς κ.τ.λ.

σοφός, as in Classical Greek, is used of practical skill (thus Oholiab and Bezalel and his fellow-craftsmen are ἄνθρωπος τῇ διανοίᾳ Ex. xxxvi. 1, 4, 8; comp. Arist. Eth. Nic. vi. 7 where the Margittis is cited: τὸν 3' ὧν ἀπὸ σκαπτήρα θεοὶ θέαν ὡτ' ἄροτήρα | ὡτ' ἄλλως το σοφῶν) as well as of supreme and heavenly wisdom. If any distinction is to be drawn here ἐπιστήμων would refer to the trained and exact Rabbinical knowledge which would tempt its possessor to seek the office of ἴλλου καὶ καλοῦ, v. 1.

ἐκ τῆς καλῆς ἀναστροφῆς. ἀναστροφή lit. a turning back; of a ship returning for a second attack, διέκτησε δὲ οὖν εἰσὶν οὐδὲ ἀναστροφαί, Thuc. π. 89. So of a horse wheeling round, Xen. Mag. Εq. 3. 14, hence from the notion of turning about in a place, a habitation, δαμήδων ἀναστροφή, Aesch. Ευμ. 23. Then later, as here, a mode of life in old English 'conversation.' Comp. Polyb. iv. 89 ὁ Φιλίππος κατὰ τε τὴν λοιπὴν ἀναστροφὴν καὶ κατὰ τὰς πράξεις τεθαυμασμένος. So in Αποκρ. Ιωάνος ἐπεαιδεύμενος ἐν πάση ἀναστροφῇ σου, Tob. iv. 14 and 2 Μακ. ν. 8, and in N.T. τὴν ἐμὴν ποτὲ ἀναστροφὴν ἐν τῷ Ἰουδαίῳ τόμῳ; Gal. i. 13; in two other passages of the Pauline Epp. Eph. iv. 22, 1 Tim. iv. 12, and eight times in 1 and 2 Peter, in Heb. xiii. 7 τῇ ἐκβασιν τῆς ἀναστροφῆς, the issue of their life. ἀναστροφή is therefore the life of movement and action. The life of Christian Wisdom and of 'Zeal' are contrasted in their outcome. καλὸς as a philosophical term is associated with that which is ideally perfect in life or art. καλὴ ἀναστροφή is therefore the perfect life of action.

ἐν προάστησι σοφίας, in mildness of wisdom, gentleness which is characterised by wisdom. Comp. mitis sapientia Lael. See ch. i. 21. The gentleness of wisdom is perhaps emphasized in contrast to the asperity of philosophic discussion, but here it is more especially opposed to the rivalry of religious parties among the Jews and to that fierce and fanatical spirit indicated by χρόνος. In a good sense χρόνος is used of passionate devotion to the cause of Jehovah, ὁ χρόνος κυρίου τῶν δυνάμεων πονηρῶς ταῦτα, 2 Kings xix. 31; ὁ χρόνος τοῦ οἴκου σου κατέθανεν ἡμῖν, Ps. lxviii. 9 cited by our Lord, John ii. 17, the only passage where the word occurs in the Gospels. But comp. Σιμώνα τὸν καλοῦμενον ξηλωτήν, Luke vi. 15 and the parallel κανανάλος from the Hebrew (יְבִלָּהוּ) equivalent to γὰλος. Thus like other elements in Jewish life ‘zeal’ was turned to account in the kingdom of God. The zealots derived their tenets from the signal instances of zeal in the O.T. such as that of Phinehas Numb. xxv. 7, 11 or of Jehu 2 K. x. 16. Then by a natural transition the word became associated with the thought of contention and strife: comp. ἐρῆπος καὶ ἡλίῳ, Rom. xiii. 13; γῆλος καὶ ἐρῆπος καὶ ἀρχονται, 1 Cor. iii. 3; θυμὸν ἐρῆπος, 2 Cor. xii. 20; ἐρήμος ἡλί队员们, Gal. v. 20. St Paul however recognises its good side as a characteristic of Israel: γῆλος θεὸς ἔχουσιν· ἀλλ’ οὖ κατ’ ἔπιγραφα, Rom. x. 2.

14. ἐρήμος πιερόν, in strong contrast to πράξης σοφίας.

ἐρήμος (ἐρῆπος W. H.), party spirit, intrigue, contention. The derivation is from ἐρῆπος, a day labourer; ἐν δὲ ἐτίθη τέμενος βαθυλήματος ἔθετα δ’ ἐρῆπος ἐν ἡλίῳ ἐν ταῖς ἐρήμοις ἐν τῇ πόλει, Ιων. xii. 550; τοτε Ἀδριανά, ποικιλ sφ’ ἐπόνασαν ἐρῆπος, Theocr. Ιδ. xv. 80. ἐρήμεα rare in classics, see Arist. Pol. viii. (v.) 2. 6 where it is used in the derived sense of party spirit or faction. Aristotle also uses the verb ἐρημεύεσθαι, Pol. viii. (v.) 3. 9, comp. Polyb. x. 22. 9; ἐρημεύεσθαι τοις νέοις, to inveigle the young men into party measures. Not in LXX., in N.T. see Rom. ii. 8, τοῖς δὲ ἐξ ἐρῆποις, Gal. v. 20, Phil. i. 17 τὸ δὲ ἐξ ἐρῆποις, ii. 3 μηδὲν κατ’ ἐρῆπος.

Curtius, Etym. § 343, refers ἐρῆπος to the root ἕρ-, the fundamental meaning of which is movement in direction of something with a view to attainment, as in ἐρέσθαι, ἄρωμα, μίσθαρμος. The last word explains ἐρῆπος, earning wages, and also ἐρῆπος in the sense of struggle for party ends &c. It may be added that there is no etymological connexion between ἐρημεύεια and ἐρῆπος.

εἴ δὲ γῆλος πιερόν ἔχει. If you have (as you have in fact) bitter zeal (πιερόν emphatic by position, and added because zeal is not in itself evil), do not go on glorying and lying against the truth, i.e. the truth which heavenly wisdom shews—the truth of Christ, the Christian faith. Bitter emulation and contentiousness are absolutely inconsistent with the truth as Christ taught it. St James therefore calls upon the brotherhood to give up that life of emulation and quarrelling and show by a true and noble life what the heavenly σοφία is. The warning is addressed to zealots, whether converted or unconverted Jews (St James had influence with both). The spirit of misdirected zeal, already a danger in the Church, developed into the Judaistic opposition to St Paul. The tendency was to boast of the privileges of Israel: comp. Rom. iv. 1, 2; 2 Cor. xi. 18 ff.

15. αὕτη (σοφία), this false wisdom indicated above, the fanaticism of the zealot.

ἐπίγειος. Comp. εἶ τὰ ἐπίγεια ἐθὼν ὡμὲν καὶ οὐ πιετέσθε, πῶς ἐὰν ἐπιστὼ ὡμὲν τὰ ἐπουράνια πιετέσθε; John iii. 12; τὰ ἐπίγεια φρονοῦντες, Phil. iii. 19, see also 1 Cor. xv. 40; 2 Cor. v. 1; Phil. ii. 10. As applied to σοφία, ἐπίγειος denotes a wisdom which is limited by earthly conceptions.
III. 17.]

ψυχική. ψυχικός is used in N.T. in distinction from πνευματικός, to indicate the lower animal life in contrast with the higher spiritual life. Comp. ψυχικόν δὲ ἀνθρώπως οὐ δέχεται τὰ τοῦ πνεύματος τοῦ θεοῦ, 1 Cor. ii. 14: στεφεται σώμα ψυχικόν, ἐγείρεται σώμα πνευματικόν, 1 Cor. xv. 44: οὕτω εἴσω...ψυχικόν πνεύμα μὴ ἔχουτε, Jud. 19. Taken absolutely both in the classics and in Hellenistic Greek ψυχή signifies life in all its degrees and modes from the lowest vegetative life to the highest spiritual existence. This extent of meaning gives force to the expression: ὅς γὰρ ἄν θέλῃ τὴν ψυχήν αὐτοῦ σώσαι, Matt. xvi. 25.

δαίμωνάρχης, here only in N.T. In its extreme phase the desperate resistance to foreign power or to any infringement of the national religion exhibited characteristics which closely approached the phenomena of demoniacal possession.

The false σοφία looked to a time of material prosperity and to the satisfaction of desire.

16. ἀκαταστασία, opposed to the εἰρήνη of the heavenly wisdom and especially characteristic of the zealots. Comp. οὐ γὰρ ἐστιν ἀκαταστασίας ὁ θεός, ἀλλ' εἰρήνης, 1 Cor. xiv. 33.

ἀλτοῖον πράγμα, comp. τὰς γὰρ ὁ φαῦλα πράσσων μοι ἐπὶ τὸ φῶς, John iii. 20: ἐκπορεύεσθαι...οἷ τὰ φαῦλα πράσαντες εἰς ἀνάστασιν κρίσεως, John v. 29.

17. ἡ ἀνωθεν σοφία, the heavenly wisdom, the supreme excellence of the religious life, in which the child Jesus kept advancing, πρόκειται τῇ σοφίᾳ, Luke ii. 52, which was manifest in His manhood, πόθεν τοῦτον ἡ σοφία αὕτης; Matt. xiii. 54, and which guided His life, Matt. xi. 19. It is described with enthusiasm 4 Macc. i. 16 ff.; Ecclus. li. 13 ff. See on i. 5 and Introduction. Comp. Book of Enoch ch. xliii., 'wisdom found not a place on earth where she could inhabit; her dwelling therefore is in heaven.'

ἐπισκῆς, from εἰκός, reasonable, fair, equitable. Arist. Eth. N. v. xiv. 8 says of the ἐπισκῆς, ὁ μη ἀκριβοδίκασα ἐτι τὸ χείρον ἀλλ' ἑλπιστικός, κατερ ἔχων τὸν νόμον βοήθουν, comp. Soph. O. C. 1125 l. ἐπεὶ τὸ γ' εὐθεῖας ἢ μονος παρ' ὑμῖν εὐθον ἀνθρώπων ἐγὼ καὶ τούτων καὶ τὸ μη ψευδοτομείν. In the N.T. ἐπισκῆς is noted as a leading characteristic of Christians, τὸ ἐπισκῆς ὡμών γνωσθήσω πάσιν ἀνθρώποις, Phil. iv. 5: it is required of a bishop to be ἐπισκῆς, ἀμαχον, 1 Tim. iii. 4: of Christians generally ἀμάχος εἶναι, ἐπισκῆς, Tit. iii. 2. Like πράθηκε it is manifested in Christ Himself, παρακαλῶ μοις διὰ τῆς πραθήκης καὶ ἐπισκῆις τοῦ χριστοῦ, 2 Cor. x. 1. Juvenal expresses the thought in the line: "mitem animum ac mores modicos erroribus aequos," Sat. xiv. 15.

ἐὑπεθής, here only in N.T., suadibilis V., 'easy to be intreated' R.V., open to persuasion, the opposite of headstrong or obstinate.

ἀδιάκριτος, also ἀπ. leg. in N.T., non judicantis V., 'without variance' R.V., 'doubtfulness or partiality' R.V. marg.

The various meanings are determined by the different senses of διάκρινον: and as the prevailing signification of the verb both in this epistle (i. 6 bis and possibly ii. 4) and elsewhere frequently (as Acts x. 20, Rom. xiv. 23) is "to doubt," and as St James lays special stress on the sin of διψύχα, and as our Lord expressly rebukes the ὀλγάστοσ, the rendering in R.V. marg. "without doubtfulness" is to be preferred to that given in the text.

ἀνυπόκριτος, comp. 1 Pet. i. 22 τὰς ψυχὰς ὑμῶν ἡγιαστές ἐν τῇ ὑπακοῇ τῆς ἀληθείας διὰ πνεύματος εἰς φιλαδελφίαν ἀνυπόκριτον—a quotation which illustrates εἰσεθής in this connexion. See also 2 Cor. vi. 6; 1 Tim. i. 5; 2 Tim. i. 5; and note our Lord's frequent denunciation of hypocrisy.

18. καρπὸς δὴ δικαιοσύνης κ.τ.λ. δικαιοσύνης gen. of apposition, the fruit which consists of righteousness. The connecting thought between this and the preceding paragraph centres in δικαιοσύνη, which is regarded as the supreme aim and crown of the Christian life: comp. 2 Tim. iv. 8 ο ὑπὸ δικαιοσύνης στέφανος, and Matt. v. 6, where δικαιοσύνη occupies the central and culminating point of the beatitudes. In 4 Maccab. i. 18 δικαιοσύνη is noted as one of the ἱδεα of σοφία. Bitter zeal and heavenly wisdom were alike sowing seed and the harvest was drawing on. But only for those who are now making peace (comp. μακάριως οἱ εἰρηνοτοι Matt. v. 9) is the fruit of righteousness being sown in peace. For the zealots whose policy was resistance and war there would be a harvest of contention and hatred. Here too wisdom was justified by its results (ἀπὸ τῶν ἔργων αὐτῆς). Zeal came to a bitter end at the siege of Jerusalem, while the true faith of Christ won its victory of peace.

CHAPTER IV.

4. The omission of καὶ δὲ is supported by Ν*ΑΒ and some important versions. Old Latin fornicatores, Vulgate adulteri. The words are included in Ν*KLP and later authorities.

5. κατάκτων with ΝΑΒ: κατάκτων KLP and a preponderance of later evidence. The variation arises from itacism, or confusion of form from similarity of sound, a frequent source of error.

12. καὶ κριτῆς with ΝΑBP and most versions: KL and others omit.

ο κρίνων with ΝΑBP: δι κρίνεις KL and the later mss.

τὸν πλησίον on the same evidence, as against τὸν ἔτερον.

14. τὸ τῆς αἵρεσι with ΝΚL, several versions and Fathers: τὰ τῆς αἵρεσι AP and some cursives. The reading τῆς αἵρεσι only is found in B and adopted from that great authority by Westcott and Hort.

ἐστὶ with B and several versions: moreover APK have ἐστα, probably by itacism for ἐστι: ἐστιν is read in L and is supported by the Old Latin and Vulgate (vapor est).

NOTES.

CH. IV. 1—12. THE STRUGGLE AGAINST THE DESIRES OF THE FLESH WHICH ARE THE CAUSE OF EVIL CONTENTION.

1. πόθεν πόλεμοι καὶ πόθεν μάχαι ἐν σώματι; The transition to this paragraph is immediately suggested by εἰρήνη (iii. 18). But the thought follows naturally on the whole preceding section, especially on the clause, et ζηλοῦν πικρῶν ἔχετε, κ.τ.λ. (iii. 14).

πόλεμοι...μάχαι, bella et lites, V., unde pugnae et unde rixae in vobis, O.L. Both these expressions appear to refer to private contention rather than to international wars. The conjunction occurs in Homer: ἀεὶ γὰρ τοι ἐμοι πόλεμοι τε μάχαι τε (’frays and feuds,’ Purves) II. i. 177. So also πολεμίζειν ἤδε μάχεσθαι, II. iii. 435, where the scholiast notes: μάχεσαι μὲν τις καὶ λόγοι...πολεμεῖν δὲ λόγοι οὐ λέγεσαι. There is no etymological objection to this sense of private quarrel, the root πελ. meaning to strike, hence πλήσω, πέλαις, πήγαλον.

Beyschlag distinguishes: “πόλεμος der chronische Unfrieden, μάχη der acute.”

ἐκ denotes the remoter and ultimate source, ἀπὸ the nearer and immediate source—quarrels and contentions may be traced back to pleasures as their ultimate cause.

τῶν στρατευόμενων, that are campaigning in your members. ἡδονai are like soldiers on the march; each man wishes his own ἡδονai—here equivalent to ἐπιθυμαι—to gain the victory; hence the ‘frays and feuds.’ For στρατεύομαι comp. Luke iii. 14; 1 Cor. ix. 7; 1 Pet. ii. 11; in this last passage the σαρκικαὶ ἐπιθυμαι are described as an external force at war with the soul: τῶν σαρκικῶν ἐπιθυμιῶν αἰτίες στρατεύονται κατὰ τὴν ψυχήν. Comp. Plat. Phaedo p. 66 c, καὶ γὰρ πολέμους καὶ στάσεις καὶ μάχαι οὐδὲν ἄλλο παρέχει ἢ τὸ σῶμα καὶ τό τοῦτον ἐπιθυμαί. Cic. de Fin. i. 13 Ex cupiditatibus odio, discidia, discordiae, seditiones, bella nascentur.

ἡδωὴ in N.T. always in a bad sense as a danger to the spiritual life, Luke viii. 14; Tit. iii. 3; 2 Pet. ii. 13.

2 and 3. These two verses are among the examples of poetical form in this epistle: ζηλοῦτε is an advance on ἐπιθυμεῖτε as οὐ δύνανθε ἐπιτυχεῖν is an advance on οὐκ ἔχετε.

2. ἐπιθυμεῖτε, καὶ οὐκ ἔχετε. The zealot’s aims are disappointed; his means, murder, perverted zeal, quarrels and contentions, lead to nothing. With οὐκ ἔχετε the argument is resumed and expanded by an explanation. Mere desire (ἐπιθυμία) without prayer achieves nothing. There is a kind of asking (ἀπείτει) which is not true prayer because its object is perverted. For effectiveness of prayer the desire must be rightly directed, otherwise granted prayer will be no blessing. There is such a thing as “to know the anguish of the granted prayer.”

φονεύετε καὶ ζηλοῦτε, equivalent to a single term. The ζηλοῖ involved the φόνος.

3. αἰτεῖτε...αἰτεῖτε. The active and middle seem to be used indiscriminately as in the case of some other verbs, as ἀκόω and ἀκοῦομαι, ἰδεῖν and ἰδέον, φλέγειν and φλέγεσθαι. Clyde, § 31 d.
Comp. also Luke xv. 6 and 9, συγκαλεῖν...συγκαλείται, ADE et al. plu.: the cause of this being that the older form in -μαί has never been quite displaced by the newer form in -ω. This is the more to be expected in a verb of petition which necessarily implies the force of a middle, viz. that the action is done in some way for or towards oneself, or in one's own interest. Monro, p. 8; Jelf, § 368.
altέτε however may be preferred on account of λαμβάνετε, and the two middles altείσθαι and altεῖσθε connect the clauses in which they are used.

As Trench points out, altέω (Lat. petere) in N.T. always retains its proper sense of begging from a superior. Thus our Lord never uses altέω or altείσθαι of Himself in respect of what He seeks on behalf of His disciples from God. The word employed is always ἐποτέω (Lat. rogare), an asking, that is, upon equal terms. John xiv. 16, xvi. 26, xvii. 9, 15, 20. See Trench, N.T. Syn. sub voc.

ἐν ἡδοναῖς. Not upon but in your pleasures.

4. μοιχαλίδες, for the omission of μοιχεῖν καὶ see crit. notes. The address is still to men. But the feminine form and the abruptness of the appeal indicate scorn and indignation. Comp. the Homeric expression: Ἀχαϊόι οὐκέτ' Ἀχαιοί, II. ii. 235, and Virgil's "O vere Phrygiae neque enim Phryges," Aen. ix. 617. The feminine μοιχαλίδες is accounted for partly because the image present to St James' mind is that which is most frequent in the O.T., the wife's unfaithfulness to her husband, partly because the lapse into pleasure even though accompanied by crimes of violence is essentially effeminate. It is for this association of sins that the prophet Amos rebukes the women of Israel—"the kine of Bashan," δαμάλεις τῆς Βασανίδος, Amos iv. 1 f. Juvenal too has noted the same moral fact, softness and cruelty go together: Juv. Sat. vi. 219 f., Pone crucem servo, &c. Tischendorf ad loc. illustrates this use of the feminine form by the word τοσαγωγίδες employed by Aristotle and Plutarch in the sense of μηνυτή, informers, who were probably men not women.

οὗτος, note the late form here and comp. ἰστέ, i. 19.

ἡ φίλα τοῦ κόσμου ἔχθρα τοῦ θεοῦ ἑστίν. Comp. Matt. vi. 24 οὐδεὶς δύναται δυνα τὰ κυρία δουλεύειν...οὐ δύνασθε θεῷ δουλεύειν καὶ μαμωνᾷ; Matt. xii. 30 δ ἡ ὕπερ μετ' ἐμοῦ κατ' ἐμοῦ ἑστίν, καὶ δ μὴ συνάγων μετ' ἐμοὶ ἀκοπητίζει, Rom. viii. 7 τὸ φύσιμα τῆς σαρκὸς ἔχθρα εἰς θεόν...οὐ δὲ ἐν σαρκὶ ὄντες θεῷ ἀρέσαι οὐ δύνανται.

δὲ ἐὰν ὁδὸν βουλήθη κ.τ.λ. Even the very wish for the world's friendship constitutes enmity with God. It is a thought essentially akin to the spirit of the Sermon on the Mount: see especially Matt. v. 23, 28.

5. η γραφή λέγει. The citation which follows is from an unknown source, but the form in which it is made gives the words an authority equal to that of the O.T. Comp. John ii. 22 εἰπάτεωσεν τῇ γραφῇ, vii. 38 καθὼς εἶπεν ἡ γραφή, Rom. iv. 3 τί γὰρ ἡ γραφή λέγει; and so frequently. Resch (Agraphe, log. 54, p. 256) supposes that this passage is strictly parallel to Gal. v. 17 ἢ γὰρ σῶμεν ἐπιθυμεῖ κατ' τοῦ
IV. 5.]

NOTES.

πνεύματος, τὸ δὲ πνεῦμα κατὰ τῆς σαρκός. He accounts for the variation by supposing a common Hebrew original with a variation of reading in the copies from which St Paul and St James respectively quoted. Or perhaps the variation is in the rendering of the same Hebrew or Aramaic original. It may be that πρὸς φθόνον is an intended change of expression from κατὰ σαρκός. For φθόνος is precisely that element of σάρξ, that work of the flesh, which would be excited by disappointed desires. (See the enumeration Gal. v. 19—21.) It is the feeling excited in a man of perverted mind on seeing another obtain the good thing sought by himself. φθόνος sums up the bad side of χάρις which it is associated in Plat. Phileb. p. 47 b, and 50 b, and elsewhere. πρὸς is very usual in this sense of hostility: πρὸς Τρώας μάχεσθαι, Il. xvin. 471: ἐγένετο γογγυσμὸς τῶν Ἑλληνιστῶν πρὸς τοὺς Ἑβραίους, Acts vi. 1: πράγμα ἑχὼν πρὸς τὸν ἔτερον, 1 Cor. vi. 1: ἡ πάλη πρὸς αἷμα καὶ σάρκα, Eph. vi. 12, and frequently.

δ κατόκωσεν, which (God) placed, caused to dwell, or, κατοικήσεν, which dwelt. Comp. ὑμεῖς δὲ οὐκ ἐστὲ ἐν σαρκὶ ἀλλὰ ἐν πνεύματι, εἰπερ πνεῦμα θεοῦ οἰκεὶ ἐν ὑμῖν, Rom. viii. 9: οὐκ οἴδατε ὅτι νῦν θεοῦ ἐστὶ καὶ τὸ πνεῦμα τοῦ θεοῦ ἐν ὑμῖν οἰκεῖ; 1 Cor. iii. 16.

ἐπιτοθεί, earnestly longs, answering to ἐπιθυμεῖ in Gal. v. 17, if Resch's theory be correct. ἐπὶ has an intensive force, implying direction and so earnestness of aim.

If this view be taken the sense would be: Doth scripture say in vain: Earnestly doth the Spirit which God caused to dwell within us long against envy? envy being the predominant note of the friendship with the world which is enmity against God.

Other interpretations are however given to this difficult passage. πρὸς φθόνον is connected with ἐπιτοθεί which (a) stands absolutely 'yearns even unto jealous envy,' or (b) has for its object πνεῦμα δ κατόκωσεν ἐν ὑμῖν, 'yearneth for the spirit which' &c. or (c) governs ἡμᾶς understood, 'yearneth for us.'

This adverbial use of πρὸς φθόνον (though no other examples are given) can be justified by such expressions as πρὸς ὅργαν, πρὸς βίαν, πρὸς χάριν &c., and perhaps all these interpretations give a more natural meaning to ἐπιτοθεί. The connexion would then be a strengthening of the thought of the preceding words. To friendship with the world is opposed God's jealous love for us, which can bear no rival.

Whatever interpretation be given it must be borne in mind (1) that the passage is a quotation and therefore (a) it would suggest to St James' readers more than it states; (b) it is intended to recall teaching, and therefore would not appear so abrupt as it does to modern readers. (2) It has direct reference to the immediately preceding words which express an antagonism between friendship with the world and friendship with God, and more expressly between a human wish (ἐσπαλν) for friendship with the world and friendship with God. This statement is strengthened by an appeal to scripture which asserts (a) an inner struggle of the divine Spirit against envy and jealousy which are especially characteristic of the φίλα τοῦ κόσμου, or (b) according to the second interpretation, the jealous longing for us on the part of the Spirit which God Himself caused to dwell within us.

As regards punctuation it is best perhaps to place the interrogative point at λέγει, or at any rate to regard the quotation itself as a categorical statement.

6. μετὰ αὐτῶν διδόσων χάριν. But (God) giveth greater grace. These words are also obscure. Either (a) a larger favour, even than the indwelling Spirit, for He contends against the proud, who represent the φίλα τοῦ κόσμου, and gives grace to the humble who have renounced that friendship, (b) or more grace than the world gives, (c) or more than is lost through hostility to the world.

διό λέγει, because of which fact the Spirit of God saith. The quotation which follows is verbatim from Prov. iii. 34, except that ὁ θεός replaces κόριος of the LXX.: see 1 Pet. v. 5, where the same quotation is made. It is interesting to comp. Luke i. 51, 52 ὑπερφάνως διανοεῖ καρδίας αὐτῶν...καὶ ὑψωτέρας τιμίων. Note the occurrence of the leading words, ὑπερφάνως and τιμίων. The thought is the same. It is one that entered into that atmosphere of religious life in which the Holy Family lived and which St James shared.

ἀντίστασθαι, ranges himself against, comp. ἀντίταξομαι κτερῶν σε, Eur. Phoen. 622: ἄρθρα μὲν υἱόν τῆς δύναμες ἄντιπαρτον, Thuc. iv. 55. It is a word which suggests the image of the Christian warfare so frequent with St Paul. Comp. the formula used in renunciation at Baptism συνάσσομαι σοι Χριστος· ἀποτάσσομαι σοι Σατάνα (Bingham's Antig., Vol. iv. xi. vii. § 2), and Acts xiii. 48 ὅσον ἦσαν τεταγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον.

7. ὑποτάγητε οὖν τῷ θεῷ. Therefore, in this warfare, take God's side, place yourself under Him as Captain. Polyb. uses οἱ ὑποτάσσομαι or ὑποταγμένοι for 'subjects.'

The passage which follows is another example of regularly constructed Hebrew poetry.

ὑποτάγητε, ἀντιστάτησθε κ.τ.λ. The aorist imperative denotes instantaneous, not continued action, and is therefore used in urgent entreaty or command; comp. the eager request, σῶσον, ἀπολλύμεθα, Matt. viii. 25, and the aorists in the Lord's Prayer.

to διαβάλειν. διάβαλος is strictly a rendering of the Hebrew word יְבֶל, of which סָתָנָא is a transliteration, and means literally 'an adversary,' from διαβαλλέων and εὐδιαβαλλέων, to meet, oppose: comp. Numb. xxii. 22 ἀνέστη ὁ ἄγγελος τοῦ θεοῦ διαβάλειν αὐτῶν, and Numb. xxii. 32 εἰ ἔξηλθον εἰς διαβολήν σου, also Zech. iii. 1 καὶ διαβάλεστε εἰς τὸν αὐτὸν τοῦ ἀντικείσαθα αὐτῷ, where see the Hebr. text. To this original meaning of the word the classical force of διαβαλλεῖν and its derivatives added the ideas of (a) deceiving, (b) calumniating, (c) accusing. In Rev. xx. 2 we find both the Greek and Hebrew forms—ὁ ἐστιν διάβολος καὶ Σατανᾶ—a proof that the meanings of the two words, synonymous at first, had already been severed, and one among many instances of the influence of translation on religious ideas.

Comp. Eph. iv. 27 μηδὲ δίδοτε τῶν τῇ διαβόλῳ, and vi. 11 πρὸς τὸ δίκαιον ὑμᾶς στήριξα πρὸς τὰς μεθοδίας τοῦ διαβόλου, 1 Pet. v. 8 ὁ ἀντίδοκος ὑμῶν διαβόλος...ὡς ἀντίστοιτο στερεῖ τῇ πιστεί.

8. καθαρίσατε χάρας κ.τ.λ. Comp. Ps. xxiv. 4 δόξος χειρὸς καὶ καθαρῶς τῇ καρδίᾳ κ.τ.λ. and 1 Pet. i. 22 τὰς ψυχὰς ὑμῶν ἐγνίκτες ἐν τῇ ὑπακοῇ τῆς ἀληθείας.

ἀμαρτωλοὶ...δίψυχοι. Those addressed in this paragraph are either worldly men outside the Christian brotherhood, or else those of the brethren who had become worldly. Laughter and joy are now characteristic of them.

9. εἰς κατῆφεαν, 'to heaviness,' R.V., or dejection. κατῆφεα, defined to be a mixture of shame and grief, lit. with downcast eye, perhaps from κατά and φῶς, but deriv. uncertain. This is the natural expression of the painfulness of shame: "There is no outrage," says Hawthorne, "more flagrant than to forbid the culprit to hide his face for shame, as it was the essence of this punishment (the pillory) to do." It is a Homeric word: δυσμενέων μὲν χάρμα κατῆφειν δὲ σοι αὐτῷ, Ἡ. ι. 51, also Thuc. vii. 75 κατῆφεα δὲ τὰς ἀμα καὶ κατάμεμψες σφῶν αὐτῶν πολλὴ ἤν, Plut. Aemil. p. 267 α κατῆφεα δὲ τὸ στρατόπεδον κατείχεν. For the thought comp. Prov. xiv. 13 τελευταία δὲ χαρὰ (al. χαρᾶ) εἰς πένθος ἔρχεται, and Jer. xvi. 9 καταλύων ἐκ τοῦ τόπου τούτου φωνὴν χαρᾶς καὶ φωνὴν εὐφροσύνης.

10. ταπεινώθητε, passive form with middle sense. See Monro, Hom. Grammar, § 44, where it is shewn that aorists in -νη and -θη had originally an intransitive sense of which the passive sense was a growth or adaptation. Comp. ἐχάρην, ἐδινώθην, ἀπεκρίθην.

11. μὴ καταλαλέτε διάλημαν. The argument reverts to the main subject. It is a last thought on the evils of the tongue. It is a warning against evil speaking and slander. The mention of the law however points to a particular kind of evil-speaking. This law is, according to Beyeishlag and others, the law of love, the νόμος βασιλικός mentioned above ch. ii. 8. But then the question arises how does a man speaking against his brother speak against the law, or judge the law? Certainly if he is guilty of slander he transgresses the law. How does he become a νομοθέτης and a κρίτης? It is said indeed that in slandering a brother a man's conduct becomes a practical criticism and condemnation of the law of love. He enacts as it were a law opposed to the law of love; whereas his duty is simply to obey the law of love and to abstain from evil-speaking and slander. This explanation however is not wholly satisfactory.

But if the law be understood of the Mosaic law a more natural explanation suggests itself. It is probable that the question of the observance of the Mosaic law had already been mooted in the brotherhood. The earliest rule in the primitive Church was observance of the law as St James himself and even St Paul observed it. But some Jewish Christians had from the first foreseen the transitory character of the law. And among these some, we may imagine, inspired by the thought of Christian liberty, would press their views with needless zeal, speaking against their brethren whose conscience led them to observe the law. These would be rightly regarded as judging the law; just as one who censures a statesman censures his policy.

To such as these St James now addresses himself. He is not as yet prepared for this great revolution. If the law is to be changed, it is for the one only Lawgiver and Judge to change it. It is not for the individual Christian to anticipate the change which time would bring.

12. ἀνομοθέτης. ἀν. λέγ. in N.T., quite classical and used in a special sense at Athens. For the verb comp. Ps. xxvii. 11 ἀνομοθέτησόν με, κύριε, ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ σου.

ὁ δυνάμενος σῶσαι καὶ ἀπολέσαι. See Matt. x. 28 τὸν δυνάμενον καὶ ψυχὴν καὶ σῶμα ἀπολέσει ἐν γεέννῃ.

seeing εἰ ὁ κρόνος τὸν πλησιον; St James' teaching here, as so frequently, is based on the Sermon on the Mount. See Matt. vii. 1 ἐν κρύνετε ἵνα μὴ κρίθητε.

13—17. The Temptations of Wealth.

The address is still probably to the brethren, some of whom engaged in business have not learnt to recognise God's law and His will in commercial projects and plans. Comp. Ecclus. xxvi. 29 μόλις ἐξελήτα ἕμπερος ἀπὸ πλημμελείας, καὶ οὐ δικαιοθήσεται κάτηλος ἀπὸ ἀμαρτίας.

13. ἀγοὺς ἁλ Κέντε. ἀγο like φέρε, τὸ, ἱδοῦ and in Modern Greek ἀς for ἁς, is used with singular and plural subject alike, often to strengthen the imperative: ἀλλ' ἀγο ὅποι τινα μάνην ἐρεομεν, Hom. Il. i. 62: ἀλλ' ἄνθι, παῦτα δ' ὑπίστερ ἀρεσόμεθ', II. iv. 362. Monro, Hom. Gram. § 327. See also Goodwin § 84. Age is used in the same way in Latin: age nunc, comparare, Cic. pro Mil. 21: ergo age, care pater, cervici imponere nostrae, Virg. Aen. ii. 707.

The picture of commercial activity which follows illustrates "the Semite's born instinct for trading" (G. A. Smith, Isaiah i. 289). "The Semite was always a trader" (Budge, Babylonian Life and History, p. 150). But though the carrying trade of the ancient world was in the hands of the Semite race, the Jew did not at first take to trading. The spirit of commercial enterprise flourished for a time under Phoenician influence in the reign of Solomon. But the attempt to revive it in the joint reigns of Jehoshaphat and Ahaziah ended disastrously (2 Chron. xx. 37). The Hebrew genius for trade was first developed during the Captivity. Recent discoveries in the neighbourhood of Babylon have brought to light documents which testify to very extensive commercial transactions in which the Hebrew settlers in Babylonia would probably take part. Indeed the name of Egibi, the title of a leading firm in the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, has been identified with the name of Jacob. But this conclusion "is not certain at present," Budge, Babylonian Life and History, p. 117. In the gospels banking and trade transactions are referred to in the parables of the talents, of the minae, and of the merchant seeking goodly
NOTES.

14. The case of the son who took his portion and went off to seek his fortune in a far country was probably a not unusual incident in Jewish life. In Rev. xviii. 10—14 there is a striking description of the trade of Babylon. In early days trade was provided for: "Thou shalt lend unto many nations and shalt not borrow," Deut. xxviii. 12. "They strike hands with the children of strangers" (make contracts with the sons of aliens, Cheyne), Is. ii. 6, alluding to commercial activity in the reigns of Jotham and Uzziah. The prophets were opposed to foreign trade: "He is a trafficker...he loveth to oppress," Hos. xii. 1, 7, 8. In Ezek. xvi. 26 trade is called harlotry from its venal and merely mercenary spirit. See Nahum iii. 4 f., Is. xxiii. 17, and Is. lvii. 17, "For the iniquity of his covetousness I smote him."

The language which the Jew spoke, Aramaic, was the language of trade, and the number of scattered Jewish settlements in all the principal cities of the world greatly favoured commercial intercourse. "There is abundant evidence in the Mishnah that the Jews travelled far by sea and land." Media, Italy, Spain, Alexandria, Naharden and Greece are mentioned as countries which they visited. Regulations are given in the Mishnah for use on board ship and on journeys. In the Mishnah also trades are mentioned in which the Jews engaged, among them traffic in silk, satin, vases of gold and other metals, mirrors, &c., and even in slaves. There are a few restrictions—fruits, figs, incense, myrtles, sacred to Venus, and other things could not be sold because connected with idolatrous rites. See Art. by Major Conder, Palestine Expl. F. Statement, Jan. 1894. It is hardly necessary to add that the trading instinct is still eminently characteristic of the race, and the jealousy to which it gives rise is at the root of the Juden-hetze of the present day.

τήνδε τήν τόλμην, this city, of which the speaker is then thinking. See Green, Gram. p. 125, and Winer p. 201 n. 3.

ποιησόμεν. Comp. Acts xviii. 23 ποιήσας χρόνον τυχά, 2 Cor. xi. 25 νυκτίμερον ἐν τῷ βυθῷ πεντῆχε. So also Acts xv. 33, xx. 3. So also facere in Latin: Apameae quinque dies morati...Ionii decem fecimus, Cic. ad Atticum v. 20, and Hebr. יָשָׁע, see Eccl. vi. 12.

ἐμπορευσόμενα. ἐμπορεύεσθαι is first used of travel simply: ξένην ἐπὶ γαῖαν ἐμπορεύεσται, Soph. Oed. Tyr. 456; of soldiers marching: Polybius, see Schweigh. Lex. Polyb. sub voc.; then very commonly with the added notion of travelling for business, like the Hebr. וַיוֹד, here only in that sense in N.T. Then from the frequency of tricks and deception in trade, to cheat, deceive: καὶ ἐν πλεονεξίᾳ πλαστοῖς λύγοις ἰμάς ἐμπορεύονται, 2 Pet. ii. 3. Comp. πολά τοια πρὸς ταύτην τὴν ῥάτθεσιν ἐμπορεύων καὶ μεθοδεύων, Polyb. xxxviii. 4. 10.

κερδήσομεν. For this rare form of the future see references in Veitch, sub voc.

14. oígine sůk ἐπιστασθε να τῆς αὐρων κ.τ.λ. For reading see crit. notes. Qui ignoratis quid sit in crastinum; quae enim est vita vestra? Vapor est ad modicum paretis &c. V., Whereas ye know not what shall be on the morrow. What is your life?—R.V., translating the reading adopted by Westcott and Hort, 'ye know not on the morrow what your life shall be.'

ἀτμίσ γὰρ ἔστε. Ps. cii. 3 εἴδειτον ὅσι κατούδατ ἦμεραι μου.

πρὸς ὀλίγον φαινομένη. 16. νῦν δὲ, but now, as it is.

ἐν ταῖς ἀλαζονείαις ὑμῶν, in your boastful or presumptuous talk, or your false pretensions. ἀλαζωνεία, from ἀλαζων, lit. a wanderer, then of a boastful pretender. Aristotle defines the ἀλαζωνεία as ὃ μεῖζον τῶν ὑπαρχόντων προσποκούμενος, Eth. N. iv. vii. 10 (‘a man who pretends to have greater things than he possesses’), adding according to the probable reading εἰ δὲ ἔνεκα τινος ὃ μὲν δόξης ἡ τιμής οὐ λαμ ψαλτός ὁ ἀλαζωνειάς, ὃ δὲ ἀργυριόν ἡ ὑσα εἰς ἀργυρίον ἄσχημονεστερος. It is probably with this last reference in the word that the Apostle uses it. ἀλαζονεία would thus signify the deception used to increase the value of goods—the tricks of trade.

Perhaps however ἐν ἀλαζονείαις is simply the presumptuous talk which forms plans and projects without reference to God’s will.

17. εἴδοτι οὖν καλὸν ποιῶν, if a man knows how to do what is right and honest and does it not, to him such a course is sin.

CHAPTER V.

9. κατακριθήτε with all the chief mss. katakriðhėte has very slight support.

11. ὑπομένοντας ΝΑΒΠ, Old Latin and Vulgate, ὑπομένοντας KL and several versions—the distinction is important, see below.

16. τὰς ἄμαρτιάς with ΝΑΒΠ, several cursives, Fathers and versions apparently; Old Latin and Vulgate have peccata. τὰ παραπτώματα KL and some of the Fathers.

1—6. The thought of trade suggests the thought of wealth, as in Rev. xviii. 15 οἱ ξυμποτοὺς τοῦτον πλουτήσαντες ἀπ’ αὐτῆς.

The rich men who are here addressed are outside ‘the brotherhood.’ This appears clearly both from the character of the address and from the acts ascribed to them, and also from the absence of appeal to any Christian principle, and from the marked contrast to the paragraph which follows, in which ‘the brotherhood’ is again addressed.

The prosperity of the wicked is the insoluble problem of the O.T. Two answers are suggested here:—(a) the perishable character of that on which their prosperity rests; (b) the future retribution. Comp. Zeph. i. 12, 14, 18; Job xx., especially vv. 18, 19; Ps. xii. 5; Prov. xiv. 31; Eccl. v. 8; Ezek. xviii. 18; Amos iv. 1, 2.

The picture of the rich oppressor and the persecuted poor is conceived in the spirit of Hebrew prophecy, and it is true to the religious life of the Holy Family. See Luke i. 58 πεινώσας ενεπλήσον ἀγάθῳ, καὶ πλουτώσας ἐξαπέστειλε κενοῦς. It has been in all ages the temptation of irresponsible wealth to oppress and persecute. It was among the evil signs of the times in the pre-exile period, Mic. ii. 2, Amos iii. 10, 11, 15, and again broke out after the return, Neh. v. 1—13. Possibly this keen and cruel trade spirit was an immediate result of Babylonian influence. In the Chaldean tablets the 'cry' of the poor against the oppressor is frequently expressed. The slave trade, perhaps the most extensive business in the ancient world, directly tended to heartlessness and oppression; and lending money on usury for agricultural purposes was another process tending to the same result: Ezek. xviii. 8, 17, xxii. 12; Is. iii. 14, 15.

1. ἀγε. See above, iv. 13.

διάλεξοντες κ.τ.λ. Comp. Luke vi. 24, 25, a passage closely related to this. Comp. Is. xiii. 6 ἄλολύζετε: ἐγνύς γὰρ ἡμέρα κυρίου, where there is the same connexion as here with the day of judgment.

tαῖς ἐπερχόμενας, which are now coming upon you in succession (ἐπι).

2. σέσηπεν...γέγονεν...κατίωτας. The tense implies that the case indicated by ταλαιπωρίας is already present. The tarnishing of the gold and silver is an accomplished fact. The words bring out the thought that the wealth wrung from the poor by injustice and cruelty is of no service to the rich man himself: 'putrescit in arca.'

ὁ πλουτός, corresponding in poetical parallelism to τὰ ἱμάτια, wealth in Oriental countries consisting largely of garments: comp. Acts xx. 23 ἄργυρου ἡ χρυσίαν ἡ ἱματισμοῦ ὀδηγεῖ ἐπεθύμησα.

στραβρωτά here only in N.T. Comp. Job xiii. 28 ὅσπερ ἱμάτιον στραβρωτόν. The word is not elsewhere found. For the thought see Matt. vi. 19, 20 μὴ θεαυρίζετε ὑμῶν θεαυρούς ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, διὸν σῆς καὶ βρώσις ἀφανίζει, κ.τ.λ. and comp. Hor. Sat. ii. 3. 119 cui stragula vestis | blattarum ac lineiarum epulae putrescat in arca. The word is formed like σκοληκόβρωτος, Acts xii. 23.

3. ὁ χρυσός ὑμῶν καὶ ὁ ἄργυρος κατίωτας. Arrian, Epict. iv. 6, ώς ὀπάσχα ἐπικεκλεμένα κατίωτας. The precious metals, gold and silver, are not, strictly speaking, subject to rust, but to tarnish or oxidisation, which does not destroy the metal: τὸ εἰλοὶς καθιστηθεὶς μέλας οὐθ ἀπεται λὸς | οὐθ' εὐφρῶς, αλει ἡ ἀνθος ἔχει καθαρὸν, Theogn. ἄσι. 81. ὥσι ὅσι Γαί ο ὁ χρυσός' κείνον οὐ σῆς οὐδὲ κις δάπτει, Sappho, fr. 142, Wharton. The poetical image therefore must not be pressed with prosaic precision.

ι ὁ λόγος, first, poison, connected with Lat. virus, from a root meaning to work,—comp. 'works like poison in the blood'—then rust, especially on iron and brass: εἴδηρνον γαών καὶ χαλκὸν καὶ τὰς τοιούτας τρόπους οὐδεὶς εὑρεῖν ἐν ἀφανίζομένας, ἐὰς έαυτών μὲν ἐταύν ἐρημώδους νοιττιματο τρόπον λοι ἐνδραμιμων διαφάνει. Phil. de Mundo, p. 610, 30.

ἐς μαρτύριον ὑμῖν ἔσται, for a witness against you. Comp. Matt. xxiii. 31 μαρτυρεῖτε έαυτοῖς. The rust or tarnish of the hoarded gold and silver is a symbol and witness of the destruction coming upon you. Comp. Book of Enoch li., ‘in those days men shall not be saved by gold and by silver.’

φάγεται, eateth or will eat; comp. Ecclesiasticus xxxvi. 18 πᾶν ἄρωμα φάγεται κολλία. It is a Hellenistic form not found in the classics. It is used both of future and present time, and is of interest as supporting the theory of an original identity of the present and future forms. Comp. ἐδομαί, πίομαί, and see Clyde § 33 and Lob. Piγyμ. 327 and 348. τᾶς σάφκας, pl. Comp. 2 Kings ix. 36 καταφάγονται οἱ κῦνες τὰς σάφκας τῆς Ιεζαβελ.

ὡς πῦρ, with φάγεται, R.V.; with θησαυρίζεται, Westcott and Hort. The connexion with θησαυρίζεται is supported by two passages in the O.T. (LXX.) Prov. xvi. 27 ἐπὶ δὲ τῶν έαυτοῦ χειλέων θησαυρίζει πῦρ. In the Hebr., however, there is no word corresponding to θησαυρίζει, and there may be a confusion between the Hebrew words υῷ́, ‘to heap up’ (elsewhere used to translate θησαυρίζεων) and ὑψός, ‘to be scorched.’ The rendering of the Hebr. text is: ‘and in his lips there is a scorching fire.’ The other passage is Micah vi. 10 μὴ πῦρ καὶ εἴκος ἄνάμοι θησαυρίζων θησαυροὺς ἄνάμοι καὶ μετὰ δέβρεως ἄρκλας; in this passage πῦρ is not represented in the Hebrew. Its insertion is due to the similarity of υῷ́ (ish), ‘there is,’ and υῷ́ (esh), ‘fire.’ The juxtaposition of the two words in the Greek text, especially in the first passage quoted, however, may have suggested the expression in St James. On the other hand it is more natural to take ὡς πῦρ with the words which precede rather than those which follow, and this is the view of most commentators.

ἐν ἐσχάταις ημέραις, in last days, days of crisis; the absence of the article marks the general character of the expression, which does not necessarily mean the end of the world. Comp. Gen. xlix. 1 τι ἀναπτύσσει ὑμῖν ἐπ’ ἐσχάτων τῶν ημερῶν. Prov. xxxi. 25 εὐφράνθη ἐν ἐσχάταις ημέραις, ‘she laughed at the time to come’ R.V., Is. ii. 2 ἔσται ἐν ταῖς ἐσχάταις ημέραις ἐμφανεῖ τὸ βρος Κυρίου, Micah iv. 1 (where the Hebrew is the same as in the last passage) καὶ ἔσται ἐν’ ἐσχάταις τῶν ημερῶν ἐμφανεῖ τὸ βρος Κυρίου, 2 Tim. iii. 1 ἐν ἐσχάταις ημέραις ἐναπήσονται καιροὶ χαλεποὶ. Bishop Westcott on 1 St John ii. 18 ἐσχάτη ὥρα ἐστὶν, points out that in all these passages the expression points to a time of crisis in the distant future, in Gen. xlix. 1 to the entrance into Canaan, in Is. ii. 2, Mic. iv. 1 to the restoration of Israel. In St John the use of the article, ἐν τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ, gives a definite meaning, as xi. 24 οἶδα ὅτι ἀναπτύσσεται ἐν τῇ ἀναστάσει ἐν τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ. See also in the same gospel chs. vi. 39, 40, 44, 54, vii. 37, xii. 48. But there is a sense in which each age is a ‘last day’ or hour, and in each there are ‘last days’ to come.
The Jews were agriculturists long before they were traders. It would be a natural step, as they grew in wealth, to acquire land in the countries of the Dispersion. It is probable that the land which Barnabas sold was in Cyprus.

ο μισθὸς τῶν ἐργατῶν. Comp. Luke x. 7 ἄξιος ο ἐργάτης τοῦ μισθοῦ αὐτοῦ, and Levit. xix. 13, where the rule is given: οὐ μὴ κομηθήσεται ο μισθὸς τοῦ μισθωτοῦ παρὰ σοι ἐν ἡμέρᾳ. More fully Dent. xxiv. 14, 15 οὐκ ἀπακικήσεις μισθὸν πένθος καὶ ἐπεεδεῖς εἰκ τῶν ἀδελφῶν σου ὥστε ἐκ τῶν προσηλύτων τῶν ἐν ταῖς πόλεσι σου· αὐθημερὸν ἀποδοθεῖτε τοῦ μισθοῦ αὐτοῦ· οὐκ ἐπιδύοτεται ο ἡμος ἐπ' αὐτῷ, διὶ πένθος ἐστὶ καὶ ἐν αὐτῷ ἔχει τὴν ἐλπίδα, καὶ καταβοθεῖται κατὰ σοῦ πρὸς Κύριον. St James' words enforce this passage from the law, and by a truly poetical touch transfer the cry for justice from the labourer to the wages unjustly withheld. Like the rust on the hoarded metal, the wage kept back by fraud cries for vengeance. For this poetical figure comp. Habak. ii. 11, Luke xix. 40; and for prophetic denunciation of the same violation of the law see Jer. xxii. 13 παρὰ τῷ πλήσιον αὐτοῦ ἐργάται δωρεάν, καὶ τὸν μισθὸν αὐτοῦ οὐ μὴ ἀποδὸθείει αὐτῷ and Miciah iii. 10.

τὸν ἀμφιλητήν. ἁμαν here only in N.T. for the more usual θερήτων. It is used in the classics and late prose of (a) reaping, ἢμων δεκαὶ δρεπάνας εἰν χερσὶν εὐχότες II. xviii. 551, and in middle of (b) gathering, ταλάρους ἀμφιλεγόμενοι (γάλα) Od. ix. 247. Curtius regards (a) as the root-meaning, connecting it with Latin meto, but see Lid. and Scott sub voc. The tense marks that the wages were due.

tότε χώρας ὠμῶν, fields, farm lands, χώρα in the singular meaning a farm or estate: οι εν τῇ χώρᾳ ἐργάται, Xen. Hier. x. 5.

ἀνωτερομίνος, still kept back; the perfect part. denotes that the act continues in its effects to the time implied.

ἀνο ὄμων, according to most editors to be taken with ἀνωτερομίνος, but even in that case ἀπὸ would differ from ἐπ', indicating not the agent but the source of the injustice, 'on your part' or 'by your fraud.' Comp. Acts ii. 22 ἀπὸδεδειγμένον ἀπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ, where see Page. Luke xvii. 25 ἀποδοκιμαθῆται ἀπὸ τῆς γενεᾶς ταύτης. In several passages the ms. vary between ἀπὸ and ἐπ', as Mark viii. 31, Luke vi. 18, Acts iv. 36, Rom. xiii. 1. In Modern Greek ἀπὸ is regularly used of the agent, and in common speech with the accus., ἀπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ ἐγένετο τὰ πάντα, Corfe, Mod. Grk Gram. p. 142. Another interpretation, however, connects ἀνο ὄμων with κράτει, the wage cries from you, with whom it is placed, οὐ μὴ κομηθήσεται παρὰ σοι (Hebr. lodge with thee), Levit. loc. cit. For this construction comp. Gen. iv. 10 φωνὴ αἰματος ...βοή...καὶ τῆς γῆς, Ex. ii. 23 ἀνέβησε ἡ βοή αὐτῶν πρὸς τὸν θεὸν ἀπὸ τῶν ἐργων.

κράτει, frequently used of the appeal against injustice or of the cry for deliverance: Judges iv. 3 καὶ ἐκεκραζαν οἱ νυν Ἰσραὴλ πρὸς Κύριον, Ps. xxi. 5 πρὸς σε ἐκεκραζαν καὶ ἐκσότησαν. Comp. also Is. v. 7 ἐκείνα τοῦ παῖσαν κράτει ἐποίησε δε ὄνυμαν καὶ ὁ δικαιοσύνης ἄλα κραυγήν, 'he looked...for righteousness but behold a cry,' R.V. In the Hebr. there is a play on the contrasted words 'righteousness' and 'a cry.'
Kρίνων Σαβαώθ, here only in N.T.; in LXX. either untranslated as here, or rendered by Κρίνος παντοκράτωρ, 2 Sam. v. 10, vii. 27, or κρίνος τῶν δυνάμεων, Ps. xxiv. 10, Lord of hosts, either as commanding the armies of Israel or as Lord of the heavenly powers.

εἰσελήμεθαν. This aoristic termination of the perfect occurs Luke ix. 36, John xvii. 6, 7, Acts xvi. 36, and elsewhere in N.T. This approach to uniformity in the forms of the aorist and perfect tenses is one of the marks of the post-classical period. See Simeon, The Language of the N.T., p. 35.

6. ἔτρυφησατε, ye lived delicately. The force of these aorists should be observed; the whole past is reviewed as on a judgment day. τρυφάν, here only in N.T. The strengthened form κατατρυφάν is beautifully used Ps. xxxvii. 4 κατατρυφήσεως τοῦ κρίνον, and 11 τριαξ... κατατρυφήσεως επὶ πλῆθει εἱρήνης. Comp. also Isa. iv. 2 ἀκωστάτου καί φάγασθε ἁγαθά, καὶ ἐτρυφήσετε ἐν ἁγαθoῖς ἡ ψυχή ὑμῶν, and Eur. Ion 1875 χρῶν γὰρ ὃν μέ έχρην ἐν ἀγκάλας | μητρός τρυφήσαι καὶ τερεβήσαι βίου | ἄπεαστήτην φιλάτιτις μητρός τροφῆς, Plato Legg. 695 δ βασιλεία καὶ τρυφάσατα παιδεία.

The whole picture may be compared with the parables of Dives and Lazarus, Luke xvi. 19 f., and the Rich Fool, Luke xii. 16 f.

ἔσπαταλήσατε, ye lived a life of wantonness. Comp. 1 Tim. v. 6 δὲ σπατάλωσα ἐξοσά τέθηκεν, the only other passage where the word occurs in N.T. δὲ κατασπατάλα ἐκ παιδιός οἰκήτης ἐστιν, θυγατέρων δὲ θυμωνήσθησεν ἐφ’ ἐαυτῷ, Prov. xxix. 21, is a mistranslation of the Hebr. “He that delicately bringeth up his servant from a child shall have him become a son at the last” R.V. ἐν πλησμονῇ ἀρτῶν καὶ ἐν εὐθυρίᾳ ἐσπαταλών αὕτη (Sodom) καὶ αἱ θυγατέρες αὐτῆς, Ezek. xvi. 49, αἱ καθευδοτεῖτε ἐπὶ κλινῶν ἐλεφαντίνως καὶ κατασπατάλωντες ἐπὶ ταῖς στρωμαῖς αὐτῶν κ.τ.λ. Amos vi. 4. The word is well explained Clem. Alex. iv., Strom. p. 450 δα παταλώσα ἐπιθυμεῖ ἡ ψυχή ἡμῶν οὐκ ἀρκουμένη τοῖς ἀναγκαίοις περιεργαζόμενη δὲ τὴν χλιδήν.

ἐθρέψατε τὰς καρδίας ὑμῶν. καρδία (καρδία) is used in a wide sense in Hebrew psychology. It is the centre or seat of the vital powers generally, here in the lower physical sense of appetite. Comp. Jud. xix. 5 στήριξαν τὰς καρδίας σου κλάσατε ἄρτον; Acts xiv. 17 ἐμπιστεύω τροφῆς καὶ εὐφροσύνης τὰς καρδίας ὑμῶν.

ἐν ἡμέρᾳ σφαγῆς. See Jer. xii. 8 ἄγνωσαν αὐτῶν ἐλπὶ ἡμέρᾳ σφαγῆς, where the correct rendering of the Hebrew is: “pull them out like sheep for the slaughter, and prepare them for the day of slaughter” R.V. (The first clause is not represented in the LXX.) The context in Jeremiah, a protest against the prosperity of the wicked, has a close relation to this passage. St James reminds the evil rich man that the day of retribution is at hand.

6. κατεκάκασατε, ye condemned. Another reference to the courts, κρίσις, ch. ii. 6, which were used as instruments of oppression.

ἐφομένως τῶν δίκαιων, ye slew the just one. Either (a) some special case of martyrdom is referred to, or (b) τῶν δίκαιων points to a class, the article generalising. See Winer, p. 132 and comp. 2 Cor.
NOTES.

xii. 12 τὰ σμείτα τοῦ ἁπαστόλου, Matt. xii. 35 ὁ ἀγαθὸς ἀνθρώπως...ἐκ-βάλλει ἄγαθα, or (c) by τῶν δίκαιων Jesus Christ is intended. Comp. Acts iii. 14 ὑμεῖς δὲ τῶν ἁγίων καὶ δίκαιων ἥρφησατε κ.τ.λ. Of these (a) appears to be the preferable interpretation. One actual instance of such cruelty and oppression best explains the vehement and indignant protest of the apostle. Such an incident may be explained by the motives named in Wisdom of Solomon ii. 10—20 καταδυναμεώςωμεν τένητα δίκαιων...ἐνεδρεύωμεν τῶν δίκαιων ὅτι δύσχερος ἡμῖν ἐστι...καταδικάσωμεν αὐτῶν, ἔσται γὰρ αὐτῶν ἐτιμηκοπὴ ἐκ λόγων αὐτῶι. The words found a striking parallel in the death of James himself: Eus. H. E. ii. 25 καὶ ἔλεγον ἄλληλοις· Διδάσκωμεν· Ἰάκωβον τῶν δίκαιων, καὶ ἥρυθμόν ἠθάνεων αὐτῶν, κ.τ.λ. Plato Rep. 362 a describes the fate of the man δυσδικοῦ· μέν εἰσίν ἀδίκοι διὰ βίων ὧν δὲ δίκαιοι. In the end μαστιγώσεται, στρεβλώσεται...τελευτῶν πάντα κακά παθῶν ἀνασχυσμενθήσεται.

οὐκ ἀντιτάσσεται ὑμῖν, he resists you not. The non-resistance of the innocent righteous is in the spirit of our Lord's words, Matt. v. 39 ff. ἐγὼ δὲ λέγω υμῖν μὴ ἀντιτάσσηι τῷ ποιητῷ, κ.τ.λ. Comp. also the picture of the suffering servant of Jehovah, Is. liii. 7 ff. ὃς πρόβατος ἐπὶ σφαγῇ ἤρθη, καὶ ὃς ἀμώς ἐναρτιον τοῦ κελαυνος ἄρωνος οὗτος οὐκ ἀνάγει τὸ στόμα. Comp. Book of Enoch, ch. ci., 'to those who hate us have we humbled our neck; but they have shewn no compassion towards us.' If the clause be pointed interrogatively the meaning would be either (a) Doth not the Lord (ὁ κύριος understood) oppose you? or (b) Doth not he oppose you by his testimony at the judgment seat of Christ?

7. The death of the righteous martyr raises once more the thought of μακροθυμία, this time with hopes of the παρουσία. The Book of Enoch again has a parallel: 'Wait with patient hope; for formerly you have been disgraced with evil and with affliction, but now shall you shine like the luminaries of heaven. You shall be seen and the gates of heaven shall be opened to you. Your cries have cried for judgment and it has appeared to you,' ch. civ.

οὖν. Therefore, because this grievous persecution is directed against you.

ὁς τῆς παρουσίας τοῦ κυρίου. The recognised expression for the advent or presence of Christ. In the gospels the use of παρουσία is confined to our Lord's discourse in Matt. xxiv. In St Paul's epistles it occurs six times, in 1 and 2 Thess., and in 1 Cor. xv. 23 (in 1 Cor. i. 8 the true reading is ἡμέρα), it occurs in 2 Pet. three times, namely i. 16, iii. 4 and 12, and 1 John ii. 28. There is no LXX. authority for the word.

Another Pauline word for the appearing of Christ is ἐπιφάνεια, 2 Thess. ii. 8, and five times in the Pastoral Epistles.

The whole expression ἐν τῇ παρουσίᾳ παρα. not only marks the limit—the terminus ad quem—but also suggests a reason for long-suffering.

ὁ γεωργός. The metaphor suggests patience, toil, co-operation (ποιμανάς εἰς τὸ ἐναγκαλίον, Phil. i. 5), faith, reward. ὃς ὁ δρόμος καὶ πρόσελθε αὐτῷ (σοφία) καὶ ἀνάμενε τοὺς καρποὺς αὐτῆς, Ecclus. vi. 19.
The ripening of events, the parable of the Fig Tree, Matt. xxi. 19—22, of the Seed growing secretly, the Tares, the grain of Mustard Seed, the Hidden Leaven, Mark iv. 26, Matt. xiii. 24—35; teach the same lesson.

For the omission of ἔν in this construction see Mark xiv. 32, Luke xv. 4 ἐστιν εὐθὺς αὐτὸ, xxii. 34 ἐστιν τρίς με ἄραπνησθαι εἰδήσαι, 2 Thess. ii. 7 and Rev. vii. 11, xx. 5. When ἔστιν is followed by οὗ or ὅτα the sequence of the subjunctive is frequent. The construction is used of an event conceived as possible, but uncertain in regard to the time of its occurrence. See Winer, p. 387, Green, p. 166.

In Hebrew the former rain is lit. ‘sprinkling,’ מָן, the latter lit. ‘gathered,’ מַגָּז, from the gathering of the harvest. The former rain begins as a rule at the end of October or beginning of November, lasting often through January and February. By that time the ground is softened and ploughing made possible. The latter rains, on which the growth of the crop depends, fall in March and April. In 1885 the rainfall in Palestine was Jan. 7.79 in.; Feb. 2.90 in.; March 5.47 in.; April 6.52 in.; from May to Nov. less than 1 in.; in Dec. 6.27 in. Pal. Expl. F. Quart. St., April, 1894. The fertility of Palestine is wholly dependent on the rainfall. “Its uncertainty caused it to be a special subject of prayer. At the present day Moslems, Christians and Jews unite in fasts, processions and prayers for the showers that water the earth,” Thomson, The Land and the Book, p. 91. As contrasted with Egypt, which is ‘watered with the foot,’ Palestine is a land that ‘drinketh water of the rain of heaven.’ Hence ‘rain in due season’ is the promised reward of faithfulness in Israel, Deut. xi. 10—14.

8. ἡ παρουσία τοῦ κυρίου οὐαγική, a Christian watchword, cited in its Aramaic form Μαρὰν ἀδὰ, 1 Cor. xvii. 22, and Phil. iv. 5 ἐπιεικὲς ὡμόν γνωσθῆτω πᾶσιν ἀνθρώποις: δὲ κύριος ἐγγὺς: where as here the παρουσία is a motive for forbearance and fairness of judgment, see below.

9. μὴ στενάξετε, a strengthened expression for μὴ καταλαλεῖτε, ch. iv. 11. Comp. Matt. vii. 1 μὴ κρίνετε ἵνα μὴ κριθῆτε: and see Phil. iv. 5.

κρίνης κ.τ.λ. Note the same close connexion between slander and the presence of the Judge, ch. iv. 11. For κρίνης in connexion with the παρουσία see Acts x. 42; 2 Tim. iv. 8; Heb. xii. 23. For the effect of the παρουσία on conduct see Matt. xxiv. 46—51; Luke xii. 40. With the phrase πρὸ τῶν θυρῶν comp. Matt. xxiv. 33 ἐγγὺς ἐστών ἐπὶ θύραις, Mark xiii. 29, Rev. iii. 20 ἐστικα ἐπὶ τὴν θύραν.

10. κακοτάθεως, here only in N.T. Comp. infra v. 13 κακοτάθεως, ‘to endure hardship’; and 2 Tim. ii. 3, 9, iv. 5.

μακροθυμίας, longsuffering, a late Greek word found in Plutarch, elsewhere only in LXX. and N.T., 10 times in St Paul’s epistles, in Heb. vi. 12, and of divine longsuffering, 1 Pet. iii. 20 and 2 Pet. iii.
15. Trench defines it as a “long holding out of the mind before it gives room to action or passion—generally passion.” The μακροθυμία is βραδύς εἰς ὀργήν. Here it is endurance under persecution, a noble self-restraint which refuses to take vengeance, Matt. v. 22—24, 39—41. In 1 Macc. viii. 4 it is used of the Roman patience which conquered the world, κατεκράτησαν τοῦ τόπου παντὸς τῆς βουλῆς αυτῶν καὶ μακροθυμία. For a description of the divine μακροθυμία (though the word itself does not occur in the passage) Trench refers to Wisdom xii. 20, 21.

οἵ ἔδραλήσαν ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι Κυρίου, added to indicate a parallel between the prophets and the suffering Christians to whom St James writes, comp. Matt. v. 12. Like the prophets they are on the side of God against the world. Comp. Is. 1. 10 πεποθυτε ἐπὶ τῷ ὄνοματι Κυρίου, Jer. xxiii. 25 προφητεύουσιν ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματι μου, Ezek. xvi. 14 ἐξήκθεν σοι δυνα ἐν τοῖς ἐθνείς. By δυνα Κυρίου is meant that by which the Lord is known, every manifestation of Him, that which formed the basis and substance of the prophetic teaching.

11. τοὺς ὑπομένοντας, those who endured, indicating special instances of endurance; τοὺς ὑπομένοντας would signify a class, generally ‘those who endure.’

ὑπομονήν. See ch. i. 3 and also Trench N. T. Synonyms, Second Series.

tὸ τέλος Κυρίου, that which in the end Jehovah brought to pass for Job: δ γὰρ αὐτὸς ἠθέλησεν καὶ ἐπολύσας, Job xxiii. 13; comp. v. 7 of the same ch. ἐξαγάγω δὲ εἰς τέλος τὸ κρίμα μου. For the genitive see Winer, pp. 309, 310. Others render this expression ‘the end of the Lord Jesus,’ the result of His sufferings. But such a reference would be less appropriate here, and if that meaning had been intended the expression would have been more explicit.

τολύσαλαχυμός. Here only in N.T., but σπλάγχνα, lit. the larger and more important internal organs, especially the heart, is frequently used in the sense of pity and compassion: Phil. i. 8 ἐπιστεύω πάντας ψυχὰς ἐν σπλάγχνοις Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, where see By Lightfoot, Luke i. 78 σπλάγχνα ἑδοὺς, ‘a compassionate heart,’ Col. iii. 12 σπλ. σικτικῶν, Philemon 7 ὁ σπλ. τῶν ἀγίων ἰδιαπέκαινα διὰ σοῦ, and elsewhere. The verb σπλαγχνίζεσθαι is only found in the synoptic gospels, and is there used always to express the Lord’s compassion as a motive for healing.

With this verse the epistle as a whole connected subject appears to end. What follows is in the nature and manner of a postscript. It contains special warnings needed for the Churches, which had not fallen into the preceding argument.

12. πρὸ πάντων marks the importance of what follows.

μὴ ὁμολογεῖε κ.τ.λ. This emphatic rule is founded on the Lord’s words, recorded by St Matthew only, v. 33 ff. μὴ ὁμολογεῖ ὁ λογός κ.τ.λ. Comp. xxiii. 16—22. The only oath enjoined in the Mosaic code is that by which an accused person cleared himself from the charge, Ex. xxii. 11; Lev. v. 1, vi. 3; Numb. v. 19—22. Comp. Deut. vi. 13, x. 20; Ps. lxiii. 11. But such was the sanctity attached to an oath that it could not be demanded on a trivial accusation; a denial was sufficient (τὸν νοῦν καὶ τὸν οἶχον), or the word amēn or σῶ eïnas (see Matt. xxvi. 63, 64) constituted an oath. By a curious inconsistency an oath taken by heaven, earth, Jerusalem or any other creature came to be regarded as invalid (Mishnah, Shebuoth iv. 13, as cited by Dr Ginsburg, Kitto's Encyc. under 'Oath'), compare our Lord's words, Matt. xxiii. 16—22.

So great was the fear of offending by a false oath that pious Jews before the time of Christ disowned swearing altogether: Ecclesiasticus xxiii. 9—11 δεσφὶ μὴ ἐθίσῃ τὸ στόμα σου, καὶ ὄνομαί τοῦ ἄγνου μὴ συνεθισθῇ... ἀνὴρ πολύορκος πλησθήσεται ἄνοιας, καὶ ὁ οὖν ἀποστράσεται ἀπ' τοῦ οἴκου αὐτοῦ μάστιξ, κ.τ.λ. The Pharisees avoided oaths as much as possible, the Essenes entirely—a rule which even Herod was obliged to recognise by exempting the Essenes from the oath of allegiance, Joseph. Ant. xv. 10. 4. For the whole subject see Kitto's Encyc., under 'Oath.'

ηίνω. For this rare form see Veitch sub voc. εἰμὶ. In Plat. Rep. 361 ηίνω is now read ηφω.

The construction with the accusative is more classical than the idiom used Matt. v. 34, 35 ἐν τῷ οἴρανῳ... ἐν τῇ γῇ.

13—20. Deeply important practical rules relating to (a) Prayer as a force in life, (b) Intercessory prayer, (c) Confession, (d) Conversion.

13. κακοπαθὲ. See above, v. 10.

ψαλλέων. The word implies the accompaniment of a musical instrument. For psalmody among the Jews see Bp Lightfoot's note on Col. iii. 16. He shews by quotation from Philo that it had reached a high development at this epoch: ποιοῦσιν ἄραματα καὶ δίνουσι εἰς ἑδῶν διὰ παντοθεν μέτρον καὶ μελῶν ἀ ὑμνοίσι εὐαγγελίως χαράτωσι, Philo, de Vita Cont. § 3 (pp. 476); πάντως δὲ διατελέσαντες ἐν ὕμνοις καὶ ψαλλέον, Philo in Flacc. 14 (p. 535). For the hymnody of the first Christians see Acts iv. 24, xvi. 25, 1 Cor. xiv. 15, 26. It is probable that fragments of Christian hymns are to be found in the epistles, as in Eph. v. 14 and 1 Tim. iii. 16.

14. ἄσθενετ, is sick, a special form of the more general κακοπαθέν. For the word see Matt. x. 8, Luke iv. 40.

Note the aorists προσκαλεσάθω... προσευχάσθων of single acts contrasted with προσευχότων and ψαλλέαν, the continuous exercise of prayer and psalmody.

τῶν πρεσβυτέρων τῆς ἐκκλησίας, probably the earliest mention in the N.T. of the presbyters of the Church. The term and the office were undoubtedly in the first instance transferred from the Jewish to the Christian Church. The Jewish πρεσβυτέροι are frequently named with the chief priests and scribes: together they constituted the Sanhedrin, Mark xiv. 53 οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ πρεσβυτέροι καὶ οἱ γραμματεῖς.
So in the Christian Church an important question is referred to 'the Apostles and Presbyters' in Jerusalem, Acts xv. 6. Christian Presbyters are also mentioned, Acts xi. 30, xiv. 23, xv. 2, &c.

τῆς ἐκκλησίας, also a term which connects Christianity with Judaism, comp. Matt. xviii. 17 ἐὰν δὲ παρακαλήσῃ αὐτῶν, εἰτε τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ, a direction which must have been understood in the first instance to refer to the ruling body of the synagogue, the collegium presbyterorum, but which could naturally be transferred to that Church which our Lord calls τὴν ἐκκλησίαν μου, as distinct from the Jewish Church. See note in this series on Matt. xvi. 18 and xviii. 17.

ἐπὶ αὐτῶν, over him. ἐπὶ denotes the direction of the act. Comp. Luke xxiii. 28 μη καλετε ἐπὶ ἐμέ, Acts xix. 13 ἐπεξείρησαν δὲ τινας καὶ τῶν περιπερικομένων Ἰουδαίων ἐξορκιστῶν ὑπομάζειν εἰπτ τοῦ ἔχοντας τὰ πνεύματα τὰ πουηρά τὸ ὄνυμα τοῦ κυρίου Ἰησοῦ, a passage which bears a close relation to this. For besides the positive direction given for the use of prayer and the ordinary remedies for sickness there is an implicit warning against superstitious usages such as were practised by Jewish exorcists, and which from the remotest ages had been prevalent in Babylonia and other regions where the Jews were now settled. The Kouyunjik gallery of the British Museum contains many specimens of terra cotta tables (often bilingual, Accadian and Assyrian) containing ceremonies and incantations for the sick; some are against evil spirits, some for special diseases of the head or eyes.

dελείφαντες ἄλω. The remedial use of oil was very general in ancient times, and is still prevalent in many countries. See Is. i. 6 οὐκ ἔστω μάλαγμα ἐπιθείναι οὕτω ἑλαον οὕτω καταδέσσιον, Mark vi. 13 καὶ ἥλιον ἕλαον πολλούς ἀρώστους καὶ ἔθεράπευσιν. Comp. also Luke x, 34. The aorist participle is sometimes as here used to express an action contemporaneous with the principal verb. See Monro, Hom. Gram. p. 48, § 77. The anointing was to be accompanied with prayer. The doctrine of extreme unction seems to have been based upon this passage. But as leading Roman Catholic theologians have themselves seen (see Byschlag ad loc.), St James is not here speaking of those who are at the point of death, but of sick persons whose recovery is contemplated.

ἐν τῷ ὄνυματι. Comp. Acts iii. 6 ἐν τῷ ὄνυματι Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ τοῦ Ναζωραίου περιπάτει, and xix. 13, cited above.

15. εὐχὴ τῆς πίστεως. The prayer which is based upon faith, which proceeds from faith. Comp. Matt. xxi. 22 καὶ πάντα δόσα ἃν αὐτής ἐν τῇ προσευχῇ πιστεύοντες λήμψητε.

σώσει τὸν κάμνοντα. κάμνεικ here and Heb. xii. 3 only in the sense of being sick. σώσει, here in the sense of physical recovery as in Matt. ix. 22, Mark v. 23, and John xi. 12. The difficulty that such means have not been and could not be always efficacious in the recovery of the sick is resolved by the consideration that prayer is always subject to the condition of deo volente. Such a prayer unanswered might well result in a higher προσευχή than the recovery of bodily health.
This also must refer to the raising from the bed of sickness—it is an expansion of ὠδει. The unconditional promise is startling, but again ὁ κύριος ἔληγ is to be understood.

καὶ ἀμαρτίας ἵνα πεποιηκὼς κ.τ.λ. The underlying thought here is that sin is the hindrance to recovery. For ἀφεθήσεται see Matt. xvi. 19, xviii. 18, and John xx. 23 ἐὰν τινων ἀφῆτε τὰς ἀμαρτίας ἀφέωνται αὐτοῖς ἐν τιμων κράτης κεκράτηται.

For the analytic form ἵνα πεποιηκὼς see Winer iii. xlv.

16. ἔξωμαλογεθεὶς ἐπως λαβῆτε. It is disputed whether λαβῆτε be used of physical healing or in a figurative sense. The context certainly points rather to the first explanation. St James urges the practice (note the present imperatives) of mutual confession and intercessory prayer as appointed means of recovery from sickness.

τολῦ ἐτρέπει κ.τ.λ. In its primary sense this clause is to be taken with the preceding words. Prayer of a righteous man is a strong force, an effective remedy in its working. ἐνεργομένη, middle not passive, as the following examples seem to show: 2 Cor. i. 6 εἰς παρακαλοῦμεθα, ὑπὲρ τῆς ὑμῶν παρακλήσεως τῆς ἐνεργομένης ἐν ὑπομονῇ τῶν αὐτῶν παθημάτων ὑπέ τιμεῖς πάσχομεν, iv. 12 ὁ θάνατος ἐν ἡμῖν ἐνεργεύτη, Eph. iii. 20 κατὰ τὴν ὁδον ὑπὲρ τῆς ἐνεργομένης ἐν ἡμῖν. See also Col. i. 29, I Thess. ii. 13, 2 Thess. ii. 7.

The participle may indicate either (a) the cause, or (b) the time of the effectiveness of the prayer; that is (a) through its working, or (b) while it is working, is in activity.

As an instance of such effective prayer, which must have been often present to St James' mind, see Acts xii. 12, when St Peter, delivered from prison, came to the house of Mary, ὡς ἵνα κινῶν συνηθροομένοι καὶ προσευχήμεν. See v. 17 ἀπαγγελατε 'Ιακώβῳ καὶ τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς ταῦτα. St James' own practice strikingly agreed with his words here: μόνος εἰσήρχετο εἰς τὸν ναόν, ὑπόταξε τὸν ἐξῆς ἐνεργεύσας, ἐν αὐτῷ εἰσήλθεν καὶ εὐφράεθη γενόμενον τὸν ἐκείνην καὶ αὐτὸν δίκην καὶ καθήλου, Hegesip. ap. Eus. H. E. ii. 23.

The great physician, Sir Andrew Clark, two days before his death, said in answer to a question: "Not value prayers! Prayer is that which moves more than medicine; prayer is all powerful: it is the basis of love. Pray for me always."

17. Ἡλίας. For the historical account see 1 Kings xvii., xviii. In those chapters, however, there is no mention made of the two prayers of Elijah; and the duration of the famine is there limited to less than three years, xviii. 1. In St Luke iv. 25 the account agrees with this, marking the tradition followed by the family at Nazareth.

ὁμοσπονδῆς ἡμίν. of like passions with us, constituted as we are. Therefore we may expect the like result to prayer. For ὁμοσπονδῆς see Acts xiv. 15; and Plato Tim. 45 c, where it is used synonymously with συμφυής.

προσευχὴ προσημέχατο. One of the few Hebraisms in this epistle. Comp. Luke xxiii. 15 ἐπιθυμίᾳ ἐπεθύμησα, Acts iv. 17 ἀπειλή ἀπειλήσαμε, Matt. xv. 4 θανάτῳ τελευτάω, and also Plat. Symposium. 196 ə
NOTES.

19. The genitive of aim or object, here corresponding with the use of ἐν after verbs of request or petition: as Matt. xiv. 36 παρεκάλεσαν αὐτῷ ὑμᾶς μόνον ἐξορκισάτε, and frequently. (a) For this final use of τοῦ with the infinitive, comp. Matt. ii. 13 μελετέ ὦ λαός τοῦ παιδιός τοῦ ἀπολέοντα αὐτῷ, Luke xxiv. 29 εἰσῆλθεν τοῦ μείναι σὺν αὐτῶι. With this compare the use of the Latin gerund and gerundive, e.g. Marii miserunt Romam oratores pacis petendae, Liv. ix. 45 (Madvig, § 417 obs. 5).

(b) It also expresses result, e.g. Luke xxiv. 16 οἵ ὀφθαλμοὶ αὐτῶν ἐκρατούσον τοῦ μὴ ἔπιγνώσαι αὐτῶν. This usage is closely connected with the final use, for in Hebrew thought every result was regarded as purposed and predetermined. See note on Matt. i. 22 in this series.

(c) It is used regularly after words constructed with a genitive, as 1 Cor. xvi. 4 ἐκ ἐλπίδος τοῦ καλῶς παρεσκευάζη.

(d) In some passages it appears (1) as the object of verbs where the accusative would be required in Classical Greek, as 1 Cor. ii. 2 οἵ γὰρ ἐκεῖνα τοῦ εἴδεται ὑμῖν, or (2) as the subject of the verb, Acts x. 25 ὅστις ἐγένετο τοῦ εἰσελθείν τὸν Πέτρον. In Ps. cvi. 23 (LXX.) there is an instance of a triple use of this infinitive: καὶ ἔστη τοῦ ἔξωθενοις (objective) αὐτῶν, εἰ μὴ Μωυσῆς ὦ ἐκλεκτὸς αὐτῶν ἔστῃ ἐν τῇ δραίει ἐνώπιον αὐτῶν τοῦ ἀποστρέψας (final) ἀπὸ θυμοῦ ὀργῆς αὐτῶν, τοῦ μὴ ἔξωθενοις (consecutive). These and similar expressions may indeed be regarded as extensions of recognised genitival uses, but it is better to regard them as illustrating the gradual forgetfulness in language of the origin of idioms. In illustration of this comp. the use in French of the infinitive with de either as subject or object of a verb: e.g. il est triste de vous voir,—on craint d’y aller; the adoption of the (Latin) accusative in the same language as the sole representative of the Latin cases; sometimes the single case form which survives in a modern language is the genitive, e.g. Romaic ὄντω or τῶν, ‘who.’ The extension of ἐν (νά) with the subjunctive in Modern Greek to the various uses of the infinitive is another instance of this generalising tendency. This extended use of τοῦ with the infinitive, however, is not more remarkable than that the Greek infinitive, originally a dative expressing purpose, should come to be joined with a genitive of the article and so revert to its original meaning. “The Greek Infinitive is a survival from a period when the Dative of purpose or consequence was one of the ordinary constructions of the language,” Monro, Hom. Gram., § 242. See note on χαίρων, i. 1.

βρέθη. In classics generally transitive. Very rare in this sense.

18. ἔφαστον: in the other three passages of the N.T. where βαστάζω occurs, viz. Matt. xiii. 26, Mark iv. 27, Heb. ix. 4, it bears an intransitive sense as usually in the classics.

19. ἐπιλέξω μον introduces another and a last topic closely connected with prayer, namely Conversion.
The clause εἰς τις ἐν ὑμῖν makes it clear that the truth spoken of is the Christian truth, the saving truth of the gospel, almost equivalent to ἡ πίστις. Comp. 1 Tim. vi. 10 ῥίζα γὰρ πάνω τῶν κακῶν ἡ φιλαργυρία, ἡς τινες ὀρεγόμενοι ἀπεκληρώσαν ἀπὸ τῆς πίστεως, 21 ἀντιθέσεις τῆς ψευδωνύμου γνώσεως, ἡς τινες ἐπαγγελλόμενοι περὶ τὴν πίστιν ἤτοχγησαν, 2 Tim. ii. 18 ἐπὶ τῆς ἀληθείας ἰδιόχρησαν, λέγοντες ἀνάστασιν ἢ δι' ἀγωνίαν, καὶ ἀνατρέπουσι τὴν τινὸς πίστιν. Therefore the conversion spoken of here is not conversion from heathenism or Judaism, but from some perversion of the Christian truth or morality such as is indicated in the passages cited.

20. σώσει ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ ἐκ θανάτου, shall save his soul (i.e. the soul of the convert) from death.

καὶ καλύψει πλῆθος ἀμαρτιῶν. Comp. Prov. x. 12 'love covereth all transgressions' R.V., where καλύψει is a literal rendering of the Hebr. נְפָר, 'cover' in the sense of 'forgive.' The LXX. translation of the passage is incorrect, but it is accurately cited 1 Peter iv. 8 ἀγάπη καλύπτει πλῆθος ἀμαρτιῶν. Comp. 1 Cor. xiii. 7 (ἡ ἀγάπη) πάντα στέγει. The meaning here is, will cover the multitude of his convert's sins, i.e. bring him through repentance within the range of divine forgiveness. The reference is undoubtedly to the passage in Proverbs, and ἀγάπη is virtually in thought the subject of καλύψει. Such an act as conversion is the highest act of ἀγάπη.

St James himself had this blessedness of converting many: ὁσιὸς δὲ καὶ ἐπιστευόμενον, διὰ Ἰάκωβον. πολλῶν οὖν καὶ τῶν ἄρχων τῶν πιστευόντων, ἣν θηρυμός τῶν Ἰουδαίων καὶ γραμματέων καὶ Φαρισαίων λεγόντων δι' ἐκδιώκειν τὰς ὅ λαδο Ἰησοῦν τὸν χριστὸν προσδοκῶν, Hegesip. ap. Eus. H. E. ii. 23.

The abrupt termination of the Epistle may be accounted for by the character of the document. It may be regarded as a series of decisions on the duties, temptations and difficulties of the Christian life suggested by actual facts which had been brought to the Apostle's notice; hence it takes the form of a charge or message to the Churches rather than that of an epistle in the ordinary sense of the word. The message ended, the conclusion comes without the usual epistolary greetings.
