Theology  the eb.org.uk

Making Biblical Scholarship Accessible

This document was supplied for free educational purposes. Unless it is in the public domain, it may not be sold for profit or hosted on a webserver without the permission of the copyright holder.

If you find it of help to you and would like to support the ministry of Theology on the Web, please consider using the links below:

Buy me a coffee
https://www.buymeacoffee.com/theology

PATREON

THE EPISTLES OF ST PAUL.

III.THE FIRST ROMAN CAPTIVITY.

2.

EPISTLE TO THE COLOSSIANS.
3.

EPISTLE TO PHILEMON.

Clement.

 Ianaties.

PoLycarp.

TO THE

RIGHT REV. EDWARD HAROLD BROWNE, D.D.,LORD BISHOP OF WINCHESTER,IN SINCERE ADMIRATIONOF

HIS PERSONAL CHARACTER AND EPISCOPAL WORK AND IN GRATEFUL RECOGNITION

of
THE PRIVILEGES OF A PRIVATE FRIENDSHIP.

PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION.

On the completion of another volume of my commentary, I wish again to renew my thanks for the assistance received from previous labourers in the same field. Such obligations must always be great; but it is not easy in a few words to apportion them fairly, and I shall not make the attempt. I have not consciously neglected any aid which might render this volume more complete; but at the same time I venture to hope that my previous commentaries have established my claim to be regarded as an independent worker, and in the present instance more especially I have found myself obliged to diverge widely from the treatment of my predecessors, and to draw largely from other materials than those which they have collected.

In the preface to a previous volume I expressed an intention of appending to my commentary on the Colossian Epistle an essay on 'Christianity and Gnosis.' This intention has not been fulfilled in the letter; but the subject enters largely into the investigation of the Colossian heresy, where it receives as much attention as, at all events for the present, it seems to require. It will necessarily come under discussion again, when the Pastoral Epistles are taken in hand.

The question of the genuineness of the two epistles contained in this volume has been deliberately deferred. It could not be discussed with any advantage apart from the Epistle to the Ephesians, for the three letters are inseparably bound together. Meanwhile however the doctrinal and historical discussions will, if I mistake not, have furnished answers to the main objections which have been urged; while the commentary will have shown how thoroughly natural the language and thoughts are, if conceived as arising out of an immediate emergency. More especially it will have been made apparent that the Epistle to the Colossians hangs together as a whole, and that the phenomena are altogether adverse to any theory of interpolation such as that recently put forward by Professor Holtzmann.

In the commentary, as well as in the introduction, it has been a chief aim to illustrate and develope the theological conception of the Person of Christ, which underlies the Epistle to the Colossians. The Colossian heresy for instance owes its importance mainly to the fact that it throws out this conception into bolder relief. To this portion of the subject therefore I venture to direct special attention.

I cannot conclude without offering my thanks to Mr A. A. VanSittart, who, as on former occasions, has given his aid in correcting the proof sheets of this volume; and to the Rev. J. J. Scott, of Trinity College, who has prepared the index. I wish also to express my obligations to Dr SchillerSzinessy, of whose talmudical learning I have freely availed myself in verifying Frankel's quotations and in other ways. I should add however that he is not in any degree responsible for my conclusions, and has not even seen what I have written.

```
Trinity College,
    April 30, 1875.
```

CONTENTS.

EPISTLE TO THE COLOSSIANS.
INTRODUCTION.
I. The Churches of the Lycus. ..... 1-72
II. The Oolossian Heresy ..... 73-113
III. Character and Contents of the Epistle ..... 114-128
TEXT AND NOTES ..... 131-245
On some Farious Readings in the Epistle ..... 246-256
On the Meaning of $\pi \lambda \dot{\eta} \rho \omega \mu$. ..... 257-273
The Epistle from Laodica ..... 274-300
EPISTLE TO PHILEMON.
INTRODUCTION. ..... 303-329
TEXT AND NOTES ..... 333-346
DISSERTATIONS.

1. The Name Essene ..... 349-354
2. Origin and Affinities of the Essenes ..... 355-396
3. Essemism and Christianity. ..... 397-419 INDEX ..... $421-430$

I.

THE CHURCHES OF THE LYCUS.

LYING in, or overhanging, the valley of the Lycus, a Sitaation tributary of the Mæander, were three neighbouring three towns, Laodicea, Hierapolis, and Colossæ ${ }^{1}$. The river flows, ${ }^{\text {cities. }}$

1 The following are among the most important books of travel relating to this district; Pococke Description of the East and Some Other Countries, Vol. II, Part II, London 1745 ; Chandler Travels in Asia Minor ete., Oxford 1775; Leake Tour in Asia Minot, London 1824 ; Arundell Discoveries in Asia Minor, London 1834; Hamilton Researches in Asia Minor, Pontus, and Armenia, London 1842; Fellows Asia Minor, London 1839, Discoveries in Lycia, London 1840; Davis Anatolica, London 1874 ; Tohihatcheff Asie Mineure, Description Physique, Statistique et Archéologique, Paris 1853 etc., with the accompanying Atlas (1860); Laborde Yoyage de l'Asie Mineure (the expedition itself took place in IS26, but the date on the title-page is 1838 , and the introduction was written in 186I); Le Bas Voyage Archéologique en Grèce. et en Asic Mineure, continued by Waddington 'and not yet completed; Texier Description de l'Asie Mincure, Vol. I (1839). It is hardly necessary to add the smaller works of Texier and Le Bes on Asic Mineure (Peris 1862, 1863) in Didot's series L'Univers, as these have only a secondary value. Of the books enumerated, Hamilton's work is the most importent for the topography, etc.; Tchihateheff's for the physical features; and Le Bas and Waddington's for the inscriptions, etc. The best maps are those of Hamilton and Tehihatcheff: to which should be added the Karte von Klein-Asien by v. Vincke and others, published by Schropp, Berlin 1844 .

Besides books on Asia Minor generally, some works relating especially to the Seven Churches may be mentioned. Smith's Survey of the Seven Churches of Asia ( 1678 ) is a work of great merit for the time, and contains the earliest desgription of the sites of these Phrygian cities. It was published in Latin first, and translated by its author afterwards. Arundell's Seven Churches ( 1828 ) is a well-known book. Allom and Walsh's Constantinople and the Scenery of the Seven Churches of Asia Minor illustrated ( 1850 ) gives some views of this district. Svoboda's Seven Churehes of Asia (1869) contains 20 photographs and an introduction by the Rep. H. B. Tristram. This is a selection from a larger series of Svobodn's photographs, pablished separately:
roughly speaking, from east to west; but at this point, which is some few miles above its junction with the Mæander, its direction is more nearly from south-east to north-west ${ }^{1}$. Laodicea and Hierapolis stand face to face, being situated respectively on the southern and northern sides of the valley, at a distance of six miles ${ }^{2}$, and within sight of each other, the river lying in the open plain between the two. The site of Colossæ is somewhat higher up the stream, at a distance of perhaps ten or twelve miles ${ }^{3}$ from the point where the road between Laodicea and Hierapolis crosses the Lycus. Unlike Laodicea and Hierapolis, which overhang the valley on opposite sides, Colossæ stands immediately on the river-bank, the two parts of the town being divided by the stream. The three cities lie so near to each other, that it would be quite possible to visit them all in the course of a single day.

Their neighbourhood and intercourse.

Physical forces at work.

Thus situated, they would necessarily hold constant intercourse with each other. We are not surprised therefore to find them so closely connected in the earliest ages of Christianity. It was the consequence of their position that they owed their knowledge of the Gospel to the same evangelist, that the same phases of thought prevailed in them, and that they were exposed to the same temptations, moral as well as intellectual.

The physical features of the neighbourhood are very striking. -Two potent forces of nature are actively at work to change the face of the country, the one destroying old landmarks, the other creating fresh ground.

On the one hand, the valley of the Lycus was and is ${ }^{1}$ The maps differ very considerably in this respect, nor do the statements of travellers always agree. The direction of the river, as given in the text, accords with the maps of Hamilton and Tchihatcheff, and with the accounts of the most accurate writers.
a Anton. Itin. p. 337 (Wesseling) gives the distance as 6 miles. See also Fellows Asia Minor p. 283, Hamilton 1. p. 5 54. The relative position of the two cities appears in Laborde's view, pl. xxxix.

${ }^{8}$ I do not find any distinct notice of the distance ; but, to judge from the maps and itineraries of modern travellers, this estimate will probably be found not very far wrong.
especially liable to violent earthquakes. The same danger Frequent indeed extends over large portions of Asia Minor, but this ${ }_{\text {quakes }}^{\text {earth. }}$ district is singled out by ancient writers ${ }^{1}$ (and the testimony of modern travellers confirms the statement ${ }^{2}$ ), as the chief theatre of these catastrophes. Not once or twice only in the history of Laodicea do we read of such visitations laying waste the city itself or some flourishing town in the neighbourhood ${ }^{\text {s }}$. Though the exterior surface of the earth shows no traces of recent volcanoes, still the cavernous nature of the soil and the hot springs and mephitic vapours abounding here indicate the presence of those subterranean fires which from time to time have manifested themselves in this work of destruction.

But, while the crust of the earth is constantly broken up Deposits by these forces from beneath, another agency is actively em- of traverployed above ground in laying a new surface. If fire has its fitful outbursts of devastation, water is only less powerful in its gradual work of reconstruction. The lateral streams which swell the waters of the Lycus are thickly impregnated with calcareous matter, which they deposit in their course. The travertine formations of this valley are among the most remarkable in the world, surpassing even the striking phenomena of Tivoli and Clermont ${ }^{4}$. Ancient monuments are buried, fertile lands overlaid, rivor-beds choked up and streams diverted, fantastic grottoes and cascades and archways of stone formed, by this strange capricious power, at once destructive and creative, working silently and relentlessly through long ages. Fatal to vegetation, these incrustations spread like a stony shroud over the ground. Gleaming like glaciers on the hill-side they attract the eye of the traveller at a distance of twenty miles ${ }^{1}$, and form a singularly striking feature in scenery of more than common beauty and impressiveness.

[^0]of Denizli, which is close to Laodicen, ' The old town was destroyed aboat 25 years past by an earthquake, in which 12,000 people perished.'

3 See below, p. $3^{8 .}$
4 Tchihatchefi P. 1. Geogr. Phys. Comp. p. 344 sq., esp. p. 353. See the references below, pp. 9 sq., 15 .

Produce and manufactures of the district.

At the same time, along with these destructive agencies, the fertility of the district was and is unusually great. Its rich pastures fed large flocks of sheep, whose fleeces were of a superior quality; and the trade in dyed woollen goods was the chief source of prosperity to these towns. For the bounty of nature was not confined to the production of the material, but extended also to the preparation of the fabric. The mineral streams had chemical qualities, which were highly valued by the dyer ${ }^{2}$. Hence we find that all the three towns, with which we are concerned, were famous in this branch of trade. At Hierapolis, as at Thyatira, the guild of the dyers appears in the inscriptions as an important and influential body ${ }^{3}$. Their colours vied in brilliancy with the richest scarlets and purples of the farther East'. Laodicea again was famous for the colour of its fleeces, probably a glossy black, which was much esteemed ${ }^{5}$. Here also we read of a guild of dyers ${ }^{6}$. And lastly, Colossæ gave its name to a peculiar

 $\mu \lambda \lambda a$ etval тоîs éx тîs ко́ккои каl тоís

5 Strabo xii. 8. 16 (p. 578) фєрєє $\delta \circ \delta$

 this strange adjective кораkós (which seems to be derived from кópa $\xi$ and to mean 'raven-black') see the passages in Hase and Dindorf's Steph. Thes. In Latin we find the form coracinus, Vitruv. viii. 3 § 14 'Aliis coracino colore,' Laodicea being mentioned in the context. Vitruvius represents this as the natural colour of the fleeces, and attributes it to the water drunk by the sheep. See also Plin. N. H. viii. 48 §73. So too Hieron. adv. Jovin. it. 21 (II. p. 358) 'Laodiceæ indumentis ornatus incedis.' The ancient accounts of the natural colour of the fleeces in this neighbourhood are partially confirmed by modern travellers; e.g. Pococke p. 74, Chandler p. 228.
${ }^{6}$ Boeckh Corp. Insct. 3938 [方 Zp-
 àovpr[ $\left.{ }^{\circ}\right]$ p.
dye, which seems to have been some shade of purple, and from which it derived a considerable revenue ${ }^{1}$.
I. Of these three towns LaOdicea, as the most important, i. Ladideserves to be considered first. Laodice was a common name its name among the ladies of the royal house of the Seleucidæ, as and hisAntiochus was among the princes. Hence Antiochia and Laodicea occur frequently as the designations of cities within the dominions of the Syrian kings. Laodicea on the Lycus ${ }^{2}$, as it was surnamed to distinguish it from other towns so called, and more especially perhaps from its near neighbour Laodicea Catacecaumene, had borne in succession the names of Diospolis and Rhoas ${ }^{3}$; but when refounded by Antiochus Theos (B.c. 26I-246), it was newly designated after his wife Laodice ${ }^{4}$. It is situated ${ }^{5}$ on an undulating hill, or group of hills, which overhangs the valley on the south, being washed on either side by the streams of the Asopus and the Caprus, tributaries of the Lycus ${ }^{6}$. Behind it rise the snow-capped

[^1]Churches p. 84 sq ., Asia Minor II. p. 180 sq., Fellows Asia Minor 280 sq., Hamilton 1. p. 5 I4 sq., Davis Anatolica p. $9^{2}$ sq., Tchihatoheff P. I. p. 152 sq., 258 sq . See also the piews in Laborde, pl. xxxix, Allom and Walsh in. p. 86, and Svoboda phot. 36-38.

The modern Turkish name is Eskihissar, ' the Old Castle,' corresponding to the modern Greek, Paleokastra, a common name for the sites of ancient cities; Leake p. 25 I. On the ancient site itself there is no town or village; the modern city Deniali is a few miles off.
${ }^{6}$ The position of Laodicea with respect to the neighbouring streams is accurately described by Pliny N. H. v. 29 'Imposita est Lyco flomini, latera affluentibus Asopo et Capro'; see Tohihataheff P. x. p. 258. Strabo xii. (1. c.) is more careless in his description (for it can hardly be, as Tehihatcheff assumes, that he has mistaken one of these two tributaries heights of Cadmus, the lofty mountain barrier which shuts in

Its grow. ing prozperity. the south side of the main valley ${ }^{1}$. A place of no great importance at first, it made rapid strides in the last days of the republic and under the earliest Casars, and bad become, two or three generations before St Paul wrote, a populous and thriving city ${ }^{4}$. Among its famous inhabitants are mentioned the names of some philosophers, sophists, and rhetoricians, men renowned in their day but forgotten or almost forgotten now ${ }^{3}$. More to our purpose, as illustrating the boasted wealth and prosperity of the city, which appeared as a reproach and a stumblingblock in an Apostle's eyes ${ }^{4}$, are the facts, that one of its citizens, Polemo, became a king and a father of kings, and that another, Hiero, having accumulated enormous wealth, bequeathed all his property to the people and adorned the city with costly gifts ${ }^{5}$. To the good fortune of her principal sons, as well as to the fertility of the country around, the geographer Strabo ascribes the increase and prosperity of Laodicea. The ruins of public buildings still bear testimony by their number and magnificence to the past greatness of the city ${ }^{6}$.
for the Lycus itself), évrav̂əa dè кal

 Aadixecav tótos, and where by the jumetion of the stream with the Mxander must be intended the junction of the combined stream of the Lycus and Capras. On the coins of Laodicea (Eckhel mi. p. 166, Mionnet 7v. p. 330 , ib. Suppl. vir. p. $5^{87}, 5^{89}$ ) the Lyous and Caprus appear together, being sometimes represented as a wolf and a wild borr. The Asopus is omitted, either as being $a$ less im. portant stream or as being less capable of symbolical representation. Of modern travellers, Smith (p. 250), and after him Pococke (p. 72), have correctly described the position of the streams. Chandler (p. 227), misled by Strabo, mistakes the Caprus for the тoù Eữátopos. Strabo flourished in the time of Augustas and the earlier years of Tiberius. The growing im. portance of Laodicea dates from before the age of Cicero: see p. 7 .

Lycus and the Lycus for the Mrander. The modern name of the Lycas is Tehoruk Su.
${ }^{1}$ The modern name of Cadmus is Baba-Dagh, 'The father of mountains.'
${ }^{2}$ Strabo xii. 1. c. मं $\delta$ è $\Lambda a o \delta t \kappa \epsilon i \alpha$

${ }^{3}$ Strabo l. c.; Diog. Laert. ix. if § ro6, 12 § ri6; Philostr. Wit. Soph.
i. 25; Eckhel Doctr. Num. Vet. ril. p. $162,163 \mathrm{sq}$.
${ }^{4}$ Rev. iii. 17 ; see below p. 43.
${ }^{5}$ Strabo l. c. On this family see Ephemeris Epigraphica I. p. 270 sq.

* The ruins of Laodicea have formed

Not less important, as throwing light on the Apostolic Its politihistory, is the political status of Laodicea. Asia Minor as the cank, under the Romans was divided into districts, each compris- capital of a conventus. ing several towns and having its chief city, in which the courts were held from time to time by the proconsul or legate of the province, and where the taxes from the subordinate towns were collected ${ }^{1}$. Each of these political aggregates was styled in Latin conventus, in Greek סıoiknousa term afterwards borrowed by the Christian Church, being applied to a similar ecclesiastical aggregate, and thus naturalised in the languages of Christendom as diocese. At the. head of the most important of these political dioceses, the 'Cibyratic convention' or 'jurisdiction,' as it was called, comprising not less than twenty-five towns, stood Laodicea ${ }^{2}$. Here in times past Cicero, as proconsul of Cilicia, had held his court ${ }^{3}$; bither at stated seasons flocked suitors, advothe quasry out of which the modern town of Denizli is built. Yet notwith. standing these depredations they are still very extensive, comprising an amphitheatre, two or three thentres, an aqueduct, ete. The amphitheatre was built by the munificence of a citizen of Laodicea only a few years after St Paul wrote, as the inseription testifies; Boeckh C. I. no. 3935. See especially Hamilton 1. p. 515 sq., who describes these ruins as 'bearing the stamp of Roman extravagance and Iusury, rather than of the stern and massive solidity of the Greeks.'
${ }^{1}$ See Becker and Marquardt Rön. Alterth. iII. I. p. 136 sq .
${ }^{2}$ Seo Cic. ad Att. v. 2r, 'Idibus Februariis ... forum institueram agere Laodicem Cibyraticum,' with the references in the next note: comp. also Plin. N. II. จ. 29 'Uns (jurisdictio) appellatur Cibyratica. Ipsum (i, e. Cibyra) oppidum Phrygim est. Conveniunt eo xxv civitates, celeberrima urbe Laodicea.'

Besides these passages, testimony is borne to the importance of the Cibyratic 'conventus' by Strabo, xiii. 4

 It will be remembered also that Horace singles out the Cibyratica negotia (Epist. i. 6. 33) to represent Oriental traide generally. The importance of Laodicea may be inferred from the fact that, though the union was named after Cibyra, its head-quarters were from the first fixed at or soon afterwerds transferred to Laodicea.
${ }^{\text {s }}$ See ad Fam. ii. 57, iii. 5, 7, 8, ix. 25 , xiii. 54 , 67 , xv. 4 ; ad Att.v. 16, 17, 20, 21, vi. 1, 2, 3, 7. He visited Laodicea on several occasions, sometimes making a long stay there, and not a fer of his letters are written thence. See especially his account of his work there, ad Att. vi. 2, 'Hoc foro quod egi ex Idibus Februariia I anodiceas ad Kalendas Mains omninm dioecesium, prater Cilieim, mirabilia quædam efficimus; ita multm civitates, cates, clerks, sheriffs'-officers, tax-collectors, pleasure-seekers, courtiers-all those crowds whom business or leisure or policy or curiosity would draw together from a wealthy and populous district, when the representative of the laws and the majesty of Rome appeared to receive homage and to hold his assize ${ }^{1}$. To this position as the chief city of the Cibyratic union the inscriptions probably refer, when they style Laodicea the 'metropolis".' And in its metropolitan rank we see an explanation of the fact, that to Laodicea, as to the centre of a Christian diocese also, whence their letters would readily be circulated among the neighbouring brotherhoods, two Apostles addressed themselves in succession, the one writing from his captivity in Rome ${ }^{3}$, the other from his exile at Patmos ${ }^{4}$.

Its religious worship.

On the religious worship of Laodicea very little special information exists. Its tutelary deity was Zeus, whose guardianship had been recognised in Diospolis, the older name of the city, and who, having (according to the legend) commanded its rebuilding, was commemorated on its coins with the surname Laodicenus ${ }^{5}$. Occasionally he is also called Aseis, a title which perhaps reproduces a Syrian epithet of this deity, 'the mighty.' If this interpretation be correct, we have a link of connexion between Laodicea and the religions of the farther East-a connexion far from improbable, considering that Laodicea was etc.' Altogether Laodicea seems to have been second in importance to none of the cities in his province, except perhaps Tarsus. See also the notice, in Verr. Act. ii. 1. c. 30.
${ }^{1}$ The description which Dion Chrysostom gives in his enlogy of Celænæ (Apamea Cibotus), the metropolis of a neighbouring 'dioececis,' enables us to realise the concourse which gathered together on these occasions: Orat.

*On this word see Becker and Marquardt l. c. p. 138 sq. It had lost its original sense, as the mother city of a colony. Lsodicea is styled 'metropolis' on the coins, Mionnet IV. p. $3^{2 I}$.
${ }^{8}$ Col. iv. 16 with the notes. See also below p. 37, and the introduction to the Epistle to the Ephesians.
${ }^{4}$ Rev. iii. 14.
${ }^{6}$ See Eckhel III. p. 159 sq. (passim), Mionnet Iv. p. 315 Eq., ib. Suppl. vn. p. 578 sq . (passim). In the coins commemorating an alliance with some other city Laodicea is represented by Zeus; e. g. Mionnet IV. pp. 320, 324 , 33r sq., Suppl. viI. pp. 586, $5^{89}$.
refounded by a Syrian king and is not unlikely to have adopted some features of Syrian worship ${ }^{1}$.
2. On the north of the valley, opposite to the sloping 2. Hierahills which mark the site of Laodicea, is a broad level terrace pours. jutting out from the mountain side and overhanging the plain ${ }^{\text {tion. }}$ with almost precipitous sides. On this plateau are scattered the vast ruins of Hierapolis ${ }^{2}$. The mountains upon which it abuts occupy the wedge of ground between the Mæander and the Lycus; but, as the Mæander above its junction with the Lycus passes through a narrow ravine, they blend,

1 aceic or aceic $\lambda$ dodikecon. See Waddington Voyage en Asie Mineure au point de vue Numismatique (Paris 1853) pp. $25,26 \mathrm{sq}$. Mr Waddington adopts a suggestion communicated to him by M. de Longpérier that this word represents the Aramaic Niriv 'the strong, mighty,' which appears also in the Arabic 'Aziz.' This view gains some confirmation from the fact, not mentioned by Mr Waddington, that "Acjos was an epithet of the Ares of Edessa: Jvlian Orat. iv; comp. Cureton Spic. Syr. p. 80, and see Lagarde Gesamm. Abhandl.p.16. On the other hand this Shemitic word elsewhere, when adopted into Greek or Latin, is written"Ascjosor Azizus: see Garrucci in the Archcologia xuin. p. 45 'Tyrio Septimio Azizo,' and Boeckh Corp. Inser.
 perier offers the alternative that $\triangle C \in I C$, i. e. 'A $\sigma$ ls, is equivalent to 'A An objection to this view, stronger than those arged by Mr Waddington, is the fact that 'A $\sigma$ is seems only to be used as a feminine adjective. M. Renan points to the fact that this zeyc aceic is represented with his hand on the horns of a goat, and on the strength of this coincidence would identify him with 'the Azazel of the Semites' (Saint Paul, p. 359), though tradition and orthography alike point to some other derivation of Azazel (b゙NTM).
${ }^{2}$ For descriptions of Fierapolia, see Smith p. 245 sq., Pococke p. 75 sq., Chandler 229 sq ., Arundell Seven Churches p. 79 sq., Hamilton p. 517 eq., Fellows Asia Miner p. 283 sq. For the travertine deposits see especially the description and plates in Tchihatcheff P. 1. p. 345 , together with the views in Laborde (pl. xsxiixxxviii), and Svoboda (photagr. 41 -47). Tchihatcheff repeatedly calls the place Hieropolis; but this form, though commonly used of other towns Num. Hell. p. 67), appears not to occur as a designation of the Phrygian city, which seems always to be written Hierapolis. The citizens however are somotimes called 'Ieponotiras on the coins.

The modern name is given differently by travellers. It is generally called Pambouk-Kalessi, i.e. 'cotton-castle,' supposed to allude to the appearance of the petrifactions, though cotton is grown in the neighbourhood (Eamilton 1. p. 5 17). So Smith, Pococke, Chandler, Arundell, Tchihatcheff, Waddington, and others. M. Renan says 'Tambouk, et non Pambouk, Kalessi' (S. Paul p. 357). Laborde gives the word Tambouk in some places and Pambouk in others; and Leake says 'Hierapolis, now called Tabaik-Eale or Pambuk-Kale' (p. 252).
when seen from a distance, with the loftier range of the Mesogis which overhangs the right bank of the Mæander almost from its source to its embouchure, and form with it the northern barrier to the view, as the Cadmus range does the southern, the broad valley stretching between. Thus Hierapolis may be said to lie over against Mesogis, as Laodicea lies over against Cadmus ${ }^{1}$.

Remarkable physical features.

Their relation to the Apostolic his. tory.

It is at Hierapolis that the remarkable physical features which distinguish the valley of the Lycus display themselves in the fullest perfection. Over the steep cliffs which support the plateau of the city, tumble cascades of pure white stone, the deposit of calcareous matter from the streams which, after traversing this upper level, are precipitated over the ledge into the plain beneath and assume the most fantastic shapes in their descent. At one time overhanging in cornices fringed with stalactites, at another hollowed out into basins or broken up with ridges, they mark the site of the city at a distance, glistening on the mountain-side like foaming cataracts frozen in the fall.

But for the immediate history of St Paul's Epistles the striking beauty of the scenery has no value. It is not probable that he had visited this district when the letters to the Colossians and Laodiceans were written. Were it otherwise, we can hardly suppose that, educated under widely different influences and occupied with deeper and more absorb-
${ }^{1}$ Strabo xiii. 4. 14 (p. 629) says

 Aacoicelas 'Iepd̀ тó入ıs, к.т. त. He cannot mean that Hierapolis was situated immediately in or by the Mesogis (for the name does not seem ever to be applied to the mountains between the Lycus and Mrander), but that with respect to Laodicea it stood over against the Mesogis, as I have explained it in the text. The view in Laborde (pl. xxxix) ahows the appearsnce of Hierapolis from Laodicea. Strabo had himself visited the place and must have known how it was situnted. Some modern travellers however (e.g. Chandler and Arnadell) speak of the platean of Hierapolis as part of the Mosogis. Steiger (Kolosser p. 33) gets over the difficulty by translating Strabo's words, 'near the Mesogis but on the opposite side (i.e. of the Mrander) is the Laodicean Hierapolis' (to distinguish it from others of the name); but кatavtckpi cannot be separated from $\Lambda$ aodiselas without violence.
ing thoughts, he would have shared the enthusiasm which this scenery inspires in the modern traveller. Still it will give a reality to our conceptions, if we try to picture to ourselves the external features of that city, which was destined before long to become the adopted home of Apostles and other personal disciples of the Lord, and to play a conspicuous partsecond perhiaps only to Ephesus-in the history of the Church during the ages immediately succeeding the Apostles.

Like Laodicea, Hierapolis was at this time an important Hierapolis and a growing city, though not like Laodicea holding metro- $\begin{gathered}\text { a famous } \\ \text { watering }\end{gathered}$ politan rank ${ }^{1}$. Besides the trade in dyed wools, which it place. shared in common with the neighbouring towns, it had another source of wealth and prosperity peculiar to itself. The streams, to which the scenery owes the remarkable features already described, are endowed with valuable medicinal qualities, while at the same time they are so copious that the ancient city is described as full of self-made baths ${ }^{2}$. An inscription, still legible among the ruins, celebrates their virtues in heroic verse, thus apostrophizing the city:

> Hail, fairest soil in all broad Asia's realm;
> Hail, golden city, nymph divine, bedeck'd
> With flowing rills, thy jewels ${ }^{3}$.

Coins of Hierapolis too are extant of various types, on which Esculapius and Hygeia appear either singly or together ${ }^{4}$. To this fashionable watering-place, thus favoured by nature, seekers of pleasure and seekers of bealth alike were drawn.

To the ancient magnificence of Hierapolis its extant ruins The mag. bear ample testimony. More favoured than Laodicea it has nificence bear ample testimony. More favoured than Laodicea, it has of its not in its immediate neighbourhood any modern town or ruins. village of importance, whose inhabitants have been tempted to quarry materials for their houses out of the memorials of [^2]its former greatness. Hence the whole plateau is covered with ruins, of which the extent and the good taste are oqually remarkable; and of these the palæstra and the thermæ, as might be expected, are among the more prominent.

Its religious worship.

The Plutonium.

A city, which combined the pursuit of health and of gaiety, had fitly chosen as its patron deity Apollo, the god alike of medicine and of festivity, here worshipped especially as 'Archegetes,' the Founder '. But more important, as illustrating the religious temper of this Phrygian city, is another fact connected with it. In Hierapolis was a spot called the Plutonium, a hot well or spring, from whose narrow mouth issued a mephitic vapour immediately fatal to those who stood over the opening and inbaled its fumes. To the mutilated priests of Cybele alone (so it was believed) an immunity was given from heaven, which freed them from its deadly effects ${ }^{2}$. Indeed this city appears to have been a chief centre of the passionate mystical devotion of ancient Phrygia. But indications are not wanting, that in addition to this older worship religious rites were borrowed also from other parts
> ${ }^{1}$ Boeokh Corp. Incr. 3905, 3906; Mionnet rr.pp. 297, 301, 307, ib. Sappl. vir. p. 568,569,570. In coins struck to commemorate alliances with other cities, Hierapolis is represented by Apollo Archegetes: Mionnet iv. p. 303, ib. Suppl. vir. 572, 573, 574; Waddington Voyage etc. p. 25 ; and see Eckhel III. p. 156 . On the meaning of Archegetes, under which name Apollo was worshipped by other cities also, which regarded him as their founder, see Spanheim on Callim. Hymn. Apoll. 57.

${ }^{2}$ Strabo l. c. He himself had seen the phenomenon and was doubtful how to account for the immunity of these tois tiol duvduєal tabtov cuppalyontos. See also Plin. N. H. ii. 93 § $95^{\text {'lo- }}$ cum...matris tantum magno sacerdoti innozinma.' Dion Cass. (Xiphil, )lxvii.

2 7 , who also witnessed thephenomenon, adds oú $\mu \dot{\eta} \nu$ каil $\tau \grave{\eta} \nu$ aitlà aúroû $\sigma u v \nu o \hat{\eta}-$ xxiii. 6. is also mentions this marvel, but speaks cantiously, 'ut asseront quidam,' and adds 'quod qua. causa eveniat, rationibus physicis permittatur.' Comp. Anthol. vir. p. 190

 $\boldsymbol{\pi} \epsilon \epsilon \tau \omega$; Stobæus Ecl. i. 34, p. 680. Laborde states (p. 83) that he discovered by experiment that the waters are sometimes fatel to animal life and sometimes perfectly harmless; and if this be substantiated, we have a solution of the marvel. Other modern travellers, who have visited the Plutonium, are Cockerell (Leake p. 342), and Svoboda. In Svoboda's work a ehemical analysis of the waters is givea.
of the East, more especially from Egypt ${ }^{1}$. By the multitude of her temples Hierapolis established her right to the title of the 'sacred city,' which she bore'.

Though at this time we have no record of famous citizens The birthat Hierapolis, such as graced the annals of Laodicea, yet a gene- $\frac{\text { place of }}{\text { Epictetus. }}$ ration or two later she numbered among her sons one nobler far than the rhetoricians and sophists, the millionaires and princes, of whom her neighbour could boast. The lame slave Epictetus, the loftiest of heathen moralists, must have been growing up to manhood when the first rumours of the Gospel reached his native city. Did any chance throw him across the path of Epaphras, who first announced the glad-tidings there? Did be ever meet the great Apostle himself, while Epictetas dragging out his long captivity at Rome, or when after his and Chrisrelease he paid his long-promised visit to the valley of the Lycus? We should be glad to think that these two men met together face to face-the greatest of Christian, and the greatest of heathen preachers. Such a meeting would solve more than one riddle. A Christian Epictetus certainly was not: his Stoic doctrine and his Stoic morality are alike apparent; but nevertheless his language presents some strange coincidences with the Apostolic writings, which would thus receive an explanation ${ }^{3}$. It must be confessed however, that of any outward intercourse between the Apostle and the philosopher history furnishes no hint.
3. While the sites of Laodicea and Hierapolis are con- 3. Colosspicuous, so that they were early identified by their ruins, pifificulty the same is not the case with Colosses. Only within the of deterpresent generation has the position of this once famous city site. been ascertained, and even now it lacks the confirmation of any
${ }^{1}$ On a coin of Hierapolis, Plato-Serapis appears seated, while before him stands Isis with a sistrum in her hand; Waddington Voyage etc. p. 24 - See also Mionnet rv. pp. 296, 305 ;
Leake Num. Hell. p. 66.
The worship of Serapis appears elsewhere in this neighbourhood. At Chonx (Colosse) is an inscription recording a vow to this deity; Le Bes Asie Mineure inser. 1693 b .
${ }^{2}$ Steph. Byz. s. v. ánd tov̂ lepà $\pi 0 \lambda$ -入̀. $\varepsilon_{\chi \in \epsilon \nu}$
${ }^{3}$ See Philippians, pp. 312, 313.
inscription found in situ and giving the name ${ }^{1}$. Herodotus

Subterra-neanchannel of the Lycus. states that in Colossæ the river Lycus disappears in a subterranean cave, emerging again at a distance of about five stades ${ }^{2}$; and this very singular landmark-the underground passage of a stream for half a mile-might be thought to have placed the site of the city beyond the reach of controversy. But this is not the case. In the immediate neighbourhood of the only ruins which can possibly be identified with Colossæ, no such subterranean channel has been discovered. But on the other hand the appearance of the river at this point suggests that at one time the narrow gorge through which it runs, as it traverses the ruins, was overarched for some distance with incrustations of travertine, and that this natural bridge was broken up afterwards by an earthquake, so as to expose the channel of the stream ${ }^{3}$. This explanation seems satisfactory. If it be és $\tau \dot{\delta} \boldsymbol{y}$ Malaudoov.

I See however a mutilated inscription (Boeckh Corp. Inscr. 3956) with the letters... HNWN, found near Chonm.

3 This is the explanation of Hamilton (I. p. 509 sq .), who (with the donbtful exception of Laborde) has the merit of having first identifed and described the site of Colossre. It stands on the Tchornk Sú (Lyeus) at the point where it is joincd by two other streams, the Bounar Bashi Su and the Ak-Sú. In confirmation of his opinion, Hamilton found a tradition in the neighbourhood that the river had once been covered over at this spot (p. 522). Hefollowed the course of the Lycus for some distance without finding any subterranean channel (p. 52 I sq.).

It is difficult to say whether the following account in Strabo xii. 8 § 16 (p. 578) refers to the Lycas or not;

 may not $\sigma v e \dot{\pi} \epsilon \sigma \epsilon \nu$ imply that this remarkable feature had changed before Strabo wrote?
Laborde (p. 103), who visited the place before Hamilton, though his account was apparently not pablished till later, fixes on the same site for Colossa, but thinks that he has discovered the subterranean course of the Lycus, to whichHerodotus refers, much higher up a stream, close to its source ('à dix pas de cette source'), which he describes as 'a deux lienes au nord de Colossæ.' Yet in the same paragraph he says 'Or il [Hérodote, exact cicerone] savait que le Lycus disparait pres de Colossa, ville considerable de la Phrygie' (the itatics are his own). He apparently does not see the vest difference between his près $d c$ Colosse thus widely interpreted and rejocted, we must look for the underground channel, not within the city itself, as the words of Herodotus strictly interpreted require, but at some point higher up the stream. In either case there can be little doubt that these are the ruins of Colosse. The fact mentioned by Pliny ${ }^{1}$, that there is in this Petrifying city a river which turns brick into stone, is satisfied by a side stream flowing into the Lycus from the north, and laying large deposits of calcareous matter; though in this region, as we have seen, such a phenomenon is very far from rare. The site of Colossæ then, as determined by these considerations, lies two or three miles north of the present town of Chonos, the nediæval Chonæ, and some twelve miles east of Laodicea. The Lycus traverses the site of the ruins, dividing the city into two parts, the necropolis standing on the right or northern bank, and the town itself on the left.

Commanding the approaches to a pass in the Cadmus range, Its ancient and standing on a great high-way communicating between greatness Eastern and Western Asia, Colossm at an early date appears as a very important place. Here the mighty host of Xerxes halted on its march against Greece; it is mentioned on this occasion as 'a great city of Phrygia'.' Here too Cyrus remained seven days on his daring enterprise which terminated so fatally; the Greek captain, who records the expedition, speaks of it as 'a populous city, prosperous and great'.' But after this time its glory seems to wane. The political supremacy the precise $e^{\prime} \nu \tau \hat{\eta}$ of Herodotus himself, Obviously no great reliance can be placed on the accuracy of a writer, who treats his authorities thus. The subterranean stream which Laborde saw, and of which he gives a view ( pl . xl), may possibly be the phenomenon to which Herodotus alludes; hat if so, Herodotus has expressed himsell very carelessly. On the whole Hamilton's solution seems much more probable. See however Anatotica Y . 117 sq. Arundell's account (Seven Churches p. 98 sq., Asia Minor p. 160 sq.) is very confused and it is not clear whether he has fired on the right site for Colosse; but it bears testimony to the existence of two subterranean courses of rivers, though neither of them is close enough to the city to satisfy Herodotus' description.
${ }^{1}$ Plin. N. H. xxxi. 2 § 20. This is the Ak-Sa, which has strougly petrify. ing qualities.
${ }^{2}$ Herod. vii. зo. See P. 14, note 2.

and later of Laodicea and the growing popularity of Hierapolis gradu-decline. ally drain its strength; and Strabo, writing about two generations before St Paul, describes it as a 'small town' in the district of which Laodicea was the capital. We shall therefore be prepared to find that, while Laodicea and Hierapolis both hold important places in the early records of the Church, Colosse disappears wholly from the pages of history. Its comparative insignificance is still attested by its ruins, which are few and meagre ${ }^{2}$, while the vast remains of temples, batbs, theatres, aqueducts, gymnasia, and sepulchres, strewing the extensive sites of its more fortunate neighbours, still bear witness to their ancient prosperity and magnificence. It is not even mentioned by Ptolemy, though his enumeration of towns includes several inconsiderable places ${ }^{3}$. Without doubt Colosse was the least important church to which any epistle of St Paul was addressed.
Uncertain And perhaps also we may regard the variation in the orthography of the name. orthography of the name as another indication of its comparative obscurity and its early extinction. Are we to write Colossa or Colasse? So far as the evidence goes, the conclusion would seem to be that, while Colossa alone occurs during the classical period and in St Paul's time, it was afterwards supplanted by Colasse, when the town itself had either disappeared altogether or was already passing out of notice ${ }^{4}$.
${ }^{1} \pi \dot{o} \lambda \iota \sigma \mu \alpha$, Strabo xii. 8. 13 (p. 576 ).
Plin. N. H. v. 32.84 I writes 'Plirygia
...oppida ibi celeberrima prater jam diota, Ancyra, Andria, Celænæ, Colossæ,' ettc. The commentatore, referring to this peissage, overlook the words
'prater jam dicta,' and represent Pliny as calling Colossw 'oppidum celeberrimum. Not unnatrally they find it difficult to reconcile this expression with Strabo's statement. But in fact Pliny has already exhansted all the considerable towns, Hierapolis, Laodicea, Apamer, etc., and even much less important places than these (see

จ. 28, 29 § 29), so that only decayed and third-rate towns remain. The Ancjra here mentioned is not the capital of Galatia, but a much smaller Phrygian town.
${ }^{2}$ Laborde p. 102 (De cette grande célébrité de Colossw il ne reste presque Fien: ce sont des substructions sans suite, des fragments sans grandeur; les restes d'un thêtre de médioore dimension, une acropole sans hardiesse,' etc.; comp. Anatolica p. 115.
${ }^{3}$ Geogr. 7.2.
${ }^{4}$ All Greek writers till some centuries after the Christian era write it

Considered ethnologically，these three cities are generally Ethnologi－ regarded as belonging to Phrygia．But as they are situated cal relas of on the western border of Phrygia，and as the frontier line the three separating Phrygia from Lydia and Caria was not distinctly

Kohoraal：so Herod．vii．3o，Xen． Anab．i．2．6，Strabo xii．8．13，Diod． xiv．80，Polyøn．Strat．vii 16．I； thongh in one or more mss of some of these authors it is written Koda．$\sigma \sigma \alpha i$ ， showing the teadency of later scribes． Colosse is also the universal form in Latin writers．The coins moreover，even as late as the reign of Gordian（A．D． 238 －244）when they ceased to be struck， universally have кодоcchnos（or кo－入OchNOI）；Mionnet iv．p． 257 sq．： see Babington Numismatic Chronicle New series ini．p． 1 kq．，6．In Hie－ rocles（Synecd．p．666，Wessel．）and in the Apostolic Constitutions（vii．46） Koגa，oal seems to be the original read－ ing of the text，and in later Byzan－ tine writers this form is common．If Prof．Babington（p．3）were right in supposing that it is connected with кalooras，the question of the correct spelling might be regarded as settled； but in a Phrygian city over which so many Eastern nations swept in suc－ cession，who shall say to what lan－ guage the name belonged，or what are its affinities？
Thius，judging from classical usage， we should say that Konooval was the old form and that Kodararal did not supplant it till some time after St Paul＇s age．This view is confirmed by a review of the authorities for the different readings in the New Testa－ ment．
In the opening of the epistle（i．i） the authorities for in Kohoorais are overwhelming．It is read by NBDFGL （ $A$ is obliterated here and $C$ is want－ ing）；and in the Old Latin，Vulgate， and Armenian Versions．On the other
 37．47，and among the versions by the Memphitic and the Philoxenian Syriac （مهم gives ко入ccaic）．In the Peshito also the present reading represents Ko $\lambda a \sigma$－ oais，but as the vowel was not express－ ed originally and depends on the later pointing，its authority can hardly be quoted．The Thebsic is wanting here．
In the heading of the epistle how－ ever there is considerably more au－ thority for the form in a．Koda $\sigma \sigma a \in s$ is the reading of $A B^{*} K P \cdot 37$（ $\mathrm{Ko} \mathrm{\lambda a-}$ oacts）．47． C is wanting here，but has Konagनaes in the subscription．On the other hand Ko入ogбacts（or Kodog－ $\sigma a t s$ ）appears in $\mathbb{N B}^{1}$（according to Tregelles，but B ${ }^{3}$ Tisch．；see his introd． p．xxxxviii）DFG（but G has left Ko－ خa $\sigma \sigma a c t s$ in the heading of one page， and Koגaogacis in another）L． 17 （Ko－入aoracts），in the Latin Version，and in the margin of the Philoxenian Syrinc． The readings of both Peshito and Philoxenian（text）here depend on the vocalisation；and those of other ver－ sions are not recorded．In the sub－ scription the preponderance of aut－ thority is even more favourable to Kodaббаєاs． Taking into account the obvious tendency which there would $b e$ in scribes to make the title $\pi \rho$ òs Ko ${ }_{0} 0 \sigma-$

 oais，as shown in G，we seem to arrive at the conclusion that，while eq Kohooraîs was indisputably the originad reading in the opening，rpds Ko入a $\sigma$－ oaeis was probably the earlier reading in the title．If so，the title must have traced, this designation is not persistent ${ }^{1}$. Thus Laodicea is sometimes assigned to Caria, more rarêly to Lydia ${ }^{2}$; and again, Hierapolis is described as half Lydian, half Phrygian ${ }^{3}$. On the other hand I have not observed that Colossa is ever regarded as other than Phrygian ${ }^{\text {a }}$, partly perhaps because the notices relating to it belong to an earlier date when these several names denoted political as well as ethnological divisions, and their limits were definitely marked in consequence, but chiefly because it lies some miles to the east of the other cities, and therefore farther from the doubtful border land.

Their political relations.

Phrygia however ceased to have any political significance, when this country came under the dominion of the Romans. Politically speaking, the three cities with the rest of the been added at a somewhat lafer date; which is not improbable.

Connected with this question is the variation in the adjéctival form, - $\eta \nu$ bs or -aeis. Parallels to this double termination occur in other words; e. g.

 $\nu \delta s, \Sigma \Sigma^{2} \gamma^{2} \lambda a \sigma \sigma \epsilon$ és, etc. The coins, while they universally exhibit the form in o, are equally persistent in the termination - $\eta \mathrm{p}$ bs, KO curious that to the form Kolocaquot in Strabo xii. 8 § 16 (p. 578 ) there is a various reading Koda $\sigma \sigma a \in$ îs. Thus, though there is no necessary connexion between the two, the termination -mpss seems to go with the oform, and the termination -aefs with the a form.

For the above reasons I have written confidently $\epsilon_{\nu}$ Kolooraîs in the text, and with more hesitation $\pi \rho \rho \delta \mathrm{K} 0 \lambda a \sigma$ oaeis in the superscription.
${ }^{1}$ Strabo, xiii, 4. 12 (p. 628) Tà $\delta$, фû̀a ôte入eîp aúraús к.т.入.

${ }^{2}$ To Phrygia, Strabo xii. 8. 13 (p. 576), Polyb. v. 57, and вo generally; to Caria, Orac. Sibyll. iii. $47^{2} \mathrm{~K} a \rho \omega \bar{v}$ ä $\gamma \lambda a \dot{o} \mathrm{y}$ aiatv, Ptol. v. 2, Philostr. Vit. Soph. i. 25 (though in the context Philostratus adds that at one time $\tau \hat{\eta}$ Фpryia $\left.{ }_{\xi} \nu \nu \epsilon \tau d \tau \tau \epsilon \tau 0\right)$; to Lydia, Steph. Byz. s. v. On the coins the city is sometimes represented as seated between two female figures QPYГIa and $^{2}$ Kapia; Eechel III. p. 160, comp. Mionnet iv. p. 329. From its situation on the confines of the three countries Laodicea seems to have obtained the surname Trimitaria or Trimetaria, by which it is sometimes designated in later times: see below, p. 65, note 4, and comp. Wesseling, Itin. p. 665.
 rlas kal Aublas mólis. But generally Hierapolis is assigned to Phrygia : e.g. Ptol, v. 2, Vitruv. viii. 3 § io.
${ }^{4}$ Colossex is assigned to Phrygin in Herod. vii. 30 , Xen. Anab. i. 2. 6, Strabo xii. 8. 13, Diod. xit. 80, Plin. N. H. ₹. 32 § 4 I , Polyæn. Strat. vii. 16. 1.

Cibyratic union belonged at this time to Asia, the proconsular province ${ }^{1}$. As an Asiatic Church accordingly Laodicea is addressed in the Apocalyptic letter. To this province they had been assigned in the first instance ; then they were handed over to Cilicia ${ }^{2}$; afterwards they were transferred and retransferred from the one to the other; till finally, before the Christian era, they became a permanent part of Asia, their original province. Here they remained, until the close of the fourth century, when a new distribution of the Roman empire was made, and the province of Phrygia Pacatiana created with Laodicea as its capital ${ }^{3}$.

The Epistle to the Colossians supposes a powerful Jewish colony in Laodicea and the neighbourhood. We are not however left to draw this inference from the epistle alone, but the fact is established by ample independent testimony. When, hood. with the insolent licence characteristic of Oriental kings, Antiochus the Great transplanted two thousand Jewish families from Babylonia and Mesopotamia into Lydia and Phrygia ${ }^{4}$, we can hardly doubt that among the principal stations of these new colonists would be the two most thriving cities of Phrygia, which were also the two most important settlements of the Syrian kings, Apamea and Laodicea, the one founded by his grandfather Antiochus the First, the other by his father Antiochus the Second. If the commercial importance of Apamea at this time was greater (for somewhat later it was reckoned second only to Ephesus among the cities of Asia Minor

[^3]as a centre of trade), the political rank of Laodicea stood higher ${ }^{1}$. When mention is made of Lydia and Phrygia ${ }^{2}$, this latter city especially is pointed out by its position, for it stood near the frontier of the two countries. A Jewish settlement once established, the influx of their fellow-countrymen would be rapid and continuous. Accordingly under the Roman domination we find them gathered here in very large numbers.

Confiscations of Haccus. When Flaccus the propretor of Asia (B.c. 62), who was afterwards accused of maladministration in his province and defended by Cicero, forbade the contributions of the Jews to the templeworship and the consequent exportation of money to Palestine, he seized as contraband not less than twenty pounds weight in gold in the single district of which Laodicea was the capital ${ }^{3}$. Calculated at the rate of a half-shekel for each man, this sum represents a population of more than eleven thousand adult freemen ${ }^{4}$ : for women, children, and slaves were exempted. It must be remembered however, that this is only the sum which

Abstract

${ }^{1}$ Strabo xii. 8. 13 (p. 576) eita   Фpvyiad $\pi b \lambda \epsilon \omega \nu$. Below § 15 (p. 577)    portance of Apamea and Laodicea two or three generations earlier than St Paul may be inferred from the notices in Cisero; bat there is reason for thinking that Laodicea afterwards grew more rapidly than Apamea. ${ }^{2}$ In Josephus L c. the words are $\boldsymbol{\tau}$ à кarà $\tau \grave{\eta} \nu$ Ф $^{\prime}$ names being under the vinculum of the one article: while immediately afterwards Iydia is dropped and Phrygia alone named, $\pi \in \mu \psi a t$ rtods ... eis $\Phi_{\rho v \gamma i a v .}$ ${ }^{3}$ Cic. pro Flacc. 28 'Sequitar auri illa invidia Judaici...Quum aurum Judeeorum nomine quotannis ex Italia et ex omnibus provinciis Hierosolyma exportari soleret, Flaccus sanzit edicto ne ex Asia exportari liceret...multitu. dinem Judæorum, flagrantem nonnumquam in concionibus, pro republica contemnere gravitatis summo fuit...Apameæ manifesto comprehensum ante pedes pretoris in foro expensum est auri pondo centum paullo minus...Laodicem viginti pondo paullo amplius.'

Joscphus (Antiq. xiv. 7. 2), quoting the words of Strabo, $\pi \epsilon \mu \psi a s \quad \delta \in \mathrm{M} \epsilon \theta \rho \mathrm{c}-$ dктакó $\iota a$ тä入apтa, explains this enormous sum as composed of the temple. offerings of the Jews which they sent to Cos for safety out of the way of Mithridates.
${ }^{4}$ This calcalation supposes (I) That the half-akekel weighs inogr:; (2) That the Roman pound is 5050 gr : (3) That the relation of gold to silver was at this time as $12: \mathrm{r}$. This last estimate is possibly somewhat too high.
the Roman officers succeeded in detecting and confiscating; and that therefore the whole Jewish population would probably be much larger than this partial estimate implies. The amount seized at Apamea, the other great Phrygian centre, was five times as large as this ${ }^{1}$. Somewhat later we have a other document purporting to be a decree of the Laodiceans, in which evidence. they thank the Roman Consul for a measure granting to Jews the liberty of observing their sabbaths and practising other rites of their religion ${ }^{2}$; and though this decree is probably spurious, yet it serves equally well to show that at this time Laodicea was regarded as an important centre of the dispersion in Asia Minor. To the same effect may be quoted the extravagant hyperbole in the Talmud, that when on a certain occasion an insurrection of the Jews broke out in Cæsarea the metropolis of Cappadocia, which brought down upon their heads the cruel vengeance of king Sapor and led to a massacre of 12,000 , 'the wall of Laodicea was cloven with the sound of the harpstrings' in the fatal and premature merriment of the insurgents ${ }^{8}$. This place was doubtless singled > ${ }^{1}$ The coinnge of Apamea affords a striking example of Judaic influence at a later date. On coins struck at this place in the reigns of Severus, Maorinus, and the elder Philip, an ark is represented floating. on the waters. Within are a man and a woman: on the roof a bird is perched; while in the air another bird approaches bearing an olive-branch in its claws. The ark bears the inscription NWE. Outside are two standing figures, a man and a woman (apparently the same two who have been represented within the ark), with their hands raised as in the attitude of prayer. The connexion of the ark of Nouh with Apamea is explained by a passage in one of the Sibylline Oracles (i. 26I sq.), where the moantain overhanging Apamea is identifed with Ararat, and the ark ( $\kappa \iota \beta \omega t o{ }^{\prime}$ ) is stated to have rested there. Whether this Apamea obtained its distinctive surname of Cibotus, the Ark or Chest, from its physical fcatures or from its position as the centre of texation and finance for the district, or from some other cause, it is difficult to say. In any case this surname might naturally suggest to those acquainted with the Old Testament a connexion with the deluge of Noah; but the idea would not have been adopted in the coinage of the place without the pressure of strong Jewish influences. On these coins see Eokhel Doctr. Num. Fet. rir. p. 132 sq., and the paper of Sir F. Madden in the Numismatic Chronicle N. S. vi p. 173 sq. ( 1866 ); where they are figured.
${ }^{2}$ Joseph. Ant. xiv. то. 2 I.
${ }^{3}$ Talm. Babl. Moëd Katon 26a, quoted by Neubauer, La Geographie du ont, because it had a peculiar interest for the Jews, as one of their chief settlements ${ }^{1}$. It will be remembered also, that Phrygia is especially mentioned among those countries which furnished their quota of worshippers at Jerusalem, and were thus represented at the baptism of the Christian Church on the great day of Pentecost ${ }^{2}$.

Mention has already been made of the traffic in dyed wools, which formed the staple of commerce in the valley of the Lycus ${ }^{3}$. It may be inferred from other notices that this branch of trade had a peculiar attraction for the Jews ${ }^{4}$. If so, their commercial instincts would constantly bring fresh recruits to a Special attractions of Hierapolis. colony which was already very considerable. But the neighbourhood held out other inducements besides this. Hierapolis, the gay watering place, the pleasant resort of idlers, had charms for them, as well as Laodicea the busy commercial city. At least such was the complaint of stricter patriots at home. 'The wines and the baths of Phrygia,' writes a Talmudist bitterly, 'have separated the ten tribes from Israel ${ }^{5}$.'

Talmud p. 31g, though he seems to have misunderstood the expression quated in the text, of which he gives the sense, "Cctte ville tremblait au bruit des flèches qu'on avait tirées.'
It is probably this same Lacdicea which is meant in another Talmudical passage, Talm. Babl. Baba Metziah $8_{4}$ a (also quoted by Nerbauter, p. 3ri), in which Elijah appearing to R. Ish. mael ben R. Jose, says 'Thy father fied to Asia; flee thou to Laodicea,' where Asia is surposed to mean Sardis.
${ }^{1}$ An inscription found at Rome in the Jewish cemetery at th3 Porta Por. tuensis (Bocckh Corp. Inscr. S916) runs thus; €NӨa . KITE . aumia .
 i. e. Évөa кeîtat 'A Aaoficelas. Probably Laodicea on the Lycus is meant. Perhaps also we may refer another inscription ( $647^{8}$ ), which mentions one Trypho from Lao.
dicea on the Lycus, to a Jewish source.
${ }^{2}$ Acts ii. 10 .
${ }^{3}$ See p. 4.
${ }^{4}$ Acts xvi. 14. Is there an allusion to this branch of trade in the message to the Church of Laodicea, Rev. iii. 17

 $\pi \in \rho \nless \beta \dot{a} \lambda \eta, \kappa . r . \lambda . ?$ The only other of tho seven messages, which contains an allusion to the white garments, is addressed to the Church of Sardis, where again there might be a reference to the Acharn. 112) and the фouvikifes इaposavıкai (Plato Com, in Athen. in. p. 48 E) of the comic poets.
${ }^{5}$ Taim. Babl. Sabbath 147 b, quoted by Neubauer La Gêographie du Talmud p. 317: see Wiesner Schol. zum Babyl. Talm. p. 259 sq., and p. 207 sq. On the word translated 'baths,' see Rapoport's Exech Millin p. 1 ィ3, col. х.

There is no ground for supposing that, when St Paul wrote St Paul his Epistle to the Colossians, he had ever visited the church had not the in which he evinces so deep an interest. Whether we ex- district amine the narrative in the Acts, or whether we gather up wrote. the notices in the epistle itself, we find no hint that he had ever been in this neighbourhood; but on the contrary some expressions indirectly exclude the supposition of a visit to the district.

It is true that St luke more than once mentions Phrygia What is as lying on St Paul's route or as witnessing his labours. meant by But Phrygia was a vague and comprehensive term; nor can St Luke? we assume that the valley of the Lycus was intended, unless the direction of his route or the context of the narrative distinctly points to this south-western corner of Phrygia. In neither of the two passages, where St Paul is stated to have travelled through Phrygia, is this the case.
I. On his second missionary journey, after he has revisited i.StPaul's and confirmed the churches of Pisidia and Lycaonia founded on his first visit, he passes through 'the Phrygian and Galatian his second country '.' I have pointed out elsewhere that this expression ary jourmust be used io denote the region which might be called in- ney. differently Phrygia or Galatia-the land which had originally belonged to the Phrygians and had afterwards been colonised by the Gauls; or the parts of either country which lay in the immediate neighbourhood of this debatable ground ${ }^{2}$. This region lies considerably north and east of the valley of the Lycus. Assuming that the last of the Lycaonian and Pisidian towns at which St Paul halted was Antioch, he would not on any probable supposition approach nearer to Colossæ than Apamea Cibotus on his way to 'the Phrygian and Galatian country,' nor indeed need he have gone nearly so far west-

[^4][^5]ward as this. And again on his departure from this region he journeys by Mysia to Troas, leaving 'Asia' on his left hand and Bithynia on his right. Thus the notices of his route conspire to show that his path on this occasion lay far away from the valley of the Lycus.
2. His visit on his third missionary journey.
2. But if he was not brought into the neighbourhood of Colossa on his second missionary journey, it is equally improbable that he visited it on his third. So far as regards Asia Minor, he seems to have confined himself to revisiting the churches already founded; the new ground which he broke was in Macedonia and Greece. Thus when we are told that during this third journey St Paul after leaving Antioch ' passed in order through the Galatian country and Phrygia, confirming all the disciples ${ }^{\text {,', we can hardly doubt that 'the Galatian }}$ country and Phrygia' in this latter passage denotes essentially the same region as 'the Phrygian and Galatian country' in the former. The slight change of expression is explained by the altered direction of his route. In the first instance his course, as determined by its extreme limits-Antioch in Pisidia its starting-point, and Alexandria Troas its terminationwould be northward for the first part of the way, and thus would lie on the border land of Phrygia and Galatia; whereas on this second occasion, when he was travelling from Antioch in Syria to Ephesus, its direction would be generally from east to west, and the more strictly Galatian district would be traversed before the Phrygian. If we suppose him to leave Galatia at Pessinus on its western border, he would pass along the great highway-formerly a Persian and at this time a Roman road-by Synnada and Sardis to Ephesus, traversing the heart of Phrygia, but following the valleys of the Hermus and Cayster, and separated from the Mæander and lycus by the high mountain ranges which bound these latter to the north ${ }^{2}$.

[^6]St Paul and St Luke is not the country properly so called, but that they are speaking of the Charches of Pisidian

Thus St Luke's narrative seems to exclude any visit of The inferthe Apostle to the Churches of the Lycus before his first Antioch, Iconium, Lystra, and Derbe, which lay within the Roman province of Galatia. This interpretation of Galatia necossarily affects his view of St Paul's routes (pp. $136 \mathrm{sq} ., 331 \mathrm{kq}$.) ; and he supposes the Apostle on his third missionary journey to have passed through the valley of the Lyens, without however remaining to preach the Gospel there (pp. $331 \mathrm{sq} ., 356 \mathrm{sq} ., 362$ ). As Antioch in Pisidia would on this hypothesis be the farthest charch in 'Galatia and Phrygis' which St Payl visited, his direct route from that city to Ephesus (Acts xviii. 23, xix. 1) would natzarally lie by this valley. I have already (Galatians pp. 18 sq., 22) stated the serious objections to which this interpretation of 'Galatis ' is open, and (if I mistake not) have answered most of M. Renan's arguments by anticipation. But, as this interpretation nearly affects an important point in the history of St Paul's dealings with the Colossians, it is necessary to sub. ject it to a closer examination.

Without stopping to enquire whether this view is reconcilable with St Paul's assertion (Col. ii. r) that these churches in the Lycus valley 'had not seen his face in the flesh,' it will appear (I think) that M. Renan's arguments are in some cases untenable and in others may be turned against himself. The three heads under which they may be conveniently considered are: (i) The use of the name 'Galatia'; (ii) The itinerary of St Paul's travels; (iii) The historical notices in the Epistle to the Galatians.
(i) On the first point, M. Renan states that St Paul was in the habit of using the official name for each district, and therefore called the country which extends from Antioch in Pisidia to Derbe 'Gajatia,' supporting this view by the Apostle's use of Asia, Macedonia, and Achaia (p. 5r). The answer is that the names of these elder provinces had very generally superseded the local names, but this was not the case with the other districts of Asia Minor where the provinces had been formed at a comparatively late date. The usage of St Luke is a good criterion. He also speaks of Asia, Macedonia, and Achaia; but at the same time his narrative abounds in historical or ethnographical names which have no official import; e.g. Lycaonia, Mysia, Pamphylia, Pisidia, Phrygia. Where we have no evidence, it is reasonable to assume that St Paul's usage was conformable to St Luke's. And again, if we consider St Luke's account alone, how insupersble are the difficulties which this view of Galatia creates. The part of Asia Minor, with which we are immediately concerned, was comprised officially in the provinces of Asis and Galatia. On M. Renan's showing, St Luke, after calling Antioch a city of Pisidia (xiii. 14) and Lystra and Derbe citiss of Lycaonia (xiv. 6), treats all the three, together with the intermediate Iconium, as belonging to Galatia (xvi. 6, xviii. 23). He explains the inconsistency by saying that in the former case the narrative proceeds in detail, in the latter in masses. But if so, why should he combine a historical and ethnological name Phrygia with an official name Galatia in the same breath, when the two are different in kind and cannot be matually exclusive? 'Galatia and Asia,' would be intelligible on this supposition, but not 'Galatia and Phrygia.' Moreover the very form of the expression in xvi. 6, 'the

St Luke's narrative Roman captivity. And this inference is confirmed by St Paul's own language to the Colossians.

Phrygian and Galatian conutry' (according to tho correct reading which M. Renan neglects), appears in its studied vagueness to exclude the idea that St Luke means the province of Galatia, whose boundaries were precisely marked. And even granting that the Ohristian communities of Lycaonia and Pisidia could by a straining of language be called Charches of Galatia, is it possible that $S$ St Paul would address them personally as 'ye foolish Galatians' (Gal. iii. r)? Such language would be no more appropriate than if a modern preacher in a familiar address were to appeal to the Poles of Warsaw as 'ye Rubsians,' or the Hungarians of Posth as 'ye Austrians,' or the Irish of Cork as 'yo Englishmen.'
(ii) In the itinerary of St Paul several points require consideration. (a) M. Renan lays stress on the fact that in Acts xri. 6, xviii. 23, the order in which the names of Phrygia and Galatin occur is inverted. I seem to myself to have explained this satisfactorily in the text. He appears to be unaware of the correct reading in xvi.
 (see Galatians p. 22), thongh it has an important bearing on St Paul's probable rouîe. (b) He states that Troas was St Paul's aim ('l'objectif de Saint Paul') in the one case (xvi. 6), and Ephesus in the other (xviii. 23): consequently he argues that Galatia, properly so called, is inconceivable, as there was no reason why he should have made 'this strange detour towards the north.' The answer is that Troas was not his 'objectif' in the first instance, nor Ephesus in the second. On the first occasion St Lulse states that the Apostle set out on his journey with quite different intentions, but that after he had got well to the north of Asia Minor he was driven by a series of divine intimations to proceed first to Troas and thence to cross over into Europe (see Philippians p. 48). This narrative seems to me to imply that he starts for his further travels from some point in the western part of Gaiatia proper. When he comes to the borders of Mysia, he designs bearing to the left and preaching in Asia; but a divine voice forbids him. He then purposes diverging to the right and delivering his message in Bithynia; but the same unseen power checks him again. This he is driven forward, and passes by Mysia to the coast at Troas (Acts xvi. 6-8). Here all is plain. But if we suppose him to start, not from some town in Galatia proper such as Pessinus, but from Antioch in Pisidia, why should Bithynia, which would be far out of the way, be mentioned at all? On the second occasion, St Paul's primary object is to revisit the Galatian Churches which he had planted on the former journey (xviii. 33), and it is not till after he has fulfilled this intention that he goes to Ephesus. (c) M. Renan also calls attention to the difficulty of traversing 'the central steppe' of Asia Minor. 'There was probably,' he says, 'at this epoch no route from Iconium to Ancyra,' and in justification of this statement he refers to Perrot, de Gal. Rom. prov. p. 102, 103. Even so, there were regular roads from either Iconium or Antioch to Pessinus; and this route would serve equally well. Moreoverthe Apostle, who was accustomed to 'perils of rivers, perils of robbers, perils in the wilderness ' (2 Cor. xi. 26), and who preferred walking from Troas to Assos (Acts xa.

He represents his knowledge of their continued progress, by ${ }_{\mathrm{St}}^{\mathrm{St}}$ out and even of their first initiation, in the truths of the Gospel, Paul'sown as derived from the report of others. He describes himself languago.
13) while his companions sailed, would not be deterred by any rough or unfrequented paths. But the facts adduced by Perrot do not lend themselves to any sueh inference, nor docs he himself draw it. He cites an inscription of the year A.D. 82 which speaks of A. Cæsennius Gallus, the legate of Domitian, as a great roadmaker throughout the Eastern provinces of Asia Minor, and he suggests that the existing remains of $\pi$ road between Ancyra and Iconium may be part of this governor's work. Even if the suggestion be adopted, it is highly improbable that no road should have existed previously, when we consider the comparative facility of constructing a way along this line of country (Perrot p. ro3) and the importance of such a direct route. (d) 'In the conception of the author of the Acts,' writes M. Renan, 'the two journeys across Asia Minor are journeys of confirmation and not of conversion (Acts xv. $36,4 \mathrm{I}$, xvi. 5,6 , xviii. 23).' This statement seems to me to be only partially true. In both cases St Paul begins his tour by confirming churohes already established, but in both he advances bcyond this and breaks new ground. In the former he starts with the existing churches of Lycaonia and Pisidia and extends his labours to Galatia: in the latter he starts with the then existing churches of Galatia, and carries the Gospel into Macedonia and Achaia. This, so far as I can dis. cover, was his general rule.
(iii) The notices in the Galatian Epistles, which appear to M. Renan to favour his view, are these: (a) St Panl appears to have 'had intimate rela. tions with the Golatian Church, at least as intimate as with the Corinthians and Thessalonians,' whereas $\operatorname{st}$ Luke disposes of the Apostle's preaching in Galatia very summarily, unless the communities of Lycaonia and Pisidia be included. But the Galatian Epis. tle by no means evinces the same close and varied personal relations which we find in the letters to these other churches, more especially to the Corinthians. And again; St Luke's history is more or less fragmentary. Whole years are sometimes dismissed in a few verses. The stay in Arabia which made so deep an impression on St Paul himself is not even mentioned: the threo months' sojourn in Greece, though doubtless full of stirring events, only occupies a single verse in the narrative (Acts $\mathbf{x x} .3$ ). St Luke appears to have joined St Paul after his visit to Galatia (xvi. 10); and there is no reason why he should have dwelt on incidents with which he had no direct acquaintance. (b) M. Renan sees in the presence of emis. saries from Jerusalem in the Galatian Churches an indication that Galatia proper is not meant. 'It is improbable thint they would hive made such a journes.' But why so? There were important Jewish settlements in Galatia proper (Galatians p. $g$ sq.); there was a good road through Syria and Gilicia to Ancyra (Itin. Anton. p. 205 eq., Itin. Hierosol. p. 575 sq. ed. Wessel.) ; and if we find such emissaries as far away from Jerusalem as Corinth (2 Cor. xi. I3, etc.), there is at least no improbability that they should have reached Galatia. (c) Lastly; M. Benan thinks that the mention of Barnabas (Gal. ii. $1,9,13$ ) implies that he was personally known to the chorckes addressed, as hearing of their faith in Christ and their love to the saints ${ }^{1}$ ． He recals the day when he first heard of their Christian pro－ Silence of fession and zeal ${ }^{2}$ ．Though opportunities occur again and again St Paul． where he would naturally have referred to his direct personal relations with them，if he had been their evangelist，he abstains from any such reference．He speaks of their being instructed in the Gospel，of his own preaching the Gospel，several times in the course of the letter，but he never places the two in any direct connexion，though the one reference stands in the immediate neighbourhood of the other ${ }^{3}$ ．Moreover，if he had actually visited Colossæ，it must appear strange that he should not once allude to any incident occurring during his sojourn there，for this epistle would then be the single exception to his ordinary practice．And lastly ；in one passage at least，if interpreted in its natural sense，he declares that the Colossians were personally unknown to him：＇I would have you know，＇ he writes，＇how great a conflict I have for you and them that are in Laodicea and as many as have not seen my face in the flesh ${ }^{4}$ ， and therefore points to Lycaonia and Pisidia．But are we to infer on the same grounds that he was personally known to the Corinthians（ Cor．ix．6）， and to the Colossians（Col．iv．10）？In fact the name of Barnabas，as a fa－ mous Apostle and an older disciple even than St Paul himself，would not fail to be well known in all the churches． On the other hand one or two notices in the Galatian Epistle present serious obstacles to M．Renan＇s view．What are we to ssy for instance to St Paul＇s statement，that he preached the Gos－ （iv．I3），i．e．because he was detained by sickness（see Galatians pp． 23 日q．，172）， whereas his journey to Lycaonia and Pisidia is distinctly planned with a view to missionary work？Why again is there no mention of Timothy，who was much in St Paul＇s company about this time，and who on this showing was himself a Galatian？Some mention would seem to be especially suggested where St Paul is justifying his conduct respeeting the attempt to compel Titus to be eircumcised． pas ウ̀кои́бацеу，ои่ паvó $\mu \epsilon \theta \propto$ к．т．入．This day when they first heard the preach－ ing of the Gospel，and the day when he first heard the tidings of this fact， are set against each other．
${ }^{1}$ Col．i． 4 ．

${ }^{3}$ o．g．i．5－8， $21-23,25,28,29$. ii． 5,6 ．

But, if he was not directly their evangelist, yet to him Epaphras they were indirectly indebted for their knowledge of the truth. was the Epaphras had been his delegate to them, his representative of this in Christ. By Epaphras they had been converted to the Gospel. This is the evident meaning of a passage in the opening of the epistle, which has been much obscured by misreading and mistranslation, and which may be paraphrased thus: 'The Gospel, which has spread and borne fruit throughout the rest of the world, has been equally successful among yourselves. This fertile growth has been manifested in you from the first day when the message of God's grace was preached to you, and accepted by you-preached not as now with adulterations by these false teachers, but in its genuine simplicity by Epaphras our beloved fellowservant; he has been a faithful minister of Christ and a faithful representative of us, and from him we have received tidings of your love in the Spirit'.'

ठtat aủtûv, $\sigma v \mu \beta \iota \beta \alpha \sigma \theta_{\epsilon}^{\prime} \nu \tau e s$ к.т. $\lambda$. The question of interpretation is whether the people of Colossm and Laodicea belong to the same category with the \#aoc, or not. The latter view is taken by one or two ancient interpreters (e.g. Theodoret in his introduction to the epistle), and has been adopted by several modern critics. Yet it is opposed alike to grammatioal and logical considerations. (I) The grammatical form is unfavourable; for the preposition $\dot{u} \pi \dot{\xi} \rho$ is not repeated, bo that all the persons mentioned are included under a vinculam. (2) No adequate sense can be extracted from the passage, so interpreted. For in this case what is the drift of the enumeration? If intended to be exhaustive, it does not fulfil the parpose; for nothing is said of others whom he had seen besides the Colossians and Laodiceans. If not intended to be exhaustive, it is meaningless; for there is no reason why the Colossians and Laodiceans especially should be set off against those whom he had not seen, or indeed why in this connexion those whom he had not seen should be mentioned at all. The whole context ahows that the Apostle is dwelling on his spiritual commonion with and interest in those with whom he has had no personal com. munications. St Jerome (Ep. cxex. ad Demetr. § 2) has rightly caught the spirit of the passage; 'Ignoti ad ignotam scribimus, dumtaxat juxta faciem corporalem. Alioquin interior homo pulore sibi cognitus est illa notitia qua et Padus apostolus Colossenses maltosque credentium noverat quos ante non viderat.' For parallels to this use of ral 8oot, see the note on the passage.

St Paul's residence atEphesus instrumental in their conversion.
A. D .

54-57.

How or when the conversion of the Colossians took place, we have no direct information. Yet it can hardly be wrong to connect the event with St Paul's long sojourn at Ephesus. Here he remained preaching for three whole years. It is possible indeed that during this period he paid short visits to other neighbouring cities of Asia: but if so, the notices in the Acts oblige us to suppose these interruptions to his residence in Ephesus to have been slight and infrequentr. Yet, though the Apostle himself was stationary in the capital, the Apostle's influence and teaching spread far beyond the limits of the city and its immediate neighbourhood. It was hardly an exaggeration when Demetrius declared that 'almost throughout all Asia this Paul had persuaded and turned away much people ${ }^{2}$.' The sacred historian himself uses equally strong language in describing the effects of the Apostle's preaching; 'All they which dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord, both Jews and Greeks s'. In accordance with these notices the Apostle himself in an epistle written during this sojourn sends salutations to Corinth, not from the Church of Ephesus specially, as might have been anticipated, but from the $\mu а т$.

The varions readings which obscure the meaning are these. (i) The received text for $\kappa \alpha \theta \dot{\omega} s \dot{\epsilon} \mu \dot{d} \theta$ ere has $\kappa \alpha \theta \dot{\omega} s$ каi $\epsilon_{\mu} \dot{\partial} \theta \epsilon \tau \varepsilon$. With this reading the passage suggests that the instructions of Epaphras were superadded to, and so distinct from, the originad evangelization of Colossan; whereas the correct text identifies them. (ii) For vix $\xi_{\rho} \dot{\eta} \mu \mu \omega_{\nu}^{\nu}$ the received reading is $\dot{u} \pi \notin \rho \dot{v} \mu \omega \bar{\nu}$. Thus the fact that St Paul did not preach at Colosser in person, but through his representative, is obliterated. In both cases the authority for the readings which I have adopted against the received text is overwhelming.

The obscurity of readering is in lated in our English Version by the ambiguous expression, 'as ye also learned of Epaphras.' The true force of the words is, 'acoording as ye were taught by Epaphras,' being an explanation of $\epsilon \nu \dot{d} \lambda \eta \theta \in l$. See the notes on the passage.
${ }^{1}$ Seo especially xx . 18 ' Ye know, from the first day when I set foot on Asia, how I was with you all the time,' and ver. 3 r 'For three years night and day I ceased not warning every one with tears.' As it seems neeessary to allow for a brief visit to Corinth (2 Cor. xii. 14 , xiii. I) during this period, other interruptions of long duration should not be postulated.
${ }_{2}$ Acts xix. 26.
${ }^{3}$ Acts xix. 10 .
'Churches of Asia' generally ${ }^{1}$. St Luke, it should be observed, ascribes this dissemination of the Gospel, not to journeys undertaken by the Apostle, but to his preaching at Ephesus itself". Thither, as to the metropolis of Western Asia, would flock crowds from all the towns and villages far and near. Thence they would carry away, each to his own neighbourhood, the spiritual treasure which they had so unexpectedly found.

Among the places thus represented at the Asiatic metro- Close allipolis would doubtless be the cities lying in the valley of the $\begin{gathered}\text { ance of } \\ \text { thesecitites }\end{gathered}$ Lycus. The bonds of amity between these places and Ephesus $\underset{\text { suts. }}{\text { withEphe- }}$ appear to have been unusually strong. The Concord of the Laodiceans and Ephesians, the Concord of the Hierapolitans and Ephesians, are repeatediy commemorated on medals struck for the purpose ${ }^{3}$. Thus the Colossians, Epaphras and Phile- The work mon, the latter with his household ${ }^{4}$, and perbaps also the of Phile. Laodicean Nymphas, would fall in with the Apostle of the Nymphas, Gentiles and hear from his lips the first tidings of a heavenly life.

But, whatever service may have been rendered by Philemon but especiat Colossæ, or by Nymphas at Laodicea, it was to Epaphras ally Epara. especially that all the three cities were indebted for their knowledge of the Gospel. Though he was a Colossian by birth, the fervency of his prayers and the energy of his love are represented as extending equally to Laodicea and Hierapolis ${ }^{6}$. It is obvious that he looked upon himself as responsible for the spiritual well-being of all alike.

[^7]p. $324,325,331,33^{2}$, Suppl. VII. p.
 cION . OMONO1A, Eckhel III. p. 155 , 157, Mionnet Iv. p. 299, 300, 307, Suppl. vII. p. $569,57 \mathrm{I}, 572,574,575$. See Steiger Kolosser p. 5o, and comp. Kranse Civitat. Neocor. §s 20.
${ }^{4}$ Philem. 1, 2, 19.
${ }^{5}$ Col. iv. 15 . On the question whether the name is Nymphas or Nympha, see the notes there.

0 iv. 12, I3.

St Paul still a stranger to this district.

His imprisonment at Rome.

Colossm brought before his notice by two incidents.

We pass over a period of five or six years. St Paul's first captivity in Rome is now drawing to a close. During this interval he has not once visited the valley of the Lycus. He has, it is true, skirted the coast and called at Miletus, which lies near the mouth of the Mrander; but, though the elders of Ephesus were summoned to meet him there ${ }^{1}$, no mention is made of any representatives from these more distant towns.

I have elsewhere described the Apostle's circumstances during his residence in Rome, so far as they are known to us ${ }^{2}$. It is sufficient to say here, that though he is still a prisoner, friends new and old minister freely to his wants. Meanwhile the alienation of the Judaic Christians is complete. Three only, remaining faithful to him, are commemorated as honourable exceptions in the general desertion ${ }^{3}$.

We have seen that Colosse was an unimportant place, and that it had no direct personal claims on the Apostle. We might therefore feel surprise that, thus doubly disqualified, it should nevertheless attract his special attention at a critical moment, when severe personal trials were superadded to 'the care of all the churches.' But two circumstances, the one affecting his public duties, the other private and personal, happening at this time, conspired to bring Colosse prominently before his notice.
I. The mission of Epapiras.

1. He had received a, visit from Epaphras. The dangerous condition of the Colossian and neighbouring churches had filled the mind of their evangelist with alarm. A strange form of heresy had broken out in these brotherhoods-a combination of Judaic formalism with Oriental mystic specula-tion-and was already spreading rapidly. His distress was extreme. He gratefully acknowledged and reported their faith in Christ and their works of love ${ }^{4}$. But this only quickened his anxiety. He had 'much toil for them'; he was 'ever

[^8]wrestling in his prayers on their behalf,' that they might stand fast and not abandon the simplicity of their earlier faith ${ }^{1}$. He came to Rome, we may suppose, for the express purpose of laying this state of things before the Apostle and seeking his counsel and assistance.
2. But at the time when Epaphras paid this visit, St Paul 2. Onesrwas also in communication with another Colossian, who had wris and visited Rome under very different circumstances. Onesmmus, Rome. the runaway slave, had sought the metropolis, the common sink of all nations ${ }^{2}$, probably as a convenient hiding place, where he might escape detection among its crowds and make a livelihood as best he could. Here, perhaps accidentally, perhaps through the intervention of Epaphras, he fell in with his master's old friend. The Apostle interested himself in his case, instructed him in the Gospel, and transformed him from a good-for-nothing slave ${ }^{3}$ into a 'faithful and beloved brother ".'

This combination of circumstances called the Apostle's at- The Apotention to the Churches of the Lycus, and more especially to stle doColossæ. His letters, which had been found 'weighty and three let. powerful' in other cases, might not be unavailing now; and taneously. in this hope he took up his pen. Three epistles were written and despatched at the same time to this district.
I. He addresses a special letter to the Colossians, written $\mathbf{r}$. The in the joint names of himself and Timothy, warning them $\begin{gathered}\text { Eprisfles } \\ \text { THR }\end{gathered}$ against the errors of the false teachers. He gratefully ac- $\begin{gathered}\text { coloss. } \\ \text { sinss. }\end{gathered}$ knowledges the report which he has received of their love and zeal ${ }^{5}$. He assures them of the conflict which agitates him on their behalf ${ }^{8}$. He warns them to be on their guard against the delusive logic of enticing words, against the vain deceit of a false philosophy ${ }^{7}$. The purity of their Christianity The theois endangered by two errors, recommended to them by their the pracal and heretical leaders-the one theological, the other practical- $\begin{gathered}\text { aal error of } \\ \text { the Colos- }\end{gathered}$ sians.

[^9]but both alike springing from the same source, the conception of matter as the origin and abode of evil. Thus, regarding God and matter as directly antagonistic and therefore apart from and having no communication with each other, they sought to explain the creation and government of the world by interposing a series of intermediate beings, emanations or angels, to whom accordingly they offered worship. At the same time, since they held that evil resided, not in the rebellious spirit of man, but in the innate properties of matter, they sought to overcome it by a rigid ascetic discipline, which failed after all

The proper correotive to both lies in the Christ of the Gospel. to touch the springs of action. As both errors flowed from the same source, they must be corrected by the application of the same remedy, the Christ of the Gospel. In the Person of Christ, the one mediator between heaven and earth, is the true solution of the theological dificulty. Through the Life in Christ, the purification of the heart through faith and love, is the effectual triumph over moral evil ${ }^{1}$. St Paul therefore prescribes to the Colossians the true teaching of the Gospel, as the best antidote to the twofold danger which threatens at once their theoReferences logical creed and their moral principles; while at the same to Epaphras. time he enforces his lesson by the claims of personal affection, appealing to the devotion of their evangelist Epaphras on their behalf?

Of Epaphras himself we know nothing beyond the few but significant notices which connect him with Colossæ ${ }^{3}$. He did not return to Colossæ as the bearer of the letter, but remained

[^10]behind with St Paul ${ }^{\text {: }}$. As St Paul in a contemporary epistle designates him his fellow-prisoner ${ }^{2}$, it may be inferred that his zeal and affection had involved him in the Apostle's captivity, and that his continuance in Rome was enforced. But however this may be, the letter was placed in the hands of Tychicus, a native of proconsular Asia, probably of Ephesus ${ }^{3}$, Tychicus who was entrusted with a wider mission at this time, and in its mus acdischarge would be obliged to visit the valley of the Lycus ${ }^{4}$. company the letter. At the same time he was accompanied by Onesimus, whom the Colossians had only known hitherto as a worthless slave, but who now returns to them with the stamp of the Apostle's warm - approval. St Paul says very little about himself, because Tychicus and Onesimus would be able by word of mouth to communicate all information to the Colossians ${ }^{5}$. But he sends The saluone or two salutations which deserve a few words of explana- ${ }^{\text {tations. }}$ tion. Epaphras of course greets his fellow-townsmen and children in the faith Other names are those of Aristarchus the Thessalonian, who had been with the Apostle at Ephesus ${ }^{6}$ and may possibly have formed some personal connexion with the Colossians at that time: Mark, against whom apparently the Apostle fears that a prejudice may be entertained (perhaps the fact of his earlier desertion, and of St Paul's dissatisfaction in consequence ${ }^{7}$, may have been widely known), and for whom therefore he asks a favourable reception at his approaching visit to Colossæ, according to instructions which they had already received; and Jesus the Just, of whose relations with the
${ }^{1}$ Col. iv. 12.
 The word may possibly have a metaphorical sense (see Philippians p. 11); but the literal meaning is more probable. St Jerome on Philem. 23 (vir. p. 762 ) gives the story that St Paul's parents were natives of Giscala and, when the Romans invaded and wasted Jadæa, were banished thence with their son to Tarsus. He adds that Epaphras may have been St Paul's fellow.
prisoner at this time, and have been removed with his parents to Colosser. It is not quite clear whether this statement respeoting Epaphras is part of the tradition, or Jerome's own conjecture appended to it.

3 Acts Xx. 4, 2 Tim. iv. 12.

* See below, p. 37.
${ }^{5} \mathrm{Col}$. iv. 7-9.
${ }^{5}$ Acts xix. 29.
7 Acts xiii. 13, xv. 37-39.

Colossians we know nothing, and whose only claim to a mention may have been his singular fidelity to the Apostle at a critical juncture. Salutations moreover are added from Luke and from Demas; and here again their close companionship with the Apostle is, so far as we know, the sole cause of their names appearing ${ }^{1}$.

Charge respecting Laodicea.

Lastly, the Laodiceans were closely connected with the Colossians by local and spiritual ties. To the Church of Laodicea therefore, and to the household of one Nymphas who was a prominent member of it, he sends greeting. At the same time he directs them to interchange letters with the Laodiceans; for to Laodicea also he had written. And he closes his salutations with a message to Archippus, a resident either at Colosse or at Laodicea (for on this point we are left to conjecture), who held some important office in the Church, and respecting whose zeal he seems to have entertained a misgiving ${ }^{2}$.
2. The Lettier to Philemos.
2. But, while providing for the spiritual welfare of the whole Colossian Church, he did not forget the temporal interests of its humblest member. Having attended to the solicitations of the evangelist Epaphras, he now addressed himself to the troubles of the runaway slave Onesimus. The mission of Tychicus to Colossæ was a favourable opportunity of restoring him to Philemon; for Tychicus, well known as the Apostle's friend and fellow-labourer, might throw the shield of his protection over him and avert the worst consequences of Philemon's anger. But, not content with this measure of precaution, the Apostle himself writes to Philemon on the offender's behalf, recommending him as a changed man ${ }^{8}$, and claiming forgiveness for him as a return due from Philemon to himself as to his spiritual father ${ }^{4}$.

The salutations in this letter are the same as those in the Epistle to the Colossians with the exception of Jesus

[^11]Justus, whose name is omitted ${ }^{1}$. Towards the close St Paul declares his hope of release and intention of visiting Colosse, and asks Philemon to 'prepare a lodging' for him ${ }^{2}$.
3. But at the same time with the two letters destined espe- 3. The cially for Colosse, the Apostle despatched a third, which had $\frac{\text { Lintrem, of }}{\text { Lincolir }}$ a wider scope. It has been already mentioned that Tychicus which a ${ }^{\boldsymbol{w}}$ copy is was charged with a mission to the Asiatic Churches. It has eent to been noticed also that the Colossians were directed to procure and read a Ietter in the possession of the Laodiceans. These two facts are closely connected. The Apostle wrote at this time a circular letter to the Asiatic Churches, which got its ultimate designation from the metropolitan city and is consequently known to us as the Epistle to the Ephesians ${ }^{\text {s }}$. It was the immediate object of Tychicus' journey to deliver copies of this letter at all the principal centres of Christianity in the district, and at the same time to communicate by word of mouth the Apostle's special messages to each *. Among these centres was Laodicea. Thus his mission brought him into the immediate neighbourhood of Colossw. But he was not charged to deliver another copy of the circular letter at Colossæ itself, for this Church would be regarded only as a dependency of Laodicea; and besides he was the bearer of a special letter from the Apostle to them. It was sufficient therefore to provide that the Laodicean copy should be circulated and read at Colossw.

Thus the three letters are closely related. Tychicus is the Personal personal link of connexion between the Epistles to the Ephe- links consians and to the Colossians; Onesimus between those to the the three Colossians and to Philemon.

For reasons given elsewhere ${ }^{5}$, it would appear that these three letters were written and despatched towards the close of the Apostle's captivity, about the year 63. At some time not very distant from this date, a great catastrophe overtook the cities of the Lycus valley. An earthquake was no uncommon occurrence in this region ${ }^{1}$. But on this occasion the shock had been unusually violent, and Laodicea, the flowrishing and populous, was laid in ruins. Tacitus, who is our earliest authority for this fact, places it in the year 60 and is silent about the neighbouring towns ${ }^{2}$. Eusebius however makes it subse-

[^12][^13]Earthquake in the Lycus Valley,
${ }^{1}$ See above, p. 3. Laodicea was visited by the following earthquakes in the ages preceding and subsequent to the Christian era.
(i) Before about b.c. 125, Orac. Sibyll. iii. 47 I , if the date now commonly assigned to this Sibylline Oracle be correct, and if the passage is to be regarded as a prophecy after the event. In iii. 347 Hierapolis is also mentioned as suffering in the same way; but it may be questioned whether the Pluygian city is meant.
(2) About B.c. 12, Strabo xii. 8, p. 579, Dion Cass, liv. 30. Strabo names only Laodicea and Trailes, but Dion Cas-

(3) A.D. 60 according to Tacitus (Ann. xiv. 27); A.D. 64 or 65 nceording to Eusebius (Chron. s.a.), who includes also Hierapolis and Colosser. To this earthquake allusion is made in $a$ Sibylline Oracle written not many years after the event; Orac. Sibyll. iv. 107 (see also v. 289, vii. 23).
(4) Between A.D. 222 and A.D. 235 , in the reign of Alexander Severus, as we learn from another Sibylline Oracle (xii. 280). On this occasion Fierapolis also suffered.

This list will probably be found not to have exhausted all these catastrophes on record.

The following earthquakes also are mentioned as happening in the neighbouring towns or in the district generally: at an uncertain date, Carura (Strabo xii. S, p. 578); A.d. $\boldsymbol{r}_{7}$ the twelve cities, Sardis being the worst sufferer (Tac. Ann. ii. 7, Plin. N. H. ii. 86, Dion Cass. 1vii. 17, Sirabo xii. 8, p. 579) ; A.D. 23 Cibyra (Tac. Ann. iv. 13) ; A.d. 53 Apamea (Tao. Amn. xii. 58): about A.d. 138-I42, under Antoninus Pius, 'Rhodiorum et Asice oppida' (Capitol. Anton. Pius 9, Aristial. Or. xliv); A.D. 151 or 152 , under the same emperor, Mitylene and other places (Aristid. Or. xxv); A.d. 180, under M. Aurelius, Smyrna (Chron. Pasch. I. p. 489, ed. Dind., Aristid. Or. xx, xxi, xli; ;ee Clinton Fast. Rom. . p. 176 eq., Hertzberg Griechenland etc. II. pp. 371, 410, and esp. Waddington Memoire sur la Chronologie du Rheteur Alius Aristial pp. 242 sq., 267 , in Mem. de ${ }^{\prime}$ 'Acad. äes Inscr. xxyI, 1867 , who has corrected the dates); A.D. 262, under Gallienus in (Trebell. Gallien. 5 'Malam tristius in Asia urbibus fuit ...hiatus terres plurimis in locis fuerunt, cum aqua saisa in fossis appareret,' ib. 6 'vastatam Asiam...elementorum conoussionibus'). Strabo says (p. 579) that Philadelphia is more or less shaken daily ( $\left.\left.\kappa \alpha \theta^{\prime} \eta_{\mu}^{\prime}\right\} \rho a \nu\right\rangle$, and that Apamea has suffered from numerous earthquakes.
${ }^{2}$ Tac. Ann. xiv. 27 'Eodem anno ex inlastribus Asim uribibus Lrodicea, tremore terro prolapsa, nullo a nobis remedio propriis opibus revaluit.' The year is given 'Nerone iv, Corm. Cosso consulibus' (xiv. 20). Two different writers, in Smith's Dictionary of Geography and Smith's Dictionary of the Bible, s.v. Laodicea, place the destrucquent to the burning of Rome (A.D. 64), and mentions Hiera- Its probnpolis and Colossæ also as involved in the disaster ${ }^{1}$; while later writers, adopting the date of Eusebius and including the three cities with him, represent it as one of a series of divine judgments on the heathen world for the persecution of the Christians which followed on the fire ${ }^{2}$. Having no direct knowledge of the source from which Eusebius derived his information, we should naturally be disposed to accept the authority of Tacitus for the date, as more trustworthy. But, as indications occur elsewhere that Eusebius followed unusually good authorities in recording these earthquakes ${ }^{3}$, it is far from improbable that he tion of Laodicea in the reign of Tiberins, confusing this earthquake with an earlier one (Ann. ii. 47). By this earlier earthquake 'duodecim celebres Asix urbes conlapsw,' but their names are given, and not one is situated in the valley of the Lyetus.
${ }^{1}$ Euseb. Chron. Ol. 210 (II. p. 154 sq., ed. Sehöne) 'In Asia tres urbes terree motu conciderunt Lrodicea Hierapolis Colosse.' The Armenian version and Jerome agree in placing it the next event in order after the fire at Rome (4.D. 64 ), though there is a difference of a year in the two texts. If the Sibylline Oracle, v. 317 , refers to this earthquake, as seems probable, we have independent testimony that Hierapolis was involved in the catastrophe; comp. ib. v. 289.
${ }^{2}$ This is evidently the idea of Orosius, vii. 7 .
${ }^{3}$ I draw this inference from his account of the earthquake in the reign of Tiberins. Tacitus (Ann.ii. 47) states that twelve cities were ruined in one night, and records their names. Pliny also, who mentions this earthquake as 'the greatest within the memory of man' (N. H. ii. 86), gives the same number. Eusebius however, Chron. O1. 198 (iI. p. $\mathrm{r}_{4} 6$ sq., ed. Schöne), names thirteen cities, coinciding with Tacitus as far as he goes, but including Ephesus also. Now a monument was found at Puteoli (see Gronov. Thes. Grac. Ant. vix. p. 433 日q.), and is now in the Museum at Naples (Museo Borbonico xv, Tav. iv, v), dedicated to Tiberius and representing fourteen female figures with the names of fourteen Asiatic cities underneath; these names being the same as those mentioned by Tacitus with the addition of Ephesus and Cibyra. There can be no doubt that this was one of those monuments mentioned by Apollouius quoted in Phlegon (Fragm. 42, Müller's Fragm. Hist. Grec. nif. p. 621) as crected to commemorate the liberality of Tiberius in contributing to the restoration of the ruined cities (see Eckhel Doct. Num. Wet. vi. 192 sq.). But no earthquake at Ephesus is mentioned by Tacitus. He does indeed speak of such a catastrophe as happening at Cibyra (Ann. iv. I 3 ) six years later than the one which ruined the twelve cities, and of the relief which Tiberius afforded on this latter oceasion as on the former. But we owe to Eusebius alone the fact that Ephesus also was seriously injured by an earthquake in the same year-perhaps not on the same night-with the twelve cities: and this faot is necessary to explain the ohronology of these letters.

Bearingon gives the correct date ${ }^{3}$. In this case the catastrophe was sub-

St Mark's intended visit. sequent to the writing of these letters. If on the other hand the year named by Tacitus be adopted, we gain a subsidiary confirmation of the comparatively late date which I have ventured to assign to these epistles on independent grounds; for, if they had been written two years earlier, when the blow was recent, we might reasonably have expected to find some reference to a disaster which had devastated Laodicea and from which Colossæ cannot have escaped altogether without injury. The additional fact mentioned by the Roman historian, that Laodicea was rebuilt from her own resources without the usual assistance from Rome ${ }^{2}$, is valuable as illustrating a later notice in the Apostolic writings ${ }^{9}$.

It has been seen that, when these letters were written, St Mark was intending shortly to visit Colosso, and that the Apostle himself, looking forward to his release, hoped at length to make a personal acquaintance with these churches, which hitherto he knew only through the report of others. Whether St Mark's visit was ever paid or not, we have no means of determining ${ }^{4}$. Of St Paul himself it is reasonable to assume, the monument. It should be added that Nipperdey (on Tac. Ann. ii. 47) supposes the earthquake at Ephesus to have been recorded in the lost portion of the fifth book of the Annals which comprised the years A.D. 29-3I; but this bare hypothesis cannot outweigh the direct testimeny of Eusebius.
${ }^{1}$ Hertzberg (Gesilichte Griechen. lands unter der Herrschaft der Römer JI. p. 96) supposes that Tacitus and Eusebins refer to two different events, and that Laodicea was visited by earthquakes twice within a few years, A.D. 60 and A.D. 65.
${ }^{2}$ Tac. Ann. xiv. 27, quoted above, p. 38, note 2. To this fact allusion is made in the feigned prediction of the must be the and person, 'Thou wilt rebuild thy city with its broad streets.' This Sibylline poem was written about the year 8o. The brilding of the amphitheatre, mentioned above (p. 6, note6), would form part of this work of reconstruction.

${ }^{3}$ See below, 9.43.
4 Two notices however imply that St Mark had sume personal connexion with Asia Minor in the years immediately succeeding the date of this reference: (I) St Peter, writing to the Churches of Asia Minor, sends a salutation from St Mark (r Pet. v. r3); (2) St Paul gives charge to Timothy, who appears to be still residing at Ephesus, to take up Mark and bring him to Rome \{ 2 Tim. iv. if Mapkop that in the interval between his first and second Roman cap- St Paul tivity he found some opportunity of carrying out his design. probably At all events we find him at Miletus, near to the mouth of Colosser. the Mæander ${ }^{1}$ : and the journey between this place and Laodicea is neither long nor difficult.

At the time of this visit-the first and last, we may suppose, which he paid to the valley of the Lycus-St Paul's direction of the Asiatic Churches is drawing to a close. With St John his death they pass into the hands of $\mathrm{St} \mathrm{John}^{2}$, who takes up in Asinor. his abode in Asia Minor. Of Colossæ and Hierapolis we hear nothing more in the New Testament: but from his exile in Patmos the beloved disciple delivers his Lord's message to the The mesChurch of Laodicea ${ }^{3}$; a message doubtless intended to be $\frac{\text { sage to }}{\text { Laodicea. }}$ communicated also to the two subordinate Churches, to which it would apply almost equally well.

The message communicated by St John to Laodicea pro- Correspondences longs the note which was struck by St Paul in the letter to pondween Colossx. An interval of a very few years has not materially $\begin{gathered}\text { the Apoca- } \\ \text { lypse and }\end{gathered}$ altered the character of these churches. Obviously the same ${ }_{\text {Et Paustles }}$ temper prevails, the same errors are rife, the same correction must be applied.
r. Thus, while St Paul finds it necessary to enforce the i. The truth that Christ is the image of the invisible God, that in doctrine of Him all the divine fulness dwells, that He existed before all of Christ, things, that through Him all things were created and in Him all things are sustained, that $\# e$ is the primary source ( $\dot{a}_{\rho} \chi \eta^{\prime}$ ) seems fairly probable that St Mark's projected visit to Colosser was paid.
${ }^{1} 2$ Tim. iv. 20. By a strange error Lequien (Orions Christ. 1. p. $8_{33}$ ) substitates Hierapolis for Nicopolis in Tit. iii, I , and argues from the passage that the Chureh of Hierapolis was founded by St Paul.
${ }^{2}$ It was apparently during the interval between St Peul's first captivity at Rome and his death, that St Peter wrote to the Churches of Asia Minor (r Pet. i. 1). Whether in this interva?
he also visited personally the districts evangelized directly or indirectly by St. Paul, we have no means of deciding. Such a visit is far from unlikely, but it can hardly have been of long duration. A copy of his letters would probably be sent to Laodicea, as a principal centre of Christianity in Proconsular Asia, which is among the provinces mentioned in the address of the First Epistle.
${ }^{3}$ Rev. jii. 14-21.
and has the pre-eminence in all things ${ }^{1}$; so in almost identical language St John, speaking in the person of our Lord, declares that He is the Amen, the faithful and true witness, the primary source ( $\alpha \rho \chi \eta^{\prime}$ ) of the creation of God". Some lingering shreds of the old heresy, we may suppose, still hung about these Churches, and instead of 'holding fast the Head' they were even yet prone to substitute intermediate agencies, angelic mediators, as links in the chain which should bind man to God. They still failed to realise the majesty and significance, the completeness, of the Person of Christ.
and practicalduties which follow apon it.

And the practical duty also, which follows from the recognition of the theological truth, is enforced by both Apostles in very similar language. If St Paul entreats the Colossians to seek those things which are above, where Christ is seated on the right hand of God ${ }^{3}$, and in the companion epistle, which also he directs them to read, reminds the Churches that God raised them with Christ and seated them with him in heavenly places in Christ Jesus ${ }^{4}$; in like manner St John gives this promise to the Laodiceans in the name of his Lord: 'He that overcometh, I will grant to him to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame and did sit with my Father in His throne ${ }^{5}$.'
2. Warningagainst lukewarmness.
2. But again; after a parting salutation to the Church of Laodicea St Paul closes with a warning to Archippus, apparently its chief pastor; to take heed to his ministry ${ }^{6}$. Some [^14]$\mu \in \tau^{\prime} \dot{\epsilon} \mu \hat{0}$, к.т. $\lambda . \quad$ Here again it must be noticed that there is no such re. semblance in the langrage of the promises to the faithful in the other six Charches. This double coincidence, affecting the two ideas which may be said to cover the whole ground in the Epistle to the Colossians, can hardly, I think, be fortuitous, and suggests an acquaintance with and recognition of the earlier Apostle's teaching on the part of Si John.

${ }^{6}$ Col. iv. $1 \%$.
signs of slackened zeal seem to have called forth this rebuke. It may be an accidental coincidence, but it is at least worthy of notice, that lukewarmness is the special sin denounced in the angel of the Laodiceans, and that the necessity of greater earnestness is the burden of the message to that Church ${ }^{1}$. As with the people, so it is with the priest. The community takes its colour from and communicates its colour to its spiritual rulers. The 'be zealous' of St John is the counterpart to the ' take heed' of St Paul.
3. Lastly; in the Apocalyptic message the pride of wealth is sternly condemned in the Laodicean Church: 'For that thou sayest I am rich and have gotten me riches and have need of nothing, and knowest not that thou art utterly wretched and miserable and beggarly and blind and naked, I counsel thee to buy gold of me refined with fire, that thou mayest have riches". This proud vaunt receives its best illustration from a recent occurrence at Laodicea, to which allusion has already been made. Only a very few years before this date an earthquake had laid the city in ruins. Yet from this catastrophe she rose again with more thran her former splendour. This The vaunt however was not her chief title to respect. While other cities, of cea. prostrated by a like visitation, had sought relief from the concessions of the Roman senate or the liberality of the emperor's purse, it was the glory of Laodicea that she alone neither courted nor obtained assistance, but recovered by her own resources. 'Nullo a nobis remedio,' says the Roman historian, 'propriis opibus revaluit ${ }^{8}$.' Thus she had asserted a proud independence, to which neither far-famed metropolitan Ephesus, nor old imperial Sardis, nor her prosperous commer-

[^15]cial neighbours, Apamea and Cibyra, could lay claim ${ }^{3}$. No one would dispute her boast that she 'had gotten riches and had need of nothing.'

Pride of intellectual wealth.

But is there not a second and subsidiary idea underlying the Apocalyptic rebuke? The pride of intellectual wealth, we may well suspect, was a temptation at Laodicea hardly less strong than the pride of material resources. When St Paul wrote, the theology of the Gospel and the comprehension of the Church were alike endangered by a spirit of intellectual exclusiveness ${ }^{2}$ in these cities. He warned them against a vain philosophy, against a show of wisdom, against an intrusive mystic speculation, which vainly puffed up the fleshly mind ${ }^{3}$. He tacitly contrasted with this false intellectual wealth 'the riches of the glory of God's mystery revealed in Christ ${ }^{4}$, the riches of the full assurance of understanding, the genuine treasures of wisdom and knowledge ${ }^{5}$. May not the same contrast be discerned in the language of St John? The Laodiceans boast of their enlightenment, but they are blind, and to cure their blindness they must seek eye-salve from the hands of the great Physician. They vaunt their wealth of knowledge, but they are wretched paupers, and must beg the refined gold of the Gospel to relieve their wants ${ }^{6}$.

This is the last notice in the Apostolic records relating to the Churches in the valley of the Lycus; but during the succeeding ages the Christian communities of this district play a conspicuous part in the struggles and the development of the Church. When after the destruction of Jerusalem St John ${ }^{1}$ In all the other cases of earth. quake which Tacitus records as happening in these Aaiatic cities, $\Delta n n$. ii. 47 (the twelve cities), iv. 13 (Cibyra), xii. 58 (Apamea), he mentions the fact of their obtaining relief from the Senate or the Emperor. On an earlier occasion Laodicea herself had not disdained under similar ciream. stances to receive assistance from Augustus: Strabo, xii. p. 579 .
${ }^{2}$ See the next chapter of this introduction.
${ }^{3}$ Col. ii. 8, r8; 23.
4 i. 27.
${ }^{5}$ ii. 2,3 .
${ }^{6}$ Comp. Eph. i. 18 'The eyes of your understanding being enlightened, that je may know what is the hope of his calling, what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints.'
fixed his abode at Ephesus, it would appear that not a few of The early the oldest surviving members of the Palestinian Church ac- disciples companied him into 'Asia,' which henceforward became the proconsu-head-quarters of Apostolic authority. In this body of emigrants Andrew ${ }^{1}$ and Philip among the twelve, Aristion and John the presbyter ${ }^{2}$ among other personal disciples of the Lord, are especially mentioned.

Among the chief settlements of this Caristian dispersion was and espeHierapolis. This fact explains how these Phrygian Churches cially at assumed a prominence in the ecclesiastical history of the second lis. century, for which we are hardly prepared by their antecedents as they appear in connexion with St Paul, and which they failed to maintain in the history of the later Church.

Here at all events was settled Philip of Bethsaida ${ }^{3}$, the [^16]tifies the person meant (see Acts xxi. 8). Nothing can be clearer than that St Luke distinguishes Philip the Evangelist from Philip the Apostle; for (I) When the Seven are appointed, he distinctly states that this new office is created to relieve the Twelve of some onerous duties (Acts vi. 2-5). (2) After Philip the Evangelist has preached in Samaria, two of the Twelve are sent thither to convey the gifts of the Spirit, which required the presence of an Apostle (viii. 14-I7). (3) When St Paul and his companions visit Philip at Cæsarea, he is carefully described as 'the Evangelist, being one of the Seven' (xxi. 8). As St Luke was a member of the Apostle's company when this visit was paid, and stayed 'many days' in Philip's house, the accuracy of his information cannot be questioned. Yet Eusebius (H. E. .iii. 3s) assumes the identity of the Apostle with the Evangelist, and describes the notice in the Dialogue of Gaius and Proclus as being 'in harmony with ( $\sigma v y \dot{q} \dot{\delta} \omega v$ )' the langtage of Polycrates. And accordingly in another passage (II. E. iii. 39), when he has occasion

Philip the carly friend and fellow-townsman of St John, and the first Apostle with his daughters. the Gentiles ${ }^{1}$. Here he died and was buried; and here after to mention the conversations of Papias with Philip's daughters at Hierapolis, he again supposes them to be the same who are mentioned in the Acts.

My reasons for believing that the Philip who lived at Hierapolis was not the Erangelist, but the Apostle, are as follows. (I) This is distinctly stated by the earliest witness, Polycrates, who was bishop of Ephesus at the close of the second century, and who besides claimed to have and probably had special opportunities of knowing early traditions. It is confirmed moreover by the notice in Clement of Alexendria, who is the next in order of time, and whose means of information also were good, for one of his earliest teachers was an Ionisn Greek (Strom. 1. 1, p. 322). (2) The other view depends solely on the authority of the Dialogue of Gaius and Proelus. I have given reasons elsewhere for questioning the separate existence of the Roman presbyter Gaius, and for supposing that this dialogne was written by Hippolytus bishop of Portus (Journal of Philology r. p. 9 S sq., Cambridge, 1868). But however this may be, its author was a Roman ecclesiastic, and probably wrote some quarter of a century at least after Polycrates. In all respects therefore his authority is inferior. Moreover it is suspicious in form. It mentions four daughters instead of three, makes them all virgins, and represents them as prophetesses, thus showing a distinct aim of reproducing the particu. lars as given in Acts xxi 9 ; whereas the account of Polycrates is divergent in all three respects. (3) A life-long friendship would naturally draw Philip the Apostle of Bethsaida after John, as it also drew Andrew. And, when we tiaxn to St John's Gospel, wo can hardly resist the impression that incidents relating to Andrew and Philip had a special interest, not only for the writer of the Gospel, but also for his hearers (John i. 40, 43-46, vi. 5-8, xil. 20-22, ziv. 8, 9). Moreover the Apostles Andrew and Philip appear in this Gospel as inseparable companions. (4) Lastly; when Papias mentions collecting the Eayings of the Twelve and of other early disciples from those who heard them, he gives a prominent place to these two Aposbut there is no reference to Philip the Evangelist. When therefore we read later that he conversed with the daughters of Philip, it seems natural to infer that the Philip intended is the same person whom he has mentioned previotasly. It should be added, though no great value can be assigned to such channels of information, that the Acts of Philip place the Apostle at Hierapolis; Tischendorf, Act. Apost. Apoct. p. 75 sq .

On the other hand, those who suppose that the Evangelist, and not the Apostle, resided at Hierapolis, account for the other form of the trisdition by the natural desire of the Asiatic Churches to trace their spiritual descent directly from the Twelve. This solution of the phenomenon might have been accepted, if the authorities in favour of Philip the Evangelist had been prior in time and superior in quality. There is no improbabiJity in supposing that both the Philips were married and had danghters.
${ }^{1}$ John xii. 20.
his decease lived his two virgin daughters, who survived to a very advanced age and thus handed down to the second century the traditions of the earliest days of the Church. A third daughter, who was married, had settled in Ephesus, where her body rested ${ }^{1}$. It was from the two daughters who resided their tra. at Hierapolis, that Papias heard several stories of the first colleoted preachers of the Gospel, which he transmitted to posterity in by Papias. his work ${ }^{2}$.

This Papias had conversed not only with the daughters of Philip, but also with at least two personal disciples of the Lord, Aristion and John the presbyter. He made it his business to gather traditions respecting the sayings of the Saviour and His Apostles; and he published a work in five books, entitled $A n$ Exposition of Oracles of the Lord, using the information thus collected to illustrate the discourses, and perhaps the doings, of Cbrist as recorded in the Gospels ${ }^{3}$. Among other stories he related, apparently on the authority of these danghters of Philip, how a certain dead man had been restored to life in his own day, and how Justus Barsabas, who is mentioned in the Acts, had drunk a deadly poison and miraculously escaped from any evil effects ${ }^{4}$.

[^17][^18]Life and teaching of Papias.

If we may judge by his name, Papias was a native of Phrygia, probably of Hierapolis ${ }^{1}$, of which he afterwards became bishop, and must have grown up to youth or early manhood before the close of the first century. He is said to have suffered martyrdom at Pergamum about the year 165 ; but there is good reason for distrusting this statement, independently of any chronological difficulty which it involves ${ }^{2}$. Other-${ }^{1}$ Papias, or (as it is very frequently written in inseriptions) Pappias, is a common Phrygian name. It is found several times at Hierapolis, not only in inseriptions (Boeckh Corp. Inscr. no. 3930,3912 a add.) but even on coins (Mionnet rr. p. 3or). This is explained by the fact that it was an epithet of the Hierapolitan Zeus in Bithynia this same god was called Majas (Lobeck Aglaoph. p. 1048; see Boeckh Corp. Inscr. III. p. 1051). Hence as the name of a mortal it is equivalent to the Greek Diogenes; e.g. Boeckh no. 3912 a add., Marias tov̂ also mentions a physioian of Laodicea, bearing this name ( $O p$. xul. p. 799, ed. Kühn). In an inscription at Trajanopolis we meet with it in a curious conjunction with other familiar names (Boeekh no. 3865 i add.) IIatrias Tpoфlиou kal Tux<кท̂s к.т. $\lambda$. (see Waddington on Le Bas, Insor. no. 7r8). This last belongs to the year A.d. 199. On other analogous Phrygian names see tho introduction to the Epistlo to Philemos.

Thus at Hierapolis the name Papias is derived from heathen mythology, and accordingly the persons bearing it on the inscriptions and coins are all heathens. It may therefore be presumed that our Papiss was of Gentile origin. The inference however is not absolutely certain. A rabbi of this name is mentioned in the Mishna Shekalim iv, 7, Edaioth vii. 6. These two references aragiven by Zunz Namen der Juden p. зб.
${ }^{2}$ Chron. Pasch. sub. ann. 153 Give фépoutat tà $\mu a \rho \tau \dot{p} \dot{\text { en }}$. See also the Syrian epitome of Euseb. Chron. (in. p. 216 ed. Schöned 'Cum persecutio in Asia esset, Polyearpos martyrium subiit et Papias, quorum martyria in libro (scripta) extant,' but the Armenian version of the Chronicon mentions only Polycarp, while Jerome says 'Polycarpus et Pionius fecere martyrium.' In his history (iv. 15) Eusebing, after quoting the Martyrdom of Polycarp at toviкjs к.т. 入. He here apparently falls into the error of imagining that Metrodorus, Pionius, Carpus, Papylns, and the others were martyred under M. Aurelins, whereas we know from their extant Acts that they suffered in the Decian persecution. For the Martyrdoms of Pionius and Metrodorus see Act. SS. Bolland. Feb. i ; for those of Carpus, Papylus, and Agathonica, ib. April 13. The Acts of the former, which are included in Ruinart (Act. Sinc. Mart. p. 120 Sq., 1689) are appa.

wise he must have lived to a very advanced age. Eusebius, to Account of whom chiefly we owe our jnformation respecting him, was repelled by his millennarian views, and describes him as a man of mean intelligence ${ }^{1}$, accusing him of misunderstanding the Apostolic sayings respecting the kingdom of Christ and thus interpreting in a material sense expressions which were intended to be mystical and symbolical. This disparaging account, though one-sided, was indeed not altogether undeserved, for his love of the marvellous seems to have overpowered his faculty of discrimination. But the adverse verdict of Eusebius must be corrected by the more sympathetic language of Irenæus ${ }^{2}$, who possibly may have known him personally, and who certainly must have been well acquainted with his reputation and character.

Much has been written respecting the relation of this writer to the Canonical Gospels, but the discussion has no very direct bearing on our special subject, and may be dismissed here ${ }^{\text {s }}$. One question however, which has a real importance rently the same which were seen by Eusebins. Those of the latter are a late compilation of the Metaphrast, but were perbaps founded on the earlier document. At all events the tradition of the persecution in which they suffered could hardly have been perverted or lost. Eusebius seems to have foond their Acts bound up in the same volume with those of Polycarp, and without reading them through, to have drawn the hasty inference that they suffered at the same time. But notwithstanding the error, or perhaps owing to it, this passage in the Ecolesiastical History, by a confasion of the names Papias and Papylus, seems to have given rise to the statement respecting Papias in the Chronicon Paschale and in the Syrian epitome, as it obviously has misled Jerome respecting Pionius. This part of the Chronicon Paschale is plainly taken from Eusebias, as the coincidences of expression and the sequence of events alike show. The martyrdom of Papiss therefore appears to be a fiction, and he may have died a natural death at an earlier date. Polycarp's martyrdom is shown by M. Waddington's investigations to have taken place A.D. 155 or 156 ; see Mémoire sur la Chronologie du Rhéteur Alius Aristide p. $2^{2}{ }^{2}$ sq., in the Mém. de l'Acad. des Insor. xxvi (1867).
 voûp. In another passage (iii. $3^{6}$ ), as commonly read, Eusebius makes partial amends to Papias by calling him sage is fond to be a spurious interpolation (see Contemporary Review, August, 1867, p. 12), and was probably added by some one who was acquainted with the work of Papias and desired to do him justice.

[^19]as affecting the progress of the Gospel in these parts, has been raised by modern criticism and must not be passed over in silence.

A modern hypothesis respeeting Christianity in AsiaMinor stated and disoussed.

It has been supposed that there was an entire dislocation and discontinuity in the history of Christianity in Asia Minor at a certain epoch; that the Apostle of the Gentiles was ignored and his teaching repudiated, if not anathematized; and that on its ruins was erected the standard of Judaism, around which with a marvellous unanimity deserters from the Pauline Gospel rallied. Of this retrograde faith St John is supposed to have been the great champion, and Papias a typical and important representative ${ }^{1}$.

The subject, as a whole, is too wide for a full investigation here. I must content myself with occupying a limited area, showing not only the historical baselessness, but the strong inherent improbability of the theory, as applied to Hierapolis and the neighbouring churches. As this district is its chief strong-hold, a repulse at this point must involve its ultimate defeat along the whole line.

The position of St John and of Papias.

Of St John himself I have already spoken ${ }^{2}$. It has been shown that his language addressed to these Churches is not only not opposed to St Paul's teaching, but presents remarkable coincidences with it. So far at least the theory finds no support; and, when from St John we turn to Papias, the case is not different. The advocates of the hypothesis in question lay the chief stress of their argument on the silence of Papias, or rather of Eusebius. Eusebius quotes a passage from Papias, in which the bishop of Hierapolis mentions collecting from trustworthy sources the sayings of certain Apostles and early disciples; but St Paul is not named among them. He also gives short extracts from Papias referring to the Gospels of St Matthew and St Mark, and mentions that this writer made [^20]use of the first Epistle of St John and the first Epistle of St Peter; but here again there is no allusion to St Paul's writings. Whether referring to the personal testimony or to the Canonical writings of the Apostles, Papias, we are reminded, is equally silent about St Paul.

On both these points a satisfactory answer can be given; but the two cases are essentially different, and must be considered apart.
(I) The range of personal testimony which Papias would be able to collect depended on his opportunities. Before he had grown up to manhood, the personal reminiscences of St Paul

1. The traditions collected by Papias. would have almost died out. The Apostle of the Gentiles had not resided more than three years even at Ephesus, and seems to have paid only one brief visit to the valley of the Lycus, even if he visited it at all. Such recollections of St Paul as might once have lingered here would certainly be overshadowed by and forgotten in the later sojourn of St John, which, beginning where they ceased, extended over more than a quarter of a century. To St John, and to those personal disciples of Christ who surrounded him, Papias and his contemporaries would naturally and almost inevitably look for the traditions which they so eagerly collected. This is the case with the leading representative of the Asiatic school in the next generation, Jrenæus, whose traditions are almost wholly derived from St John and his companions, while at the same time he evinces an entire sympathy with the work and teaching of St Paul. But indeed, even if it had been otherwise, the object which Papias had directly in view did not suggest any appeal to St Paul's authority. He was writing an 'Exposition of Oracles of the Lord,' and he sought to supplement and interpret these by traditions of our Lord's life, such as eyewitnesses only could give. St Paul could have no place among those personal disciples of Christ, of whom alone he is speaking in this preface to his work, which Eusebius quotes.
(2) But, though we have no right to expect any mention 2. His reof St Paul where the appeal is to personal testimony, yet with the Canonical writings.
quotations from or references to the Canonical writings the case, it may be argued, is different. Here at all events we might look for some recognition of St Paul. To this argument it would perhaps be a sufficient reply, that St Paul's Epistles do not furnish any matter which must necessarily have been introduced into a work such as Papias composed. But the complete and decisive answer is this; that the silence of Euse${ }^{\bullet}$ bius, so far from carrying with it the silence of Papias, does not No weight even afford a presumption in this direction. Papias may have to be esttashed to the silence of Easebius. quoted St Paul again and again, and yet Eusebius would see no reason to chronicle the fact. His usage in other cases is decisive on this point. The Epistle of Polycarp which was read by Eusebius is the same which we still possess. Not only does it teem with the most obvious quotations from St Paul, but in one passage it directly mentions his writing to the Philippians ${ }^{1}$. Yet the historian, describing its relation to the Canonical Scriptures, contents himself with saying that it 'employs some testimonies from the former Epistle of Peter2.' Exactly similar is his language respecting Irenæus also. Irenæus, as is well known, cites by name almost every one of St Paul's Epistles; yet the description which Eusebius gives under this same head, after quoting this writer's notices respecting the history of the Gospels and the Apocalypse, is that 'he mentions also the first Epistle of John, alleging very many testimonies from it, and in like manner also the former Epistle of Peter ${ }^{3 .}$. There is every reason therefore to suppose that Eusebius would deal with Papias as he has dealt with Polycarp and Irenæus, and that, unless Papias had introduced some [^21][^22]curious fact relating to St Paul, it would not have occurred to him to record mere quotations from or references to this Apostle's letters. It may be supposed that Eusebius records with a fair amount of attention references to the Catholic Epistles in early writers, because the limits of the Canon in this part were not accurately fixed. On the other hand the Epistles of St Paul were universally received and therefore did not need to be accredited by any such testimony. But whatever may be the explanation, the fact is patent, and it furnishes a complete answer to the argument drawn from his silence in the case of Papias ${ }^{1}$.

But, ff the assumption has been proved to be baseless, have we any grounds for saying that it is also highly improbable? Here it seems fair to argue from the well-known to the un- known. Of the opinions of Papias respecting St Paul we know absolutely nothing; of the opinions of Polycarp and Irenæus ample evidence lies before us. Noscitur a sociis is a sound maxim to apply in such a case. Papias was a companion of Polycarp, and he is quoted with deference by Irenæus ${ }^{2}$. Is it probable that his opinions should be diametrically opposed to those of his friend and contemporary on a cardinal point affecting the very conception of Christianity (for the rejection of St Paul must be considered in this light)? or that this vital heterodoxy, if it existed, should have escaped an intelligent critic of the next generation who had the five books of his work before him, who himself had passed his early life in Asia

[^23]> is even more remarkable in other cases. Thus, when speaking of the epistle of the Roman Clement (H.E. iii. 38), he alludes to the coincidences with the Epistle to the Hebrews, bat omits to mention the direct references to St Paul's First Epistle to the Corinthians whioh is referred to by name. I have discussed the whole subject in the Contemporary Review, January, 1875, p. 169 sq.
> ${ }^{2}$ Iren. Har. v. 33.4.

Minor, and who yet appeals to Papias as preserving the doctrinal tradition which had been handed down from the Apostles themselves to his own time? I say nothing of Eusebius himself, who, with a distinct prejudice against Papias, accuses him of no worse heresy in his writings than entertaining millennarian views.

Millennarian views consistent with the recognition of St Paral.

It may indeed be confessed that a man like Papias, whose natural bent, assisted by his Phrygian education, was towards sensuous views of religion, would not be likely to appreciate the essentially spiritual teaching of St Paul; but this proves nothing. The difference between unconscious want of sympathy and conscious rejection is all-important for the matter in hand. The same charge might be brought against numberless theologians, whether in the middle ages or in more modern times, into whose minds it never entered to question the authority of the Apostle and who quote his writings with the utmost reverence. Neither in the primitive days of Christianity nor in its later stages has the profession of Chiliastic views been found inconsistent with the fullest recognition of St Paul's Apostolic claims. In the early Church Irenæus and Tertullian are notable instances of this combination; and in our own age and country a tendency to millennarian speculations has been commonly associated with the staunchest adherence to the fundamental doctrines of St Paul.

As the successor of Papias and the predecessor of Claudius Apollinaris in the see of Hierapolis, we may perhaps name Abercits Abercius or Avincius ${ }^{1}$. His legendary Acts assign his epi-

Abstract

${ }^{1}$ The life of this Abercius is printed in the Bollandist Aeta Sanetorum Oct. 22. It may safely be pronounced spurious. Among other incidents, the saint goes to Rome and caste out a demon from Lucilla, the daughter of M. Anrelius and Faustina, at the same time complling the demon to take up an altar from Rome and transport it through the air to Hierapolis. But these Acts, though legendary them.

[^24]scopate to the reign of Marcus Aurelius; and, though they probably are disfigured by extravagant fictions, yet the date may perhaps sis. succes. be accepted, as it seems to be confirmed by other evidence. An inscription on his tombstone recorded how he had paid one taught him trustworthy writings ( $\gamma \rho \alpha{ }^{\alpha} \mu-$ $\mu a \tau a \pi t \sigma \pi d)$ and sent him to visit queenly Rome, where he saw a people sealed with the bright seal [of baptism]. He recounts also a journey to Syria and the East, when he crossed the Euphrates. He says that faith served up to him as a banquet the IXAYC from the fountain, giving him bread and wine. He states that he has reached his 7and year. And he closes by threatening with severe penalties those who disturb his tomb. The resemblance of this inscription to others found in situ in the cemetery at Hierapolis, after allowance mede for the Christian element, is very striking. The commencement ' $E_{\kappa} \lambda \varepsilon \kappa \tau \hat{\eta} s \pi_{o ́ \lambda \epsilon \omega}$ closely resembles the form of another Hierspolitam insaription, Boeakh Corp. Inser. 3906; the enumeration of foreign tours has a counterpart in the monament of one Flavius Zeuxis which states that the decessed had made 73 voyages roand the promontory of Malea to Itaily (ii. 3920); and lastly, the prohibition against putting another grave upon his, and the imposition of fines to be paid to the treasury and the city if this injunction is violated, are echos of language which oceurs again and again on tombstones in this city (ib. 3915, 3916, 3922, 3923, etc.). Out of this epitaph, which he found probably at Hierapolis, and which, as he himself tells us ( $\$ 4 \mathrm{r}$ ), was in a much mutilated condition, the legend-writer apparently created his story, interpreting the queen, by which Abercius him. self probably meant the city of Rome, to be the empress Faustina, with whom the saint is represented as having an interfiew, M. Aurelins himself being absent at the time on his German campaign. This view, that the epitaph is genuine and gave rise to the Acts, is also maintained by Garrucci (Civiltà Cattolica 1856, 1. p. 683 , II. p. 84 , quoted in the Acta Sanct. 1. e.), whose criticisms however are not always eonnd; and indeed as a whole it bears every mark of authenticity, though possibly it may contain some interpolations, which its mutilated condition would encorrage. The name Aburcius occurs in Corp. Inscr. Lat. V1. I27.

The inscription itself however does not tell us what office Abercius held or when he lived. There was a person of this name, bishop of Hierapolis, present at the Council of Chalcedon A.D. 451 (Labb. Conc. Iv. 862, 1204, 1341, 1392, 1496, 1744 , ed. Coleti). But a chief pastor of the Church at this Iate date would havedeclared hisoffice plainly; and the inscription points to a more primitive. age, for the expressions are archaic and the writer seems to veil his profession of Christianity under langaage studiously obscare. The open profession of Christianity on inscriptions occurs at an earlier date in these parts than elsowhere. Already the word XPICTIANOC or XPHCTIANOC is found on tomb. stones of the third century; Boeckh Corp. Inscr. $3^{8575}$ E, $3^{857} \mathbf{~ p ,} 386_{5}$ 1; see Renan Saint Paul p. 363. Thus we are entirely at fault unless we accept the statement in the Aots.

And it is not unreasonable to suppose that, so far as regards the date and office of Abercius, the writer of these Acts followed some adequate historical tradition. Nor indeed is his statement altogether withoat confirmation. We have evidence that a

His jour- visit to the city of Rome, and another to the banks of the деуs. Euphrates. These long journeys are not without parallels in the lives of contemporary bishops. Polycarp of Smyrna visited Rome, hoping to adjust the Paschal controversy; Melito of person bearing this name lived in these parts of Asia Minor, somewhere about this time. An unknown writer of a polemical tract against Montanism dedicates his work to one Avircius Marcellas, at whose instigation it was written. Eusebius (H. E. v. I6), who is our authority for this fact, relates that Montanism found a determined and formidable opponent in Apollinaris at Hierapolis and 'several other learned men of that day with him,' who left large materials for a history of the movement. He then goes on to say; ${ }^{2} \rho \chi$ ducvos roûv $\tau$ fis $\kappa \alpha \tau^{\prime}$ aن́T $\hat{\nu} \gamma \gamma \rho a \phi \hat{\eta} s \tau \hat{\omega} \nu \in l \rho \eta \mu \in \nu \omega \nu \delta \eta \tau i s$ i.e. 'One of the aforesaid writers at the commencement of his treatise against them (the Montanists) etc.' May not the person here addressed be the Abercius of the epitaph?

But if so , who is the writer that addresses him, and when did he live? Some mss omit of Tts, and others substitute $\tilde{\eta} \delta \eta$, thus making Apollinaris himself the writer. But the words seem certainly to have been part of the original text, as the sense requires them; for if they are omitted, т $\hat{\omega}$ y $l$ $\rho \eta \mu \epsilon \nu \omega \nu$ must be connected with кar' aù $\boldsymbol{T} \omega \bar{v}$, where it is not wanted. Thus Eusebius quotes the writer anonymously; and those who assign the treatise to Apollinaris cannot plead the authority of the original text of the historian himself.

But after all may it not have been written by Apollinaris, though Euse-bins was uncertain about the authorship? He quotes in succession three бо $\gamma \gamma \rho с \dot{\mu} \mu a \tau a$ or treatises, speaking of them as though they emanated from the same author. The first of these, from which the address to Avircius Marcellus is quoted, might very well have been composed soon after the Montanist controversy broke ont (as Eusebius himself elsewhere states was the case with the work of Apollinaris, second and third distinctly state that they were written some time after the death of Montanus. May not Eusebins have had before him a volume containing a collection of tracts against Montanism 'by Claudius Apollinaris and others,' in which the anthorship of the several tracts was not distinctly marked? This hypothesis would explain the words with which he prefaces his extracts, and would also account for his vague manner of quotation. It would also explain the omission of oin tis in some texts (the ancient Syriao version boldly subatitutes the name of Apollinaris), and would explain how Rufinus, Nicephorus, and others, who might have had independent information, aseribed the treatise to this father. I have already pointed out how Eusebius whs led into $a$ similar error of connecting together several martyrologies and treating them as contemporaneous, because they were collected in the same volume ( $p .48$, note 2). Elsewhere too I have endeaveured to ahow that he mistook the authorship of a tract which was bound up with others, Sardis went as far as Palestine, desiring to ascertain on the spot the facts relating to the Canon of the Old Testament Scriptures. These or similar motives may have influenced Abercius to undertake his distant journeys. If we may assume the identification of this bishop with one Avircius Marcellis who is mentioned in a contemporary document, he took an active interest in the Montanist controversy, as from his position he was likely to do.

The literary character of the see of Hierapolis, which had Cundius been inaugurated by Papias, was ably sustained by Cladodios karis biApollinaris. His surname, which seems to have been com- shop of mon in these parts ${ }^{1}$, may have been derived from the patron lis.
owing to the absence of a title (Caius or Hippolytus? in the Journal of Philology x p. 98 8q.).

On this hypotheris, Claudius Apollinaris would very probsbly be the author of the first of these treatises. If so, it would appear to have been written while he was still a presbyter, at the instigation of his bishop Avircias Marcellus whom he succeeded not long atter in the see of Hierapolis.

If on the other hand Eusebius has correctly assigned the first treatise to the same writer as the second and third, who must have written after the beginning of the third century, Avircius Marcellus to whom it is addressed cannot have held the see of Hierapolis during the reign of M. Aurelius (A.D. 161-180); and, if he was ever bishop of this city, mast have been a successor, not a predecessor, of Claudius Apollinaris. In this case we have the alternative of abandoning the identification of this Avircius with the Hierapolitan bishop of the same name, or of rejecting the statement of the Acts which places his episoopate in this reign.

The occurrence of the name Abercius in the later history of the see of Hierapolis (see p. 55) is no argament against the existence of this earlier bishop. It was no uncommon practice for the later occupants of sees to assume the name of some famous predecessor whe lived in primitive or early times. The case of Ignatius at Antioch is only one of several examples which might be produced.

There is some ground for supposing that, like Papias and Apollinaris, Abercius earned a place in literary history. Baronio had in his hands an epistle to M. Aurelins, purporting to have bean written by this Abercius, which he obviously considered genuine and which he describes as 'apostolicum redolens spiritom,' promising to pablish it in his Annals (Martyr. Rom. Oct. 22). To his great grief however he afterwards lost it ('doluimus vehementer e manibus nostris elapsam nescio quomodo'), and was therefore unable to fulfil his promise (Annal. s.a. 1б3, n. 15). A $\beta\left(\beta \lambda_{1}\right.$ os $\delta i \delta a \sigma \kappa \alpha \lambda i a s ~ b y ~$ Abercius is mentioned in the Acts (\$39); but this, if it ever existed, was doubtless spurious.
${ }^{1}$ Some of the family, as we may infer from the monuments, held a high pesition in another Phrygian town. On a tablet at $\nVdash z a n i$, on which deity of Hierapolis ${ }^{1}$ and suggests a Gentile origin. His intimate acquaintance with heathen literature, which is mentioned by more than one ancient writer, points in the same direction. During the reign of M . Aurelius he had already made himself a name by his writings, and seems to have been promoted to the see of Hierapolis before the death of that emperor${ }^{2}$.

His literary worka.

Of his works, which were very numerous, only a few scanty fraginents have survived ${ }^{8}$. The imperfect lists however, which have reached us, bear ample testimony both to the literary activity of the man, and to the prominence of the Church over which he presided, in the great theological and ecclesiastical controversies of the age.

He takes part in the two chief controversies of the day.

The two questions, which especially agitated the Churches of Asia Minor during the last thirty years of the first century, were the celebration of the Easter festival and the pretensions of the Montanist prophets. In both disputes Claudius Apollinaris took an active and conspicuous part.
r. The Paschal controversy, after smouldering long both is inseribed a letter from the emperor Septimius Severus in reply to the congratulations of the people at the elevation of Caracalla to the rank of Augustus (A.D. 198), we find the name of NOC, Boeekh 3837 (see III. p. 1066 add.). In another inscription at the same place, the same or another member of the family is commemorated as holding the office of pretor for the second time, стрathroyntoc. TO.B. кл. atoMMinapioy; Boeckh 3840, ib. p. 1067 . See also the inscriptions $3^{8} 4^{2} \mathrm{c}, 3{ }^{8} 4^{6} \mathrm{z}$ (ib. pp. ro6i9, ro7 8 ) at the same place, where again the name Apollinarius occurs. It is found also at Appia no. 3857 b (ib. p. 1080). At an earlier date one Claudius Apollinaris appears in command of the Roman fleet at Misenum (Tac. Hist. iii. 57, 76; 77). The name occurs also at Hierapolis itself, Boeckh, no. 3915, 7 .
 IOYAIANO[Y]. Y'Oc . ce[...] . amodAINapIC . MAKE $\triangle \omega N$. к. T. $\lambda$., which shows that both the forms, Apollinaris and Apollinarius, by which the bishop of Hierapolis is designated, arelegitimate. The former however is the correct Latin form, the latter being the Greek adaptation.

More than a gencration later than our Apollinaris, Origen in his letter to Africanus (Op. I. 30, Delarue) sends greeting to a bishop bearing this name ( $\tau \grave{\partial} \nu \kappa a \lambda \dot{\partial} \nu \dot{\eta} \mu \omega \hat{\nu} \nu \pi \dot{d} \pi a \nu$ ' $A \pi o \lambda \iota \nu \dot{d} \rho \omega \nu$ ), of whom nothing more is known.
${ }^{1}$ Apollo Archegetes; see above p. 12, note I.
${ }^{9}$ Euseb. H. E. iv. 26, Chron. s. a. 171, 172, "Apollinaris Asianus, Hierapolitanus episcopus, insignis habetur.'
${ }^{3}$ Collected in Roath's Reliquia Sacre 1. p. 159 sq., and more recently in Otto's Corp. $\Delta$ pol. Christ. Ix. p. 479 sq .
here and elsewhere, first burst into flames in the neighbouring $\mathrm{I}_{\mathrm{I}}$. The Church of Laodicea ${ }^{1}$. An able bishop of Hierapolis therefore $\begin{aligned} & \text { Pasehal } \\ & \text { question }\end{aligned}$ must necessarily have been involved in the dispute, even if he had been desirous of avoiding it. What side Apollinaris took in the controversy the extant fragments of his work do not by themselves enable us to decide; for they deal merely with a subsidiary question which does not seriously affect the main issue ${ }^{2}$. But we can hardly doubt that with Polycarp of Smyrna and Melito of Sardis and Polycrates of Ephesus he defended the practice which was universal in Asia ${ }^{3}$, observing the Paschal anniversary on the 14th Nisan whether it fell on a Friday or not, and invoking the authority of St John at Ephesus, and of St Philip at his own Hierapolis', against the divergent usage of Alexandria and Palestine and the West.
2. His writings on the Montanist controversy were still more famous, and are recommended as an authority on the subject by Serapion of Antioch a few years after the author's death ${ }^{5}$. Though later than many of his works ${ }^{6}$, they were written soon after Montanus had divulged the extravagance of his pretensions and before Montanism had attained its complete development. If a later notice may be trusted, Apollinaris was not satisfied with attacking Montanism in writing, but summoned at Hierapolis a council of twenty-six bishops besides

[^25][^26]himself，where this heresy was condemned and sentence of excommunication pronounced against Montanus together with his adherent the pretended prophetess Maximilla ${ }^{2}$ ．

His other hæresiolo－ gical writ－ ings．

Nor were his controversial writings confined to these two topics．In one place he refuted the Encratites ${ }^{2}$ ；in another he upheld the orthodox teaching respecting the true humanity of Christ ${ }^{3}$ ．It is plain that he did not confine himself to questions especially affecting Asia Minor；but that the doctrine and the

Abstract

${ }^{1}$ Included in the Libellus Synadi－ cus published by Pappus；see Labb． Conc．I．6i5，ed．Coleti．Though this council is not mentioned elsewhere， there is no sufficient ground for ques－ tioning its mathenticity．The import－ ant part taken by Apollinaris against the Montanists is recognised by Eu－

After mentioning the council the compiler of this Synodicon speaks thus of the false prophets；ol каl $\beta \lambda a \sigma \phi 力-$
 au＇tós татท̂p［i．e．＇Amo入ıváplos］，тòv Bloy
 каl Өebiotov rò $\sigma \kappa u \tau \xi$ ．He evidently has before him the fragments of the anonymous treatises quoted by Euse－ bius（ $H . E$ ．叉．16），as the following parallels taken from these fragments

 Thus be must have had before him a text of Ensebius which omitted the words $\delta \phi$ tos at the commencement，as they are omitted in some existing mss（see above，p．56，note）；and ac－ cordingly he ascribed all the treatises to Apollinaris．The parallels are taken from the first and second tres－ tises；the first might have been written by Apollinaris，but the second was certainly not by his band，as it re－ fers to mach later events（see above， p． 56 ）．

Hefele（Conciliengeschichte 1．p．71） places the date of this conncil be－ fore 4．D． 150 ．But if the testimony of Eusebius is worth anything，this is impossible；for he states that the writings of Claudius Apollinaris － gainst the Montanists were later than his Apology to M．Aturelius（see p．59， note 6），and this Apology was not written till after A．D． 174 （see p．6I， note r）．The chronology of Montanism is very perplexing，but Hefele＇s dates appear to be much too early．The Chronicon of Ensebius gives the rise of Montanism under A．D． 172 or 173 ， and this statement is consistent with the notices in his History．But if this date be correct，it most probably refers to Montanism as a distinct system；and the fires had probably been smouldering within the Church for some time before they broke out．

It will be observed that the writer of the Synodicon identifies Theodotus the Montanist（see Euseb．H．E．₹．3） with Theodotus the leather－seller who was a Monarchian．There is no au－ thority for this identification in Euse－ bius．

2 Theodoret．H．F．i．21．
${ }^{8}$ Socr．TH．E．iii．7．
practice of the Church generally found in him a vigorous advocate, who was equally opposed to the novelties of heretical teaching and to the rigours of overstrained asceticism.

Nor again did Apollinaris restrict himself to controversies carried on between Christian and Christian. He appears alike as the champion of the Gospel against attacks from without, and as the promoter of Christian life and devotion within the pale of the Church. On the one hand he was the author of an His apoloapology addressed to M. Aurelius ${ }^{1}$, of a controversial treatise in five books against the Greeks, and of a second in two books against the Jews ${ }^{2}$; on the other we find mentioned among his writings a work in two books on Truth, and a second on Piety, and dibesides several of which the titles have not come down to us ${ }^{3}$. works, He seems indeed to have written on almost every subject which interested the Church of his age. He was not only well versed in the Scriptures, but showed a wide acquaintance with secular [^27]interpretation of his author's meaning.

The name of this legion was Fulminata, not Fulminatrix, as it is often carelessly written out, where the inscriptions have merely frum.; see Becker and Marquardt Rimm. Alterth. III. 2, p. 353 .
${ }^{2}$ The words кal $\pi \rho \delta$ 'Iou $\delta a l o u s \pi \rho \omega$ toy kal סeútepoy are omitted in some mss and by Rufinus. They are found however in the very ancient Syriac version, and are dorbtless genuine. Their omission is due to the homoeoteleuton, as they are immediately pre§é́repod.
${ }^{3}$ A list of his works is given by Eusebius (H.E. iv. 27), who explains that there were many others which he bad not seen. This list omits the work on the Paschal Feast, which is quoted in the Chronicon Paschale p. 13 (ed. Dind.), and the treatise on Piety, of which we know from Photius Bibl. 14.
literature also ${ }^{1}$. His style is praised by a competent judge ${ }^{2}$, and his orthodoxy was such as to satisfy the dogmatic precision of the post-Nicene age ${ }^{3}$.

These facts are not unimportant in their bearing on the question which has already been discussed in relation to Papias

Important bearing of these facts on the history of Christianity. If there had.been such a discontinuity of doctrine and practice in the Church of Hierapolis as the theory in question assumes, if the Pauline Gospel was repudiated in the later years of the first century and rank Judaism adopted in its stead, how can we explain the position of Apollinaris? Obviously a counterrevolution must have taken place, which undid the effects of the former. One dislocation must have been compensated by another. And yet Irenæus knows nothing of these religious convulsions which must have shaken the doctrine of the Church to its foundations, but represents the tradition as one, continuous, unbroken, reaching back through the elders of the Asiatic Churches, through Papias and Polycarp, to St John himselfIrenæus who received his Christian education in Asia Minor, who throughout life was in communication with the churches there, and who had already reached middle age when this second revolution is supposed to have occurred. The demands on our credulity, which this theory makes, are enormous. And its improbability becomes only the more glaring, as we extend our view. For the solidarity of the Church is the one striking fact unmistakably revealed to us, as here and there the veil which shrouds the history of the second century is lifted. Anicetus and Soter and Eleutherus and Victor at Rome, Pantænus and Clement at Alexandria, Polycrates at Ephesus, Papias and Apollinaris at Hierapolis, Polycarp at Smyrna, Melito at Sardis, Ignatius and Serapion at Antioch, Primus and Dionysius at Corinth, Pothinus and Irenæus in Gaul, Philippus

Solidarity of the Church in the second century.

[^28]and Pinytus in Crete, Hegesippus and Narcissus in Palestine, all are bound together by the ties of a common organization and the sympathy of a common creed. The Paschal controversy is especially valuable, as showing the limits of divergence consistent with the unity of the Church. The study of this controversy teaches us to appreciate, with ever-increasing force the pregnant saying of Irenæus that the difference of the usage establishes the harmony of the faith ${ }^{\mathbf{1}}$.

Though Laodicea cannot show the same intellectual activity Activity of Laodicer. as Hierapolis, yet in practical energy she is not wanting.

One of those fitful persecutions, which sullied the rule of Martyrthe imperial Stoic, deprived Laodicea of her bishop Sagaris ${ }^{2}$. Samaris The exact date of his martyrdom is not known; but we cannot ${ }^{\text {c. A.D. r65. }}$ be far wrong in assigning it to an early year in the reign of M. Aurelius ${ }^{\text {s }}$. His name appears to have been held in great honour ${ }^{4}$.

But while the Church of Laodicea was thus contending Outbreak against foes without, she was also torn asunder by feuds within. of thal conCoincident with the martyrdom of Sagaris was the outburst of troversy. the Paschal controversy, of which mention has been already made, and which for more than a century and a half disturbed the peace of the Church, until it was finally laid at rest by the [^29]Council of Nicaa. The Laodiceans would naturally regulate their festival by the Asiatic or Quartodeciman usage, strictly observing the day of the month and disregarding the day of the week. But a great commercial centre like Laodicea must have attracted large crowds of foreign Christians from Palestine or Egypt or Rome or Gaul, who were accustomed to commemorate the Passion always on a Friday and the Resurrection on a Sunday according to the western practice; and in this way probably the dispute arose. The treatise on the Paschal Festival by Melito of Sardis was written on this occasion to defend the Asiatic practice. The fact that Laodicea became the head-quarters of the controversy is a speaking testimony to the prominence of this Church in the latter half of the second century.

Hierapolis and Laodicea in later history.

At a later date the influence of both Hierapolis and Laodicea has sensibly declined. In the great controversies of the fourth and fifth centuries they take no conspicuous part. Among their loishops there is not one who has left his mark on history. And yet their names appear at most of the great Councils, in which The Arian they bear a silent part. At Nicæa Hierapolis was represented heresy. Nicas A.D. 325 . by Flaccus ${ }^{1}$, Laodicea by Nunechius ${ }^{2}$. They both acquiesced in its decrees, and the latter as metropolitan published them throughout the Phrygian Churchess. Soon after, both sees lapsed into Arianism. At the synod of Philippopolis, composed of bishops who had seceded from the Council of Sardica, the representatives of these two sees were present and joined in the condemnation of the Athanasians. On this occasion Hierapolis was still represented by Flaccus, who had thus turned traitor to his former faith ${ }^{4}$. On the other hand Laodicea had changed its bishop twice meanwhile. Cecropius had won the [^30][^31]imperial favour by his abuse of the orthodox party, and was first promoted to Laodicea, whence he was translated to Nicomedia ${ }^{1}$. He was succeeded by Nonnius, who signed the Arian decree at Philippopolis ${ }^{2}$. When these sees recovered their orthodoxy we do not know; but it is perhaps a significant fact, that neither [Constas-

 tinople (A.D. 381$)^{3}$. At the third general Council, which met the Nes. at Ephesus, Laodicea is represented by Aristonicus, Hierapolis $\begin{aligned} & \text { torian and } \text { Eutychan }\end{aligned}$ by Venantius ${ }^{4}$. Both bishops sign the decrees condemning $\frac{\text { heresies. }}{\text { Epresos. }}$ Nestorius. Again in the next Christological controversy which 4.D. 43 . agitated the Church the two sees bear their part. At the notorious Robbers' Synod, held also at Ephesus, Laodicea was Latrocinrepresented by another Nunechius, Hierapolis by Stephanus. ${ }_{\text {A.D. }}$ ium. Both bishops committed themselves to the policy of Dioscorus and the opinions of the heretic Eutyches ${ }^{5}$. Yet with the fickleness which characterized these sees at an earlier date during the Arian controversy, we find their representatives two years later at the Council of Chalcedon siding with the orthodox Crazoz. party and condemning the Eutychian heresy which they had a.D. 4 Ir.

[^32]ally in those of the Council of Chatcedon, Laodicea is surnamed Trimitaria (see above, p. 18, note 2). Following Le Quien (Or. Christ. 1. p. 835), I have assumed the Staphanus who was present at the Latrocinium to have been bishop of the Phrygian Hierapolis, though I bave not found any decisive indication which Hierapolis is meant. On the other hand the bishop of the Syrian Hierapolis at this time certainly bore the name Stephanus (Labb. Conc. Iv. 727, 1506, [1550], 1644, $1836,7.46$ ); and the synod held under Stephanus s.D. 445, which Wiltsch (Geography and Statistics of the Church 1. p. 170, Eng. Trans.) assigns to our Hierapolis, belongs to the Syrian city of the same name, as the connexion with Perrha shews: Labb. Gonc. Iv. 727, 1644.
so lately supported ${ }^{1}$. Nunechius is still bishop of Laodicea, and reverses his former vote. Stephanus has been succeeded at Hierapolis by Abercius, whose orthodoxy, so far as we know, had not been compromised by any previous expression of opinion ${ }^{2}$.

The history of these churches at a later date is such as Later vacillation of these sees.

Theircomparative unimportance.

Councri or Labidces an ex. ception. might have been anticipated from their attitude during the period of the first Four General Councils. The sees of Laodicea and Hierapolis, one or both, are represented at all the more important assemblies of the Church; and the same vacillation and infirmity of purpose, which had characterized their holders in the earlier councils, marks the proceedings of their later successors ${ }^{3}$.

But, though the two sees thus continue to bear witness to their existence by the repeated presence of their occupants at councils and synods, yet the real influence of Laodicea and Hierapolis on the Church at large has terminated with the close of the second century. On one occasion only did either community assume a position of prominence, About the middle of the fourth century a council was held at Laodicea ${ }^{4}$. It
I Labb. Conc. $17.853,862$, 1195,
1204, 124I, 1352, 1337, 1383, 1392,
$1444,1445,1463,1480,148 \mathrm{I}, 1496$,
1501, 1505, 1756, 1732, 1736, 1744, 1746, 175 .
${ }^{2}$ The bishops of both sees ore addressed by the Emperor Leo in his letter respecting the Council of Chalcedon: but their replies are not preserved. Nunechius is still bishop of Liaodicea; but Hierapolis has again changed hands, and Philippus has succeeded Abercius (Labb. Conc. Iv.
${ }_{18} 86 \mathrm{sq}$.). Nunechins of Laodicea was one of those who sigued the decred against simony at the Council of Constentinople (A.D. 459) : Conc. v. 50.
${ }^{3}$ See for instance the tergiversation of Theodorus of Laodicea and Ig. natius of Hierapolis in the matter of Photius and the 8th General Council.
4 This council cannot have been held earlier than the year 344, as the $7^{\text {th }}$ camon makes mention of the Photinians, and Photinus did not attract notice before that year: see Hefele, Conciliengesch., 1. p. 722 sq . In the ancient lists of Councils it stands after that of Antioch (A.D. 34r), and before that of Conktantinople (A.D. 38r). Dr Westcott (History of the Canon p. 400) is inclined to place it about A.D. $3^{63}$, and this is the time very generally adopted.
Here bowever a difficulty presente itself, which has not been noticed hitherto. In the Syriac ms Drit. Mus. Add. 14,528 , are lists of the bishope present at the earlier coancils, inoluding Laodicea (see Wright's Catalogue of the Syriac MSS in the British Museum, nocory, p. rozo sq.). These lists have been published by Cowper (Syriac Miscell. p. 42 sq , Analecta Nicena was convened more especially to settle some points of ecclesi- Its decree astical discipline; but incidentally the assembled bishops were $\begin{gathered}\text { on the } \\ \text { Canon. }\end{gathered}$ led to make an order respecting the Canon of Scripture ${ }^{1}$. As
p. 36), who however has transposed the lists of Antioch and Laodicea, so that he ascribes to the Antiochian Synod the names which really belong to the Lrodicean. This is determined (as I am informed by Prof. Wright) by the position of the lists.

The Laodicean list then, which seems to be imperfeot, contains twenty names; and, when examined, it yields these results. (I) At least three-fourths of the names can be identified with bishops who sat at Nicæa, and probably the exceptions would be fewer, if in some cases they had not been obscured by transoription into Syrise and by the errors of copyists. (2) When identified, they are found to belong in almost every instance to Cœlesyria, Phœnicia, Palestine, Gilicia, end Isauria, whereas apparently not one comesfromPhrygis, Lydia, or the other western districts of Abia Minor.

Supposing that this is a genuine Laodicean list, we are led by the first resalt to place it as near in time as possible to the Council of Nicæa; and by the second to question whether after all the Syrian Laodicea may not have been meant instead of the Phrygian. On the other hand tradition is unanimous in placing this synod in the Phrygian town, and in this very Syriae ms the heading of the canons begins 'Of the Synod of Laodicea of Phrygia.' On the whole it appears probable that this sapposed list of bishops who met at Lsodicea belongs to some other Council. The Laodicean Syuod seems to have been, es Dr Westcott describes it (l. c.), 'A small gathering of clergy from parts of Lydia and Phrygia,'
In a large mosaic work in the Church at Betilehem, in which all the more important councils are represented, we find the following inscription; ['H]

 Sacr. Widif. a Constant. constr. p. 156; comp. Boeckh Corp. Inscr. 8953). The montion of Montanus might suggest that this was one of those Asiatic synods held against Montanism at the end of the second or beginning of the third century. But no record of any such synod is preserved elsewhere, and, as all the other Councils commemorated in these mossics are fornd in the list sanctioned by the Quinisextine Council, this can hardly have been an exception. The inseription must therefore refer to the well-known Council of Laodicea in the fourth century, which received this sametion. The description however is not very correct, for though Montanism is incidentally condemned in the eighth canon, yet this condemnation was not the main object of the conncil and occupies a very subordinate place. The Bethlehem mosaics wero completed A.D. 1169 : see Boeckh C. I. $873^{6}$.
${ }^{2}$ The canons of this Council, 59 in number, will be found in Labb. Conc. I. I530 sq., ed. Coleti. The last of these forbids the reading of any but 'the Canonical books of the New and Old Testament' To this is often appended (sometimes as a 6oth canon) a list of the Canonical books; but Dr Westeott has shown that this list is a later addition and does not belong to the original decrees of the council (Canon p. $4^{00 \mathrm{sq} \text {.). }}$
this was the first occasion in which the subject had been brought formally before the notice of an ecclesiastical assembly, this Council of Laodicea secured a notoriety which it would not otherwise have obtained, and to which it was hardly entitled by its constitution or its proceedings. Its decrees were confirmed and adopted by later councils both in the East and in the West ${ }^{1}$.
Its decrees More important however for my special purpose, than the illastrate the Epistle to the Colossians. influence of this synod on the Church at large, is the light which its canons throw on the heretical tendencies of this district, and on the warnings of St Paul in the Colossian Epistle. To illustrate this fact it will only be necessary to write out some of these canons at length :
Col. ii. r4, 29. 'It is not right for Christians to Judaize and abstain 26, 17. from labour on the sabbath, but to work on this same day. They should pay respect rather to the Lord's day, and, if possible, abstain from labour on it as Christians. But if they should be found Judaizers, let them be anathema in the sight of Christ.'
Col. ii. s8. 35. 'It is not right for Christians to abandon the Church

[^33][^34]and hold conventicles ( $\sigma v y \dot{a} \xi \in \iota s$ moteì); for these things are forbidden. If therefore any one is found devoting himself to this secret idolatry, let him be anathema, because he abandoned our Lord Jesus Christ and went after idolatry.'
36. 'It is not right for priests or clergy to be magicians or enchanters or mathematicians or astrologers ${ }^{2}$, or to make safeguards ( $\phi \cup \lambda a \kappa \tau \eta \rho i a$ ) as they are called, for such things are prisons ( $\delta \epsilon \sigma \mu \omega \tau i j p i a)$ of their souls ${ }^{2}$ : and we have enjoined that they which wear them be cast out of the Church.'
37. 'It is not right to receive from Jews or heretics the festive offerings which they send about, nor to join in their festivals.'
38. 'It is not right to receive unleavened bread from the Jews or to participate in their impieties.'

It is strange, at this late date, to find still lingering in these churches the same readiness to be 'judged in respect of an holiday or a new moon or a sabbath,' with the same tendency to relinquish the hold of the Head and to substitute 'a voluntary humility and worshipping of angels,' which three centuries before had called forth the Apostle's rebuke and warning in the Epistle to the Colossians.

During the flourishing period of the Eastern Church, Lao- Ecolesiasdicea appears as the metropolis of the province of Phrygia of Lical statadiPacatiana, counting among its suffragan bishoprics the see of $\underset{H}{\text { cea and }}$ Colossæ ${ }^{2}$. On the other hand Hierapolis, though only six his. miles distant, belonged to the neighbouring province of Phrygia Salutaris ${ }^{\text {; }}$, whose metropolis was Synnada, and of which it was mentum insigne sit.' The idea of the seven dyloc, combined in the one do $\rho \dot{\alpha} \gamma \gamma \boldsymbol{\gamma} \boldsymbol{\lambda}$ os, seems certainly to point to Jewish, if not Christian, influences: Rev. i. 4, iii. I, iv. 5, v. 6.
${ }^{1}$ Though there is no direct mention of 'magic' in the letter to the Colossians, yet it was a characteristio tendency of this part of Asia: Acts xix. 19, 2 Tim. iii. 8, 13. See the rote on Gal. v. 20. The term $\mu a \theta \eta$ - $\mu a t i k o l$ is used in this decree in its ordinary sense of astrologers, soothsajers.
${ }^{2}$ A play on the double sense of $\phi u$ גaxт $\quad$ poop (1) a safeguard or amalet, (2) a guard-house.
${ }^{3}$ A list of the bishoprics belonging to this province at the time of the Council of Chaloedon is given, Labb. Conc. IV. 1501, 1716.

- Conc. rv. 1716, 1744.
one of the most important sees. The stream of the Lycus seems to have formed the boundary line between the two ecclesiastical provinces. At a later date Hierapolis itself was raised to metropolitan rank ${ }^{1}$.

Obscurity of Coltassm.

But while Laodicea and Hierapolis held the foremost place in the records of the early Church, and continued to bear an active, though inconspicuous part, in later Christian history, Colosser was from the very first a cipher. The town itself, as we have seen, was already waning in importance, when the Apostle wrote; and its subsequent decline seems to bave been rapid. Not a single event in Christian history is connected with its name; and its very existence is only rescued from oblivion, when at long intervals some bishop of Colosse attaches his signature to the decree of an ecclesiastical synod. The city ceased to strike coins in the reign of Gordian (A.D.

It is supplanted by Chong. $238-244)^{2}$. It fell gradually into decay, being supplanted by the neighbouring town Chonæ, the modern Chonos, so called from the natural funnels by which the streams here disappear in underground channels formed by the incrustations of traver-tine ${ }^{3}$. We may conjecture also that its ruin was hastened by
> ${ }^{1}$ At the 5 th and 6 th General Councils (A.D. 553 and 4.D. 680) Hierapolis is styled a metropolis (Labb. Conc. vr. 220, VII. 1068, 1097, 1117); and in the latter case it is designated metropolis of Phrygia Pacatiana, thongh this same designation is still given to Lrodicea Synnada retains its position as metropolis of Phrygia Salutaris.

> From this time forward Hierapolis seems always to hold metropolitan rank. But no notice is preserved of the circurastances under which the change was made. In the Notitic it generally ocears twice-first as a suffragan see of Phrygia Salutaris, and secondly as metropolis of another Phrygia Pacatiana (distinct from that which has Laodicea for its metropolis): Hieroclis Synecdemus et Notitia (ed. Parthey) Not. . F, pp. 56, 57, 69, 73;

Not. 3, pp. 114, 124 ; Not. 7, pp. 152, 161; Not. 8, pp. 164, 176, 180 ; Not. 9, pp. 193, 197; Not. 10, pp. 212, 220. In this latter position it is placed quite out of the proper geographical order, thus showing that its metro. politan jurisdiction was croated comparatively late. The number of dioceses in the province is generally given as 9; Nilus ib. p. 3or. The name of the province is varionsly corrupted from סokias. Unless the ecclesiastical position of Hierapolis was altogether anomalous, as a province within a province, its double mention in the Notitic must be explained by a confasion of its earlier and later status.
${ }^{9}$ See Mionnet 7v. p. 269, Leake Numism. Hellen. p. 45.
${ }^{3}$ Joannes Curopalata p. 686 (ed.
a renewed assault of its ancient enemy, the earthquake ${ }^{1}$. It is commonly said that Chonæ is built on the site of the ancient Colosse; but the later town stands at some distance from the Bonn.) $\phi \mathfrak{\eta} \mu \eta$... toùs Toúpкous dima $\gamma^{\ell \lambda}$ -

 $\delta \kappa \alpha \tau \eta \rho ђ \sigma a c, \kappa . \tau . \lambda$.

The 'worship of angels' is euriously connected with the physical features of the country in the legend to which Curopalata refers. The people were in imminent danger from a audden inundation of the Lycus, when the archangel Miahael appeared and opened a chasm in the earth through which the waters flowed away harmlessly: Hartley's Researches in Greece p. 53. Sse another legend, or another version of the legend, in which the archangel interposes, in Laborde p. ro3.
It was the birthplace of Nicetas Chomiates, one of the most important of the Byzantine historians, who thas speaks of it (de Manuel. vi. 2, p. 230, ed. Bonn.); Фpvyiay $\tau \in$ кal Laodikécav where a corrupt reading חa入aofais for Kohar ad̀s had misled some. It will be remembered that the words roisv Xenophon's description of Colossm (Anab. i. 2. 6) : see above, p. 15, note 3 .

He again alludes to his native place, de Isgac. ii. 2, pp. 52, 3 toùs Aaoíkeís кєьa.

${ }^{1}$ We-may conjecture that it was the disastrous earthquake under Gallienus (A,D. 262) which proved fateil to Colossw (ses above p. 38 , note I). This is consistent with the fact above mentioned that no Colossian coins later than Gordian are extant. We read indeed of an earthquake in the reign of Gordian himself 'eo asque gravis ut civitates etiam terrm hiatu deperirent' (Capitol. Vit. Gord. 26), but we are not informed of the localities affected by it. When St Chrygostom wrote, the city existed no longer, as may be inferred from his comment (fic. p. $3^{23}$ )

On the other hand M. Renan (L'Antechrist p. 99) says of the earthquake under Nero, 'Colosses ne sut se relever; elle disparat presque da nombre des églises'; and he adds in a note 'Colosses n'a pas de monnaies impériales [Waddington].' For this statement there is, I believe, no anthority; and as regards the coins it is certainly wrong.
Earthquakes have been largely instrumental in changing the sites of cities situated within the range of their influence. Of this we have an instance in the neighbourhood of Colossex. Hamilton (I. p. 5 14) reports that an earthquake which occurred at Denizli aboat a hundred years ago caused the inhabitants to remove their residences to a different locality, where they bave remained ever since.
earlier, as Salisbury does from Old Sarum. The episcopal see necessarily followed the population; though for some time after its removal to the new town the bishop still continued to use the older title, with or without the addition of Chona by way of explanation, till at length the name of this primitive Apostolic Church passes wholly out of sight ${ }^{2}$.

The Turkish conquest pressed with more than common severity on these districts. When the day of visitation came, the Church was taken by surprise. Occupied with ignoble quarrels and selfish interests, she had no ear for the voice of Him who demanded admission. The door was barred and the knock unheeded. The long-impending doom overtook her, and the golden candlestick was removed for ever from the Eternal Presence ${ }^{2}$.
${ }^{1}$ At the Council of Chaicedon (4.d. 451) Numechius of Laodicea subscribes 'for the absent bishops under him,' among whom is mentioned ' $\mathrm{E} \pi$ เфaviov $\pi \ddot{\lambda} \lambda \in \omega s$ Kala $\sigma \sigma \hat{\omega} \nu$ (Labb. Conc. IV. r 5or, ed. Coleti ; comp. ib. 1745). At the Quinisextine Council (a,d. 692) occurs

 viI. 1408). At the 2nd Council of Nioma (4. $\mathrm{D}, 787$ ) the name of the see is in a transition state; the bishop Theodosing (or Dositheus) signs him-sometimes X $\mathrm{X} \boldsymbol{y} \dot{\mathrm{y}} \mathrm{y}$ simply (Conc. vili.

689, 796, 988, $1200,1222,1357,1378$, $1432,1523,1533$, in many of whioh passages the word $X$ avin is grosely corrapted). At later Councils the see is called X $\hat{y}$ var; and this is the name which it bears in the Notitice (pp. 97, 127, 199, 222, 303, ed. Parthey).
${ }^{2}$ For the remains of Christian churches at Laodices see Fellows Asia Minor p. 282, Pococke p. 74. A desoription of three fine charches at Hierapolis is given in Fergusson's 16 lustrated Handbook of Architecture IL p. 967 sq . comp. Texier Asie Mineurs I. p. 143 .

II.

THE COLOSSIAN HERESY.

FROM the language of St Paul, addressed to the Church Two eleof Colosse, we may infer the presence of two disturbing ments elements which threatened the purity of Christian faith and $\begin{gathered}\text { Cerossy. }\end{gathered}$ practice in this community. These elements are distinguishable in themselves, though it does not follow that they present the teaching of two distinct parties.
r. A mere glance at the epistle suffices to detect the r. Joduc. presence of Judaism in the teaching which the Apostle combats. The observance of sabbaths and new moons is decisive in this respect. The distinction of meats and drinks points in the same direction ${ }^{1}$. Even the enforcement of the initiatory rite of Judaism may be inferred from the contrast implied in St Paul's recommendation of the spiritual circumeision ${ }^{2}$.
2. On the other hand a closer examination of its language 2. Gxos. shows that these Judaic features do not exhaust the portrai- ric. ture of the heresy or heresies against which the epistle is directed. We discern an element of theosophic speculation, which is alien to the spirit of Judaism proper. We are confronted with a shadowy mysticism, which loses itself in the contemplation of the unseen world. We discover a tendency to interpose certain spiritual agencies, intermediate beings, between God and man, as the instruments of communication and the objects of worship ${ }^{\text {s }}$. Anticipating the result which will appear more clearly hereafter, we may say that along [^35]with its Judaism there was a Gnostric element in the false teaching which prevailed at Colossæ.

Are these combined or separate?

Have we then two heresies here, or one only? Were these elements distinct, or were they fused into the same system? In other words, Is St Paul controverting a phase of Judaism on the one hand, and a phase of Gnosticism on the other; or did he find himself in conflict with a JudæoGnostic heresy which combined the two ${ }^{1}$ ?

On closer examination we find ourselves compelled to GeneraI reasons for supposing adopt the latter alternative. The epistle itself contains no one heresy hint that the Apostle has more than one set of antagonists only, in whichth are fused. is always to be deprecated in historical criticism. Nor indeed does the hypothesis of a single complex heresy present any

1 The Colossian heresy has been made the subject of special dissertations by Sohnecrenberger Beiträge zur Einleitung ins N. T. (Stuttgart 1832), and Ueber das Alter der jüdischen Proselyten-Taufe, nebst einer Beilage uiber die Irrlehrer zu Colossä (Berlin 1828); by Ostamder Ueber die Colossischen Irrlehrer (Tübinger Zeitschrift for 1834 , mil. p. 96 sq .) ; and by Rheiswald De Pseudodoctoribus Colossensibus (Bonn 1834). But more valuable contributions to the subject will often be found in introductions to the commentaries on the epistle. Those of Buebe, Davieg, Meyer, Olghauben, Stetarr, and De Weite may be mentioned. Among other works which may be consulted are Baur Der Apostel Paulus p. 417 sq.; Boemmer Isagoge in Epistolam ad Colossenses, Berlin 1829, p. 56 8q., p. 277 sq.; Burton Inquiry into the Heresics of the Apostolic Age, Lectures rv, $\nabla$; Ewald Die Sendschreiben des Apostels Paulus p. 462 sq.; Hilaenfeld Der Gnosticismus u. das Neue Testament in the Zeitschr. f. Wissensch.

Theol. xiII. p. 233 sq.; R. A. Liparos in Schenkels Bibel-Lexicon, s. v. Gnosis; Minenifofr Der Brief an die Colosser p. 107 sq.; Neander Planting of the Christian Church I. p. 319 8q. (Eng. Trans.) ; Pressense Trois Premiers Siècles in. p. 194 日q.; Stone Opuscula 11. p. $1 \nmid 9$ eq.; Thergce Die Kirche im Apostolischen Zeitalter p. 146 sq . Of all the accounts of these Colossian false teachers, I have found none more satisfactory than that of Neander, whose opinions are followed in the main by the most sober of later writers.

In the investigation which follows I have assomed that the Colossian false teachers were Christians in some sense. The views maintained by some earlier critics, who regarded them as (1) Jews, or (2) Greek philosophers, or (3) Chaldean magi, have found no favour and do not need serions consideration. See Meyer's introduction for an enumeration of such views. A refutation of them will be found in Bleek's Vorlcsungen p. 12 sq .
real difficulty. If the two elements seem irrecuncilabie, or at least incongruous, at first sight, the incongruity disappears on further examination. It will be shown in the course of this investigation, that some special tendencies of religious thought among the Jews themselves before and about this time prepared the way for such a combination in a Christian community like the Church of Colossæ ${ }^{1}$. Moreover we shall find that the Christian heresies of the next succeeding ages exhibit in a more developed form the same complex type, which here appears in its nascent state ${ }^{2}$; this later development not only showing that the combination was historically possible in itself, but likewise presupposing some earlier stage of its existence such as confronts us at Colossw.

But in fact the Apostle's language hardly leaves the ques- s. Paul's tion open. The two elements are so closely interwoven in is danguage his refutation, that it is impossible to separate them. He on this passes backwards and forwards from the one to the other in such a way as to show that they are only parts of one complex whole. On this point the logical connexion of the sentences is decisive: 'Beware lest any man make spoil of you through philosophy and vain deceit after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world...Ye were circumcised with a circumcision not made with hands...And you...did He quicken,...blotting out the handwriting of ordinances which was against you...Let no man therefore judge you in meat or drink, or in respect of a holy day or a new moon or a sabbath...Let no man beguile you of your prize in a selfimposed humility and service of angels...If ye died with Christ from the rudiments of the world, why...are ye subject to ordinances...which things have a show of wisdom in selfimposed service and humility and hard treatment of the body, but are of no value against indulgence of the flesl ${ }^{3}$.' Here [^36][^37]the superior wisdom, the speculative element which is characteristic of Gnosticism, and the ritual observance, the practical element which was supplied by Judaism, are regarded not only as springing from the same stem, but also as intertwined in their growth. And the more carefully we examine the sequence of the Apostle's thoughts, the more intimate will the connexion appear.

Gnostioism must be defined and desaribed.
'Having described the speculative element in this complex heresy provisionally as Gnostic, I purpose enquiring in the first place, how far Judaism prior to and independently of Christianity had allied itself with Gnostic modes of thought; and afterwards, whether the description of the Colossian heresy is such as to justify us in thus classing it as a species of Gnosticism. But, as a preliminary to these enquiries, some definition of the word, or at least some conception of the leading ideas which it involves, will be necessary. With its complex varieties and elaborate developments we have no concern here: for, if Gnosticism can be found at all in the records of the pass over with ver. If to the Judaizers, with whom Col. ii. 16 sq . is exclusively concerned.' He supposes therefore that ii. 8-10 refers to 'pure Gnostics,' and ii. 16 - 23 to 'pure Judaizers.' To this it is sufficient to answer (i) That, if the two elements be so antagonistic, they managed nevertheless to reconcile their differences; for we find them united in several JudæoGnostic heresies in the first half of the second century, छuv'́ $\mu \sigma \sigma a \nu \quad \gamma \dot{\alpha} \rho$, two passages are directly connected which occurs in both 7 . 8, 30 ; (3) That it is not a simple transition once for all from the Gnostic to the Judaic element, but the epistle passes to and fro several times from the one to the other; while no hint is given that two separate heresies are attacked, but on the contrary the sentences are connected in a logical sequence (e.g. ver. r6 ouv). I hope to make this point ciear in my notes on the passage.

The hypothesis of more than one heresy is maintained also by Heinrichs (Koppe N.T. vu. Part 2, 1803). At an earlier date it seems to be favoured by Grotius (notes on ii. 16, 2I); but his language is not very explicit. And earlier still Calvin in his argument to the epistle writes, 'Putant aliqui duo fuisse hominum genera, nui abducere tentarent Colossenses ab evangelii puritate,' but rejects this view as uncalled for.

The same question is raised with regard to the heretical teachers of the Pastoral Epistles, and should probably be answered in the same way.
$\qquad$

Apostolic age, it will obviously appear in a simple and elementary form. Divested of its accessories and presented in its barest outline, it is not difficult of delineation ${ }^{2}$.
I. As the name attests ${ }^{2}$, Gnosticism implies the possession r. Intelof a superior wisdom, which is hidden from others. It makes a clusivedistinction between the select few who have this higher gift, ${ }_{\text {Gnostic }}^{\text {ness }}$ and the vulgar many who are without it. Faith, blind faith, ism. suffices the latter, while knowledge is the exclusive possession of the former. Thus it recognises a separation of intellectual caste in religion, introducing the distinction of an esoteric and an exoteric doctrine, and interposing an initiation of some kind or other between the two classes. In short it is animated by the exclusive aristocratic spirit ${ }^{8}$, which distinguishes the ancient religions, and from which it was a main function of Christianity to deliver mankind.
2. This was its spirit; and the intellectual questions, on which its energies were concentrated and to which it professed to bold the key, were mainly twofold. How can the work of creation be explained? and, How are we to account for the existence of evil4? To reconcile the creation of the world and the existence of evil with the conception of God as the abso. spect lative tenets of Gnosticism. lute Being, was the problem which all the Gnostic systems set existenco themselves to solve. It will be seen that the two questions cannot be treated independently but have a very close and intimate connexion with each other.

[^38]Existence of evil, how to b explained?

The Gnostic argument ran as follows: Did God create the world out of nothing, evolve it from Himself? Then, God being perfectly good and creation having resulted from His sole act without any opposing or modifying influence, evil would have been impossible; for otherwise we are driven to the couclusion that God created evil.

Matter the abode of evil.

This solution being rejected as impossible, the Gnostic was obliged to postulate some antagonistic principle independent of God, by which His creative energy was thwarted and limited. This opposing principle, the kingdom of evil, he conceived to be the world of matter. The precise idea of its mode of operation varies in different Gnostic systems. It is sometimes regarded as a dead passive resistance, sometimes as a turbulent active power. But, though the exact point of view may shift, the object contemplated is always the same. In some way or other evil is regarded as residing in the material, sensible world. Thus Gnostic speculation on the existence of evil ends in a dualism.
Creation, how to be explained? How then is creation possible? How can the Infinite communicate with the Finite, the Good with the Evil? How can God act upon matter? God is perfect, absolute, incomprehensible.

This, the Gnostic went on to argue, could only have been possible by some self-limitation on the part of God. God must express Himself in some way. There must be some evolution, Doctrine of emanations.

This point being conceded, the ulterior question arises: some eflluence, of Deity. Thus the Divine Being germinates, as it were; and the first germination again evolves a second from itself in like manner. In this way we obtain a series of successive emanations, which may be more or fewer, as the requirements of any particular system demand. In each successive evolution the Divine element is feebler. They sink gradually lower and lower in the scale, as they are farther removed from their source; until at length contact with matter is possible, and creation ensues. These are the emanations, æons, spirits, or angels, of Gnosticism, conceived as more or less concrete and porsonal according to the different aspects in which they are regarded in. different systems.
3. Such is the bare outline (and nothing more is needed 3. Practifor my immediate purpose) of the speculative views of Gnostic- of onnostioism. But it is obvious that these views must have exerted ${ }^{\text {imm. }}$ a powerful influence on the ethical systems of their advocates, and thus they would involve important practical consequences. If matter is the principle of evil, it is of infinite moment for a man to know how he can avoid its baneful influence and thus keep his higher nature unclogged and unsullied.

To this practical question two directly opposite answers were given ${ }^{1}$ :

Two opposite ethical rules. end might best be attained by a rigorous abstinence. Thus communication with matter, if it could not be entirely avoided, might be reduced to a minimum. Its grosser defilements at all events would be escaped. The material part of man would be subdued and mortified, if it could not be annihilated; and the spirit, thus set free, would be sublimated, and rise to its proper level. Thus the ethics of Gnosticism pointed in the first instance to a strict asceticism.
(ii) But obviously the results thus attained are very slight and inadequate. Matter is about us everywhere. We do but touch the skirts of the evil, when we endeavour to fence ourselves about by prohibitive ordinances, as, for instance, when we enjoin a spare diet or forbid marriage. Some more comprehensive rule is wanted, which shall apply to every contingency and every moment of our lives. Arguing in this way, other Gnostic teachers arrived at an ethical rule directly opposed to the former. 'Cultivate an entire indifference,' they said, 'to the world of sense. Do not give it a thought one way or [^39][^40]the other, but follow your own impulses. The ascetic principle assigns a certain importance to matter. The ascetic fails in consequence to assert his own independence. The true rule of life is to treat matter as something alien to you, towards which you have no duties or obligations and which you can use or leave unused as you like ${ }^{1}$.' In this way the reaction from rigid asceticism led to the opposite extreme of unrestrained licentiousness, both alike springing from the same false conception of matter as the principle of evil.

Gnosticism, as defined by these characteristic features, has Original independence of Gnosticism and its subsequent connexion withChristianity. obviously no necessary connexion with Christianity ${ }^{2}$. Christianity would naturally arouse it to unwonted activity, by leading men to dwell more earnestly on the nature and power of evil, and thus stimulating more systematic thought on the theological questions which had already arrested attention. After no long time Gnosticism would absorb into its system more or fewer Christian elements, or Christianity in some of its forms would receive a tinge from Gnosticism. But the thing itself had an independent root, and seems to have been ${ }^{1}$ See for instance the description of the Carpocratians in Iren. i. 25. 3 sq., ii. 32 . I eq., Hippol. Har. wii. 32, Epi-phan. Har, sxvii. 2 sq.; from which passages it appears that they justified their moral profligacy on the principle that the highest perfection consists in the most complete contempt of mundane things.

2 It will be seen from the description in the text, that Gnosticism (as I have defined it) presupposes only a belief in one God, the absolute Being, as against the valgar polytheism. All its essential features, as a speculative system, may be explained from this simple element of belisf, without any intervention of specially Christian or even Jewish doctrine. Christianity added two new elements to it; (I) the idea of Redemption, (2) the person of Christ. To explain the former, and to find a place for the latter, henceforth become prominent questions which press for solution; and Gnosticism in its several developments undergoes various modifications in the endeavour to solve them. Redemption must be set in some relation to the fundamental Gnostic conception of the antagonism between God and matter; and Christ must have some place found for Him in the fundamental Gnostio doctrine of emanations.

If it be urged that there is no authority for the name 'Gnostio' as applied to these pre-Christian theosophists, I am not concerned to prove the contrary, as my main position is not affected thereby. The term 'Gnostio ${ }^{\text {, }}$ is here used, only because no other is so convenient or so appropriate. See note 2, p. 81.
prior in time. The probabilities of the case, and the scanty traditions of history, alike point to this independence of the two ${ }^{1}$. If so, it is a matter of little moment at what precise time the name 'Gnostic' was adopted, whether before or after contact with Christianity; for we are concerned only with the growth and direction of thought which the name represents ${ }^{\text {P }}$.

If then Gnosticism was not an offspring of Christianity, Its allibut a direction of religious speculation which existed indepen- anee with dently, we are at liberty to entertain the question whether it $\begin{aligned} & \text { before } \\ & \text { Christi }\end{aligned}$ did not form an alliance with Judaism, contemporaneously anity. with or prior to its alliance with Christianity. There is at least no obstacle which bars such an investigation at the out-
${ }^{1}$ This question will require oloser investigation when I come to discass the genuineness of the Epistle to the Colossians. Meanwhile I content myself with referring to Baur Christliche Gnosis p. 29 Eq. and Lipsius Gnosticismus p. $2 \mathfrak{j} \mathrm{sq}$. Both these writers concede, and indeed insist upon, the non-Christian basis of Gnosticism, at least so far as I have maintained it in the text. Thus for instance Baur bays (p. 52), 'Though Christian gnosis is the completion of gnosis, yet the Christian element in gnosis is not so essential as that gnosis cannot still be gnosis even without this element. But just as we oan abstract it from the Christian element, so can we also go still further and regard even the Jewish as not strictly an essential element of gnosis.' Inanother work (Die drei ersten Jahrhunderte p. 167, ist ed.) he expresses himself still more strongly to the same effect, but the expressions are moditied in the second edition.
${ }^{2}$ We may perhaps gather from the notices which are preserved that, though the substantive $\gamma \mathbf{}$ ôats was used with more or less precision even before contact with Christianity to desigate the superior illamination of these opinions, the adjective $\gamma$ vuctuoi was not distinctly applied to those who maintained them till somewhat later. Still it is possible that pre-Christian Gnostics already so designated themselves. Hippolytas speaks of the Naassenes or Ophites as giving themselves this name; Har. 丈. $6 \mu \epsilon \tau \grave{a}$ бè $\tau a \theta \tau a$ éte-

 1I. His language seems to imply (though it is not explioit) that they were the first to adopt the name. The Ophites were plainly among the earliest Gnostie sects, as the heathen element is still predominant in their teaching, and their Christianity seems to have been a later graft on their pagan theosophy; but at what stage in their development they adopted the name rowarikol does not appear. Ireneus (Har. i. 25. 6) speaks of the name as affected especially by the Carpocratians. For the use of the substantive
 vi. 20, and the note on Col. ii. 3 : comp.
 tồ इatavâ, 山́s $\lambda$ êroutu (as explained by the passage already quoted from Hippol. Her. v. 6; вee Galatians, p. 309, note 3).
set. If this should prove to be the case, then wo have a combination which prepares the way for the otherwise strange phenomena presented in the Epistle to the Colossians. pared the Sadducees to the Epicureans, the Pharisees to the Stoics, and the Essenes to the Pythagoreans. Like all historical parallels, this comparison is open to misapprehension: but, carefully guarded, the illustration is pertinent and instructive.

With the Sadducees we have no concern here. Whatever Sadducerism, purely negative.

Phariseeism and Essenism compared. respect may be due to their attitude in the earlier stages of their history, at the Christian era at least they have ceased to deserve our sympathy; for their position has become mainly negative. They take their stand on denials-the denial of the existence of angels, the denial of the resurrection of the dead, the denial of a progressive development in the Jewish Church. In these negative tendencies, in the materialistic teaching of the sect, and in the moral consequences to which it led, a very rough resemblance to the Epicureans will appear ${ }^{1}$.

The two positive sects were the Pharisees and the Essenes. Both alike were strict observers of the ritual law; but, while the Pharisee was essentially practical, the tendency of the Essene was to mysticism; while the Pharisee was a man of the world, the Essene was a member of a brotherhood. In this respect the Stoic and the Pythagorean were the nearest counterparts which the history of Greek philosophy and social life could offer. These analogies indeed are suggested by Josephus himself ${ }^{2}$.

Elusive
features of Esbenism.

While the portrait of the Pharisee is distinctly traced and easily recognised, this is not the case with the Essene. The Essene is the great enigma of Hebrew history. Admired alike by Jew, by Heathen, and by Christian, he yet remains a dim vague outline, on which the highest subtlety of successive [^41][^42]crities has been employed to supply a substantial form and an adequate colouring. An ascetic mystical dreamy recluse, he seems too far removed from the hard experience of life to be capable of realisation.

And yet by careful use of the existing materials the $A$ sufficiportrait of this sect may be so far restored, as to establish with tinet pora reasonable amount of probability the point with which alone trait of we are here concerned. It will appear from the delineations attainable. of ancient writers, more especially of Philo and Josephus, that the characteristic feature of Essenism was a particular direction of mystic speculation, involving a rigid asceticism as its practical consequence. Following the definition of Gnosticism which has been already given, we may not unfitly call this tendency Gnostic.

Having in this statement anticipated the results, I shall Main feanow endeavour to develope the main features of Essenism; Essenism. and, while doing so, I will ask my readers to bear in mind the portrait of the Colossian heresy in St Paul, and to mark the resemblances, as the enquiry proceeds ${ }^{1}$.

The Judaic element is especially prominent in the life and teaching of the sect. The Essene was exceptionally rigorous in his observance of the Mosaic ritual. In his strict abstinence

[^43]count, we may conjecture, was taken from Alexander Polyhistor, a contemporary of Sulla, whom he mentions in his prefatory elenchus as one of his authorities for this $5^{\text {th }}$ book, and who wrote a work On the Jewa (Clem. Alex. Strom. i. 21, p. 396, Euseb. Prep. Ev. ix. 17). Significant mention of the Essenes is found also in the Christian Heaesirpos (Euseb. H. E. iv. 22) and in the haathen Dron Chrysostom (Synesius Dion 3, p. 39). Epiphanids (Her. pp. 28 sq., 40 sq .) discusses two separate sects, which he calls Essenes and Ossaans respectively. These are doubtless different names of the same persons. His account is, as usual, confused and inaccurate, but

Observ- from work on the sabbath he far surpassed all the other Jews. ${ }_{\text {Mossic }}^{\text {ance of the }} \mathrm{He}$ would not light a fire, would not move a vessel, would not law. perform even the most ordinary functions of life ${ }^{1}$. The whole day was given up to religious exercises and to exposition of the has a certain value. All other authoritiesaresecondary. Hippolytus, Hier. ix. 18-28, follows Josephus (Bell. Jud. ii. 8. 2 \&q.) almost exclusively. Porphyay also (de Abstinentia, iv. xy sq.) copies this same passage of Josephus, with a few unimportant exceptions probably taken from a lost work by the same arthor, tpods roùs "Ednquas, which he mentions by name. Eossmios (Prap. Evang. viii. II sq., ix. 3) contents himself with quoting Philo and Porphyry. Solinus (Polyh. xexv. 9 sq .) merely abstracts Pliny. Tasmudical and rabbinioas pabsages, aupposed to contain references to the Essenes, are collected by Frankel in the articles mentioned in a later paragraph; but the allusions are most uncertain (see the second dissertation on the Essenes). The authorities for the history of the Essenes are the sabject of an article by W. Clemens in the Zeitschr. f. Wiss. Theol. 1869, p. 328 sq .
The attack on the genuineness of Philo's treatise De Vita Contemplativa made by Grätz (III. p. 463 sq.) has been met by Zeller (Philosophie, III. ii. p. 255 sq .), whose refutation is complete. The attack of the same writer (III. p. 464) on the genuineness of the treatise Quod omnis probus liber Zeller considers too frivolous to need refuting (ib. p. 235). A refutation will be found in the above-mentioned article of W . Clemens (p. 340 sq .).
Of modern writings relating to the Essenes the following may be especially mentioned; Bellermann Ueber Essäer u. Therapeuten, Berlin r8ıi; Gfrörer Philo in. p. 299 sq.; Dühne Ersch u. Gruber's Encyklopädie s. v.; Franiel Zeitschrift fïr die religiösen Interessen des Judenthums 1846 p. 441 sq., Monatbschrift für Geschichte u. Wissenschaft des Judenthums 1853 , p. 30 sq. ., 61 sq.; Böttaer Ueber den Orden der Essäer, Dresden 1849; Ewaid Geschichte des Volkes Israel rv. p. 420 sq. , VII. p. $153 \mathrm{sq} . ;$ Ritscal Entstehung der Altkatholischen Kirche p. 179 sq . (ed. 2, 1857 ), and Theologische Jahroücher 1855 , p. 315 sq.; Josr Geschichte des Judenthums r. p. $207 \mathrm{sq} . ;$ Graftz Geschichte der Juden III. p. 79 sq., 463 sq. (ed. 2, 1863); Hwampeld Judische Apocalyptik p. 245 sq ., and Zeitschr. f. Wiss. Theol. z. p. 97 sq., xI. p. 343 sq., xrv. p. 30 sq.; Westcort Smith's Dietionary of the Bible s. v.; Ginsburg The Essenes, London 1864, and in Kitto's Cyelopadia s. v.; Derenbotrg L'His. toire et la Geographie ade la Palestine p. $166 \mathrm{sq} ., 460 \mathrm{sq}$. ; Kerm Geschichte Jesu von Nazara 1. p. 282 sq.; Havsrati Neutestamentliche Zeitgeschichte 1. p. 133 sq.; Lirsius Schenkel's Bibel Lexikon s. v.; Herzyeld Geschichte des Volkes Israel $\mathbf{n} .368 \mathrm{sq} ., 388 \mathrm{sq}$, 509 sq. (ed. 2, 1863); Zelleer Philosophie der Griechen III. 2, p. 234 sq. (ed. 2, 1868); Langen Judenthum in Palästina p. rgosq.; Löwx Kritisch-tal. mudisches Lexicon s. प. (Wien 1863); Wbibs Zur Geschichte der jüdischen Tradition p. 120 sq. (Wien).

${ }^{1}$ B. J. ii. 8. 9 中v入d́бroyта! ... тaîs

 Hippolytus (Her. ix. 25) adds that some of them do not so much as leave their beds on this day.

Scriptures ${ }^{1}$. His respect for the law extended also to the lawgiver. After God, the name of Moses was held in the highest reverence. He who blasphemed his name was punished with death ${ }^{2}$. In all these points the Essene was an exaggeration, almost a caricature, of the Pharisee.

So far the Essene has not departed from the principles of External normal Judaism; but here the divergence begins. In three elements main points we trace the working of influences which must added. have been derived from external sources.
r. To the legalism of the Pharisee, the Essene added an r. Rigid asceticism, which was peculiarly his own, and which in many in respect respects contradicted the tenets of the other sect. The honour- to able, and even exaggerated, estimate of marriage, which was characteristic of the Jew, and of the Pharisee as the typical Jew, found no favour with the Essenes ${ }^{3}$. Marriage was to him an marriage, abomination. Those Essenes who lived together as members of an order, and in whom the principles of the sect were carried to their logical consequences, eschewed it altogether. To secure the continuance of their brotherhood they adopted children, whom they brought up in the doctrines and practices of the community. There were others however who took a different view. They accepted marriage, as necessary for the preservation of the race. Yet even with them it seems to have been regarded only as an inevitable evil. They fenced it off by stringent rules, demanding a three years' probation and enjoining various [^44]purificatory rites ${ }^{1}$. The conception of marriage, as quickening and educating the affections and thus exalting and refining human life, was wholly foreign to their minds. Woman was a mere instrument of temptation in their eyes, deceitful, faithless, selfish, jealous, misled and misleading by her passions. meats and But their ascetic tendencies did not stop here. The drinks Pharisee was very careful to observe the distinction of meats lawful and unlawful, as laid down by the Mosaic code, and even rendered these ordinances vexatious by minute definitions of his own. But the Eșsene went far beyond him. He drank no wine, he did not touch animal food. His meal consisted of a piece of bread and a single mess of vegetables. Even this simple fare was prepared for him by special officers consecrated for the purpose, that it might be free from all contamination ${ }^{2}$. Nay, so stringent were the rules of the order on this point, that when an Essene was excommunicated, he often died of starvation, being bound by his oath not to take food prepared by defiled hands, and thus being reduced to eat the very grass of the field ${ }^{3}$.

and oil for anointing. a necessary of life. From this too the Essenes strictly abstained. Even if they were accidentally smeared, they were careful at once to wash themselves, holding the mere touch to be a contamination ${ }^{4}$.

${ }^{2}$ B. J. I. c. $\$ 5$; see Philo's account of the Therapeutes, Vit. Cont. § $4 \sigma$ o

[^45]From these facts it seems clear that Essene abstinence was Underlysomething more than the mere exaggeration of Pharisaic prin- ing princi-
 obedience to au absclute external law. The Essene introduced a. new principle. He condemned in any form the gratification of the natural cravings, nor would he consent to regard it as moral or immoral only according to the motive which suggested it or the consequences which flowed from it. It was in itself an absolute evil. He sought to disengage himself, as far as possible, from the conditions of physical life. In short, in the asceticism of the Essene we seem to see the germ of that Gnostic dualism which regards matter as the principle, or at least the abode, of evil.
2. And, when we come to investigate the speculative tenets 2. Specuof the sect, we shall find that the Essenes have diverged $\frac{\text { native }}{\text { nets }}$ appreciably from the common type of Jewish orthodoxy.
(i) Attention was directed above to their respect for (i) Tend. Moses and the Mosaic law, which they shared in common with sun-wor the Pharisee. ${ }^{\text {. But there was another side to their theological ship. }}$ teaching. Though our information is somewhat defective, still in the scanty notices which are preserved we find sufficient indications that they had absorbed some foreign elements of religious thought into their system. Thus at day-break they addressed certain prayers, which had been handed down from their forefathers, to the Sun, 'as if entreating him to rise?'. They were careful also to conceal and bury all polluting substances, so as not 'to insult the rays of the god ${ }^{3}$ '. We can-

[^46]Josephus states to be offered to the sun (els aúrón), into the ordinary prayers of the Pharisaio Jew at day-break, see the second dissertation on the Essenes.
丂ocep taî $\theta \in \hat{v}$. There can be no doabt, I think, that by $\tau 0 \hat{0} \theta$ eov is meant the 'sun-god'; comp. Eur. Heracl. 749
 феЄүos tov̂to rav $\theta \in o \hat{0}$, Appian Praf. 9 סuoutyou tô̂ $\theta \in o \hat{v}$, Lib, 113 toû $\theta$ ecû not indeed suppose that they regarded the sum as more than a symbol of the unseen power who gives light and life; but their outward demonstrations of reverence were sufficiently prominent to attach to them, or to a sect derived from them, the epithet of 'Sun-worshippers', and some connexion with the characteristic feature of Parsee devotion at once suggests itself. The practice at all events stands in strong contrast to the denunciations of worship paid to the 'hosts of heaven' in the Hebrew prophets.
(ii) Resurrection of the body denied.
(ii) Nor again is it an insignificant fact that, while the Pharisee maintained the resurrection of the body as a cardinal article of his faith, the Essene restricted himself to a belief in the immortality of the soul. The soul, he maintained, was confined in the flesh, as in a prison-house. Only when disengaged from these fetters would it be truly free. Then it would soar aloft, rejoicing in its newly attained liberty ${ }^{2}$. This doctrine accords with the fundamental conception of the malignity of matter. To those who held this conception a Búvovios dapt، rô̂ $\theta$ coû: comp. Herod, ii. 24. Dr Ginsbarg has obliterated this very important touch by translating $\tau$ ds aú $\gamma \dot{\alpha} s$ toû $\theta \in o i ̂$ 'the Divine rays' (Essenes p. 47). It is a significant fact that Hippolytus (Har. ix. 25) omits the words $\tau 0 \hat{u} \theta \in o \hat{\text {, }}$, evidently regardingthem as a stumbling-block. How Josephus expressed himself in the original Hebrew of the Bellum Judaicum, it is vain to speculate: but the Greek translation wab authorised, if not made, by him.
${ }^{1}$ Hpiphan. Har. zix. 2, xx. $3^{\prime} 0 \sigma$ - the Hebrew ETU 'the sun.' The historical connexion of the Sampseans with the Essenes is evident from these passages: though it is diffoult to say what their precise relations to earh other were. See below, p. 374.

 $\theta a t$ к.т. $\lambda$. To this doctrine the teaching of the Pharisees stands in direet contrast; ib. § 13 : comp. also Ant. xviii. 1. 3,5 .

Nothing can be more explicit than the language of Josephus. On theother hand Hippolytus (Har. ix. 27) says of bat his authority is worthless on this point, as he can have had no personal knowledge of the facts: see Zeller p. 251, note 2. Hilgenfeld takes a different view; Zeitschr. xry. p. 49.

resurrection of the body would be repulsive, as involving a perpetuation of evil.
(iii) But they also separated themselves from the religious belief of the orthodox Jew in another respect, which would hibition of provoke more notice. While they sent gifts to the temple at Jerusalem, they refused to offer sacrifices there ${ }^{1}$. It would appear that the slaughter of animals was altogether forbidden by their creed ${ }^{2}$. It is certain that they were afraid of contracting some ceremonial impurity by offering victims in the temple. Meanwhile they had sacrifices, bloodless sacrifices, of their own. They regarded their simple meals with their accompanying prayers and thanksgiving, not only as devotional but even as sacrificial rites. Those who prepared and presided over these meals were their consecrated priests ${ }^{3}$.
(iv) In what other respects they may have departed from, (iv) Esoor added to, the normal creed of Judaism, we do not know. trine of But it is expressly stated that, when a novice after passing angels. through the probationary stages was admitted to the full privileges of the order, the oath of admission bound him 'to conceal nothing from the members of the sect, and to report nothing concerning them to others, even though threatened with death; not to communicate any of their doctrines to anyone otherwise than as he himself had received them; but to abstain from robbery, and in like manner to guard carefully the books

[^47]from the temple-sacrifices cannot be considered apart from the fact that they ate no animal food: see above p. 86 , note 2. (3) The Christianised Essenes, or Ebionites, though strong Judaizers in many respects, yet distinctly protested against the sacrifice of animals; see Clem. Hom. iii. 45, 52, and comp. Ritschl p. 224. On this subject see also Zeller p. 242 sq., and my second dissertation.
${ }^{3}$ Ant. xviii. 1. 5 tepets $\tau \in[\chi$ eıpa-of their sect, and the names of the angels ${ }^{1}$. It may be reason* ably supposed that more lurks under this last expression than meets the ear. This esoteric doctrine, relating to angelic beings, may have been another link which attached Essenism to the religion of Zoroaster ${ }^{2}$. At all events we seem to be justified in connecting it with the self-imposed service and worshipping of angels at Colossæ: and we may well suspect that we have here a germ which was developed into the Gnostic doctrine of æons or emanations.

(v) Specalations on God and Creation.
(v) If so, it is not unconnected with another notice relating to Essene peculiarities. The Gnostic doctrine of intermediate beings between God and the world, as we have seen, was intimately connected with speculations respecting creation. Now we are specially informed that the Essenes, while leaving physical studies in general to speculative idlers ( $\mu \epsilon \tau \epsilon \omega \rho o-$ $\lambda e ́ \sigma \chi a \iota \rho)$, as being beyond the reach of human nature, yet excepted from their general condemnation that philosophy which treats of the existence of God and the generation of the universe ${ }^{3}$.
(vi) Magic-
(vi) Mention has been made incidentally of certain secret al charms. books peculiar to the sect. The existence of such an apocryphal literature was a sure token of some abnormal development in doctrine ${ }^{4}$. In the passage quoted it is mentioned in relation to
With this notice should be compared the Ebionite dapaptupla, or protest of initiation, prefixed to the Clementine Homilies, which shows how closely the Christian Essenes followed the practice of their Jewish predecessors in this respect. See Zeller p. 254.
${ }^{2}$ See the second dissertation.
${ }^{3}$ Philo Omn. prob. lib. § 12 (p. 458)

${ }^{4}$ The word Apocrypha was used originaily to designate the secret books which contained the esoteric doctrine of a sect. The secondary sonse 'spurious' was derived from the general character of these writings, which were heretical, mostly Gnostic, forgeries. See Prof. Plumptre's article Apocrypha in Smith's Dictionary of the Bible, and the note on drbxpupot below, ii. 3 .
some form of angelology. Elsewhere their skill in prediction, for which they were especially famous, is connected with the perusal of certain 'sacred books,' which however are not described ${ }^{1}$. But more especially, we are told that the Essenes studied with extraordinary diligence the writings of the ancients, selecting those especially which could be turned to profit for soul and body, and that from these they learnt the qualities of roots and the properties of stones ${ }^{2}$. This expres-rat, piphous lepais кal jcaфbpots à $\gamma v e l a t s$    (p. 49) translates $\beta$ lpiots iepais 'the sacred Scripture,' and $\pi \rho о \phi \eta \tau \hat{\omega} \nu$ aंто$\phi \theta \in \gamma \mu a \sigma t \nu$ ' the sayings of the prophets'; but as the definite articles are manting. the expressions cannot be so rendered, nor does there seem to be any reference to the Canonical writings.

Abstract

We learn from an aneadote in ant. xiii. Ir. 2 , that the teachers of this sect commanicated the art of prediction to their disciples by instruction. We may therefore conjecture that with the Essenes this acquisition was cornected with magio or astrology. At all events it is not treated as a direot inspiration.

 might seem at first sight to refer simply to the medicinal qualities of vegetable and mineral stabstances; but a comparison with another notice in Josephus investsit with adifferentmeaning. In Ant. viii. 2, 5 he states that Solomon, having received by divine inspiration the art of defeating demons for the advantage and healing of man (els 山ंфeौelay xal left behind him oharms ( $\bar{\epsilon} \pi \psi \delta \dot{d} s$ ) by which diseases were allayed, and diverse kinds of exorcisms ( $\tau \rho \delta$ brovs $\epsilon \xi$ орк $\dot{\omega} \sigma e \omega \nu$ ) by which demons were cast ont. 'This mode of healing,' he adde, 'is very powerful even to the present day'; and he then relates how, as he was credibly informed (l $\sigma \tau \delta \rho \eta \sigma a$ ), one of his countrymen, Eleazar by name, had healed several persons possessed by demons in the presence of Vespasian and his sons and a number of officers and common soldiers. This he did by applying to the nose of the possessed his ring, which had concealed in it one of the roots which Solomon had directed to be used, and thus drawing out the demon through the nostrils of the person smelling it. At the same time he adjured the evil spirit not to return, 'making mention of Solomon and repeating the charms composed by him.' On one occasion this Eleazar gave ocular proof that the demon was exorcized; and thas, adds oiveats кal ropia. On these books relating to the occult arts and asoribed to Solomon see Fabricius Cod. Pseud. Vet. Test. 1. p. 1036 sq., where many curious notices are gethered together. See especially Origen In Matth.Comm. xexv. § ino (iII. p. gro), Pbeudo-Just. Quest. 55.
This interpretation explains all the expressions in the passage. The NA $0 \omega$ sion, as illustrated by other notices, points clearly to the study of occult sciences, and recalls the alliance with the practice of magical arts, which was a distinguishing feature of Gnosticism, and is condemned by Christian teachers even in the heresies of the Apostolic age.
3. Exclusive apirit of Essenism.
3. But the notice to which I have just alluded suggests a broader affinity with Gnosticism. Not only did the theological speculations of the Essenes take a Gnostic turn, but they guarded their peculiar tenets with Gnostic reserve. They too had their esoteric doctrine which they looked upon as the exclusive possession of the privileged few; their 'mysteries' which it was a grievous offence to communicate to the uninitiated. This doctrine was contained, as we have seen, in an apocryphal literature. Their whole organisation was arranged so as to prevent the divulgence of its secrets to those without. The long period of noviciate, the careful rites of initiation, the distinction of the several orders ${ }^{1}$ in the community, the solemn oaths by which they bound their members, were so many safeguards against a betrayal of this precious deposit, which lob 6 ryres natarally points to the use of charms or amulets, as may be seen e.g. from the treatise, Damigeron de Lapidibus, printed in the Spicil. Solemn. III. p. 324 sq.: comp. King Antique Gems Sect. $\mathbf{\pi r}$, Gnostics and their Remains. The reference to 'the books of the ancients' thus finds an adequate explanation. On the other hand the only expression which seemed to militate against this view, $\dot{d} \lambda \epsilon \xi \iota \tau \eta \rho o c t \dot{p} / j a c$, is justified by the story in the Antiquities; comp. also Clem. Hom. viii. 14 . It:should be added also that Hippolytus (Har. ix. 22) paraphrases the langage of Josephus so as to give it this sense;

 тẫa $\begin{aligned} \text { gevodelal. The sense which re- }\end{aligned}$ piepyos ('curiosus') bears in Acts xix.

19 and elsewhere, referring to magical arts, illastrates its use here.
Thns these Essenes were dealers in charms, rather than physicians. And yet it is quite possible that along with this practice of the occalt sciences they studied the healing art in its nobler forms. The works of Alexander of Tralles, an eminent ancient phyaician, constantly recommend the use of such charms, of which some obviously come from a Jewish source and not improbably may have been taken from these Solomonian books to which Josephus refers. A number of passages from this and other writers, specifying charms of various kinds, are given in Beoker and Marquardt Rom. Alterth. Iv. p. 116 gq . See also Spencer's note on Orig. c. Cels. p. I $\boldsymbol{y}$ sq.
${ }^{1}$ See especially B. J. ii. 8. 7, io.
they held to be restricted to the inmost circle of the brotherhood.

In selecting these details I have not attempted to give a finished portrait of Essenism. From this point of view the delineation would be imperfect and misleading: for I have left out of sight the nobler features of the sect, their courageous endurance, their simple piety, their brotherly love. My object was solely to call attention to those features which distinguish it from the normal type of Judaism, and seem to justify the attribution of Gnostic influences. And here it has been seen The three that the three characteristics, which were singled out above as $\begin{gathered}\text { notes of } \\ \text { Gnostic- }\end{gathered}$ distinctive of Gnosticism, reappear in the Essenes; though it ism fonnd has been convenient to consider them in the reversed order, Essenes. This Jewish sect exhibits the same exclusiveness in the communication of its doctrines. Its theological speculations take the same direction, dwelling on the mysteries of creation, regarding matter as the abode of evil, and postulating certain intermediate spiritual agencies as necessary links of communication between heaven and earth. And lastly, its speculative opinions involve the same ethical conclusions, and lead in like manner to a rigid asceticism. If the notices relating to these points do not always explain themselves, yet read in the light of the heresies of the Apostolic age and in that of subsequent Judæo-Gnostic Christianity, their bearing seems to be distinct enough; so that we should not be far wrong, if we were to designate Essenism as Gnostic Judaism ${ }^{1}$.

But the Essenes of whom historical notices are preserved How were inhabitants of the Holy Land. Their monasteries were widely were the situated on the shores of the Dead Sea. We are told indeed, Essenes $\begin{gathered}\text { dispersed? }\end{gathered}$ that the sect was not confined to any one place, and that members of the order were found in great numbers in divers cities and villages ${ }^{1}$. But Judæa in one notice, Palestine and Syria in another, are especially named as the localities of the Essene settlements ${ }^{2}$. Have we any reason to suppose that they were represented among the Jews of the Dispersion? In Egypt indeed we find ourselves confronted with a similar ascetic sect, the Therapeutes, who may perhaps have had an independent origin, but who nevertheless exhibit substantially the same type of Jewish thought and practice ${ }^{8}$. But the Dispersion of Egypt, it may be argued, was exceptional; and we might expect to find here organisations and developments of Judaism hardly less marked and various than in the mother country.

[^48]to separate these from later additions or to assign to them even an approximate date. The Kabbelistic doctrine however will serve to show to what extent Judaism may be developed in the direction of speculative mystic. ism.

Do they appear in Asia Minor?

How the term Esssene is to be understood. What ground have we for assuming the existence of this type in Asia Minor? Do we meet with any traces of it in the cities of the Lycus, or in proconsular Asia generally, which would justify the opinion that it might make its influence felt in the Christian communities of that district?

Now it has been shown that the colonies of the Jews in this neighbourhood were populous and influential ${ }^{4}$; and it might be argued with great probability that among these large numbers Essene Judaism could not be unrepresented. But indeed throughout this investigation, when I speak of the Judaism in the Colossian Church as Essene, I do not assume a precise identity of origin, but only an essential

1 Philo Fragme p. 632 olkov̂at dè

 mous $\dot{\text { onldaus; }}$ Joseph. B: J. ii. 8. $4 \mu$ la кatockovar modiol. On the notices of the settlements and dispersion of the Essenes see Zeller p. 239.
2 Philo names Judca in Fragm. p. 632 ; Palestine and Syria in Quod omn. prob. lib. 12, p. 457. Their chief settlements were in the neighbourhood of the Dead Sea. This fact is mentioned by the heathen writers Pliny (N. H. v. 15) and Dion Chrysostom (Synesins Dio 3). The name of the 'Essene gate' at Jerusalem (B. J. v. 4. 2) seems to point to some establishment of the order close to the walls of that city.
${ }^{8}$ They are only known to us from Philo's treatise de Vita Contemplativa. Their settlements were on the shores of the Mareotic lake near Alexandria. Unlike the Essenes, they were not gathered together in convents as members of a fraternity, but lived apart as anchorites, though in the same neighbourhood. In other respects their tenets and practices were very similar to those of the Essenes.
${ }^{4}$ See above p . 19 sq .
affinity of type, with the Essenes of the mother country. As a matter of history, it may or may not have sprung from the colonies on the shores of the Dead Sea; but as this can neither be proved nor disproved, so also it is immaterial to my main purpose. All along its frontier, wherever Judaism became Probabilienamoured of and was wedded to Oriental mysticism, the ties one. same union would produce substantially the same results. In a country where Phrygia, Persia, Syria, all in turn had moulded religious thought, it would be strange indeed if Judaism entirely escaped these influences. Nor, as a matter of fact, are indications wanting to show that it was not unaffected by them. If the traces are few, they are at least as numerous Direct and as clear as with our defective information on the whole indicas. subject we have any right to expect in this particular instance.

When St Paul visits Ephesus, he comes in contact with St Paulat certain strolling Jews, exorcists, who attempt to cast out evil E.Dhesus spirits ${ }^{1}$. Connecting this fact with the notices of Josephus, from 57 which we infer that exorcisms of this kind were especially Exorcisms practised by the Essenes ${ }^{2}$, we seem to have an indication of ${ }^{\text {and }}$ their presence in the capital of proconsular Asia. If so, it is a significant fact that in their exorcisms they employed the name of our Lord: for then we must regard this as the earliest notice of those overtures of alliance on the part of Essenism, which involved such important consequences in the subsequent history of the Church ${ }^{3}$. It is also worth observing, that the next incident in St Luke's narrative is the burning of their magical books by those whom St Paul converted marical on this occasion ${ }^{4}$. As Jews are especially mentioned among these converts, and as books of charms are ascribed to the Essenes by Josephus, the two incidents, standing in this close

[^49] in this passage: see Wetstein ad loc.,
and the references in Becker and Marquardt Rom. Alterth. Iv. p. 123 sq.
But this supposition does not exolude the Jews from a share in these magical arts, while the context points to some such participation.
connexion, throw great light on the type of Judaism which thus appears at Ephesus ${ }^{1}$.

Somewhat later we have another notice which bears in the same direction. The Sibylline Oracle, which forms the fourth book in the existing collection, is discovered by internal evidence to have been written about A.D. $80^{\circ}$. It is plainly a product of Judaism, but its Judaism does not belong to the normal Pharisaic type. With Essenism it rejects sacrifices, even regarding the shedding of blood as a pollution ${ }^{3}$, and with Essenism also it inculcates the duty of frequent washings ${ }^{4}$. Yet from other indications we are led to the conclusion, that this poem was not written in the interests of Essenism properly so called, but represents some allied though

Abstract

${ }^{1}$ I canonly regard it as an accidental coincidence that the epulones of the Ephesian Artemis were called Essenes,    Guhl Ephesiaca ro6 sq. The Etymol.  olovs, and adds several absura derivations of the word. In the sense of ' $a$ king' it is used by Callimachus Hymn.  is probably not a Greek word, as other terms connected with the worship of the Eephesian Artemis (e.g. $\mu \mathrm{e} \gamma \mathrm{a} \beta \mathbf{\beta} \mathrm{g}_{\mathrm{j}} \mathrm{s}$, a Persian word) point to an oriental or at least a non-Greels origin; and some have derived it from the Aramaie ful.' But there is no sufficient ground for comecting it directly with the name of the sect 'E $\sigma \sigma \eta \nu 0$ or 'E $\sigma \sigma \alpha i=1$, as some writers are disposed to do (e.g. Spanheim on Callim. I. c., Creazer Symbolik Iv. pp. 347, 349); though this view is favoured by the fact that certain ascetic practices were enjoined on these pagan 'Essenes.' ${ }^{2}$ Its date is fixed by the following allusions. The temple at Jerusalem has been destroyed by Titus (vv. 123 sq.), and the cities of Campania have been overwhelmed in fire and ashes (vv. 127 sq .). Nero has disappeared and his disappoarance has been followed by bloody contests in Rome (rv. n16 sq.); but his return is still ex. pected (ov. 134 sq.).

 In an earlier passage vo. 8 sq. it is Béras ȧeváooct. Another point of contact with the Essenes is the great stress on prayers before meals, ver. 26 єủloyéovres $\pi \rho i \nu$ rtéecp $\phi$ ayetct $\tau \epsilon$. Ewald (Sibyll. Buicher p. 46) points also to the prominence of the words ev $\sigma \in \beta \in i v$, $\epsilon \dot{\sigma} \sigma \epsilon \beta \eta=$, $\varepsilon \dot{\nu} \sigma \epsilon \beta l \alpha$ (vv. 26, 35, 42, 45, $133,148,151,162,165,18 \mathrm{I}, 183$ ) to designate the elect of God, as tending in the same direction. The force of thislatterargument will depend mainly on the derivation which is given to the name Efsene. See below, p. 349 sq.

independent development of Judaism. In some respects at all events its language seems quite inconsistent with the purer type of Essenism ${ }^{1}$. But its general tendency is clear: and of its locality there can hardly be a doubt. The affairs of Asia Minor occupy a disproportionate space in the poet's description of the past and vision of the future. The cities of the Mæander and its neighbourhood, among these Laodicea, are mentioned with emphasis ${ }^{2}$.

And certainly the moral and intellectual atmosphere would not be unfavourable to the growth of such a plant. The same district, which in speculative philosophy had produced a Thales and a Heraclitus ${ }^{\text {s }}$, had developed in popular religion the wor- religion. ship of the Phrygian Cybele and Sabazius and of the Ephesian Artemis ${ }^{4}$. Cosmological speculation, mystic theosophy, religious fanaticism, all had their home here. Associated with Judaism or with Cbristianity the natural temperament and the intellectual bias of the people would take a new direction;

[^50]forces of nature in these districts of Asia Minor may have directed the speculations of the Ionic sohool towards physics, and more especially towards cosmogony. In Heraclitus there is also a strong mystical element. But besides such broader affinities, I venture to oall attention to special dieta of the two philosophers mentioned in the text, which curionsly recall the tenets of the Jadro-Gnostic teachers. Thales deciared (Diog. Laert, i. 27) $\tau \partial \boldsymbol{\mu} \boldsymbol{\kappa} \sigma \mu 0 ;$ ported by Aristotle (de An. i. 5, p. 4 II ), т $\dot{\alpha} \nu \tau a, ~ \pi \lambda \not \lambda \rho \eta ~ \theta \in \omega \hat{\nu} \nu \tau \nu a t$. In a recorded saying of Heraclitus we have the very language of a Gnostic teacher; Clem. Alex. Strom. v. 13, p. 699 , $\tau \dot{\alpha} \mu \hat{\epsilon} \nu \tau \hat{\eta} s$ above pp. 77, 92.

- For the characteristic features of Dhrygian religious worship see Steiger Kolosser p. 70 sq.
but the old type would not be altogether obliterated. Phrygia reared the hybrid monstrosities of Ophitism ${ }^{1}$. She was the mother of Montanist enthusiasm ${ }^{2}$, and the foster-mother of Novatian rigorism ${ }^{3}$. The syncretist, the mystic, the devotee, the puritan, would find a congenial climate in these regions of Asia Minor.

Provions results sammed up.

Is the Calossian heresy Gnostio?

Three notes of Gnosticism.

1. Intellectual exclusiveness.

It has thus been shown first, that Essene Judaism was Gnostic in its character; and secondly, that this type of Jewish thought and practice had established itself in the Apostolic age in those parts of Asia Minor with which we are more directly concerned. It now remains to examine the heresy of the Colossian Church more nearly, and to see whether it deserves the name, which provisionally was given to it, of Gnostic Judaism. Its Judaism all will allow. Its claim to be regarded as Gnostic will require a closer scrutiny. And in conducting this examination, it will be convenient to take the three notes of Gnosticism which have been already laid down, and to enquire how far it satisfies these tests.
I. It has been pointed out that Gnosticism strove to establish, or rather to preserve, an intellectual oligarchy in religion. It had its hidden wisdom, its exclusive mysteries, its privileged class.

Now I think it will be evident, that St Paul in this epistle

[^51]feels himself challenged to contend for the universality of the st Paul Gospel. This indeed is a characteristic feature of the Apostle's for the teaching at all times, and holds an equally prominent place in in inversalthe epistles of an earlier date. But the point to be observed is, Gospel, that the Apostle, in maintaining this doctrine, has changed the mode of his defence; and this fact suggests that there has been a change in the direction of the attack. It is no longer against national exclusiveness, but against intellectual exclusiveness, that he contends. His adversaries do not now plead ceremonial restrictions, or at least do not plead these alone : but they erect an artificial barrier of spiritual privilege, even more fatal to the universal claims of the Gospel, because more specious and more insidious. It is not now against the Jew as such, but against the Jew become Gnostie, that he fights the battle of liberty. In other words; it is not against Christian Pharisaism but against Christian Essenism that he defends his position. Only in the light of such an antagonism can we understand the emphatic iteration with which he claims to 'warn every man and teach every man in every wisdom, that he may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus'.' It will be remembered against that 'wisdom' in Gnostie teaching was the exclusive possession of the few; it will not be forgotten that 'perfection' was the term especially applied in their language to this privileged minority, intellect. as contradistinguished from the common herd of believers; and thus it will be readily understood why St Paul should go on to say that this universality of the Gospel is the one object of his contention, to which all the energies of his life are directed, and having doue so, should express his intense anxiety for the Churches of Colosse and the neighbourhood, lest they should be led astray by a spurious wisdom to desert the true knowledge ${ }^{2}$. This danger also will enable us to appreciate a [^52][^53]novel feature in another passage of the epistle. While dwelling on the obliteration of all distinctions in Christ, he repeats his earlier contrasts, 'Greek and Jew,' 'circumcision and uncircumcision,' 'bondslave and free'; but to these he adds new words which at once give a wider scope and a more immediate application to the lesson. In Christ the existence of 'barbarian' and even 'Scythian,' the lowest type of barbarian, is extinguished'. As culture, civilisation, philosophy, knowledge, are no conditions of acceptance, so neither is their absence any disqualification in the believer. . The aristocracy of intellectual discernment, which Gnosticism upheld in religion, is abhorrent to the first principles of the Gospel.

He contrasts the true wisdom with the false,

Hence also must be explained the frequent occurrence of the words ' wisdom' ( $\sigma o \phi l a$ ), 'intelligence' ( $\sigma \dot{v} \nu \in \sigma \iota s$ ), 'knowledge' ( $\gamma \nu \omega \hat{\omega} \sigma \iota)$, 'perfect knowledge' ( $\epsilon \pi i \gamma \nu \omega \sigma t s)$, in this epistle ${ }^{2}$. St Paul takes up the language of his opponents, and translates it into a higher sphere. The false teachers put forward a 'philosophy,' but it was only an empty deceit, only a plausible display of false reasoning'. They pretended 'wisdom,' but it was merely the profession, not the reality ${ }^{4}$. Against these pretentions the Apostle sets the true wisdom of the Gospel. On its wealth, its fulness, its perfection, he is never tired of dwelling ${ }^{6}$. The true wisdom, he would argue, is essentially spiritual and yet essentially definite; while the false is argumentative, is specuthe one object of the Apostle's preaching (i. 29) cis å кal коть̂ к. к. $\lambda_{\text {; }}$; then the expression of concern on behalf of the Colossians (ii. i) $\theta \hat{\lambda} \lambda \omega$ $\gamma \dot{\alpha} \rho \dot{\nu} \mu a \mathrm{~s}$ к.т. ${ }^{\text {.; }}$ then the desire that they may be brought (ii. 2) єls $\pi \hat{a} \bar{\nu} \pi \lambda a i ̂ \pi o s ~ \tau \hat{\eta} s$ the definition of this mystery (ii. 2, 3), к.т. $\lambda$. ; then the warning against the false teachers (ii. 4) roûto $\lambda$ érw lva

${ }^{1}$ Col. iii. II after $\pi \epsilon \rho \in \tau о \mu \grave{\eta}$ kal axpopuaria the Apostle adds $\beta$ dppapos, Snúg $\eta_{\text {s. }}$ There is nothing correspond. ing to this in the parallel passage, Gal. iii. 28.

${ }^{2}$ For ropla see i. 9, 28, ii. 3, iii. 16, iv. 5; for बúveats i. 9 , ii. 2 ; for $\gamma \nu \omega \bar{\sigma}$ ts ii. 3 ; for $\epsilon \pi i \gamma \nu \omega \sigma i s$ i. 9,10 , ii. 2 , iii. 10 .

${ }^{4}$ ii. 23 入bjoy $\mu \notin \nu \quad z_{\chi o v t a}$ бoфlas, where the $\mu \hat{e} \nu$ suggests the contrast of the suppressed clause.

5 e.g. i. 9, 28, iii. 16 z̀ $\frac{\pi \dot{a} \sigma \eta}{}$ $\sigma \circ \phi i q ;$ ii. $2 \tau \hat{\eta} s \pi \lambda \eta p o \phi o p l a s$. For the 'wealith' of this knowledge compare i. 27 , ii. 2, iii. 16; and see above p. 44 - lative, is vague and dreamy ${ }^{1}$. Again they had their rites of initiation. St Paul contrasts with these the one universal, com- and dwells prehensive mystery ${ }^{2}$, the knowledge of God in Christ. This table myinmystery is complete in itself: it contains 'all the treasures of ${ }^{\text {tery }}$. wisdom and of knowledge hidden' in it ${ }^{3}$. Moreover it is offered to all without distinction : though once bidden, its revelation is unrestricted, except by the waywardness and disobedience of men. The esoteric spirit of Gnosticism finds no countenance in the Apostle's teaching.
2. From the informing spirit of Gnosticism we turn to the 2. Specnspeculative tenets-the cosmogony and the theology of the tenets.

Gnostic.

Cosmogony and
And here too the affinities to Guosticism reveal themselves theology. in the Colossian heresy. We cannot fail to observe that the Apostle has in view the doctrine of intermediate agencies, re- St Paul garded as instruments in the creation and govermment of the doctrine of world. Though this tenet is not distinctly mentioned, it is angelic tacitly assumed in the teaching which St Paul opposes to it: Against the philosophy of successive evolutions from the Divine nature, angelic mediators forming the successive links in the chain which binds the finite to the Infinite, he sets the doctrine of the one Eternal Son, the Word of God begotten before the setting worlds ${ }^{4}$. The angelology of the heretics had a twofold bearing; ; the docit was intimately connected at once with cosmogony and with $\underset{W}{\text { trine of the }}$ religion. Correspondingly St Paul represents the mediatorial carnate, function of Christ as twofold: it is exercised in the natural creation, and it is exercised in the spiritual creation. In both these spheres His initiative is absolute, His control is universal, His action is complete. By His agency the world of matter was created and is sustained. He is at once the beginning and the [^54][^55]end of the material universe; 'All things have been created through Him and unto Him.' Nor is His office in the spiritual world less complete. In the Church, as in the Universe, He is as the re. conciler of heaven and earth.

His relations to (I) Deity; as God manifested. sole, absolute, supreme; the primary source from which all life proceeds and the ultimate arbiter in whom all feuds are reconciled.

On the one hand, in relation to Deity, He is the visible image of the invisible God. He is not only the chief manifestation of the Divine nature: He exhausts the Godhead manifested. In Him resides the totality of the Divine powers and attributes. For this totality Gnostic teachers had a technical The plero- term, the pleroma or plenitude ${ }^{1}$. From the pleroma they supma resides in Him. posed that all those agencies issued, through which God has at any time exerted His power in creation, or manifested His will through revelation. These mediatorial beings would retain more or less of its influence, according as they claimed direct parentage from it or traced their descent through successive evolutions. But in all cases this pleroma was distributed, diluted, transformed and darkened by foreign admixture. They were only partial and blurred images, often deceptive caricatures, of their original, broken lights of the great central Light. It is not improbable that, like later speculators of the same school, they found a place somewhere or other in their genealogy of spiritual beings for the Christ. If so, St Paul's language becomes doubly significant. But this hypothesis is not needed to explain its reference. In contrast to their doctrine, he asserts and repeats the assertion, that the pleroma abides absolutely and wholly in Cbrist as the Word of God ${ }^{2}$. The entire light is concentrated in Him.
(2) Created things; as absolate Lord.

Hence it follows that, as regards created things, His supremacy must be absolute. In heaven as in earth, over things immaterial as over things material, He is king. Speculations on the nature of intermediate spiritual agencies-their names, their ranks, their offices-were rife in the schools of Judæo-Gnostic [^56]thought. 'Thrones, dominations, princedoms, virtues, powers'these formed part of the spiritual nomenclature which they had invented to describe different grades of angelic mediators. Without entering into these speculations, the Apostle asserts that Christ is Lord of all, the highest and the lowest, whatever rank they may hold and by whatever name they are called ${ }^{1}$, for they are parts of creation and He is the source of creation. Through Him they became, and unto Him they tend.

Hence the worship of angels, which the false teachers incul- Angelolacated, was utterly wrong in principle. The motive of this the is therore angelolatry it is not difficult to imagine. There was a show of ed condemnhumility ${ }^{2}$, for there was a confession of weakness, in this subservience to inferior mediatorial agencies. It was held feasible to grasp at the lower links of the chain which bound earth to heaven, when heaven itself seemed far beyond the reach of man. The successive grades of intermediate beings were as successive steps, by which man might mount the ladder leading up to the throne of God. This carefully woven web of sophistry the Apostle tears to shreds. The doctrine of the false teachers was based on confident assumptions respecting angelic beings of whom they could know nothing. It was moreover a denial of Christ's twofold personality and His mediatorial office. It follows from the true conception of as a denial Christ's Person, that He and He alone can bridge over the $\begin{gathered}\text { of } \\ \text { fect media }\end{gathered}$ chasm between earth and heaven; for He is at once the lowest ${ }^{\text {tion. }}$ and the highest. He raises up man to God, for He brings down God to man. Thus the chain is reduced to a single link, this link being the Word made flesh. As the pleroma resides in Him, so is it communicated to us through Him ${ }^{3}$. To substitute allegiance to any other spiritual mediator is to sever [^57]the connexion of the limbs with the Head, which is the centre of life and the mainspring of all energy throughout the body ${ }^{1}$.

The Apostle's practieal inference.
3. Moral results of Gnostio dootrine.

Asceticism of the 6 om lossian heresy

Hence follows the practical conclusion, that, whatever is done, must be done in the name of the Lord ${ }^{9}$. Wives must submit to their husbands 'in the Lord': children must obey their parents 'in the Lord': servants must work for their masters as working 'unto the Lord'.' This iteration, 'in the Lord,' 'unto the Lord,' is not an irrelevant form of words; but arises as an immediate inference from the main idea which underlies the doctrinal portion of the epistle.
3. It has been shown that the speculative tenets of Gnosticism might lead (and as a matter of fact we know that they did lead) to either of two practical extremes, to rigid asceticism or to unbridled license. The latter alternative appears to some extent in the heresy of the Pastoral Epistles* and still more plainly in those of the Catholic Epistles ${ }^{5}$ and the Apocalypse ${ }^{6}$. It is constantly urged by Catholic writers as a reproach against later Gnostic sects?

But the former and nobler extreme was the first impulse of the Gnostic. To escape from the infection of evil by escaping from the domination of matter was his chief anxiety. This appears very plainly in the Colossian heresy. Though the prohibitions to which the Apostle alludes might be explained in part by the ordinances of the Mosaic ritual, this explanation will not cover all the facts. Thus for instance drinks are mentioned as well as meats ${ }^{8}$, though on the former the law of Moses is silent. Thus agrain the rigorous denunciation, 'Touch not, taste not, handle not ${ }^{\circ}$, seems to go very far beyond the Levitical enactments. And moreover the motive of these pro-

1 ii. 18.
${ }^{2}$ iii. 17.
3 iii. 18, 20, 23.
4 At least in 2 Tim. iii. 1 - 7 , where, though the most monstrous developments of the evil were still future, the Apostle's language implies that it had already begun. On the other hand in the picture of the heresy in 1 Tim.

[^58]hibitions is Essene rather than Pharisaic, Gnostic rather than not exJewish. These severities of discipline were intended 'to check ${ }_{\text {ita }}^{\text {plained }}$ Jndaindulgence of the flesh ${ }^{1 .}$. They professed to treat the body ism. with entire disregard, to ignore its cravings and to deny its wants. In short they betray a strong ascetic tendency ${ }^{2}$, of which normal Judaism, as represented by the Pharisee, offers no explanation.

And St Paul's answer points to the same inference. The St Paul's difference will appear more plainly, if we compare it with his $\begin{gathered}\text { reply } \\ \text { shows } \\ \text { its }\end{gathered}$ treatment of Pharisaic Judaism in the Galatian Church. This $\begin{gathered}\text { Gnostic } \\ \text { benring. }\end{gathered}$ epistle offers nothing at all corresponding to his language on that occasion; 'If righteousness be by law, then Christ died in vain'; 'If ye be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing'; 'Christ is nullified for you, whosoever are justified by law; ye are fallen from grace ${ }^{3}$.' The point of view in fact is wholly changed. With these Essene or Gnostic Judaizers the Mosaic law was neither the motive nor the standard, it was only the starting point, of their austerities. Hence in replying the Apostle no longer deals with law, as law; he no longer points it is no the contrast of grace and works; but he enters upon the moral longer the aspects of these ascetic practices. He denounces them, as con- law and centrating the thoughts on earthly and perishable things ${ }^{4}$. He points out that they fail in their purpose, and are found valueless against carnal indulgences ${ }^{5}$. In their place be offers the true and only remedy against sin-the elevation of the inner life in Christ, the transference of the affections into a higher sphere ${ }^{6}$, where the temptations of the flesh are powerless. Thus dying with Christ, they will kill all their earthly members ${ }^{7}$. Thus rising with Christ, they will be renewed in the image of God their Creator:.

[^59]The truth of the above result tested by
(1) Its inherent consistency and symmetry.

In attempting to draw a complete portrait of the Colossian heresy from a few features accidentally exhibited in St Paul's epistle, it has been necessary to supply certain links; and some assurance may not unreasonably be required that this has not been done arbitrarily. Nor is this security wanting. In all such cases the test will be twofold. The result must be consistent with itself: and it must do no violence to the historical conditions under which the phenomena arose.
I. In the present instance the former of these tests is fully satisfied. The consistency and the symmetry of the result is its great recommendation. The postulate of a Gnostic type brings the separate parts of the representation into direct connexion. The speculative opinions and the practical tendencies of the beresy thus explain, and are explained by, each other. It is analogous to the hypothesis of the comparative anatomist, who by referring the fossil remains to their proper type restores the whole skeleton of some unknown animal from a few bones belonging to different extremities of the body, and without the intermediate and connecting parts. In the one case, as in the other, the result is the justification of the postulate.

(2) Its place in a historical sequence.2. And again; the historical conditions of the problem are carefully observed. It has been shown already, that Judaism in the preceding age had in one of its developments assumed a form which was the natural precursor of the Colossian heresy. In order to complete the argument it will be necessary to show that Christianity in the generation next succeeding exhibited a perverted type, which was its natural outgrowth. If this can be done, the Colossian heresy will take its proper place in a regular historical sequence.

Continu- I have already pointed out that the language of St John ance of this type of Judæo-Gnosticismintine district of the same type of heresy which is bere denounced district. by St PauI'. But the notices in this book are not more definite than those of the Epistle to the Colossians itself; and we are led to look outside the Canonical writings for some more explicit evidence. Has early Christian history then preserved any record of a distinctly Gnostic school existing on the confines of the Apostolic age, which may be considered a legitimate development of the phase of religious speculation that confronts us here?

We find exactly the phenomenon which we are seeking in Heress of the heresy of Cerinthus ${ }^{1}$. The time, the place, the circum- Cerinthus. stances, all agree. This heresiarch is said to have been originally a native of Alexandria ${ }^{2}$; but proconsular Asia is allowed His date on all hands to have been the scene of his activity as a ${ }^{\text {and place. }}$ teacher ${ }^{3}$. He lived and taught at the close of the Apostolic age, that is, in the latest decade of the first century. Some writers indeed make him an antagonist of St Peter and St Paul', but their authority is not trustworthy, nor is this very early date at all probable. But there can be no reasonable doubt that he was a contemporary of St John, who was related by Polycarp to have denounced him face to face on one memorable occasion ${ }^{\text {b }}$, and is moreover said by Irenæus to have written his Gospel with the direct object of confuting his errors ${ }^{6}$.

[^60]with St John in the bath is placed at Ephesus: see below, note 5 .
${ }^{4}$ Epiphanius (xxviii. 2 sq.) represents him as the ringleader of the Judaizing opponents of the Apostles in the Aots and Epistles to the Corinthians and Galatians. Philastrius (Har. 36) takes the same line.
${ }^{5}$ The well-known story of the encounter between St John and Cerinthus in the bath is related by Irenæus (iii. 3. 4) on the authority of Polycarp, who appears from the sequence of Irenmus' narrative to have told it at Rome, when he paid his visit to Ani-

${ }^{6}$ Iren. iii. II . I.

Cerinthus a link between Judaism and Grosticism.

Judaism still prominent in his system
' Cerinthus,' writes Neander, 'is best entitled to be considered as the intermediate link between the Judaizing and the Gnostic sects.' 'Even among the ancients,' he adds, 'opposite reports respecting his doctrines have been given from opposite points of view, according as the Gnostic or the Judaizing element was exclusively insisted upon: and the dispute on this point has been kept up even to modern times. In point of chronology too Cerinthus may be regarded as representing the principle in its transition from Judaism to Gnosticism ${ }^{1}$.'

Of his Judaism no doubt has been or can be entertained. The gross Chiliastic doctrine ascribed to $\mathrm{him}^{2}$, even though it may have been exaggerated in the representations of adverse writers, can only be explained by a Jewish origin. His conception of the Person of Christ was Ebionite, that is Judaic, in its main features ${ }^{3}$. He is said moreover to have enforced the rite of circumcision and to have inculeated the observance of sabbaths ${ }^{4}$. It is related also that the Cerinthians, like the Ebionites, accepted the Gospel of St Matthew alone ${ }^{5}$.
thongh Gnosticism is already aggressive.

At the same time, it is said by an ancient writer that his adherence to Judaism was only partial ${ }^{3}$. This limitation is doubtless correct. As Gnostic principles asserted themselves more distinctly, pure Judaism necessarily suffered. All or nearly all the early Gnostic heresies were Judaic; and for a time a compromise was effected which involved more or less concession on either side. But the ultimate incompatibility of the two at length became evident, and a precarious alliance was exchanged for an open antagonism. This final result however was not reached till the middle of the second century: and meanwhile it was a question to what extent Judaism was prepared to make concessions for the sake of this new ally. Even the Jewish Essenes, as we have seen, departed from the orthodox position in the matter of sacrifices; and if we possessed fuller information, we should probably find that they made still larger concessions than this. Of the Colossian heretics we can only form a conjecture, but the angelology and angelolatry attributed to them point to a further step in the same direction. As we pass from them to Cerinthus we are no longer left in doubt; for the Gnostic element has clearly Gnostio gained the ascendant, though it has not yet driven its rival hiement in out of the field. Two characteristic features in his teaching ing. especially deserve consideration, both as evincing the tendency of his speculations and as throwing back light on the notices in the Colossian Epistle.

[^61]statements of these writers would not carry much weight insthemselves; but in this instance they are rendered highly probable by the known Judaism of Cerinthus.
${ }^{5}$ Epiphan. Har. xxviii. 5, Exx. 14, Philastr. Her. 36 .
${ }^{6}$ Epiphan. Hor. xxviii. I $\pi \rho \rho \sigma \epsilon \chi$ ен

r. His cosmogony is essentially Gnostic. The great pro- r. His blem of creation presented itself to him in the same aspect; Cosmoand the solution which he offered was generically the same. ${ }^{\text {gony }}$ The world, he asserted, was not made by the highest God, but by an angel or power far removed from, and ignorant of, this Supreme Being ${ }^{1}$. Other authorities describing his system speak not of a single power, but of powers, as creating the universe ${ }^{2}$ : but all alike represent this demiurge, or these

[^62]atque virtutes, ques distantes longe a superioribus virtutibus mundum istum in inferioribus partibus condidisse... Post hanc Cerinthus hæreticus erupit, similia docens. Nam et ipse mundum institutum esse ab illis dicit'; Epi-

 Augustin. Har. 8. The one statement is quite reconcilable with the other. Among those angels by whose instrumentality the world was created, Cerinthus appears to have assigued a position of preeminence to one, whom demiurges, as ignorant of the absolute God. It is moreover stated that he held the Mosaic law to have been given not by the supreme God Himself, but by this angel, or one of these angels, who created the world ${ }^{1}$.
and consequent angelology.

From these notices it is plain that angelology had an important place in his speculations; and that he employed it to explain the existence of evil supposed to be inherent in the physical world, as well as to account for the imperfections of the old dispensation. The 'remote distance' of his angelic demiurge from the supreme God can hardly be explained except on the hypothesis of successive generations of these intermediate agencies. Thus his solution is thoroughly Gnostic. At the same time, as contrasted with later and more sharply defined Gnostic systems, the Judaic origin and complexion of his cosmogony is obvious. His intermediate agencies still retain the name and the personality of angels, and have not yet given way to those vague idealities which, as emanations
Angels of earlier and mons of laterGnos. tics.

Cerinthas a link hetween the Colossian heresy and later Gnosticism. or æons, took their place in later speculations. Thus his theory is linked on to the angelology of later Judaism founded on the angelic appearances recorded in the Old Testament narrative. And again: while later Gnostics represent the demiurge and giver of the law as antagonistic to the supreme and good God, Cerinthus does not go beyond postulating his ignorance. He went as far as he could without breaking entirely with the Old Testament and abandoning his Judaic standingground.

In these respects Cerinthus is the proper link between the incipient gnosis of the Colossian heretics and the mature gnosis of the second century. In the Colossian epistle we still breathe the atmosphere of Jewish angelology, nor is there any trace of the ceon of later Gnosticism ${ }^{2}$; while yet speculation is so far advanced that the angels have an important function he regarded as the demiurge in a special sense and under whom the others worked; see Neander Church History II. p. 43.
${ }^{1}$ Pseude-Tertull. I. e.; Epiphan.

[^63]in explaining the mysteries of the creation and government of the world. On the other hand it has not reached the point at which we find it in Cerinthus. Gnostic conceptions respecting the relation of the demiurgic agency to the supreme God would appear to have passed through three stages. ' This relation was represented first, as imperfect appreciation; next, as entire ignorance; lastly, as direct antagonism. The second and third are the standing points of Cerinthus and of the later Gnostic teachers respectively. The first was probably the position of the Colossian false teachers. The imperfections of the natural world, they would urge, were due to the limited capacities of these angels to whom the demiurgic work was committed, and to their imperfect sympathy with the Supreme God; but at the same time they might fitly receive worship as mediators between God and man; and indeed humanity seemed in its weakness to need the intervention of some such beings less remote from itself than the highest heaven.
2. Again the Christology of Cerinthus deserves attention 2. His from this point of view. Here all our authorities are agreed. Christo As a Judaizer Cerinthus held with the Ebionites that Jesus was only the son of Joseph and Mary, born in the natural way. As a Gnostic he maintained that the Christ first descended in the form of a dove on the carpenter's son at his baptism; that He revealed to him the unknown Father, and worked miracles through him : and that at length He took His flight and left him, so that Jesus alone suffered and rose, while the Christ remained impassible ${ }^{1}$. It would appear also, though this is an aon in the passages of the New Testament, which aresometimes quoted in support of this view, e.g., by Baur Paulus p. 428, Burton Lectures p. III sq.
${ }^{1}$ Iren. i. 26. 1, Hippol. Her. vii. 33. x. 21, Epiphan. Har. xxviii. 1, Theodoret. H. F. ii. 3. The arguments by which Lipsius (Gnosticismus pp. 245, 258, in Erseh u. Gruber; Quellenkritik des Epiphanios p. 118 sq.) attempts to show that Cerinthus did not separate the Christ from Jesus, and that Irenmus (and subsequent authors copying him) have wrongly attributed to this heretic the theories of later Gnostics, seem ingufficient to outweigh these direct statements. It is more probable that the system of Cerinthus should have admitted some foreign elements not very consistent with his Judaic standing not certain, that he described this re-ascension of the Christ as a return 'to His own pleroma'.'

Approach towards Cerinthian Christology in the Colossian heresy-

Now it is not clear from St Paul's language what opinions the Colossian heretics beld respecting the person of our Lord; but we may safely assume that he regarded them as inadequate and derogatory. The emphasis, with which he asserts the eternal being and absolute sovereignty of Christ, can hardly be explained in any other way. But individual expressions tempt us to conjecture that the same ideas were already floating in the air, which ultimately took form and consistency in the tenets of Cerinthus. Thus, when he reiterates the statement that the whole pleroma abides permanently in Christ², he would appear to be tacitly refuting some opinion which maintained only mutable and imperfect relations between the two. When again he speaks of the true gospel first taught to the Colossians as the doctrine of 'the Christ, even Jesus the Lord",' his language might seem to be directed against the tendency to separate the heavenly Christ from the earthly Jesus, as though the connexion were only transient. When lastly he dwells on the work of reconciliation, as wrought 'through the blood of Christ's cross,' 'in the body of His fesh through death,' we may perbaps infer that he already discerned a disposition to put aside Christ's passion as a stumbling-block in the way of philosophical relig1on. Thus regarded, the point, than that these writers should have been misinformed. Inconsistency was a necessary coudition of Judaio Gnosticism. The point however is comparatively onimportant es affecting my main purpose.

1 Irenæus (iii. II. r), after speaking of Cerinthus, the Nicolaitans, and others, proceeds 'non, quemadmodum illidicunt, alterum quidemfabricatorem (i.e. demiurgum), alium autem Patrem Domini: et alium quidem fabricatoris fliam, alterum vero de superioribus Christum, quem et impassibilem perseverasse, descendentem in Jesum filium fabricatoris, et iterum revolasse in suum pleroma.' The doctrine is precisely that which he has before agcribed to Cerinthus (i, 76. 1), but the mode of statement may have been borrowed from the Nicolaitans or the Valentinians or some other later Gnostics. There is however no improbability in the supposition that Cerinthus used the word pleroma in this way. See the detached note on $\pi \lambda \eta p \omega \mu a$ below.

2 i. 19, ii. g. See above p. Io2, note 2. On the force of кaroskề see the note on the earlier of the two passages.

[^64]Apostle's language gains force and point; though no stress can be laid on explanations which are so largely conjectural.

But if so, the very generality of his language shows that The Gnosthese speculations were still vague and fluctuating. The dif- the Colos ference which separates these heretics from Cerinthus may be siansbeing measured by the greater precision and directness in the Apo-underestolic counter-statement, as we turn from the Epistle to the Colossians to the Gospel of St John. In this interval, extending over nearly a quarter of a century, speculation has taken a definite shape. The elements of Gnostic theory, which were before held in solution, had meanwhile crystallized around the facts of the Gospel. Yet still we seem justified, even at the earlier date, in speaking of these general ideas as Gnostic, guarding ourselves at the same time against misunderstanding with the twofold caution, that we here employ the term to express the simplest and most elementary conceptions of this tendency of thought, and that we do not postulate its use as a distinct designation of any sect or sects at this early date. Thus limited, the view that the writer of this epistle is combating a Gnostic heresy seems free from all objections, while it appears necessary to explain his language; and certainly it does not, as is sometimes imagined, place any weapon in the hands of those who would assail the early date and Apostolic authorship of the epistle.

CHARACTER AND CONTENTS OF THE EPISTLE.

Thennderstanding of the heresy necessary.

WITHOUT the preceding investigation the teaching of this epistle would be very imperfectly understood; for its direction was necessarily determined by the occasion which gave rise to it. Only when we have once grasped the nature of the doctrine which St Paul is combating, do we perceive that every sentence is instinct with life and meaning.

The errors though twofold sprang from one root,

We have seen that the error of the heretical teachers was twofold. They had a false conception in theology, and they had a false basis of morals. It has been pointed out also, that these two were closely connected together, and bad their root in the same fundamental error, the idea of matter as the abode of evil and thus antagonistic to God.

So the answer to both is in the same truth.

As the two elements of the heretical doctrine were derived from the same source, so the reply to both was sought by the Apostle in the same idea, the conception of the Person of Christ as the one absolute mediator between God and man, the true and only reconciler of heaven and earth.

But though they are thus ultimately connected, yet it will be necessary for the fuller understanding of St Paul's position to take them apart, and to consider first the theological and then the ethical teaching of the epistle.

1. The theological teaching of the heretics.
I. This Colossian heresy was no coarse and vulgar development of falsehood. It soared far above the Pharisaic Judaism which St Paul refutes in the Epistle to the Galatians. The questions in which it was interested lie at the very root of our religious consciousness. The impulse was given to its specu- Its lofty lations by an overwhelming sense of the unapproachable motive, majesty of God, by an instinctive recognition of the chasm which separates God from man, from the world, from matter. Its energy was sustained by the intense yearning after some mediation which might bridge over this chasm, migh $t$ establish inter-communion between the finite and the Infinite. Up to this point it was deeply religious in the best sense of the term.

The answer which it gave to these questions we have but comalready seen. In two respects this answer failed signally. On failure. the one hand it was drawn from the atmosphere of mystical speculation. It had no foundation in history, and made no appeal to experience. On the other hand, notwithstanding its complexity, it was unsatisfactory in its results; for in this plurality of mediators none was competent to meet the requirements of the case. God here and man there-no angel or spirit, whether one or more, being neither God nor man, could truly reconcile the two. Thus as regards credentials it was without a guarantee; while as regards efficiency it was wholly inadequate.

The Apostle pointed out to the Colossians a more excellent The way. It was the one purpose of Christianity to satisfy those Apostle's very yearnings which were working in their hearts, to solve $\frac{\mathrm{is} \text { is in the }}{\text { Person }}$ that very problem which had exercised their minds. In Christ of Christ. they would find the answer which they sought. His life-His cross and resurrection-was the guarantee; His Person-the The meWord Incarnate-was the solution. He alone filled up, He diator in alone could fill up, the void which lay between God and man, ${ }_{C}^{\text {Chd in inch. the }}$ could span the gulf which separated the Creator and creation. This solution offered by the Gospel is as simple as it is adequate. To their cosmical speculations, and to their religious yearnings alike, Jesus Christ is the true answer. In the World, as in the Church, He is the one only mediator, the one only reconciler. This twofold idea runs like a double thread through the fabric of the Apostle's teaching in those passages of the epistle where he is describing the Person of Christ.

It will be convenient for the better understanding of St Paul's teaching to consider these two aspects of Christ's mediation apart-its function in the natural and in the spiritual order respectively.
(i) In the Universe.
(i) The heresy of the Colossian teachers took its rise, as we saw, in their cosmical speculations. It was therefore natural that the Apostle in replying should lay stress on the function of the Word in the creation and government of the world. This is the aspect of His work most prominent in the first of the two distinctly Christological passages. The Apostle there predicates of the Word, not only prior, but absolute existence. All things were created through Him, are sustained in Him, are tending towards Him. Thus He is the beginning, middle, and end, of creation. This He is, because He is the very image of the Invisible God, because in Him dwells the plenitude of Deity.

Importance of this aspect of the Person of Christ,

This creative and administrative work of Christ the Word in the natural order of things is always emphasized in the writings of the Apostles, when they touch upon the doctrine of His Person. It stands in the forefront of the prologue to St John's Gospel : it is hardly less prominent in the opening of the Epistle to the Hebrews. His mediatorial function in the Church is represented as flowing from His mediatorial function in the world. With ourselves this idea has retired very much into the background. Though in the creed common to all the Churches we profess our belief in Him, as the Being 'through whom all things were created,' yet in reality this confession seems to exercise very little influence on our thoughts. And the loss is serious. How much our theological conceptions suffer in breadth and fulness by the neglect, a moment's reflexion will show. How much more hearty would be the sympathy of theologians with the revelations of science and the developments of history, if they habitually connected them with the operation of the same Divine Word who is the centre of all their religious aspirations, it is needless to say. Through the recognition of this idea with all the consequences which flow from it, as a living influence, more than in any other way, may we hope to strike the chords of that ' vaster music,' which results only from the harmony of knowledge and faith, of reverence and research.

It will be said indeed, that this conception leaves un- notwithtouched the philosophical difficulties which beset the subject; $;$ diaftiontities that creation still remains as much a mystery as before. $\begin{gathered}\text { get an- } \\ \text { god }\end{gathered}$ This may be allowed. But is there any reason to think that with our present limited capacities the veil which shrouds it ever will be or can be removed? The metaphysical speculations of twenty-five centuries have done nothing to raise it. The physical investigations of our own age from their very nature can do nothing; for, busied with the evolution of phenomena, they lie wholly outside this question, and do not even touch the fringe of the difficulty. But meanwhile revelation has interposed and thrown out the idea, which, if it leaves many questions unsolved, gives a breadth and unity to our conceptions, at once satisfying our religious needs and linking our scientific instincts with our theological beliefs.
(ii) But, if Christ's mediatorial office in the physical crea- (ii) In the tion was the starting point of the Apostle's teaching, His mediatorial office in the spiritual creation is its principal theme. The cosmogonies of the false teachers were framed not so much in the interests of philosophy as in the interests of religion; and the Apostle replies to them in the same spirit and with the same motive. If the function of Christ is unique in the Universe, so is it also in the Church. He is the sole Ite absoand absolute link between God and humanity. Nothing short ${ }_{\text {racter }}^{\text {lat. }}$ of His personality would suffice as a medium of reconciliation between the two. Nothing short of His life and work in the flesh, as consummated in His passion, would serve as an assurance of God's love and pardon. His cross is the atonement of mankind with God. He is the Head with whom all the living members of the body are in direct and immediate communication, who suggests their manifold activities to each, who directs their several functions in subordination to the healthy working of the whole, from whom they individually receive their inspiration and their strength.

Hence angelic mediations are fundamentally wrong.

Christ's mediation in the Church justified by His mediation in the World, the Word opposing forms of error, which in their extreme types are repre-

[^65]sented by Pantheism and Manicheism respectively. The Pan- to the motheist identifies God with the world : the Manichee attributes of the old to the world an absolute existence, independent of God. With Testament. the Pantheist sin ceases to have any existence: for it is only one form of God's working. With the Manichee sin is inherent in matter, which is antagonistic to God. The teaching of the Old Testament, of which the key-note is struck in the opening chapters of Genesis, is a refutation of both these errors. God is distinct from the world, and He is the Creator of the world. Evil is not inherent in God, but neither is it inherent in the material world. Sin is the disobedience of intelligent beings whom He has created, and whom He has endowed with a free-will, which they can use or misuse.

The revelation of the New Testament is the proper com- The New plement to the revelation of the Old. It holds this position in two main respects. If the Old Testament sets forth the absoTestament is complelute unity of God-His distinctness from and sovereignty over His creatures-the New Testament points out how He holds communion with the world and with humanity, how man becomes one with Him. And again, if the Old Testament shows the true character of $\sin$, the $\mathrm{New}_{\mathrm{ew}}$ Testament teaches the appointed means of redemption. On the one hand the monotheism of the Old Testament is supplemented by the theanthropism ${ }^{1}$ of the New. Thus the theology of revelation is completed. On the other hand, the hamartiology of the Old Testament has its counterpart in the soteriology of the New. Thus the economy of revelation is perfected.

[^66]2. The ethical error of the heretics.

Their practical earnestness,
2. When we turn from the theology of these Colossian heretics to their ethical teaching, we find it characterised by the same earnestness. Of them it might indeed be said that they did 'hunger and thirst after righteousness.' Escape from impurity, immunity from evil, was a passion with them. Bat it was no less true that notwithstanding all their sincerity they 'went astray in the wilderness'; 'hungry and thirsty, their soul fainted within them.' By their fatal transference of the abode of sin from the human heart within to the material world without, they had incapacitated themselves from finding the true antibut fanda- dote. Where they placed the evil, there they necessarily sought mental misconception and consequent failure,

St Pall substitutes a principle for ordizances. the remedy. Hence they attempted to fence themselves about, and to purify their lives by a code of rigorous prohibitions. Their energy was expended on battling with the physical conditions of human life. Their whole mind was absorbed in the struggle with imaginary forms of evil. Necessarily their character was moulded by the thoughts which habitually engaged them. Where the 'elements of the world,' the 'things which perish in the using', engrossed all their attention, it could not fail but that they should be dragged down from the serene heights of the spiritual life into the cloudy atmosphere which shrouds this lower earth.

St Paul sets himself to combat this false tendency. For negative prohibitions he substitutes a positive principle; for special enactments, a comprehensive motive. He tells them that all their scrupulous restrictions are vain, because they fail to touch the springs of action. If they would overcome the evil, they must strike at the root of the evil. Their point of view must be entirely changed. They must transfer themselves into a wholly new sphere of energy. This transference is nothing less than a migration from earth to heaven-from the region of the external and transitory to the region of the spiritual and eternal ${ }^{2}$. For a code of rules they must substitute a principle of life, which is one in its essence but [^67]infinite in its application, which will meet every emergency, will control every action, will resist every form of evil.

This principle they have in Christ. With Him they have This prindied to the world; with Him they have risen to God. Christ, ciple is the revelation of God's holiness, of God's righteousness, of venly life God's love, is light, is life, is heaven. With Him they have been translated into a higher sphere, have been brought face to face with the Eternal Presence. Let them only realise this translation. It involves new insight, new motives, new energies. They will no more waste themselves upon vexatious special restrictions: for they will be furnished with a higher inspiration which will cover all the minute details of action. They will not exhaust their energies in crushing this or that rising desire, but they will kill the whole body ${ }^{1}$ of their earthly passions through the strong arm of this personal communion with God in Christ.

When we once grasp this idea, which lies at the root of St Peul's St Paul's ethical teaching, the moral difficulty which is sup- of faith posed to attach to his doctrine of faith and works has vanished. $\begin{gathered}\text { and works } \\ \text { considered }\end{gathered}$ It is simply an impossibility that faith should exist without in the works. Though in form he states his doctrine as a relation of this princontrast between the two, in substance it resolves itself into ${ }^{\text {ciple. }}$ a question of precedence. Faith and works are related as principle and practice. Faith-the repose in the unseen, the recognition of eternal principles of truth and right, the sense of personal obligations to an Eternal Being who vindicates these principles-must come first. Faith is not an intellectual assent, nor a sympathetic sentiment merely. It is the absolute surrender of self to the will of a Being who has a right to command this surrender. It is this which places men in personal relation to God, which (in St Paul's language) justifies them before God. For it touches the springs of their actions; it fastens not on this or that detail of conduct, but extends [^68][^69]throughout the whole sphere of moral activity; and thus it determines their character as responsible beings in the sight of God.

The Christology of this epistl

From the above account it will have appeared that the distinctive feature of this epistle is its Christology. The doctrine of the Person of Christ is here stated with greater precision and fulness than in any other of St Paul's epistles. It is therefore pertinent to ask (even though the answer must necessarily be brief) what relation this statement bears to certain other enunciations of the same doctrine; to those for instance considered which occur elsewhere in St Paul's own letters, to those which in relation to
I. The Cliristology of St Paul's earlier epistles are found in other Apostolic writings, and to those which appear in the fathers of the succeeding generations.
I. The Christology of the Colossian Epistle is in no way different from that of the Apostle's earlier letters. It may indeed be called a development of his former teaching, but only as exhibiting the doctrine in fresh relations, as drawing new deductions from it, as defining what had hitherto been left undefined, not as superadding any foreign element to it. The doctrine is practically involved in the opening and closing words of his earliest extant epistle: 'The Church which is in God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ'; 'The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you ${ }^{1}$. ' The main conception of the Person of Christ, as enforced in the Colossian Epistle, alone justifies and explains this language, which otherwise would be emptied of all significance. And again: it had been enunciated by the Apostle explicitly, though briefly, in the earliest directly doctrinal passage which bears on the subject; 'One Lord Jesus Christ, through whom are all things and we through Him ${ }^{2}$.' The absolute the same universal mediation of the Son is declared as unreservedly in in substance but [^70][^71]later statement of the Apostle: and, if all the doctrinal and less folly practical inferences which it implicitly involves were not directly emphasized at this early date, it was because the circumstances did not yet require explicitness on these points. New forms of error bring into prominence new aspects of the truth. The heresies of Laodicea and Colossæ have been invaluable to the later Church in this respect. The Apostle himself, it is not too much to say, realised with ever-increasing force the manifoldness, the adaptability, the completeness of the Christian idea, notwithstanding its simplicity, as he opposed it to each successive development of error. The Person of Christ proved the complete answer to false speculations at Colossæ, as it had been found the sovereign antidote to false practices at Corinth. All these unforeseen harmonies must have appeared to him, as they will appear to us, fresh evidences of its truth.

2. And when we turn from St Paul to the other Apostolic 2. The writings which dwell on the Person of Christ from a doctrinal point of view, we find them enunciating it in language which implies the same fundamental conception, though they may not Christology of other Apostolic always present it in exactly the same aspect. More especially in the Epistle to the Hebrews first, and in the Gospel of St Their John afterwards, the form of expression is identical with the fundastatement of St Paul. In both these writings the universe is ${ }^{\text {identity. }}$ said to have been created or to exist by or through Him. This is the crucial expression, which involves in itself all the higher conceptions of the Person of Christ ${ }^{1}$. The Epistle to the Hebrews seems to have been written by a disciple of St Paul immediately after the Apostle's death, and therefore within some five or six years from the date which has been assigned to the Colossian lettor. The Gospel of St John, if the traditional report may be accepted, dates about a quarter of a century later; but it is linked with our epistle by the fact that the readers for whom it was primarily intended belonged to the neighbouring districts of proconsular Asia. Thus it illustrates, [^72]and is illustrated by, the teaching of St Paul in this letter. More especially by the emphatic use of the term Logos, which St Paul for some reason has suppressed, it supplies the centre round which the ideas gather, and thus gives unity and directness to the conception.

Firmness of the apostolic idea.
3. The Christology of the succoeding nges.

Its looseness of соnсер. tiol.

In the Christology of these Apostolic writings there is a firmness and precision which leaves no doubt about the main conception present to the mind of the writers. The idea of Christ as an intermediate being, neither God nor man, is absolutely and expressly excluded. On the one hand His humanity is distinctly emphasized. On the other He is represented as existing from eternity, as the perfect manifestation of the Father, as the absolute mediator in the creation and government of the world.
3. But, when we turn from these Apostolic statements to the writings of succeeding generations, we are struck with tho contrast ${ }^{1}$. A vagueness, a flaccidity, of conception betrays itself in their language.

In the Apostolic Fathers and in the earlier Apologists we find indeed for the most part a practical appreciation of the Person of Christ, which leaves nothing to be desired; but as soon as they venture upon any directly dogmatic statement, we miss at once the firmness of grasp and clearness of conception which mark the writings of the Apostles. If they desire to emphasize the majesty of His Person, they not unfrequently fall into language which savours of patripassianism ${ }^{2}$. If on the other hand they wish to present Him in His mediatorial capacity, they use words which seem to imply some divine being, who is God and yet not quite God, neither Creator nor creature ${ }^{3}$.

[^73]quoted in the note on Clem. Rom. 2

${ }^{3}$ The unguarded language of Juetiu for instance illustrates the statemen: in the text. On the one hand Peta. vias, Theol. Dogm. de Trin. ii. 3. 2, dis. tinctly accuses him of Arianism: on the other Bull, Def. Fid. Nic. ii. 4. I sq., indignantly repadiates the charge and claims him as atrictly orthodox. Peta.

The Church needed a long education, before she was fitted to be the expositor of the true Apostolio doctrine. A conflict of more than two centuries with Gnostics, Ebionites, Sabellians, Arians, supplied the necessary discipline. The true successors The Apoof the Apostles in this respect are not the fathers of the second century, but the fathers of the third and fourth centuries. In the applied in expositors of the Nicene age we find indeed technical terms and systematic definitions, which we do not find in the Apostles themselves; but, unless I have wholly misconceived the nature of the heretical teaching at Colossex and the purport of St Paul's reply, the main idea of Christ's Person, with which he here confronts this Gnostic Judaism, is essentially the same as that which the fathers of these later centuries opposed to the Sabellianism and the Arianism of their own age. If I mistake not, the more distinctly we realise the nature of the heresy, the more evident will it become that any conception short of the perfect deity and perfect humanity of Christ would not have furnished a satisfactory answer; and this is the reason why I have dwelt at such length on the character of the Colossian false teaching, and why I venture to call especial attention to this part of my subject.

Of the style of the letter to the Colossians I shall have occa- Style of sion to speak hereafter, when I come to discuss its genuine- $\frac{\text { this }}{\text { epistle. }}$ ness. It is sufficient to say here, that while the hand of St Paul is unmistakeable throughout this epistle, we miss the flow and the versatility of the Apostle's earlier letters.

A comparison with the Epistles to the Corinthians and to the Philippians will show the difference. It is distinguished from Ite rugthem by a certain ruggedness of expression, a 'want of finish ' and come often bordering on obscurity. What account should be given of ${ }^{\text {pression, }}$ this characteristic, it is impossible to say. The divergence of vius indeed approaches the subject from the point of view of later Western theology and, unable to appreciate Justin's doetrine of the Logos, does less than justice to this father; but nevertheless Justin's langrage is occasionally such as no Athanosian could have used. The treatment of this father by Dorner (Lehre 1. p. $4^{1} 4$ sq.) is just and avoids both extremes.
style is not greater than will appear in the Ietters of any activeminded man, written at different times and under different circumstances, The epistles which I have selected for contrast suggest that the absence of all personal connexion with the Colossian Church will partially, if not wholly, explain the diminished fluency of this letter. At the same time no epistle of but essen- St Paul is more vigorous in conception or more instinct with tial rigour. meaning. It is the very compression of the thoughts which creates the difficulty. If there is a want of fluency, there is no want of force. Feebleness is the last charge which can be brought against this epistle.

Analysis. The following is an analysis of the epistle:
I. Introductory (i. i-13).
(1) i. $\mathbf{1}$, 2. Opening salutation.
(2) i. 3-8. Thanksgiving for the progress of the Colessians hitherto.
(3) i. 9-13. Prayer for their future advance in knowledge add well-doing through Christ.
[This leads the Apostle to speak of Carist as the only path of progress.]
II. Doctrinal (i. 13-ii. 3).

The Person and Office of Christ.
(I) i. I3, I4. Through the Son we have our deliverance, our redemption.
(2) i. 15-19. The Preeminence of the Son;
(i) As the Head of the natural Creation, the Universe (i. $15-17$ );
(ii) As the Head of the new moral Creation, the Church (i. 18).
Thus He is first in all things; and this, because the pleroma has its abode in Him (i. 19).
(3) i. 20-ii. 3. The Work of the Son-a work of reconciliation ;
(i) Described generally (i. 20).
(ii) Applied specially to the Colossians (i. 21-23).
(iii) St Paul's own part in carrying out this work. His Analysis. sufferings and preaching. The 'mystery' with which he is charged (i. 24-2ヶ).
His anxiety on behalf of all (i. 28, 29) : and more especially of the Colossian and neightouring Churches (ii. 1 - 3 ).
[This expression of anxiety leads him by a direct path to the next division of the epistle.]
III. Polemical (ii. 4-iii. 4).

Warning against errors.
(1) ii. 4-8. The Colossians charged to abide in the truth of the Gospel as they received it at first, and not to be led astray by a strange philosophy which the new teachers offer.
(2) ii. 9-15. The truth stated first positively and then negatively.
[In the passage which follows (ii. 9-23) it will be observed how St Paul vibrates between the theological and practical bearings of the truth, marked $a, \beta$, re spectively.]
(i) Positively.
(a) The pleroma dwells wholly in Christ and is communicated through Him (ii. 9, so).
( $\beta$ ) The true circumcision is a spiritual circumcision (ii. 11, 12).
(ii) Negatively. Christ has ( $\beta$ ) annulled the law of ordinances (ii. 14);
(a) triumphed over all spiritual agencies, however powerful (ii. 15).
(3) ii. 16-iii. 4. Obligations following thereupon.
(i) Consequently the Colossians must not ( $\beta$ ) either submit to ritual prohibitions (ii. 16, 17 ),
(a) or substitute the worship of inferior beings for allegiance to the Head (ii. 18, 19).
(ii) On the contrary this must henceforth be their rule:
I. They have died with Christ; and with Him they have died to their old life, to earthly ordinances (ii. 20-23).
2. They have risen with Christ; and with Him they have risen to a new life, to heavenly principles (iii. I-4).
IV. Hortatony (iii. 5-iv. 6).

Practical application of this death and this resurrection.
(I) iii. 5-17. Comprehensive rules.
(i) What vices are to be put off, being mortified in this death (iii. 5-11).
(ii) What graces are to be put on, being quickened through this resurrection (iii. 12-17).
(2) iii. I8-iv. 6. Special precepts.
(a) The obligations

Of wives and husbands (iii 18,19 );
Of children and parents (iii. 20, 21); Of slaves and masters (iii. 22-iv. I).
(b) The duty of prayer and thanksgiving; with special intercession on the Apostle's behalf (iv. 2-4).
(c) The duty of propriety in behaviour towards the uncouverted (iv. 5, 6).
V. Pemonal (iv. 7-18).
(1) iv. 7-9. Explanations relating to the letter itself.
(2) iv. Io-I4. Salutations from divers persons.
(3) iv. 15-17. Salutations to divers persons. A message relating to Laodicea.
(4) iv. 18. Farewell.

IIPOE KOAAEEAEIE.

We speak wisdom among them that are perfect.  YET NOT THE WISDOM OF THIS WORLD.  BET WE SPEAK THE WISDOM OF GOD IN A MYSTERY.

1ste aas electionis
Vires omnes rationis Humanos transgreditur:
Super choros angelorum
Raptus, coeli secretorum Doctrinis imbuitur.
De hoc case tam fecundo, Tam electo et tam mundo,

Tu nos, Christe, complue;
Nos de luto, nos de foce,
Tua sancta purga prece, Regno tuo statuc.

IIPOD KOAAESAEIE.

$\Pi$  ${ }^{2}$ тoîs év Ko入o $\sigma \sigma \alpha i ̂ s$

Abstract

1, 2. 'Paul, an apostle of Christ Jesus by no personal merit but by God's gracious will alone, and Timotнy, our brother in the faith, to the consecrated people of God in Colosses, the brethren who are stedfast in their allegiance and faithful in Christ. May grace the well-spring of allmercies, and peace the crown of all blessings, b3 bestowed upon you from God our Father.' I. à́óवтo入os] On the exceptional omission of this title in some of St Paul's epistles see Phil. i. I. Though there is no reason for supposing that his anthority was directly impugned in the Colossian Church, yet he interposes by virtue of his Apostolic commission and therefore uses his authoritative title.  2 Cor. i. r, Ephes. i. r, 2 Tim. i. i. These passages show that the words cannot have a polemical bearing. If they had been directed against those who questioned his Apostleship, they would probably have taken a stronger form. The expression must therefore be regarded as a renumciation of all personal worth, and a declaration of God's unmerited grace; comp. Rom.   The same words dià $\theta \in \lambda \eta_{j} \mu a r o s ~ Ө \epsilon o \hat{v}$ are used in other connexions in Rom. xy. 32, 2 Cor. viii. 5, where no polemical reference is possible.

T $\mu$ ó $\theta$ єos $]$ The name of this disciple is attached to the Apostle's own in the heading of the Philippian letter, which was probably written at an earlier stage in his Roman captivity. It appears also in the same connexion in the Epistle to Philemon, but not in the Epistle to the Ephesians, thongh these two letters were contemporaneous with one another and with the Colossian letter. For an explanation of the omission, see the introduction to that epistle.

In the Epistles to the Philippians and to Philemon the presence of Timothy is forgotten at once (see Phil. i. 1). In this epistle the plural is maiutained throughout the thanksgiving (rv. 3, 4, 7, 8, 9), but afterwards dropped, when the Apostle begins to speak in his own person (i. 23, 24), and so he continues to the end. The exceptions (i. 28, iv. 3) are rather apparent than real.
$\dot{\delta} \dot{\alpha} \delta \in \lambda \phi$ ós] Timothy is again designated simply 'the brother' in 2 Cor. i. I, Philem. r, hut not in Heb. xiii. 23, $\dot{\eta} \mu \hat{\omega} y$. The same designation is used of Quartus (Rom. xvi. 23), of Sosthenes (r Cor. i. r), of Apollos (I Cor. xvi. 12); comp. 2 Cor. viii. 18 , ix. 3, 5, xii. 18. As some designation seemed to be required, and as Timothy could not be called an Apostle (see Galatians, p. 96, note 2), this, as the simplest title, would naturally suggest itself.
2. Kodorrais] For the reasons why this form is preferred here, while Kodacoacis is adopted in the heading of the epistle, see above, p. 16 sq .

$\dot{\boldsymbol{c}} \boldsymbol{y}$ iots] 'saints,' i.e. the peopie consecrated to God, the Israel of the new covenant; see the note on Phil. i. I. This mode of address marks the later epistles of St Paul. In his earher letters ( $\mathrm{I}, 2$ Thess., $\mathrm{I}, 2$ Cor., Gal.) he change begins with the Epistle to the Romans, and from that time forward the Apostle always uses $\dot{\alpha}$ ions in various combinations in addressing churches (Rom., Phil., Col., Ephes.). For a similar phenomenon, serving as a chronological mark, see the note on $\dot{\eta} \chi$ ápts, iv. 18. The word dंyiots must here be treated as a substantive in accordance with its usage in parallel passages, and not as an adjective connected with $\dot{d} \delta \in \lambda \phi \sigma i s$. Sce the next note.
 addition is full of meaning. Some members of the Colossian Church were shaken in their allegiance, even if they had not fallen from it. The $\Lambda$ postle therefore wishes it to be understood that, when he speaks of the saints, he means the true and stedfast members of the brotherhood. In this way he obliquely hints at the defection. Thus tho words kai $\pi \iota \sigma$ ocois à $\delta \in \lambda \phi \hat{i} s$ are a supplementary explanation of $\tau$ ois $\dot{a}-$ rious. He does not directly exclude any, but he indirectly warns all. The epithet $\pi \iota \sigma \sigma$ òs camnot mean simply 'believing'; for then it would add nothing which is not already contained in áylors and áded $\dot{\boldsymbol{o}} \mathrm{i} \mathrm{s}$. Its passive sense, 'trustworthy, stedfast, unswerving,' must be prominent here, as in Acts xvi. 15 єì кєкрікатє́ $\mu \in \pi \iota \sigma \tau \grave{\eta} \nu \tau \hat{\omega}$ Kvpị єivar. See Galatians p. 155.
 with both words matooìs àîe $\lambda$ фois, though referring chiefly to $\pi / \sigma$ oois; comp. Ephes. vi. 21 mıoròs $\delta$ iákovos év $\sigma \tau \epsilon L$. For the expression $\pi \iota \sigma$ òs $\varepsilon^{2}$ Xoı $\sigma t \bar{\varphi}, \dot{\epsilon} \nu$ Kvpíc, see also 1 Cor.iv. i7, Ephes i I. The Apostle assumes that the Colossian brethren are 'stedfast in Christ.' Their state thus contrasts with the description of the heretical teacher, who (ii. Ig) oủ кратеі

$\chi$ á $\rho \iota s$ к.т.入.] On this form of salutation see the note to I Thess, i. I.

тarpòs $\eta \boldsymbol{j} \mu \nu \bar{\omega}]$ The only instance in St Paul's epistles, where the name of the Father stands alone in the opening benediction without the addition of Jesus Christ. The omission was noticed by Origen (Rom. I. §8, IV. p. 467), and by Ohrysostom (ad loc. xI. p. 324, Hom.in 2 Cor.xxx, x.p. 65 1). But transcribers naturally aimed at uniformity, and so in many copies we find
 The only other exception to the Apostle's usual form is in I Thessalonians, where the benediction is shorter still, wise the copyists have supplied words to lengthen it out in accordance with St Paul's common practice.

3-8. 'We never cease to pour forth our thanksgiving to God the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ on your account, whensoever we pray to Him. We are full of thankfulness for the tidings of the faith which ye have in Christ Jesus, and the love which ye show towards all the people of God, while ye look forward to the hope which is stored up for you in heaven as a treasure for the life to come. This hope was communicated to you in those earlier lessons, when the Gospel was preached to you in its purity and integrity-the one universal unchangeable Gospel, which was made kuown to you, even as it was carried throughout the world, approving itself by its fruits wheresoever it is planted. For, as elsewhere, so also in you, these fruits were manifested from the first day when ye received your lessons in, and apprehended the power of, the genuine Gospel, which is not a law of ordinances but a dispensation of grace, not a device of men but a iruich of God. Such was the word preached to you by Epaphras, our beloved fellowservant in our Master's dionsehold, who in our absence and on our behalf has ministered to you the Gospel of Christ, and who now brings back to us the welcome tidings of the love which ye show in the Spirit.'

3. Eíxapırтoù $\mu \epsilon \mathrm{f}]$ See the notes on 1 Thess. i. 2.
$\pi a \tau p i$ ] If the кai be omitted, as the balance of authorities appears to suggest, the form of words here is quito exceptional. Elsewhere it runs $\delta$ óès
 i. 3, xi. 31, Ephes. i. 3 (v. 1.), I Pet. i. 3; comp. Rev. i. 6: and in analogous the rule is the same. See the note on Clem. Rom. § 7. In iii. 17 however we have $\tau \hat{\omega} \theta \in \bar{\omega} \pi a \tau \rho \ell$, where the evidence is more decisive and the expression quite as unusual. On the authorities for the various readings Lere see the detached note.
па́yтотє к.г...] We here meet the same dificulty about the comnexion of the clauses, which confronts us in several of St Paul's opening thanksgivings. The words mávtate and $\pi \epsilon \rho \iota$ $\boldsymbol{i} \mu \bar{\omega} \nu$ must clearly be taken together, because the emplasis of $\pi i \rho i \quad \dot{u} \mu \bar{\omega} \nu$ would be inexplicable, if it stood at the beginning of a clause. But are they to be attached to the preceding or to the following sentence? The connexion with the previous words is favoured by St Paul's usual conjunction Phil. i. 3), and by the parallel passage ờ $\pi \alpha \dot{\jmath}$ Ephes. i. 16. Thas the words will mean' We give thanks for you always in our prayers.' For this absolute Acts xvi. 25.
4. úко́̈́aviés] 'having heard' from Epaphras (ver. 8); for the Apostle had no direct personal knowledge of the Colossian Church: see the introduction, p. 27 sq .
 with $\tau \grave{\eta} \nu \pi i \sigma \tau \tau \nu \dot{\nu} \mu \omega \bar{\omega}$. The strict classieal language would require $\tau \grave{\eta} \nu \dot{\epsilon} \nu$ X. 'I., but the omission of the article is common in the New Testament (e.g. ver. 8); see the note on I Thess. i. I, and Winer §xx. p. 169 (ed. Moulton). The preposition ${ }^{2} y$ here and in the parallel passage, Ephes. i. 15, denotes the splere in which their faith moves, rather than the object to which it is directed (comp. I Cor. iii. 5); for, if the object had been meant, the natural prepositiou would have been $\boldsymbol{e} \pi \mathfrak{l}$ or cis (e.f. ii. 5). This is probably the case also in the passages where at first sight it might seem otherwise, e.g. 1 Tim. iii. 13, 2 Tim. iii. 15; for meaning is unambiguous. There is however authority in the uxx for the use of $e^{2}$ with $\pi i \sigma \tau t s, \pi i \sigma \tau \epsilon \dot{v} \epsilon t$, to denote the object, in Jer. xii. 6, Ps. lxxyiii. 22, and perhaps in Mark i. 15, Rom. iii. 25, and (more doubtfully stili) in Joh iii. 15 .

 the various readings.
 looking to the hope. The following reasons seem decisive in favour of con-

 $\rho \iota \sigma \tau о \tilde{\mu} \mu \in \nu$, but with rì̀ $\pi i \sigma \tau \iota \nu$ к.т.. ., whether $\dot{\eta} \nu \tilde{\epsilon}_{\chi \in \tau \epsilon}$ be retained or not.
 $\mu \in \nu$ is against the former connexion; (2) The following clause, $\dot{\eta} \nu$ тропкoviбате к.т.入., suggests that the words Sià $\frac{\eta}{\eta} \nu{ }^{?} \lambda \pi i \delta a$ describe the motives of the Colossiaus for well-doing, rather than the reasons of the Apostle for thanksgiving: (3) The triad of Christian graces, which St Paul delights to associate together, would otherwise be broken up. This last argument seems conclusive; see especially the corresponding thanksgiving in I Thess. i. 3 , $\mu \nu \eta \mu о \nu \epsilon \dot{\sim}$

 the note there. The order js the same here, as there; and it is the natural sequence. Faith rests on the past; love works in the present; hope looks to the future. They may be regarded as the efficient, material, and final causes respectively of the spiritual life. Oompare Polycarp Phil. 3

The hope here is identified with the object of the hope: see the passages quoted on Gal. v. 5. The sense of e $\lambda \pi i$ is, as of the corresponding words in any language, oscillates between the subjective feeling and the objective realisation; comp. Rom. viii. 24 गरी

 к.т. ., where it passes abruptly from the one to the other.
 up. It is the Anoavpos $\bar{\epsilon} \nu$ oujoaṿ̣ of the Gospels (Matt. vi. 20, 21, Luke xii. 34, xviii. 22).

троךкоvंбатє] 'of which ye were told in time past.' The preposition seems intended to contrast their earlier with their later lessons-the true Gospel of Epaphras with the false gospel of their recent teachers (see the next note). The expression would gain force, if we might suppose that the heretical teachers obscured or perverted the doctrine of the resurrection (comp. 2 Tim. ii. 18); and their speculative tenets were not unlikely to lead to such a result. But this is not necessary; for under any circumstances the false doctrine, as leading them astray, tended to cheat them of their hope; see ver. 23. The common interpretations, which explain $\pi \rho 0-$ as meaning either 'before its fulfilment' or 'before my writing to you,' seem neither so natural in themselves nor so appropriate to the context.
 truth of the Gospel,' i. e. the true and genuine Gospel as taught by Epaphras, and not the spurious substitute of these later pretenders: comp. ver. 6 where a similar contrast is implied in

6. то̂ таро́vтоs єis ípãs] 'which reached you.' The expression mafeiyac eis is not uncommon in classical writers; comp. тapéval após in Acts xii. 20, Gal. iv. 18, 20. So also єipeOívai eis (Acts viii. 40), $\gamma \in \nu \epsilon ́ \sigma \theta a \downarrow$ cis (e.g. Acts xxv. 15); and even civar $\epsilon i_{s}$ (Luke xi. 7). See Winer § 1. p. 516 sq .

 ${ }_{\kappa 0} \sigma \mu \varphi$; comp. I Thess. i. 8, 2 Cor. ii. r 4 , éy $\pi a \nu \tau i$ тónø. More lurks under these words than appears on the surface. The true Gospel, the Apostle seems to say, proclaims its truth by its universality. The false gospels are the outgrowths of local circumstances, of special idiosyncrasies; the true Gospel is the same everywhere. The false gospels address themselves to limited circles; the true Gospel proclaims itself boldly throughout the world. Heresies are at best ethnic: trath is essentially catholic. See ver. $23 \mu \grave{\eta} \mu \in \tau а к \iota \nu о ч ́ \mu \in \nu o t$ àmò $\tau \hat{\eta} \mathrm{s}$ Amíios toû єủarye入iov où є́бтіข картофорои́ $\mu \in \nu о v]$ 'isconstantly bearing fruit.' The fruit, which the Gospel bears without fail in all soils and under every climate, is its credential, its verification, as against the pretensions of spurious counterfeits. The substantive verb should here be talren with the participle, so as to express continuity of present action; as in 2 Cor.ix. 12 ò $\mu \dot{o} v o v$ éariv topoara$\nu a \pi \lambda \eta \rho \circ \hat{\sigma} \sigma a$ к.т. $\lambda$., Phil. ii. 26 '̇ $\pi \iota \pi 0 \theta \hat{\omega} \mu$ $\dot{\eta} \nu$. It is less common in St Paul than in some of the Canonical writers, e.g. St Mark and St Luke; but probably only because he deals less in narrative.

Of the middle картофорєí $\theta a \iota$ no other instance has been found. The voice is partially illustrated by $\kappa \omega \delta \omega$ - ขофорєíन $\theta$ al, though, as involving a different sense of - фopri $\sigma \theta a \mathrm{a}$ 'to wear,' these words are not exact parallels. Here the use of the middle is the more marked, inasmuch as the active occurs just below (ver. 10) in the same connexion, картофораиิขтеs каi avjavópevol. This fact however points to the force of the word here. The middle is intensive, the active extonsiog. The middle denotes the inherent energy, the active the external diffusion. The Gospel is essentially a reproductive organism, a plant whose 'seed is in itself.' For this 'dynamic' middle see Moulton's note on Winer § xxxviii. p. 319.

кai avzavó $\mu \in \nu o \nu]$ The Gospel is not like those plants which exhaust themselves in bearing fruit and wither away. The external growth keeps pace with the reproductive energy. While картофороч́цєvay describes the outward extension of the Gospel. The words кai avi $\xi^{a} \boldsymbol{y}^{\prime} \mu \epsilon \nu 0 \nu$ are not found in the received text, but the authority in their favour is overwhelming.

кa $\theta \dot{\omega}$ каi $\left.\frac{1}{\nu} \nu \dot{\nu} \mu i \nu\right]$ The comparison is thus doubled back, as it were, on itself. This irregularity disappears in the received text, кai éoriv карлофоinsertion of кal before картофорои́ $\mu \epsilon-$ yov straightens the construction. For a similar irregularity see I Thess. iv.

 where again the received text simplifies the construction, though in a different way, by omitting the first iva
 In both cases the explanation of the irregularity is much the same; the clause reciprocating the comparison кai $\pi \epsilon \rho \iota \pi a \tau \epsilon i \tau \epsilon)$ is an afterthought springing out of the Apostle's anxiety not to withhold praise where praise can be given.

For the appearance of kai in both members of the comparison, kal ey

 $\lambda o s \pi o i s ~ \vec{\epsilon} \theta_{\nu \epsilon \sigma} \nu$; and in the reversed Exapioato víiv, ovitos kai viलfis (with the note): see also Winer liii. p. 549 (ed. Moulton). The correlation of the clauses is thus rendered closer, and the comparison emphasized.
 tive is governed by both verbs equally,

 ${ }^{\alpha} \gamma \alpha \dot{\alpha} \pi \eta \nu \dot{\epsilon} \dot{\epsilon} \nu \quad \pi \nu \epsilon \dot{\prime} \mu \alpha \tau \iota$.
'Ye were instructed in and fully apprehended the grace of God.' For this sense of áкov́єєy see below, ver. 23. For $\begin{gathered}\text { en } \pi \iota \gamma \iota \nu \omega ́ \sigma \kappa \in \iota \nu \\ \text { as denoting 'ad- }\end{gathered}$ vanced knowledge, thorough appreciation,' see the note on $\dot{e} \pi i \gamma \nu \omega \sigma c s$, ver. 9 .
 nyme for the Gospel. In Acts xx. 24 he describes it as his mission to preach
 The true Gospel as taught by Epaphras was an offer of free grace, a message from God; the false gospel, as superposed by the heretical teachers, was a code of rigorous prohibitions, a system of human devising. It was $\Theta \epsilon o u ̂ ~ b u t ~ \tau o \hat{v} \kappa \dot{\sigma} \sigma \mu о \nu, \tau \hat{\omega} \nu \dot{\alpha} \nu \theta \rho \omega^{\prime} \tau \omega \nu$ (ii. 8,20, 22). For God's power and goodness it substituted self-mortification and self-exaltation. The Gospel is called $\dot{\eta} \dot{\gamma} \chi \dot{\alpha} \rho \iota s$ toû $\Theta \in o u ̈ ~ a g a i n ~ i n ~ 2 ~ C o r . ~$ vi. 1 , viii. 9 , with reference to the same leading characteristic which the Apostle delights to dwell upon (e.g. Rom. iii. 24, v. 15, Eph. ii. 5, 8), and which he here tacitly contrasts with the doctrine of the later intruders. The false teachers of Colossw, like those of Galatia, would lead their hearers $\mathbf{d} \theta_{\epsilon \tau \epsilon i v}$ $\tau \grave{\nu} \nu \chi$ ápıı $\tau 0 \hat{v} \Theta \epsilon o \hat{v}$ (Gal. ii. 21); to accept their doctrine was $\boldsymbol{\epsilon} \kappa \pi i \pi \tau \epsilon \tau \nu \dagger \eta$ $\chi$ а́ $\rho$ стоs (Gal. v. 4).
 plicity, without adulteration': see the
 ver. 5.
7. ка日ぁ̀s द́ $\mu \mathrm{a} \theta \epsilon \tau \epsilon]$ 'even as ye worв instructed in it,' the clause being an explanation of the preceding $\boldsymbol{\epsilon} \nu$ à $\lambda \eta$ -
 On the insertion of kai before $\epsilon^{\prime} \mu \dot{a}-$ $\theta$ ete in the received text, and the consequent obscuration of the sense, see above, p. 29 sq . The ingertion however was very natural, inasmuch as кatìs kal is an ordinary collocation of particles and has occurred twice in the preceding verse.
'Eлaф $\hat{\alpha}]$ On thenotices of Epaphras, and on his work as the evangelist of the Colossians see above, p. 29 sq ., p. 34 sq ., and the note on iv. 12.
$\sigma v v \delta o v i \lambda o v]$ Seeiv. 7. The word does not occur elsewhere in St Paul.
$\left.\dot{v} \pi \grave{\rho} \rho \dot{\eta}_{\mu} \hat{\omega} \nu\right]$ As the evangelist of Colossax, Epaphras had represented St Paul there and preached in his stead; see above, p. 30. The other reading $\dot{v} \pi \epsilon ่ \rho \dot{v} \mu \omega \hat{\nu}$ might be interpreted in two ways: either (I) It might describe the personal ministrations of Epaphras to St Paul as the representative of the Colossians (see a similar case in Phil. ii. 25, iv. 18), and so it might be compared with Philem. I3
 terpretation is hardly consistent with $\tau o u ̂ \mathrm{X} \rho \iota \sigma \tau o v$. Or (z) It might refer to the preaching of Epaphras for the good of the Colossians; but the natural construction in this case would hardly be $\mathcal{v}_{\pi} \dot{\rho} \rho \dot{v} \mu \hat{\omega} y$ (of which there is no direct example), but either $\dot{\tau} \mu \omega \nu$ (Rom. xv. 8) or ijpiv (I Pet. i. 12). The balance of external authority however is against it. Partly by the accidental interchange of similar sounds, partly by the recurrence of $\boldsymbol{v} \pi \dot{\rho} \rho \dot{v} \mu \bar{\omega} \nu$ in the context ( $\mathrm{v}, .3,9$ ), and partly also from ignorance of the historicalcircumstances, $i_{\mu} \omega \nu$ would readily be substituted for $\dot{\eta} \mu \hat{\omega} \nu$. See the detached note on various readings.
8. í каì ô $\eta \lambda \omega \dot{\sigma} \sigma s$ ] 'As he preached to you from us, so also he brought back to us from you the tidings, etc.'
$\left.{ }_{i} \nu \pi \nu \epsilon \dot{y} \mu a r i\right]$ To be connected with $\tau \grave{\eta} \nu \dot{\nu} \mu \omega \bar{\omega} \dot{\alpha} \gamma \dot{\alpha} \pi \eta \nu$. . The fruit of the Spirit is love,' Gal. จ. 22. For the

 see the note on ver. 4.

9-14. 'Hearing then that ye thus abound in works of faith and love, we on our part have not ceased, from the day when we received the happy tidings, to pray on your behalf. And this is the purport of our petitions; that ye may grow more and more in knowledge, till ye attain to the periect understanding of God's will, being endowed with all wisdom to apprehend His verities and all intelligence to follow His processes, living in the mind of the Spirit-to the end that knowledge may manifest itself in practice, that your conduct in life may be worthy of your profession in the Lord, so as in all ways to win for you the gracious favour of God your King. I'hus, while je bear fruit in every good work, ye will also grow as the tree grows, being watered and refreshed by this knowledge, as by the dew of heaven: thus ye will be strengthened in all strength, according to that power which centres in and spreads from His glorious manifestation of Himself, and nerved to all endurance under affliction and all long-suffering under provocation, not only without complaining, but even with joy: thus finally "(for this is the crown of all), so rejoicing ye will pour forth your thanksgiving to the Unirersal Father, who prepared and fitted us all-you and us alike- to take possession of the portion which His goodness has allotted to us among the saints in the kingdom of light. Yea, by a strong arm He rescued us from the lawless tyranny of Darkness, removed us from the land of our bondage, and settled us as free citizens in our new and glorious home, where His Son, the offspring and the representative of His love, is King ; even the same, who paid our ransom and thus procured our redemption from cap-tivity-our redemption, which (be assured) is nothing else than the remission of our sins.'
9. $\Delta$ à̀ roûro] 'for thìs cause,' i.e. ${ }^{6}$ by reason of your progressive faith and love,' refcrring not solely to $\boldsymbol{o}$ kal the preceding description. For סia roûto кaî $\mathfrak{\eta} \mu \mathrm{Ei} s$ in an exactly similar connexion, see I Thess. ii. 13 ; comp.
 all these cases the xai denotes the response of the Apostle's personal feeling to the favourable character of the news; 'we on our part.' This idca of correspondence is still further emphasized by the repetition of the pas $\dot{\eta} \kappa \alpha \dot{v} \sigma a \mu \epsilon \nu$ (ver. 9).

xai airoúpeyol] The words have an exact parallel in Mark xi. 24 (as correctly read) $\pi \alpha ́ \nu \tau a ~ o ̂ \sigma \alpha ~ \pi \rho о \sigma \epsilon i ́ \chi \epsilon \sigma \theta \epsilon$ каї aitє乞̂ซ $\theta_{\varepsilon}$.
iva] With words like $\pi \rho \sigma \sigma \in \dot{\chi} \chi \in \sigma \theta a a$, aiteífAt, etc., the earlier and stronger force of iva, implying design, glides imperceptibly into its later and weaker use, signifying merely purport or result, so that the two are hardly separable, unless one or other is directly indicated by something in the context. See the notes on Phil. i. 9, and comp. Winer \& xliv. p. 420 sq.
$\tau \grave{\eta} \nu \dot{\epsilon} \pi i \gamma \nu \omega \sigma \iota \nu]$ A favourite wordin the later epistles of St Paul ; see the note on Phil. i. 9 . In all the four epistles of the first Roman captivity it is an element in the Apostle's opening prayer forhiscorrespondents' well-being (Phil. i 9, Ephes. i. 17, Philem. 6, and here). The greater stress which is thus laid on the contemplative aspects of the Gospel
$\pi \alpha ́ \sigma \eta$ бофía каi $\sigma \nu \nu \in ́ \sigma \epsilon \iota ~ \pi \nu \epsilon \cup \mu \alpha \tau \iota к \hat{\eta},{ }^{10} \pi \epsilon \rho \iota \pi \alpha \tau \hat{\eta} \sigma \alpha \iota$

may be explained partly by St Paul＇s personal circumstances，partly by the requirements of the Church．His en－ forced retirement and comparative leisure would lead his own thoughts in this direction，while at the same time the fresh dangers threatening the truth from the side of mystic specu－ lation required to be confronted by an exposition of the Gospel from a corresponding point of view．

The compound $\dot{\epsilon} \pi i \gamma \nu \omega \sigma t s$ is an ad－ vance upon $\gamma \nu \omega \bar{\sigma} \iota s$ ，denoting a larger and more thorough knowledge．So Chrysostom here，${ }_{\epsilon} \boldsymbol{\epsilon} \gamma \nu \omega \tau \epsilon$, di $\lambda \lambda \dot{a}$ í $\delta \hat{i} \tau t$ кaì є̇лtүvต̄pat．Comp．Justin Mart． Dial．3，p． 221 A，$\dot{\eta}$ таре́ $\chi$ оvaa av̀т $\omega \nu$ $\tau \hat{\omega} \nu \dot{\alpha} \nu \theta \rho \omega \pi i \nu \omega \nu$ каі $\tau \hat{\omega} \nu \quad \theta \epsilon i \omega \nu \gamma \nu \hat{\omega} \sigma \iota \nu$ ， himself contrasts $\gamma \iota \nu \dot{\sigma} \sigma \kappa \epsilon \tau \nu, \gamma \nu \omega \hat{\sigma} \tau \iota$ ，with tial with the complete，in two pas－ sages，Rom．i．21，28， 1 Cor．xiii． 12. With this last passage（äprı $\gamma \iota \nu \omega^{\prime} \sigma \kappa \omega$

 pare Clem．Alex．Strom．i．17，p．369， $\tau \hat{\eta} s \quad \dot{\alpha} \lambda \eta \theta \epsilon i a s$ ov̀ кar＇ $\bar{\epsilon} \pi i \gamma \nu \omega \sigma \iota \nu \lambda a-$ monly but wrongly translated＇without proper recognition＇（comp．Tatian ad Grocc．40）．Hence also $\epsilon \pi i \gamma v \omega \sigma t s$ is used especially of the knowledge of God and of Christ，as being the per－ fection of knowledge ：e．g．Prov．ii．5， Hos．iv．I，vi．6，Ephes．i．17，iv．I3， 2 Pet．i．2，8，ii．20，Clem．Alex．Padd． ii．1，p． 173 ．

бофía кaì $\sigma u \nu \dot{f} \sigma \epsilon t$ ］＇wisdom and in－ telligence．＇The two words are fre－ quently found together：e．g．Exod． xxxi．3，Deut．iv．6，I Clron．xxii．12， 2 Chron．i．Io sq．，Is．xi．2，xxix．14， Dan．ii．20，Baruch iii．23，r Cor．i．19， Clem．Rom．32．So too voфо⿱亠 каl ovvetoi，Prov．xpi．21，Matt．xi．25， and elsewhere．In the parallel pas－
 roфia кaì фpoviofe，and the substitu－ tion of фpóvors for av́veats there is instructive．The three words are mentioned together，Arist．Eth．Nic． i．13，as constituting the intellectual （ $\delta$ tavoך tckai）virtues．Eoфía is mental excellence in its highest and fullest sense ；Arist．Eth．Nic．vi． 7 方 $\dot{\alpha} \times \rho t-$

 （see Waitz on Arist．Organ．II．p． 295 sq．），Cicero de Off．i． 43 ＇princeps om－ nium virtutum，＇Clem．Alex．Pced．ii．2，
 The Stoic definition of $\sigma \circ \phi i a$ ，as $\dot{\epsilon}^{\prime} \pi t-$ тоúr $\omega \nu$ ait $\omega \hat{\nu}$ ，is repeated by various writers：e．g．Cic．de Off．ii．5，Philo Congr．erud．grat．14，p．530，［Joseph．］ Macc．2，Clem．Alex．Poed．ii．2，p．181， Strom．i．5，p．333，Orig．c．Cels．iii．72， Aristob．in Eus．Prap．Ev．xiii．12， p．667．And the glorification of ooфía by heathen writers was even sur－＇ passed by its apotheosis in the Pro－ verbs and in the Wisdom of Solomon． While ooфia＇wisdom＇is thas primary and absolute（Eth．Nic．vi． $7 \mu \dot{\eta} \mu{ }^{\prime}{ }^{\prime} \nu о \nu$

 telligence＇and фоóv ${ }^{\prime} \sigma$ s＇prudence＇ are derivative and special（Eth．Nic
 They are both applications of oodia to details，but they work on different lines；for，while oúvéts is critical， ф оóv $\bar{\sigma} \iota$ s is practical；while oviveous apprehends the bearings of things， ф póv $\sigma$ ois suggests lines of action：see poos $\sigma$ v́vé $\sigma t \nu$ èv $\pi$ âctv．This relation of coфía to oúvecus explains why in almost every case roфía（ $\sigma$ oфós）pre－ cedes aviveats（ovvetós），where they are found together，and also why in

 find óvérus implying a tentative，par－ tial，approach to roфia．The relation of $\sigma$ oфia to фрóv $\eta \sigma$ 覑 will be considered more at length in the note on tho parallel passage，Ephes．i． 8.
$\pi \nu \epsilon \nu \mu a \tau k \hat{p}]$ The word is emphatic from its position．The false teachers also offered a roфia，but it had only a show of wisdom（ii．23）；it was an empty counterfeit calling itself philo－ sophy（ii．8）；it was the offspring of vanity nurtured by the mind of the flesh （ii．18）．See 2 Cor．i． 12 oủk द́v $\boldsymbol{\sigma}$ oфía бapкıк $\bar{\eta}$ ，where a similar contrast is implied，and I Cor．i．20，ii．5，6，13， iii． 19 ，where it is directly expressed by coфia тоиิ кó $\sigma \mu \nu$ ，$\sigma о ф i a ~ \grave{a} \nu \theta \rho \omega ́ \tau \omega \nu$ ，
 фía，etc．

10．$\pi є р \iota \pi a \tau \bar{\eta} \sigma a \iota \dot{a} \xi i \omega s$ к．т．ג．］So I Thess，ii．12，Ephes．iv．I ；comp．Phil． i．27．The infinitive here denotes the consequence（not necessarily the pur－ pose）of the spiritual enlightenment Winer § xiiv．p． 399 sq ．With the к．r．，$\lambda$ ，the connexion might be doubtful； but this reading is condemned by ex－ ternal evidence．The emphasis of the sentence would be marred by the inser－ tion of $\dot{v} \mu a ́ s$ ．The end of all knowledge， the A postle would say，is conduct． тov̂ Kvpiov］i．e．＇of Christ．＇In I Thess．ii． 12 indeed we have $\pi \epsilon \rho \iota \pi a-$ тєiv ágicos toû Өєoû；but St Paul＇s com－ mon，and apparently universal，usage requires us to understand $\dot{f}$ Kúpıos of Christ． dје́бкєlav］i．e．＇to please God in all ways＇；comp．I Thess．iv．I $\pi \hat{\omega} s \quad \delta \epsilon \hat{\imath}$ this word was commonly used to de－ scribe the proper attitude of men to－ wards God，the addition of rov̂ $\Theta \in o \hat{v}$ would not be necessary：Philo Quis rer．div．her． 24 （ 1. p．490） $\boldsymbol{\omega s}$ à $\pi$ ofe－ dрєбкeias，de Abrah． 25 （r．p．20） тàs птрòs àpé́бкєtà óphrís，de Vict．Off． ápécкєเay $\dot{\delta} \bar{\omega} \omega y$ ，with other passages quoted by Loesner．Otherwise it is used especially of ingratiating oneself with a $\quad$ sovereign or potentate，e．g． Polyb．vi．2．12；and perhaps in the higher connexion，in which it occurs in the text，the idea of a king is still prominent，as e．g．Philo de Mund． Op． 50 （I．p．34）$\pi$ ávта кaì $\lambda \in ́ y \in \iota \nu$ кaì тaтpòs kaì Bađı入є́шs．Towards men this complaisance is always dangerous and most commonly vicious；hence ajpé $\sigma \kappa \in a$ is a bad quality in Aristotle ［2］（Eth．Eud．ii． 3 тò 入íay $\pi \rho$ òs $\mathfrak{\eta}$ 8ovị $\nu$ ） as also in Theophrastus（Char． 5 ovk $k^{\prime}$ ），but towards the King of kings no obseguiousuess can be excessive．The d $\rho \epsilon \epsilon \kappa \kappa \epsilon a$ of A ristotle and Theophrastus presents the same moral contrast to

 as I Thess．ii．4，Gal．i．ro．Opposed to the ápé $\sigma \kappa \epsilon \iota a$ commended here is ay Өрштарє́́ккєа condenned below，iii． 22.
t̀ $\pi$ aurit к．т．$\lambda$.$] i．e．＇not only showing$ the fruits of your faith before men （Matt．vii．16），but yourselves growing meanwhilein moral stature（Eph．iv．13）．＇
 The other readings，द้̇ $\tau \hat{\eta}$ É $\pi t \gamma \nu \omega \dot{\sigma} \sigma \epsilon$, eis tì̀ $\epsilon \pi i \gamma v \omega \sigma t y$ ，are unsuccessful attempts to define the construction． The simple instrumental dative ro－ presents the knowledge of God as the dew or the rain which nurtures the growth of the plant；Deut．xxxii．2， Hos．xiv． 5.

11．$\delta$ vvapoú $\mu \in \nu 0!]$ a word found more than once in the Greek versions of the Old Testament，Ps．Lxvii（lxviii）．

 r2. $\tau \hat{\varphi}$ ixavíarart $\dot{j} \mu a \hat{s}$.

29 ( Lxx ), Eccles. x. ro ( Lxx ), Dan. ix. 27 (Theod.), Ps. Ixiv (liv). 4 (Aq.), Job xxxvi. 9 (Aq.), but not occurring elsewhere in the New Testament, except in Heb. xi. 34 and as a various reading in Ephes. vi. 10. The compound times in St Paul and elsewhere.
kaà à tò к кátos] The power communicated to the faithful corresponds to, and is a function of, the Divine might whence it comes. Unlike oivapus or $i \sigma \chi \dot{s}$, the word kpátos in the New Testament is applied solely to God $\tau \bar{\eta} s \delta_{0} \xi_{\eta} \mathrm{s}$ aivoù] The 'glory' here, as frequently, stands for the majesty or the power or the goodness of God, as manifested to men; e.g. Eph. i. 6, 12, 17, iii. 16; comp. ver. 27, below. The $\delta \dot{d} \xi a$, the bright light over the mercy-seat (Rom. ix. 4), was a symbol of such manifestations. God's revelistion of Himself to us, however this revelation may be made, is the one source of all our highest strength (катà tò кра́тоs к.т....).
 and long-suffering.' The two words occur in the same context in 2 Cor. vi. $4,6,2$ Tim. iii. 10, James v . $10,1 \mathrm{II}$, Clem. Rom. 58 (64), Ign. Ephes. 3. They are distinguished in Trench Synon. § liii. p. I 84 sq . The difference of meaning is best seen in their opposites. While $\dot{v} \pi о \mu \circ{ }^{2} \eta$ is the temper which does not easily succumb under suffer-which does not hastily retaliate a wrong. The one is opposed to cowardice or despondency, the other to wrath or revenge (Prov. xv. 18, xvi. 32; see also the note on iii 12). While jпо $\mu$ ovit is closcly allied to hope (I Thess. i. 3), paxpodupia is commonly connected with mercy (e.g.Exod xxxiv. 6). This distinction however, though it applies generally, is not true without exception. Thas in Is. Ivii. 15 $\mu a к \rho o t v \mu i a$ is opposed to $\dot{\partial} \lambda$ cyo廿vxia, where we should rather have expected lariy in James v. 7.
$\mu \in \tau \grave{a}$ रapâs] So James i. 2, 3, $\pi \hat{a} \sigma \sigma \nu$ and see below i. 24 This parallel points to the proper connexion of $\mu \epsilon \tau \grave{a} \chi$ वapas, which should be attached to the preceding words. On the other hand some would connect it with evं$\chi$ apıoтoùvets for the sake of preserving the balance of the three clauses, ${ }^{2}$ cixaptotoìres; and this seems to be $\delta_{\ell} \eta \sigma t \nu$ пotovi $\mu \epsilon$ zos: but when it is so comected, the emphatic position of нeтà $\chi$ apàs cannot be explained; nor indeed would these words be needed of rejoicing.

12. єìXaptaroûvess] Most naturally coordinated with the preceding participies and referred to the Colossians. The duty of thanksgiving is more than once enforced upon them below, ii. 7 , iii. 17, iv. 2; comp. i Thess. v. 18. On the other hand the first person $\bar{\eta} \mu \mathrm{a}$ s, which follows, has led others to connect eixapuctoùvres with the primary verb of the sentence, ov่ таvó $\mu=\theta a$ ver. 9. But, even if the reading $\dot{\eta} \mu \mathrm{a} s$ be preferred to $\boldsymbol{v}_{\mu} \mathrm{a}_{\mathrm{a}}$ (which is perhaps doubtful), the sudden transition from the second to the first person is quite after St l'aul's manner (see the note any difficulty.

 petent'; comp. 2 Cor. iii. 6. On the various readings see the detached note.

 of the lot,' 'the portion which consists in the lot,' $\quad$ ou $k \lambda \neq 0$ pov being the genitive of apposition : see Winer § lix. p. 666 sq ., and comp. Ps. xy (xvi). 5
 Acts viii. $21 \mu \epsilon \rho$ is and $\kappa \lambda \hat{\eta} \rho o s$ are coordinated; in Gen. xxxi. 14, Num. xviii. 20 , Is. Ivii. 6, $\mu \epsilon \rho{ }^{\prime} s$ and $\kappa \lambda \eta \rho o-$ vopia. The inheritance of Canaan, the allotment of the promised land, here presents an analogy to, and supplies a metaphor for, the higher hopes of the new dispensation, as in Heb. iii. 7-iv. II. See also below, iii. 24 лі̀ $\nu$
 i. 18. St Chrysostom writes, $\delta i a ̀ ~ r i ́$

 $\nu_{\epsilon}$, referring to Luke xvii. Io. It is not won by us, but allotted to us.

 omission of the definite article, [ $\tau \grave{\nu} \nu$ ] ${ }_{i}^{e} \nu \tau \hat{\varphi} \phi \omega \tau i$, see above, $\overline{\text { Fr }} .2,4,8$. The portion of the saints is situated in the kingdom of light. For the whole context compare St Paul's narrative in бкótous fis $\phi \hat{\omega} s$ кaì tîs दُधovaias ì tois jojuarúvois, where all the ideas and many of the expressions recur. See also Acts xx. 32, in another of St Paul's later speeches. As a classical parallel, Plato Resp. vii. p. 518 A, ка̀̀ èk $\sigma$ кótous єis $\phi \hat{s} s$, is quoted.

13. 'We were slaves in the land of darkness. God rescued us from this thraldom. He transplanted us thence, and settled us as free colonists and citizens in the kingdom of His Son, in the realms of light.'
'¢р́єато] 'rescued, delivered us' by His strong arm, as a mighty conqueror: comp. ii. I5 $\begin{aligned} & \text { opta } \mu \text { вíúas. On the }\end{aligned}$ form є́ $\rho$ v́ $\boldsymbol{\sigma}$ aro see A. Buttmann, p. 29: comp. Clem. Rom. 55, and see the note on $\epsilon \xi \in \rho i \zeta \omega \sigma \epsilon \nu, i b .6$.
'kovaias] Here 'arbitrary power, tyranny.' The word ' ${ }^{\text {govoia properly sig- }}$ nifies 'liberty of action' ( $\epsilon \xi \in \sigma \tau \iota$ ), and thence, like tho corresponding English word 'license,' involves two secondary ideas, of which either may be so prominent as to eclipse the other; (1) 'authority,' 'delegated power' (e.g. Luke xx. 2); or (2) 'tyranny,' 'lawlessness,' 'unrestrained or arbitrary power.' For this second sense comp.
 тaúrǹ éGouciav, Xenoph. Hiero 5
 ing of tyrants), Plut. Fit. Eum. 13 dyáyตyoı taís $\mathfrak{\epsilon}$ 'govaiaus kaì $\mu$ a入aкoì raís

 Égovaias. This latter idea of a capricious unruly rule is prominent here. The expression $\dot{\eta}$ é ${ }^{\prime}$ ovaía rov̂ $\sigma$ кótous occurs also in Luke xxii. 53, where again the idea of disorder is involved. The transference from darkness to light is liere represented as a transference from an arbitrary tyranny, an ćgovaia, to a well-ordered sovereignty, a ßact ${ }^{\prime}$ ía. This seems also to be St Chrysostom's idea; for he explains т $\bar{s} s$ égoveías by tîs tupavvióas, adding

 $\chi^{a \lambda \epsilon \pi} \boldsymbol{\omega} \boldsymbol{\tau} \epsilon \rho о \nu$.
$\mu \in \tau \in \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \tau \eta \sigma \epsilon \nu]$ 'removed,' when they were baptized, when they accepted Christ. The image of $\mu \epsilon \tau \in \epsilon \pi \tau \sigma \epsilon \bar{y}$ is supplied by the wholesale transportation of peoples (àactárous or àva$\sigma \pi \propto \dot{c} \sigma t o v s ~ \pi о є \epsilon(\nu)$, of which the history of oriental monarchies supplied so many examples. See Joseph. Anl. ix.

 speaking of Tiglath-Pileser and the Transjordanic tribes.
tô vioû] Not of inferior angels, as the false teachers would have it (ii. I8), but of His own Son. The same contrast between a dispensation of angels and a dispensation of the Son underlies the words here, which is explicitly brought out in Heb. i. I-ii. 8; compared with ii. 5 ov' $\gamma$ à $\rho \dot{\alpha} \gamma \gamma \dot{\text { entocs }}$ Severianus has rightly caught the idea underlying tov̂ vioù here; ínò tò ע

тīs àyátrs av́rov̂] 'of His love.' As love is the essence of the Father( $I$ Joh. iv. 8, 16), so is it also of the Son. The mission of the Son is the revelation of the Father's love; for as He is the ноуoyevits, the Father's love is perfectly represented in Him (see I Joh. iv. 9). St Augustine has rightly interpreted St Paul's words here, de Trin. xv. 19 (vili. p. 993) 'Caritas quippe Patris...nihil est quam ejus ipsa natura atque substantia...ac per hoc filius caritatis ejus nullus est alius quam qui de ejus substantia est genitus.' See also Orig. c. Cels. v. II. Thus these words are intimately convected with the expressions which follow, єǐळ̀̀ toû Өєov̂ toû áopátov (ver. 15), $\rho \omega \mu$ катогләбац (ver. 19). The loose interpretation, which makes ro $\hat{v}$ vioû rijs à án $\eta$ s equivalent to rov viou roû $\dot{\eta} \gamma a \pi \eta \mu \epsilon \in \mathfrak{y} \circ \boldsymbol{v}$, destroys the whole force of the expression.

In the preceding verses we have a striking illustration of St Paul's teaching in two important respects. First. The reign of Christ has already begun. His kingdom is a present kingdom. Whatever therefore is essential in the kingdom of Christ must be capable of realisation now. There may be some exceptional manifestation in the world to come, but this cannot alter its inherent character. In other words the sovereignty of Christ is essentially a moral and spiritual sovereignty, which has begun now and will only be perfected hereafter. Secondly. Corresponding to this, and equally significant, is his language in speaking of individual Christians. He regards them as already rescued from the power of darkness, as already put in possession of their inheritance as saints. They are potentially saved, because the knowledge of God is itself salvation, and this knowledge is within their reach Such is St Paul's constant mode of speaking. He uses the language not of exclusion, but of comprehension. He prefers to dwell on their potential advantages, rather than on their actual attainments. He hopes to make them saints by dwelling on their calling as saints. Seo especially $\chi \quad \mu \epsilon \nu$, which is possibly correct here, and which carries out the idea enforced in the last note, see the detached note on the various readings. In the parallel passage, Ephes. i. 7, there is the same variation of reading.

 tion.' The image of a captive and enslaved people is still continued: Philo Omn. prob. lib. 17 (II. p. 463) aix $\mu$ á-Plut. Vit. Pomp. $24 \pi{ }^{2} \lambda_{\epsilon \epsilon \omega \nu}$ aid $^{\prime} \mu a-$ $\lambda \omega ́ \tau \omega y$ à $\pi о \lambda v \tau \rho \omega \dot{\sigma} \epsilon t s$. The metaphor however has changed from the victor who rescues the captive by force of arms (ver. I3 é $\left.\rho v v^{\prime} \sigma a r o\right)$ to the philanthropist who releases him by the payment of a ransom. The clause which follows in the received text, סià rồ aifuaros aủrov̂, is interpolated from the parallel passage, Ephes. i. 7.
 parallel passage Ephes. i. 7 the Apostle defines $\tau \grave{\eta} \nu \dot{a} \pi a \lambda u ́ \tau \rho \omega \sigma \iota \nu$ as $\tau \grave{\eta} \nu$ this studied precision point to some false conception of àmo入írperts put formard by the heretical teachers? Later Gnostics certainly perverted the meaning of the term, applying it to their 0 wn formularies of initiation. This is related of the Marcosians by whole context), and Hippolytus Har.

 ßóvtı к.т. $\lambda$. (comp. ix. 13). In support of their nomenclature they perverted such passages as the text, Iren.

 $\lambda a ́ k$ cs $\mu \epsilon \mu \eta \mu v к \in ́ v a c$. It seems not improbable that the communication of similar mystical secrets, perhaps connected with their angelology (ii. 18), was put forward by these Colossian false teachers as an àтодข่т $\rho \omega \sigma t s$. Compare the words in the baptismal formula of the Marcosians as given in Iren. i. 21. 3 (comp. Theodt. Haer.
 $\kappa о \iota \nu \omega v i a \nu ~ т \omega \hat{\nu} \delta \nu \nu a ́ \mu \epsilon \omega \nu$, where the last words (which have been differently interpreted) must surely mean 'communion with the (spiritual) powers.' Thus it is a parallel to cis $\lambda \dot{\prime} \tau \rho \omega \sigma \boldsymbol{}$ $\dot{a}_{\gamma} \gamma^{\prime} \lambda_{\iota \kappa \dot{\eta} \nu}$, which appears in an alternative formula of these hereties given likewise by Irenæus in the context; for this Iatter is explained in Clem. Alex. Exc. Theod. p. 974, eis $\lambda \dot{\prime} \tau \rho \omega \sigma \iota$ exourly. Any direct historical connexion between the Colossian heretics and these later Gnostics of the Valentinian school is very improbable ; but the passages quoted will serve to show how a false idea of $\dot{\text { àm }} \pi \sigma \lambda \dot{v} \tau \rho \omega \sigma \iota s$ would naturally be associated with an esoteric doctrine of angelic powers. See the note on i. 28 ina $\pi a p a \sigma \pi \eta \sigma \omega \mu \epsilon \nu$

15 sq . In the passage which follows St Paul defines the Person of Christ, claiming for Him the absolute supremacy,
(I) In relation to the Universe, the Natural Creation (vv. 15-17);
(2) In relation to the Church, the new Moral Creation (ver. 18);
and he then combines the two, iva
 plaining this twofold sovereignty by the absolute indwelling of the pleroma in Christ, and showing how, as a consequence, the reconciliation and harmony of all things must be efected in Him (vv. 19, 20).

As the idea of the Logos underlies the whole of this passage, though the term itself does not appear, a few words explanatory of this term will be necessary by way of preface. The word dóyos then, denoting both 'reason' and 'speech,' was a philosophical term adopted by Alexandrian Judaism before St Paul wrote, to express the manifestation of the Unseen God, the Absolute Being, in the creation and government of the World. It included all modes by which God makes Himself known to man. As His reasan, it denoted His purpose or design; as His speech, it implied His revelation. Whether this $\lambda$ ójos was conceived merely as the divine energy personified, or whether the conception took a more concrete form， I need not stop now to enquire；but I hope to give a fuller account of the matter in a later volume．It is suf－ ficient for the understanding of what follows to say that Christian teachers， when they adopted this term，exalted and fixed its meaning by attaching to it two precise and definite ideas： （I）＇The Word is a Divine Person，＇

 o $\lambda$ óyos；and（2）＇The Word became incarnate in Jesus Christ，＇ó dóyos
 two propositions must have altered materially the significance of all the subordinate terms connected with the idea of the dojos；and that therefore their use in Alexandrian writers，such as Philo，cannot be taken to define， though it may be brought to illus－ trate，their meaning in st Paul and St John．With these cautions the Alexandrian phraseology，as a pro－ vidential preparation for the teaching of the Gospel，will afford important aid in the understanding of the Apo－ stolic writings．

15－17．＇He is the perfect image， the visible representation，of the un－ seen God．He is the Firstborn，the absolute Heir of the Father，begotten before the ages；the Lord of the Universe by virtue of primogeniture， and by virtue also of creative agency． For in and through Him the whole world was created，things in heaven and things on earth，things visible to the outward eye and things cog－ nisable by the inward perception．His supremacy is absolute and universal． All powers in heaven and earth are subject to Him．This subjection ex－ tends even to the most exalted and most potent of angelic beings，whether they be called Thrones or Domina－ tions or Princedoms or Powers，or whatever title of dignity men may confer upon them．Yes：He is first and He is last．Through Him，as the mediatorial Word，the universe has been created；and unto Him，as the final goal，it is tending．In Him is no before or after．He is pre－existent and self－existent before all the worlds． And in Him，as the binding and sus－ taining power，universal nature co－ heres and consists．＇

15．ö́s éatay к．r．$\lambda$ ．］The Person of Christ is described first in relation more especially to Deity，as cikळ $\boldsymbol{\tau}$ тov Өcoû tô̂ áopárov，and secondly in relation more especially to created
 The fundamental conception of the Logos involves the idea of mediation between God and creation．A per－ verted view respecting the nature of the mediation between the two lay， as we have secn，at the root of the heretical teaching at Colossm（p．34， p．IOI sq．，p．II 5 sq. ），and required to be met by the truo doctrine of Christ as the Eternal Logos． єік心்y］＇the image．＇This expres－ sion is used repeatedly by Philo，as a description of the Logos；de Mund． Op． 8 （г．p．6）tò̀ áópatov каì עоךтò $\nu$ Gciov גóyod ciкóva $\lambda$ érєє Өєov，de aủroû，тòv ípótatoy $\lambda o ́ y o v, ~ i b . ~ § ~ 28 ~$ （I．p．427）Tท่̂s átōiov єikóvos aủtov̂ 入ó－ yov той ífoттútov к．т．$\lambda$ ．，de Profug．

 Monarch．ii． 5 （II，p．225）入óyos ס́ aros ésinutovoyєito，do Somn．i． 41 （r．p．656），etc．For the use which Philo made of the text Gen．i．26， 27 ， кат＇єiкóva $\dot{\eta} \mu \in \tau \epsilon ́ \rho a y, ~ к а т ' ~ є i к o ́ v a ~ Ө є o v ̂, ~$ see the note on iii．ro．Still earlier than Philo，before the idea of the $\lambda$ ó－ yos had assumed such a definite form， the term was used of the Divine oopia personified in Wisd．vii． $26 \dot{\alpha} \pi a v ́ y a \sigma \mu a$ ảyaOórpros aùrố．St Paul himself applies the term to our Lord in an earlier epistle， 2 Cor．iv． 4 T $\hat{\eta} s \delta^{\prime} \xi^{\xi} \eta s$

тô Xpıatoû äs éotav cikcì toû Eєoû （comp．iii． 18 ग̀े $\begin{aligned} & \text { aủrì } \nu \text { eiкóva } \mu \in \tau a-~\end{aligned}$ $\mu о \rho \phi о \dot{\mu} \epsilon \theta \mathbf{a}$ ）．Closely allied to $\epsilon i \kappa \dot{\omega} \nu$ also is रapaктíp，which appears in the

 $\sigma r a \dot{\sigma} \sigma \omega s$ avirovi，a passage illustrated by Philo de Plant． 5 （1．p．332）$\sigma ф \rho a-$
入óros．See also Phil．ii． $6 \hat{\epsilon} v \boldsymbol{\nu} \mu \circ \rho \phi \hat{g}$ $\Theta \in o u ̄$ únápरav．

Beyond the rery obvious notion of likeness，the word cikáv involves two other ideas；
（1）Representation．In this ro－ spect it is allied to $\chi^{a \rho a \kappa \tau} \dot{\eta} \rho$ ，and dif－ fers from $\dot{\delta} \mu \boldsymbol{i} \omega \mu a$ ，In $\dot{\delta} \mu \circ \dot{\prime} \omega \mu a$ the resemblance may be accidental，as one egg is like another；but elx由ly implies an archetype of which it is a copy，as Greg．Naz．Orat． 30 （1．p．554）
 cival tov̂ ápuєtínov．So too Io．Da－ masc．de Imag．i． 9 （1．p． 31 I）єiкс́＂ $\pi \rho \omega \tau$ óтит o $;$ comp．Philo de Mund． Op． 23 （1．p．16）．On this difference see Trench N．T．Synon．§ xv．p．47－ The cikisy might be the result of direct imitation（ $\mu \nu \mu \eta \tau<\kappa \eta$ ）like the head of a sovereign on a coin，or it might be due to natural canses（ $\phi v a \kappa \kappa \eta^{\prime}$ ）like the parental features in the child， but in any case it was derioed from its prototype：see Basil．de Spir． Sanct． 18 § 45 （III．p．38）．The word itself however does not necessarily imply perfect representation．Thus man is said to be the image of God； 1 Cor．xi． 7 €ixcì kai đóǵg Өєoû vimáo－ $\chi \omega \nu$ ，Clem．Rom． 33 ä $\nu \theta p \omega \pi o \nu \ldots \tau \eta{ }^{2}$ éavtoù єiкóvos $\chi$ даактテ̄jpa．Thus again an early Judro－Christian writer so designates the duly appointed bishop， as the representative of the Divine ar－ thority；Clem．Hom：iii 62 ws cikóva Өєov $\pi р о \tau \iota \omega \hat{\nu} \tau a s$ ．The idea of per－ fection does not lie in the word itsclf， but must be sought from the context （e．g．$\pi a ̂ \nu ~ \tau \grave{o ̀ ~} \pi \lambda \dot{\eta} \rho \omega \mu a$ ver．19）．The use which was made of this expression， and especially of this passage，in the

Christological controversies of the fourth and fifth centuries may be seen from the patristic quotations in Petav． Theol．Dogm．de Trin．ii．II． 9 sq．， 7i．5． 6 ． （2）Manifestation．This idea comes from the implied contrast to rov à párov Өeồ．St Chrysostom indeed maintains the direct opposite，arguing that，as the archetype is invisible，so the image must be invisible also，in ópotws áópatos．So too Hilary c． Const．Imp． 21 （in．p．378）＇ut imago invisibilis Dei，etiam per id quod ipse invisibilis est，invisibilis Dei imago esset．＇And this was the view of the Nicene and post－Nicene fathers gene－ rally．But the underlying idea of the ciк $\omega$ v，and indeed of the $\lambda$ óyos gene－ rally，is the manifestation of the hid－ den ：comp．Philo do Vit．Moys．ii． 12 é $\mu \phi a \eta^{\prime}$＇s．And adopted into Christian theology，the doctrine of the $\lambda$ ofos expresses this conception still more prominently by reason of the Incarna－ tion；comp．Tertull．adv．Marc．v． 19 ＇Scientes filium semper retro visum，si quibus visus est in Dei nomine，ut imaginem ipsius，＇Hippol c．Noet． 7

 § 12,13 ，Orig．in Ioann．vi．§ 2 （Iv． p．IO4）．Among the post－Nicene fa－ thers too St Basil has caught the right idea，Epist．xxxviii， 8 （III．p．12I）o

 $\tau \hat{\varphi} \gamma \in \nu \nu \eta \tau \hat{\varphi}$ катоттє亡́gas．The Word， whether pre－incarnate or incarnate， is the revelation of the unseen Father：

 tis к．т．ג．）．The epithet dopátov how－ ever must not be confined to the ap－ prehension of the bodily senses，but will include the cognisance of the in－ ward eye also． трюто́токоs тáनŋ̄ ктícecs］＇the First－born of all creation．＇The word $\pi \rho \omega т о$ токоs has a twofold pareutage：

（1）Like cikшу it is closely con－ nected with and taken from the Alex－ andrian vocabulary of the Logos．The word however which Philo applies to the $\lambda$ д́gos is not $\pi \rho \omega$ тótoкos but $\pi \rho \omega-$ róyouos：de Agric． 12 （I．p．308）$\pi \rho 0-$ tóyovà vión，de Somn．i． 37 （土 p．653） ó $\pi \rho \omega$ тórovos aìroû efios $\lambda$ óros，de Confus．ling．i． 28 （I．p．427）$\sigma \pi o v \delta a-$

 Bútatos viós is several times applied to the $\lambda$ óoos．Again in Quis rer．dio． her．§ 24 （r．p．489）the language of

 as to apply to the Divine Word．These appellations，＇the first－begotten，the eldest son，＇are given to the Logos by Philo，because in his philosophy it includes the original conception，the archetypal idea，of creation，which was afterwards realised in the mate－ rial world．$\Delta$ mong the early Chris－ tian fathers Justin Martyr again and again recognises the application of the term прато́токоs to the Word ；Apol． i． 23 （p．68）入óyos av่тov̂ vimá $\rho \chi \omega \nu$ каì трюто́токоs каі ঠ̀v́vaцts，ib．§ $4^{6(p .83)}$
 ．．$\lambda o ́ \gamma o \nu$ ö̀ $\nu \tau a$ oṽ $\pi \hat{a} \nu$ ý́roos à $\nu \theta \rho \omega^{\prime} \pi \omega \nu$

 Theophilus ad Autol．ii． 22 то̂̂tov тò̀

（2）The word $\pi \rho \omega$ тотокоs had also another not less important link of connexion with the past．The Mes－ to have beon generally allowed．So at least it is interpreted by R．Nathan in Shemoth Rabba 19，fol．118．4，＇God said，As I made Jacob a first－born （Exod．iy．22），so also will I make king Messiah a first－born（Ps．lexxix． 28）．＇Hence＇the first－born＇o $\pi \rho \omega \tau{ }^{2}$＇－ токоя（בכור）used absolutely，became a recognised title of Messiah．The way had been pared for this Messianic rfference of $\pi \rho \omega$ т́́токоs by its prior application to the Israelites，as the prerogative race，Esod．iv． 22 ＇Israel is my son，my first－born＇：comp．Psalm．

 58 ＇nos populus tuus，quem vocasti prinogenitum，unigenitum，＇where the combination of the two titles applied in the New Testament to the Son is striking．Here，as elsewhere（see the note on Gal．iii． 16 kaì roîs $\sigma \pi \epsilon ́ \rho \mu a \sigma \iota \nu$ к．т．入．），the terms are trausfarred from the race to the Messiah，as the repre－ sentative，the embodiment，of the race．

As the Person of Christ was the Dipine response alike to the philoso－ phical questionings of the Alexan－ drian Jew and to the patriotic hopes of the Palestinian，theso two currents of thought meet in the term $\pi \rho \omega \tau$ ó－ rokos as applied to our Lord，who is both the true Logos and the true Messiah．For this reason，we may suppose，as well as for others，the Christian Apostles preferred $\pi \rho \omega$ ó－ roxos to $\pi \rho \omega$ róqovos，which（as we may infer from Philo）was the favourite term with the Alexandrians，because the former alone would include the Messianic reference as well．

The main ideas then which the word involves are twofold；the one more directly conneeted with the Alexan－ drian conception of the Logos，the other more nearly allied to the Pales－ tinian conception of the Messiah． （1）Priority to all creation．In other words it deciares the absolute pre－existence of the Son．At first sight it might seem that Christ is here regarded as one，though the earliest，of created beings．＇This in－ terpretation however is not required by the expression itself. The fathers of the fourth centory rightly called attention to the fact that the Apostle токоs; e.g. Basil. c. Eunom. iv (I. p. 292). Much earlier, in Clem. Alex. Exc. Theod. 10 (p. 970), though without any direct reference to this passage, the $\mu о \nu$ оує $\nu \dot{\prime} \mathrm{s}$ кай трато́токоs is contrasted with the $\pi \rho \omega \tau$ ókтıaтot, the highest order of angelic beings; and the word apwióktagtos occurs more than once elsewhere in his writings (e.g. Strom. v. 14, p. 699). Nor again does the genitive case necessarilyimply that the $\pi \rho \omega т$ о́токоs Himself belonged to the $\kappa$ rícts, as will be shown presently. And if this sense is not required by the words themselves, it is directly excluded by the context. It is inconsistent alike with the universal agency in creation which is ascribed to Hím in the words following, èv autề éeriat $\eta$ тà $\pi a ́ \nu \tau a$, and with the absolute preexistence and self-existence which is claimed for Him just below, aíròs ढ̈ $\sigma \tau \iota \nu \pi \rho o ̀ ~ т \alpha ́ \nu \tau \omega \nu$. We may add also that it is irreconcilable with other passages in the Apostolic writings, while it contradicts the fundamental idea of the Clfristian consciousness. More especially the description $\pi \rho \omega \tau$ ó ed in such a way that it is not inconsistent with His other title of $\mu$ oyoyewís, unicus, alone of His kind and therefore distinct from created things. The two words express the same eternal fact; but while $\mu_{0 \nu o \gamma \in \nu \eta \text { is }}$ states it in itself, $\pi \rho \omega \tau$ óroxos places it in relation to the Universe. The correct interpretation is supplied by Justin Martyr, Dial. § 100 (p. 326 т $\omega \nu$ т $\hat{\nu} \nu$ кт兀б $\mu$ át $\omega \nu$. He does not indeed mention this passage, but it was doubtless in his mind, for he elsewhere uses the very expression $\pi \rho \omega$ -
 (p. 3III B), § 138 (p. 367 D ); comp. also $\S 84$ (p. 310 B ), where the words $\pi \rho \omega$ -

(2) Soveraignty over all creation. God's 'first-born' is the natural ruler, the acknowledged head, of God's household. The right of primogeniture appertains to Messiah over all created things. Thus in Ps. lxxxix.
 the explanation is added, vivŋnò $\nu$ the original implies) 'above all the kings of the earth.' In its Messianic reference this secondary idea of sovereignty predominated in the word $\pi \rho \omega \tau$ óroкаs, so that from this point of view $\pi \rho \omega$ то́токоs $\pi \dot{\alpha} \sigma \eta s$ ктíctas would mean 'Soveroign Lord over all creation by virtue of primogeniture.' The stolic writer (Heb, i. 2) exactly corresponds to the $\begin{aligned} \text { riбоиа } \\ \pi \rho \omega \tau o ́ т о к о \nu ~\end{aligned}$ of the Psalmist (Ixxxix. 28), and doubtless was tacitly intended as a paraphrase and application of this Messianic passage. So again in Heb. xii. 23, екккл $\eta \sigma$ ia $\pi \rho \omega т о т о к \omega \nu$, the most probable explanation of the word is that which makes it equivalent to 'leirs of the kingdom,' all faithfuI Christians being ipso facto тошто́токои, because all are kings. Nay, so completely might this idea of dominion by virtue of priority eclipse the primary sense of the term 'first-born' in some of its uses, that it is given as a title to God Himself by R. Bechai on the Pentateuch, fol. I24. 4, 'Who is primogenitus mundi,' שהוא בכורו של עולם, it would be rendered in Greek. In this same work again, fol. 74. 4, Exod. xiii. 2 is falsely interpreted so that God is represented as calling Himself 'primogenitus': see Schöttgen p. 922. For other instances of secondary uses of בכור in the Old Testament, where the idea of 'priority of birth' is overshadowed by and lost in the idea of 'pre-eminence,' see Job xviii. 13 'the first-born of death,' Is. xiv. 30 'the first-born of the poor.'

тáoŋs ктícєळs] 'of all creation'
rather than 'of every crealed thing.' The three senses of krials in the New Testament are: (I) creation, as the act of creating, e.g. Rom. i. 20 àmò $\kappa \tau i \sigma \epsilon \omega s$ кó $\sigma \mu \sigma v:$ (2) creation, as the aggregate of created things, Mark xiii.
 (where the parallel passage, Matt.

 a creation, a single created thing, a creature, e.g. Rom. viii. 39 oüte tis definite article is sometimes used of the created world generally (e.g. Mark xiii. 19), and indeed belongs to the category of anarthrous nouns like ко́opos, $\gamma \hat{\eta}$, où $\rho a \nu$ ós, etc. (see Winer § xix. p. 149 sq .), it is best taken so here. Indeed ráojs ктioces, in the sense of пáztos ктíquatos, would be awkward in this connexion; for $\pi \rho \omega-$ то́тokos seems to require either a collective noun, or a plural $\pi a \sigma \omega \hat{\nu}$ т $\hat{\omega}$ $\kappa$ кiбєшр. In ver. 23 the case is different (see the note there). The anarthrous $\pi \hat{a} \sigma a k r i \sigma t s$ is found in Judith ix. $12 \beta$ ßaбi $\lambda \epsilon \hat{v} \pi a ́ \sigma \eta s$ ктícés $\sigma o v$, while $\pi$ âfa $\dot{\eta}$ ктiots occurs in Judith xvi. 14, Mark xvi. 15, Rom. viii. 22, Clem. Kom. 19, Mart. Polyc. I4. For $\pi \hat{a} s$, signifying 'all,' and not 'every,' when attached to this class of nouns, see Winer \& xviii. p. I37.

The genitive case must be interpreted so as to include the full meaning of $\pi \rho \omega \tau$ óroкos, as already explained. It will therefore signify: "He stands in the relation of $\pi \rho \omega \tau o$ rokos to all creation,' i.e. 'He is the Firstborn, and, as the Firstborn, the absolute Heir and sovereigu Lord, of all creation.' The connexion is the same as in the passage of $R$. Bechai already quoted, where God is called primogeritus mundi. Another explanation which would connect the genitive with the first part of the compound alone ( $\pi \rho \omega \tau o ́-$ ), comparing Joh. i. I $5,30, \pi \rho \omega ̂$ Tós $\mu 00{ }^{\mathfrak{\eta}} \nu$, unduly strains the grammar, while it excludes the idea of 'heirship, sovereignty.'
The history of the patristic exegesis of this expression is not without a painful interest. All the fathers of the second and third centuries without exception, so far as I have noticed, correctly refer it to the Eternal Word and not to the Incarnate Cbrist, to the Deity and not to the humanity of our Lord. So Justin l.c., Theophilus l.c., Clement of Alexandria Exc. Theod. 7, 8, 19 (pp. 967, 973), Tertullian ado. Prax. 7, ado. Marc. v. 19, Hippolytus HLer. x. 33, Origen c. Cels. vi. 47, 63, 64, ete., in Ioann. i. § 22 (rv. p. 2r), xix. § 5 (p. 305), xxviii. § 14 (p. 392), Cyprian Test. ii. I, Novatian de Trin. 16, and the Synod of Antioch (Routh's Rel. Sacr. III. pp. 290, 293). The Arian controversy however gave a different turn to the exegesis of the passage. The Arians fastened upon $\sigma \in \omega s$, and drew from it the inference that the Son was a created being. The great use which they made of the text appears from the document in Hilary, Fragm. Hist. Op. II p. 644. The right answer to this false interpretation we have already seen. Many orthodox fathers however, not satisfied with this, transferred the expression into a new sphere, and maintained that $\pi \rho \omega \tau$ о́токоs $\pi$ ćoŋs ктíccoss describes the Incarnate Christ. By so doing they thought to cut up the Arian argument by the roots. As a consequence of this interpretation, they were obliged to understand the $k \pi i \sigma t s$ and the $\kappa \tau i \zeta \in \sigma \theta a t$ in the context of the new spiritual creation, the кaù̀े кtías of 2 Cor. v. 17, Gal. vi. I 5. Thus interpreted, пршто́токоs $\pi$ á $\sigma \eta$ s kriotews here becomes nearly equivain Rom. viii. 29. The arguments alleged in fayour of this interpretation are mainly twofold: (1) That, if applied to the Divine nature, тршто́токоs would contradict $\mu$ ovoy $\frac{1}{2}$ s which elsewhere describes the nature of the Eternal Son. But those who maintained, and rightly maintained, that $\pi \rho \omega т о ́ т о к о s(L u k e ~ i i .7) ~ d i d ~ n o t ~ n e c e s-~$ sarily imply that the Lord's mother had other sons, ought not to have been led away by this fallaey. (2) That Rom. viii. 29, Rev. i. 5, and just below, ver. 18) is applied to the humanity of Christ. But elsewhere, in $\pi \rho \omega \tau$ тококо к.т. $\lambda$., the term must almost necessarily refer to the preexistence of the Son; and moreover the very point of the Apostie's language in the text (as will be seen pregently) is the parallelism in the two relations of our Lord-IIis relation to the natural creation, as the Eternal Word, and His relation to the spiritual creation, as the Head of the Church-so that the same word ( $\pi \rho \omega \tau$ тотокоs $\pi \dot{a} \sigma \eta s$ ктібєшs ver. 15 , тршто́токоя ѐк т $\omega \nu \nu \in \kappa \rho \hat{\omega} \nu$ ver. 18) is studiously used of both. A false exegesis is sure to bring a nemesis on itsclf. Logical consistency required that thisinterpretationshould be carried farther; and Marcellus, who was never deterred by any considerations of prudence, took this bold step. He extended the principle to the whole context, including cven cikळ $\nu$ tov̂ áopárov Өєoũ, which likewise he interpreted of our Lord's humanity. In this way a most important Christological passage was transferred into an alien sphere; and the strongest argument against Arianism melted away in the attempt to combat Arianism on false grounds. The criticisms of Eusebius on Marcellus are perfectly just: Eccl. Theol. i. 20 (p. 96) rav̂тa

 (p. 67), iii. 6 sq. (p. 175), c. Marcell. i. 1 (p. 6), i. 2 (p. 12), ii. 3 (pp. 43, $46 \mathrm{sq} ., 48$ ). The objections to this interpretation are threefold: (I) It disregards the history of the terms in their comexion with the pre-

Christian speculations of Alcxandrian Judaism. These however, though directly or indirectly they were present to the minds of the earlier fathers and kept them in the right exegetical path, might very easily have escaped a writer in the fourth century. (2) It shatters the context. To suppose

 $\sigma \pi \eta \kappa \in \nu$, refer to the work of the Incarnation, is to strain language in a way which would reduce all theological exegesis to chaos; and yet this, as Marcellus truly saw, is a strictly logical consequence of the interpretation which refers $\pi \rho \omega \tau$ о́токоs $\pi \dot{\sigma} \sigma \eta s$ ктícєшs to Christ's humanity. (3) It takes no account of the cosmogony and angelology of the false teachers against which the Apostle's exposition here is directed (see above, pp. 101 sq ., $110 \mathrm{sqg} ., 115 \mathrm{sq}$.). This interpretation is given by St Athanasius c. Arian. ii. 62 sq . (I. p. 419 sq .) and appears again in Greg. Nyss. c. Eunom. ii. (rI. pp. $45 \mathrm{I}-453,492$ ), ib. iii. (II. p. 540-545), de Perf. (III. p. 290 sq ), Cyril Alex. Thes. 25, p. 236 sq., de Trin. Dial.iv. p. 517 sq., vi. p. 625 sq., Anon. Chrysost. Op. viIf. p. 223, appx. (quoted as Chrysostom by Photius Bibl. 277). So too Oyril expresses himself at the Council of Ephesus, Labb. Conc. III. p. 652 (ed. Colet). St Athanasius indeed does not confine the expression to the condescension ( $\sigma$ үүкатáßacrs) of the Word in the Incarnation, but includes also a prior condescension in the Oreation of the world (see Bull Def. Fid. Nic. iii. 9 § I, with the remarks of Newman Select Treatises of S. Athanasius 1. pp. 278, 368 sq .). This double reference however only confuses the exegesis of the passage still further, while theologically it might lead to wery serious difficulties. In another work, Expos. Fid. 3 (1. p. 80), he seems to take a truer view of its meaning. St Basil,

who to an equally clear appreciation of doctrine generally unites a sounder exegesis'thanSt Athanasius, whilementioning the interpretation which refers the expression to Christ's human nature, himself prefers explaining it of the Eternal Word; c. Eunom. iv. (I. p. 292). Of the Greek commentators on this passage, Chrysostom's view is not clear; Severianus (Cram. Cat. p. 303) and Theodoret understand it rightly of the Eternal Word; while Theodore of Mopsuestia (Cram. Cat. pp. 306, 308, 309, Rab. Maur. Op. vi. p. 5 ri sq. ed. Migne) expresses himself very strongly on the opposite side. Like Marcellus, he carries the interpretation consistently into the whole context, explaining $\dot{\epsilon} \nu$ av่т $\hat{\varphi}$ to refer not to the original creation (kт!ors) but to the moral re-creation Incarnation in the same way. At a later date, when the pressure of an immediate controversy has passed away, the Greek writers generally concur in the earlier and truer interpretation of the expression. Thus John Damascenc (de Orthod. Fid. iv. 8, i. p. 258 sq.), Theophylact (ad loc.), and Cleumenius (ad loc.), all explain it of Christ's Divine Nature. Among Latin writers there is more diversity of interpretation. While Marius Victorinus (ado. Arium i. 24, p. ro58, ed. Migne), Hilary of Poictiers (Tract. in ii Ps. § 28 sq., 1. p. 47 sq.; de Trin. viii. 50 , II. p. 248 sq.), and Hilary the commentator ( $a d$ loc.), take it of the Divine Nature, Augustine (Expos. ad Rom. 56, imr. p. 914) and Pelagius (ad loc.) understand it of the Incarnate Christ. This sketch of the history of the interpretation of the expression would not be complete without a reference to another very different explanation. Isidore of Pelusium, Epist. iii. 31 (p. 268), would strike out a new path of interpretation altogether ( $\epsilon i$

$\left.a^{3} \nu a r \epsilon ́ \mu \nu \epsilon t \nu \dot{o} \delta \delta^{\prime} y\right)$, and for the passive $\pi \rho \omega$ тóroкos suggests reading the active $\pi \rho \omega т о т o ́ к o s$, alluding to the use of this latter word in Homer (Il. xvii. $5 \mu \eta \tau \eta \rho$
 comp. Plat. Theat. 15 r c ${ }^{\circ} \sigma \pi \epsilon \rho$ ai $\pi \rho \omega$ тото́кou). Thus St Paul is made тоитє́ $\sigma \tau \iota, \pi \epsilon \pi о \iota \eta \kappa \epsilon ́ v a \iota \tau \grave{\eta} \nu ~ к \tau і \sigma \iota \nu$.

I6. örı к.т.入.] We have in this sentence the justification of the title given to the Son in the preceding clause, трюто́токоs $\pi \dot{\alpha} \sigma \eta s$ ктíбєшs. It must therefore be taken to explain the sense in which this title is used. Thus connected, it shows that the $\pi \rho \omega т$ о́токоs Himself is not included in $\pi \bar{a} \sigma a$ ktícts; for the expression тd́ пávтa $\grave{e} k \tau i \sigma \theta \eta$ —words which are absolute and comprehensive, and will admit no exception.
 $17{ }^{?} \dot{\epsilon} \nu$ aư $\hat{\omega} \sigma \nu \nu \epsilon \sigma \pi \eta k \epsilon \nu$. For the pre-

 All the laws and purposes which guide the creation and government of the Universe reside in Him, the Eternal Word, as their meeting-point. The Apostolic doctrine of the Logos teaches us to regard the Eternal Word as holding the same relation to the Universe which the Incarnate Ctarist holds to the Church. He is the source of its life, the centre of all its developments, the mainspring of all its motions. The use of $\epsilon \nu$ to describe His relations to the Church abounds in St Paul (c.g. Rom. viii, 1, 2, xii. 5 , xvi. 3, 7, 9, etc., I Cor. i. 30 , iv. 15, 17, vii. 39, xv. 18, 22, etc.), and more especially in the Epistles to the Colossians and Ephesians (e.g. below ii. 7 , io). In the present passage, as in ver. 17 , the same preposition is applied also to His relations to the Universe; comp. Joh. i. 4 ì aủvê ऽ $\omega \grave{\eta} \eta^{\circ} \nu$ (more especially if we connect the preceding ô yéoovey with it)

Thus it is part of the parallelism which runs through the whole passage, and to which the occurrence of key. TheJudæo-Alexandrian teachers represented the Logos, which in their view was nothing more than the Divine mind energizing, as the róros where the eternal ideas, the vonvòs ко́rouos, had their abode; Philo do especially de Migr. Abr. i (I. p. 437)

 Oeis. The Apostolic teaching is an enlargement of this conception, inasmuch as the Logos is no longer a philosophical abstraction but a Divine Person: see Hippol. Haer. x.

 Orig. in Ioann. i. § 22, Iv. p. 21.
éxiot $\theta$ ] The aorist is used here; the perfect below. 'Ekríten describes the definite historical act of creation ; enktagtas the continuous and present relations of creation to the Creator:

 є่ $\gamma \in \nu o ́ \mu \eta \nu$ тоїs à $\sigma \theta \epsilon \nu \epsilon \in \sigma \iota \nu$ à $\sigma \theta \epsilon \nu \eta^{\prime} s$ with 2b. тoís mẫav үé yova $\pi$ áura, 2 Cor. xii.

тà $\pi$ ávta] 'the universe of things,' not пávra 'all things severally', but tà $\pi$ ávaa 'all things collectively.' With very few exceptions, wherever this phrase occurs elsewhere, it stands in a similar connexion; see below, vv. 17, 20, iii. 1 , Rom. xi. 36 , 1 Cor. viii. 6, si. 12, xii. 6, xv. 27, 28, 2 Gor. v. 18, Eph. i. 10, 11, 23, iv. Io, Heb. i. 3, ii. 8 , Rev. iv. II. Compare Rom. viii.
 15 tà $\pi a ́ v \tau a \quad \delta \iota^{\prime}$ v $\mu$ âs, with I Cor. iii.

 it will appear that tà mávia is nearly equivalent to 'the universe.' It stands midway between múvra and rì $\pi \tilde{a} y$. The last however is not a scriptural phrase; for, while with rà $\pi$ ávia it involves the idea of connexion, it suggests also the unscriptural idea of self-contained unity, the great worldsoul of the Stoic pantheist.
in tois aujpavois к.г...] This division of the universe is not the same with the following, as if $[\tau \dot{a}]$ è $\nu$ тois où $\rho a v o i s$ were equivalent to $\tau \grave{a}$ dóópara and [rà ] rather be compared with Gen. i. I $\gamma \hat{\eta} \nu$, ii. I वvvpecte入є́ $\sigma \theta_{\eta} \sigma a \nu$ ó oủpavòs кai

 It is a classification by locality, as the other is a classification by essences. Heaven and earth together comprehend all space; and all things whether material or immaterial are conceived for the purposes of the classification as having their abode in space. Thus the sun and the moon would belong to ópatá, but they would be év rois oùpavois; while the human sowl would be classed among dópara but would be regarded as $\dot{\epsilon} \pi i \dot{\gamma} \hat{\eta} s \gamma_{\bar{\eta} s}$; see below ver. 20.

It is difficult to say whether rà... rà should be expunged or retained. The elements in the decision are; (I) The facility either of omission or of addition in the first clause, owing to the termination of пávaa: (2) The much greater authority for the omission in the first clause than in the second. These two combined suggest that qu was omitted accidentally in the first clause, and then expunged purposely in the second for the sake of uniformity. On the other hand there is (3) The possibility of insertion in both cases either for the sake of grammatical completeness or owing to the parallel passages, ver. 20, Ephes. i. 10. On the whole the reasons for their omission preponderate. At all events we can hardly retain the one without the other.

 and immaterial,' or, according to the language of philosophy, фatróнєva and yójeva: comp. Plato Phed. 79 a eitc к.т.ג.] 'whether they be thrones or lordships, etc.' The subdivision is no longer exhaustive. The Apostle singles out those created beings that from their superior rank had been or might be set in rivalry with the Son.

A comparison with the parallel

 the following points :
(I) No stress can be laid on the sequence of the names, as though St Paul were enunciating with authority some precise doctrine respecting the grades of the celestial hierarchy. The names themselves are not the same in the two passages. While ${ }_{\alpha}^{\rho} \chi \chi{ }^{\prime}, \dot{\epsilon} \xi-$ ovaía, кypuóris, are common to both, Gpóvos is peculiar to the one and Sivapus to the other. Nor again is there any correspondence in the sequence. Neither does סvivauts take the place of $\theta \rho o^{\prime}$ vos, nor do the three words common to both appear in the same order, the sequence being $\dot{a} \rho X$.
 rup. $\dot{d} \rho \chi$. ${ }^{\prime} \xi$. here.
(2) An expression in Iuph. i. 21 shows the Apostle's motive in introducing these lists of names: for he there adds каі̆ тavròs b́vópatos d̀o$\dot{\alpha} \lambda \lambda \dot{\alpha}$ каl $\notin \nu \tau \hat{\omega} \mu \epsilon \lambda \lambda o \nu \tau t$, i.e. 'of every dignity or title (whether real or imaginary) which is reverenced,' etc.; for this is the force of mavros óvó $\mu a \tau$ d̀opa̧opévou (see the notes on Phil. ii. 9, and Eph. l.c.). Hence it appears that in this catalogue St Paul does not profess to describe objective realities, but contents himself with repeating subjective opinions. He brushes away all these speculations without enquiring how much or how little truth there may be in them, because they are altogether beside the questiou. His language here shows the same spirit of impatience with this elaborate angelology, as in ii. 18 .
(3) Some commentators have referred the terms used here solely to earthly potentates and dignities. There can be little doubt however that their chief and primary reference is tc the orders of the celestial hiorarchy, as conceived by these Gnostic Judaizers. This appears from the context; for the words rà dópara immediately precede this list of terms, while in the mention of $\pi \hat{\alpha} \nu \tau \dot{o} \pi \lambda{ }^{\prime} \rho \omega \mu \mu a$ and in other expressions the A postle clearly contemplates the rivalry of spiritual powers with Christ. It is also demanded by the whole design and parport of the letter, which is written to combat the worship paid to angels. The names too, more especially Opóvot, are especially connectcd with the speculations of Jewish angelology. But when this is granted, two questions still remain. First; are evil as well as good spirits included, demons as well as angels? And next; though the primary reference is to spiritual porters, is it not possible that the expression was intended to becomprehensive and to include earthly dignities as well? The clause added in the parallel passage, ov $\mu$ óvov $^{\boldsymbol{\epsilon} v} \boldsymbol{\tau} \hat{\omega}$ aî̀ve тоv́т к к.т. $\lambda$., encturages us thus to extend the Apostle's meaning; and we are led in the same direction by the comprchensive words which have preceded liere, [ $T \dot{a}$ ] ì tois oujpavoís k. $\tau . \lambda$. Nor is there anything in the terms themselves which bars such an extension; for, as will be seen, the combination dozal кai igovaial is applied not only to good angels but to bad, not only to spiritual powers but to earthly. Compare Ignat.

 ஊ̇óparot.

Thus guided, we may paraphrase the Apostle's meaning as follows: ' You dispute much about the successive grades of angels; you distinguish each grade by its special title; you can tell how each order was generated from the preceding; jou assign to each its proper degree of worship. Meanwhile you have ignored or you have degraded Ohrist. I tell you, it is not so. He is first and foremost, Lord of heaven and earth, far above all thrones or dominations, all princedoms or powers, far above every dignity and every potentate-whether earthly or heavenly-whether angel or demon or man-that evokes your reverence or excites your fear.' See above, pp. ro3 sq.

Jewish and Judæo-Christian speculations respecting the grades of the celestial hierarchy took various forms. In the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs (Levi 3), which as coming near to the Apostolic age supplies a valuable illustration (see Galatians p. 307 sq. , these orders are arranged as follows: (I) Apóvol, 'Govaial, these two in the highest or seventh heaven;

 the sixth heaven; (3) of áyye入ot tov $\pi \rho о \sigma \dot{\pi} \pi о \boldsymbol{u}$ in the fitth heaven ; (4) oi $\tilde{a}$ atot in the fourth heaven ; (5) ai סvyá-$\mu \epsilon \iota s$ т $\hat{\nu} \nu$ тарє $\mu \beta \circ \lambda \omega \bar{\omega}$ in the third heaven ; (6) $\tau \dot{a} \pi \nu \in \dot{\prime} \mu x \tau a \tau \hat{\omega} \nu \dot{\varepsilon} \pi a y \omega \gamma \hat{\omega} \nu$ (i.e. of visitations, retributions) in the second heaven: or perhaps the denizens of the sixth and fifth heavens, (2) and (3), should be transposed. The lowest heaven is not peopled by any spirits. In Origen de Princ. i. 5. 3, ib. i. 6. 2, I. pp. 66, 70 (comp. i. 8. 1, ib. p. 74), we have five classes, which are given in an ascending scale in this order; (1) angels (sancti angeli, rágıs áryє$\lambda(x \eta$ ) ; (2) princedoms (principatus, testates, ésovaiat); (4) thrones (throni vel sedes, Apóvor); (5) dominations (dominationes, кvptótpres); though elsewhere, in Ioann. i. § 34, IV. p. 34, he seems to have a somewhat different classification in view. In Ephrem Syrus Op. Syr. I. p. 270 (where the translation of Benedetti is altogether faulty and misleading) the ranks are these: (1) Aqoí, Apónoc, кupótпттеs; (2) $\delta v \nu a \dot{\mu} \epsilon \epsilon s, \chi \in \rho о v \beta i \mu, \sigma \in \rho a \phi i \mu ;$ these three great divisions being represented by тєутŋко́дтар хо respectively in Deut. i. 15, on which passage he is commenting. The general agreement between these will be seen at once. This grouping also seems to underlio the conception of Basil of Seleucia Orat. 39 (p. 207), who mentions them in this

 On the other hand the arrangement of the pseudo-Dionysins, who so largely influenced subsequent speculations, is quite different and probably later (Dion. Areop. Op. I. p. 75, ed. Cord.); assigned to the two highest grades in a system of the celestial hierarchy which he found current, and which probably was adopted by these Gnostic Judaizers. See also the note on ii. 18 .

 $\dot{a} \rho \chi \dot{a} \gamma \gamma \in \lambda o t, \dot{a} \rho \chi a \dot{a}$. But the earlier lists for the most part seem to suggest as their common foundation a classification in which opóvos, кuptórŋres, belonged to the highest order, and dip $\chi$ al, 'govaia to the next below Thus it would appear that the Apostle takes as an illustration the titles

Ofóvoc] In all systems alike these 'thrones' belong to the highest grade of angelic beings, whose place is in the immediate presence of God. The meaning of the name however is doubtful: (I) It may signify the occupents of thrones which surround the throne of God; as in the imagery of

 The imagery is there taken from the court of an earthly king : see Jer. lii. 32. This is the interpretation given by Origen de Princ. i. 5. 3 (p. 66), i. 6. 2 ( p .7 o ) 'judicandi vel regendi... habentes officium.' Or (2) They were so called, as supporting or forming the throne of God; just as the chariotseat of the Almighty is represented as resting on the cherubim in Ezek. i. 26 , ix. 3, x. 1 sq., xi. 22, P\& xviii. 10, I Chron. xxviii. I8. So apparently Clem. Alex. Proph. Ecl. 57 (p. 1003) aủroîs tò ${ }^{\text {Otóy. From this same }}$ imagery, of the prophet the later mysticism of the Kabbala derived its name 'wheels,' which it gave to one of its ten orders of Sephiroth. Adopting this interpretation, several fithers identify the 'thrones' with the cherubim : e.g. Greg. Nyss. c. Eunorn. i (II. p. 349 sq .), Chrysost de Incompr. Nat. iii. 5 (I. p. 467), Theodoret (ad loc.), August. in Psalm. xeviii. § 3 (Iv. p. 106 I ). This explanation was adopted also by the pseudo-Dionysius de Col. Hier. 7 (1. p. 8o), without however identifying them with the cherubim; and through his writings it came to be generally adopted. The former interpretation however is more probable; for (i) The highly symbolical character of the latter accords better with a later stage of mystic speculation, like the Kabbala; and (2) It seems best to treat $\theta$ póvol as belonging to the e'govaiat, which are concrete words borrowed from different grades of human rank and power. As implying regal dignity, $\theta$ póva naturally stands at the head of the list.

кирьо́түтєs] 'dominations,' as Ephes. i. 2I. These appear to have been rogarded as belonging to the first grade, and standing next in dignity to the $\theta$ posou. This indeed wonld be suggested by their name.
$\left.\dot{\alpha} \rho_{\chi^{a}}{ }^{\prime}, \dot{e} \xi \operatorname{covaial}\right]$ as Ephos. i. 21. These two words occur very frequently together. In some places they refer to human dignities, as Luke xii. II, Tit. iii. I (comp. Luke xx. 20); in others to a spiritual hierarchy. And here again there are two different uses: sometimes they designate good angels, e.g. below ii. Io, Ephes. iii. Io; sometimes evil spirits, e.g. ii. 15, Ephes. vi. 12: while in one passage at least (I Cor. xv. 24) both may be included. In Rom. viii. $3^{8}$ we have ap $p$ $\chi^{\text {ai }}$ without égovoial (except as a v.l.), and in I Pet. iii. 22 ' 'sougial without d $\rho \chi^{\prime}$ a', in connexion with the angelic orders.
 passed out from IIim, so does it all converge again towards Fim.' For the combination of prepositions see Rom.
 tì $\nu$ тà $\pi \dot{a} \nu \tau a$. He is not only the a but also the $\omega$, not only the ${ }^{\prime} \rho \chi y^{\prime}$ but also but also the last in the history of the Universe: Rev. xxii. 13. For this double relation of Christ to the Universe, as both the initial and the final cause, seo Heb. ii. io $\delta i^{\prime}$ à $\nu$ ta is nearly equivalent to eis av่rùv of the text.

In the Judaic philosophy of Alexandria the preposition 8ad with the genitive was commonly used to describe the function of the Logos in the creation and government of the world; e.g. de Cherub. 35 (I. p. 162) where Philo, enumerating the causes which combine in the work of Creation, describes God as i $\phi \phi^{\prime}$ avi, matter as $\dot{\epsilon} \dot{\xi}$ ovi, and the Word as $\delta i$ ' ovं; comp. de Mon. ii. 5 (II. p. 225) 入ó $\neq \frac{1}{} . .$.

 The Christian Apostles accepted this use of dia to describe the mediatorial function of the Word in creation; e.g.

 aîwas. This mediatorial function however has entirely changed its character. To the Alexandrian Jew it was the work of a passive tool or instrument (do Cherub. l.c. $\delta \iota^{\prime}$ ovi, tò ' $\quad \rho \gamma \alpha-$ Christian Apostle it represented a cooperating agent. Hence the Alexandrian Jew frequently and consistently used the simple instrumental dative $\tilde{\Phi}$ to describe the relation of the Word to the Creator, e.g. Quod

 фо́тєра тоєєí, comp. ib. iii. 3 (I. p. 1o6) бá $\mu \in \nu o s$. This mode of speaking is not found in the New Testament.
sis auvóv] 'unto IIime.' As of the Father it is said elsewhere, I Cor. viii.
 so here of the Son we read tà náura $\delta_{i}{ }^{2}$ aứroû kaì $\epsilon i s$ aưröy. All things must find their meeting-point, their reconciliation, at length in Him from whom they tuok their rise-in the Word as the modiatorinl agent, and through the Word in the Fither as the primary source. The Word is the final canse as well as the creative agent of the Universe. This ultimate goal of the present dispensation ia time is similarly stated in several passages. Sometimes it is represented as the birth-throe and deliverance of all creation through Christ; as Rom. viii. 19 sq. $a \dot{u} \tau \dot{\eta} \dot{\eta} \kappa \tau i \sigma t s$ हो $\lambda \in v \theta \in \rho \omega \theta \theta_{\dot{\eta}}$ times it is the absolute and final subjection of universal nature to Him; as I Cor. xv. 28 ö̃ rà távica. Sometimes it is the reconciliation of all things through Him; as rà $\pi \dot{d} u r a$. Sometimes it is the recapitulation, the gathering up in one head, of the Universe in Him; as Ephes. i. Io àvaкєфалаıóractai $\tau \grave{\alpha}$ $\pi a ́ \nu \tau a$ év $\tau \hat{\varrho} \mathrm{X} \rho \sigma \sigma \tau \hat{\varphi}$. The image involved in this last passage best illustrates the particular expression in the text cis av̀ròv ëктıgтat ; but all alike cuunciate the same truth in differens terms. The Eternal Word is the goal of the Universe, as He was the startingpoint. It must end in unity, as it proceeded from unity: and the centro of this unity is Christ. This expression has no parallel, and could have none, in the Alexandrian phraseology and doetrine.
17. каі̀ aủròs к.r.入.] 'and $H E I S$ before all things': comp. Joh. viii. 58 perhaps also viii. 24,28 , xiii. 19). The imperfect ${ }_{\eta} \nu \nu$ might have sufficed (comp. Joh. i. 1), but the present $\begin{gathered}\text { cotev }\end{gathered}$ declares that this pre-existence is absoluto cxistence. The aYTOc ECTIN here corresponds exactly to the $\epsilon \Gamma \omega$ EIMI in St John, and this again is illustrated by Exod. iii. 14. The verb therefore is not an enclitic, but should be accentuated $\neq \sigma \tau \tau$. See Basilado. Eunom.

 for the completeness of the meaning,

$\sigma \nu \nu \epsilon ́ \sigma \tau \eta \kappa \epsilon \nu$.

${ }^{18} \kappa \alpha i \quad \alpha u$ úós

as the $\tilde{\epsilon} \sigma \tau \iota \nu$. The one emphasizes the personality, as the other declares the pre-existence. For this emphatic avitós see again ver. 18; comp. Ephes. ii. 14, iv. IO, II, I Joh. ii. 2 , and esp. Rev. xix. 15 кai aùròs trounafê....kaì aviò̀s marê. The other interpretation which explains $\pi \rho \dot{o} \pi \alpha \dot{\alpha} \omega \omega \nu$ of superiority in rank, and not of priority in time, is untenable for several reasons. (I) This would most naturally be expressed otherwise in Biblical language, as éni rávтفv (e.g. Rom. ix. 5, Eph. iv.

 The key to the interpretation is given by the analogous words in the context, esp. тлютótoros, vv. 15, 18. (3) Nothing short of this declaration of rbsolute pre-existence would be adequate to introduce the statement $\sigma \nu \nu \epsilon ́ \sigma \tau \eta \kappa \in \nu$.
$\pi \rho \grave{o} \pi \dot{\alpha} \nu \pi \omega \nu]$ 'before all things.' In the Latin it was transiated 'ante omnes,' i.e. thronos, dominationes, etc.; and so Tertullian adv. Marc. v. 19 'Quomodo enim ante omnes, si non ante omnia? Quomodo ante omnia, si non primogenitus conditionis?' But the neuter rà mávra, standing in the context before and after, requires the neuter here also.

бvעє́बтךкє $\overline{\text { ] }}$ 'hold together, cohere.' He is the principle of cohesion in the universe. He impresses upon creation that unity and solidarity which makes it a cosmos instead of a chaos. Thus (to take one instance) the action of gravitation, which keepsin their places things fixed and regulates the motions of things moving, is an expression of His mind. Similarly in Heb. i. 3 Christ the Logos is described as ф'́िळע тà $\pi$ ávoa (sustaining the Universe) т̣̣̂ $\dot{\rho} \dot{\eta} \mu a \tau \iota \tau \hat{\eta} s \delta^{\delta} \nu \nu a ́ \mu \epsilon \omega s$ av̀roû. Here again the Christian Apostles accept the language of Alexandrian Judaism, which describes the Logos as the $\delta \epsilon \sigma \mu$ oेs of the Universe; e.g.

Philo de Profug. 20 (r. p. 562) ó Tє
 $\dot{\alpha} \pi a \dot{\nu} \nu \omega \nu \ldots k a i ̆ \sigma \nu \nu \in ́ \chi \in \iota \tau \dot{\alpha} \mu \epsilon ́ \rho \eta \pi a ́ v \tau a$ кaì $\delta \iota a p r a ̄ \sigma \theta a t$, de Plant. 2 (I. p. 331) $\sigma v \nu a ́ \gamma \omega \nu$ тà $\mu \dot{\rho} \rho \eta \pi a ́ v \pi a$ каì $\sigma \phi i \gamma \gamma \omega \nu{ }^{\prime}$ for the word itself see Quis rer. div. her. 12 (I. p. 48I) $\sigma \nu \boldsymbol{\varepsilon} \boldsymbol{\sigma} \sigma \tau \eta \kappa \in \kappa a l$ ऽ $\omega$ тиреїтаи троуoía Өєөû, Clem. Rom. 27 бтйбатo tà ráyтa. In the same connexion $\sigma$ и́yкetтat is used, Ecclus. xliii. 26. The indices to Plato and Aristotle amply illustrate this use of $\sigma v y \dot{p} \sigma \tau \eta \kappa \in \nu$. This mode of expression was common with the Stoics also.

18. 'And not only does He hold this position of absolute priority and sovereignty over the Universe-the natural creation. He stands also in the same relation to the Churchthe new spiritual creation. He is its head, and it is His body. This is His prerogative, because He is the source and the beginning of its life, being the First-born from the dead. Thus in all things-in the spiritual order as in the natural-in the Church as in the World-He is found to have the pre-eminence.'

The elevating influence of this teaching on the choicest spirits of the subapostolic age will be seen from a noble passage in the noblest of early Christian writings, Epist. ad

тoîs oủpavoîs，$\gamma \hat{\eta}$ кaì тà $\frac{\epsilon \nu}{\nu}$ गй $\gamma \hat{\eta}$ к．т．入． See the whole context．

кal aùtós］＇and He，＇repeated from the preceding verse，to emphasize the identity of the Person who unites in Himself these prerogatires：see on ver． 17 ，and comp．ver． 18 av̉rós，ver． $198 \iota^{2}$ aúroú．The Creator of the World is also the Head of the Church． There is no blind ignorance，no im－ perfect sympathy，no latent conflict，in the relation of the demiurgic power to the Gospel dispensation，as the heretical teachers were disposed con－ sciously or unconsciously to assume （see above，p．IOI sq．，p．rio sq．），but an absolute unity of origin．
$\dot{\eta}^{\prime} \kappa \in \phi a \lambda$＇］＇the head，＇the inspiring， ruling，guiding，combining，sustainiug power，the mainspring of its activity， the centre of its unity，and the seat of its life．In his earlier epistles the relations of the Ohurch to Christ are described under the same image（ 1 Cor．xii．12－27；comp．vi．15，x．17， Rom．xii． 4 sq. ）；but the Apostle there takes as his starting－point the various functions of the members，and not，as in these later epistles，the originating and controling power of the Head．Comp．i．24，ii．I9，Eph． i． 22 sq ．，ii． 16 ，iv． $4,12,15 \mathrm{sq}$ ．，v． $23+30$ ．

गोs éкк入ךणias］in apposition with то̂̂ $\sigma \omega \dot{\mu} \mu$ атоs：comp．i． 24 тои̃ $\sigma \omega_{\mu} \mu$ atos

a＇$\left.\rho \times{ }^{\prime}{ }^{\prime}\right]$＇the arigin，the beginning．＇ The term is here applied to the In－ carnate Christ in relation to the Church，because it is applicable to the Eternal Word in relation to the Universe，Rev．iii．i4 $\dot{\eta} \dot{\alpha} \rho \chi \chi \dot{\eta} \tau \hat{\eta} s$ ктi－ бє由ss $\tau 0 \bar{u}$ Өєoũ．The parallelism of the two relations is kept in view through－ out．The word $\dot{a} \rho \chi \dot{\eta}$ here inpolves two ideas：（i）Priority in time；Christ was the first－fruits of the dead， $\boldsymbol{a} \pi r a \rho \chi$＇ （1 Cor．xv．20，23）：（2）Originating power；Christ was also the source of comp．Acts v． 3 I ，Heb．ii．io．He is not merely the principium princi－ piatum but the principium princi－ pians（see Trench Epistles to the Seven Churches p． 183 sq ．）．He rose first from the dead，that others might rise through Him．

The word à $\rho \chi \dot{\eta}$ ，like п $\rho$ юिtos（see the note on Phil．i．5），being absolute in itself，does not require the definite article．Indeed the article is most commonly omitted where $\dot{\alpha} \rho \boldsymbol{\chi} \dot{\eta}$ occurs as a predicate，as will appear from several examples to be gathered from the extracts in Plut．Mor．p． 875 sq ．， Stob．Ecl．Phys．i．ro．r2sq．Comp．also $\Delta$ ristot．Met．x．7，p．1064，тò $\theta_{\text {cion．．．}}$ in Stob．Ecl．Phys．i．2． 39 aưtòs $\gamma$ à $\rho$ ［ $\theta$ còs］à $\rho \chi$ à кaì mpâtoy，Tatian．ad

 Alex．Strom．iv．25，p．638，$\dot{\text { é }}$ Өєòs $8 \grave{\epsilon}$
 лопттько́s，Method．de Creal． 3 （p．100，
 $\gamma \grave{\eta} \nu \ldots \dot{\eta} \gamma \hat{\eta}$ т̀̀̀ $\Theta \epsilon$ óv，pseudo－Dionys．

The text is read with the definite article，$\eta \dot{\eta} \dot{a} \rho \chi^{\dot{\eta}}$ ，in one or two excel－ lent authorities at least；but the ob－ vious motive which would lead a scribe to aim at greatcr distinctness renders the reading suspicious．
$\pi \rho \omega \tau$ о́токоs］Comp．Rev．i． 5 ó $\pi \rho \omega-$
 $\beta a \sigma \iota \lambda \epsilon \omega \nu$ rìs $\gamma \hat{\eta} s$ ．His resurrection from the dead is His title to the headship of the Church；for＇the power of His resurrection＇（Phil．iii． 10 ）is the life of the Church．Such passages as Gen．xlix．3，Deut．xxi．17， where the $\pi \rho \omega$ тóroxos is called d́ $\rho \chi \dot{\eta}$ téк $\kappa \omega$ ，and superior privileges are claimed for him as such，must neces－ sarily be only very faint and partial illustrations of the connexion between ${ }^{\alpha} \rho \chi \dot{\eta}$ and $\pi \rho \omega$ о́токоs here，where the subject－matter and the whole context point to a fuller meaning of the words.

 here correspond to $\pi \rho \omega$ тóroкos $\pi$ áoŋs кrioces ver. 15 , su that the parallelism between Christ's relations to the Universe and to the Charch is thus emphasized.
ìva yévŋтac к.т.入.] As He is first with respect to the Universe, so it was ordained that He should become first with respect to the Church as woll. Tho үє́ $\nu \eta \tau a$, here answers in a manner to the $\bar{\epsilon} \sigma \tau \iota \nu$ of ver. 17. Thus évtiv and yévoftae are contrasted as the absolute being and the historical manifestation. The relation between Christ's headship of the Universe by virtue of His Eternal Godhead and His headship of the Church by virtue of His Incarnation and I'assion and Resurrection is somewhat similarly represented in Phil. ii.

 $\psi \omega \sigma \epsilon \nu$ к.т. $\lambda$.
$\left.\hat{\epsilon}^{\prime} \nu \pi \bar{a} \sigma \iota \nu\right]$ 'in all things,' not in the Universe only but in the Church also. Kal quap, writes Theodoret, ws Gєós, $\pi \rho \grave{̀} \pi \dot{\alpha} \nu \tau \omega \nu \quad$ éari каl $\sigma \grave{\nu} \nu \tau \hat{\varphi} \pi a \tau \rho i$

 Thus $\dot{\epsilon} \nu \pi$ ẫ $\sigma \nu$ is neuter and not masculine, as it is sometimes taken. Either construction is grammatically correct, but the context points to the former interpretation here; and this is the common use of $\hat{\epsilon} \nu \pi \hat{a} \sigma \iota \nu$, e.g. iii. 11, Eph. i. 23, Phil. iv. 12. For the neuter compare Plut. Mor. p. 9 $\pi \rho \omega \tau \epsilon \hat{v} \sigma a l$. On the other hand in. [Demosth.] Amat. p. 1416 крárıatav shows that ä $\bar{\pi} a \sigma t$ is masculine.
av́rós] 'He Himself'; see the note on kal aủròs above.

19, 20. 'And this absolute supremacy is His, becanse it was the Father's good pleasure that in Him all the plenitude of Deity should have its home; because He willed through Iim to reconcile the Universe once more to Himself. It was God's purpose to effect peace and harmony through the blood of Christ's cross, and so to restore all things, whatsoever and wheresoever they be, whether on the earth or in the heavens.'
 indwelling of the Godhead explains the headship of the Church, not less than the headship of the Universe. The resurrection of Christ, whereby He became the apд̀ of the Ohurch, was the result of aud the testimony to tive being understood; see Winer § lviii. p. 655 sq., § lxiv. p. 735 sq.; comp. James i. 12 (the right reading), iv. 6. Here the omission is the more $\theta \bar{\epsilon} \lambda \eta \mu a$, are used absolutely of God's Өрш́тоиs єídokias (or єidokía), Phil. ii.

 note on Clem. Rom. § 2. For the expression generally comp. 2 Mace, xiv.

 ulternative is to consider $\pi \hat{\alpha} \nu \tau \dot{\partial} \pi \lambda \dot{\eta}-$ $\rho \omega \mu a$ personified as the nominative; but it is difficult to conceive St Paul so speaking, more especially as with $\epsilon \dot{\text { cócón }} \boldsymbol{\sigma} \boldsymbol{\epsilon} \boldsymbol{y}$ personification would suggest personality. The $\pi \lambda \dot{\eta} \rho \omega \mu a$ indeed is personified in Clem. Alex. Exc. Theod. 43 (р. 979) ovpavévavtos каì то̂́ $\kappa \lambda \eta \rho \omega \dot{\mu}$ атоs, and in Iren. i. 2.

 тarépa]; but the phraseology of the Valentinians，to which these passages refer，cannot be taken as an indica－ tion of St Paul＇s usage，since their view of the $\pi \lambda \dot{\eta} \rho \omega \mu \pi$ was wholly different． A third interpretation is found in Tertullian adv．Marc．v．19，who trans－ lates $\boldsymbol{\epsilon} \nu$ avirê in semetipso，taking $\dot{o}$ Xpıaròs as the nominative to $\epsilon v^{\prime} \delta \delta_{\mathrm{ok}} \boldsymbol{\eta}$－ $\sigma \epsilon y$ ：and this construction is followed by some modern critics．But，though grammatically possible，it confuses the theology of the passage hope－ lessly．

тò $\pi \lambda \eta$＇p $\omega \mu a$ ］＇the plenitude，＇a re－ cognised technical term in theology， denoting the totality of the Divine powers and attributes；comp．ii． 9 ． See the detached note on $\pi \lambda \dot{\eta} \rho \omega \mu$ ． On the relation of this statement to the speculations of the false teach－ crs at Colossæ see the introduction， pp．102，112．Anotherinterpretation which explains $\tau \grave{o} \pi \lambda \dot{\eta} \rho \omega \mu a$ as refer－ ring to the Church（comp．Ephes．i． 22），though adopted by several fathers， is unsuited to the context and has nothing to recommend it．

катокк̂ŋбal］＇should have its per－ manent abode．The word occurs again in the same connexion，ii．9．The false teachers probably，like their later counterparts，maintained only a partial and transient connexion of the $\pi \lambda \eta \dot{p} \rho \mu a$ with the Lord．Hence St laul declares in these two passages that it is not a rapockía but a кarol－ кía．The two words katookeiv，mapot－ keì，occur in the dxX as the common renderings of $2 \times{ }^{\prime}$ and respect－ ively，and are distinguished as the permanent and the transitory；e．g． a บ̇oû èv रin Xavaán（comp．Hos．x．5）， Philo Sacr．Ab．et Ca．1o（I．p．170 M）ó ooфia，ov̉ катаккєi，Greg．Naz．Orat． xiv（I．p． 27 I ed．Caillau）rís rì кáto кiav кai kavookiav；comp．Orat．vii

（I．p．200）．See also the notes on Ephes．ii．I9，and on Clem．Rom．I．

20．The false teachers aimed at effecting a partial reconciliation be－ tween God and man through the in－ terposition of angelic mediators．The Apostle speaks of an absolute and complete reconciliation of universal nature to God，effected through the mediation of the Incarnate Word． Their mediators were ineffective，be－ cause they were neither human nor divine．The true mediator must bo both human and divine．It was necessary that in Him all the pleni－ tude of the Godhead should dwell． It was necessary also that He should be born into the world and should suffer as a man．

סi＇av่тỗ］i．e．тô̂ Xplatov̂，as ap－
 and the following sià rov̂ aïpatos тoû aтavpav̀ aủroû，ठ̀＇av่тoû．This expression $\delta c^{\prime}$ aùzov̂ has been already applied to the Preincarnate Word in relation to the Universe（ver，16）；it is now used of the Incarnate Word in relation to the Church．
 The personal pronoun aitón，instead of the reflexive éauróy，is no real ob－ stacle to this way of connecting the words（see the next note）．The al－ ternative would be to talke $\pi \dot{o} \pi \lambda \eta^{\prime}$－ $\rho \omega \mu a$ as governing ддлокатаддд́gau，but this mode of expression is harsh and improbable．

The same double compound inакат－ ad入á $\sigma \sigma \epsilon \iota \nu$ is used below，ver． 21 and Ephes．ii．16，in place of the usual кaт－ a入入ácotcv．It may be compared with àmокатáбтабts，Acts iii．2I．Ter－ tullian，arguing against the dualism of Marcion who maintained an anta－ gonism between the demiurge and the Christ，lays stress on the compound， adv．Marc．v． 19 ＇conciliari extraneo pussent，reconciliari vero non alii quam suo．＇The word àzoкata入入á $\sigma$－

$\alpha \nu ं \tau o ́ v, ~ \epsilon i \rho \eta \nu o \pi o \iota \eta ं \sigma a s ~ o ̂ ̀ a ̀ ~ \tau o u ̂ ~ \alpha i \mu \alpha \tau o s ~ \tau o u ̂ ~ \sigma \tau \alpha \nu \rho o u ̂ ~$

here and in Ephes. ii. 16, implying a restitution to a state from which they had fallen, or which was potentially theirs, or for which they were destined. Similarly St Augustine on Gal. iv. 5 remarks that the word used of the viofiraia is not accipere ( $\lambda a \mu \beta a ́ v e \iota \nu)$ bat recipere (àmoдацßáveเข). See the note there.
rà $\pi$ ávta] The whole universe of things, material as well as spiritual, shall be restored to harmony with God. How far this restoration of universal nature may be subjective, as involved in the changed perceptions of man thus brought into harmony with God, and how far it may have an objective and independent existence, it were vain to speculate.
cis aùzóv] ' to Him,' i.e. 'to Himself.' The reconciliation is always represented as made to the Father. The reconciler is sometimes the Father Himself ( 2 Cor. v. I8, 19 éx rov̂ ката入入áббшע $\dot{\epsilon} a u \tau \hat{q})$, sometimes the Son (Ephes. ii. r6: comp. Rom. v. io, I I). Excellent reasons are given (Bleek Hebr. 11. p. 69, A. Buttmann Gramm. p. 97) for supposing that the rellexive pronoun éauroú etc. is never contracted into aúroû etc. in the Greek Testament. But at the same time it is quite clear that the oblique cases of the personal pronoun avirós are there used very widely, and in cases where we should commonly find the reflexive pronoun in classical authors:

 ס̀à 'Iŋqoô Xolotồ eis aútóy. See also the instances given in A. Buttmann p. 98. It would seem indoed that aüroû cte. may be used for éavtoû etc. in almost every connexion, except where it is the direct object of the verb.
 the lxx, Prov. x. ro, and in Hermes in Stob. Ecl. Phys. xli. 45. The substantive cipquotootós (see Matt. v. 9) is found several times in classical writers.
$\delta i$ aviovi] The external authority for and against these words is nearly evenly balanced: bat there would obviously be a tendency to reject them as superfluous. They are a resumption of the previous $8 t^{3}$ avirov. For other examples see ii. 13 i $\mu a \bar{s}$, Rom. viii. 23 kai à̇toi, Gal. ii. 15,16 toútov $\chi$ á $\rho \iota \nu$, where words are similarly repeated for the sake of emphasis or distinctness. In 2 Cor. xii. 7 there is a repetition of iva $\mu \dot{\eta}$ virєpaip $\omega \mu a \tau_{,}$ where again it is omitted in several excellent authorities.

21-23. 'And ye too-re Gentilesare included in the terms of this peace. In times past ye had estranged yourselves from God. Your hearts were hostile to Him, while ye lived on in your evil deeds. But now, in Christ's body, in Christ's flesh which died on the Cross for your atonement, ye are reconciled to Him again. He will present you a living sacrifice, an acceptable offering unto Himself, free from blemish and free even from censure, that ye may stand the piercing glance of Him whose scrutiny no defect can escape. But this can only be, if ye remain true to your old allegiance, if ye hold fast (as I trust ye are holding fast) by the teaching of Epaphras, if the edifice of your faith is built on solid foundations and not reared carelessly on the sands, if ye suffer not yourselves to be shifted or shaken but rest firmly on the hope which ye have found in the Gospel－the one universal unchange－ able Gospel，which was proclaimed to every creature under heaven，of which I Paul，unworthy as I am，was called to be a minister．＇

21．ณ่ $\pi \eta \lambda \lambda$ от $\rho t \omega \mu$ е́vovs］＇estranged，＇ not ${ }^{2} \lambda \lambda o t p i o v s, ~ ' s t r a n g e r s ' ; ~ c o m p . ~$ Ephes．ii．12，iv．I8．See the note on äлоката入入́́gal，ver． 20.
exdpous］＇hastile to God，＇as the ＇hateful to God，＇as it is taken by some．The active rather than the passive sense of ${ }^{\boldsymbol{\epsilon}} \boldsymbol{X} \theta$ ooús is required by the context，which（as commonly in the New Testament）speaks of the sinner as reconciled to God，not of God as reconciled to the sinner：comp．

 of man，not the mind of God，which must undergo a change，that a re－ union may be effected．
Tit davoia］＇in your mind，intent．＇ For the dative of the part affected compare Ephes．iv． 18 ধ́rког $\omega \mu$ е́vo $\tau \hat{\eta}$ Sıavoía，Luke i． 51 ímepøфánous Sıapoíg карঠ̊ías au̇tढ̄̀．So карঠía，карঠíats， Matt．v．8，xi．29，Acts vii．51， 2 Cor． ix．7，I Thess．ii．17；$\phi \rho \in \sigma i y_{,} 1$ Cor． xiv． 20.
iv rois ${ }^{\text {¢p }}$ pyous к．r．${ }^{2}$ ．］＇in the midst of，in the performance of your wicked works＇；the same use of the preposi－ tion as e．g．ii． 23 ，iv． 2.
$\nu_{v o i}$ ］Here，as frequently，vôp （vvit）admits an aorist，because it de－ notes not＇at the present moment；＇ but＇in the present dispensation，the present order of things＇：comp．e．g． ver．26，Rom．v．11，vii．6，xi．30，31， xvi．26，Ephes．ii 13，iii．5， 2 Tim．i． 10， 1 Pet．i．10，ii．10，25．In all these passages there is a direct con－ trast between the old dispensation and the new，more especially as af－ fecting the relation of the Gentiles to God．The aorist is found also in Classical writers，where a similar con－ trast is iuvolved；e．g．Plato Symp．

 той $\theta \epsilon o \hat{v}$, Isæus de Cleon．her． 20 то́тє

dлокатŋд入áqŋтє］The reasons for preferring this reading，though the direct authority for it is so slight，are given in the detached note on the various readings．But，whether áno－ ferred，the construction requires ex－ planation．If dлокат $\dot{\lambda} \lambda \lambda a \xi \in \nu$ be a－ dopted，it is perhaps best to treat of as intruducing the apodosis，the foregoing participial clanse serving as the protasis：＇And you，though yewere once estranged．．．yet now hath he reconciled，＇in which case the first $\dot{\boldsymbol{u} \mu a ̈ s}$ will be governed directly by àmo－ кarí $\lambda \lambda a \xi \in \nu ;$ see Winer Gramm．§ liii． p．553．If this construction be adopted，
 sult of d $\pi$ окаrin $\lambda \lambda a \xi \in \nu$ ，＇so as to pre－ sent you＇；but ó $\theta$ còs will still be the nominative to a drokarj $\lambda \lambda a \xi \in \nu$ as in 2 Cor．v．19．If on the other hand direct indicative clause substituted for the more regular participial form of greater emphasis：see the note on $\nu \in \rho \dot{\theta} \theta_{\eta}$ ．In this case $\left.\pi a \rho \alpha \sigma r \eta\right) \sigma a t$ will к．r．．．，the second $\dot{v} \mu \hat{\alpha} s$ being a repe－ tition of the first；＇$A$ nd you who once were estranged．．．but now ye have been reconciled．．．to present you，I say，holy and without blemish．＇For the repetition of $\dot{v} \mu \hat{a} s$ ，which was needed to disentangle the construction, see the note on $\delta i^{2}$ avirov ver. 20.

22. भ̂̂s $\sigma a p \times o ̀ s a u ̉ r o v ̂] ~ I t ~ h a s ~ b e e n ~ s u p-~$ posed that St Paul added these words, which are evidently emphatic, with a polemical aim either; (I) To combat docetism. Of this form of error however there is no direct evidence till a somewhat later date: or (2) To combat a false spiritualism which took offence at the doctrine of an atoning sacrifice. But for this purpose they would not have been adequate, becanse not explicit enough. It seems simpler therefore to suppose that they were added for the sake of greater clearness, to distinguish the natural body of Christ intended here from the mystical body mentioned just above, ver. 18. Similarly in Ephes. ii. 14 év $\tau \hat{\eta}$ rapki aviroû is used rather than occurs in the context (ver. 16) of Christ's mystical body. The same expression, тò $\sigma \hat{\omega} \mu a$ тîs $\sigma a \rho \kappa o ́ s$, which we have here, occurs also below, ii. rI, but with a different emphasis and meaning. There the emphasis is on тò $\sigma \hat{\omega} \mu a$, the contrast lying between the whole body and a single member (see the note); whereas here rifs vapcòs is the emphatic part of the expression, the antithesis being between the material and the spiritual. Compare also Ecclus. xxiii. 16 ă $\nu \theta \rho \omega \pi о s$

Marcion omitted $\tau \hat{\eta} s$ бapкòs as inconsistent with his views, and explained $\epsilon^{\prime} \nu$ т $\hat{\varphi}$ бஸ́patı to mean the Church. Hence the comment of Tertullian adv. Marc. v. 19, 'utique in eo corpore, in quo mori potuit per carnem, mortuus est, non per ecclesiam sed propter ecclesiam, corpus commutando pro corpore, carnale pro spiritali.'
$\pi a \rho a \sigma r \hat{\eta} \sigma a l]$ If the construction which I have adopted be correct, this is said of God Himself, as in 2 Cor.

 $\sigma \epsilon \iota ~ \sigma \dot{̀} \nu \dot{v} \mu \bar{\imath} \nu$. This construction seems in all respects preferable to conneet-
 $\tau \eta \lambda \lambda \dot{a} \eta \eta \tau$ and interpreting the words, ' Ye have been reconciled so that ye should present yourselves ( $\dot{v} \mu \mathrm{a} \mathrm{s}$ )...before Him.' This latter interpretation without a government, and it gives to the second vipâs a reflexive señe (as if ípas avirov̀s or éautoús), which is at least harsh.
à $\omega^{\prime} \mu$ оvs] 'without blemish,' rather than 'without blame,' in the language of the New Testament; see the note on Ephes. i. 4. It is a sacrificial word, like $\tau \in \lambda \epsilon$ os, $\delta \lambda$ óк $\lambda \eta \rho o s$, etc. The verb тapıттávaı also is used of presenting a sacrifice in Rom. xii. inapa $\sigma \tau \hat{\eta} \sigma a \iota$ к.т.ג., Lev. xvi. 7 (ч. l.): comp. Luke ii. 2.
 $\mu o v s$, 'in whom not only no blemish is found, but against whom no charge is brought': comp. I Tim. vi. 14 äa $\sigma \pi=$ $\lambda o \nu, a ̀ \nu \epsilon \pi i \lambda \eta \mu \pi \tau o v$. The word à ${ }^{\prime} \dot{\gamma} \gamma-$ $\kappa \lambda \eta$ oos occurs again in 1 Cor. i. 8, I Tim. iii. 10 , Tit. i. 6, 7.
 'Himself,' as in the parallel passage, Ephes. i. 4; if the construction here adopted be correct. For this use of the personal pronoun instead of the reflexive see the note on eis aviód, ver. 20. But does кatevámtov aùzṑ refer to God's future judgment or His present approbation? The latter seems more probable, both because the expression certainly has this meaning in the parallel passage, Ephes.

karévaptı, ete., are commonly so used; e.g. Rom. xiv. 22, 1 Cor. i. 29, 2 Cor. ii. 17, iv. 2, vii. 12, xii. 19, etc. On the other hand, where the future judgment is intended, a different expression is found, 2 Cor. $\mathbf{v}$.
 Thus God is here regarded, not as the judge who tries the accused, but as the $\mu \omega \mu о \sigma$ ко́tos who examines the victims (Polyc. Phil. 4, see the note on Ephes. i. 4). Compare Heb. iv. 12, 13, for a closely allied metaphor. The though perhaps referring to final approval, is too different in expression to infuence the interpretation of St Paul's language here.

23. $\epsilon i l j \epsilon$ On the force of these particles see Gal. iii. 4 They express a pure hypothesis in themselves, but the indicative mood following converts the hypothesis into a hope.

єंтин́vєтє] 'ye abide by, ye adhere to,' with a dative; the common construction of émıие́yév in St Paul: see the note on Phil. i, 24 . In this connexion tin míatel is perhaps 'your faith,' rather than 'the faith.'
 foundation and so firm'; not like the house of the foolish man in the parable who built $\chi \omega \rho{ }^{\omega}{ }^{\prime} \theta_{\epsilon} \mu_{\epsilon} \lambda$ iov, Luke Ephes. iii. I7. The consequence of $\tau \epsilon-$

 ¿́dpaíos, é $\delta \rho a ́ \zeta a$, etc., are not uncommonly applied to buildings, e.g. éppai$\omega \mu a$ I Tim. iii. 15. Comp. Ign. Ephes.

$\mu$ خो $\left.\mu \epsilon \tau a \kappa \iota \nu \circ \hat{v}_{\mu \in \nu o l}\right]$ 'not constantly shifting,' a present tense; the same ides as expaiot expressed from the negrative side, as in 1 Cor. xv. 58 \& $\delta \rho a \hat{o}$
 'firmi in fide et immutabiles.'
Tins èntidos к.r.入.] 'the hope held ing a subjective genitive, as in Ephes.
 iv. 4).
èváán кríct] 'among every creature,' in fulfilment of the Lord's last ever the definitive article, though found in the received text, ${ }^{\boldsymbol{\epsilon}} \boldsymbol{\eta} \pi \dot{a} \sigma \eta$ rin ктíбє!, must be omitted in accordance with the best authorities. For the meanings of $\pi \hat{a} \sigma a$ ктíts, $\pi \hat{a} \sigma a \quad \dot{\eta}$ кri$\sigma t s$, see the note on ver. 15. The expression $\pi$ ă $\sigma a \kappa \tau i \sigma$ us must not be limited to man. The statement is given in the broadest form, all creation animate and inanimate being included, as in Rev. v. I3 $\pi a ̂ \nu ~ k t i ́ \sigma \mu a . . . к a i ̀ ~ \tau a ̀ ~ e ̂ ̀ ~ a v ̉-~-~$

 the hyperbole $\epsilon \dot{\prime} \nu \pi \dot{\alpha} \sigma \eta$ ктícel compare I Thess. i. 8 є̀ $\nu \pi \nu \tau i$ то́ $\pi \varphi$. To demand statistical exactness in such a context would be to require what is never required in similar cases. The motive of the Apostle here is at once to emphasize the universality of the genuine Gospel, which has been offered without reserve to all alike, and to appeal to its publicity, as the credential and guarantee of its truth : see the notes on ver. 6 ย̀v $\pi a \nu \tau i ̀ \omega \hat{\omega} \kappa \dot{\sigma} \sigma \mu \varrho$ and on ver. $28 \pi a ́ \nu \tau a \not a \not \partial \theta \rho \omega \pi \sigma \nu$.
 Paul introduce this mention of himself so abruptly? His motive can hardly be the assertion of his Apostolic authority, for it does not appear that this was questioned; otherwise he would have declared his commission in stronger terms. We can only answer that impressed with the dignity of his office, as involving the offer of grace to the Gentiles, he cannot refrain from maguifying it. At the same time this mention cuables him to link himself in bonds of closer sympathy with the Colossians, and he passes on at once to his relations with them: comp. Ephes. iii. 2-9, I Tim. i. II sq. , in which latter passage the introduction of his own name is equally abrupt.

' $\gamma \boldsymbol{\omega}$ ले IIavidos] i.e. " weak and unworthy as I am ${ }^{\prime}$ : comp. Fphes. iii. 8 é $\mu u \mathrm{l}$

$24-27$. 'Now when I see the full extent of God's mercy, now when I ponder over His mighty work of reconciliation, I cannot choose but rejoice in my sufferings. Yes, I Paul the persecutor, I Paul the feeble and sinful, am permitted to supplementI do not shrink from the word-to supplement the afflictions of Christ. Despite all that He underwent, He the Master has left something still for me the servant to undergo. And so my flesh is privileged to suffer for His body-His spiritual body, the Church. I was appointed a minister of the Church, a steward in God's household, for this very purpose, that I might administer my office on your behalf, might dispeuse to you Gentiles the stores which His bountifal grace has provided. Thus I was charged to preach without reserve the whole Gospel of God, to proclaim the great ruystery which had remained a secret through all the ages and all the generations from the begiuning, but which now in these last times was revealed to His holy people. For such was His good pleasure. God willed to make known to them, in all its inexhaustible wealth thas displayed through the call of the Gentiles, the glorious revelation of this mystery-Christ not the Saviour of the Jews only, but Christ dwelling in $y o u$, Christ become to you the hope of glory.'
24. Nîv $\left.\chi^{a i} \rho \omega\right]$ A sudden outburst of thankggiving, that be, who was less than the least, who was not worthy to be called an Apostle, should be allowed to share and even to supplement the sufferings of Christ. The relative ös, which is found in some authorities, is doubtless the repetition of the final syllable of d'cíovos; but its insertion would be assisted by the anxiety of scribes to supply a conneeting link between the sentences. The genuine reading is more characteristic of $\mathbf{S t}$ Paul. The abruptness, which digpenses with a connecting particle, has also the common text inserts a link of pare also 2 Cor. vii. 9 ขū̀ $\chi^{\text {aip }} \boldsymbol{\rho}$, ov̉ $\chi$ oтı к.т.ג., where again there is no connecting particle.

The thought underlying $\nu$ ûv seems to be this: 'If ever I bave been disposed to repine at my lot, if ever I have felt my cross almost too heavy to bear, yet now-now, when I contemplate the lavish wealth of God's mercynow when I see all the glory of bearing a part in this magnificent workmy sorrow is turned to joy.'
àvтavaт $\lambda \eta \rho \hat{\omega}$ ] ' Ifll up on my part,' 'I supplement.' The single compound
 I Cor. xiv. 16, xvi. 17, Gal. vi. 2); another double compound $\pi \rho \circ \sigma a v a \pi \lambda \eta$ pô̂̀ twice ( 2 Cor. ix. 12, xi. 9 ; comp.
 only here in the uxx or New Testament. For this verb compare De-

 $\mu \epsilon ́ \rho \eta$ катà $\delta \dot{\sigma} \delta \epsilon \kappa a \quad \ddot{a} \nu \delta \rho a s, ~ a ̀ \nu \tau a \nu a \pi \lambda \eta-$
 тò̀s àmopatárous (where tov̀s à $\pi$ оршtárous should be taken as the subject te à áavam $\eta \rho o \mathrm{u} y$ ras), Dion Cass. xliv. 48 $\ddot{a} \lambda \lambda \omega \nu \quad \sigma \nu \nu \tau \epsilon \lambda \epsilon i ́ a s ~ a ̀ \nu \tau a \nu a \pi \lambda \eta \rho \omega \theta \hat{\eta}$, Clem. Alex. Strom. vii. i2 p. 878 ovi-
 dı $\alpha \nu a \pi \lambda \eta \rho a \hat{1}$, Apollon. Constr. Or. i. 3
$\dot{\alpha} \nu \tau \alpha \nu \alpha \pi \lambda \eta \rho \hat{\omega} \tau \alpha \dot{v} \sigma \tau \epsilon \rho \eta \eta^{\prime} \mu \alpha \tau \alpha \tau \hat{\nu} \nu \quad \theta \lambda i ́ \psi \epsilon \omega \nu \tau o \hat{v} \mathrm{X} \rho \iota-$
(p. 13 sq.$) \dot{\eta} \dot{a} \nu \tau \omega \nu v \mu i a \dot{a} \nu \tau \tau a \nu a \pi \lambda \eta-$

 Comp. vi. 9 (I. p. 435 ed. Halma) $\epsilon_{\pi} \pi \epsilon i$

 yam $\lambda$ д $\rho \omega \sigma$ ts occurs in Diog. Laert. x. 48. So too àvтavat $\lambda \dot{\eta} \theta \epsilon \epsilon \nu$ Xen. Hell.

 àravıooû̀ Themist. Paraphr. Arist.
 тоv $\mu \epsilon \tau a \beta a \lambda \lambda \epsilon \ell$ dé $\rho a$ єis vi $\delta \omega \rho$ кai à»тауібшца Joseph. Ant. xviii. 9. 7. The meaning of àvet in this compound will be plain from the passages quoted. It signifies that the supply comes from an opposite quarter to the deficiency. This idea is more or less definitely expressed in the context of all the passages, in the words which are spaced. The force of $\dot{\alpha} \nu \tau a \nu a \pi \lambda \eta \rho o \hat{\nu}$ in St Paul is often explained as denoting simply that the supply corresponds in extent to the deficiency. This interpretation practically deprives à $\nu \tau i ́ i o f$ any meaning, for ávanत $\lambda \rho o \hat{\nu} \nu$ alone would denote as much. If indeed the supply had been the subject of the verb, and the sentence had run rà рпंната к.т.ג., this idea might perhaps be reached without sacrificing the sense of àvit ; but in such a passage as this, where one personal agent is mentioned in connexion with the supply and another in connexion with the deficiency, the one forming the subject and the other being involved in the object of the verb, the avri can only describe the antithesis of these personal agents. So interpreted, it is eminently expressive here. The point of the Apostle's boast is that Christ the sinless Master should have left something for Paul the unworthy servant to suffer. The right idea has been seized and is well expressed by Photius Amphil. 121 (I. p. 709 Migne) ov่ $\gamma \dot{a} \rho \dot{a} \pi \lambda \hat{\omega} s \quad \phi \eta \sigma \iota \nu$ ' $A \nu a \pi \lambda \eta \rho \hat{\omega}, \dot{a} \lambda \lambda \lambda^{\prime}$

 $\mu a \theta \eta \tau \eta{ }^{\prime} s$ к.т. $\lambda$. Similar in meaning, though not identical, is the expression in 2 Cor. i. 5, where the sufferings of Christ are said to 'overflow' ( $\left.\pi \epsilon \rho \iota \sigma \sigma \epsilon \varepsilon^{\prime} \epsilon t\right)$ upon the Apostle. The theological difficulty which this plain and natural interpretation of ajrava$\pi \lambda \eta p o u ̃ y$ is supposed to involve will be considered in the note on rây $\theta \lambda i \psi \epsilon \omega \nu$.
tà ívтєคウ́nata] 'the things lacking!' This same word vi $\sigma$ ć $\rho \eta \mu a$ 'deficiency' occurs with $\dot{\alpha} \nu a \pi \lambda \eta \rho o \hat{\nu} y$ I Cor. xvi. 17 , Phil. ii. 30 , and with $\pi \rho o r a v a-$ $\pi \lambda \eta \rho o u ̂ \nu 2$ Cor. ix. 12, xi. 9. Its direct opposite is $\pi \epsilon \rho i \sigma \sigma \epsilon \nu \mu a$ 'abundance, superlluity,' 2 Cor. viii 13, I4; comp. Luke $x$ xi. 4. Another interpretation, which makes votépqua an antithesis to $\pi \rho o \tau$ é $\rho \eta \mu a$, explaining it 'the later' as opposed to the earlier 'sufferings of Christ,' is neither supported by the usage of the word nor consistent with $\dot{\alpha} \nu \tau a \nu \alpha \pi \lambda \eta \rho \omega \hat{.}$ afflictions of Christ,' i.e. which Christ endured. This seems to be the only natural interpretation of the words. Others have explained them as meaning 'the afflictions imposed by Christ,' or 'the afflictions endured for Christ's sake,' or 'the afflictions which resemble those of Christ.' All such interpretations put a more or less forced meaning on the genitive. All alike ignore the meaning of ayri in $\dot{\alpha} \nu \tau a v a \pi \lambda \eta \rho \tilde{\omega}$. which points to a distinction of persons suffering. Others again suppose the words to describe St Paul's own afflictions regarded as Christ's, because Christ suffers in His suffering Church; e.g. Augustine in Psalm. cxlii. § 3 (IV. p. 1590) 'Patitur, inquit, adhuc Christus pressuram, non in carne sua in qua ascendit in cerlom, sed in carne mea qua adhuc laborat in terra,' quoting Gal. ii. 2o. This last is a very favourite explanation, and has much to recommend it. It cannot be charged with wresting the meaning of ai $\theta$ रi $\psi \in \iota \leq$ toû Xpıorov. Moreover it harmonizes with St Paul's mode of speaking elsewhere. But, like the others, it is open to the fatal objection that it empties the first pre-

 The central idea in this interpretation is the identification of the suffering Apostle with the suffering Christ, whereas ä aravan $\lambda \eta \rho \omega$ emphasizes the distinction between the two. It is therefore inconsistent with this context, however important may be the truth which it expresses.

The theological difficulty, which these and similar explanations are intended to remove, is imagimary and not real. There is a sense in which it is quite legitimate to speak of Christ's afflictions as incomplete, a sense in which they may be, and indeed must be, supplemented. For the sufferings of Christ may be considered from two different points of view. They are either satisfactorios or cedificatoric. They have their sacrificial efficacy, and they have their ministerial atility. (I) From the former point of view the Passion of Christ was the one full perfect and sufficient sacrifice, oblation, and satisfaction for the sins of the whole world. In this sense there could be no viбт $\epsilon \rho \eta \mu a$ of Christ's sufferings; for, Christ's sufferings being different in kind from those of His servants, the two are incommensurable. But in this sense the Apostle would surely have used some other expression such as toû otaupoû (i. 20, Eph. ii. 16 etc.), or toû $\operatorname{Gajárou}$ (i. 22, Rom. v. 10, Heb. ii. 14, etc.), but hardly т $\hat{\omega} \boldsymbol{\nu} \theta \lambda$ (廿eav. Indeed $\theta \lambda i \psi t s$, 'aflic-tion,' is not elsewhere applied in the New Testament in any sense to Christ's sufferings, and certainly would not suggest a sacrificial act. (2) From the latter point of view it is a simple matter of fact that the afflictions of every saint and martyr do supplement the afflictions of Christ. The Church is built up by repeated acts of self-denial in successive individuals and successive generations. They continue the work which Christ began. They bear their part in the sufferings of Christ ( 2 Cor. i. 7 would have been the last to say that they bear their part in the atoning sacrifice of Ohrist. This being so, St Paul does not mean to say that his own sufferings filled up all the $\mathfrak{v} \sigma-$ тep $\dot{\mu} \mu a \tau a$, but only that they went towards filling them up. The present tense à àravari $\eta \rho \omega \bar{\omega}$ denotes an inchoate, and not a complete act. These $\dot{v} \sigma r \leqslant \rho \eta{ }^{\prime} \mu a \tau a$ will never be fully supplemented, until the struggle of the Church with sin and unbelief is brought to a close.

Thus the idea of expiation or satisfaction is wholly absent from this passage; and with it is removed the twofold temptation which has beset theologians of opposite schooIs. (1) On the one hand Protestant commentators, rightly feeling that any interpretation which infringed the completeness of the work wrought by Christ's death must be wrong, because it would make St Paul contradict himself on a cardinal point of his teaching, have been tempted to wrest the sense of the words. They have emptied ávravan $\lambda \eta \rho \hat{\omega}$ of its proper force; or they have assigned a false meaning to vorteprpata; or they have attached a non-natural sense to the genitive rov̂ $\mathrm{X} p$ 的oû. (2) On the other hand Romanist commentators, while protesting (as they had a right to do) against these methods of interpretation, have fallen into the opposite error. They have found in this passage an assertion of the merits of the saints, and (as a necessary conseguence) of the doctrine of indulgences. They have not observed that, if the idea of vicarious satisfaction comes into the passage at all, the satisfaction of St Paul is represented here as the same in kind with the satisfaction of Christ, however different it may be in degree; and thus they have truly exposed themselves to the reproach which Estius indignantly repudiates on their behalf, 'quasi Christus non satis passus sit ad redemptionem nostram, ideoque supplemento martyrum opus habeat; quod impium est sentire, quodque Catholicos dicere non minus impie calumniantur hæretici.' It is no part of a commentator here to enquire generally whether the Roman doctrine of the satisfaction of the saints can in any way be reconciled with St Paul's doctrine of the satisfaction of Ohrist. It is sufficient to say that, so far as regards this particular passage, the Roman doctrine can only be imported into it at the cost of a contradiction to the Pauline doctrine. It is only fair to add however that Estius himself says, 'quae quidem doctrina, etsi Catholica et Apostolica sit, atque aliunde satis probetur, ex hoc tamen Apostoli loco nobis non videtur admodum solide statui posse.' But Roman Catholic commentators generally find this meaning in the text, as may be seen from the notes of a Lapide.

rô̂ $\sigma \dot{\mu} \mu a \tau o s$ aùroû] An antithesis of the Apostle's own flesh and Christ's body. This antithetical form of expression obliges St Paul to explain what he means by the body of Christ, Contrast the explanation in ver. 22 ev
 the note there.
25. Tク̀े oiкоуонiay к.т.入.] 'stevardship in the house of God.' The word oikovoцia seems to have two senses: (1) 'The actual administration of a household'; (z) 'The office of the ad. ministrator.' For the former meaning see the note on Ephes. i. Io; for the latter sense, which it has here, compare I Cor. ix. 17 oiкоронià $\pi \in \pi i-$ бтєvдa, Luke xvi. 2-4, Isaiah xxij. 19, 21. So the Apostles and ministers of the Church are called oiкоуо́дон, I Cor. iv. 1, 2, Tit. i 7 : comp. I Pet. iv. Io.
$\epsilon$ is $\hat{v} \mu \hat{n} s$ ] 'to youxard,' i.e 'for the benefit of you, the Geutiles'; eis бáy $\mu o c$, as in Ephes. iii. 2 тì oiкoyo-$\mu o s$ єis $\dot{v} \mu \mathrm{ã}$; comp. Rom. xv. 16 ícè

$\pi \lambda \eta \rho \bar{\omega} \sigma a]$ 'to fulfil,' i.e. 'to preach fully,' 'to give its complete development to ${ }^{7}$; as Rom. xv. 19 ఱัनтє $\mu \epsilon$

 tov Xpıorov. Thus 'the word of God' here is 'the Gospel,' as in most places (I Cor. xiv. 36, 2 Cor. ii. 17, iv. 2, etc), though not always (e.g. Rom. ix. 6), in St Paul, as also in the Acts. The other interpretation, 'to accomplish the promise of God,' though suggested by such passages as I Kings 2 Chron. xxxvi. $2 \mathrm{I} \pi \lambda \eta \rho \omega \theta$ ฑ̂̀aı $\lambda o ́ \gamma o \nu$ Kupiov, etc., is alien to the context here.
 only term borrowed from the ancient mysteries, which St Paul employs to describe the teaching of the Gospel

The word té $\lambda_{f t o v}$ just below，ver．28， seems to be an extension of the same metaphor．In Phil．iv． 12 again we i．I4 $\sigma \phi \rho \sigma i^{\prime} \zeta \varepsilon \sigma \theta a u$ is perhaps an image derived from the same source．So too the Ephesians are addressed as Hav̂̀ov $\sigma v \mu \mu \nu \dot{\sigma} \tau \tau a t$ in Ign．Ephes． 12. The Christian teacher is thus regarded as a iepoфártns（see Epict．iii．2I． I3 sq．）who initiates his disciples into the rites．There is this difference however；that，whereas the heathen mysteries were strictly confined to a narrow circle，the Christian mysteries are freely communicated to all．There is therefore an intentional paradox in the employment of the image by St Paul．See the notes on mávia äv $\partial \rho \omega$－ тоv ré入ctoy below．

Thus the idea of secresy or reserve disappears when $\mu v \sigma$ тinptov is adopted into the Christian vocabulary by St Paul：and the word signifies simply ＇a truth which was once hidden but now is revealed，＇＇a truth which with－ out special revelation would have been unknown．＇Of the nature of the truth itself the word says nothing．It may be transcendental，incomprehensible， mystical，mysterious，in the modern sense of the term（I Cor．xv．51，Eph． v．32）：but this idea is quite acciden－ tal，and must be gathered from the special circumstances of the case，for it cannot be inferred from the word itself．Hence $\mu$ varipion is almost universally found in connexion with words denoting revelation or publica－
 Rom．xvi．25，Ephes．iii．3，5， 2 Thess．
 9，iii．3，Io，vi．19；фavepoû̀ Col．iy．3， Rom，xyi．26，I Tim．iîi．16；גa入eîv iv． 3，I Cor．ii．7，xiv．2；$\lambda^{6}$＇$\epsilon \in \nu$ ，I Cor． xv． 5 I．

But the one special＇mystery＇which absorbs St Paul＇s thoughts in the Epistles to the Colossians and Ephe－ sians is the free admission of the Gentiles on equal terms to the pri－ rileges of the covenant．For this he is a prisoner ；this he is bound to proclaim fearlessly（iv．3，Ephes．vi． 19）；this，though hidden from all time， was communicated to him by a special revelation（Ephes．iii． 3 sq．）；in this had God most signally displayed the lavish wealth of His goodness（ver．27，ii． $2 \mathrm{sq} .$, Ephes．i． 6 sq ．，iii， 8 sq ．）．In one passage only throughout these two thing else，Ephes．7．32．The same idea of the $\mu v \sigma$ tíntov appears very prominently also in the thanksgiving （added apparently later than the rest of the letter）at the end of the Epistle to the Romans，xvi． 25 sq．$\mu v \sigma$ ornpiou．．．

$\dot{a} \pi \dot{o}$ t $\hat{\omega} \nu$ alćvivy к．т．入．］The pre－ position is doubtless tenporal here， being opposed to $\nu \bar{v} \nu$ ，as in the pa－ rallel passage，Ephes．iii．9：comp． píou रóyots aiwviots aegtyphévov，

 Өcos $\pi \rho \dot{d} \tau \hat{\omega} \nu$ aín $\nu \omega \nu$ ．So too $a^{\prime} \pi^{2}$ aimpas，$\Delta$ cts iii．21，xv．18，Ps．xcii．
 xiii． 35, xxv． 34 ，etc．

T $\hat{\omega} \nu \gamma \in \nu \epsilon \bar{\omega} \nu$ ］An aiciv is made up of many $\gamma \in \nu$ eai；comp．Ephes．iii．2I cis

 the Hebrew has the plural＇gene－ rations＇）．Hence the order here． Not only was this mystery unknown in remote periods of antiquity，but even in recent generations．It came upon the world as a sudden surprise． The moment of its revelation was the moment of its fulfilment．

27. ös ketiv.

v̂v dè к.т.ג.] An indicative clause is substituted for a participial, which would otherwise have been more natural, for the sake of emphasizing the statement; comp. ver. 22 vvil dè àroкату入入áymtє, andsee Winer§Ixiii.p.717.
27. गं $\theta \epsilon \lambda \eta \sigma \epsilon \nu$ ]' willed,'' was pleased.' It was God's grace: it was no merit of their own. See the note on i. I ס̀à $\theta \epsilon \lambda \dot{j} \mu a t a s$ Ө $\epsilon o \hat{v}$.

тò $\pi$ गोoûtos] The 'wealth of God,' as manifested in His dispensation of grace, is a prominent idea in these epistles: comp. ii. 2, Ephes. i. 7, 18, iii. 8, 16; comp. Rom. xi. 33. See above, p. 43 sq. St Paul uses the neuter and the masculine forms indifferently in these epistles (e.g. tò $\pi \lambda о u ̈$ тos Ephes. i 7 , ó $\pi \lambda o u ̈ \tau o s$ Elphes. i. 18), as in his other letters (e.g. тò $\pi \lambda o u ̂ t o s ~ 2 ~ C o r, ~ v i i i . ~ 2, ~ o ́ ~ \pi \lambda о и ̂ т a s ~ R o m . ~$ ix. 23). In most passages however there are various readings. On the see Winer \& ix. p. 76.
 manifestation.' This word in Hellenistic Greek is frequently used of a $\psi \in \nu$, Acts xxii. II roû фwtós, I Cor. xv. $4 \mathrm{I} \bar{\eta} \hat{i} \mathrm{ov}, \sigma \epsilon \lambda \eta \eta_{\nu \eta s, ~ e t c ., ~}^{2}$ Cor. iii. 7 is applied generally to a divine manifestation, even where there is no physical aecompaniment of light; and more especially to the revelation of God in Christ ( $e$. g. Joh. i. 14, 2 Cor. iv. 4, etc.). The expression $\pi$ גoûtos Tग̂s đóstrs occurs again, Rom. ix. 23, Ephes. i. 18, iii. 16. See above, ver. II with the note.
 among the Gentiles.' It was just here that this 'mystery,' this dispensation of grace, achiered its greatest triumphs and displayed its transcend-pots, writes Chrysostom, $\pi 0 \lambda \lambda \hat{\phi}$ dè ס́ága. Here too was its wealth; for it overflowed all barriers of caste or race. Judaism was 'beggarly' (Gal. iv. 9) in comparison, since its treasures sufficed only for a few.
ó $\in \sigma \tau \nu \nu]$ The antecedent is probably roû $\mu a \sigma \tau \eta \rho i o v ; ~ c o m p . ~ i i . ~ 2 ~ \tau o u ̂ ~$ та́лтєऽ к.т.д.
 i.e. 'you Gentiles.' Not Christ, but Christ given freely to the Gentiles, is the 'mystery' of which St Paul speaks; see the note on $\mu$ vorinpian above. Thus the various reading, is for ö, though highly supported, interferes with the sense. With Xpurios $\dot{\epsilon}^{\prime} \nu \dot{v} \mu \hat{\nu} \nu$ compare $\mu \epsilon \theta^{\prime} \dot{\eta} \mu \hat{\omega} \nu$ Өєós Matt. i. 23. It may be a question however, whether ${ }^{3} \boldsymbol{y}$ vipiv means 'within you' or 'among you.' The former is perhaps the more probable interpretation, as suggested by Rom. viii. 10 , 2 Cor. xiii. 5, Gal. iv. I9; comp.

$\dot{\eta} \in \lambda \pi i s]$ Comp. I Tim. i. 2; so $\boldsymbol{\eta}$
 11, Philad. 5 , etc., applied to our Lord.

28, 29. 'This Christ we, the Apostles and Evangelists, proclaim without distinction and without reserve. We know no restriction either of persons or of topics. We admonish every man and instruct every man. We initiate every man in all the mysteries of wisdom. It is our single aim to present every man fully and perfectly taught in Christ. For this end I train myself in the discipline of self-denial; for this end I commit myself to the arena of suffering and toil, putting forth in the conflict all that energy which He inspires, and which works in me so powerfully.'
28. yineis] 'we,' the preachers; the same opposition as in I Cor. iv. 8, 10,

ix. 11, 2 Cor. xiii. 5 sq., $\mathrm{J}^{2}$ Thess. ii. 13 sq., etc. The Apostle hastens, as usual, to speak of the part which he was privileged to bear in this glorions dispensation. He is constrained to magnify his office. See the next note, and comp. ver. 23.
 language at Thessalonica, Acts xvii. 3 Athens, Acts xvii 23 тоиิто $\bar{\epsilon} \gamma \dot{\omega}$ каsages, as here, emphasis is laid on the person of the preacher.
vovétoüvers] 'admonishing.' The two words vov $\theta$ ereì and dióávect present complementary aspects of the preacher's duty, and are related the one to the other, as $\mu$ нтívoca to tiofts, 'warning to repent, instructing in the faith.' For the relation of vovéceìv to $\mu \epsilon \tau \dot{d} v o l a$ see Plut. Mor. p. 68 ёеєєть in Plato Protag. 323 D, Legg. 845 B, Plut. Mor. p. 46 (comp. p. 39), Dion Chrys. Or. xxxiii. p. 369 ; the substantives $\delta \delta \delta a \chi \bar{\eta}$ and vou $\begin{gathered}\text { ét } \\ \text { ores }\end{gathered}$ in Plato Resp. 399 в. Similarly yoverreit and $\pi \epsilon i \theta_{e l y}$ occur together in Arist. Rhet. ii. 18. For the two functions of the preacher's office, corresponding respectively to the twu words, see St Paul's own language in peated for the sake of emphasizing the universality of the Gospel. This great truth, for which St Paul gave his life, was now again endungered by the doctrine of an intellectual exclasiveness taught by the Gnosticizers at Colossee, as before it had been ondangered by the dootrine of a ceremonial exclusiveness taught by the Judaizers in Galatia. See abore, pp. 77, 92, 98 sq. For the repetition of тívra compare especially I Cor. $\mathbf{x}$. 1 sq. , where $\pi \dot{a}$ artes is five times, and ib. xii. 29, 30 , where it is seven times repeated; see also Rom. ix. 6, 7, xi. 32, I Cor. xii. 13, xiii. 7, xiv. 31, etc. Transcribers have been offended at this characteristic repetition here, and consequently have omitted пázra äp$\theta_{\rho \omega \pi} \boldsymbol{\sigma}$ in one place or other.

 of a blind faith for the many, of a higher $\gamma \nu \bar{\omega} \boldsymbol{\sigma}$ ts for the few. St Paul declares that the fullest wisdom is offered to all alike. The character of the teaching is as free from restriction, as are the qualifications of the recipients. Comp. ii. 2, 3 rầ mhoûros tîs $\pi a \rho a \sigma \tau i \sigma \omega \mu \mu \mathrm{p}]$ See the note on ларабтїбаи, ver. 22.

 In both these passages the epithet redeas is probably a metaphor borrowed from the ancient mysteries, where it seems to have been applied to the fully instructed, as opposed to the norices: comp. Plato Phasdr.

 ầ $\epsilon$ \#̈ns, Plut. Fragm. de An. vi. 2 каi $\mu \epsilon \mu \nu \eta \mu \dot{\text { ivos }}$ (with the context), Hippol. 25, and Lobeek Aglaoph.p. 33 sq., p. 126 kq . Somewhat similarly in the Lxx, i Chron. xxp. 8 tedtiwy kai $\mu a \nu 6 a \nu o ́ v \tau \omega \nu$ stands for 'the teachers (or the wise) and the scholars.' So have the same metaphor. As an illustration it may be mentioned that Plato and Aristotle called the higher philosophy є́montıcóy, because those who have transcended the bounds фlas] vouljovet, Plat. Mor. 382 d, E. For other metaphorical expressions in St Paul, derived from the mysteries, see above on $\mu v \sigma \pi r^{\prime} p i a y$ ver. 26. Influenced probably by this heathen use of tedecos, the early Christians applied it to the baptized, as opposed to the catechumens: e.g. Justin Dial.

入outò̀ téneloy ốrta к.t.入.; and for later writers see Suicer Thes. s. vv. тє$\lambda \epsilon t o ́ \omega$, re $\lambda \epsilon i \omega \sigma t s$. At all events we may ascribe to its connexion with the mysteries the fact that it was adopted by Gnostics at a later date, and most probably by the Gnosticizers at this time, to distinguish the possessors of the higher $\gamma^{\nu \omega \omega \sigma \iota}$ from the vulgar herd of believers: see the passages quoted in the note on Phil. iii. 15 . While employing the favourite Gnostic term, the Apostle strikes at the root of the Gnostic doctrine. The langaage descriptive of the heathen mysteries is transferred by him to the Christian dispensation, that he may thus more effectively contrast the things signified. The true Gospel also has its mysteries, its hierophants, its initiation: but these are open to all alike. In Ohrist every believer is ti-
$\lambda e t o s$, for he has been admitted as $\dot{\varepsilon} \pi \dot{o} \pi \tau \eta s$ of its most profound, most awful, secrets. See again the note on à á $о$ крифоt, ii. 3.
 $\ddot{a} \nu \theta \rho \omega \pi o \nu ~ \tau \epsilon \lambda \epsilon c o \nu$, 'that I may initiate all mankind in the fulness of this mystery, "that I may preach the Gospel to all without reserve.' If St Paul had been content to preach an exclusive Gospel, he might have saved himself from more than half the troubles of his life.
кот $\iota \hat{\omega}]$ This word is used especially of the labour undergone by the athlete in his training, and therefore fitly introduces the metaphor of aro$\nu t$ ̧̛ó $\mu \mathrm{evas}$ : comp. I Tim. iv. Io eis tav̂- correct reading), and see the passages quoted on Phil. ii. 16.
a' $\gamma \omega \nu\left\langle\zeta^{\prime} \mu \epsilon \nu 0 s\right]$ 'contending in the lists,' the metaphor being continued comp. iv. 12. These words $\dot{d} \gamma \dot{\omega} y, \mathfrak{a} \gamma \omega$. $\left.\nu^{\prime} \dot{\prime}, \dot{a} \gamma \omega \nu^{\prime}\right\}_{\epsilon} \sigma \theta a t$, are only found in St Paul and the Pauline writings (Luke, Hebrews) in the New Testament. They occur in every group of St Paul's Epistles. The use here most resembles ivep $\left.\gamma^{\circ} \nu \mu \epsilon ́ \nu \eta \nu\right]$ Comp.Eph.iii. 20. For the difference between évepycív and द̇чepyeírdat see the note on Gal. v. 6.

II. I-3. 'I spoke of an arena and a conftict in deseribing my apostolic labours. The image was not lightly chosen. I would have youknow thatmy care is not eonfined to my own direct and personal disciples. I wish you to understand the magnitude of the struggle, which my anxiety for yon costs me-for you and for your neighbours of Laodicea, and for all who, like yourselves, have never met me face to face in the flesh. I am constantly wrestling in spirit, that the hearts of all such may be confirmed and strengthened in the faith；that they may be united in love；that they may attain to all the unspeakable wealth which comes from the firm conviction of an understanding mind， may be brought to the perfect know－ ledge of God＇s mystery，which is no－ thing else than Christ－Christ con－ taining in Himself all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge hidden away．＇

I．$\ominus_{e ́ \lambda}^{\lambda} \omega$ к．т．$\left.\lambda.\right]$ As in I Cor．xi． 3. The corresponding negative form，ov common expression in St Paul；Rom． i．13，xi． 25 ，I Cor．x．I，xii．I， 2 Cor． i．8，I Thess．iv． 13.
a $\gamma \bar{\omega} \nu a]$ The arena of the contest to verse refers may be either outward or inward．It will include the＇fightings without＇，as well as the＇fears within．＇ Here however the inward struggle， the wrostling in prayer，is the predo－ were exposed to the same doctrinal perils as the Colossians：see above， pp．2， 41 sq．The Hierapolitans are doubtless included in кal öбои к．r．入． （comp．iv．I3），but are not mentioned here by name，probably because they were less closely connected with Co－ losse（see iv． 15 sq ．），and perhaps also because the danger was less threaten－ ing there．

каі̀ ถ̈бok к．т．入．］＇and all who，like yourselves，have not seen，etc．＇；where the kail ${ }^{\circ} \sigma o c$ introduces the whole class to which the persons previously enu－ merated belong；so Acts iv．6＂Ayvas tat．Even a simple кai will sometimes introduce the general after the parti－ cular，e．g．Acts v． 29 ó Пét $\rho$ os кaì of каi roîs＂E入入 $\eta \sigma t$ ，etc．；see Kühner Gramm．§ 521，II．p．791．On the other hand кai $\begin{gathered}\sigma \sigma o \\ \text { ，occurring in an enume－}\end{gathered}$ ration，sometimes introducesadifferent class from those previously mentioned， as e．g．in Herod．vii．185．As a pure grammatical question therefore it is uncertain whether St Paul＇s language here implies his personal acquaintance with his correspondents or the con－ trary．But in all such cases the sense of the context must be our guide． In the present instance кai óvol is quite out of place，unless the Colos－ sians and Laodiceans also were per－ sonally unknown to the Apostle．There would be no meaning in singling out individuals who were known to him，and then mentioning compre－ hensively all who were unknown to him：see above，p．28，note 4．Hence we may infer from the expression here，that St Paul had never visited Colosse－an inference which has been already shown（p． 23 sq．）to accord both with the incidental language of this epistle elsewhere and with the direct historical narrative of the Acts． éspaкay］For this ending of the 3rd pers．plur．perfect in－av see Winer § xiii．p．go．The received text reads є́шо́ккаби．In this passage the $\omega$ form has the higher support；but below in ver． 18 the preponderance of au－ thority favours éópacev rather than éspaкe้．On the use of the form in o see Buttmann Ausf．Griech．Sprachl． § 84，I．p． 325.

2．$\pi a \rho a k \lambda \eta \theta \omega \bar{\omega} \tau \nu]$＂encouraged， confirmed，i．e．＇comforted＇in the older and wider meaning of the word （＇confortati＇），but not with its mo－ dern and restricted sense: see tapáкарঠías comp. iv. 8, Ephes. vi. 22, 2 Thess. ii. 77.

ai kapoiat] They met the Apostle heart to heart, though not face to face. We have here the same opposition of кар $\delta i a$ and $\pi \rho o ́ \sigma c \omega \pi \sigma \nu$ as in I Thess. ii. 17, though less directly expressed; see ver. 5 .
av่т $\omega \nu]$ Where we should expect $\dot{v} \mu \omega \nu$, but the substitution of the third person for the second is suggested by the immediately preceding kaì öбot. This substitution confirms the interpretation of kal öoo already given. Unless the Colossians are included in $\stackrel{\circ}{\circ} \sigma 01$, they must be excluded by av̉z $\hat{\nu} \nu$. Yet this exclusion is hardly conceivable in such a context.
$\sigma \mu \mu \imath \beta a \sigma \theta \epsilon \in \tau \tau \epsilon$ ]'they being united, compacted,' for $\sigma \nu \mu \beta \imath \beta \dot{\zeta} \zeta \epsilon \iota \nu$ must here have its common meaning, as it has elsewhere in this and the companion

 $\sigma \nu \mu \beta \imath \beta a \zeta о \mu \in \nu \quad \nu$. Otherwise we might be disposed to assign to this verb here the sense which it always bears in the lixy (e.g. in Is. xl. 13, 14, quoted in I Cor. ii. 16), 'instructed, taught,' as it is rendered in the Vulgate. Its usage in the Acts is connected with this latter sense; e.g. ix. $22 \sigma \nu \mu \beta \iota \beta \dot{a} \zeta \omega v$
 cluding'; and so in xix. $33 \sigma \nu \nu \approx \beta i \beta a-$ $\sigma a y$ 'A入 $\epsilon \mathrm{gaw} \delta \mathrm{ov}$ (the best supported reading) can only mean 'instructed Alexander.' For the different sense of the nominative absolute see the note on iii. 16. The received text substitutes $\sigma v \mu \beta_{\imath} \beta_{\alpha \sigma \sigma} \theta \dot{\epsilon} \nu \tau \omega \nu$ here.
$\epsilon \nu$ à $\left.\boldsymbol{a}^{\prime} \pi_{n}\right]$ ] For love is the $\sigma \dot{v} v \delta \epsilon \sigma \mu o s$ (iii. 14) of perfection.
kai eis] 'and brought unto,' the thought being supplied from the preceding $\sigma v \mu \beta_{\iota} \beta a \sigma \theta_{\epsilon} \nu \tau \epsilon s$, which involves an idea of motion, comp. Joh. xx. 7

$\pi \hat{\alpha} \nu \pi \lambda o \hat{t}$ os $]$ This reading is better or $\pi \dot{\alpha} \nu \tau \alpha \pi \lambda o \hat{u} \tau o \nu$, while, as the intermediate reading, it also explains the other two.
Tins $\pi \lambda$ gןoфopias] 'the full assurance,' for such seems to be the meaning of the substantive wherever it occurs in the New Testament; r Thess. i. $5 \hat{\epsilon} v \pi \lambda \eta \rho o \phi o \rho i a g$ ro $\lambda \lambda \bar{\eta}$, Heb.

 Clem. Rom. $42 \mu \in \tau a ̀$ à $\pi \lambda \eta p o \phi o p i a s ~ \pi \nu \dot{\psi} \dot{\psi}$ $\mu a \tau o s$ ariov. With the exception of I Thess. i. 5 however, all the Biblical passages might bear the other sense 'fulness': see Bleek on Heb, vi. 1 I. For the verb see the note on $\pi \epsilon \pi \lambda \eta$ -

$\dot{\epsilon} \pi i \gamma y \omega \sigma \tau \nu]$ See the note on i. $g$.
то̂̀ $\mu v \sigma$ тipiov к.т...] 'the mystery of God, even Christ in whom, etc.,' Xerorov̂ being in apposition with rov̂ $\mu \nu \sigma \tau \eta \rho i o v ;$ comp. i. 27 тov̂ $\mu v \sigma \tau \eta \rho i o v$ é申аує $\omega \dot{\theta} \theta \eta$ к.т. $\lambda$. The reasons for adopting the reading roû Өcoû X $\rho \iota \sigma \tau o \hat{u}$ are given in the detached note on various readings. Other interpretations of this reading are; (I) 'the God Christ,' taking Xpecroû in apposition with $\theta \in o \hat{v}$; or (2) 'the God of Christ,' making it the genitive after $\Theta_{\epsilon} \hat{v}$ : but both expressions are without a parallel in St Paul. The mystery here is not 'Christ,' but 'Christ as containing in Himself all the treasures of wisdom'; see the note on i. 27 sentence comp. Ephes. iv. 15,16 $\bar{\eta}$ кe $\phi-$

3. $\pi a ́ v \tau \epsilon s]$ So $\pi a ̂ \nu ~ \pi \lambda o \tilde{i t o s ~ v e r . ~ 2, ~}$ $\pi \dot{a} \sigma \eta$ бoфía ii. 28. These repetitions serve to emphasize the character of the Gospel, which is as complete in itself, as it is universal in its application.
qoфias кal $\gamma \nu \omega \dot{\sigma} \epsilon \omega s$ ] The two words occur together again Rom. xi. $33 \boldsymbol{\omega}$ Ө $\epsilon \hat{\imath}$, I Cor. xii. 8. They are found in conjunction also several times in the luxx of Eccles. i. 7, 16, 18, ii. 2I, 26, ix. IO, where חכמה is represented by $\sigma o \phi i a$ and $\quad$ דע by $\gamma \nu \omega \bar{\omega} \tau s$. While $\gamma \nu \hat{\omega} \sigma \iota s$ is simply intuitive, roфía is ratiocinative also. While $\gamma \nu \omega \bar{\omega} t s$ applies chiefly to the apprehension of truths, $\sigma o \phi i a$ superadds the power of reasoning about them and tracing their relations. When Bengel on I Cor. xii. 8 sq. says, 'Cognitio [ $\gamma \nu \omega \bar{\sigma} \iota s$ ] est quasi visns; sapientia [ $\sigma 0 \phi i a]$ visus cum sapore,' he is so far right; but when he adds, 'cognitio, rerum agendarum; sapientia, rerum æternarum,' he is quite wide of the mark. Substantially the same, and equally wrong, is St Augustine's distinction de Trin. vii. 20, 25 (viII. pp. 923, 926) 'intelligendum est ad contemplationem sapientiam [бoфiav], ad actionem scientiam [ $\gamma \nu \hat{\omega} \sigma \omega$ ] pertinere...quod alia [roфía] sit intellectualis cognitio æternarum rerum, alia [ $\gamma \nu \omega \hat{\omega} \tau \iota$ ] rationalis temporalium' 'comp. xiv. 3, p. 948), and again de Dio. Quost. ad Simpl. ii. 2 § 3 (vi. p. I 14) 'ita discerni probabiliter solent, ut sapientia pertineat ad intellectum saternorum, scientia vero ad ea qua sensibus corporis experimur.' This is directly opposed to usage. In Aristotle Eth. Nic. i. I $\gamma^{\nu} \omega \bar{\omega}$ ts is opposed to $\pi \rho \hat{\beta} \xi$ ts. In St Paul it is connected with the apprehension of eternal mysteries, 1 Cor, siii. 2 ei $\delta \hat{\omega}$ rà $\mu \nu \sigma \tau \jmath^{\prime}-$ the relation of cootia to oviveots see above, i. 9 .

(i. 28), so here again in ánókpuфot the Apostle adopts a favourite term of the Gnostic teachers, only that he may refute a favourite doctrine. The word apocrypha was especially applied to those esoteric writings, for which such sectarians claimed an auctoritas secreta (Aug. c. Faust. xi. 2, vш. p. 219) and which they carefully guarded from publication after the manner of their Jewish prototypes the Essenes (see above, p. 89 sq. ) : comp. Iren. i.
 $\nu^{\prime} \theta \omega \nu$ र $\rho a \phi \omega \bar{\prime}$, Clem. Alex. Strom. i. 15 (p. 357) $\beta$ íphous àmoкрv́фovs тả тtvos ànoкpúфov. See also the application of the text Prov. ix. 17 áprov in Strom. i. I9 (p. 375). Thus the word apocrypha in the first instance was an honourable appellation applied by the heretics themselves to their esoteric doctrine and their secret books; but owing to the general charaeter of these works the term, as adopted by orthodox writers, got to signify 'false,' 'spurious.' The early fathers never apply it, as it is now applied, to deutero-canonical writings, but confine it to supposititious and heretical works: see Smith's Dictionary of the Bible s. F . In the text St Paul uses it кaтaхрךотькढ̄s, as he uses $\mu v o r i f(o v$. ' All the richest treasures of that secret wisdom,' he would say, 'on which you lay so much stress; are buried in Christ, and being buried there are accessible to all alike who seek Him.' But, while the term ánóк $\rho u \phi o s$ is adopted because it was used to designate the secret doctrine and writings of the hereties, it is also eutirely in keeping with the metaphor of the 'treasure'; e.g. Is. xlv. $3 \delta \omega^{\prime} \sigma \omega$

 I Mace. i. 23 ё $\lambda a \beta \in$ тov̀s $\operatorname{\theta \eta \sigma av\rho ò̀s~}$ тoùs àmoкрú申ous, Dan. xi. 43 ề toîs comp．Matt．xiii． 44.

The stress thus laid on ánóxpuфot will explain its position．It is not connected with ciriy，but must be taken apart as a secondary predicate：

 тov̂ Өєồ каӨŋ̆pevos，James i． 17 пã̀ роу к．т．$\lambda$ ．

4－7．＇I do not say this without a purpose．I wish to warn you against any one who would lead you astray by specious argument and persuasive rhetoric．For I am not an indifferent spectator of your doings．Although I am absent from you in my flesh，yet I am present with you in my spirit． I rejoice to behold the orderly array and the solid phalanx which your faith towards Christ presents against the assaults of the foe．I entreat you therefore not to abandon the Christ， as you learnt from Epaphras to know Him，even Jesus the Lord，but to walk still in Him as heretofore．I would have you firmly rooted once for all in Him．I desire to see jou built up higher in Him day by day，to see you growing ever stronger and stronger through your faith，while you remain true to the lessons taught you of old， so that you may abound in it，and thus abounding may pour forth your hearts in gratitude to God the giver of all．＇

4 тойто 入е́＇धш к．т．入．］＇I say all this to you，lest you should be led astray by those false teachers who speak of another knowledge，of other mysteries．＇In other connexions roù－ to $\lambda$ é ${ }^{\circ}$ e will frequently refer to the words following（e．g．Gal．iii．17，I Cor． i．12）；but with iva it points to what has gone before，as in Joh．v． 34 тav̂тa

The reference in roûro $\lambda$＇́ $\gamma \omega$ extends over vv．I－3，and involves two state－ ments；（1）The declaration that all knowledge is comprehended in Christ， r．2，3；（2）The expression of his own personal anxiety that they should re－ main stedfast in this conviction， Vv ． 1，2．This last point explains the Ian－ guage which follows，$\epsilon i$ yàp кal tî баркі к．т．$\lambda$ ． $\pi а \rho a \lambda о \gamma i\langle\eta \tau a \iota]$＇lead you astray by false reasoning；＇as in Daniel xiv． 7
 James i．22，Ign．Magn．3．It is not an uncommon word either in the uxx or in classical writers．The system against which St Paul here contends professed to be a $\phi$ idoco申ía（ver．8） and had a $\lambda$ óoov ooфias（ver．23）． in $\pi \iota \theta a v a \lambda o \gamma i a]$ The words $\pi \iota \theta a \nu \circ-$入оуєір（Arist．Eth．Nic．i．1），п九Ааvo入o－ yia（Plat．Thecot． 162 k ），$\pi$ ，$\theta a v o \lambda o y l-$ кós（Epictet．i．8．7），occur occasion－ ally in classical writers，but do not bear a bad sense，being most fre－ bable argument to strict mathemati－ cal demonstration．This contrast pro－ bably suggested St Paul＇s language in 1 Cor．ii． 4 ov่k év me九toîs coфías $\lambda$ ó－
 к．т． ．，and may possibly have been present to his mind here．

5．¿入入á］Frequently introduces the apodosis after $\boldsymbol{\epsilon i}$ or ci kaì in St Panl； e．g．Rom．vi．5，I Cor．ix．2， 2 Cor．iv． 16，г．16，xi．6，xiii． 4 （v．L．）．
$\tau \hat{\oplus} \pi \nu \epsilon \hat{u}_{\mu} \mu \tau \iota$ ］＇in my spirit，＇not ＇by the Spirit．＇We have here the common antithesis of flesh and spirit， or body and spirit：comp．I Cor．v． 3
 St Paul elsewhere uses another anti－ thesis，$\pi р о \sigma \omega \dot{\omega} \pi \varphi$ and $\kappa a \rho \delta i q$ ，to express this same thing；I Thess．ii． 17.
$\chi$ хíp $\omega$ к кal $\beta \lambda_{\epsilon} \pi \omega \nu$ ］＇rejoicing and beholding．＇This must not be regarded as a logical inversion．The contem－ plation of their orderly array，thougis it might have been first the canse， was afterwards the consequence, of the Apostle's rejoicing. He looked, because it gave him satisfaction to look.

 military metaphor: comp. e.g. Xen.

 $\mu a \sigma \epsilon$, Plut. Vit. Pyrrh. 16 кать $\delta \omega \nu$

 $\mu a \sigma \epsilon$. The enforced companionship of St Paul with the soldiers of the pretorian guard at this time (Phil i. 13) might have suggested this image. At all events ip the contemporary epistle (Ephes. vi. 14 sq .) we have an elaborate metaphor from the armour of a soldier.
то̀ $\sigma \tau \epsilon \rho \in ́ \omega \mu a]$ 'solid front, close phalanx,' a continuation of the metaphor: comp. I Mace. ix. 14 єíi $\epsilon$ what similar are the expressions areрєо̂̂̀ тò̀ то́дєцоу I Macc. x. 50, кarà $\tau \grave{\eta} \nu \sigma \tau \epsilon \rho \epsilon \epsilon \omega \sigma \nu \nu \tau \bar{\eta} s \mu a ́ \chi \eta s$ Ecclus. xxpiii. Io. For the connexion here compare I Pet. v. 9 ávтi $\sigma \tau \eta \tau \epsilon \sigma \tau \epsilon \rho \in 0 \hat{\imath} \tau \hat{n} \pi i ́ \sigma \tau \epsilon \iota$,

 'Let your conviction and conduct be in perfect accordance with the doctrines and precepts of the Gospel as it was taught to you.' For this use of $\pi a \rho \varsigma \lambda a ́ \beta \epsilon \tau \epsilon$ 'ye received from your teachers, were instructed in,' comp. r Cor. xv. 1, 3, Gial. i. 9, Phil. iv. 9, I Thess. ii. I3, iv. I, 2 Thess. iii. 6. The word $\pi a \rho a \lambda a \mu \beta$ ávetv implies either 'to receive as transmitted,' or 'to receive for transmission': see the note on Gal. i. 12. The $\omega_{s}$ of the protasis suggests a oütos in the apodosis, which in this case is unexpressed but must be understood. The meaning of ws $\pi \alpha \rho \epsilon \lambda \alpha \beta_{\epsilon \tau \epsilon}$ here is explained by the
 the note there, and comp. below, ver. 7

 than 'the Gospel,' because the central point in the Colossian heresy was the subversion of the true idea of the Christ.
 Lord,' in whom the true conception of the Christ is realised: comp. Ephes.

 $\theta \in i a \underset{\epsilon}{\epsilon} \tau \hat{\varphi}{ }^{\prime} \mathrm{I} \eta \sigma o \hat{u}$, where the same idea is more directly expressed. The genuine doctrine of the Christ consists in (I) the recognition of the historical person Jesus, and (2) the acceptance of Him as the Lord. This doctrine was seriously endangered by the mystic theosophy of the false teachers. The same order which we have here occurs also in Ephes. iii. in (the correct reading).
 be noticed here; (i) The expressive rooted' once for all, '̇тоькододоч́цєрои, $\beta_{\epsilon} \beta a \sim o u ́ \mu \in \nu o l$, 'built up and strengthened'from hour to hour. (2) The rapid transition of metaphor, $\pi \epsilon \rho-$ the path, the tree, the building: comp.
 $\lambda t \omega \mu$ inol. The metaphors of the plant and the building occur together in I Cor. iii. 9 Өєoй yećpysoy, Өeồ oìro$\delta o \mu \dot{\eta}$. The transition in this passage is made easier by the fact that folounv (Plut. Mor. 32 I D), éxpı̧oûv (Jer. i. 10, vii. 8. 7), etc., are not uncommonly used of cities and buildings.

ітоккодоназірєроь] 'being built up,' as in I Cor. iii. 10-14. After this verb we might have expected $\boldsymbol{i}^{\prime} \boldsymbol{n}^{\prime}$ rather than $\dot{\epsilon} \nu \quad$ avjuc̣; but in this and the companion epistle Christ is represented rather as the binding element than as the foundation of the building: e.g. Ephes. ii. 20 е̇токкодоsarily refer to the original foundation, but may point to the continued progress of the building by successive layers, as e.g. [Aristot.] Rhet. ad Ales:

 §ouciv is frequently used absolutely, 'to build up' (e.g. Jude 20, Polyb. iii. 27.4), as here. The repetition of iv aưt $\hat{\omega}$ emphasizes the main idea of the passage, and indeed of the whole epistle.
Tǹ miortc] 'by your faith,' tho dative of the instrument; comp. Heb.
 गो̀े кapolav. Faith is, as it were, the cement of the building: comp. Clem.

 true to the lessons which you received from Epaphras, and not led astray by any later pretenders'; comp.
 'Етафра́.
iv aùrŷ k.r, $\lambda$.] The same ending occurs in iv. 2. Thanksgiving is the end of all human conduct, whether exhibited in words or in works. For the stress laid on thanksgiving in St Paul's epistles generally, see the note on Phil. iy. 6. The words evंXápıōos, єỉxaptatєiv, єंXaptotia, occur in St Paul's writings alone of the Apostolic epistles. In this epistle especially the duty of thanksgiving assumes a peculiar prominence by being made a refrain, as here and in iii. 15, 17, iv. 2 : see also i. 12.

8-15. 'Be on your guard; do not suffer yourselves to fall a prey to certain persons who would lead you oaptive by a hollow and deceitful system, which they call philosophy. They substitute the traditions of men for the truth of God. They enforce an elementary discipline of mundane ordinances fit only for children. Theirs is not the Gospel of Christ. In Christ the entire fulness of the Godhead abides for ever, having united itself with man by taking a human body. And so in Ilim-not in any inferior mediators-ye have your life, your being, for ye are filled from His fulness. He, I say, is the Head over all spiritual beings-call them principalities or powers or what you will. In Him too ye have the true circum-cision-the circumcision which is not made with hands but wrought by the Spirit-the circumcision which divests not of a part only but of the whole carnal body-the circumcision which is not of Moses but of Christ. This circumcision ye have, because ye were buried with Christ to your old selves beneath the baptismal waters, and were raised with Him from those same waters to a new and regenerate life, through your faith in the powerful working of God who raised Him from the dead. Yes, you-you Gentiles who before were dead, when yo walked in your transgressions and in theuncircumcision of your unchastened carnal heathen heart-eren you did

8. $\mu \dot{\eta} \tau \iota \bar{\epsilon} \sigma \tau \alpha \iota \dot{\nu} \mu a \hat{s}$.

God quicken into life together with Christ; then and there freels forgiring all of us-Jews and Gentiles alike-all our transgressions; then and there cancelling the bond which stood valid against us (for it bore our own signature), the bond which engaged us to fulfil all the law of ordinances, which was our stern pitiless tyrant. Aye, this very bond hath Christ put out of sight for ever, nailing it to His cross and rending it with His body and killing it in His death. Taking upon Him our human nature, Ho stripped off and cast aside all the powers of evil which clung to it like a poisonous garment. As a mighty conqueror He displayed these His fallen enemies to an astonished world, leading them in triumph on His cross.'
 sentence is a measure of the imwinence of the peril. The usual construction with $\beta \lambda \dot{\epsilon} \pi \epsilon \epsilon \nu \mu \bar{\eta}$ is a conjunctive ; e.g.
 Here the substitution of an indicative shows that the danger is real; comp.

 an example of $\mu \dot{\eta}$ with a future indicative see Mark xiv. $2 \mu \dot{\eta} \pi \boldsymbol{\pi} \boldsymbol{\sigma} \epsilon \ddot{\epsilon} \sigma \tau a$ Gópußos; and comp. Winer § Ivi. p. 631 sq .
trs] This indefinite ris is frequently used by St Paul, when speaking of opponents whom he knows well enough but does not care to name: see the note on Gal. i. 7. Comp. Ign.

 carries you of body and soul' The word appears not to occur before St Paul, nor after him, independently of thispassage, tilla late date: e.g. Heliod.
 үaté $\rho a$ бvдaүoyñas. In Tatian ad

$\gamma \in \mathrm{i} \sigma \theta \varepsilon$ it seems to be a reminiscence of St Paul. Its full and proper meaning, as appears from the passages quoted, is not 'to despoil', but 'to carry off as spoil, in accordance with the analogous compounds, סoviayeallied word $\lambda a \phi$ vpay $\omega \gamma$ eiv in Plut.

 $\sigma \epsilon \sigma$ Oac. The Colossians had been rescued from the bondare of darkness; they had been transferred to the kiagdom of light; they had been settled there as free citizens (i. 12, 13); and now there was danger that they should fall into a state worse thail their former slavery, that they should be carried of as so much booty. Comp. 2 Tim. iii. $6 a i \chi \mu a \lambda \omega-$ tifoutes $\gamma v v a c k a ̈ p a$.
For the coustruction $\tilde{\epsilon} \sigma \pi a t$ of ow a $\gamma \omega \gamma \bar{\omega} \nu$ see the notes on Gal.i. 7 , iii. 21 . The former passage is a close parallel тарávoovess vipâs к.r.... The expression $\dot{\delta}$ шu入ay $\omega \bar{\omega} \boldsymbol{y}$ gives a directness and individuality to the reference, which would have been wanting to the more natural construction ôs cunajo$\gamma \dot{\eta} \boldsymbol{\sigma} \epsilon$.
 his philosophy which is an empty deceit.' The absence of both preposition aud article in the second clause shows that $\kappa$ evins di $\pi \dot{\alpha} \pi n s$ describes and qualifies фidoroфias. Clement therefore (Strom. vi. 8, p. 771) had a right to contend that St Paul does not here condemn 'philosophy' absolutely. The sage corresponds to the $\psi \in v o \dot{\omega} \dot{v} \mu \mathrm{os}$ $\gamma \nu \omega \hat{\omega} t s$ of I Tim. vi. 20.
But thongh 'philosophy' is not condemned, it is disparaged by the connexion in which it is placed. St Chrysostom's comment is not altoge-ȧtátクs. The term was doubtless used by the false teachers themselves to describe theirsystem. Though essentially Greek as a name and as an idea, it had found its way into Jewish circles. Philo speaks of the Hebrew religion and Mosaie law as ji $\pi$ átpios фitooroфía (Leg. ad Gai. 23, II. p. 568, de Somn. ii. I8, 1. p. 675) or $\boldsymbol{\eta}^{\prime}$ 'Iov8aíк’̀ філогофía (Leg. ad Gai. 33, II. p. 582) Nom. 39, I. p. 612). The system of the Essenes, the probable progenitors of the false teachers at Colosse, he

 lib. 13, II. p. 459). So too Josephus speaks of the three Jewish sects as $\tau \rho \mathrm{fis}$ фьлабафiaı(Ant. xviii. 1. 2, comp. B.J. ii. 8. 2). It should be remembered also, that in this later age, owing to Roman influence, the term was used to describe practical not less than speculative systems, so that it would cover the ascetic life as well as the mystic theosophy of these Colossian heretics. Hence the Apostle is here flinging back at these false teachers a favourite term of theirown, "their vaunted philosophy, which is hollow and misleading.'

The word indoed could claim a truly noble orjgin ; for it is said to have arisen out of the humility of Pythagoras, who called himself 'a lover

 Procm. § 12; comp. Cic. Tusc. v. 3)In such a sense the term would entirely accord with the spirit and teaching of St Paul; for it bore testimony to the insufficiency of tho human intellect and the need of a revelation. Eut in his age it had come to be associated generally with the idea of subtle dialectics and profitless speculation; while in this particular instance it was combined with n mystic cosmogony and angelology which contributed a fresh element of danger. As contrasted with the power and fulness and certainty of revelation, all such philosophy was 'foolishness' (1 Cor. i. 20). It is worth observing that this word, which to the Greeks denoted. the highest effort of the intellect, occurs here alone in St Paul, just as he uses apєтウ, which was their term to express the highest moral excellence, in a single passage ooly (Phil. iv. 8 ; see the note there). The reason is much the same in both cases. The. Gospel had deposed the terms as inadequate to the ligher standard, wlether of knowledge or of practice, which it had introduced.
On the attitude of the fathers towards philosophy, while philosophy was a living thing, see Smith's Dictionary of the Bible s.v. Clement, who was followed in the main by the earlier Alexandrine fathers, regards Greek philosophy not only as a preliminary training ( $\pi \rho о \pi a \iota \delta \epsilon i a)$ for the Gospel, but even as in some sense a covenant ( $\delta \mathrm{\delta a} \theta \eta^{\prime} \kappa \eta$ ) given by God to the Greeks (Strom. i. 5, p. 331, vi. 5, p. 76 I, ib. § 8, p. 77 I sq .). Others, who were the great majority and of whom Tertullian may be taken as an extreme type, set their faces directly against it, seeing in it only the parent of all heretical teaching: e. g. de Anim.2,3, Apol. 46, 47. In the first passage, referring to this text, he says, ' Ab apostolo jam tume philosophia concussio veritatis providobatur'; in tho second he asks, 'Quid simile philosophus et Christianus?' St Paul's speech at Athens, on the only occasion when he is known to have been brought into direct personal contact with Greek philosophers (Acts xvii. 18), shows that his sympathies would have been at least as much with Clement's representations as with. Tertullian's.
karà к.r. ..] The false teaching is, described (I) As regards its source-.
＇the tradition of men＇；（2）As regards its subject matter－＇the radiments of the world．＇ as for instance the ceremonial mishna of the Pharisees，might fitly be de－ scribed in this way（Matt．xv． 2 sq. ．， Mark vii． 3 sq ．）：but such a descrip－ tion was peculiarly appropriate to a mystic theosophy like this of the Co－ lossian false teachers．The teaching might be oral or written，but it was essentially esoteric，essentially tradi－ tional．It could not appeal to sacred books which had been before all the world for centuries．The Essenes， the immediate spiritual progenitors of these Colossian heretics，distinct－ ly claimed to possess such a source of knowledge，which they carefully guarded from divulgence；B．J．ii． 8.7

 $\mu$ ната（see above pp．89， $90 \mathrm{sq} ., 95$ ）． The various Gnostic sects，their direct or collateral spiritual descendants， almost without exception traced their doctrines to a similar source：o．g． Hippol．Haer．v． 7 â $\phi \eta \sigma \grave{\imath} \pi a \rho a \delta \in \delta \omega-$

 Mat日íay aủrois 入óyous ảmoкpú申ovs oûs $\tilde{\eta} \kappa о v \sigma \epsilon \pi a \rho \alpha \dot{\alpha} \tau 0 \hat{v}$ б $\omega \tau \bar{\eta} \rho o s$, Clem．Alex． Strom．vii． 17 （p．898）каӒ́tтє ó Baбt－

 סè oûtos é $\gamma \in \gamma$ óvel $\Pi$ Iaviov．So too a later mystic theology of the Jews， which had many affinities with the teaching of the Christianized Essenes at Colossæ，was self－designated $K a b$－ bala or＇tradition，＇professing to have been handed down orally from the patriarchs．See the note on ànók $\rho v \phi o$ ， ii． 3.

тà $\sigma$ тotxeia］＇the rudiments，the elementary teaching＇；comp．ver． 20. The same phrase occurs again Gal．iv．

3 （comp．ver．9）．As arot $\chi$ eia signifies primarily＇the letters of the alphabet，＇ so as a secondary meaning it denotes ＇rudimentary instruction．＇Accord－ ingly it is correctly interpreted by Clement Strom．vi． 8 （p．771）חaūえos ．．．

 тıva oủøav（i．e．elementary）кà̀ тро－ $\pi a \iota \delta e i ́ a \nu ~ \tau \eta ̂ s ~ d ं \lambda \eta \theta$ eías（comp．ib．vi．15， p．799），and by Tertullian ado．Marc． v．19＇secundum elementa mundi，non． secundum caelum et terram dicens， sed secundum litteras seculares．＇A large number of the fathers however explained the expression to refer to the heavenly bodies（called orolfeia）， as marking the seasons，so that the observance of＇festivals and new－． moons and sabbaths＇was a sort of bondage to them．It would appear from Tertullian＇s language that Mar－ cion also had so interpreted the words．On this false interpretation see the note on Gal．iv．3．It is quite out of place here：for（ r ）The context suggests some mode of instruction， e．g．$\tau \eta ̀ \nu \pi \alpha \rho a ́ 8 o \sigma t y \tau \hat{\omega} \nu \dot{\alpha} \nu \theta \rho \omega^{\prime} \pi \omega \nu$ here， and $\delta o \gamma \mu a t i \zeta \epsilon \sigma \theta \epsilon$ in ver．20；（2）The keeping of days and seasons is quite subordinate to other external ob－ servances．The rite of circumeision （ver．II），and the distinction of meats （ver．2I），respectively，are placed in close and immediate connexion with places where it occurs，whereas the observance of days and seasous（ver．16） stands apart from either． rov кó $\sigma \mu \mathrm{ov}$ ］＇of the voorld，＇that is， ＇belonging to the sphere of material and external things．＇See the notes on Gal．iv．3，vi． 14.
＇In Christ，＇so the Apostle seems to say，＇you have attained the liberty and the intelligence of manhood；do not submit yourselves again to a rudi－ mentary discipline fit only for chil－： dren（rà arotXeia）．In Christ you have been exalted into the sphere of the Spirit: do not plange yourselves again into the atmosphere of material and sensuous things (roû kó $\boldsymbol{\gamma} \mu o v$ ).'

ov̀ катà Xpıotóly ' not after Christ.' This expression is wide in itself, and should be interpreted so as to supply the negative to both the preceding clauses; 'Clurist is neither the author nor the substance of their teaching: not the author, for they listen to human traditions (karà $\tau \grave{\eta} \nu$ mapúdoõıv $\tau \hat{\omega} \nu \bar{\alpha} \nu \theta \rho \omega \dot{\pi} \omega \nu)$; not the substance, for they replace Him by formal ordinances (katà тà oтooरêia тov̂ kó $\sigma \mu o v$ ) and by angelic mediators.'
9 sq . In explaining the true doctrine which is 'after Christ,' St Paul condemns the two false principles, which lay at the root of this heretical teaching; (1) The theological error of substituting inferior and created beings, angelic mediators, for the divine Head Himself (rv. 9, 10); and (2) The practical error of insisting upon ritual and ascetic observances as the foundation of their moral teaching (vv. Ir -14). Their theological speculations and their ethical code alike were at fault. On the intimate connexion between these two errors, as springing out of a common root, the Gnostic dualism of these false teachers, see the introduction, pp. 33 sq., 79, 87, 114 sq .
örı к.т.入.] The Apostle justifies the foregoing charge that this doctrine was not karà X $\mathrm{X}_{\text {totò̀ }}$; 'In Christ dwells the whole pleroma, the entire fulness of the Godhead, whereas they represent it to you as dispersed among several spiritual agencies. Christ is the one fountain-head of all spiritual life, whereas they teach you to seek it in communion with inferior creatures.? The same truths have been stated before (i. 14 sq .) more generally, and they are now restated, with direct and immediate reference to the heretical teaching.
катоккє] 'has its fixed abode.' On the force of this compound in relation to the false teaching, see the note on i. 19.
$\pi a ̂ \nu ~ \tau o ̀ ~ \pi \lambda \eta ́ \rho \omega \mu a] ~ ' a l l ~ t h e ~ p l e n i t u d e, ' ~$
' the totality of the divine powers and attributes.' On this theological term see i. 19, and the detached note at the end of the epistle.
tîs $\theta$ étintos] 'of the Godhead.' 'Non modo divinae virtates, sed ipsa divina natura,' writes Bengel. For the difference between $\theta$ єórps ' deitas;' the essence, and $\theta \epsilon$ 家 the quality, see Trench N. T. Syn. § ii. p. 6. The different force of the two words may be seen by a comparison of two passages in Plutarch, Mor. p. 857 A tâolv Aizuntious rupinas (where it means a divine inspiration or faculty, and where no oue would have used $\theta_{\text {é }}$ тyra), and

 $\theta_{\text {ctótpios }}$ would be quite out of place, because all daipoves without exception were $\theta$ eiol, though they only became $\theta$ col in rare instances and after long probation and discipline). In the New Testament the one word occurs here alone, the other in Rom. i. 30 alone. So also ròo $\theta_{\text {ciop, }}$ a very favourite expression in Greek philosophy, is found once only, in Acts xvii. 29, where it is used with singular propriety; for the Apostle is there meeting the heathen philosophers on their own ground and axguing with them in their own language. Flsewhere he instinctively avoids a term which tends to obscure the idea of a personal God. In the Latin versions, owing to the poverty of the language，both $\theta$ cótry and $\theta$ ecórns are translated by the same term divi－ nitas；but this was felt to be inade－ quate，and the word deitus was coined at a later date to represent feórys： $\Lambda$ ugust．de Cin．Dei vii．§ r，vil．p． 162 （quoted in Trench）＇Hanc divinitatem vel，ut sic dixerim，deitatem：nam et hoc verbo uti jam nostros non piget， ut de Graeco expressius transferant id

$\sigma \omega \mu a \tau \kappa \bar{\omega} s]$＇bodily－wise，＇＇corpo－ really，＇i．e．＇assuming a bodily form， becoming incarnate．＇This is an ad－ dition to the previous statement in
 катокк $\hat{\eta} \sigma a$. The indwelling of the ple－ roma refers to the Eternal Word，and not to the Incarnate Christ：but $\boldsymbol{\sigma} \omega$－ $\mu a \tau c \kappa \bar{\omega} s$ is added to show that the Word，in whom the pleroma thus had its abode from all eternity，crowned His work by the Incarnation．Thus while the main statement karotкeî mầ тò $\pi \lambda \dot{\eta} \rho \omega \mu a$ тîs $\theta \in o ́ t \eta \tau o s$ of St Paul corresponds to the opening sentence 入óyos of St John，the subsidiary ad－ verb $\sigma \omega \mu a \tau c \kappa \bar{s}$ of St Paul has its counterpart in the additional state－
 John．All other meanings which have been assigned to $\sigma \omega \mu a r e z \omega \bar{s}$ here，as ＇wholly＇（Hieron．in Is．xi．I sq．，Iv． p．156，＇nequaquam per partes，ut in ceteris sanctis＇），or＇really＇（Aug．Epist． cxlix，II．p． 513 ＇Ideo corporaliter dixit， quia illi umbratiliter seducebant＇），or ＇essentially＇（Hilar．de Trin．viii．54， II．p． 252 ＂Dei ex Deo significat veri－ tatem etc．，＇Cyril．Alex．in Theodoret． $O p$. v．p． 34 тоขтє́ $\sigma \tau \tau \nu$ ，ov่ $\sigma_{\chi \epsilon \tau \iota \kappa \omega}^{\Sigma}$ ， Isid．Pelus．Ep．iv． 166 àvci тoũ ov̉at－ $\omega \delta \omega \bar{s})$ ，are unsupported by usage．Nor again can the body be understood of anything else bnt Christ＇s human body； as for instance of the created World （Theod．Mops．in Rab．Op．vi．p．522） or of the Church（Anon．in Chrysost．ad loc．）．According to these two last inter－ taken to mean the Universe（＇univer－ sam naturam repletam $a b$ eo＇）and the respectively，because either of these may be said to reside in Him，as the source of its life，and to stand to Him in the relation of the body to the head（ $\sigma \omega \mu а \tau \kappa \bar{\omega}$ ）．But these forced interpretations have nothing to re－ commend them．

St Paul＇s language is carefully for the Godhead cannot be confined to any limits of space；nor $\sigma$ ouaroct－ $\delta \hat{\omega}$ ，for this might suggest the un－ reality of Christ＇s human body；but $\sigma \omega \mu a \tau \iota \kappa \bar{s}$, ＇in bodily wise，＇＇with a bodily manifestation．＇The relation of $\sigma \omega \mu a \tau \iota \omega \hat{\omega}$ s to the clause which it quali－ fies will vary with the circumstances， e．g．Plut．Mor．p． 424 п тò $\mu$ éfov ov̀ тотькюิs à入入à $\sigma \omega \mu a \tau \iota \kappa \omega ́ s ~ \lambda \epsilon ́ \gamma \epsilon \sigma \theta a l$ ， i．e．＇ratione corporis habita，＇Athan． Exp．Fid． 4 （r．p．8r）$\sigma \omega \mu a \tau \iota \kappa$ जिs єis тòv＇I $\eta \sigma o i v y ~ \gamma^{\prime} \gamma$ patral，i．e．＇secundum corpus，＇Ptolen．in Epiphan．Haer． xxxiii． 5 катà $\mu$ ѐ̀ тò фаıvó $\mu \in \nu 0 \nu$ ка̇

 Macar．Magn．iii． 14 бшرатькө̄s $\chi^{\omega \rho}$ i－ $\zeta \epsilon \omega \tau \omega \bar{\nu} \mu a \theta \eta \tau \omega \hat{\nu}$.
 in Him，＇where érrè should be sepa－ rated from the following $\pi е \pi \lambda \eta \rho \omega \mu$ е́－ por ；comp．John xvii．21，Acts xvii． 28. True life consists in union with Him， and not in dependence on any inferior being；comp．ver． 19 ov่ крат⿳⺈ $\nu$ रो̀

$\pi \epsilon \pi \lambda \eta \rho \omega \mu \epsilon \dot{\mu} \circ$ ］＇being fulfilled，＇with a direct reference to the preceding $\pi \lambda \dot{\eta} \rho \omega \mu a$ ；＇Your fulness comes from His fulness；His $\pi \lambda \eta{ }^{\prime} \rho \omega \mu a$ is trans－ fused into you by virtue of your in－ corporation in Him．＇So too John

 iv. I3 eis $\mu \epsilon ́ \tau \rho o \nu ~ \grave{\eta} \lambda \iota к i ́ \alpha s$ то̂̂ $\pi \lambda \eta \rho \omega \dot{\mu} \mu$ tos roû X $\rho$ เotoṽ, comp. Ign. Ephes.
 татро̀s $\pi \lambda \eta \rho \dot{\mu} \mu a \tau \iota$. Hence also the Church, as ideally regarded, is called the $\pi \lambda \dot{\eta} \rho \omega \mu a$ of Christ, because all His graces and energies are communicated aủrov̂, тò $\pi \lambda \eta{ }^{\prime} \rho \omega \mu a$ тồ тà $\pi a ́ v \tau a ~$ ìv $\pi \hat{a}-$ ofs] For the various reading of sce the detached note. It was perhaps a correction made on the false suppo-$\pi \lambda \eta \eta^{\prime} \rho \omega \mu$. At all events it must be regarded as an impossible reading; for the image would be altogether confused and lost, if the $\pi \lambda \dot{\eta} \rho \omega \mu a$ were represented as the head. And again $\dot{\eta}$ кє $\phi a \lambda \dot{\eta}$ is persistently said elsewhere of Christ ; i. 18, ii. 19, Ephes. i. 22, iv. 15, v. 23. Hilary de Trin. ix. 8 (II. p. 264) explains the of as referring $\pi \epsilon \pi \lambda \eta \rho \omega \mu$ évovs, but this also is an inconceivable sense. Again it has been may be taken as equivalent to scilicet (comp. Clem. Hom. viii. 22); but this would require $\mathfrak{j} \boldsymbol{j}$ кєфал $\bar{y}$, even if it were otherwise admissible here.

$\eta_{\eta} \kappa \in \phi a \lambda \eta$ '] The image expresses much more than the idea of sovereignty: the head is also the centre of vital force, the source of all energy and life; see the note on ver. 19.
$\pi$ áans $\dot{\alpha} \rho \chi \bar{\eta} s$ к.т. $\lambda$.$] ' of every prin-$ cipality and power,' and therefore of those angelic beings whom the false teachers adopted as mediators, thas transferring to the inferior members the allegiance due to the Head:
 rias, see the note on i. 16 .
II. The previous verses have dealt with the theological tenets of the false teachers. The Apostle now turns to their practical errors; 'You do not need the circumcision of the flesh; for you have received the circumcision of the heart. The distinguishing features of this higher circumcision are threefold. (I) It is not external but inward, not made with hands but wrought by the Spirit. (2) It divests not of a part only of the flesh, but of the whole body of carnal affections. (3) It is the circumcision not of Moses or of the patriarchs, but of Ohrist.' Thus it is distinguished, as regards first its character, secondly its extent, and thirdly its author.
$\pi \epsilon \rho \epsilon \epsilon \tau \mu \eta^{\prime} \theta \eta \tau \epsilon$ ] The moment at which this is conceived as taking place is defined by the other aorists, ouvia$\phi \epsilon ́ \nu \tau \varepsilon s, \sigma v \nu \eta \gamma^{\prime} \rho \theta \eta \tau \epsilon$, etc., as the time of their baptism, when they 'put on Christ.'
 ritual,' as Marly xiv. 58, 2 Cor. v. I. So $\chi \in ⿺ \rho \frac{0 \pi}{}$ oiptos, which is used in the N. T. of material temples and their furniture (Acts vii. 48, xvii. 24, Heb. ix. I 1, 24, comp. Mark $l$. c.), and of the material circumcision (Ephes, ii. II ротоtírov). In the Lxx $\chi$ хєротоípta occurs exclusively as a rendering of 18 , etc.), false gods (aיחs Is. xxi. 9 , where perhaps they read אלילילים), or images (םמשים Lev. xxvi. 30), except in one passage, Is. xvi. 12, where it is applied to an idol's sanctuary. Owing. to this association of the word the application which we find in the New Testament would sound much more depreciatory to Jewish ears than it катокк $i$ in St Stephen's speech, where the force is broken in the received text by the interpolation of paois.

For illustrations of the typical significance of circumcision, as a symbol of purity, see the note on Phil. iii. 3.
$\dot{\epsilon} \tau \boldsymbol{\eta} \kappa$ к.т.ג.] The words arc chosen to express the completeness of the spiritual change. (I) It is not an ëk $\delta u \sigma i s$ nor an àmóלvテts, but an ànéк $\delta \partial \sigma t s$.

The word $\overline{a \pi \epsilon} \epsilon \kappa \delta v \sigma t s$ is extremely rare, and no earlier instances of it are produced; see the note on ver. 15 a $\pi \epsilon \kappa \delta \nu-$ rápevos. (2) It is not a single member but the whole body, which is thus cast aside; see the next note. Thus the idea of completeness is brought out both in the energy of the action and in the extent of its operation, as $\vec{a} \nu \theta \rho \omega \pi \sigma \nu$.
 which consists of the flesh,' i.e. 'the body with all its corrupt and carnal affections'; as iii. 5 עекр $\omega \sigma a \tau \epsilon$ oű тà $\mu$ é $\lambda \eta$. For illustrations of the expression see Rom. vi. 6 iva katap$\eta_{\eta} \hat{j}$ tò $\sigma \hat{\omega} \mu a \quad \tau \bar{\eta} \mathrm{~s}$ àpaptias, vii. 24 тoù бढ́paros tov̂ Gavárov toúrov, Phil iii.
 Thus тò $\sigma \hat{\omega} \mu a$ т $\grave{j} s$ бapkós here means 'the fleshly body' and not 'the entire mass of the flesh'; but the contrast between the whole and the part still remains. In i. 22 the same expression т̀̀ $\sigma \hat{\omega} \mu a$ т $\hat{\prime} s$ capkós occurs, but with a different emphasis and meaning: seo the note there.
The words $\tau \hat{\omega} \nu$ a $\mu \mu \rho \tau \tau \hat{\omega}$, inserted between rồ $\sigma \omega \mu a r o s$ and $\tau \hat{\eta} s$ rapkós in the received text, are clearly a gloss, and must be omitted with the vast majority of ancient anthorities.
12. Baptism is the grave of the old man, and the birth of the new. As he sinks beneath the baptismal waters, the believer buries there all his corrupt affections and past sins; as he emerges thence, he rises regenerate, quiekened to new hopes and a new life. This it is, because it is not only the crowning act of his own faith but also the seal of God's adoption and the earnest of God's Spirit. Thus baptism is an image of his participation both in the death and in the resurrection of Christ. See Apost. Const. iii. 17 ì karáduars тò val. For this twofold image, as it presents itself to St Paul, see especially Rom. vi. 3 sq .
$\left.{ }^{\boldsymbol{\epsilon} \nu} \boldsymbol{\tau} \bar{\omega}, \beta a \pi \tau t \sigma \mu \hat{\varphi}\right]$ ' in the act of baptism: A distinction seems to be observed elsewhere in the New Testament between $\beta^{\prime}$ ártı $\sigma \mu a$ ' 'baptism' properly so called, and $\beta$ ßartuoùs 'lustration' or 'washing' of divers kinds, e.g. of ressels (Mark vii. 4, [8,] Heb. ix. 10). Even Heb. vi. 2 及an$\tau \tau \sigma \mu \bar{\nu} \nu \delta \delta \delta \alpha \chi \bar{\eta} s$, which at first sight might seem to be an exception to this rule, is perhaps not really so (Bleek ad loc.). Here however, where the various readings $\beta a \pi \tau t \sigma \mu \hat{\varphi}$ and $\beta$ antтiбuarı appear in competition, the preference ought probably to be given to $\beta$ artı $\sigma \hat{\varphi}$ as being highly supported in itself and as the less usual word in this sense. There is no a priori reason why St Paul should not have used Bartionès with this meaning, for it is so found in Josephus Ant. xviii. 5. 2 ßanto $\sigma \mu \hat{\varphi}$ бvvtévat (of John the Baptist). Doubtless the form $\beta$ ártı $\sigma \mu a$ was more appropriate to describe the one final and complete act of Christian baptism, and it very soon obtained exclusive possession of the ground in Greer; but in St Paul's age the other form Bazrıc弓òs may not yet have been banished. In the Latin Version baptisma and baptismus are used indiscriminately: and this is the case also with the Latin fathers. The substantive 'baptism' occurs so rarely in any sense in St Paul (only Rom. ri. 4, Eph. iv. 5 , besides this passage), or indeed elsewhere in the N. T. of Christian baptism (only in I Pet. iii. 21), that we have not sufficient data for a sound induction. So far as the two words have any inherent difference of meaning, $\beta$ antucuòs denotes rather the act in process and $\beta$ ántro $\mu a$ the result.

 understand $X \rho \iota \sigma \bar{\omega}$ for the sake of the parallelism with ver．II ${ }^{\boldsymbol{\epsilon} \nu} \underset{\dot{\$}}{\boldsymbol{s}}$ кai．．．év $\tilde{\omega}^{\tilde{0}}$ кai．But this parallelism is not suggested by the sense：while on the other hand there is obviously a very clase connexion between ovvra－ complementary aspects of baptism； comp．Rom．vi． 4 sq．$\sigma v \nu \in \tau a ́ \phi \eta \mu \epsilon \nu$

 тồ $\theta a \nu a ́ t o v ~ a u ̛ r o v, ~ a ̀ ̉ \lambda \grave{a}$ кaì rîs

 $\sigma, \sigma \mu \in \nu$ ．In fact the idea of $\mathrm{X} \rho \iota \sigma \tau \bar{\varrho}$ must be reserved for ouv $\boldsymbol{\sigma}_{\boldsymbol{\epsilon}} \rho \theta \eta \tau \epsilon$ where it is wanted，＇ye wore raised together with Him．＇ your faith in the operation，＇èvepycias being the objective genitive．So St in the resurrection are the benefits of the resurrection obtained，because only so are its moral effects produced． Hence St Paul prays that he may ＇know the power of Christ＇s resurrec－ tion＇（Phil．iii．10）．Hence too he makes this the cardinal article in the Christian＇s creed，＇If thou．．．believest in thy heart that God raised Him from the dead，thou shalt be saved＇ （Rom．x．9）．For the influence of Christ＇s resurrection on the moral and spiritual being，see the note on Phil． l．c．Others take $\tau \bar{\eta} s$ evepycias as the subjective genitive，＇faith which comes from the operation etc．，＇arguing from a mistaken interpretation of the par－ allel passage Ephes．i．I9（where каг̀̀ тì $\nu$ èvé $\rho \gamma \varepsilon \epsilon a \nu$ should be connected，not with roùs mıorevontas，but with $\pi i ́$ rò explanation however yields a better sense，and the genitive after $\pi i \sigma \pi / s$ far more commonly describes the ob－ ject than the source of the faith，e．g． Rom．iii．22，26，Gal．iii．22，Ephes．iii． 12，Phil．i．27，iii．9， 2 Thess．ii．I3．

13．In the sentence which follows it seems necessary to assume a change of subject．There can be little doubt that of $\theta$ eds is the mominative to ouv－ sage Ephes．ii．4， 5 directly suggests this．（2）This is uniformly St Paul＇s mode of speaking elsewhere．It is always God who éyєipei，avvєүєipєi， or through Christ．（3）Though it might be possible to assign av̀v aùr⿳⺈⿴囗十一 to the subject of $\sigma v \nu \epsilon$ §оотоí $\eta \sigma \in \nu$（see the note on i．20），yet a reference to some other person is more natural．These reasons seem to decide the subject of $\sigma_{\nu \nu \in \zeta \omega-}$ отоígєн．But at the same time it appears quite impossible to continue the same subject，o $\theta$ eós，to the end of the sentence．No grammatical mean－ ing can be assigned to $\dot{\alpha} \pi \epsilon \kappa \delta ̊ v \sigma a ́ \mu \epsilon \nu o s$, by which it could be understood of God the Frather．We must suppose therefore that a new subject，ó Xpır－ rós，is introduced meanwhile，either self；and of the two the former seems the easier point of transition．For a similar instance of abrupt transition， which is the more natural owing to the intimate connexion of the work of the Son with the work of the Father，see c．g．i． 17 sq．

каı̀ viâs］i．e．＇you Gentiles．＇This will appear from a study of the parallel passages iii．7，8，Ephes．i．13， ii．I sq．，II，13，17，22，iii．2，iv． 17 ； see the notes on Ephes．i．13，and on

 $\kappa \alpha i$ т $\dot{\hat{\eta}} \dot{\alpha} \kappa \rho о \beta \nu \sigma \tau i \alpha, ~ \tau \hat{\eta} s$ баркòs $\dot{\nu} \mu \hat{\omega} \nu, \sigma u \nu \epsilon\} \omega о \pi о i ́ \eta \sigma \epsilon \nu$

то̂̂s таралтс́ $\mu a \sigma \iota \nu$ к.т...] 'by reason of your transgressions etce. The $\pi \alpha-$ ратгө́ $\mu$ ата are theactual definite transgressions, while the dxpoßugria tins бapкòs is the impure carnal disposition which prompts to them. For the dative comp. Ephes. ii. I, 5, where the same expression occurs; see Winer Gramm. § xxxi, p. 270. On the other has a wholly different meaning, as the context shows. The in of the received text, though highly supported, isdoubtless an interpolation for the sake of grammatical clearness.

 fact is here mentioned, not for its own sake but for its symbolical meaning. The outward uncircumcision of the Gentiles is a type of their unchastened carnal mind. In other words, though the literal meaning is not excluded, the spiritual reference is most prominent, as appears from ver. II $\dot{\epsilon} y$ गit

 At the same time the choice of the expression shows that the Colossian converts addressed by St Paul were mainly Gentiles.
 tioned whether the life here spoken of should be understood in a spiritual sense of the regeneration of the moral being, or in a literal sense of the future life of immortality regarded as conferred on the Christian potentially now, though only to be realised hereafter. But is not such an issue altogether superfluous ? Is there any reason to think that St Paul would have separated these two ideas of life? To him the future glorified life is only the continuation of the present moral and spiritual life. The two are the same in essence, however the accidents.
may differ. Moral and spiritual regeneration is salration, is life.
$\dot{\nu} \mu \bar{a} s]$ The pronoun is repeated for the sake of emphasis. The omission in some good copies is doubly explained; ( I ) By the desire to simplify the grammar ; (2) By the wish to relieve the awiswardness of the close proximity between $\dot{i} \mu a ̂ s$ and $\eta$ juiv. This latter consideration has led a few good authorities to substitute $\dot{\eta} \mu \mathrm{a} s$ for $i \mu a s$, and others to substitute $\dot{\mu} \mu i \bar{\nu}$ for $\dot{\eta} \mu i v$. For instances of these emphatic repetitions in St Paul see the note on i. $20 \delta i^{\prime}$ av̀ oviy avivê] ' with Christ,' as in Ephes.
 the inadmissibility of the reading aut $\bar{\varphi}$ see the note on eis autidy i . 2.
$\chi^{\text {apıба́ } \mu є \nu o s] ~ ' h a v i n g ~ f o r g i v e n, ' ~ a s ~}$ in Luke vii. 42 sq., 2 Cor. ii. 7, 10, xii. 13, Ephes. iv. 32; see also the note on iii. r 3 below. The idea of $\sin$ as a debt incurred to God (Matt. vi. i2 rà underlics this expression, as it does also the commoner term for pardon, ádequs 'remission.' The image is carried out in the cancelled bond, ver. 14 $\left.{ }_{j} \mu_{\mu \nu}\right]$ The person is changed; ' not to you Gentiles only, but to us all alike.' St Paul is cager to claim his share in the transgression, that he may claim it also in the forgiveness. For other examples of the change from the sccond to the first person, see i. то-13, iii. 3, 4, Ephes. ii. 2, 3, 13, I4, iv. 3I, 32, v. 2 (the correct reading), I Thess. v. 5, where the motive of the change is similar. See also Gal. iii. 25,26 , iv. 5,6 , where there is the converse transition.

 signifying 'to blot out, to erase', is enter a name, etc.' ; e.g. Arist. Pax

1181, Lysias c. Nicom. p. 183, Plato Resp. vi. p. 501 в. More especially is it so used in reference to an item in an account, e.g. Demosth. c. Aristog.

то̀ каe' $\dot{j} \mu \bar{\omega} \nu$ к.т..$\lambda.]^{\prime}$ the bond standing against us.' The word $\chi \in \iota \rho \frac{1}{y} \rho a-$ фoy, which means properly an autograph of any kind, is used almost exclusively for a note of hand, a bond or obligation, as having the 'sign-manual' of the debtor or contractor : e.g. Tobit

 $\gamma \rho \dot{\phi} \phi \omega y$ кai $\sigma v \mu \beta \circ \lambda a i \omega \nu$. It is more common in Latin than in Greek, e.g. Cic. Fam. vii. I8 ' Misi cautionem chirographi mei,' Juv. Sat. xvi. 41 'Debitor aut sumptos pergit non reddere nummos, Vana supervacui dicens chirographa ligni' (comp. xiii. 137). Hence chirographom, chirographarius, are frequent terms in the Roman lawbooks; see Heumann-Hesse Handlexicon zu den Quellen des römischen Rechts s.v. p. 74.

In the case before us the Jewish people might be said to have signed the contract when they bound themselves by a curse to observe all the enactments of the law (Deut. xxvii. 14-26; comp. Exod. xxiv. 3) ; and the primary reference would be to them. But $\eta^{i} \mu \hat{i} \nu, \dot{\eta}^{\prime} \omega \bar{\omega} \nu$, seem to include Gentiles as well as Jews, so that a wider reference must be given to the expression. The סóy $\mu a t a$ therefore, though referring primarily to the Mosaic ordinances, will include all forms of positive decrees in which moral or social principles are embodied or religious duties defined; and the 'bond' is the moral assent of the conscience, which (as it were) signs and seals the obligation. The Gentiles, though 'not having a law, are a law to themselves' aitives evseikyvura карঠiats av่т $\omega$, $\sigma v \mu \mu a \rho \tau v \rho o v i \sigma \eta s$ Sue the notes on Gal. ii. 19, iv. 1 i. Comp. Orig. Hom. in Gen. xiii. 4 (II. p. 96).

 סó $\gamma \mu a$ is here used in its proper sense of a 'decree,' 'ordinance,' corresponding to $\delta o \gamma \mu a r i j_{\epsilon \sigma} \theta_{\epsilon}$ below, ver. 20. This is its only sense in the N. T.; e.g. Luke ii. I, Acts xvii. 7, of the emperor's decrees ; Acts xvi. 4 of the Apostolic ordinances. Here it refers especially to the Mosaic law, as in Joseph. Ant. xv. 5. 3 тà кá入入ıбтa $\tau \hat{\omega} \nu$
 ขо́коts, Philo Leg. All. i. 16 (I p. 54)
 i. 3 т $\hat{\nu} \nu \pi a \tau \rho i \omega \nu$ סoर $\mu a ́ \tau \omega \nu$. Comp. Iren. Fragm. 38 (p. 855 Stieren) where, immediately after a reference to our גeıtovpyeiv. In the parallel passage, Ephes. ii. 15, this is the exclusive reference; but here (for reasons explained in the last note) it seems best to give the term a secondary and more eatensive application.

The dative is perhaps best explained as governed by the idea of $\gamma^{\prime} \gamma \rho a \mu-$ $\mu \dot{y} y o \nu$ invoived in रeipóypaфoy (comp. rítocs); as in I Tím. ii. 6 тò $\mu$ aptúpoo kaıois is̛oots, where katpois depends on an implied $\mu \in \mu a \rho \tau \cup \rho \eta \mu \in \nu=\nu$. Otherwise it is taken as closely connected with ка $\theta^{\prime}{ }^{\dot{\eta}} \mu \bar{\omega} \nu$, ' the bond which was in force against us by reason of the ordinances': see Winer § xxxi. p. 273. A. Buttmann p. 8o. Possibly an év has dropped out of the text before rois סó $\gamma \mu a \sigma \iota y$, owing to the similar ending Xeiporpaфonen (comp. Ephes. ii. 15); but, if so, the omission must date from the earliest age, since no existing authorities exhibit any traces of such a reading; see the note on ver. i8 á éópaкev, and comp. Phil, ii. I $\epsilon$ êt $\tau t s \sigma \pi \lambda a ́ \gamma \chi \nu \alpha$.

A wholly different interpretation howover prevails universally among Greek commentators both here and in Ephes. ii. 15. They take toîs ©ó $\gamma$ $\mu a \sigma \iota y$, ér \&ó $\gamma \mu a \sigma \iota \nu$, to mean the 'doctrines or precepts of the Gospel,' and so to describe the instrument by which the abrogation of the law was effected. So Chrysostom, Severianus, Theodore of Mopsuestia, and Theodoret, followed by the later commentators ©icumenius and Theophylact. Strangely enough they do not allude to the correct interpretation; nor(with the exception of the passage ascribed to Irenæus which is quoted above) have I found any distinct traces of it in any Greek father. The grammatical difficulty would be taken to favour this interpretation, which moreover was characteristic of the age when the battle of creeds was fought. But it has been nniversally abandoned by modern interpreters, as plainly inappropriate to the context and also as severing the substantive סóypa here from the verb $\delta o y p a r i \xi \epsilon \iota$ in ver. 20. The Latin fathers, who had either decretis or sententiis in their version, were saved from this false interpretation; e.g. Hilar, de Trin. i. 12 (II. p. IO), ix. io (II. p. 265 sq.), Ambros. Apol. Dav. 13 (I. p. 698), do Fid. iii. 2 (II. p. 499), August. de Pecc. Mer. i. 47 (x. p. 26): though they very commonly refer to the decree of condemnation. Jerome however on Ephes. ii. i5 (viI. p. 581) follows the Greeks. The later Christian sense of đó $\boldsymbol{y}_{\mu}$ a, meaning ' doctrine,' camefrom its secondary classical use, where it was applied to the authoritative and categorical'sentences' of the philosophers: comp. Just. Mart. Apol. i. 7 (p. 56 D) oi ér тробауорєи́ортаи, каі́тєє ти̂̀ боүна́тшу èvapricy ö̀vt suis decretis quae philosophi vocant סóy $\quad$ ata,' Senec. Epist. xct. 10 'Nulla ars contemplativa sine decretis suis est, quae Graeci rocant dogmata, nobis vel decreta licet adpellare vel scita vel placita.' See the indices to Plutarch, Epictetus, etc., for illustrations of the use of the term. There is an approach towards the ecclesiastical meaning in Ignat. Magn. $13 \beta_{\epsilon} \beta$ awт $\hat{\omega} \nu \dot{\alpha} \pi \pi o \sigma \tau o ́ \lambda \omega \nu, ~ B a r n a b . ~ § ~ I ~ \tau p i ́ a ~ o u ̉ y ~$ סó ${ }^{\prime} \mu a \tau a ́$ écriy Kvpíov (comp. § 9, 10).

 posed to us.' The former expression, ro $\kappa a \theta^{3} \eta_{j \mu \hat{\omega}} \nu$, referred to the validity of the bond; the present, ô $\boldsymbol{\eta}^{\boldsymbol{\eta} \nu} \boldsymbol{v} \pi \epsilon \nu a \nu-$ riov $j_{\mu} \mu \nu$, describes its active hostility. It is quite a mistake to suppose that the first preposition in ixteyavitios etc. Neither in classical writers nor in the $\mathrm{c} x \mathrm{xx}$ has the word any shade of this meaning. It is very commonly used, for instance, of things which are directly antagonistic and mutually exclusive: e.g. Aristot. de Gen. et Corr. i. 7 (p. 323) $\Delta \eta \mu$ о́критоя...

 (i.e. self-contradictory) $\phi$ aiver $\theta a \iota \lambda_{\epsilon}-$ [Plato] Alcib. Sec. 138 a $\Sigma \Omega$. Tò $\mu$ aiфрореìv; AA. Máne Mèv oủy... 39 в $\Sigma \Omega$.
 $\pi \omega \bar{s}$ ầ $\boldsymbol{\varepsilon} \boldsymbol{\prime} \eta$; (i.e. how can one thiug have two direct opposites?), where the whole argument depends on this sense of vitevartios. In compounds with ino the force of the preposition will generally be determined by the meaning of the other element in the compound; and, as èvavtios (ë้vavtı) implies locality, a local sense is commu-be compared with $\boldsymbol{u} \pi a \lambda \lambda \dot{a} \sigma \sigma \epsilon \pm$, $\boldsymbol{i}-$ Cyrop. i. 2. I2 $\lambda$ noràs $\dot{\text { in } \pi o \delta \rho a \mu \epsilon i v ' ~ ' ~ t o ~}$ up'), ひ́ゆьनтával (Polyb. i. 506 visध́ $\sigma \tau \eta-$ $\pi$ ods $\mu$ 'ocs,' he broughtup' his own ship). With this meaning, 'over against,' 'close in upon,' the preposition does not weaken but enhance the force of ivautios, so that the compound will denote ' direct,' ' close,' or 'persistent opposition.'

 Christ, hath taken it avay,' There is a double change in this clause: (1) (2as) are replaced by a finite verb.

 a perfect. The substitution of ${ }^{\prime} \rho \in \boldsymbol{p}$ for ${ }^{\prime} \rho \kappa \kappa \nu$ in some copies betrays a consciousness on the part of the scribes of the dislocation produced by the new tense. As a new subject, $\dot{\delta}$ Xpıaтós, must be introduced somewhere (see the note on ver. 13), the severance thus created suggests this as the best point of transition. The perfect ग्रिел, 'He hath removed it;' is suggested by the feeling of relief and thanksgiving, which rises up in the Apostle's mind at this point. For the strong expression aùpety ${ }^{\boldsymbol{\epsilon} k}$ [rov] $\mu$ 'soov, 'to remove and put out of sight,' comp. Lux Is. Ivii. 2, Epictet. iii. 3. 15, Plut. Mor. p. 5 I9 D; so 2 Thess. ii. 7 éк $\mu$ écov үé̀ was even more emphatic. Not only was the writing erased, but the document itself was torı up and cast aside.' By $\pi \rho \circ \sigma \eta \lambda \dot{\omega} \sigma a s$ is meant that the law of ordinances was nailed to the cross, rent with Christ's body, and destroyed with His death : see the notes on Gal. yi. 14 di ou์ [roû sphere of material ordinances) écouvрштає ка́yळ ко́ $\sigma \mu$, where the idea is the same. It has been supposed that in some cities the abrogation of a decree was signified by running a nail through it and hanging it up in public. The image would thus gain force, but there is no distinct evidence of such a custom.
 word appears not to occur at all before St Paul, and rarely if ever after his time, except in writers who may be supposed to have his language before them; e.g. Hippol Haer. i. 24
 In Joseph. Ant. vi. 142 ȧmek $\delta \dot{v} s$ is only a variation for $\mu \epsilon \tau \epsilon \kappa \delta \dot{v} s$ which seems to be the correct reading. The word also appears in some texts of Babrius Fab. xviii. 3, but it is merely a conjectural emendation. Thus the occurrence of àmekঠivecotal here and in iii. 9, and of á $\pi$ éкঠvats above in ver. 1I, is remarkable; and the choice of an unusual, if not a wholly new, word must have been prompted by the desire to emphasize the completeness of the action. The force of the double componnd may be inferred from a passage of Lysias, where the two words àmoঠ́v́є $\sigma \theta a \iota$ and $\epsilon \in \delta \delta \dot{v} \epsilon \sigma \theta a t$ occur together; c. Theomn. i. 10 (p. 117) $\phi \dot{a}-$ $\nu i \sigma \kappa o \nu$ éx $\delta \in \delta \dot{v} \sigma \theta a$, . Here however the sense of $\dot{d} \pi \epsilon \kappa \delta \gamma \sigma \dot{d} \mu \epsilon \nu_{0}$ is difficult. The meaning generally assigned to it, 'having spoiled, stripped of their arms,' disregards the middle voice. St Jerome is chiefly responsible for this common error of interpretation: for in place of the Old Latin 'exuens se,' which was grammatically correct, he substituted 'exspolians' in his revised version. In his interpretation however he was anticipated by the commentator Hilary, who read 'exuens' for 'exuens se' in his text. Discarding this sense, as inconsistent with

interpretations.

(r) The common interpretation of the Latin fathers, 'putfing off the from tàs d̀ $p \chi$ às к.т. $\lambda$. and understanding $\tau \dot{\eta} \nu \quad \sigma a ́ \rho k a$ or $\tau \dot{o} \sigma \hat{\omega} \mu a$ with it; comp. 2 Cor.v. 3 ìठová $\boldsymbol{e} v o t$. So Novat. de Trin. 16 'exutus carnem'; Ambros. Expos. Luc. .र. § 107 (1, p. 138r)'exuens se carnem,' comp. de Fid. iii. 2 (II. p. 499); Hilar. de Trin. i. 13 (II. p. Io) 'exutus carnem' (comp. ix. 10, p. 265), x. 48 (p. 355)'spolians se carne' (comp. ix. 1I, p. 266); Augustin. Epist. 149 (II. p. 513) 'exuens - se carne,' etc. This appears to have been the sense adopted much earlicr in a Docetic work quoted by Hippol.

 $\beta \varepsilon v ́ \sigma a \sigma a$ к.т.入. It is so paraphrased likewise in the Peshito Syriac and the Gothic. The reading $\dot{a} \pi \epsilon \kappa \delta \nu \sigma a ́ \mu \epsilon \nu o s$ ràs àp $\chi^{\text {c̀s }}$ кal), found in some ancient authorities, must be a corruption from an earlier text, which had inserted tho gloss rj̀̀ $\sigma \dot{\rho} \rho к а$ after àтєкঠ́vба́ $\mu \epsilon \nu=s$, while retaining tàs d $\rho$ Xàs кai, and which seems to have been in the hands of some of the Latin fathers already quoted. This interpretation has been connected with a common metaphorical use of àmo$\delta \dot{f} \epsilon \sigma \theta a u$, signifying 'to strip' and so 'to prepare for a contest'; e. g. Plat.

 énì фцдобофíav ámodúvтes. 'The serious objection to this rendering is, that it introduces an isolated metaphor which is not explained or suggested by anything in the context.
(2) The common interpretation of the Greek fathcrs; 'having stripped off and put away the powers of evil,' $\chi$ às к.r.ג. So Chrysostom, Severianus, Theodore of Mopsuestia, and Theodoret. This also appears to have been the interpretation of Origen, in Matt. xii. § 25 (III. p. 544), ib. § 40 (p. 560), in Ioann. vi. § 37 (Iv. p. 155), ib. xx. § 29 (p. 356), though his language is not explicit, and though his translators, e.g. inz Libr. Ies. Hom. vii. § 3 (II. p. 413), make him say otherwise. The meaning then will be as follows. Christ took upon Himself our human nature with allits temptations(Heb.iv. 15). The powers of evil gathered about Him. Again and arain they assailed Him; but each fresh assault ended in a new defeat. In the wilderness He was tempted by Satan; but Satan retired for the time baffled and defeated (Luke iv. I3 àmé $\sigma r \eta ~ a ̀ n '$ voice of His chief disciple the temptation was renewed, and He was entreated to dectine His appointed sufferings and death. Satan was again driven off (Matt. xvi. 23 ขีт comp. Matt. viii. 31). Then the last hour came. This was the great crisis of all, when ' the power of darkness' $\sigma$ ia той $\sigma$ кórous; see above i. 13), when the prince of the world asserted his кó $\sigma \mu o v$ ). The final act in the conflict began with the agony of Gethsemane; it ended with the cross of Calvary. The victory was complete. The enemy of man was defeated. The powers of evil, which had clung like a Nessus robe about His humanity, were torn off and cast aside for ever. And the victory of mankind is involved in the victory of Christ. In His cross we too are divested of the poisonous clinging garments of temptation and $\sin$ and death; T $\hat{\varphi}$ à $\pi 0 \theta \epsilon \sigma \theta a t \tau \dot{\eta} \nu$

$\kappa a\}^{\dagger} \dot{\eta} \mu \omega \bar{\omega}$. For the image of the garments comp. Is. Ixiv. 6, but especially Zech. iii. I sq., 'And he showed me Joshua the high-priest standing before the angel of the Lord and Satan standing at his right hand to resist him. And the Lord said unto Satan, The Lord rebuke thee, 0 Satan ... Now Joshua was clothed with filthy garments... And Ho answered and spake unto those that stood before Him, saying, Take cizay the fillhy garanents from him. And unto him He said, Behold, $I$ hare caused thine iniquity to pass from thee' In this prophetic passage the image is used of His type and namesake, the Jesus of the Restoration, not in his own person, but as the ligh-priest and representative of a guilty but cleansed and forgiven people, with whom he is identified. For the metaphor of àmekסuváuejas more especially, see Philo Quod det. poti.ins. I3(I. p. 199) Ekavaбо $\mu \in \theta a$, where the image in the context is that of $a$ wrestling bout.

This interpretation is grammatical; it accords with St Paul's teaching; and it is commended by the parallel uses of the substantive in ver. $1 \mathrm{I} \dot{\epsilon} \nu \tau \bar{j} \overline{\mathrm{a}} \pi \epsilon \kappa-$ plished in us when we are baptized into Hisdeath is a counterpart to the $\dot{d} \pi \epsilon^{\prime} x_{-}$ - $\delta v a t s$ which He accomplished by His death. With Him indeed it was only the temptation, with us it is the sin as well as temptation; but otherwise the parallel is complete. In both cases it is a divestiture of the powers of evil, a liberation from the domiuion of the flesh. On the other hand the common explanation 'spoiling' is not less a violation of St Paul's usage (iii. 9) than of grammatical rule.

 especially meant here will appear from тоunpias к.т.入. See the note on i. r.

 tor displays his captives or trophies in a triumphal procession: Hor. Epist. i. 17. $33^{\text {i }}$ captos ostendere eivibus hostes. The word is extremely rare;
 (whicre it ought probably to be read for the more common word mafa $\delta \epsilon \gamma-$ $\mu a \pi i \sigma a l$ ), Act. Paul. et Petr. 33 लौє $\gamma \epsilon$

 $\mu a r i \sigma o v a t y$ aicóp. Nowhere does the word convey the idea of 'making an example' ( $\pi a \rho a \delta ¢ \epsilon \gamma \mu a \pi i \sigma u)$ but signifies simply 'to display, publish, proclaim.' In the context of the last passare we have as the consequence, his impieties. The substantive occurs on the Rosetta stone l. 30 (Boeckh

'่ $\boldsymbol{\pi}$ ap $\rho \eta \sigma i a]$ ' $b o d l l y$,' not 'publicly.' As $\pi a \rho \rho \eta \sigma i a$ is 'unreservedness, plainness of speech' ( $\pi$ av-pqaia, its opposite being d $\rho \rho \eta \sigma i a$ 'silence'), so while applied still to language, it may be opposed either ( I ) to 'fear,' as John rii. 13, Acts iv. 29, or (2) to 'ambiguity, reserve,' Joh. xi. 14, xyi. 25,29; but 'misgiving, apprehension' in some form or other seems to bo always the correlative idea. Hence, when it is transferred from words to actions, it appears always to retain the idea of ' contidence, boldness'; eg. 1 Mace. iv. $18 \lambda \dot{\eta} \psi \epsilon \tau \epsilon \tau \grave{\alpha}$ бк $\hat{v} \lambda a \quad \mu \epsilon \tau \grave{a}$ mapporias, Test. xii Patr. Rub. 4 aik publicity may sometimes be connected with the word as a secondary notion, 16. $\hat{\eta}$ 议 $\pi \delta \sigma \in \omega_{0}$

Q.g. in Joh. vii. 4, where év rapp $\quad$, cival 'to assume a bold attitude' is opposed to év криттй тоєєì (comp. xviii. 20); but it does not displace the primary sense.

Optap $\beta$ evं $\sigma a s]$ 'leading them in triumph,' the same metaphor asin 2 Cor.
 т仑̣̂ Xpıorê к.т. $\lambda$., where it is wrongly translated in the A.V. 'causeth us to triumph.' Here however it is the de. feated powers of evil, there the subjugated persons of men, who are led in public, chained to the triumphal car of Christ. This is the proper meaning and construction of $\theta$ ptapBevicu, as found elsewhere. This verb takes an accusative ( I ) of the person over whom the triumph is celebrated, e.g. Plut. Fit. Arat. 54 тоиิтоу Aiцi ${ }_{\text {tos }}$ $\beta$ aбcieis è $\theta_{\text {ptá } \mu} \beta \varepsilon v \sigma \epsilon$ : (2) of the spoils exhibited in the triumph, e.g. Tatian more rarely of the substance of the triumph, e.g. Vit. Camill. 30 ó $\delta \dot{\epsilon}$ character of his country's saviour.' The passive $\theta \rho t a \mu \beta \in \dot{\varepsilon} \epsilon \sigma \theta a c$ is 'to beled in triumph,' 'to be triumphed over,' e.g. Vit.C.Marc. 35. So the Latins say 'triumphare aliquem' and 'triumphari.'

 тépous... ©̀à тoṽ $\sigma \tau a y \rho o \hat{v}$. The violence of the metaphor is its justification. The paradox of the crucifixion is thus placed in the strongest light-triumph in helplessness and glory in slame. The convict's gibbet is the victor's car.

16-19. 'Seeing then that the bond is cancelled, that the law of ordinances is repealed, beware of subjecting yourselves to its tyranny again. Suffer no man to call you to account in the matter of eating or drinking, or again of the observance of a festival or a new moon or a sabbath. These are only shadows thrown in advance, only types of things to come. The substance, tho reality, in every case belongs to the Gospel of Christ. The prize is now fairly within your reach. Do not suffer yourselves to be robbed of it by any stratagem of the false teachers. Their religion is an oflicious lumility which displays itself in the worship of angels. They make a parade of their visions, but they are following an empty phantom. They profess humility, but they are puffed up with their vaunted wisdom, which is after all only the mind of the flesh. Meanwhile they have substituted inferior spiritual agencies for the One true Mediator, the Eternal Word. Clinging to these lower intelligences, they have lost their hold of the Head; they have severed their connexion with Him, on whom the whole body depends; from whom it derives its vitality, and to whom it owes its unity, being supplied with nourishment and knit together in one by means of the several joints and attachments, so that it grows with a growth which comes from God Himself.'

16 sq . The two main tendencies of the Colossian heresy are discernible in this warning (vv. 16-19), as they were in the previous statement (vv. 9 -15). Here however the order is reversed. The practical error, an excessive ritualism and ascetic rigour, is first dealt with (vr. 16, 17); the theological error, the interposition of angelic mediators, follows after (rr. 18,19 ). The first is the substitution of a shadow for the substance; the second is the preference of an inferior member to the head. The reversal of order is owing to the connexion of the paragraphs; the opening subject in the second paragraph being a continuation of the concluding subject in the first, by the figure called chiasm: comp. Gal. iv. 5.

17. 8 हो $\sigma \tau \iota y ~ \sigma \kappa ı a ̀ . ~$

кртує́тш] not 'condemn you', but 'take you to task'; as e.g. Rom. xiv. 3 sq . The judgment may or may not end in an acquittal ; but in any case it is wrong, since these matters ought not to be taken as the basis of a judgment.
 in drinking'; Rom. xiv. 17 ov̉ үá $\rho$
 $\pi o ́ \sigma ı \varsigma, ~ a ̀ \lambda \lambda \grave{\alpha} \delta ı к a \iota \sigma \sigma u ́ v \eta ~ к . \tau . \lambda ., ~ H e b . ~ i x . ~$

 $\pi a \rho a \sigma \tau \eta \dot{\prime} \sigma \epsilon \tau \hat{\omega}$ Ө $\Theta \hat{\varphi}$ к.т. $\lambda$. The first indication that the Mosaic distinctions of things clean and unclean should be abolished is given by our Lord Himself: Mark vii. 14 sq. (the correct reading in ver. 19 being ка $\theta a \rho i \zeta \omega \nu$ тávтa тà B $\rho \dot{\mu} \mu a \tau \alpha$ ). They were afterwards formally annulled by the vision which appeared to St Peter: Acts x. II sq. The ordinances of the Mosaic law applied almost exclusively to meats. It contained no prohibitions respecting drinks except in a very few cases; e.g. of the priests ministering in tho tabernacle (Lev. x. 9), of liquids contained in unclean vessels etc. (Lev. xi. 34, 36), and of Nazarite vows (Num. vi. 3). These directions, taken in connexion with the rigid observances which the later Jews had grafted on them (Matt. xxiii. 24), would be sufficient to explain the expression, when applied to the Mosaic law by itself, as in Heb. l. e. The rigour of the Colossian false teachers however, like that of their Jewish prototypes the Essenes, doubtless went far beyond the injunctious of the law. It is probable that they forbad wine and animal food altogether: see the introduction pp .86 , 104 sq . For allusions in St Paul to similar obserrances not required by the law, see Rom. xiv. 2 $\dot{\delta} \delta \dot{\epsilon} \dot{\alpha} \sigma \theta \epsilon \nu \omega \bar{\nu} \lambda \dot{\chi}_{\chi} a \nu a \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \theta i \epsilon \epsilon$, ver. 21 ка-к.т.д., I Tim. іч. 2, $3 \kappa \omega \lambda \nu о ́ \nu \tau \omega \nu . . . \dot{d} \pi \varepsilon ́-$

 The correct reading seems to be кai $\dot{\epsilon} \nu \pi \sigma^{\prime} \sigma \in \epsilon$, thus connecting together the words between which there is a nataral affinity. Comp. Philo Vit. Mous. i. § 33 (II. p. 110) $\delta \in \sigma \pi$ oivals $\chi^{a \lambda \epsilon \pi a i ̂ s ~}$

$\left.\epsilon^{\epsilon} \nu \mu \dot{f} \rho \in t\right]$ ' in the matter of,' etc.;
 тои́т@. The expression seems originally to mean 'in the division or category,' and in classical writers most commonly occurs in connexion with $\mu$ fiv, etc.: comp. Demosth. c. Avistocr.

 'in the capacity of.' Hence it gets to signify more widely, as here, 'with respect to,' 'by reason of': comp. Philo Quod det. pot. ins. § 2 (r. p. 192)
 т̀̀ латє́ $\rho a$ кобнои̂̀ral, in Flacc. 20 quoted by the commentators, is a false parallel : for фóvov is there governed his turn.'

Eopi $\bar{\eta}$ к. .т.. .] The same three words occur together, as an exhaustive enumeration of the sacred times among the Jews, in I Chron. xxiii. 3I, 2 Chron. ii. 4 , xxxi. 3. Ezek. xlv. 17, Hos. ii. II, Justin Dial. 8, p. 226; comp. Is. i. I3, 14. See also Gal. iv. 10 ท̀ $\mu$ є́pas mapaavaous, where the first three words correspond to the three words used here, though the order is reversed. The eopry' here, like the кaupoit there, refers chiefly to the annual festivals, the passover, pentecost, etc. The yeo$\mu \eta v i a$ here describes more precisely the monthly festival, which is there designated more vaguely as $\mu \tilde{\eta} \nu \epsilon s$. The áßßßara here gives by name the weekly holy-day, which is there indicated more generally by $\eta \mu$ ќpal.

pєouпvias] See Num. xxviii. If sq. The forms $\nu$ soupvia and povapuia seem to be used indifferently in the common dialect, though the latter is more common. In the Attic voupquia alone was held to be correct; see Lobeck Phryn. p. 148. On the whole the preference should perhaps be given to veouquias here, as supported by some authorities which are generally trustworthy in matters of orthography, and as being the less usual form in itself.
$\sigma a \beta \beta a ́ \tau \omega \nu]$ ' $a$ sabbath-day, not, as the A. V., 'sabbath days'; for the coordinated words éop $\hat{\eta} s$, veouquias, are in the singular. The word oáßßata is derived from the Aramaic (as distinguished from the Hebrew) form NתבU, and accordingly preserves the Aramaic termination in a. Hence it was naturally declined as a plurai noun, бג́ßßara, $\sigma a \beta \beta \dot{\beta} \tau \omega \nu$. The generaI use of $\sigma \alpha \beta \beta$ дara, when a single sab-bath-day was meant, will appear from such passages as Jos. Ant. i. I. I ä $\mathrm{yo}^{-}$

 д̈тьs ба́ß阝ara ка入єíat, Plut. Mor. 169 c 'Iovôaîot $\sigma a \beta \beta a ́ \tau \omega \nu$ ồ $\nu \tau \omega \nu$ є̀ $\nu$

 табиу à atporồóvvoov eivat, Hor. Sat. i. 9.69 'hodie tricesima sabbata.' In the New Testament ad́ßßara is only once used distinctly of more than a single day, and there the plurality of meaning is brought out by the attached numeral; Acts xvii. 2 є́mì $\sigma \dot{\alpha} \beta$ , Bata тpia.

On the observance of days and seasons see again Gal, iv. 10, Rom. xiv. 5, 6. A strong anti-Judaic view on the subject is expressed in the Epist. ad Diogn. § 4. Origen c. Cels. viii. 21, 22, after referring to Thucyd. i. $70 \mu \eta \boldsymbol{\eta} \tau$ $\pi \rho a ̂ \xi a l$, says ó ténctos, aंतi éy toîs $\lambda o ́-$

 on to explain what is the maparkev', the $\pi a \sigma_{\chi} a$, the $\pi \in \nu \tau \eta \kappa \sigma \sigma \pi \eta^{\prime}$, of such a man. The observance of sacred times was an integral part of the old dispensation. Under the new they have ceased to have any value, except as a means to an end. The great principle that 'the sabbath was made for man and not man for the sabbath,' though underlying the Mosaic ordinances, was first distinctly pronounced by our Lord. The setting apart of special days for the service of God is a confession of our imperfect state, an avowal that we cannot or do not devote our whole time to Him. Sabbaths will then uitimately be superseded, when our life becomes one eternal sabbath. Meanwhile the Apostle's rebuke warns us against attributing to any holy days whatever a meaning and an importance which is alien to the spirit of the New Covenant. Bengel on the text writes, 'Sabbatum non laudatur, non imperatur; dominica memoratur, non praecipitur. Qui profundius in mundi negotiis haerent, his utilis et necessarius est dies definitus: qui semper sabbatizant, majori libertate gaudent.' Yes: but these last are just they who will most scrupulously restrict their liberty, so

17. Two ideas are prominent in this image. (I) The contrast between the ordinances of the Law and the teaching of the Gospel, as the shadow and the substance respectively; Pbilo

de Conf．ling． 37 （r．p．434）vopívavtas
由iซavel $\sigma \omega \mu$ át $\omega \nu$ єivar，Joseph．B．J． ii．2． $5 \sigma \kappa \iota \grave{\alpha} \nu$ ait $\eta \sigma \dot{\rho} \mu \epsilon \nu 0 s$ ßa $\sigma \iota \lambda \in i ́ a s$ Philo in Flacc． 19 （In．p．541）$\sigma$ кıà $\pi \rho a \gamma-$ conception of the shadow as thrown tator），so that the Law was a type and presage of the Gospel；Heb．x．r $\sigma \times 1 \grave{a} \nu$

 （comp．viii．5）．Thus it implies both the unsubstantiality and the super－ session of the Mosaic ritual．
$\left.{ }^{\text {a }}\right]$＇which things，＇whether＇dis－ tinctions of meats or observances of times．If the other reading of be ta－ ken，it will refer to the preceding sentence generally，as if the antece－ dent were＇the whole system of ordi－ nances．＇
тò סè $\sigma \hat{\omega} \mu a$ к．т．．．］．］As the shadow belonged to Moses，so＇the substance belongs to Christ＇；i．e．the reality， the antitype，in each case is found in the Christian dispensation．Thus the passover typifies the atoning sacrifice； the unleavened bread，the purity and sincerity of the true believer；the pentecostal feast，the ingathering of the first fruits；the sabbath，the rest of God＇s people；etc．

18．The Christian＇s career is the contest of the stadium（ $\delta \rho \dot{\partial} \mu o s$, Acts xx．24， 2 Tim．iv．7）；Christ is the umpire，the dispenser of the rewards （2 Tim．iv．8）；life eternal is the bay wreath，the victor＇s prize（ $\beta \rho \alpha \beta \epsilon i o \nu$ ， I Cor．ix．24，Phil．iii．14）．The Co－ lossians were in a fair way to win this prize；they had entered the lists duly； they were running bravely：but the false teachers，thrusting themselves in the way，attempted to trip them up or otherwise impede them in the race， and thus to rob them of their just reward．For the idea of кaraßpa－ ßєvéto compare especially Gal．v． 7 к．т．．．

катаßраßєчє́тш］＇rob of the prize， the $\beta \rho a \beta \epsilon$ io ${ }^{\prime}$＇；comp．Demosth．Mid． p． 544 （one of the documents）$\dot{\mathbf{\varepsilon}} \pi \iota \sigma \tau \dot{\alpha}-$ $\beta \epsilon v \theta \epsilon ́ \nu \tau a$ кай тарà тávта тà סíkata àтц$\mu \omega \in \dot{\epsilon} \nu \tau a$ ，which presents a close parallel to the use of катаßраßevet here．See also Eustath，on Il．i． 403 sq ． oi ma入aıoi，ib．Opusc．277，etc．The false teachers at Colossex are not re－ garded as umpires nor as successful rivals，but simply as persons frustrat－ ing those who otherwise would have won the prize．The word катаßpaßєч́єıu is wide enough to include such．The two compounds катаß $\beta$ а $\beta$ víc and $\pi a$－ $\rho a \beta \rho a \beta \in \dot{\epsilon} \epsilon \iota$（Plat．Mor．p． 535 с oi differ in this respect，that deprivation is the prominent idea in the former word and trickery in the latter．Jerome， Epist．exxi ad Algas．（土 p．879），sets down this word，which he wrongly interprets＇bravium accipiat adversum ros，＇as one of St Paul＇s Cilicisms． The passages quoted（whether the document in the Midias be authentic or not）are sufficient to show that this statement is groundless．
$\theta \in \lambda \omega \nu$ є́v］＇taking delight in，＇＇do－ roting himself to．＇The expression is common in the luxx，most frequently as a translation of＂ב xviii．22， 2 Sam．xy．26，I Kings x．9， 2 Chron．ix．8，Ps．cxi．I，cxlvi．Io， but in one passage of＂דצה ב， 1 Chron．xxviii．4．So too Test．xii
 ${ }_{\boldsymbol{\epsilon}} \boldsymbol{\nu}$ кал $\hat{\omega}$ ．Comp．also r Macc．iv． 42 below．Against this construction no valid objection has been urged．Other－ wise $\theta^{\prime}{ }^{\prime} h a y$ is taken absolutely，and various senses have been assigned to it，such as＇imperiously＇or＇design－ edly＇or＇wilfully＇or＇gladly，readily＇； but these are either unsupported by usage or inappropriate to the context. Leclerc (ad loc.) and Bentley (Crit. Sacr. p. 59) conjectured $6 \in \lambda y \omega v$; Toup (Emend. in Suid. II, p. 63) more plausibly $\AA \lambda \theta \omega^{\prime} y$; but the passages quoted show that no correction is needed.

tantivoфporivy] Humility is a vice with heathen moralists, but a virtue with Christian Apostles; see the note on Phil. ii. 3. In this passage, which (with ver. 23) forms the sole exception to the general language of the Apostles, the divergence is rather apparent than real. The disparagement is in the accompaniments and not in the word itself. Humility, when it becomes self-conscious, ceases to have any value; and self-consciousness at least, if not affectation, is implied by $\theta_{\epsilon}^{\prime} \lambda \omega \nu$ èv. Moreover the character of the ratecvoфpooivn in this case is further defined as $\theta_{\rho \eta \sigma к \in i}{ }^{\prime} \tau \hat{\omega} \nu \dot{a} \gamma \gamma^{\hat{e}} \lambda \omega \nu$, which was altogether a perversion of the truth.
 nected with the preceding by the vinculum of the same preposition. There was an officious parade of humility in selecting these lower beings as intercessors, rather than appealing directly to the throne of grace. The word refers properly to the external vites of religion, and so gets to signify an over-scrupulous devotion to external forms; as in Philo Quod det.

 iepovpyiots: comp. Aets xxvi. 5 , and see the well-known remarks of Coleridge on James i. 26, 27 , in Aide to Reflection p. 14. In the Lxx opp $^{\boldsymbol{p}}$ - times (Wisd. xi. 16, xiv. 16, 18, 27), and in all these examples the reference is to idolatrous or false worship. Indeed generally the usage of the word exhibits a tendency to a bad sense.
 and the angelolatry of these Colossian false teachers, more especially in its connexion with Essens teaching, see the introduction, pp. 89 sq ., Ior sq. , 110, 115 sq . For the prominence which was given to angelology in the speculations of the Jews generally, see the Preaching of Peter quoted in Clem. Alex. Strom. vì. 5 (p. 760) $\mu \eta \delta$ è кarà comp. 27.1 .26 (p. 344). From Jews it naturally spread to Judaizing Christians; e.g. Clem. Hom. iii. 36 $\dot{a}_{\gamma} \gamma^{\prime}{ }^{\prime} \lambda \omega \nu$ óvó $\mu a \tau a \quad \gamma \nu \omega \rho i \zeta \epsilon \epsilon$, viii. 12 sq ., Test. xii Patr. Levi 3 (quoted above on i. 16). The interest however extended to more orthodox circles, as appears from the passage in Ignat.

 the note there). Of angelology among Gnostie sects see Iren. ii. 30. 6, ii. 32. 5, Orig. c. Cels. vi. 30 sq . (I. p. 653), Clem. Alex. Exc. Theod. p. 970 sq., Pistis Sophia pp. 2, 19, 23, etc.
â ধ́о́ракєу к.т...].] literally 'invading what he has seen,' which is generally explained to mean 'parading' or 'poring over lis visions.' For this sense of $\dot{\epsilon} \mu \beta a \tau \epsilon \dot{v} \epsilon \nu$, which takes either a genitive or a dative or an accusative, comp. Philo de Plant. Noe ii. 19 (I. p. 341 ) траүнонєì èv тoís катà $\mu$ épos. At a later date this sense becomes common, e.g. Nemesius de Nat. Hom. p. 64 (ed. Matthæi) ovंра̀о̀ є́ $\mu \beta a \tau \epsilon \dot{\epsilon} \epsilon\llcorner$ тî $\theta \in \omega \rho i a$. In Xen. Symp. iv. 27 ì rt, the reading may be doubtful. But though à époake singly might mean 'his visions,' and é $\mu \beta a \tau \epsilon \dot{v} \omega \nu$ ' busying himself with,' the combination 'invading what he has seen,' thus interpreted, is so harsh and incongruous as to be hardily possible; and there was perhaps some corruption in the test prior to all existing authorities (see the note on Phil. ii. I for a parallel case). Did the Apostle write case the existing text aє由ракєnem Bateyon might be explained partly by an attempt to correct the form partly by the perplexity of transeribers when confronted with such unusual words. This reading had suggested itself to me independently without the knowledge that, so far as regards the latter word, it had been anticipated by others in the conjecture $\dot{a}$ word кешенßaтєip 'to walk on emptiness,' 'to tread the air' and so meta-$\tau \epsilon i v$, ai $\theta \epsilon \rho \epsilon \mu \beta a \tau \epsilon i v$, etc.) 'to indulge in vain speculations,' is not an uncommon word. For its metaphorical sense espe-

 Synes. de Insomn. p. 156 oṽre $\gamma$ व̀p kє-
 Though the preeise form кеше $\mu \beta$ areviev does not occur, yet it is unobjectionable in itself. For the other word which I have ventured to suggest, téaja or aiwépa, see Philo de Somn. ii. 6

 ${ }^{\eta} \eta \nu$ кєע市 $\delta$ ósav, Quod Deus immut.
 עòs $\psi$ evơoûs kai ả̧ß ofal катà кєעoù Raivoyrai The first and last passages more especially present striking parallels, and show how germane to St Paul's subject these ideas of 'suspension or balancing in the air' (é ${ }^{\prime} \dot{\rho} a$ or aicopa) and 'treading the void' ( $\kappa$ हveн $\beta$ ßatevé $\epsilon \nu$ ) would be, as expressing at once the spiritual pride and the emptiness of these speculative mystics; see also de Somn.іі. 2 (p. 66I) द̀нраіретаи каі тò sometimes of the instrument for suspending, sometimes of the position of suspension. In this last sense it describes the poising of a bird, the floating of a boat on the waters, the balancing on a rope, and the like. Hence its expressiveness when used as a metaphor.

In the received text a negative is This gives a very adequate sense ' in truding into those things which he iđưv: comp. Ezek. xiii 3 oưai toîs $\pi \rho o-$ the difficulty is thus overcome, this cannot be regarded as the original reading of the text, the authorities showing that the negative was an after insertion. See the detached note on various readings.

For the form eqpakev, which is better supported here than éшंpaкед, see the note on ii. I.
 Their profession of humility was a cloke for excessive pride: for, as St Paul says elsewhere (I Cor. viii. I), $\dot{\eta} \gamma \boldsymbol{\gamma} \bar{\omega} \sigma u s$ фvaioi. It may be questioned whether $\epsilon i k \hat{\eta}$ should be connected with the preceding or the following words. Its usual position in St Paul, before the words which it qualifies (Rom. xiii. 4, I Cor. xy. 2, $\kappa \rho \alpha \tau \hat{\omega} \nu \tau \grave{\eta} \nu \kappa \epsilon \phi \alpha \lambda \bar{\eta} \nu, \dot{\epsilon} \xi$ о $\hat{\tilde{v}} \pi \hat{\alpha} \nu \tau \dot{o} \sigma \hat{\omega} \mu \alpha \delta_{1} \dot{\alpha} \tau \hat{\omega} \nu \dot{\alpha} \phi \hat{\omega} \nu$

Gal. iv. in ; there is an exceptional reason for the exceptional position in Gal. iii. 4), points to the latter construction.
rov̂ voòs к.r.入.] 'the mind of his flesh,' i.e. unenlightened by the Spirit; comp. Rom. viii. 7 тò фоóvø $\mu a$ т $\mathrm{y} s$ aapoós. It would seem that the Apostle is here taking up some watchword of the false teachers. They doubtless boasted that they were directed $\dot{j} \pi \grave{o}$ тov̂ voór. Yes, he answers, pare Rev. ii. 24, where the favourite characterized by the addition of $\tau 0 \hat{u}$ Saravâ (see Galatians p. 298, note 3). Comp. August. Conf. x. 67 'Quem invenirem qui me reconciliaret tibil Ambiendum mihi fuit ad angelos? Qua prece? quibus sacramentis? Multi conantes ad te redire, neque per se ipsos valentes, sicutaudio, tentaverunt haec et inciderunt in desiderium curiosarum visionum et digni labiti sunt illusionibus. Elati enim te quaerebant doctrinae fustu, etc.'
19. ov่ кратิิ้] 'not holding fast.' This is the most common construction and meaning of kparciv in the New 'Testament; e.g. Mark vii. 8 á $\phi$ év $\bar{\prime} \in s$ $\pi a \rho a ́ \delta o \sigma \iota \nu \tau \omega ิ \nu a ̉ \nu \theta \rho \dot{\mu} \pi \omega \nu ;$ comp. Cant.

 as a title, so that a person is at once suggested, and the relative which follows is masculine, $\epsilon^{\prime} \xi$ o ${ }^{*}$; comp. the parallel passage, Ephes. iv. i6 ös é $\sigma \tau \iota$ $\kappa \pi . \lambda$. The supplication and worship of angels is a substitution of inferior nembers for the Head, which is the only source of spiritual life and energy. See the introduction pp. 34, 78, 101 sq., II 5 sq.
 junctures and ligaments.' Galen, when describing the structure of the human frame, more than once specifies the elements of union as twofold: the body owes its compactness partly to the articulation, partly to the attachment; e.g. Op. Ir. p. 734 (ed. Kühn)

 Similarly, though with a more general reference, Aristotle speaks of two kinds of union, which he describes as á $\phi \bar{\eta}$ 'contact' and $\sigma \dot{v} \mu \phi \nu \sigma$ เs 'cohesion' respectively; Metaph. iv. 4 єivat év к.т.ג., Phys. Ausc. iv. 6 (p.

 ib. v. 3, p. 227), Metaph. x. 3 (p. 1071) relation of contiguous surfaces and the connexion of different parts together effect structural unity. This same distinction appears in the Apostle's language here. Contact and attachment are the primary ideas in $\dot{\alpha} \phi a i ́ a n d ~ \sigma \tau ́ v \delta є \sigma \mu \circ \iota ~ r e s p e c t i v e l y . ~$

Of the function of $\dot{a} \phi \dot{\eta}$, 'contact,' in kois) Aristotie speaks at some length in one passage, de Gen. et Corr. i. 6 (p. 322 sq .). It may be mentioned, as illustrating St Paul's image, that Aristotle in this passage lays great stress on the mutual sympathy and influence of the parts in contact, describing them as raA $\quad$ rıkà kà̀ moı $\quad$ тıкá Elsewhere, like St Paul here, he uses the plural ai à $\phi$ ai; de Caelo i. II (p.

 de Gen. et Corr. і. 8 (p. 326) oüтє fà $\rho$

 quite clear from these passages of Aristotle, more especially from the distinction of a dat and mópor, that ai a $\phi$ ai are the joinings, the junctures. When applied to the human body they would be 'joints,' provided that we use the word accurately of the relations between contiguous limbs, and not loosely (as it is often used) of the parts of the limbs themselves in the neighbourhood of the contact. Hippocrates indeed used áqui as a physiological term in a different sense, employing it as a synonyme for ä́ $\mu$ ara i. e. the fasciculi of muscles (see Galen Op. xIx. p. 87), but this use was quite exceptional and can have no place here. Thus ai ádaí will be almost a synonyme for $\tau \dot{a}$ ä $\rho \theta \rho a$, differing however ( I ) as being more wide and comprehensive, and (2) as not emphasizing so strongly the adaptation of the contiguous parts.
The considerations just urged seem decisive as to the meaning of the word. Some eminent modern critics however explain ai ádai' to be 'the senses,' following 'Theodoret on Ephes.

 ẁvóraбє. St Chrysostom had led the way to this interpretation, though his language is less explicit than Theodoret's. To such a meaning however there are fatal objections. (1) This sense of $\dot{a} \phi \dot{\prime}$ is wholly unsupported. It is true that touch lies at the root of all sensations, and that this fact was recognised by ancient physiologists: e.g. Aristot. de Anim.

 here the conmexion ends; and unless more cogent examples not hitherto ad-ducedare forthcoming, we are justified in saying that ai $\dot{\alpha} \phi a i$ could no more be used for ai aiodigets, than in English 'the touches' could be taken as a synonyme for 'the senses.' (2) The image would be seriously marred by such a meaning. The d́ $\phi$ aí and $\sigma j^{j}$ $\delta \in \sigma \mu o c$ would no longer be an exhaustive description of the elements of union in the anatomical structure; the conjunction of things so incongruous under the vinculum of the same article and preposition, $\delta \iota \grave{a} \tau \hat{\omega} \nu$ $\dot{a} \phi \hat{\omega} \nu$ kaì $\sigma v \nu \delta \delta \notin \sigma \mu \omega \nu$, would be unnatural ; and the intrusion of the 'senses' would be out of place, where the result specified is the supply of compacting of the parts ( $\sigma v \nu \beta \iota \beta a \zeta \delta-$ $\mu \in \nu \alpha \nu)$. (3) All the oldest versions, the Latin, the Syriac, and the Mcmphitic, explain it otherwise, so as to refer in some way to the comnexion of the parts of the body; e.g. in the Old Latin it is rendered nexus here and junctura in Ephes. iv. 16.
$\sigma v v \delta \dot{\varepsilon} \sigma \mu \omega \nu]$ 'bands,' $l$ ligaments.' 'The Greek $\sigma u ́ y \delta є \sigma \mu$ оs, like the English ' ligament,' has a general and a special sense. Initsgeneral and comprohensive meaning it denotes any of the connecting bands which strap the body together, sach as muscles or tendons or ligaments properly so called; in its special and restricted use it is a 'ligament' in the technical sense; comp. Galen

 $\mu \hat{v} \nu$. Of the $\sigma \dot{\nu} \nu \hat{\delta} \epsilon \sigma \mu o u$ or ligaments properly so called Galen doscribes at length the several functions and uses, more especially as binding and holding together the $\delta \iota a \rho \theta \rho \omega \sigma \epsilon \varepsilon s ; O p$. т. 236, II. 268, 739, III. 149, Iv. 2, etc., comp. Tim. Locr. de An. Mund. p. 557 ovv-
 $\sigma v \nu a ̂ \psi \in ~ \tau \grave{a}$ ä $\rho \theta_{\rho a}$ (Opusc. Mythol. etc. ed. Gale). In our text indeed ova

$\delta \in \sigma \mu \circ$ must be taken in its comprehensive sense; but the relation of the á申aí to the oóvס $\epsilon \sigma \mu \circ<$ in St Paul still remains the same as that of the drap$\theta \rho \omega \dot{\sigma} \sigma t s$ to the $\sigma u ́ \nu \delta \in \sigma \mu \circ \tau$ in Galen.
 tions performed by the adpal and ou'y$\delta \in \sigma \mu o t$ are first the supply of nutriment etc. ( $\bar{\epsilon} \pi<\chi \circ \rho \eta \gamma o v\left(\mu \in \nu_{\nu} \nu\right)$, and secondly the compacting of the frame ( $\sigma v y \beta i \beta a \zeta \zeta^{\prime} \mu \epsilon \nu o \nu$ ). In other words they are the communication of life and energy, and the preservation of unity and order. The source of all ( $\xi \xi$ ovi) is Christ Himself the Head; but the channels of communication (8tà $\tau \omega \bar{\omega}$ к.т. $\lambda$. ) are the different members of His body, in their relation one to fully furnished' see the note on Gal. iii. 5. Somewhat similarly Aristotle speaks of $\sigma \hat{\omega} \mu \alpha$ кádдıбта тєфикòs каі кєХорŋ $ү \eta \mu$ е́гоу, Pol. iv. I (р. 1288). For examples of $\chi$ oopyia applied to functions of the bodily organs, see Galen. Op. iml p. $617 \dot{\epsilon} \boldsymbol{\epsilon} \nu$ tais cilvavoais gether, compacted,' see the note on ii. 2. In the parallel passage, Ephes. iv. 16, this part of the image is more distinctly emphasized, оиvарнолоуоv́нєעov кaì $\sigma v \nu \beta \iota \beta a \zeta_{0 \mu}^{\prime} \mu \nu \nu \nu$. The difference corresponds to the different aims of the two epistles. In the Colossian letter the vital connexion with the Head is the main theme; in the Ephesian, the unity in diversity among the members.

$a \vec{v} \xi \in \tau \tau \dot{\eta} \nu a v \xi_{\eta \sigma t \nu}$ к.т. $\left.\lambda.\right]$ By the twofold means of contact and attachment nutriment has been diffused and structural unity has been attained, but these are not the ultimate result; they are only intermediate processes; the end is growth. Comp. Arist.

 growth is attributed to the same two physiological conditions as here.

тoû $\theta_{\epsilon o v ̃] ~ i . e . ~ ' w h i c h ~ p a r t a k e s ~ o f ~}^{\text {and }}$ God, which belongs to God, which has its abode in God.' Thus the finite is truly united with the Infinite; the end which the false teachers strove in vain to compass is attained; the Gospel vindicates itself as the true theanthropism, after which the human heart is yearning and the human intellect is feeling. See above, p. II7 sq. With this conclusion of the sentence contrast the parallel passage à $\gamma \dot{\pi} \pi \bar{\eta}$, where again the different endings are determined by the different motives of the two epistles.

The discoveries of modern physiology have invested the Apostle's language with far greater distinctness and force than it can have worn to his own contemporaries. Any exposition of the nervous system more especially reads like a commentary on his image of the relations between the body and the head. At every turn we meet with some fresh illustration which kindles it with a flood of light The volition communicated from the brain to the limbs, the sensations of the extremities telegraphed back to the brain, the absolute mutual sympathy between the head and the members, the instantaneous paralysis ensuing on the interruption of continuity, all these add to the completeness and life of the image. But the following passages will show how even ancient scientific speculation was feeling after those physiological trutbs which the image involves; Hippocr. de Morb. Sacr. p. 309 (ed. Foese) кarà ó $\phi \theta a \lambda \mu \mathrm{o}$ каі̀ rà oṽara каі̀ $\dot{\eta} \gamma \lambda \hat{\gamma} \sigma \sigma a$

 (where the theory is mixed up with some curious physiological speculations), Galen. Op. I. 235 a $\dot{\text { utòs }}$ dè ó

 $\boldsymbol{\sigma \epsilon \omega s , ~ X I V . ~ p . ~} 313$ aữt yà $\rho$ (i.e. $\dot{\eta}$

 pooy. Plato had made the head the central organ of the reason (Tim. 69 sq.: see Grote's Plato III. pp. 272, 287, Aristotle II. p. 179 sq.), if indeed the speculations of the Timæus may be regarded as giving his serious physiological views; but he had postulated other centres of the emotions and the appetites, the heart and the abdomen. Aristotie, while rightly refusing to localise the mind as mind, had taken a retrograde step physiologically, when be transferred the centre of sensation from the brain to the heart; e.g. de Part. Anim. ii. 10 (p. 656). Galen, criticizing his predecessors, says of Aristotlo $\delta \hat{\eta} \lambda \frac{\prime}{s}$ é $\sigma \tau \iota$ worse offenders; and in reply to them more especially Galen elsewhere dis-

 sq. Bearing in mind all this diversity of opinion among ancient physiologists, we cannot fail to be struck in the text not only with the correctness of the image but also with the propriety of the terms; and we are forcibly reminded that among the Apostle's most intimate companions at this time was one whom he calls 'the beloved physician' (iv. 14).

20-23. 'You died with Christ to your old life. All mundane relations hase ceased for you. Why then do you-you who have attained your spiritual manhood-submit still to the rudimentary discipline of children? Why do you-you who are citizens of heaven-bow your neeks afresh to the tyranny of material ordinances, as though you were still living in the world? It is the same old story again; the same round of hard, meaningless, vexatious prohibitions, 'Handle not,' 'Taste not,' 'Touch not.' What folly! When all these things-these meats and drinks and the like-are earthly, perishable, wholly trivial and unimportant! They ars used, and there is an end of them. What is this, but to draw down upon yourselves the denunciations uttered by the prophet of old? What is this but to abondon God's word for precepts which are issued by human anthority and inculcated by human teachers? All such things have a show of wisdom, I grant. There is an officious parade of religious devotion, an eager affectation of humility; there is a stern ascetic rigour, which ill-treats the body : but there is nothing of any real value to check indulgence of the flesh.'

20. From the theological tenets of the false teachers the Apostle turns to the ethical-from the objects of their worship to the principles of their conduct. The baptism into Christ, he argues, is death to the world. The Christian has passed away to another sphere of existence. Mundane ordinances have ceased to have any value for him, because his mundane life has ended. They belong to the category of the perishable; he has been translated to the region of the eternal. It is therefore a denial of his Christianity to subject himself again to their tyranny, to return once more to the dominion of the world. See again the note on iii. r.
$\epsilon$ ' àme $\left.{ }^{2} \dot{a} v \epsilon \tau \epsilon\right]$ 'if ye died, when ye were baptized into Christ.' For this connexion between baptism and death see the notes on ii. 11 , iii. 3. This death has many aspects in St Paul's teaching. It is not only a dying with vouev ; but it is also a dying to or from something. This is sometimes represented as $\sin$, Rom. vi. 2 oïтıves àmє $\theta \dot{\text { á- }}$ sometimes as self, 2 Cor. F. 14, 15 äpa of eavrois $\zeta \omega \bar{\omega} \tau \nu$; sometimes as the law, widely as the world, regarded as the sphere of all material rules and all mundane interests, so here and iii. 3 $\dot{\alpha} \pi \epsilon \theta$ ávєтe $\quad$ dá $\rho$. In all cases St Paul uses the aorist $\dot{a} \pi \epsilon \theta_{a v o v, ~ n e v e r ~ t h e ~}^{\text {a }}$ perfect $\tau \in \theta \theta_{\nu} \eta \times a$; for he wishes to emphasize the one absolute crisis, which was marked by the change of changes. When the aorist is wanted, the compound verb amotrjokecy is used; when the perfect, the simple verb Ovírкeır $^{\text {; }}$ see Buttmann Ausf. Gramm. § II4. This rule holds universally in the Greek Testament.

the rudimentary, disciplinary, ordinances, whose sphere is the mundane and sensuous': see the note on ver. 8. For the pregnant expression ajoàmò Xpıбтоú (so too Rom. vii. 2, 6), and see A. Buttmann p. 277 note.
$\left.\delta_{0 \gamma \mu a r i} \zeta_{\epsilon \sigma} \theta_{\epsilon}\right]$ ' are ye overridden with precepts, ordinances.' In the usx the verb $\delta o \gamma \mu a t i \zeta \epsilon \nu$ is used several times, meaning 'to issue a decree,' Esth. iii. 9, 1 Esdr. vi. 33, 2 Macc. x. 8, xv. 36, 3 Macc. iv. II. Elsewhere it is applied most commonly to the precepts of philosophers; e.g. Justin Apol. i. 7 ol èv "E $\lambda \lambda \eta \sigma \iota$ тà aủroís

 ovrac (comp. § 4), Epict. iii. 7. 17 gq.
 rà aioxpá. Here it would include alike the סóy $\mu a t a$ of the Mosaic law (ver. 14) and the dóy $\mu a r a$ of the 'philosophy' denounced abore (ver. 8). Both are condemned; the one as superseded though once authoritative, the other as wholly vexatious and unwarrantable. Examples are given in the following verse, $\mu \dot{\eta} \quad a \quad \psi_{\eta}$ к.r. $\lambda$. For the construction here, whero the more remote object, which would stand in the dative with the active voice ( 2 Macc. x. 8 є́ $\delta о \gamma \mu a ́ \tau \iota \sigma a \nu . . . \tau \hat{\phi}$ $\tau \hat{\omega} \boldsymbol{\nu}$ 'Iovóaí $\boldsymbol{\nu}$ है $\theta \boldsymbol{\nu \epsilon t}$ ), becomes the nominative of the passive, compare $\chi \rho \eta \mu a \tau i \zeta \epsilon \sigma \theta a \downarrow$ Matt ii. 12, 22, סıакоpeídGat Mark x. 45, and see Winer § xxxix. p. 326, A. Buttmann p. i63, Kühner § 378, ㅍ. p. Iog.
21. M $\eta$ ä $\psi \eta$ к.т. $\lambda$.] The Apostle disparagingly repeats the prohibitions of the false teachers in their own words, ' Handle not, neither taste, neither touch.' The rabbinical passages guoted in Schöttgen show how exactly St Paul's language reproduces, not only the spirit, but even the form, of these injunctions. The Latin commentators, Hilary and Pelagius, suppose these prohibitions to be the Apostle's own, thus making a completeshipwreck of the sense. So too St Ambrose de Noe et Arca 25 (1. p. 267), de Abr. i. 6 (I. p. 300). We may infer from the language of St Augustine who argues against it, that this was the popular interpretation in his day : Epist. cxix (II. p. 512) 'tanquam praeceptum putatur apostoli, nescio quid tangere, gustare, attaminare, prohibentis.' The ascetic tendency of the age thus fastened upon a slight obscurity in the Greek and made the Apostle recommend the very practices which he disparaged. For a somewhat similar instance of a misinterpretation commonly received see the note on rois dóyparıv ver. 14. Jerome however (I. p. 878) had rightly interpreted the passage, illustrating it by the precepts of the Talmud. At a still earlier date Tertullian, Ado. Marc. $\mathbf{~}$. 19, gives the correct interpretation.

These prohibitions relate to defilement contracted in divers ways by contact with impare objects. Some were doubtless reenactments of the Mosaic law ; while others would be exaggerations or additions of a rigorous asceticism, such as we find among the Essene prototypes of these Colossian heretics, e.g. the avoidance of oil, of wine, or of flesh-meat, the shunning of contact with a stranger or a religious inferior, and the like; see pp85 sq . For the religious bearing of this asceticism, as springing from the dualism of these heretical teachers, see above, pp. 79, 104 sq.
$a ̈ \psi \eta]$ The difference between $\tilde{a}_{\pi} \tau \epsilon \sigma-$ $\theta a t$ and $\theta a \gamma \gamma^{\prime} v e l v$ is not great, and in some passages where they occur together, it is hard to distinguish them : e.g. Exod. xix. 12 т $\boldsymbol{\rho o \sigma \epsilon ́ \chi} \chi \in \tau \epsilon$ éavtoûs той

 Dion Chrys. Or. xxxiv (II. p. 50) oi

 Olyyávoyves, Themist. Paraphr.

 $\gamma$ ápє $\nu$. But äntєo $\theta a c$ is the stronger word of the two. This arises from the fact that it frequently suggests, though it does not necessarily involve, the idea of a voluntary or conscious effort, 'to take hold of'--a suggestion which is entirely wanting to the coIourless word Alyjável $^{\text {; comp. The- }}$ mist. Paraphr. Arist. $94 \underset{\eta}{\eta} \tau \omega \hat{\nu} \zeta \omega \dot{\omega} \omega \nu$ yáyovtos. Hance in Xen. Cyrop.i. 3 .

 Thus the wordschosen in the Latin Versions, tangere for ánt $\sigma \sigma \theta$ and attaminare or contractare for $\theta$ iceiv, are unfortunate, and ought to be transposed. Our English Version, probably influenced by the Latin, has erred in the same direction, translating ätreveat by 'touch' and $\theta_{\text {tyeir }}$ by 'handle.' Here again they must be transposed. 'Handle' is too strong a word for either; though in default of a better it may stand for af $\pi \tau \in \sigma \theta a c$, which it moro nearly represents. Thus the two words ${ }_{a}^{\prime} \psi \eta$ and $\theta i y_{n s}$ being separate in meaning, $\gamma \in \dot{v} \sigma \eta$ may well interpose; and the three together will form a descending series, so that, as Beza (quoted in Trench N. T. Syn. § xvii. p. 57) well expresses it, 'decrescente semper oratione, intelligatur crescere superstitio.'

On the other hand a $\psi_{n}$ has been interpreted here as referring to the relation of husband and wife, as e.g.
 and the prohibition would then be illustrated by the teaching of the heretics in I Tim. iv. 3 к $\omega \lambda$ vóvт $\omega \nu$ yauєiv. But, whatever likelihood there may be that the Colossian false teachers also held this doctrine (see above, p. 85 sq .), it nowhere appears in the context, and we sloould not expect so important a topic to be dismissed thus cursorily. Moreover $\theta i$ ryáveıv is used as commonly in this meaning as ä $\pi \tau \varepsilon \sigma \theta a \iota$ (see Gataker Op. Crit. p. 79, and examples might be multiplied); so that all ground for assigning it to aftrecoOat especially is removed. Both $\vec{a} \pi-$ тєб $\theta a \iota$ and $\theta \iota y$ yavecy refer to defilement incurred through the sense of touch, though in different degrees; 'Handle not, nor yet taste, nor even touch.'

22. 'Only consider what is the real import of this scrupulous avoidance. Why, you are attributing an inherent value to things which are fleeting; you yourselves are citizens of eternity, and yet your thoughts are absorbed in the perishable.'
á] 'which things,' i.e. the meats and drinks and other material objects, regarded as impure to the touch. The antecedent to ${ }^{\ddot{2}}$ is implicitly involved in the prohibitions $\mu \hat{\eta} \tilde{\tilde{j}} \downarrow \eta$ к.т. $\lambda$.

ढ́arty єis $\phi \theta o \rho a ́ p]$ ' are destined for corruption.' For similar expressions see Acts viii, 20 є $\ddot{\eta}$ єis $\dot{a} \pi \omega \dot{\omega} \lambda \epsilon a \nu$ (comp. ver. 23 єis $\chi$ од̀̀̀ $\boldsymbol{\pi}$ ккрias каi

 For the word $\phi$ oopá, involving the idea of ' decomposition,' see the note on Gal. vi. 8. The expressiou here corresponds тal), Matt. xv. 17, Mark vii. 19.
 Comp. Senec. de Vit. beat. 7 'in ipso usu sui periturum.' While the verb diлохр $\bar{\omega} \mu \mathrm{a}$ is common, the substantive
 Mor. p. 267 F Xaipeld taîs tozaúrats
 (i.e. ${ }^{\text {b }}$ by such modes of consuming and abridging superfluities"), Dion. Hai.
 The unasual word mas chosen for its expressiveness: the xpjots here was an àmó $\chi \rho \eta \sigma \leq s$; the things could not be used without rendering them unfit for further use. The subtlety of the expression in the original cannot be reproduced in any translation.

On the other hand the clause is sometimes interpreted as a continuation of the language of the ascetic teachers; "Touch not things which all lead to ruin by their abuse.' This interpretation however has nothing to recommend it. It loses the point of the Apostle's argument; while it puts upon cival eis $\phi \theta_{o \rho a ́ \nu}$ a meaning which is at least not natural.

кarà к.г.入.] connected directly with vr. $20,2 \mathrm{I}$, so that the words ${ }^{\dot{a}}$ écotv...
 ment.
 both preposition and article before ot8aбка入ías shows that the two words are closely connected. They are placed here in their proper order; for évràdнатa describes the source of authority and $\delta \delta \delta a \sigma k \pi \lambda i a s$ the medium of communication. The expression is taken ultimately from Isaiah xxix. I 3 , where the words run in the $L x x, \mu \dot{\tau} \eta \eta$ dè gelists (Matt. xv. 9, Mark vii. 7), quoting the passage, substitute in the latter $\mu a r a$ à $\nu \theta \rho \dot{\sigma} \pi \omega \nu$.

The coincidences in St Paul's language here with our Lord's words as related in the Gospels (Matt. xy. 1-20, Mark vii. I-23) are strikings and suggest that the Apostle had this discourse in his mind. (I) Both alike argue against these vexatious ordimances from the perishableness of meats. (2) Both insist upon the indifference of such things in themselves. In Mark vii. I9 the Evangelist emphasizes the importance of our Lord's words on this occasion，as practically abolishing the Mosaic distinction of meats by declaring all alike to be clean（каөaрi $\zeta_{\omega \nu}$ ；soe the note on ver． 16）．（3）Both alike connect such or－ diuances with the practices condemn－ ed in the prophetic denunciation of Isaiah．

23．＇All such teaching is worthless． It may bear the semblance of wisdom； but it wants the reality．It may make an officious parade of religious service； it may vaunt its humility；it may treat the body with merciless rigour； but it entirely fails in its chief aim． It is powerless to check indulgence of the flesh．＇
ätcva］＇which sort of things．＇Not only these particular precepts，$\mu \dot{\eta} \dot{\alpha} \psi \eta$ к．$\tau . \lambda$ ．，but all precepts falling wader the same category are condemned． For this force of äriva as distinguished from $\vec{a}$ ，see the notes on Gal．iv．24， v．19，Phil．iv．3．The antecedent
入ias к．т．入．，but the prohibitions given in ver． 2 I ．

入óyov $\mu$ ¢̀̀ к．т．．．］＇having a reputa－ tion for wisdom，＇but not the reality． The corresponding member，which should be introduced by $8 \in$ ，is sup－ pressed；the oppositive clause being postponed and appearing later in a new form，oúk év $\tau u \mu \hat{j}$ tuve k．. $\boldsymbol{x}$ ． ．Such suippressions are common in classical writers，more especially in Plato；see Küluner §531，ri．p． 813 sq．，Jelf § 766 ， and comp．Winer § lxiii．p． 719 sq． Jerome therefore is not warranted in attributing St Paul＇s language here to ＇imperitia artis grammaticae＇（Epist． cxxi，Op．п．p．884）．On the contrary it is just the license which an adept in a language would be more likely to take than a novice．

In this sentence $\lambda$ óroy＂Xovia ro－ фias is best taken as a single predicate， so that eartv is disconnected from $\vec{\epsilon}^{\prime}$ Хогтa．Otherwiso the construction supported by many parallels in the Greek Testament ；see Winer § xlv． p． 437.

 as I have observed，has four meanings． （A）Two as applied to the thinking subject．（i）＇To take account of，to hold in account，to pay respect to ${ }^{5}$ ：e．g．

 к．T．入．（ii）＇To possess the reason or account or definition of，＇＇to have a scientific knowledge of＇；Plato Gorg．

 $\sigma \iota \nu$ éariv，and so frequently．These two senses are recognised by Aristotle， Eth．Nic．i． 13 （p．1102），where he distinguishes the meaning of the ex－ $\phi i \lambda \omega \nu$ and $\check{\epsilon} \chi \epsilon \iota \nu \lambda o ́ \gamma o \nu \tau \bar{\omega} \nu \mu а \ddot{\eta}_{\eta \tau \iota \kappa \omega ิ \nu .}$ （B）Two as applied to the object of thought．（iii）＇To have the eredit or reputation of，＇as here．This sense of commonly found with an infinitive： e．g．Plato Epin． 987 в aútòs＇Aфpooí－ fulnl the definition of，to possess tho characteristics，to hare the nature of＇； e．g．Philo Vit．Cont． 4 （II．p．477）éxí－ тєроу \＆̊è $\pi \eta \gamma \hat{\eta}$ s hóyov ë̀ $\chi$ оу，Plut．Mor．

 yov ${ }^{\epsilon} \chi \in \epsilon \nu$ with other constructions，or as used absolutely，are very various， e．g．＇to be reasonable，＇＇to hold dis－ course，＇＇to bear a ratio，＇etc．，but do not come under consideration here． Nor again does such an expression as Plut．Mor．p． 550 o $\mu \eta^{\prime} \tau \epsilon$ тò $\nu$ 入ógov session of，not knowing，the intention of the legislator＇；for the definite ar－ ticle removes it from the category of the cases considered． self－imposed，oflicious，supererogatory service．＇One or both of these two ideas，（i）＇excessive readiness，officious zeal，＇（ii）＇affectation，unreality，＇are in－ volved in this and similar compounds；

入orpógesos：these compounds being used most frequently，though not al－ ways（as this last word shows），in a bad sense．This mode of expression was naturalised in Latin，as appears from Augustine Epist．cxlix． 27 （IT． p． 5 14）＇Sic enim et vulgo dicitur qui divitem affectat thelodives，et qui sa－ pientem thelosapiens，et cetera hujus－ modi．＇Epiphanius，when writing of the Pharisees，not content with the word here supplied by St Paul，coins a double compound $\dot{\epsilon} \theta_{\epsilon} \lambda о \pi \epsilon \rho เ \sigma \sigma \circ \theta \rho \eta-$ бкєia，Haer．і． 16 （р．34）．

татєєyoфробо́y］The word is here disparaged by its connexion，as in ver． I8（see the note there）．The force of é $\theta_{\varepsilon} \lambda$ o－may be regarded as carried on to it．Real genuine ram＊$\%$ офообiv $\eta$ is commended below；iii． 12 ． of the body．＇The expression á $\phi \in\llcorner$ deiv tov $\sigma \dot{\mu} \mu a r o s$ is not uncommon，being used most frequently，not as here of ascetic discipline，but rather of cou－ rageous exposure to hardship and danger in war，e．g．Lysias Or．Fun． 25，Joseph．B．J．iii．7．18，Lucian Anach．24，Plut．Vit．Pericl．10；in Plut．Mor．p． 137 c however，of a stu－ dent＇s toil，and ib．p． 135 E，more gene－ rally of the rigorous demands made by the soul on the body．The substan－ occur．On the forms in－eia and－ía derived from adjectives in $-\eta s$ see Buttmann Ausf．Gramm．§ ri9，II， 1． 416 sq ．The great preponderance of manuscript authority favours the form à $\phi \epsilon \iota \delta \epsilon i a$ here：but in such ques－ tions of orthography the fact car－ ries less weight than in other matters． The naì before á $\phi \varepsilon \iota \delta$ cia should proba－ bly be omitted；in which case á $\phi \in \delta \in i a$ becomes an instrumental dative，ex－ the insertion would naturally occur to scribes，the omission gives more point to the sentence．The $\bar{\epsilon} \theta \in \lambda_{0} \lambda_{\rho \eta \sigma к}$ кai тarєєуофробívך as the religious elements are thus separated from the

 any value to remedy indulgence of the flesh．＇So interpreted the words supply the oppositive clause to $\lambda^{\prime}$ oyoy $\mu \dot{\nu} \bar{\varepsilon}^{\text {ÉXovta }} \sigma о \phi i a s$, as the presence of the negative ovik naturally suggests． If the sentence had been undisturbed， this oppositive clause would naturally hawe been introduced by $\delta \epsilon$ ，but the interposition of $\dot{\varepsilon} \nu \dot{\epsilon} \theta \epsilon \lambda о \theta \rho \eta \sigma к \varepsilon i ́ a ~ к . т . \lambda . ~$ has changed its form by a sort of at－ traction．For this sense of $\bar{\epsilon} \tau \tau \mu \hat{\eta}$ comp．Luetan Merc．cond． 17 тà кaıvè 入eía éotin：similarly Hom．11．ix． 319 iv $\delta \dot{\epsilon}$ in $\tau \mu \hat{I}$ к．r．$\lambda$ ．The preposition $\pi \rho o ́ s$, like our English＇for，＇when used after words denoting utility，value； sufficiency，etc．，not uncommonly in－ troduces the object to check or prevent or cure which the thing is to be em－ ployed．And even though utility may not be directly expressed in words， yet if the idea of a something to be remedied is present，this preposition is freely used notwithstanding．See Isocr．Pluil． 16 （р．85）т $\rho$ о̀s то̀̀s $\beta a \rho \beta a ́-$ $\rho^{\circ} v_{s} \chi \rho \eta^{\prime} \sigma \iota \mu \nu \nu$ ，Arist．1I．A．iii． 21 （p． аütク $\mu$ à̀ıтта，de Respir． 8 （p．474）

 rotoûtov，Galen $O p$ ．xiI．p． 399 д $\rho \omega \mu$ е́

$\hat{\epsilon} \nu \quad \tau \iota \mu \bar{\eta} \tau \omega \nu \grave{l} \pi \rho o ̀ s ~ \pi \lambda \eta \sigma \mu o \nu \grave{\eta} \nu \quad \tau \hat{\eta} s \quad \sigma \alpha \rho \kappa o ́ s$.

 $\pi \epsilon к і а s ~ ф а \lambda а к р о ́ \sigma \epsilon!s ~ к . т . \lambda ., ~ p . ~ 430 ~ \sigma v \nu \epsilon ́-~$

 $\sigma \iota \nu \kappa є \phi а \lambda a \lambda \gamma^{\prime} a s, \mathrm{p} .601$ кä̀ $\lambda \iota \sigma \tau \sigma \nu \pi \rho o ̀ s$ $\mu$ úpov. These examples from Galen are only a few out of probably some hundreds, which might be collected from the treatise in which they occur, the do Compositione Medicamentorum.
The language, which the Colossian false teachers would use, may be inferred from the account given by Philo of a Judaic sect of mystic ascetics, who may be regarded, not indced as their direct, but as their collateral ancestors (see p. 86, note 2, p. 94), the Therapeutes of Egypt; de Vit. Cont. § 4 (IT. p. 476 sq .) т $\rho u \phi \hat{\omega} \sigma \iota \nu \dot{\mathrm{u}} \pi \dot{\grave{o}} \quad \sigma 0-$
 тà §óy $\mu a t a$ xop

 rently has before him some similar exposition of the views of the Colossian heretics, either in writing or (more probably) by report from Epaphras. In reply be altogether denies the claims of this system to the title of ooфia; he disputes the value of these סoy $\mu a \tau a$; he allows that this $\pi \lambda \eta \sigma \mu_{0} v^{\prime}$ is the great evil to be checked, the fatal disease to be cured; but he will not admit that the remedies prescribed have any substantial and lasting efficacy.

The interpretation here offered is not new, but it has been strangely overlooked or despised. The passages adduced will I trust show the groundlessness of objections which have been brought against it owing to the use of the preposition; and in all other respects it seems to be far preferable to any rival explanation which has been suggested. The favourite interpretations in ancient or modern times divide themselves into two classes, according to the meaning assigned to $\pi \rho \dot{s} s \pi \lambda \eta \sigma \mu o \nu \grave{\eta} \nu \pi \hat{\eta} s \sigma a \rho \kappa o ́ s$. (I) It is explained in a good sense: 'to satisfy the reasonable wants of the body.' In this case oíא $\dot{\epsilon}^{2} \tau \tau \mu \hat{\eta} \tau \omega \nu \hat{l}^{\prime}$ is generally interpreted, ' not holding it (the body) in any honour.' So the majority of the fathers, Greek and Latin. This has the advantage of preserving the continuity of the words but it assigns an impossible sense to always denotes 'repletion,' 'surfeiting,' 'excessive indulgence,' and cannot be used of a reasonable attention to the physical cravings of nature; as Galen says, Op. xv. p. 113 тávтay $\mathfrak{\epsilon} \dot{\omega} \omega-$

 $\lambda a i ̂ s ~ \tau \hat{i ̆ s ~ \sigma v \mu \mu \varepsilon ́ т p a v ~ \pi o \sigma o ́ т \eta t o s: ~}$ and certainly neither the Apostlc nor the Colossian ascetics were likely to depart from this universal rule. To the long list of passages quoted in Wetstein may be added such references as Philo Leg. ad Gai. § 1 (n. p. 546), Clem. Hom. viii. I5, Justin Dial. i26, Dion. Alex. in Euseb. H.E. vii. 25; but they might be increased to any extent. (2) A bad sense is attached to $\pi \lambda \eta \sigma \mu o v \eta$, as usage demands. And here two divergent interpretations have been put forward. (i) The proper continuity of the scntence is preserved, and the words oúk aro regarded as an exposition of the doctrine of the faise teachers from their own point of view. So Theodore of Mopsuestia, ov тiцнои yopíbo-

 $\sigma c \nu$. This able expositor however is evidently dissatisfied, for he introduces his explanation with the words
 к.т. .; ; and his explanation has not been adopted by others. Either the sentence, so interpreted, becomes flat and unmeaning, though it is obviously intended to clinch the whole matter; or the Apostle is made to confirm the value of the very doctrines which he is combating. (ii) The sentence is regarded as discontinuous; and it is interpreted, 'not of any real value' (or 'not consisting in anything commendable,' or 'not holding the body in any honour') but 'tending to gratify the carnal desires' or 'mind.' This in some form or other is almost universally adopted by modern interpreters, and among the ancients is found in the commentator Hilary. The objections to it are serious. (a) The dislocation of the sentence is inexplicable. There is no indication either in the grammar or in the vocabulary that a separate and oppositive clause begius with $\pi \rho$ òs $\pi \lambda \eta \sigma \mu o \nu \dot{\eta} \nu$ к.т.ג., but on the contrary evergthing points to an unbroken continuity. ( $\beta$ ) The sense which it attaches to $\pi \lambda \eta \sigma$ pov̀̀ $\tau \hat{\eta} s$ apoós is either forced and unnatural, or it makes the Apostle say what he could not have said. If $\pi \lambda \eta \sigma \mu o \nu \eta ̀ ~ \tau \tilde{\eta}_{s} \sigma a p k o ́ s$ could havo the sense which Hilary assigns to it, 'sagina carnalis sensus traditio humana est,' or indeed if it could mean 'the mind of the flesh' in any sense (as it is generally taken by modern commentators), this is what St Paul might well have said. But obriously $\pi \lambda \eta \sigma$ movì $\uparrow \hat{\eta} s$ aapkós conveys a very different idea from such expressions as rò

(ver. 18) or тò фо́́vqua tîs aapkós (Rom. viii. 6, 7), which include pride, self-sufficiency, strife, hatred, bigotry, and generally everything that is earthbound and selfish. On the other hand, if $\pi \lambda \eta \sigma \mu_{o \nu \eta}^{\eta} \tau \hat{\eta} s \sigma a \rho \kappa o ́ s$ be taken in its natural meaning, as applying to coarse sensual indulgences, then St Paul could not have said without qualification, that this rigorous asceticism conduced $\pi \rho o ̀ s ~ \pi \lambda \eta \sigma \mu o \nu \grave{\eta} \nu \tau \hat{\eta} s$ бapкós. Such language would defeat its own object by its extravagance.
III. I-4. 'If this beso; if ye were raised with Christ, if ye were translated into heaven, what follows? Why you mustrealise the change. All your aims must centre in heaven, whero reigns the Christ who has thus exalted you, enthroned on God's right hand. All your thoughts must abide in heaven, not on the earth. For, I say it once again, you have nothing to do with mundane things: you died, died once for all to the world: you are living another life. This life indeed is hidden now: it has no outward splendour as men count splendour; for it is a life with Ohrist, a life in God. But the veil will not always shroud it. Christ, our life, shall be manifested hereafter; then ye also shall be manifested with Him and the world shall see your glory.'
 then ye were raised,' not 'have been raised.' The aorist $\sigma v \mu \nmid \gamma \epsilon \rho \theta \eta \tau \epsilon$, like äтє $\begin{gathered}\text { ávetє (ii. 20); refers to their bap- }\end{gathered}$ tism; and the $\epsilon i$ out here is a resumption of the $\epsilon \frac{1}{}$ in ii. 20 . The sacrament of baptism, as admiuistered in the Apostolic age, involved a twofold symbolism, a death or burial and a resurrection: see the note on ii. 12. In the rite itself these were represented by two distinet acts, the disappearance beneath the water and the emergence from the water: but in the change typified by the rite they are two aspects of the same thing, ' Tike the concave and convex in a circle,' to use an old simile. The negative side-the death and burialimplies the positive side-the resurrection. Hence the form of the Apo-биш $\boldsymbol{\gamma} \boldsymbol{\epsilon} \rho \theta \eta \tau \epsilon$.

The change involved in baptism, if truly realised, must pervade a man's whole nature. It affects not only his practical conduct, but his intellectual conceptions also. It is nothing less than a removal into a new sphere of being. He is translated from earth to heaven ; and with this translation his point of view is altered, his standard of judgment is wholly changed. Matter is to him no longer the great enemy; his position towards it is one of absolute neutrality. Ascetic rules, ritual ordinances, have ceased to have any absolute value, irrespective of their effects. All these things are of the earth, earthy. The material, the transitory, the mundane, has given place to the moral, the eternal, the heavenly.
 concentrate your energies, your thoughts on mundane ordinances, and realise your 'new and heavenly life, of which Christ is the pole-star.'
év $\delta \in \xi(\underset{a}{a}$ к.т. $\lambda$.$] 'being seated on the$ right hand of God,' where каA 'juevos must not be connected with éorav; see the note on àmóкрифои, ii. 3. This participial clause is pertinent and emphatic, for the session of Christ implies the session of the believer

 COL.

Opóvé av̇roû, in the message addressed to thie principal church of this district : see above, p. 42. Bapai, says Chrysostom, roû tòn yoûy ànग́रaүє tò̀

2. Tà ăpu] The same expression repeated for emphasis; 'You must not only seek heaven; you must also think heaven.' For the opposition of with фooveiv, comp. Prill. iii. 19, 20
 т̀̀ $\pi о \lambda i ́ \tau \varepsilon y \mu a$ év ov่ payoîs vi $\pi$ á $\rho \chi \in \iota$; see also Theoph. ad Autol. ii. 17. Extremes meet. Here the Apostle points the anlithesis to controvert a Gnostic asceticism : in the Philippian letter he uses the same contrast to denounce an Epicurean sensualism. Both alike are guilty of the same furdamental error; both alike concentrate their thoughts on material, mandane things.
3. $\dot{\text { a }} \boldsymbol{\pi} \epsilon$ Gávєєє] ' $y e ~ d i e d$ ' in baptism. The aorist $\dot{a}^{\prime} \pi \epsilon$ Áverf denotes the past act ; the perfect кéкриттаи the permanent effects. For $\dot{\alpha} \pi \epsilon \theta$ ávere see the notes on ii. 12, 20.

кє́круттац] 'is hidden, is buried out of sight, to the world.' The Apostle's argument is this: 'When you sank under the baptismal water; you disappeared for ever to the world. You rose again, it is true, but you rose only to God. The world henceforth knows nothing of your new life, and (as a consequence) your new life must know nothing of the world.' - Neque Christum,' says Bengel, 'neque Christianos novit mundus; ac no Christianiquidem planeseipsos'; comp. Joh, xiv. 17-19 $\tau \dot{\partial} \pi \nu \epsilon \hat{v} \mu a \quad \tau \hat{\eta} s i \lambda \eta$ - 乌ウंबєтє.

4. $\boldsymbol{o}$ Xptotós] A fourth occurrence of the name of Christ in this context; comp. ver. 2 т $\hat{\varphi}$ X $\rho \boldsymbol{\sigma} \boldsymbol{\sigma} \hat{\omega}$, ó pronoun would have been more natural, but less emphatic.
$\dot{\eta} \zeta \omega \dot{\eta} \dot{\eta} \mu \hat{\omega} \nu]$ This is an advance on the previous statemeut, $\dot{\eta} \zeta \omega \dot{\eta} \dot{\nu} \mu \hat{\omega} \nu$ кéкрриттая $\sigma \dot{v} \nu \tau \hat{\varrho} \mathrm{Xpt} \mathrm{\sigma r} \hat{\omega}$, in two respects: (1) It is not enough to have said that the life is shared with Christ. The Apostle declares that the life is Christ. Comp. I Joh. จ. $12 \dot{\delta}{ }_{\epsilon}^{\epsilon} \chi^{\omega \nu} \tau \dot{\partial} \nu$ váre $\zeta \omega \dot{\eta}$ ả̉ $\lambda \eta \theta \iota \eta$ (of Christ), Smyrn.
 Ephes. 3 'Iqбaîs Xpıoтòs tò à́ıákpıтoy substituted $\eta_{j} \mu \omega \bar{v}$. The Apostle hastens to include himself among the recipients of the bounty. For this characteristic transition from the second person to the first see the note on ii. 13. The reading $\dot{v} \mu \hat{\omega} \nu$ here has very high support, and on this account I have given it as an alternative; but it is most probably a transcriber's correction, for the sake of uniformity with the preceding.

 now shrouds your higher life from others, and even partly from yourselves, will then be withdrawn. The world which persecutes, despises, ignores now, will then be blinded with the dazzling glory of the revelation.' Comp. I Joh. iii. I, $2 \dot{\text { ó }}$ кó $\sigma \mu$ os oú

 $\mu \varepsilon \theta a$ к.r. $\lambda$., Clem. Rom. 50 oit фаעє $\omega$ -
 тoú $\mathrm{X} p l a t o v ̂$.

5-1 I. "So then realise this death to the world; kill all your earthly members. Is it fornication, impurity of whatever kind, passion, evil desire ? Or again, is it that covetousness which makes a religion, an idolatry, of greed ? Do not deceive yourselves. For all these things God's wrath will surely come. In these sins ye, like other Gentiles, indulged in times past, when your life was spent amidst them. But now everything is changed. Now you also must put away not this or that desire, but all sins whatsoever. Anger, wrath, malice, slander, filthy abuse; banish it from your lips. Be not false one to another in word or deed; but cast off for ever the old man with his actions, and put on the new, who is renewed from day to day, growing unto perfect knowledge and refashioned after the image of his Creator. In this new life, in this regenerate man, there is not, there cannot be, any distinction of Greek or Jew, of circumcision or uncircumcision; there is no rooul for barbarian, for Scythian, for bond or free. Christ has displaced, has annihilated, all these; Christ is Himself all things and in all things.'
5. The false doctrine of the Gnostics had failed to check sensual indulgence (ii. 23). The true doctrine of the Apostle has power to kill the whole carnal man. The substitution of a comprehensive principle for special precepts-of the heavenly life in Christ for a code of minute ordi-nances-at length attains the end after which the Gnostic teachers have striven, and striven in vain.

Neкршंбate ouv̌] i.e. 'Carry out this principle of dauth to the world (ii. 20 everything that is mundane and carnal in your being.'

тà $\mu \epsilon \in \lambda \eta$ к.т. $\lambda$.$] Each person has a$ twofold moral personality. There is in him the 'old man,' and there is in bim also 'the new' (vv. 9, ro). The old man with all his members must be pitilessly slain. It is plain that $\tau \dot{\alpha}$ $\mu \epsilon \lambda \eta$ here is used, like äv $\theta \rho \omega \pi \sigma$ in ver. 9, not physically, but morally. Our actual limbs may be either rí ध $^{3} \grave{\iota}$ ing as they are made instruments for the world or for Christ: just as weour whole being-may identify ourselves with the $\pi a \lambda a c o s$ ä̀ $\theta \rho \omega \pi{ }^{2}$ or with the péos ẫ $\partial \theta_{\rho \omega \pi} \omega$ of our twofold potentiality. For this use of the physical, as a symbol of the moral of which it is the potential instrument, compare Matt. v. 29 sq. el $\bar{\delta} \dot{\epsilon} \dot{o}$ ó $\phi \theta a \lambda$ - aưтǜ к.т.ג.
I have ventured to punctuate after тà èm̀ $\tau \hat{\eta} s \gamma \hat{\eta} s$. Thus mopvzià к.т. $\lambda$. are prospective accusatives, which should be governed directly by some such word as $\dot{\alpha} \pi \dot{\sigma}^{\theta} \in \sigma \theta \epsilon$. But several dependent clauses interpose; the last of these incidentally suggests a contrast between the past and the present; and this contrast, predominating in the A postle's mind, leads to an abrupt recasting of the sentence, in disregard of the original construction. This opposition of mové and $\nu \hat{v} \nu$ has a tendency to dislocate the construction in St Paul, as in i. 22 vvvì $\delta \dot{\epsilon}$ latter passage. For the whole run of the sentence (the parenthetic relative clauses, the contrast of past and present, and the broken construction) aís тroтє́...è̀ oîs kai....тотє...ó d̀é Өєós... каї övгаs $\eta \boldsymbol{\eta} \mu a ̂ s ~ \sigma u \nu \epsilon \zeta \omega о \pi о i \eta \sigma \epsilon \nu$.

With the common punctuation the interpretation is equally awkward, whether we treat $\tau \dot{\alpha} \mu \dot{\omega} \lambda \eta$ and $\pi o \rho-$ $\nu$ viav к.т. d . as in direct apposition, or as donble accusatives, or in any other way. The case is best put by Seveторveiav к.т. $\lambda$.] The general order is from the less comprehensive to the more comprehensive. Thus торveia is a special kind of uncleanness, while dxa ${ }^{2}$ apoí is uncleanness in any form, Aapoia, d $\sigma \dot{\epsilon} \boldsymbol{\lambda} \boldsymbol{\gamma} \epsilon a$, with the note there. Thus again $\pi \mathrm{d} \theta_{o s}$, though frequeutly referring to this class of sins (Rom. i. 26, I Thess. iv. 5), would include other base passions which do not fall under the category of ákäapoia, as for instance gluttony and intemperance.

 $\mu$ áт $\omega \nu$; but this is an evasion of the difficulty, which consists in the direct apposition of the instruments and the activities, from whatever point they are viewed.

$\pi \dot{a} \theta o s, ~ e ̀ m i \theta u \mu i a v] ~ T h e ~ t w o ~ w o r d s ~$ occur together in 1 Thess. iv. $5 \mu \dot{\eta}$ év $\pi a ́ \theta \epsilon \epsilon \epsilon \pi \iota \theta v \mu i a s$, So in a passage closely resembling the text, Gal. v. 24 oi de riats. The same vice may be fiewed as a $\pi \dot{d} \theta_{0 s}$ from its passive and an $\dot{\epsilon} \pi t-$ $\theta v \mu i a$ from its active side. The word entivuia is not used here in the restricted sense which it has e.g. in Arist. Eih. Nic. ii. 4, where it ranges with anger, fear, etc., being related to $\pi \dot{d}$ 'ीos as the species to the genus (see Gal. l. c. note). In the Greek Testament énitupia has a much more comprehensive sense；e．g．Joh．viii． 44

 потє̂̀v．Here，if anything，è $\pi \iota \theta v \mu i a$ is wider than $\pi \dot{d} \theta_{o s}$ ．While máOos in－ cludes all ungovernable affections，ént－ $\theta v \mu i a$ какர่ reaches to all evil longings． ＇Iooú，says Ohrysostom，yevikês tò $\pi \hat{a} \nu$ via，óp $\gamma \dot{\eta}, \lambda \dot{\prime} \dot{\prime} \eta \eta$ ．The epithet is added because èmıvpia is capable of a good sense：comp． 1 Cor．x． 6 èm $\theta_{\nu \mu \eta \tau a ̀ s}$ какюิ． covetousness．＇Impurity and covet－ ousness may be said to divide between them nearly the whole domain of hu－ man selfishness and vice；＇Si avaritia prostrata est，exsurgit libido＇（Cypr． de Mort．3）．The one has been already dealt with；the other needs now to be specially denounced；comp．Ephes．

 Bengel（on Rom．i．29），＇quaerit pabu－ lum in creatura materiali vel per vo－ luptatem vel per avaritiam．＇Comp． Test．xii Patr．Jud． 18 фu入ága ${ }^{\prime} \theta \epsilon$

 Eєoû．Similarly Iysis Pythag． 4 （Epi－ stol．Graec．p．602，ed．Hercher）òvo－

 $\tau \epsilon \kappa a i l \pi \lambda \epsilon \nu \epsilon \xi i a \nu^{*}$ ä $\mu \phi \omega$ dè $\pi о \lambda \dot{\prime} \gamma o \nu o \iota$ $\pi є \phi \dot{\kappa} к a \nu \tau$ ．It must be remembered that $\pi \lambda$ fove $\xi$ ia is much wider than фidaprupia（see Trench N．T．Syn． § xxiv．p． 77 8q．），which itself is called and in other passages the sense of＇im－ purity＇（see e．g．Hammond on Rom． i．29）is founded on a misconception． The words $\pi \lambda \epsilon \sigma v \epsilon к \tau \epsilon i \nu, \pi \lambda \epsilon o \nu \in \xi \in i a$ ，will sometimes be used in relation to sins of uncleanness，because such may be acts of injustice also．Thus adultery is not only impurity，but it is robbery also ：hence I Thess．iv． 6 rò $\mu \dot{\eta} \dot{v} \pi \epsilon \rho-$

 there）．In other passages again there will be an accidental connexion；e．g． Ephes．iv． 19 єis є $\rho \gamma \frac{1}{}$
 ness，＇＇with entire disregard for the rights of others．＇But nowhere do the words in themselves suggest this meaning．Here the particles kaì rìv show that a new type of sin is intro－ duced with $\pi \lambda_{\text {eone }} \xi_{i a \nu}$ ：and in the parallel passage Ephes．v． 3 （quoted above）the same distinction is indi－ cated by the change from the con－ junctive particle rai to the disjunctive i．It is an error to suppose that this sense of $\pi \lambda_{\epsilon \sigma \nu \epsilon} \xi_{i}$ ia is supported by Clem．Alex．Strom．iii． 12 （p． 55 I sq．）
 aútupкєía évavrıov $\mu$ év．On the con－ verse error of explaining $\dot{a} \kappa a \theta a p \sigma i a^{\prime}$ to mean＇greediness，＇＇covetousness，＇see the note on I Thess．ii． 3 ．

グтts к．т．入．］＇for it is idolatry＇： comp．Ephes．v． $5 \pi \lambda$ єоуе́ктпрs，ö（or ös）
 ＇Si quis non abstinuerit so ab avari－． tia，ab idololatria coinquinabitur＇（see Philippians p． 63 on the misunder－ standing of this passage）．The covet－ ous man sets up another object of worship besides God．There is a sort of religious purpose，a devotion of the soul，to greed，which makes the sin of the miser so hateful．The idea of avarice as a religion may have been suggested to St Paul by our Lord＇s words，Matt．vi． 24 ov̉ $\delta \dot{v} \nu a \sigma \theta \in$ Өє $\varphi$ $\delta_{o v \lambda \epsilon} \dot{\epsilon} \epsilon \nu$ кai $\mu a \mu \omega \nu \hat{c}$, ，though it is a mistake to suppose that Mammon was the name of a Syrian deity．It ap－ pears however elsewhere in Jewish writers of this and later ages：eg． Philo de Mon．i． 2 （II．p． 214 sq．）$\pi a y-$ whole context），and Shemoth Rabba fol．121． 3 ＇Qui opes suas multiplicat per foenus，ille est idololatra＇（with other passages quoted by Wetstein and Schöttgen on Ephes. v. 5). St Chrysostom, Hom. in Joann. lxo (viIL. p. 392 sq. ), enlarges on the cult of wealth-the consecration of it, the worship paid to it, the sacrifices de-mata (p. 393). The passage in Test. xii Patr. Jud, 18 $\dot{\eta}$ фı $\lambda a \rho \gamma v p i a z o \grave{s}$ cion $\delta \lambda$ a $\delta \delta \eta y \in \bar{i}$ is no real parallel to St Paul's language, though at first sight it seems to resemble it. For $\eta_{j}^{T}$ cs, 'seeing that it,' see the note on Phil. iv. 3.

6, 7. $\delta \iota^{2} \quad$ à к.т. ${ }^{2}$.] The received text requires correction in two points. (1) It inserts the words ei $\pi \mathrm{i}$ rov̀s vioùs $r \hat{\eta} s \mathrm{a} \pi \epsilon \epsilon \theta_{\epsilon} i a s$ after $\tau 0 \hat{v}$ Өєoû. Though this insertion has preponderating support, yet the words are evidently interpolated from the parallel passage,

 $\theta$ eias. We are therefore jastified in rejecting them with other authorities, few in number but excellent in character. See the detached note on various readings. When the sentence is thus corrected, the parallelism of $\delta \iota^{\prime}$ á...es ois kai...may be compared with $\mu \epsilon i \sigma \theta \epsilon$. (2) The vast preponderance of authority obliges us to substitute tovitous for aủrnîs.

6. $\left.{ }^{\boldsymbol{\varepsilon}} \rho \chi^{\epsilon \tau+a \iota}\right]$ This may refer either to the present and continuous dispensation, or to the future and final judgment. The present ${ }^{\text {en }} \rho \boldsymbol{\rho} \boldsymbol{\epsilon \sigma \theta a t}$ is frequently used to denote the certainty of a future event, e.g. Matt. xvii. II, Joh. iv. 2 I, xiv. 3, whence ó ${ }^{\prime} \rho \chi \chi^{\prime} \mu$ киos is a designation of the Messiah : see Winer § xl. p. 332.
7. En ois к.т. $\lambda$.] The clause dini tovis viois $\tau \hat{\eta} s$ àntcteias having been struck out, è ois must necessarily be nenter and refer to the same as $8 r^{\prime} \vec{a}$. Independently of the rejection of the clause, this neuter seems more probable in itself than the masculine: for most commonly used of things, not of persons, especially in this and the companion epistle: iv. 5, Ephes. ii. 2, 10, iv. 17, v. 2 ; (2) The Apostle would hardly denounce it as a sin in bis Co lossian converts that they 'walked among the sons of disobedience'; for the Christian, though not of the world, is necessarily in the world : comp. I Cor. v. 1o. The apparent parallel, masculine), does not hold, because the addition $\hat{e} \nu \tau a i ̂ s \dot{e} \pi$, Ovpiaus к.т. $\lambda$. makes all the difference. Thus the rejection of the clause, which was decided by textual considerations, is confirmed by exegetical reasons.

кai $v \mu \epsilon i s]^{\text {' }} y e$, like the other heathen' (i. 6 кaì $\overline{\epsilon \nu} \dot{\nu} \mu \hat{\nu} \nu$ ), but in the next verse кai iرfis is rather 'ye yourselves,' 'ye notwithstanding your former lives.'
 this atmosphere of sin, when ye had not yet died to the word.'
 should have expected airois, but raúrots is substituted as more emphatic and condemnatory: comp. Ephes.

 ${ }_{\epsilon} \boldsymbol{\nu}$ involve two distinct ideas, denoting the condition of their life and the character of their practice respectively. Their couduct was conformable to their eireumstances. Comp. Gal. v. 25 $\chi^{\hat{m} \mu \epsilon \nu}$.

8. The errors of the past suggest the obligations of the present. Thus the Apostle returns to the topic with which the sentence commenced. But the violence of the contrast has broken up the grammar of the sentence; see the note on ver. 5.

тà $\left.\pi \dot{\alpha} \boldsymbol{\gamma}_{\tau a}\right]$ ' not only those vices which have been specially named before (ver. 5), but all of whatever kind.' The Apostle accordingly goes on to spocify sins of a wholly different type from those alrendy mentioned, sins of uncharitableness, such as anger, detraction, malice, and the like.
 one denotes a more or less settled feeling of hatred, the other a tumultuous outburst of passion. This distinction of the two words was fixed chiefly by the definitions of the Stoics :

 vos $\mu$ uәбккакía, Greg. Naz. Carm. 34

 may be represented in Latin by ira and furor ; Sence. de Ira ii. $36^{\text {' Aja- }}$ cem in mortem egit furor, in furorem ira,' and Jerome in Ephes. iv. 3I 'Furor incipiens ira est': see 'Trench N. T. Syn. § xxxvii, p. 123 sq. On other synonymes connected with $Q_{v}$ $\mu o ́ s$ and $\dot{o} \rho \gamma \gamma^{\prime}$ see the nota on Ephes. iv. 31 .

какiav] 'malice,' or 'malignity,' as it may be translated in default of a better word. It is not (at least in the New Testament) vice generally, but the vicious nature which is bent on doing harm to others, and is well defined by Calvin (on Ephes. iv. 31) 'animi pravitas, quae humaritatiet aequitati est opposita.' 'This will be evident from the connexion in which it appears, e.g. Rom. i. 29, Eph. iv. 3I, Tit. iii. 3. Thus какia and movjpia (which frequently occur together, e.g. I Cor. v. 8) only differ in so far as the one denotes rather the vicious disposition, the other the active exercise of it. The word is carefully investigated in Trench N. T. Syn. § xi. p. 35 sq.
ßגаaбфпнiav] 'evil speaking, railing, slandering' as frequently, e.g. Kom. iii. 8, xiv. 16, I Cor. iv. 13 (v.l.), x. 30, Ephes. iv. 3I, Tit. iii. 2. The word has the same twofold sense, 'evil speaking' and 'blasplemy,' in classical writers, which it has in the New Testament.
aíवродоү'av]'foul-mouthed abuse.' The word, as used clsewhere, hats two rceanings: (1) 'Filthy-talking,' as defined in Clem. Alex. Pasd. ii. 6 (p. 189 sq .), where it is denounced at length: comp. Arist. Pol. vii. 17, Epict. Man. 33, Plut. Mor. 9, and so commonly; (2) 'Abusive language,' as e.g. Polyb. viii. 13. 8, xii. I3. 3, xxxi. 10. 4. If the two senses of the word had been quite distinct, we might have had some difficulty in choosing between them here. The former sense is suggested by the parallel passage єútpatcita; the second by the connexion with $\beta \lambda a \sigma \phi \eta \mu$ ia here. But the second sense is derived from the first. The word can only mean ' abuse,' when the abuse is 'foul-mouthed.' And thus we may suppose that both ideas, 'filthiness' and 'evil-speaking,' are included here.
 off: Do these aorist participles deseribe an action coincident with or prior to the $\psi \in \dot{\sim} \delta \in \sigma \theta \in$ ? In other words are they part of the command, or do they assign the reason for the command? Must they be rendered 'putting off,' or 'seeing that ye did (at your baptism) put off'? The former seems the more probable interpreta tion; for (I) Though both ideas are found in St Paul, the imperative is the more usual; e.g. Kom. xiii. $12 \mathrm{sq} . \dot{\boldsymbol{a} \pi \mathrm{m}^{2} \mathrm{a}^{\prime}-}$
$\delta \nu \sigma \alpha ́ \mu \epsilon \nu o \iota ~ \tau \grave{\partial} \nu \pi \alpha \lambda \alpha \iota o ̀ \nu ~ a ̈ \nu \theta \rho \omega \pi \sigma \nu$ $\sigma \grave{\nu} \nu \tau \alpha i ̄ s ~ \pi \rho \alpha ́ \xi \in \sigma \iota \nu$

 $\dot{\epsilon} v \delta \dot{v} \dot{\sigma} \sigma \sigma \theta \epsilon \tau \dot{\eta} \nu \quad \pi a \nu о \pi \lambda i a \nu$ with ver. 14

 one exception is Gal. iii. 27 ö öot үà $\rho$ $\delta v ́ \sigma a \sigma \theta \epsilon$. (2) The 'putting on' in the parallel passage, Ephes. iv. 24, is imperative, not affirmative, whether
 (3) The participles here are followed immediately by an imperative in the context, ver. I2 évòv́qua $\theta \in$ oüv, whero the idea seems to be the same. For the synchronous aorist participle see Winer § xlv. p. 430. St Paul uses

 (not $\dot{\epsilon} \nu \delta \dot{v} \epsilon \sigma \theta \epsilon$ ), because it is a thing to be done oncefor all. For the double compound àmeкסiver $\theta a c$ see the notes on ii. I I, I 5 .
 Ephes. iv. 22. With this expression vii 22, 2 Cor. iv. 16, Ephes. iii. 16 ; $\delta$ криттòs тîs карঠ̂ias äv $\theta \rho \omega \pi \sigma s$, I Pet.
 significance,' Polycr. in Euseb. H.E. V. 24 .

1o. tò ע עéol к.т.ג.] In Ephes. iv.
 rov. Of the two words véos and kat$\nu_{0}$ o, the former refers solely to time, the other denotes quality also; the one is new as being young, the other new as being fresh: the one is opposed to long duration, the other to effeteness; see Trench N. T. Syn. §lx. p. 206. Here the idea which is wanting to véos, and which kaù̀s gives in the parallel passare, is more than supplied by the addition rò davakaขоч́ $\mu \in \nu о \nu$ к.т. $\lambda$.

The עéos or кatvòs ä $\nu \theta \rho \omega \pi \sigma$ in these passages is not Christ Himself, as the paraliel expression Xotoròv évóvíaa$\sigma \theta a \iota$ might suggest, and as it is actually used in Ign. Ephes. 20 els tòv kat-regenerate man formed after Christ. The idea here is the same as in кaьvो kriots, 2 Cor. v. 17, GaI. vi. I5: comp.

 $\boldsymbol{\mu} \boldsymbol{\operatorname { \nu o g }}$.
 being renewed.' The force of the present tense is explained by 2 Cor. iv.

 use of the tenses in the parallel passage, Ephes. iv. $22 \mathrm{sq} . \dot{a} \pi \boldsymbol{a}^{2} \theta_{\epsilon} \sigma \theta a t, \dot{a} \nu a-$ $\nu \in \frac{0}{v} \sigma \theta a \iota, \dot{\epsilon} \nu \delta \dot{v} \sigma a \sigma \theta a t$. For the op-cis ढं $\pi i \gamma \nu \omega \sigma \omega]^{\prime}$ 'unto perfect lnotoledge,' the true knowledge in Christ, as opposed to the false knowledge of the heretical teachers. For the implied contrast see above, pp. 44, 99 sq. (comp. the notes on i. 9, ii. 3), and for the word $\dot{\epsilon}^{\prime} \pi i \gamma \nu \omega \sigma \iota s$ the note on $\mathbf{i} .9$. The words here are to be connected closely with d̀aкaıvoúpevoн: comp. Heb. vi. 6 тá入ı̀ à $\nu a \kappa a \iota \nu i \zeta \epsilon \iota \nu \in$ is $\mu \mathrm{E}$ távolav.

кат' єiкóva к.т.入.] The reference is к.т.. ; comp. ver. 28 кат' єiкóva Өєо̂ є̇лоípocv aủróv. See also Ephes. iv. 24 $\sigma \theta$ ध́vтa. This reference however does not imply an identity of the creation here mentioned with the creation of Genesis, but only an analogy between the two．The spiritual man in each believer＇s heart，like the primal man in the beginning of the world，was created after God＇s image．The кaıทो kriots in this respect resembles the à $\rho_{\text {Xaía }}$ ктírts．The pronoun aưtò cannot bo referred to anything else but the $\nu \epsilon \cos a \partial \rho \rho \omega \pi 0 s$ ，the regene－ rate man；and the aorist kríaztos （compare ктьotévra in the parallel passage Ephes．iv．24）refers to the time of this divajévpŋats in Christ．

 ros aủrô̂ ท̣̆ $\mu \mathrm{s}$ s，after which Gen．i． 26 is quoted．The new birth was a re－ creation in God＇s image；the subse－ quent life must be a deepening of this image thus stamped upon the man．

The allusion to Genesis therefore requires us to understand $\tau 0 \hat{v}$ ктiбay－ ros of God，and not of Clirist，as it is taken by St Chrysostom and others； and this seems to be demanded also by the common use of $\delta$ krioas．But if Christ is not is kriaras，may He not be intended by the eiкळ⿱亠䒑日，тои ктíaytos？ In favour of this interpretation it may be urged（I）That Christ elsewhere is called the ciкぁv of God，i．15， 2 Cor． iv．4；（2）That the Alexandrian school interpreted the term in Gen．i． 26 as denoting the Logos；thus Philo de

 yos（contp．ib．§§ 7，23，24，48），Fragm．
 Ầpat про̀s тò̀ àvштáтш каі̆ татє́ра

 Leg．Alleg．i． 31,32 （i．p． 106 sq．）． Hence Philo speaks of the first man as ciкळ̀̀ єiкóvos（de Mund．Op．6），and $\mu i \mu \eta \mu a$（ib．§48）．A pregnant mean－ ing is thus given to kará，and kar＇$\epsilon$ i－ кóva is rendered＇after the fashion（or pattern）of the Image．＇But this in－ terpretation seems very improbable in

St Patul ；for（I）In the parallel pas－ sage Ephes．iv． 24 the expression is simply katà Өєóv，which may be re－ garded as equivalent to кат＇єixáva тoū ктiaados here；（2）The Alexandrian explanation of Gen．i． 26 just quoted is very closely allied to the Platonic doctrine of ideas（for the ciк $\omega \nu$ ，so in－ terpreted，is the archetgpe or iden pattern of the sensible world），and thus it lies outside the range of those conceptions which specially reeom－ mended the Alexandrian terminology of the Luogos to the Aposties，as a fit vehicle for communicating the truths of Christianity． i1．${ }^{\prime \prime} \pi \% v$ ］i．e．＇in this regencrato life，in this spiritual region into which the belicver is transferred in Christ．＇
ovंk $\ddot{\epsilon} \nu[$ ］＇Not only does the dis－ tinction not exist，butit cannot exist．＇ It is a mundane distinction，and there－ fore it has disappeared．For the sense of $\boldsymbol{\epsilon} \nu \nu$ ，negativing not mercly the fact，but the possibility，see the note on Gal．iii． 28.
$\left.{ }^{\top} \mathbf{E} \lambda \lambda \eta \nu \kappa . \tau . \lambda.\right]$ Comparing the enume－ ration here with the parallel passage Gal．iii．28，we mark this difference． In Galatians the abolition of all dis－ tinctions is stated in the broadest way by the selection of three typical instances；religious prerogative（＇Iov－ $\delta a i o s,{ }^{7}{ }^{\text {E }} \lambda \lambda \neq p$ ），social caste（ $\delta \theta u ̄ \lambda o s$ ，é $\lambda \epsilon i-$ $\theta \epsilon \rho o s)$ ，natural sex（ä $\left.\rho \sigma \epsilon \nu, \theta_{\eta} \lambda \nu\right)$ ．Here on the other hand the examples are chosen with special reference to the immediate circumstances of tho Co－ lossian Church．（1）The Judaism of the Colossian heretics is met by ${ }^{\circ} \mathrm{E} \lambda \lambda \eta \nu$ кaì＇Iovóaios，and as it manifested it－ self especially in enforcing circunci－ sion，this is further emphasized by $\pi є \rho เ т о \mu \grave{\eta}$ каі ц̀кроßvбтіа（see above， p．73）．（2）Their Gnosticism again is met by ßápßapos，$\Sigma$ кxv́dins．They laid special stress on intelligence，penetra－ tion，gnosis．The Apostle offers the full privileges of the Gospel to barba－ rians and even barbarians of the low－ est type (see p. 99 sq .). In Rom. i. 14 the division "E $\lambda \lambda \eta \sigma$ iv $\tau \in$ каì $\beta$ apßápos is almost synonymous with vodois тє каі àvои́тоь. (3) Special circumstances, connected with an eminent member of the Clurch of Colosseo, had directed his attention at this moment to the relation of masters and slaves. Hence he cannot leave the subject without adding $\delta \circ \hat{0} \lambda o s$, éncúOrpos, though this has no special bearing on the Colossian heresy. See above, p. 33, and the note on iii. 22, together with the introduction to the Epistle to Philemon.

$\pi \epsilon \rho \iota \tau о \mu \bar{\eta}$ к.т. $\lambda$.] Enforcing and extending the lesson of the previous clause. This abolition of distinctions applies to religious privilege, not only as inherited by birth ( ${ }^{*} \mathrm{E} \lambda \lambda \eta \nu$ кal 'Iovסaios), but also as assumed by adopno advantage to be born a Jew, it is none to become as a Jew; comp. i Cor. vii. 19, Gal. v. 6, vi. 15.

Bápßapos] To the Jew the whole world was divided into 'Iovóaío and "EdA $\quad$ ves, the privileged and unprivileged portions of mankind, religious prerogative being taken as the line of demarcation (see notes Gal. ii. 3). To the Greek and Roman it was similarly divided into "E Bápßapot, again the privileged and unprivileged portion of the human race, civilisation and cultnre being now the criterion of distinction. Thus from the one point of view the ${ }^{\sigma} E \lambda \lambda \eta \nu$ is contrasted disadvantageously with the 'Ioviaios, while from the other he is contrasted advantageously with the Rapßapos. Both distinctions are equally antagonistic to the Spirit of the Gospel. The Apostle declares both alike snll and void in Christ. The twofold character of the Colossian heresy enables him to strike at these two opposite forms of error with one blow.

The word $\beta$ áp $\beta$ apos properly denoted one who spoke an inarticulate, stammeriug, unintelligible language; see Max Müler Lectures on the Science of Language ist ser. p. 8r sq., 114 sq., Farrar Familicg of Specch p. 2I: comp. I Cor, xiv. II. Hence it was adopted by Greek exclusiveness and pride to stigmatize the rest of mankind, a feeling embodied in the proverb $\pi$ às $\mu \eta{ }^{\circ}$ "E $\lambda \lambda \eta \nu$ ßápßapos (SErvius on Verg. Aen. ii. 504); comp.

 к.т. $\lambda$., Dionys. Hal. Rhet. xi. 5 $\delta \iota \pi \lambda o u ̂ \nu$
 So Philo Vit. Moys. ii. 5 (II. p. 138)

 to tò 'Eス入quıoóv. It is not necessary to suppose that they adopted it from the Egyptians, who seem to have called non-Egyptian peoples berber (see Sir G. Wilkinson in Rawlinson's Herod. ii. 158 ); for the onomatopeeia will explain its origin independently, Stra-adopting the Greek culture, adopted the Greek distinction also, eg. Cic. de Fin. ii. 15 ' Nom solum Graecia et Italia, sed etiam omnis barbaria': and accordingly Dionysius, Ant. Rom. i.69, classes the Romans with the Grceks as distinguisied from the 'barbarians' -this twofold division of the human race being taken for granted as absolute and final. So too in v. 8, having mentioned the Romans, he goes on to speak of oi ${ }^{\circ} \lambda \lambda o^{}{ }^{} E \lambda \lambda \eta \nu \epsilon$. The older Roman poets however, writing from a Greek point of view, (moro than half in irony) speak of themselves as barbari and of their country as barbaria; O.g. Plant. Mil. Glor. ii. 2. $5^{8}$ 'poetae barbaro' (of Naevius), Asin. Prol. II.

'Maccus vortit barbare,' Poen. iii. 2. 21 'in barbaria boves.'

In this classification the Jews necessarily ranked as 'barbarians'; Orig. c. Cels. i. 2. At times Philo seems tacitly to accept this designation (Vit. Moys. 1. c.); but elsewhere he resents it, Leg. ad Gai. 31 (II. p. 578) víò ф ${ }^{\text {o }}$

 the other hand the Christian Apologists with a true instinct glory in the 'barbarous' origin of their religion : Justin Apol. i. 5 (p. 56 A) d̀入à каї є̀

 Tatian. ad Graec. 29 रpaфais rıनip

 фiлoco申ias. By glorying in the name they gave a practical comment on the Apostle's declaration that the distinction of Greek and barbarian was abolished in Christ. In a similar spirit Clem. Alex. Strom. i. i6 (p. 36 I) endeavours to prove that oú $\mu \dot{\sim}{ }^{\prime} o v$ pìo-

' Not till that word barbarian,' writes Prof. Max Müller (l. c. p. 1 I8), 'was struck out of the dictionary of mankind and replaced by brother, not till the right of all nations of the world to be classed as members of one genus or kind was reeognised, can we look even for the first beginnings of our science. This change was effected by Christianity... Humanity is a word which you look for in vain in Plato or Aristotle; the idea of mankind as one family, as the children of ono God, is an idea of Christian growth : and the science of mankind, and of the languages of mankind, is a science which, without Christianity, would never have sprung into life. When people had been taught to look upon all men as brethren, then and then only, did the variety of human speech present itself as a problem that called for a solution in the eyes of thoughtful observers: and I therefore date the real beginning of the science of language from the first day of Pentecost... The common origin of mankind, the differences of race and language, the susceptibility of all nations of the highest mental culture, these become, in the new world in which we live, problems of scientific, because of more than scientific interest.' St Paul was the great exponent of the fundamental principle in the Christian Church which was symbolized on the day of Pentecost, when he declared, as here, that in Christ there is neither "E $\lambda \lambda \eta y$ nor Bápßapos, or as in Rom. i. i4 that he himself was a debtor equally ${ }^{\sigma} \mathrm{E} \lambda \lambda \eta \sigma i v$ тє каї $\beta$ apß $\beta$ ápots.

The only other passage in the New Testament (besides those quoted) in which $\beta$ áp $\beta$ apos occurs is Acts xxviii. 2,4 , where it is used of the people of Melita. If this Melita be Malta, they would be of Phœenician descent.

Eкvi $\left.\eta_{j}\right\rfloor$ The lowest type of barbarian. There is the same collocation of words in Dionys. Halic. Rhet. xi.

 The savageness of the Scythians was proverbial. The earlier Greek writers indeed, to whom omne ignotum was pro magnifico, had frequently spoken of them otherwise (see Strabo vii. 3 . $7 \mathrm{sq} ., \mathrm{p} .300 \mathrm{sq}$.). Aeschylus for instanco called them єỹvouot इкútal, Fragm. 189 (comp. Eum. 703). Like the ather Hyperboreans, they were a simple, rightecus people, living beyond the vices and the miseries of civilisation. But the common estimate was far different, and probably far more true: e.g. 3 Mace.
 тэта (comp. 2 Macc. iv. 47), Joseph.

 ס几ф́́poитєs，Philo Leg．ad Gai． 2

 $\kappa \hat{\omega} \nu$ ，Tertull．ado．Marc．i．I＇Sestha tetrior，＇Orig．c．Cels．i．I $\Sigma_{\kappa \nu} \boldsymbol{\theta} \hat{\nu} \nu$, каі $\epsilon \boldsymbol{\epsilon} \tau \iota \Sigma \kappa v \theta \omega \hat{\omega} \boldsymbol{a} \sigma \epsilon \beta \epsilon \in \epsilon \tau \epsilon \rho o \nu$. In Vit．Moys． ii． 4 （1．p．137）Philo seems to place the Egyptians and the Scythians at the two extremes in the scale of barbarian nations The passages given in Wet－ stein from classical writers are hardly less strong in the same direction． Anacharsis the Scythian is said to have §cvorv，Clem．Strom．i．1． 6 （p．364）．
The Jews had a special reason for their unfavourable estimate of the Scythians．In the reign of Josiah hordes of these northern barbarians had deluged Palestine and a great part of Western Asia（Herod．i．Io3 －106）．The incident incleed is passed over in silence in the historical books ； but the terror inspired by these in－ vaders has found expression in the prophets（Ezek，xxviii，xxxix，Jer．i． I $3 \mathrm{sq} ., \mathrm{vi}$ ．I sq．），and they left behind them a memorial in the Greek name of Beth－shean，$\Sigma_{\kappa v} \hat{\sigma}_{\omega} \nu \pi o ́ \lambda c s$（Judith iii． Io， 2 Macc．xii． 29 ：comp．Judges i． have been derived from a settlement on this occasion（Plin．N．H．v．I6； see Inwald Gesch．nis p． 689 sq ．，Grove s．v．Scythopolis in Smith＇s Bibl．Dicl．）．

Hence Justin，Dial．§ 28 （p．246A）， describing the largeness of the new

 where he singles out two different but equally low types of barbarians，the Scythians being notorious for their ferocity，the Persians for their licen－ tiousness（Clem．Alex．Paed．i．7， p．13I，Strom．iii．2，p．515，and the Apologists generally）．So too the Pseudo－Lucian，Philopatris 17，sati－ rising Christianity，Kp．тóß $\epsilon$ єite，єi kai of this passage in the Colossians， leresiologers distinguished four main forms of heresy in the pre－Christian $\nu \iota \sigma \mu o ́ s$, ioviaü $\mu$ ós ；so Epiphan．Epist．

 ठaíos，ả̉入à кaıı̀̀ ктíus：comp．Haer． i． 4,7 sq．，I．pp．5， 8 sq．，Anaceph．II． pp．127， 129 sq ．

тà тávтa к．т．入．］＇Christ is all things and in all things．＇Christ has dispossessed and obliterated all distinctions of religious prerogative and intellectual preeminence and so－ cial caste；Christ has substituted Himself for all these；Christ occupies the whole sphere of human life and permeates all its developments ：comp． pounévov．For tà mávтa，which is stronger than of $\pi$ ávres，see Gal．iii． ámaptiay with the note．In this pas－ sage $\boldsymbol{\epsilon} \boldsymbol{\nu}$ тâcuv is probably neuter，as in 2 Cor．xi．6，Phil．iv．12，I Tim．iii． II， 2 Tim．ii．7，iv．5，Ephes．iv．6，vi 16.

In the parallel passage Gal．iii． 28 the corresponding clause is mávtes inversion here accords with a chief motive of the epistle，which is to as－ sert the absolute and universal supre－ macy of Christ ；comp．i． 17 sq ．，ii． 10 sq．，19．The two parts of the anti－ thesis are combined in our Lord＇s

12－15．＇Therefore，as the elect of God，as a people consecrated to His service and specially endowed with His love，array yourselves in hearts of compassion，in kindliness and humi－ lity, in a gentle and yielding spirit. Bear with one another, forgive freely among yourselves. As your Master forgave you His servants, so ought ye to forgive your fellow-servants. And over all these robe yourselves in Iove; for this is the garment which binds together all the graces of perfection. And let the one supreme ampire in your hearts, the one referee amidst all your difficulties, be the peace of Christ, which is the destined goal of your Christian calling, in which is realised the unity belonging to members of one body. Lastly of all; show your gratitude by your thanksgiving.'

12. E'vóv́aacte oủv] 'Put on therefore,' as men to whom Christ bas become all in all. The incidental mention of Christ as superseding all other relations gives occasion to this argumentative ous : comp. iii. I, 5 .
 of God.' Comp. Rom. viii. 3, Tit. i. I. distinguished as an outer and an in-being those summoned to the privileges of the Gospel and éк $\lambda \in \kappa$ coi those appointed to final salvation (Matt. xxiv. 22, 24, 31, Mark xiii. 20, 22, 27 , Luke xviii. 7). But in St Paul no such distinction can be traced. With him the two terms seem to be coextensive, as two aspects of the same process, $\kappa \lambda \eta$ roí having special reference to the goal and ék入єктоí to the startingpoint. The same persons are 'called' to Christ, and 'chosen out' from the world. Thus in J Thess, i. 4 єiéóces т $\grave{\eta} \nu$ ék $\lambda о \gamma \dot{\eta} \nu \dot{v} \mu \bar{\omega} \nu \kappa$ к.т. $\lambda$. the word clearly denotes election to Church-membership. Thus also in 2 Tim. it. Io, where St Paul says that he endures all things $\sigma \omega \tau \eta \rho$ ias $\tilde{u}_{\chi}{ }^{\omega} \omega \iota \nu$ к.r. $\lambda$., the uncertainty implied in these last words clearly shows that election to final salvation is not meant. In the same sense he speaks of an individual Christian as 'elect,' Rom. xvi. 13. And again in 1 Cor. i. $26,27 \beta \lambda \epsilon \pi \epsilon \epsilon \epsilon \epsilon \tau \dot{\eta} \nu \kappa \lambda \bar{\eta} \sigma \iota \nu$ the words appear as synonymes. The same is also the usage of St Peter. Thus in an opening salutation he addresses whole Christian communities $\sigma \nu \nu \epsilon \kappa \lambda \epsilon \kappa \tau \grave{\eta} \dot{\epsilon} \nu \mathrm{Ba}\langle\nu \lambda \omega \nu$, i. e. probably є́кк $\lambda \boldsymbol{\eta} \boldsymbol{\sigma} \boldsymbol{i} a)$, as St Paul under similar circumstances (Rom. i. 6, 7, I Cor. i. 2) designates them $\kappa \lambda_{\eta \tau o i}$; and in another passage ( 2 Pet. i. io) he appeals to his readers to make their $\kappa \lambda \hat{\eta} \sigma$ os and $\dot{\epsilon} \kappa \lambda o \gamma \dot{\eta}$ sure. The use of ék the same; and in Apoc. xvii. 14 oi oroi this is also the case, as we may infer from the addition of $\pi t \sigma$ roi, which points to those who have been true to their 'calling and election.' Thus the Gospels stand alone in this respect. In fact $\epsilon \kappa \lambda о \gamma^{\prime}{ }^{\prime}$ denotes election by God not only to final salvation, but to any special privilege or work, whether it be (I) Church-membership, as in the passages cited from the cpistles; or (2) The work of preaching, as when St Paul (Acts ix. 15) is called $\sigma x \in \bar{v} o s$ Ex $x$ orins, the object of the 'election' being defined in the words following, [ $\tau \hat{\omega} \nu]$ ] $\epsilon \theta \nu \bar{\omega} \nu$ тє ка̀ $\beta a \sigma \iota \lambda \epsilon \in \omega \nu$ к.т. $\lambda$.; ог (3) The Messiahship, 1 Pet. ii. 4, 6; or (4) The fatherhood of the chosen people, as in the case of Isaac and Jacob, Rom. ix. II ; or (5) The faithful remnant under the theocracy, Rom. xi. 5, 7, 28. This last application presents the closest analogy to the idea of final salvation : but even here St Paul treats $\kappa \lambda \hat{\eta} \sigma t s$ and $\epsilon \kappa \lambda \sigma \gamma{ }^{\prime}$ as coextensive, Rom. xi. 28, 29 катà $\delta \dot{\epsilon}$ т $\boldsymbol{\tau} \boldsymbol{\nu} \nu$

äflot к.r.入.] These are not to be taken as vocatives, but as predicates

 тоi．All the three terms éк $\lambda \in \kappa$ коí， ä $\gamma \iota \circ$ ， $\boldsymbol{\eta} \gamma a \pi \eta \mu$ évot，are transferred from the Old Covenant to the New， from the Israel after the flesh to the Israel after the Spirit．For the two äyoo，＇the consecrated people of God，＇ see the note on Phil．i．I．For the

 （as quoted in Rom．is．25）．In the New Testament it seems to be used always of the objects of God＇s love；

 Kupiov（comp．Jude I）；and so proba－
 $\nu \eta \nu$ ．For the connexion of God＇s elec－ tion and God＇s love see Rom．xi． 28 （quoted above）， 1 Thess．l．c．The каi is omitted in one or two excellent copies（though it has the great pre－ ponderance of authorities in its fa－ vourl，and it is impossible not to feel how much the sentence gains in force

$\sigma \pi \lambda a ́ \gamma \chi^{\nu a}$ oikтıp $\left.\mu_{0} \hat{v}\right]$＇a heart of pity．＇For the meaning of $\sigma \pi \lambda{ }^{\prime} \gamma \chi^{\nu}{ }^{\nu}$ see the note on Phil．i． 8 ，and for the
 ous Luke i．78，Test．xii Patr．Zab．7，8．
$\chi \rho \eta \sigma \tau$ óryra к．т．入．］The two words $\chi \rho \eta \sigma \tau o \tau \eta s$ and татесvoфробúvŋ，＇kind－ liness＇and＇humility，＇describe the Christian temper of mind generally， and this in two aspects，as it affects either（ 1 ）our relation to others（ $\chi \rho \eta \sigma$－ тórys），or（2）our estimate of self（ $\tau a-$ $\pi \epsilon \epsilon \nu 0 ф \rho o \sigma \dot{\nu} \eta$ ）．For $\chi \rho \eta \sigma \tau$ ór刀s see the note on Gal．v．22：for ramecuoфробivך， the note on Phil．ii． 3.
$\pi \rho a \tilde{v} \tau \eta \tau a$ к．т．．．］．］These next two words，$\pi \rho a u ̛ \not \eta \eta s$ and $\mu a k \rho o \theta v \mu i a, ~ d e-~$ note the exercise of the Christian temper in its outward bearing to－ wards others．They are best distin－ guished by their opposites．$\pi \rho a \tilde{u}$ गुs is opposed to＇rudeness，harshness，＇ т $\boldsymbol{\eta}_{\mathrm{s}}$（Arist．H．A．іх．г）；$\mu a \kappa \rho o \theta \nu \mu i ́ a ~ t o ~$ ＇resentment，revenge，wrath，＇ó $\rho \gamma{ }^{\eta}$
 v．1，2）．For the raeaning of $\mu$ aкро－ Ovpia see above，on i．in；for the form of $\pi \rho a{ }^{\wedge} \tau \eta s$（ $\pi \rho a o ́ \tau \eta s$ ），on Gal．v． 23. The words are discussed in Trench N．T．Syn．§ xlii．p． 140 sq．，§ xliii． p． $145 \mathrm{sq} ., \S$ liii．p． 184 sq ．They ap－ pear in connexion Ephes．iv．2，Ign． $\lambda \omega \nu$ ย̇̀ $\pi \rho a \tilde{v} \tau \eta \tau \iota$.

13．ả入入ウ${ }_{j} \lambda \omega \nu$ ，éavtois］The pro－ noun is varied，as in Ephes．iv． 32

 The reciprocal éautè differs from the reciprocal ${ }^{\boldsymbol{a}} \lambda \lambda \eta^{\prime} \lambda \omega \nu$ in emphasizing the idea of corporate unity ：hence it is more appropriate here（comp．Ephes． iv．2，32）with $\chi$ apt $\zeta$ ónevoc than with dуєұо́иєขои：comp．Xen．Mem．iii．5． 16

 $\sigma v \nu \omega \phi \in \lambda o u ̂ \nu \tau \epsilon s$ a $v \tau o u ́ s$ ，where the pro－ priety of the two words in their re－ spective places will be evident：and
 $\dot{\eta} \hat{\sigma} \epsilon \omega s$ à $\lambda \lambda \eta \lambda a s \in{ }^{\epsilon} \omega \rho \omega \nu$ ，where the vari－ ation is more subtle but not less ap－ propriate．For instances of this use of $\dot{\epsilon} a \nu \tau \hat{\omega} \boldsymbol{\nu}$ see Bleek Hebralerbrief iii． 13 （p． 453 sq ），Kühncr Griech．Gramm． § 455 （II．p． 497 sq．）．
$\chi a \rho t \zeta$ ó $\mu \in \nu o \iota]$ i．e．＇forgiving＇；see the note on ii．I3．An a fortioni argu－ ment lurks under the use of eiavtois （rather than $\dot{a} \lambda \lambda \dot{\eta} \lambda o s s$ ）：if Christ for－ gave them，much more should they forgive themselves．

$\left.\mu о \mu \phi \eta_{\nu}\right]$ 'a complaint.' As $\mu \epsilon \mu^{\prime}-$ $\phi \epsilon \sigma \theta a c$ is ' to find fault with,' referring most commonly to errors of omission, so $\mu 0 \mu \phi \eta^{\prime}$ here is regarded as a debt, which needs to be remitted. The rendering of the A. V. 'a quarrel' (=querela) is only wrong as being an archaism. The phrase $\mu \circ \mu \phi \dot{\eta} \nu \stackrel{\epsilon}{\epsilon}_{\chi \in i \nu}$ occurs several times in classical Greek, but generally in poetry: e.g. Eur. Orest. 1069, Arist. Pax 664.
каӨఉ̀s кal к.г.入.] This must not be connected with the preceding words, but treated as an independent sentence, the кatios kai being answered by the oṽ $\tau \omega s$ кai. For the presence of ka' in both clauses of the comparison see the note on i. 6. The phenomenon is common in the best classical writers, $\sigma v$ к. $\tau . \lambda . ;$ see the references in Heindorf on Plato Phaedo 64 c , Sophist. 217 в, and Kühner Griech. Gramm. § 524 (II. p. 799).

${ }_{0}$ Kiplos] This reading, which is better supported than o Xoıstós, is also more expressive. It recalls more directly the lesson of the parable which enforces the duty of fellowservant to fellow-servant; Matt. xviii.

 ìvov̉ $\rho a v \hat{\varphi}$. The reading X $\rho \iota \sigma \tau o ̀ s$ perhaps comes from the parallel passage Ephes.

 toits.
14. $\dot{\epsilon} \pi \grave{i}$ ìã $\sigma \nu \nu$ ' over and above all

 Ephes. vi. I6, the correct reading is probably én $\pi \hat{a} \sigma \iota \nu$. Love is the outer garment which holds the others in their places.
 12.
on] 'which thing,' i.e. 'love'; comp.
 $\lambda a ̈ т \rho \eta s, \operatorname{Ign}$. Rom. 7 ă $\rho т о \nu$ Өєồ $\theta є ́ \lambda \omega$, $\beta a ̈ \lambda \epsilon \sigma \theta \epsilon$ єis $\nu$ éa Xpiotós, Trall. 8 ávaктйซaг $\theta_{\epsilon}$ éavtov̀s
 Though there are various readings in the passages of the Ignatian Epistles, the ${ }^{g}$ seems to be generally right. These instances will show that of may be referred to тìे áyá $\boldsymbol{q}^{2} \nu$ alone. Otherwise we might suppose the ante-but this hardly suits the sense. The common reading $\eta \boldsymbol{\eta}$ rus is obviously a scribe's correction.
$\sigma \dot{\prime} \nu \delta \epsilon \sigma \mu \circ s$ к.т. . .] ' $^{\prime}$ the bond of perfection,' i. e. the power, which unites and holds together all those graces and virtues, which together make up perfection. मávia ékeiva, says Chry-

 à $\lambda \grave{a}$ ठ́tappeí : comp. Clem. Rom. 49
 Súvãat é $\xi_{\eta} \gamma \dot{\eta} \sigma a \sigma \theta a u$; Thus the Pythagoreans (Simplic. in Epictet. p. 208 a) d $\rho \in \tau \bar{\omega} \nu$ ë $\lambda \in \gamma^{\prime} \nu$. So too Themist. Orat.

 The word will take a genitive either of the object bound or of the binding force: e.g. Plato Polit. 310 a тои̃то⿱ an instance of the one genitive (the objective) here, of the other (the subjective) in Ephes. iv. $3 \boldsymbol{\epsilon} \nu \tau \hat{\varphi} \sigma v \nu \delta \dot{\delta} \sigma \mu \varphi$ Tins cipijuns (see the note there).

Another explanation makes $\sigma$ v́v̊́co-

$\mu_{o s}=\sigma v v^{\prime} \theta_{\epsilon \sigma \iota s}$ here, 'the bundle, the totality', as e.g. Herodian. iv. 12 máv-

 but this unusual metaphor is highly improbable and inappropriate here, not to mention that we should expect the definite article $\dot{\delta} \sigma \dot{v} \nu \delta \in \sigma \mu \circ$ s in this case. With either interpretation, the function assigned to áyars here is the same as when it is declared to Gal. v. 14). See also the all-embracing office which is assigned to it in I Cor. xiii.
 peace,' which He left as a legacy to His disciples: Joh. xiv. 27 єip $\eta^{\prime} \nu \eta \nu$ á $\phi i \eta \mu \iota$ sip $\tilde{\eta} \nu \eta \eta_{\eta}^{\dot{\eta}} \mu \hat{\omega} \nu$ with the context. The common reading $\dot{\eta}$ cip $\rho \dot{\eta} \nu \eta$ toû $\theta \epsilon o \hat{v}$ has a parallel in Phil. iv. 7.

ßoaßevéta] 'be umpire,' for the idea of a contest is only less prominent here, than in $\beta \rho a \beta \in \hat{\sigma} 0 \nu$ I Cor. ix. 24, Phil. iii. I4 (see the note there).

 бсу каi $\beta_{p a} \beta_{\varepsilon v г \eta \prime \nu . ~ W h e r e v e r ~ t h e r e ~}^{\text {. }}$ is a conflict of motives or impulses or reasons, the peace of Christ must step in and decide which is to prevail: Mir Aupòs Bpaßevéta, says Chrysostom Sevyóv.

For this metaphor of some one paramount consideration acting as umpire, where there is a conflict of internal motives, see Polyb. ii. 35.3 $\theta v \mu \hat{\varphi} \mu \hat{\alpha} \lambda \lambda o \nu \hat{\eta}$ 入oरı $\sigma \mu \hat{\varphi} \beta \rho a \beta \epsilon \dot{v} \epsilon-$ ctat, Philo de Migr. Abr. 12 (1. p.

 (comp. de Ebriet. 19, I. p. 368), Jos. B. J. vi. 2. 6 ́ßpáßєчє тàs тó $\lambda \mu a s$ ó... фóßos. Somewhat similarly túx (Polyb. xxvii. 14.4) or ф́źots (Athen. xv. p. 670 A) are made $\beta$ paßev́єiv. In other passages, where $\delta$ ©còs or rò $\theta \epsilon i n y$ is said Bpaßcúcty, this implies that, while man proposes, God dis-
 (Qui rer. div. her. 19, I. p. 486) is a (de Abrah. I4, II. p. Io, etc.): and in Josephus (Ant. vi. 3. i) ס̀ckú̧̧ı and Bpaßeveav are used together of the same action. In all such cases it appears that the idea of a decision and an avard is prominent in the word, and that it must not be taken to denote simply rule or power.

єis $\dot{\eta}_{\boldsymbol{\eta}}$ к.. . $\lambda$.] Comp. 1 Cor. vii. 15

$\dot{\epsilon} y$ è̀ $\sigma \dot{\omega} \mu a \tau \iota$ ] ' As ye were called as members of one body, so let there be one spirit animating that body':
 This passage strikes the keynote of the companion Fisistle to the Ephesians (see esp. ii. $16 \mathrm{sq} ., \mathrm{iv} .3 \mathrm{sq}$.).
s'xáptorot] 'And to crown all forget yourselves in thanksgiving towards God': see the notes on i. 12, ii. 7. The adjective єúxápıatos, though not occurring eisewhere in the Greek Bible, is not uncommon in classical writers, and like the Englishl 'grateful,' has two meanings; either (I) 'pleasurable' (e.g. Xen. Cyr. ii. 2. I) ; or (2) 'thankful' (e.g. Boeckh C.I. no. 1625), as liere.

16, 17. 'Let the inspiring word of Christ dwell in your hearts, enriching you with its boundless wealth and endowing you with all wisdom. Teach and admonish one another with psalms, with hymns of praise, with spiritual songs of all kinds. Only let them be pervaded with grace from heaven． Sing to God in your hearts and not with your lips only．And generally； whatever ye do，whether in word or in deed，let everything be done in the name of Jesus Christ．And（again I repeat it）pour out your thanksgiving to God the Father through Him．＇

16．＇0 גóyos toù Xparoî］＇the word of Christ，＇roù Xpıotoú being the sub－ jective genitive，so that Christ is the speaker．Though ó 入óyos tov̂ Өcồ and ó 入óyos tov $\mathrm{K} v \rho$ íou occur fre－ here only．There scems to be no di－ rect reference in this expression to any definite body of truths either writteu or oral，but ó $\lambda$ ó ${ }^{\prime}$ os $\tau$ ồ $\mathrm{X} \rho \iota \sigma$－ toú denotes the presence of Christ in the heart，as an inward monitor： comp．I Joh．ii． 14 ó $\lambda$ ógos tov̂ $\Theta \in o \hat{u}$

 correct reading）．
＇่ $\boldsymbol{\nu}$ v $\mu \hat{\nu}$ ］＇in your hearts，＇not＇among ＇you＇；comp．Rom．viii．9，if tò द́pockой»， av̉roù $\pi \nu є \hat{v} \mu a$ ę̀ $\dot{\mu} \mu \hat{i} \nu, 2$ Tim．i．5，14， and Lev．xxvi．12，as quoted in 2 Cor．

$\left.\pi \lambda o v \sigma i \omega_{5}\right]$ See above，p． 43 sq．，and the note on i． 27.
 wisdom．＇It seems best to take these words with the preceding clause， though Clem．Alex．Paed．ii． 4 （p．194） a．taches them to what follows．For this position of $\dot{\epsilon} \nu \pi a^{\prime} \sigma \eta$ roфica，at the end of the sentence to which it refers， comp．i． 9, Ephes．i．8．The connexion here adopted is also favoured by the parallel passage Ephes．v．I8，ig（see the note leelow）．Another passage i． roфia has a double bearing：while the connexion favours our taking év návg soopia here with the following words， the order suggests their being at－ tached to the preceding clause． are here used for imperatives，as fre－ quently in hortatory passages，e．g． Rom，xii． 9 sq．， 16 sq ．，Ephes．iv．2，3， Hebr．xiii．5，I Pet．ii． 12 ［？］，iii．I，7，9， 15，16．It is not，as some insist，that the participle itself has any imperati－ val force；nor，as maintained by others， that the construction should be ex－ plained by the hypothesis of a prece－ ding parenthesis or of a rerb sub－ stantive understood or by any other expedient to obtain a regular gram－ matical structure（see Winer，§ xlv． p． 44 I sq．，§ 1xii．p．707，§ lxiii．p．716， § lxiv．p．732）．But the absolute par－ ticiple，being（so far as regards mood） neutial in itself，takes its colour from the general complexion of the sen－ tence．Thus it is sometimes indica－ tive（e．g． 2 Cor．vii．5，and frequently）， sometimes imperative（as in the pas－ sages quoted），sometimes optative（as above，ii．2， 2 Cor．ix．It，comp．Ephes． iii．17）．On the distinction of $810 \hat{o}^{\circ}-$ $\sigma \kappa \in t \nu$ and $y o u \theta_{\epsilon \tau \epsilon i}$ see the note on i ． 28 ；they describerespectively the posi－ tive and the negative side of instruc－ tion．On the reciprocal éautoús seo the note on iii． 13 ．

$\psi a \lambda \mu o i s ~ к . \tau . \lambda] ~ T o ~ b e ~ c o n n e c t e d ~ w i t h$. the preceding sentence，as suggested by Ephes．v． $18 \mathrm{sq} . a^{\prime} \lambda \lambda \grave{\alpha} \pi \lambda \eta \rho_{0} \hat{\nu}_{\sigma} \theta_{\mathrm{E}}$ ì

 $\tau \hat{e}$ Kupíc．The datives describe the instruments of the $\delta \delta \delta a \times \eta$ and yov－ $\theta \in \sigma i ́ a$.

The three words $\psi a \lambda \mu o ́ s, \dot{v} \mu \nu o s, ~ \grave{\omega}$ are distinguisied，so far as they are distinguishable，in Trench N．T．Sym． §lxsviii．p． 279 sq．They are cor－ rectly defined by Gregory Nyssen in Psalm．c．iii（r．p．295）廿a入 $\mu$ òs $\mu$ én

 $\mu i a ;$ see also Hippol．p．I91 sq．（ed． de Lagarde）．In other words，while the leading idea of $\psi a \lambda \mu$ ós is a musi－ cal accompaniment and that of $\tilde{v}^{j} \mu \nu o s$ praise to God，$\varphi \delta \delta$ is the general word for a song，whether accompanied or unaccompanied，whether of praise or on any other subject．Thus it was quite possible for the same song to
 In the text the reference in $\psi a \lambda \mu o i s$ ， we may suppose，is specially，though not exclusively（ 1 Cor．xiv．26），to the Psalms of David，which would carly form part of the religious wor－ ship of the Christian brotherhood． On the other hand $\tilde{v}_{\mu \nu o u s}$ would more appropriately designate those hymns of praise which were composed by the Christians themselves on distinctly Christian themes，being either set forms of words or spontaneous effu－ sions of the moment．The third word ©ioais gathors up the other two，and extends the precept to all forms of song，with the limitation however that they must be $\pi$ ує $\nu \mu a \tau \iota к a i$ ．St Chry－ sostom treats $\tilde{v} \mu p_{0}$ here as an advance upon $\psi a \lambda \mu o i$, which in one aspect they are；oi 廿旼

Psalmody and hymnody were highly developed in the religious services of the Jews at this time：see Philo in каíws रapátтouct，§ Io（p．484）$\dot{o}$ à $\nu a-$

трциє́тр $\omega \nu, \pi \rho о \sigma о \delta i \omega \nu, \quad \tilde{u} \mu \nu \omega \nu, \pi а \rho \alpha-$ $\sigma \pi о \nu \delta \in i \omega \nu, \pi а \rho а \beta \omega \mu i \omega \nu, \sigma т \alpha \sigma i \mu \omega \nu, \chi^{0-}$

入oís $\mu$ е́тpo七s каі̀ $\mu$ é $\lambda \epsilon \sigma \iota$ к．т．$\lambda$ ．，with the whole context．They would thus find their way into the Christian Church from the very beginning． For instances of singing hymus or psalms in the Apostolic age see Acts iv．24，xvi．25， 1 Cor．xiv．15， 26. Hence even in St Paul＇s epistles，more especially his later epistles，fragments of such hymns appear to be quoted；e．g． Ephes．v． 14 （see the note there）．For the use of hymnody in the early Church of the succeeding generations see Plin． Epist．x． 97 ＇Ante lucem convenire， carmenque Christo quasi Deo dicere secum invicem，＇Anon．［Hippolytus］in reference in the text is not solely or chiefly to public worship as such． Clem．Alex．Paed．ii． 4 （p．194）treats it as applying to social gatherings； and again Tertnllian says of the agape， Apol． 39 ＇ Ut quisque de scripturis sanctis vel de proprio ingenio potest， provocatur in medium Deo canere， and of the society of husband and wife，Ad Uxor．ii． 8 ＇Sonant inter duos psalmi et hymni，et mutuo pro－ vocant quis melius Domino suo cantet．＇ On the psalmody etc．of the early Christians see Bingham Antiq．xiv． c．r，and especially Probst Lehre und Gebet p． 256 sq． $\hat{\epsilon}^{\prime} \nu$ т $\hat{\eta}$ хápıtı］＇in God＇s grace＇； comp． 2 Cor．i． 12 oủx iv $\sigma o \phi i a \operatorname{\sigma a\rho }-$ words are perhaps best connected with the preceding clause，as by Chryso－ stom．Thus the parallelism with ev $\pi a ́ \sigma \eta$ $\sigma o \phi i a$ is preserved．The cor－ rect reading is $\dot{\epsilon} \nu \tau \hat{\eta}$ रápıcı，not $\hat{\varepsilon} \nu$ $\chi$ д́pırı．For $\bar{\eta}$ रápıs，＇Divine grace＇

see Phil．i． 7 Gvyरouvopoús $\mu$ ขv $\tau \hat{\eta} s$ napuros with the note．The definite article seems to exclude all lower senses of $\chi$ ípts here，sueh as＇accept－ ableness，＇＇sweetness＇（see iv．6）．The interpretation＇with gratitude，＇if ctherwise tenable（comp．I Cor．x．30）， seems inappropriate here，because the idea of thanksgiving is introduced in the following verse． festation must be accompanied by the inward emotion．There must be the thanksgiving of the heart，as well as of the lips；comp．Ephes．v． 19 ädoures кal $\psi$ ä入入ovtes rŷ kapôta（probably the correct reading），where $\tau \hat{g}$ ка $\rho \delta \dot{\partial} a$ ＇with the heart＇brings out the sense more distinctly．

17．$\pi$ ầ ${ }^{\circ}$ art $\pi$ к．r．．．．］This is proba－ bly a nominative absolute，as Matt．x．

 sii．8），Luke xii．1o $\pi \bar{a}$ s ồ épeì hóyov

 comp．Matt．vii． 24 （v．1．）． $\pi \dot{d} \gamma \tau a]$ sc．$\pi o t i \pi \epsilon$, as the following èXapưтoûvтes suggests；comp．ver． 23.
ì д̀дóactı к．т．入．］This is the great practical lesson which flows from the theological teaching of the epistle． Hence the reiteration of Kvpia，è K $\nu$ рí，etc．，vv．18，20，22，23， 24 See above p． 104
e＇xapıбтоїчтеs］On this refrain see the notes on i．12，ij． 7 ． $\tau \hat{\omega} \theta \in \hat{\varphi} \pi a r \rho i]$ This，which is quite the best authenticated reading，gives a very unusual，if not unique，colloca－ tion of words，the usual form being The кai before $\pi a \tau \rho i$ in the received test is an obvious emendation．See the note on i ． 3 ，and the appendix on varions readings．

18－21．＇Ye wives，be subject to your husbands，for so it becomes you in Christ．Ye husbands，love and cherish your wives，and use no harsh－ ness towards them．Ye children，be obedient to your parents in all things； for this is commendable and lovely in Christ．Ye parents，vex not your children，lest they lose heart and grow sullen．＇

18 sq ．These precepts，providing for the conduct of Christians in private households，should be compared with Ephes．v．22－－vi．9， 1 Pet．ii． 18 －iii．7， Tit．ii．I sq．；see also Clem．Rom．I， Polyc．Phil． 4 sq．
Ai रvvaikes］＇Ye wives，＇the nomina－ tive with the defnite article being used for a vocative，as frequently in the New Testament，e．g．Matt．xi．26， Mark v．4I，Luke viii．54；see Winer § xxix．p． 227 sq ．The frequency of this use is doubtless due to the fact that it is a reproduction of the $\mathrm{He}-$ brew idiom．In the instances quoted from classical writers（see Bernhardy Syitax p．67）the address is not so directly vocative，the nominative being used rather to defne or select than to summon the person in ques－ tion． received test may have been inserted （as it is inserted also in Ephes．v．24） from Ephes．v．22，Tit．ii．5， 1 Pet．iii． I， 5 ，in all which passages this same injunction occurs．The scribes how－ ever show a general fondness for this adjective；e．g．Mark xv．20，Luke ii．3， Acts i．19，Ephes．iv．28，I Thess．ii． 15，iv．II．

$\dot{a} \nu \hat{\eta} \kappa \epsilon \nu]$ The imperfect, as Ephes. 7. $4 \hat{a}$ ovik $\mathfrak{a} \cup \eta \bar{\eta} \kappa \epsilon \nu$ (the correct reading) ; comp. Clem. Hom. Contest. 3 тoũ $\delta$ є
 Xen. de Re Equestr. xii. i4 â intápx see D'Orville on Charito viii. 2 (p. 699 sq.). The common uses of the imper-ters do not prescnt a very exact parallel; for they imply that the thing which ought to have been done has been left undone. And so we might interpret Acts xxii. 22 ov่ y $\dot{\alpha} \rho$ кa $\theta \hat{\eta}-$ Here however there can hardly be any such reference; and the best illustration is the English past tense 'ought' ( $=$ 'owed'), which is used in the same way. The past tense perhaps implies an essential a priori obligation. The use of $\chi \rho \hat{\eta} \nu, \stackrel{\ddot{\epsilon}}{\boldsymbol{\epsilon}} \chi \rho \eta \nu$, occasionally approximates to this; e.g. Eur. Andr. 423.

The idea of 'propriety' is the link which connects the primary meaning каӨंخккє , 'aiming at or pertaining to,' with their ultimate meaning of moral obligation. The word á $\nu \bar{\eta} \kappa \in(\nu)$ occurs in the New Testament only here and in the contemporary epistles, Ephes. v. 4, Philem. 8.
$\epsilon^{\boldsymbol{\epsilon}} \mathrm{K} u \rho \rho^{\prime}(\underline{q}]$ Probably to be connected with $\omega \dot{s} \dot{\tilde{c}} v \hat{\eta} \kappa \epsilon \nu$, rather than with $\dot{v} \pi o_{-}$ тá $\sigma \sigma \epsilon \sigma \theta \epsilon$; comp. ver. 20 єủá $\notin \sigma \tau$ óv

19. $\mu \grave{\eta} \pi \iota \kappa \rho a i ́ \nu \in \sigma \theta \in к . т . \lambda$.$] 'show no$ britterness, behave not harshly'; comp. Eynceus in Athen. vi. p. 2420 ot $2 \kappa \rho a \nu$ $\theta_{\epsilon i \eta} \pi$ то́s $\tau \iota \nu a \tau \omega \bar{\nu} \sigma \nu \zeta \omega \nu \tau \omega \nu$, Joseph.

 tiva in the Lxx, Jerem. xliv (xxxvii). I5, 3 Esdr. iv. 31. This verb mıкpaiveб $\theta a t$ and its compounds occur frequently in classical writers.
20. katà $\pi$ ádra] As in ver. 22. The rule is stated absolutely, because the exceptions are so few that they may be disregarded.
 commendable.' The received text supplies this adjective with a dative of reference $\tau \hat{\omega}$ Kvpi $\varphi$ (from Ephes. จ. Io), but $\dot{\epsilon} \nu \mathrm{K} \nu \rho \dot{\epsilon} \varphi$ is unquestionably the right reading. "With the reading thus corrected єíápearov, like àpŋ̂кє ver. 18, must be taken absolutely, as perhaps in Rom. xii. 2 тò $\theta є \lambda \eta \mu$ c

 $\ldots{ }^{\text {.. }} \sigma a \quad \pi \rho o \sigma \phi i \lambda \eta$. The qualification év Kupị́ implies 'as judged by a Christian standard,' 'as judged by those who are members of Christ's body.'
21. $\left.\boldsymbol{\epsilon} \rho \in \theta_{i} \zeta \epsilon \tau \epsilon\right]$ 'prowoke, irritate.' The other reading $\pi a \rho o \rho \gamma i \zeta \epsilon \tau \epsilon$ has higher support, but is doubtless taken from the parallel passage, Ephes. vi. 4 . 'Irritation' is the first consequence of being too exacting with children, and irritation leads to moroseness ( $d \theta v-$ pia). In 2 Cor. ix. 2 白 $\rho \in \theta i \zeta \epsilon \bar{y}$ is used in a good sense and produces the opposite result, not despondency but energy.
 ritless,' i. e . 'go about their task in a listless, moody, sullen frame of mind.' 'Fractus animus,' says Bengel, 'pestis juventutis.' In Xen. Oyr. i. $6.13 \dot{a} \theta_{v \mu i a}$ is opposed to $\pi \rho \circ \theta v \mu i a$, and in Thuc. ii. 88 and elsewhere $\dot{a} \theta v \mu \mathrm{i} \boldsymbol{\nu}$ is opposed to $\theta a \rho \sigma \epsilon i v$.

22-iv. r. 'Ye slaves, be obedient in all things to the masters set over you in the flesh, not rendering them service only when their eyes are upon you, as aiming merely to please men, but serving in all sincerity of heart, as living in the sight of your Heavenly Master and standing in awe of Him. And in everything that ye do, work faithfully and with all your soul, as labouring not for men, but for the great Lord and Master Himself; knowing that ye lave a Master, from whom ye will receive the glorious inheritance as your recompense, whether or not ye may be defrauded of your due by men. Yes, Christ is your Master and ye are his slaves. He that does a wrong shall be requited for his wrongdoing. I say not this of slaves only, but of masters also. There is no partiality, no respect of persons, in God's distribution of rewards and punishmints. Therefore, ye masters, do ye also on your part deal justly and equitable by your slaves, knowing that ye too Lave a Master in heaven.'.
22. Oi $\delta \circ \bar{\sim} \lambda o t]$ The relations of masters and slaves, both here and in the companion epistle (Tphes. vi. $5-9)$, are treated at greater length than is usual with St Paul. Here especially the expansion of this topic, compared with the brief space assigned to the duties of wives and husbands ( $\quad$ v. 18, 19), or of children and parents (vV. 20, 21), deserves to be noticed. The fact is explained by a contempomary incident in the Apostle's private life. His intercourse with Onesimus lad turned his thoughts in this dierection. See above, p.33, and the introduction to the Epistle to Philemon: comp. also the note on ver. II.
on $\phi \theta a \lambda \mu \mathrm{o}$ ow $\lambda \in i ́ a]$ 'eye-service', as $\mathrm{E}_{\mathrm{Q}} \mathrm{hes}$. vi. 6 : emp. Aport. Canst. iv.
 $\lambda$ дóévtotos. This happy expression would seem to be the Apostle's own coinage. At least there are no traces of it earlier. Compare er $\theta_{\epsilon} \lambda o \theta \rho \eta \boldsymbol{x} \in i a$ ii. 23. The reading oj $\phi \theta a \lambda \mu$ nov $\lambda \in i ́ a$ is better supported than od $\phi \theta a \lambda \mu o \delta o v-$ $\lambda$ fiats, though the plural is rendered slightly more probable in itself by its greater difficulty.
$\dot{\alpha} \nu \theta \rho \omega \pi a \dot{a} \rho \epsilon \sigma \kappa \circ 1]$ Again in Ephes. vi. 6. It is a $\operatorname{Lxx}$ word, Ps. lii. 6 , where the Greek entirely departs from the Hebrew: comp. also dj $\dot{\theta} \theta \rho \omega \pi a \rho \in \sigma к \in i y$ Ign. Rom. 2, àv $\theta \rho \omega \pi$ аре́ $\sigma к \in \iota a \mathrm{Justin}$

 Laert. iv. 42 (vv. ll.).
 i. e. 'with undivided service'; a Lxx expression, I Chron. xxix. I7, Wisd.i. i. rod KúpLov] 'the one Lord and Master,' as contrasted with coifs кaтà oápka kvpiots: the idea being carried oat in the following verses. The recoived text, by substituting rò̀ $\theta$ éóv, blunts the edge of the contrast.
 gently, an advance upon ror̄̃e.
 rather than $\mu \dot{\eta}$ in antitheses, see Winev § lv. p. 601 sq . The negative here is wholly unconnected with the imperative, and refers solely to $\tau \hat{\varphi}$ $\mathrm{K} v \boldsymbol{\rho}_{i} \varphi$.
24. àno Kypiov] 'However you may be treated by your earthly masters, you have still $a$ Master who will recompense you.' The absence of the definite article here (comp. iv. I) is the more remarkable, because it is studiously inserted in the context, vv .
 pi $\Phi$. In the parallel passage Ephes. vi. 8 it is $\pi a \rho a \grave{k} \mathrm{~K} p i o v:$ for the differonce between the two see Gal. i. 12.

 pense,' a common word both in the bxx and in classical writers, though not occurring elsewhere in the New Testament; comp. ávramódopa Luke xiv. 12, Rom. xi. 9. The double compound involves the idea of 'exact requital.'
тìs кגךророциas] 'which consists in the inheritance,' the genitive of apposition: see the note on $\tau \dot{\eta} \nu \mu \epsilon \rho i \delta \partial a$ тo $\hat{\nu}$ ${ }_{\kappa \lambda} \lambda \rho \rho o v, ~ i . ~ 12 . ~ T h e r e ~ i s ~ a ~ p a r a d o x ~ i n-~$ volved in this word: elsewhere the סoviरos and the клдроуó $о$ os are contrasted (Matt. xxi. 35-38, etc., Rom. viii. 15-17, Gal. iv. 1, 7), but here the doûdos is the кддрочón $о s$. This be is because, though $\delta o i ́ \lambda o s \dot{\alpha} \nu \theta \rho \omega \pi \omega \nu$, he is $\dot{a} \pi \epsilon \lambda \epsilon \dot{u} \theta_{\epsilon} \rho o s$ Kupiou (I Cor. vii. 22) and thus кд $\eta$ poóópos $\delta i a ̀ ~ Ө є o \hat{v}$ (Gail. iv. 7); comp. Hermas Sim. v. 2 ì $\alpha$ av $\gamma-$ (with the context).

т@ิ Kирị к.т.入.] i. е. ' you serve as your master the great Master Christ.' This clause is added to explain how is meant by the preceding ámà Kupiou. For this application of Kúpos compare (besides the parallel passuge, Ephes. vi. 6-9) 1 Cor. vii. 22 ó yà $^{2} \rho$ Kupiov éctíp к.т. $\lambda$. It seems best to take סou入єíधтє here as an indicative, rather than as an imperative; for ( 1 ) The indicative is wanted to explain the previous $\dot{a} \pi \dot{\partial}$ Kupiov; (2) The imperative would seem to require $\omega \boldsymbol{\omega} \boldsymbol{\tau} \bar{\omega}$ Kupi $\varphi$, as in Ephes, vi. 7 (the correct text). On the other hand see Rom. xii. II.
 this unrighteous person? The slave who defrauds his master of his service, or the master who defrauds his slave of his reward? Some interpreters confine it exclusixely to the former; others to the latidi. It seems best to suppose that both are included. The connexion of the sentence $\boldsymbol{\delta} \boldsymbol{\gamma} \dot{a} \rho$ $\dot{a} \delta \iota \kappa \omega \bar{\omega}$ (where yáp, not $\delta \dot{\delta}$, is certainly the right reading) points to the slave. On the other hand the expression which follows, $\tau \dot{o}$ dikatov kà̀ $\tau \grave{\eta} \nu \mathbf{i} \sigma \sigma^{\prime}$ т $\eta \tau a$ к.r. $\lambda .$, suggests the master. Thus there seems to be a trofold reference; the warning is suggested by the case of the slave, but it is extended to the case of the master; and this accords with the parallel passage, Ephes. vi. 8 бєтац тapà Kupíov, єïtє doû̀os єïtє е́ $\lambda \in \dot{v} \theta_{\varepsilon} \rho \circ$ s.

The recent fault of Onesimus would make the $\Delta$ postle doubly anxious to emphasize the duties of the slave towards the master, lest in his love for the offender he should seem to condone the offence. This same word $\eta \bar{\delta} i x \eta \sigma \epsilon \nu$ is used by St Paul to describe the crime of Onesimus in Philem. 18. But on the other hand it is the Apostle's busincss to show that justice has a double edge. There must be a reciprocity between the master and the slave. The philosophers of Greece taught, and the laws of Rome assumed, that the slave was a chattel. But a chattel could have no rights. It would be absurd to talk of treating a chattel with justice. St Paul places the relations of the master and the slave in a wholly different light. Justice and equity are the expression of the Divine mind: and with God there is no $\pi \rho \circ \sigma \omega \pi \mathrm{D} \lambda \eta \mu \psi i a$. With Him the claims of the slave are as real as the claims of the master.

корíceral] For this sense of the middle, 'to recover,' 'to get back,' and so (with an accusative of the thing to be recompensed), 'to be requited for', see e.g. Lev. xx. i7 á $\mu$ артiay ко $\mu$ - комеіtтat. In the parallel passage Ephes. vi. 8, the form is certainly кo$\mu i \sigma \epsilon \tau a t$ : here it is more doubtful, the authorities being more equally divided between конкеітая and конітєтац. See however the note on yvopicouct iv. 9 .

 the note Gal. ii. 6. This $\pi \rho \sigma \sigma \omega \pi o \lambda \eta \mu-$ $\psi i a$, though generally found on the side of rank and power, may also be exercised in favour of the opposite;

 otov. There would be a tendency in the mind of the slave to assume that, because the $\pi \rho \circ \sigma \omega \pi \rho \lambda \eta \mu \psi i a$ of man was on the side of the master, there must be a corresponding $\pi \rho o \sigma \omega \pi$ o$\lambda \eta \mu \psi i a$ of God on the side of the slave. This assumption is corrected by St Paul.
IV. 1. ті̀̀ iбо́тттa] 'equity,' 'fairness'; comp. Plut. Sol. et Popl. Comp. 3 similarly Lysias Or. Fun. 77 (speaking of death) oüre yà $\rho$ roùs novppoùs

 It seems a mistake to suppose that iocotns here has anything to do with the treatment of slaves as equals (comp. Yhilem. 16). When connected with $\tau \grave{o}$ $\delta i k a o v$, the word naturally suggests an even-hauded, impartial treatment, and is equivalent to the Latin aequitas: comp. Arist. Top. vi. 5 (p.

 Philo de Creat. Princ. I4 (II. p. 373)
 Clem. Alex. Strom. vi. 6 (p. 764) $\mu \epsilon \mathrm{rà}$ $\dot{\boldsymbol{\epsilon} \pi ะ \sigma т \rho \epsilon ́ ф о и т а s . ~ T h u s ~ i n ~ A r i s t . ~ E t h . ~}$ regarded as synonymes, and in Plut.

Mor. p. 719 the relation of icórns to oıкaór刀s is discussed. The word here is used in the same sense in which the adjective occurs in the common ex-etc. Philo, describing the Essene condemnation of slavery, says, Omn.

 $\beta \omega{ }^{\boldsymbol{\omega}} \boldsymbol{\mu}$ к.т..., but he possibly does mean 'equality' rather than ' equity.'
$\pi а \rho \bar{\chi} \chi \in \sigma \theta \epsilon]$ 'exhibit on your part.' The middle $\pi a \rho \epsilon^{\prime} \chi \in \sigma \theta a$, , 'to afford from oneself;' will take different shades of meaning according to the contest, as 'to furnish one's quota' (e.g. Herod. viii. $\mathbf{1}, \mathbf{z}$ ) or 'to put forward one's representative' (esp. of witnesses, e.g. Plato Apol. 19 D). Here the idea is 'reciprocation,' the master's duty as corresponding to the slave's.

入ús égutı Xpigtov̂.
${ }^{2}-6$. 'Be earnest and unceasing in prayer; keep your hearts and minds awake while praying: remember also (as I have so often told jou) that thanksgiving is the goal and crown of prayer. Meauwhile in your petitions forget not us-myself Paul--ny fellowlabourer Timothy -- your evangelist Epaphras - all the teachers of the Gospel; but pray that God may open a door for the preaching of the word, to the end that we may proclatm the free offer of grace to the Gentilesthat great mystery of Christ for which I am now a prisoner in bonds. So shall I declare it fearlessly, as I am bound to proclaim it. Walk wisely and discreetly in all your dealings with unbelievers; allow no opportunity to slip throngh your hands, but buy up every passing moment. Let your language be always perraded with grace and seasoned with salt．So will you know how to give a fit answer to each man，as the occasion demands．＇ to＇，＇remain constant to＇（comp．Mark iii． 9 ，Acts viii．13，x．7），and so＇con－ tinue stedfast in．＇This word occurs $\chi^{\text {aîs，}}$ Acts i．I4，ii． 42 ，vi．4，Rom．xii． 12．The construction is with a simple dative both in the New Testament （ll．cc．）and in classical writers，except where it stands absolutely（Acts ii．46， Rom．xiii．6）．The injunction here corresponds to the $\dot{\alpha} \partial \Delta a \lambda \epsilon i \pi t \omega s \pi \rho o \sigma-$ $\epsilon$ úx $\epsilon \theta \epsilon$ of 1 Thess．v． 17.
${ }^{2} \mathrm{~T} \hat{\eta} \pi \rho \circ \sigma \epsilon \cup \chi \hat{\eta}$ тробка $\pi \tau \epsilon \epsilon \hat{\imath} \tau \epsilon, \quad \gamma \rho \eta \gamma \rho \rho о \bar{\nu} \tau \epsilon s$ єे $\nu$

ypクyopoûrtes］Long continuance in prayer is apt to produce listlessness． Hence the additional charge that the heart must be avoake，if the prayer is to have any value．The word is not to be taken literally here，but meta－ phorically．In Matt．xxfi． 41 etc．，$\gamma \rho \eta-$ quite the same．
$i^{\prime} \nu \varepsilon^{u} \chi a \rho t \sigma r i a j$ As the crown of all prayer；see the notes on i．12，ii． 7.

3．$\dot{\eta} \mu \omega \nu$ ］＇$u s$ ，＇＇the Apostles and preachers of the Gospel，＇with refer． ence more especially to Timothy（i．I） and Epaphras（iv．12，13）．Where the Apostle speaks of himself alone， he uses the singular（ver，3， 4 ס＇6 $\delta \varepsilon \mu a$, $\phi a \nu \epsilon \rho \omega \sigma \omega)$ ．Indeed there is no rea－ son to think that St Paul ever uses an ＇epistolary＇plural，referring to himself solely：see on I Thess．iii．I． iva к．т．$\lambda$ ．］On the sense of iva after $\pi \rho \sigma \sigma \epsilon u^{\chi} \in \sigma \theta_{a t}$ etc．，see the note on i． 9.

Oipay roù 入óyov］＇a door of admis－ sion for the word，＇i．e．＇an oppor－ tunity of preaching the Gospel，＇as $\mu \in \gamma^{2} \lambda \eta$ каì èvєpyís， 2 Cor．iii． 12

 סos is used in 1 Thess．i． 9 ，ii．r．The converse application of the metaphor appears in Acts xiv． 27 グクoo $\xi \in \nu$ rois is opened not to the teachers，but to the recipients of the Gospel．Accord－ ing to another interpretation（suggest－ ed by Ephes．vi． 19 Ìa $\mu$ oc $\delta$ o $\theta \hat{g}$ 入óyos plained＇the door of our speech，＇i．e． ＇our mouth＇：comp．Ps．cxli（cxl）．3， Mic．vii．5，Eeclus．xxviii．25．But the parallel passages do not favour this sense，nor will the words themselves admit it．In that case for $\mathfrak{\eta} \mu \bar{i} y$ bípay rấ $\lambda o ́ \gamma o v$ we should require tì̀ $\theta \dot{v} \rho a \nu$ $\tau \bar{\omega} \nu \lambda o \gamma^{\prime} \omega \nu\left[\tilde{\eta}^{i} \mu \hat{\omega} \nu\right]$ ．＇The word＇here is ＇the Gospel，＇as frequently． $\lambda a \lambda \hat{\eta} \sigma a c]$＇so as to speak，＇the in－ finitive of the consequence，like eiórvac ver．6；see Winer § xliv．p． 400.
тò $\mu \nu \sigma \tau \eta \prime \rho \iota o \nu$ к．т．ג．］i．e．the doctrine of the free admission of the Gentiles． For the leading idea which St Paul in these epistles attaches to＇the mys－ tery＇of the Gospel，see the note on i． 26.
$\left.\delta 6^{\circ}{ }^{\circ}\right]$ St Paul might have been still at large，if he bad been content to preach a Judaic Gospel．It was be－ cause he contended for Gentile liberty， and thus offended Jewish prejudices， that he found himself a prisoner．See Acts $x x i .28$ ，$x x i i .21,22$ ，xxiv．5，6， xxv．6，8．The other reading，$\delta i^{\prime}{ }^{\prime \prime} \nu$, destroys the point of the sentence． кaì $\delta \dot{\epsilon} \delta \epsilon \mu u t] 2 \mathrm{Tim}$ ．ii． $9 \mu \epsilon ́ \chi \rho \iota \delta \in \sigma-$

4．iva фаveคஸ்бш к．т．入．］This is best taken as dependent on the pre－
 For instances of a duuble iva，where the second is not coordinated with， bat subordinated to，the first，see the note on Gal．iii． 14 The immediate purport of the Colossians＇prayers must be that the Apostle should have all opportunities of preaching the Gospel：the ulterior object，that he should use these opportunities boldly． oũv фоóvıuot ©s of ö $\phi$ ets．

Tò̀s $\tilde{\xi}(\omega]$＇those without the pale＇ of the Church，the unbelievers；as in I Cor．v．12，I3，I Thess．iv．12．So of $\vec{\epsilon} \xi \omega \theta \varepsilon \nu$ ，I Tim iii．7．The believers on the other hand are of $\boldsymbol{\epsilon} \sigma \omega$ ，I Cor．v．iz． This mode of speaking was derived from the Jews，who called the heathen החיצונים（Schöttgen on 1 Cor．l．c．）， translated of écrós Ecclus．Prol．and the opportunity for yourselves，let－ ting no opportunity slip you，of saying and doing what may further the cause of God＇：comp．Ephes．v．i6．The ex－ pression occurs also in Dan．ii． 8 ol $\delta a$ eager to gain time．＇Somewhat simi－

 $\nu \epsilon \iota$ ，тò $\pi a \rho o ̀ \nu$ кєр $8 a i v \epsilon \iota \nu$ ．So too Sepeca Ep．i．I＇Tempus．．．collige et serva．＇ In much the same sense Ignatius says， Polyc． 3 rov̀s kaıpò̀s кaтapávdave．For this sense of ékayopá ‘＇$\omega$＇coemo＇（closely allied in meaning to avyayopás $(\omega)$ ，sce

 Plut．Fit．Crass．2．More commonly the word signifies＇to redeem＇（see the note on Gal．iii．13），and some would assign this sense to it here；but no ap－ propriate meaning is thus obtained．In Mart．Polyc． 2 oià $\mu$ iâs čpas tウ̀̀ aìó－ ＇buying off，＇a sense in which＇$\xi \omega \nu \omega \bar{i}$ for the injunction is added in Ephes． prevailing evil of the times makes the opportunities for good more precious．

6．＇̇̀ $\chi^{\text {á } \rho t \tau t] ~ ' w i t h ~ g r a c e, ~ f a z o u r, ' ~}$ i．e．＇acceptableness，＇＇pleasingness＇； comp．Eccles．x． 12 入óyot aróцutos classical writers $\chi$ ápıs $\lambda o ́ \gamma \omega \nu$ is a still more commonconnexion；e．g．Demosth． c．Phil．i．38，Dionys．Hal．de Lys． §S IO， 1 I，Plut．Vit．Mar． 44.

ädart］Comp．Mark ix． 50 éàd dì тò salt has a twofold purpose．（i）It gives a flavour to the discourse and recommends it to the palate：comp．

 кєyois；in which passage the first clause was rendered by Symmachus $\mu \dot{\eta} \tau \iota$ ßрюӨ ${ }^{\boldsymbol{\epsilon}}{ }^{\prime} \epsilon\llcorner\nu$ ä̉a；This is the primary idea of the metaphor here，as the word $\eta^{\prime} \rho-$ тupévos seems to show．（2）It preserves from corruption and renders whole－ some；Ign．Magn．10 $\dot{\alpha} \lambda i \sigma \theta \eta t e$ èv

 Hence the Pythagorean saying，Diog．
 ö rı каіे тара入áß $\omega \sigma$ ．It may be in－ ferred that this secondary applica－ tion of the metaphor was present to the Apostle＇s mind here，because in the parallel epistle，Ephes．iv．29，he says mâs $\lambda$ óyos $\sigma a \pi \rho o ̀ s ~ e ̂ k ~ t o u ̂ ~ \sigma \tau a ́-~$ $\mu a \tau о s \dot{v} \mu \omega \bar{\nu} \mu \dot{\eta} \dot{\epsilon} \times \pi о р \epsilon v \epsilon \epsilon \sigma \theta \omega$ к．т．$\lambda$ ．In the first application the opposite to ä̀atı ग̀ $\rho \tau \boldsymbol{\mu} \mu$ évos would be $\mu \omega \rho$ ós＇in－ sipid＇（Luke xir．34）；in the second， vanfós＇corrupt．＇

Heathen writers also insisted that discourse should be＇seasoned with salt＇；e．g．Cic．de Orat．i． 34 ＇facetia－ rum quidam lepos quo，tanquam sale， perspergatur omnis oratio．＇They $\pi \omega \bar{s} \delta \in \hat{\imath} \dot{\epsilon} \nu \hat{\imath} \dot{\epsilon} \kappa \alpha ́ \sigma \tau \omega \dot{\alpha} \pi о к \rho i \nu \epsilon \sigma \theta a \iota$.

likewise $d$ welt on the connexion between $\chi$ ápss and $\begin{gathered}\text { äts } ; ~ e . ~ g . ~ P l u t . ~ M o r: ~\end{gathered}$ тi $\# \eta \sigma$, Dion Chrys. Or. xyiii. § 13 . Their notion of 'salt' however was wit, and generally the kind of wit which degenerated into the eitroant$\lambda i a$ denounced by St Paul in Ephes. v. 4 (see the note there).

The form andas is common in the uxx and Greek Testament. Otherwise it is rare : see Buttmann Gramm. 1. p. 220, and comp. Plut. Mor. 668 r.
cî̀́val] 'so as to know'; see the note on $\lambda a \lambda \hat{\eta} \sigma a t$ ver. 3.
fiv̀ é éáote] 'Not only must your conversation be opportune as regards the time; it must also be appropriate as regards the person.' The Apostle's precept was enforced by his own example, for he made it a rule to be-$\nu$ às $\sigma \omega ்{ }^{2}$ (I Cor. ix. 22).
7-9. 'You will learn everything about me from Tychicus, the beloved brother who has ministered to me and served with me faithfully in the Lord. This indeed was my purpose in sending him to you: that you might be informed how matters stand with me, and that he might cheer your hearts and strengthen your resolves by the tidings. Onesimus will accompany him - a faithful and beluved brother, who is one of yourselves, a Colossian. These two will inform you of all that is going on here.'
 relates to $m e^{\prime}$; see the note on Phil. i. 12, and comp. Bion in Diog.

Laert. iv. 47. So Acts xxv. 14 тà кãà тò̀ Пайдог.
$\gamma \nu \omega \rho i \sigma \epsilon]$ On this word see the note Phil. i. 22.

Túxikos] Tychicus was charged by St Paul at this same time with a more extended mission. He was entrusted with copies of the circular letter, which he was enjoined to deliver in the principal churches of proconsular Asia (see above, p. 37, and the introduction to the Kpistle to the Ephesians). This mission would bring him to Laodicca, which was one of theso great centres of Cbristianity (see p. 8); and, as Colossse was only a few miles distant, the Apostle would naturally engage him to pay a visit to the Colossians. At the same time the prosence of an anthorised delegate of St Paul, as Tychicus was known to be, would serve to reconmend Onesimus, who owing to his former conduct stood in every need of such a recommeadation. The two uames Tíxixos and ' $\mathrm{O} \boldsymbol{r j} \boldsymbol{f} \boldsymbol{\sigma} \mu \mathrm{m}$ s occar in proximity in Phrygian inscriptions found at Altentash (Bennisoa ?) Boeckh 3857 r sq. appx.
Tychicus was a native of proconsular Asia (Acts xx. 4) and perhaps of Ephesus (z Tim. iv. 12: see Philippians p. II). He is found with St Paul at three different epochs in his life.
(I) He accompanied him when on his way eastward at the close of the third missionary journey A.D. 58 (Acts xx. 4), and probably like Trophinus (Acts xxi. 29) went with him to Jeramust be struck out in Acts $x \times .4$ ). It is probable indeed that Tyclicus, together with others mentioned among St Paul's numerous retinue on this occasion, was a delegate appointed by his own church accordiug to the Apostle's injunctions ( I Cor. xvi. 3,4 ) to bear the contributions of his brethren to the poor Christians of Judea; and if so, he may possibly be the person commended as the brother ov o f द̈rat-к $\lambda \eta \tau \omega \hat{\omega}$ ( 2 Cor. viii. 18): but this will depend on the interpretation of the best supported reading in Acts xx. 5

 Tpadid. (2) We find Tychicus again in St Paul's company at the time with which we are immediately concerned, when this epistle was written, probably towards the end of the first Roman captivity, A.d. 62, 63 (see Philippians p. 3I sq.). (3) Once more, at the close of St Paul's life (about A.1. 67), he appears again to have associated himself with the Apostle, when his name is mentioned in connexion with a mission to Crete (Tit. iii. 12) and another to Ephesus (2 Tim. iv. 12). For the legends respecting him, which are slight and insignificant, see Act. Sanct. Boll. April 29 (III. p. 619).
Tychicus is not so common a name as some others which occur in the New Testament, e.g. Onesimus, Trophimus; but it is found occasionally in inscriptions belonging to Asia Minor, e.g. Boeckh C. I. 2918, 3665, [ 3857 c ], 3857 r, (comp. 3865 i , etc.); and persons bearing it are commemorated on the coins of both Magnesia ad Maeandrum (Mionnet III. p. 153 sq., Suppl. vi. p. 236) and Magnesia ad Sipylum (ib. rv. p. 70). The name occurs also in Roman inscriptions; e.g. Muratori, pp. Deccexpii, mocexciy, maly. Along with several other proper names similarly formed, this word is commonly accentuated Tuzicús (Chandler Greek Accentuation §255), and so it stands in all the critical editions, though according to rule (Winer § vi. p. 58) it should be Tíxikos. каіे птбто̀s к.т...] The connexion of the words is not quite obvious. It seems best however to take $\boldsymbol{\epsilon} \nu$ K $\nu \rho i \varphi$ as referring to the whole clause ntoròs Buákovos kai $\sigma \dot{v} \delta \delta o u \lambda$ os rather than to бivoounos alone: for ( I ) The two substantives are thus bound together by the preceding $\pi$ tarós and the following ${ }^{\boldsymbol{e}} \boldsymbol{y} \mathrm{K}$ Kpicị in a natural way: (2) The attachment of $\dot{\epsilon} \nu \mathrm{K} v p \dot{\varphi} \varphi$ to $\pi$ toròs dóáxovos is suggested by the parallel passage Ephes. vi. 21 Túxikos ó áyanךròs
 The question of connecting ${ }^{i} \nu$ Kupic with àò $\lambda \lambda \phi^{\prime}{ }^{s}$ as well need not be entertained, since the idea of dàs $\lambda \phi$ ós, 'a Christian brother,' is complete in itself: see the note on Phil. i. I4. The adjective rıarós will here have its passive sense, 'trustworthy, stedfast,' as also in ver. 9: see Galatians p. 154 sq .
סúáovos] 'minister,' but to whom? To the churches, or to St Panl himself 3 The following $\sigma$ ivoovios suggests the latter as the prominent idea bere. So in Acts xix. 22 Timothy and Erastus are described as $\delta \dot{v} 0 \tau \bar{\omega} \nu \quad \delta, a-$ коуои́pтш $\boldsymbol{\nu} \boldsymbol{\jmath} \boldsymbol{\jmath} \hat{\varphi}$. Tychicus himself also was one of several who ministered to St Paul about that same time (Acts xx.4). It is not probable however, that focixoyos has here its strict official sense, 'a deacon,' as in Rom. xvi. I, Phil. i. 1, I Tim. iii. 8, 12.
бivyסuvas] The word does not occur elsewhere in St Paul, except in i. 7 , where it is said of Epaphras. It is probably owing to the fact of St Paul's applying the term in both these passages to persons whom he calls סaíxoyoc, that $\sigma$ divo oud os seems to have been adopted as a customary form of address in the early Church on the part of a bishop, when speaking of a deacon. In the Ignatian letters for instauce, the term is never used except of deacons; Ephes. 2, Magn. 2, Philad. 4, Smym. I2. Where the martyr has occasion to speak of a bishop or a presbster some other designation is used instead.
 ${ }^{9} \sigma \dot{\nu} \nu$ 'О $\nu \eta \sigma i \mu \omega \quad \tau \omega \bar{\omega} \pi \iota \sigma \tau \omega \bar{\omega} \kappa \alpha i \alpha \gamma \alpha \pi \eta \tau \omega \hat{\omega} \dot{\alpha} \delta \in \lambda \phi \omega$, , ós

8. ${ }^{\text {en } \pi \epsilon \mu \psi a] ~ ' ~} I$ send,' or ' $I$ have sent,' $\overrightarrow{\epsilon \pi} \in \mu \psi a$ being the epistolary aorist; see the note on $\begin{gathered}\text { épouqu, Gal. }\end{gathered}$ vi. 1I. Tychicus appears to have accompanied the letter itself. For similar instances of the epistolary $\stackrel{⿺}{\epsilon} \pi \epsilon \mu \psi a$, ix. 3, Ephes. vi. 22, Phil. ii. 25, 28, Philem. 1I, Hebr. xiii. 22, Polyc. Pkil. 13.
 preferred to the received reading, $\gamma \nu \hat{\varphi}$ $\tau \dot{\alpha} \pi \in \rho \grave{~} \dot{\dot{y}} \mu \hat{\omega} \nu$, for two independent reasons. (I) The preponderance of ancient authority is decidedly in its favour. (z) The emphatic $\epsilon$ is auvto тoùto iva seems imperatively to demand it. St Paul in the context twice states the object of Tychicus' visit to be that the Colossians might be informed about the Apostle's own $\omega^{\boldsymbol{\omega} \delta \epsilon .}$. He could hardly therefore have described 'the very purpose' of his mission in the same breath as something quite different.

It is urged indeed, that this is a scribe's alteration to bring the passage into accordance with Ephes, vi. 21. But against this it may fairly be argued that, on any hypothesis as regards the authorship and relation of the two letters, this strange variation from $\gamma \nu \bar{\omega} \tau \epsilon \tau \grave{\alpha} \pi \epsilon \rho \bar{\eta} \dot{\eta} \mu \bar{\omega} \nu$ to $\gamma \nu \bar{\varphi}$ $\tau \dot{a} \pi \epsilon \rho \grave{\imath} \dot{v} \mu \bar{\omega} \nu$ in the author himself is improbable. On the other hand a transcriber was under a great temptation to substitute $\gamma^{\nu} \bar{\varphi}$ for $\gamma \nu \bar{\omega} \tau \epsilon$ owing to the following тарака入є́ $\sigma \eta$, and this temptation would becomo alnost irresistible, if by any chance $\pi \in \rho \grave{i} \dot{\imath} \mu \omega \bar{y}$ had been written for $\pi \epsilon \rho \bar{\rho} \dot{\tau} \mu \hat{\omega} \nu$ in the copy before him, as we find to be the case in some mss. See the detached note on varions readings.

паракалє́тд к.т.д.] i.e. 'encourage you to persevere by his tidings and exhortations.' The phrase occurs again, Ephes. vi. 22,2 Thess. ii. 17 : see above ii. 2. The prominent idea in all these passages is not comfort or consolation but perseverance in the right way.
9. бі̀े 'O $\left.{ }^{2} \eta \sigma i \mu \varphi\right]$ See above, p. 33, and the introduction to the Epistle to Philemon.
$\tau \hat{\varphi} \pi \iota \sigma \tau \hat{\varphi} \kappa$ к.т. $\mathrm{\lambda}$.$] The man whom the$ Colossians had only known hitherto, if they knew him at all, as a worthless runaway slave, is thus commended to them as no more a slave but a brother, no more dishonest and faithless but trustworthy, no more an object of contempt but of love; comp. Philem. I1, 16.
pvopícovaup] This form has rather better support from the mss than the Attic future from verbs in $-\iota 5 \omega$ in the Greek Testament generally see Winer § xiii. p. 88, A. Buttmann p. 32 sq. Is there any decisive instance of these Attic forms in St Paul, except in quotations from the Lxx (e.g. Rom. x. 19, xv. 12) ?
Io-I4. 'I send you greeting from Aristarchus who is a fellow-prisoner with me; from Mareus, Barnabas' cousin, concerning whom I have already sent you directions, that you welcome him heartily, if he pays you a visit; and from Jesus, surnamed Justus; all three Hebrew converts. They alone of their fellow-countrymen have worked loyally with me in spreading the kingdom of God; and their stedfastness has indeed been a comfort to me in the hour of trial. Greeting also from Epaphras, your fellowtownsman, a true servant of Christ, who is ever wrestling in his prayers on your behalf, that ye may stand firm in the faith, perfectly instracted and fully convinced in every will and purpose of God. I bear testimony to the earnestness with which he labours for jou and the brethren of Laodicea and those of Hierapolis. Greeting also from Luke the physician, my very dear friend, and from Demas.'

ro. The salutations to Philemon are sent from the same persons as to the Colossians, except that in the former case the name of Jesus Justus is omitted.
'Apíctap Xos] the Thessalonian. He had started with St Paul on his voyage from Jerusalem to Rome, but probably had parted from the Apostle at Myra (see Philippians p. 33 sq.). If so, he must have rejoined him at Rume at a later date. On this Aristarchus see Philippians p. 10, and the introduction to the Epistles to the Thessalonians. He would be well known in proconsular Asia, which he had visited from time to time; Acts xix. 29, xx. 4, xxvii. 2.
quvauх $\mu \dot{\alpha} \lambda \omega \tau o ́ s ~ \mu o v$ ] In Philem. 23 this honourable title is witheld from Aristarchus and given to Epaphras. In Rom. xiv. 7 St Paul's kinsmen, Andronicus and Junias, are so called. On the possibility of its referring to a spiritual captipity or subjection see Philippians p . II. In favour of this meaning it may be urged, that, though St Paul as a prisoner was truly a $\delta \dot{\delta \prime} \sigma$ -
 'a prisoner of war'; nor could he have called himself so, except by a confusion of the actual and metaphorical. If on the other hand $\sigma \tau v a u_{\chi} \mu$ ini $\omega \tau$ refers to a physical captivity, it cannot easily be explained by any known fact. The incident in Acts xix. 29 is hardly adequate. The most probable solution would be, that his relations with St Paul in Rome excited suspicion and led to a temporary confinement. Another possible hypothesis is that he voluntarily shared the Apostle's captivity by living with him.

Mápkos ${ }^{\text {doubtless John Mark, who }}$ had been associated with St Paul in his earlier missionary work; Acts xii. $25, \mathrm{xy} .37 \mathrm{sq}$. This commendatory notice is especially interesting as being the first mention of him since the separation some twelve years before, Acts xy . 39. In the later years of the Apostle's life he entirely effaced the unfavourable impression left by his

This notice is likewise important in two other respects. (r) Mark appears here as commended to a church of proconsular Asia, and intending to visit those parts. To the churches of this same region he sends a salutation in I Pet. v. 13; and in this district apparently also he is found some few years later than the present time, 2 Tin. iv. II. (2) Mark is now residing at Rome. His comexion with the metropolis appears also from I Pet. \%. I3, if Baßunduv there (as seems most probable) be rightly interpreted of Rome; and carly tradition speaks of his Gospel as having been written for the Romans (Iren. iii. I I; comp. Papias in Euseb. H. E. iii. 39).
$\dot{\delta}$ aveforos] 'the cousinc.' The term àveq woi is applied to cousins german, the children whether of two brothers or of two sisters or of a brother and sister, as it is carefully defined in Pollux iii. 28. This writer adds that uùravétua means neither more nor less than àvequoi. As a synonyme we find ékióeो condemned as a vulgarism; Pliryn. p. 306 (ed. Lobeck). Many instances of àve $\psi$ wi are found in different authors of various ages (e.g. Herod. vii. 5, 82, ix. io, Thucyd. i. I 32 , Plato Charm. 154 B, Gorg. 471 в, Andoc. de Myst. § 47, Isaeus Hagn. Her. § 8 sq., Demosth. c. Macart. § 24, 27, etc., Dion. Hal. A. R. i. 79, Plut. Vit. Thes. 7, Vit. Caes. 1, Vit. Brut. 13, Lucian Dial. Mort. xxix 1 , Hegesipp. in Enseb. H. E. iv. 22), where the relationship is directly defined or already known，and there is no wavering as to the meaning．This sense also it has in the Lxx，Num．xxxvi．in．In very late writers however（e．g．Io．Malalas Chron．xvii．p．424，Io．Damase．ado． Const．Cab．12，IL．p． 62 r；but in Theodt． H．E．v．39，which is also quoted by E．A．Sophocles Gr．Lex．s．v．for this meaning，the text is doubtful） the word comes to be used for a nephew，properly ảde入 $\alpha \dot{\delta} o u ̄ s ;$ and to this later use the rendering of our English versions must be traced． The German translations also（Luther and the Zürich）bave＇Neffe．＇The earliest of the ancient versions（Latin， Syriac，Egyptian）seem all to translate it correctly；not so in every case ap－ parently the later．There is no reason to suppose that St Paul would or could have used it in any other than its proper sense．St Mark＇s relation－ ship with Barnabas may have been through his mothor Mary，who is men－ tioned Aots xii．12．The incidental notice here explains why Barnabas should have taken a more favourable view of Mark＇s defection than St Paul，Acts xv．37－39．The notices in this passage and in 2 Tim．iv．II show that Mark had recovered the Apo－ stle＇s good opinion．The studious re－ commendation of St Mark in both passages indicates a desire to efface the unfavourable impression of the past．

The name of Mark occurs in five different relations，as（I）The early disciple，John Mark，Acts xii．12，25， xv．39；（2）The later companion of St Paul，here and Philem．24， 2 Tim ．iv． II；（3）The companion and＇son＇of St Peter，I Pet．v．I3；（4）The evan－ gelist；（5）The bishop of Alexandria． Out of these notices some writers get three or even four distinct persons （see the note of Cotelier on Apost． Const．ii．57）．Even Tillemont（Mem． Eccl．II．p． 89 sq．， 503 sq．）assumes two

Marks，supposing（1）（2）to refer to one person，and（3）（4）（5）to another． His main reason is that he cannot reconcile the notices of the first with the tradition（Euseb．H．E．ii．15，r6） that St Mark the evangelist accom－ panied St Peter to Rome in A．D．43， having first preached the Gospel in Alexandria（p．515）．To most persons however this early date of St Peter＇s visit to Rome will appear quite ir－ reconcilable with the notices in the Apostolic writings，and therefore with them Tiilemont＇s argument will carry no weight．But in fact Euse－ bius does not say，either that St Mark weut with St Peter to Rome，or that he had preached in Alexandria before this．The Seriptural notices suggest that the same Mark is intended in all the occurrences of the name，for they are connected together by personal links（Peter，Paul，Barnabas）；and the earliest forms of tradition likewise ideutify them．

Bapví $\beta$ a］On the affectionate tone of St Paul＇s language，whenever he mentions Barnabas after the colli－ sion at Antioch（Gal．ii．Il sq．）and the separation of missionary spheres （Acts xv．39），see the note on Gal．ii． 13．It has been inferred from the reference here，that inasmuch as Mark has rejoined St Paul，Barnabas must Lave died before this epistle was written（about A．o．63）；and this has been used as an argument against the genuineness of the letter bear－ ing his name（Hefelo Sendschr．d． Apost．Barnab．p． 29 sq．）；but this argument is somewhat precarious． From I Cor．ix． 6 we may infer that he was still living，A．d．57．The notices bearing on the biography of Barnabas are coilected and discussed by Hefele，p． 1 sq ．
é入á $\beta \in \tau \epsilon$ évro入ás］These injunctions must have been communicated pre－ viously either by letter or by word of month ：for it connot be a question here of an epistolary aorist. The natural inference is, that they were sent by $S t$ Paul himself, and not by any one else, e.g. by St Peter or St Barnabas, as some have suggested. Thus the notiee points to earlier communications between the Apostle and Colossm.

But what was their tenour? It seems best to suppose that this is given in the next clause ${ }_{e}^{\prime} \dot{a} \nu \quad \vec{\epsilon} \lambda \theta_{\eta}$ к.r.ג. By an abrupt change to the oratio recta the injunction is repeated as it was delivered; comp. Ps.

 signifying 'to command, charge, ctc.,' there is a tendency to pass from the oblique to the direct; e.g. Lake v. 14, Acts i. 4, xxiii. 22. The reading $\delta \delta^{-}$ gartal gives the right sense, but can hardly be correct. If this construction be not accepted, it is vain to speculate what may have been the tenour of the injunction.
II. кaì 'Iqбoûs] He is not mentioned elsewhere. Even in the Epistle to Philemon his name is omitted. Probably he was not a man of any prominence in the Church, but his personal devotion to the Apostle prompted this honourable mention. For the story which makes him bishop of Eleutheropolis in Palestine, see Le Quien Oriens Christ. III. p. 633.
'Iov̂oros] A common name or surname of Jews and proselytes, denoting obedience and devotion to the law. It is applied to two persons in the New Testament, besides this Jesus; (I) Joseph Barsabbas, Acts i. 23; (2) A proselyte at Corinth, Acts xviii. 7. It occurs twice in the list of early Jewish Christian bishops of Jerusalem, in Kuseb. H. E. iii. 35, iv. 5. It was borne by a Jew of Tiberias who wrote the history of the Jewish war (Joseph. Vit. §§ 9,65 ), and by a son of the historian Josephus himself (ib. §1). It occurs in the rabbinical writings (Nטי, , or wehöttgen on Acts i. 23, Zunz Judennamen p. 20), and in monumental inscriptions from Jewish cemeteries in various places (Boeckh C.I. no. 9922, 9925 ; Reous Archéologique 1860, II. p. 348 ; Garrucci Dissertazioni Archeologiche II p. 182). So also the corresponding female name Justa (Garrucci l.c. p. 180). In Clem. Hom. ii. 19, iii. 73, iv. I, xiii. 7 , the Syrophœenician woman of the Gospels is named 'Ioṽara, doubtless because she is represeuted in this Judaizing romance as a proselytess ( $\pi \rho o \sigma \dot{\eta} \lambda \nu \tau 0 s$ xiii. 7) who strictly observes the Mosaic ordinances ( $\tau \eta \nu$ and is contrasted with the heathen who disregard them. In some cases Justus might be the only name of the person, as a Latin rendering of the Fiebrew Zadok; while in others, as here and in Acts $\mathbf{i} .23$, it is a surname. Its Greek equivalcat, $\delta$ סikcuos, is the recognised epithet of James the Lord's brother: see Galatians, p. 348.
oi övTधs א.т. .] i.e. 'converts from Judaism' (see the note Gal. ii. 12), or perhaps 'belonging to the Circumcision'; but in this latter case $\pi \epsilon \rho \iota \tau o \mu \hat{\eta} s$, though without the article, must be used in a concrete sense, like $\tau \hat{\eta} s \quad \pi \epsilon \rho \iota \tau o \mu \hat{\eta} s$, for 'the Jews.' Of Mark and of Jesus the fact is plain from their name or their connexions. Of Aristarchus we could not have inforred a Jewish origin, independently of this direct statement.
$\mu o ́ v o t]$ i.e. of the Jewish Christians in Rome. On this antagonism of the converts from the Circumcision in the metropolis, see Philippians p. 16 sq. The words however must not be closely pressed, as if absolutely no Jewish Christian besides had remained friendly; they will only imply that among the more prominent members of the body the Apostle can only name these three as stedfast in their alle-loóvuरov ... mávets $\gamma \dot{a} \rho$ к.т..$\lambda$. (with the note).

 i. 13 .
oitrves к. $\tau$.] 'men whom I found

 Aápros, and see Philippians p. 17. For oirues, not specifying the individuals, but referring them to their class characteristics, see the notes on Gal. iv. 24, v. 19, Phil. iii. 7, iv. 3.
тарпүopia] 'encouragement,'‘comfort.' The range of meaning in this word is even wider than in mapauv$\theta i a$ or $\pi a \rho \dot{\alpha} \kappa \lambda \eta \sigma t s$ (see the note Phil. ii. i). The verb mapqyopeiv denotes either (I) 'to exhort, encourage ' (Herod. v. 104, Apoll. Rhod. ii. 64); (2) 'to dissuade' (Herod. ix. 54, 55); (3) 'to appease,' 'quiet' (Plut. Vit. Pomp. 13, Mor. p. 737 ©); or (4) 'to console, comfort' (Aesci. Eum. 507). The word however, and its derivates пар $\eta$ үор $\overline{\text { ткко́s, were }}$ used especially as medical terms, in the sense of 'assuaging,' 'alleviating'; e.g. Hippocr. pp. 392, 393, 394, Galen xiv. p. 335, 446, Plut. Mor. pp. 43 D, 142 D; and perhaps owing to this usage, the idea of consolation, comfort, is on the whole predominant in the word; e.g. Plut.

 тàs $\lambda$ ítas
 тoù $\pi \in ́ v \theta$ ous. In Plut. Mor. p. 599 в rapryopia and ovvryopia are contrasted, as the right and wrong method of dealing with the sorrows of the exile; and the former is said to

12. 'Eтафрās] His full name would be Epaphroditus, but he is always called by the shortened form Epaphras, and must not be confused with the Philippian Epaphroditus (see Philippians p. 6o), who also was with St Paul at one period of his Roman captivity. Of Epaphras, as the Evangelist of Colosse, and perhaps of the neighbouring towns, see above, pp. 29 sq., 34 sq .
 ' who is one of you,' i. e. a native, or at least an inhabitant, of Colosse, as in the case of Onesimus ver. 9 ; comp. Acts iv. 6, xxi. 8, Rom. xvi. 10, if, I Cor. xii. IG, Phil. iv. 22, ete.
Soûlos X. I.] This title, which the Apostle nses several times of himself, is not elsewhere conferred on any other individual, except once on Timothy (Phil. i. I), and probably points to exceptional services in the cause of the Gospel on the part of Epaphras.
 Rom. xv. 30 ovvayovi $\sigma a \sigma \theta a i \quad \mu o t$ iv raîs $\pi$ тровеи $\chi$ ais. See also the great àyovia of prayer in Luke xxii. 44. Comp. Justin Apol. ii. 13 (p. 51 в)
 $\mu$ evos. See also i. 29 , ii I, with the notes.
$\sigma$ raA $\bar{\eta} \tau \epsilon$ ' $s t a n d$ fast,' doubtless the correct reading rather than orîre which the received text has; comp. Matt. ii. 9 , xxvii. if, where also the received text substitutes the weaker word.

$\lambda \epsilon \iota о \iota ~ к а і ~ \pi \epsilon \pi \lambda \eta \rho о ф о \rho \eta \mu \epsilon ́ \nu о \iota ~ \epsilon ่ \nu ~ \pi а \nu \tau i ~ \theta \epsilon \lambda \eta ́ \mu а т \iota ~ \tau о \hat{u}$

$\pi \epsilon \pi \lambda \eta \rho \circ ф о \rho \eta \mu \hat{\epsilon} \nu o i]$ 'fully porsuad$e d$.' The verb $\pi \lambda \eta \rho \circ \phi \quad \rho \epsilon i v ~ h a s ~ s e v e r a l ~$ senses. (1) 'To fulfil, accomplish'; 2 Tím. iv. 5 т ̀̀v Stakovià oov $\pi \lambda \eta{ }^{2} o^{-}$ фо́ $\overline{\eta \sigma o v,}$, ib. ver. 17 то̀ ки́ $\rho v \gamma \mu a \pi \lambda \eta$ рофор $\theta \hat{\eta}$, Clem. Hom. хіх. $24 \pi \epsilon \pi \lambda \eta-$
 So perhaps Hermas Sim. $2 \pi \lambda \eta \rho \circ ф о-$ little difficult to carry the same sense into the latter clause, where the word seems to signify rather 'to satisfy.' (2) 'To persuade fully, to convince';

 бтá $\sigma \epsilon \omega$ к.т.入., Ign. Magn. 8 єis то̀

 Philad. inscr. év $\tau \hat{\eta}$ à $\nu a \sigma \tau a ́ \sigma \epsilon t ~ a u ̉ t o \hat{u}$
 I $\pi \epsilon \pi \lambda \eta \rho \circ ф о \rho \eta \mu e ́ v o u s ~ \epsilon i s ~ \tau o ̀ ̀ ~ K u ́ p \iota o \nu ~$ $\hat{\eta}^{\dot{\eta}} \mu \omega \bar{\omega}$, Mart. Ign. $7 \pi \lambda \eta \rho о ф о \rho \hat{\eta} \sigma a c$ тov̀s Clem. Hom. Ep. ad Iac. Io $\pi \epsilon \pi \lambda \eta \rho o ф o^{-}$ 13, 14, xix. 24 бvyєт $\theta$ е́ $\mu \eta \nu$ is $\pi \lambda \eta \rho o-$ $\phi$ орои́ $\mu \in y o s$. So too Lxx Eccles. viii. II тготро́v. (3) 'To fill'; Rom. xv. I3 $\pi \lambda$ ग-V.1.), Clem. Rom. 54 тis $\pi \epsilon \pi \lambda \eta \rho о ф о \rho \eta \mu \epsilon$ - avirov, where it means 'I was filled with,' i.e. 'I was fully bent on,' a sense closely allied to the last. From this account it will be seen that there is in the usage of the word no justification for translating it 'most surely believed' in Luke i. I rã and it should therefore be rendered 'fulfilled, accomplished.' The word is almost exclusively biblical and ecclesiastical; and it seems clear that the passage from Ctesias in Photius quoted with verbal exactness. In Isocr. Trapez. § 8 the word is now expunged from the text on the authority of the mss. For the substantive $\pi \lambda \eta \rho \circ \phi \frac{\rho i ́ a}{}$ see the note on ii. 2 above. The reading of the received text here, $\pi \in \pi \lambda \eta \rho \omega \mu$ ย́ $\bar{\circ} \circ$, must be rejected as of inferior authority.

'̀ $\boldsymbol{y}$ navti к.r.入.] 'in every thing willed by God'; comp. 1 Kings ix. 1 I. So the plural rà $\theta_{\epsilon} \lambda \dot{\eta} \mu a \tau a$ in Acts xiii. 22, Ephes. ii. 3, and several times in the Lxx. The words are best connected directly with $\pi \epsilon \pi \lambda \eta \rho о ф о \rho \eta \mu$ е́po The passages quoted in the last note amply illustrate this construction. The preposition may denote ( r ) The abode of the conviction, as Rom. xiv. $5 \dot{\epsilon} \nu T \hat{\omega}$ $i \delta i \omega$ pot; or (2) The object of the conviction, as Ign. Magn. II év $_{\boldsymbol{\tau}} \hat{\eta}$ $\sigma \epsilon \iota$; or (3) The atmosphere, the surroundings, of the conviction, as last seems to be its sense here. The connexion orafinte...ŝv, though legitimate in itself (Rom. v. 2, I Cor. xv. 1), is not favoured by the order of the words here.
 inward and outward, though from the connexion the former notion seems to predominate, as in á $\gamma \omega \nu$ ii. 1 ; comp. Plat. Phaedr. p. 247 в ло́vos тє кal two variations which transcribers have substituted for the correct reading $\zeta \bar{\eta} \lambda o \nu$ emphasizes the former idea and кómov the latter. The true reading is more expressike than either. The word nóvos however is very rare in the New Testament (occurring only Rev. xvi. io, il, xxi. 4, leesides this passage), and was therefore liable to be clanged.

каї тడิ้ к.т...] The neighbouring cities are taken in their geographical order, commencing from Colossæ; see above, p. 2. Epaphras, though a Colossian, may have been the evangelist of the two larger cities also.

 $\Delta \eta \mu \hat{\alpha} s$.
naosıкíq] This form has not the same overwhelming preponderance of authority in its favour here and in vv . 15 , 16 , as in ii. 1 , but is probably correct in all these places. It is quite possible however, that the same person would write Aaodıkta and Aaoósketa indifferently. Even the form sao$\delta_{\kappa \kappa \eta} a$ is found in Mionnet, Suppl. viI. p. 581. Another variation is the contraction of $\Lambda a a \delta-$ into $\Lambda a \delta-$; e.g. $\Lambda a-$ edict of Diocletian.
14. Aovkâs] St Luke had travelled with St Paul on his last journey to Jerusalem (Acts xxi. I sq.). He had also accompanied him two years later from Jerusalem to Rome (Acts xxvii. 2 sq.). And now again, probably after another interval of two years (see Philippians p. 31 sq.), we find him in the apostle's company. It is not probable that he remained with St Paul in the meanwhile (Phil ippians, p. 35), and this will account for his name not occurring in the Epistle to the Philippians. He was at the Apostle's side again in his second captivity ( 2 Tim. iv. II).

Lucas is doubtless a contraction of Lucanus. Several Old Latin mss write out the name Lucanus in the superscription and subscription to the Gospel, just as elsewhere Apollos is written in full Apollonius. On the frequent occurrence of this name Lucanus in inscriptions see Ephem. Epigr. II. p. 28 (1874). The shortened form Lucas however seems to be rare. He is here distinguished from of övtes èx тєрıтодйs (ver. 1I). This alone is fatal to his identification (mentioned as a tradition by Origen ad loc.) with the Lucius, St Paul's 'kiusman' (i. e. a Jew; see Philippians pp. 17, 171, 173), who sends a salutation from Corinth to Rome (Rom. xvi. 2 I ). It is equally fatal to the somewhat later tradition that he was one of the seventy (Dial. c. Marc. § I in Orig. Op. 1. p. 8o6, ed. De la Rue; Epiphan. Haer. li. II). The identification with Lucius of Cyrene (Acts xiii. 13) is possible but not probable. Though the example of Patrobius for Patrobas (Rom.xvi. 14) shows that such a contraction is not out of the question, yet probability and testimony alike point to Lucanus, as the longer form of the Evangelist's name.
o iatoós] Indications of medical knowledge have been traced both in the third Gospel and in the Acts; see on this point Smith's Voyage and Shipwreck of St Paul p. 6 sq. (ed. 2). It has been observed also, that St Luke's first appearance in company with St Paul (Acts nvi io) nearly synchronizes with an attack of the Apostle's constitutional malady (Gal. iv. 13, 14); so that he may have joined him partly in a professional capacity. This conjecture is perhaps borne out by the personal feeling which breathes in the following í áaarjrós. But whatever may be thought of these points, there is no ground for questioning the ancient belief (Iren. iii. 14. I sq.) that the physician is also the Krangelist. St Paul's motive in specifying him as the Physician may not have been to distinguish him from any other bearing the same name, but to emphasize his own obligations to his medical knowledge. The name in this form does not appear to have been common. The tradition that St Luke was a painter is quite late (Niceph. Call. ii. 43). It is worthy of notice that the two Eyangelists are mentioned together in this context, as also in Philem. 24, 2 Tim. iv. II.

ó àantrrós]' the beloved one,' not to be closely connected with ó larpós, for Philem. I, Rom. xvi. 12 (comp. VV. 5, 8, 9), 3 Joh. I. For the form compare the expression in the Gospels, Matt.
 where a comparison of Is. xlii. 1 , as quoted in Matt. xii. is, seems to show that ód dantprós к.т.入. forms a distinct clause from $\delta$ viós $\mu$ po.
$\left.\Delta \eta \mu \hat{a}_{s}\right]$ On the probability that this person was a Thessalonian ( 2 Tim . iv. 10) and that his name was Demetrius, see the introduction to the Epistles to the Thessalonians He appears in close connexion with St Luke in Philem. 24 , as here. In 2 Tim. iv. Io their conduct is placed in direct contrast, yos $\mu \epsilon \tau^{\prime} \epsilon^{\prime} \mu о \hat{v}$. There is perhaps a foreshadowing of this contrast in the language here. While Luke is described with special tenderness as ó iatoós, ó dyantrós, Demas alone is dismissed with a bare mention and without any epithet of commendation.

15-17. 'Greet from me the brethren who are in Laodicea, especially Nymphas, and the church which assembles in their house. And when this letter has been read among you, take care that it is read also in the Church of the Laodiceans, and be sure that je also read the letter which I have sent to Laodicea, and which je will get from them. Moreover give this message from me to Archippus; Take heed to the ministry which thou hast received from me in Ohrist, and discharge it fully and faithfully.'
15. N $\nu \mu \phi \hat{\alpha} \nu]$ As the context shows, an inhabitant of Laodicea. The name in full would probably be Nymphodorus, as Artemas (Tit. iii. I2) for Artemidorus, Zenas (Tit. iii. 13) for Zenodorus, Theudas (Acts $\mathbf{~}$. 16) for Theodorus, Olympas (Rom. xvi 15) for Olympiodorus, and probably Hermas (Rom. xvi. I4) for Hermodorus (seo Philippians, p. 174). Other names in as occurring in the New Testament and representing different terminations are Amplias (Ampliatus, a v.l.), Antipas (Antipater), Demas (Demetrius?), Epaphras (Epaphroditus), Lucas (Lucanus), Parmenas (Parmenides), Patrobas (Patrobius), Silas (Sylvanus), Stephanas (Stephanephorus), and perhaps Junias (Junianus, Rom. xyi. 7). For a collection of names with this contraction, found in different places, see Chandler Greek Accentuation § 34 ; comp. Lobeck Pathob. p. 505 sq . Some remarkable instances are found in the inscripetc.; see esp. Boeckh C. I. III. pp. Io72, 1097. The name Nymphodorus is found not unfrequently; e.g. Herod. vii. 137, Thuc. ii. 29, Athen. i. p. 19 F, vi. p. 265 c, Mionnet $S u p p l$. vi. p. 88, Boeckh C.I. no. 158, etc. The contracted form Nv $\mu$ âs however is very rare, though it occurs in an Athenian inscription, Boeckh C. I. 269 Nuvゆäs, and apparently also in a Spartan, ib. 1240 Eviruvos Nuvфâ. In Murat. mDxxxy. 6, is an inscription to one $N u$. Aquilius Nymphas, a freedman, where the dative is Nymphadi. Other names from which Nymphas might be contracted are Nymphius, Nymphicus, Nymphidius, Nymphodotus, the first and last being the most common.

Those, who read aün$\hat{s}$ in the following clause, take it as a woman's name ( $\mathrm{N} \dot{\mu} \mu \phi \nu_{\nu}$, not $N \nu_{\mu} \phi \hat{\alpha} \nu$ ); and the name Nymphe, Nympha, Nympa, etc., occurs from time to time in Latin inscriptions; e.g. C. I. L. II. I099, 1783, 3763, iII. 525, v. 607, etc. Murator. cmaxiy. i, molix. 8, mcoxev. 9 , mpxar. 3. But a Doric form of the Greek name here seems in the highest degree improbable.
 pression is used of Prisca and Aquila both at Rome (Rom. xvi. 5) and at Ephesus (r Cor. xyi. 19), and also of Philemon, whether at Colosse or at Laodicea is somewhat uncertain (Philem. 2); comp. Acts xii. 12 т $\grave{\nu} \nu$ oikíà $\tau \bar{\eta} s$ кaì $\pi \rho о \sigma \epsilon \chi^{\circ}{ }^{\prime} \mu \epsilon \nu$, and see Philippians p. 56. Perhaps similar gatherings may be implied by the expres. sions in Rom. xil. I4, I5 toùs $\sigma$ v̀v av̀- dyíous (Probst Kirchliche Disciplin p. 182, 1873). See also Act. Mart. Justin. § 3 (II. p. 262 ed. Otto), Clem. Recogn. x. 7I 'Theophilus... domus suae ingentem basilicam ecclesiae nomine consecraret' (where the word 'basilica' was probably introduced by the translator Ruffinus). Of the same kind must have been the 'collegium quod est in domo Sergiae Paulinae' (de Rossi Roma Sotterranea 1. p. 209); for the Christians were first recognised by the Roman Government as 'collegia' or burial clubs, and piotected by this recognition doubtless held their meetings for religious worship. There is no clear example of a separate building set apart for Christian worship within the limits of the Roman empire before the third century, though apartments in private houses might be specially devoted to this purpose. This, I think, appears as a negative result from the passages collected in Bingham viii. I. 13 and Probst p. 18isq. with a different view. Hence the places of Christian assembly were not commonly called vaoi till quite late (Ignat. Magn. 7 is not really an exception), but oikoc $\theta_{\varepsilon} \in \hat{u}$, like (Euseb. H. E. vii 30, viii. 13, ix. 9, etc.).
aưT $\hat{\nu} \nu$ ] The difficulty of this reading has led to the two corrections, avtov and avitins, of which the former appears in the received text, and the latter is supported by one or two very ancient authorities. Of these alternative readings however, aưroû is condemned by its simplicity, and autins has arisen from the form $\mathrm{N} \nu \mu \phi$ ay, which prima facie would look like a woman's name, and yet hardly can be so. We should require to know more of the circumstances to feel any confidence in explaining av̉rcù. A simple explanation is that aù $\bar{\omega} \nu$ denotes 'Nymphas and his friends,' by a transition which is common in classical writers ; e.g. Xen. Anab. iii. 3. $7 \pi \rho 0 \sigma-$ tas: see also Kühner Gramm. § 37 I (ri. p. 77), Bernhardy Syntax p. 288. Or perhaps roùs év naodukía à̉è $\phi$ oús may refer not to the whole body of the Laodicean Church, but to a family of Colossian Christians established in Laodicea. Under any circumstances this iкк $\lambda \eta \sigma i a$ is only a section of $\eta$ دаодıкє́ $\omega \nu$ єккк $\lambda \eta \sigma i a$ mentioned in ver. 16. On the authorities for the various readings see the detached note.

 has just been concluded, for these salutations have the character of a postscript; comp. Rom. xvi. 22 Tép-
 iii. 14 र̀à $\tau \hat{\eta} s$ é $\pi \iota \sigma \tau o \lambda \hat{\eta} s$, Mart. Polyc.
 examples however do not countenance the explanation which refers ${ }^{\text {\% }}$ ypaqa the First Epistle itself, occurring (as it does) in the middle of the letter (comp. 2 Cor. vii. 8).
 xi. 37, Apoc. xiii. 15. In such cases the iva is passing away from its earlier sense of design to its later sense of result. A corresponding classical ìva aù $\boldsymbol{\eta} \dot{\prime} \nu \pi \lambda \eta \rho o i ̄ s$.

 Xen. Cyr. vi. 3. 18.

A similar charge is given in I Thess. v. 27. The precaution here is probably suggested by the distastefulness of the A postle's warnings, which might lead to the suppression of the letter.
 at Laodicea, which you will procure thence.' For this abridged expression compare Luke xi. 13 o тarì $\delta$ $\dot{\epsilon} \xi$ ov̉pavov̂ $\delta \omega^{\prime} \sigma \epsilon \iota \pi \nu \epsilon \hat{v} \mu a$ â $\gamma \iota o v$, xvi. 26

 oixias, єive $\begin{aligned} & \delta \partial \eta \sigma a \nu ~ к . т . \lambda . ~ F o r ~ i n s t a n c e s ~\end{aligned}$ of this proleptic use of the preposition in classical writers, where it is extremely common, see Kühner Gr. §448 (II. p. 474), Jelf Gr. § 647, Matthiæ Gr. § 596: e.g. Plat. Apol. 32 в тov̀s oủk àve入ouévous roùs ék тîs vav $\mu a \chi$ ias, т $\hat{\omega} \nu$ oikı $\hat{\omega} \nu$, Isocr. Paneg. $\S 187$ т $\dot{\eta} p$ єúđat Evjocimn $\delta \iota a k o \mu i \sigma a t \mu \in \nu$. There are good reasons for the belief that St Paul here alludes to the so-called Epistle to the Ephesians, which was in fact a circular letter addressed to the principal churches of proconsular Asia (see above, p. 37, and the introduction to the Epistle to the Ephesians). Tychicus was obliged to pass through Laodicea on his way to Co losse, and would leave a copy there, before the Colossian letter was delivered. For other opinions respecting this 'letter from Laodicea' see the detached note.
iva кal vifîs к.т.入.] 'see that ye also read.' At first sight it might seem as though this iva also were governed by лoıńбare, like the former; but, inasmuch as monifare would be somewhat awkward in this connexion, itis perhaps better to treat the second clause as independent and elliptical, ( $\beta \lambda$ е́тєтє) iva к.r. $\lambda$. This is suggested also by the position of rìv ex Aaodikias before iva; comp. Gal. ii. so hóyop sề note). Ellipses before ina are frequent; e.g. John ix. 3, 2 Cor. viii. 13 , 2 Thess. iii. 9, I Joh. ii. 19.
17. Kai exinate] Why does not the Apostle address himself directly to Archippus? It might be answered that he probably thought the warning would come with greater emphasis, when delivered by the voice of the Church. Or the simpler explanation perhaps is, that Archippus was not resident at Colosso but at Laodicea: see the introduction to the Epistle to Philemon. On this warning itself see above, p. 42.
 favraùs iva $\mu \eta$ k.r. i . More commonly it has the accusative of the thing to be avoided; see Phil. iii. 2 (with the note).

Tìv danoviay] From the stress which is laid upon it, the saakovia here would seem to refer, as in the case of Timothy cited below, to some higher function than the diaconate properly so called. In Acts xii. 25 the same phrase, $\pi \lambda \eta \rho o \hat{v} \nu \quad$ тì $\bar{\nu}$ Sakoviay, is used of a temporary ministration, the collection and conveyance of the alms for the poor of Jerusalem (Acts xi. 29); but the solemnity of the warning here points to a continuous office, rather than an immediate service.
 The word suggests, though it does not necessarily imply, a mediate rather than a direct reception: see the note Gal. i. 12. Archippus received the $\mu o v \tau \bar{\omega} \nu \delta \in \sigma \mu \bar{\omega} \nu . \quad$ 'H $\chi \chi^{\alpha} \rho t s \mu \epsilon \theta^{\prime} \dot{v} \mu \hat{\omega} \nu$.
charge immediately from St Paul, though nitimately from Christ. 'Non enim sequitur,' writes Bengel, ' $a$ Domino ( 1 Cor. xi. 23), sed in Domino.'
$\pi \lambda \eta \rho o i ̂ s]$ 'fulfl', i.e. 'discharge fully'; comp. 2 Tim. iv. 5 Tì' $\boldsymbol{d t a k o - ~}$ цiav бov плдрофо́р $\eta \sigma о \nu$.
18. ' I add this salutation with my own hand, signing it with my name Paul. Be mindful of my bonds. God's grace be with you.'
 evidently written by an amanuensis (comp. Rom. xvi. 22). The final salutation alone, with the accompanying sentence $\mu \nu \eta \mu o v e v i c t \varepsilon$ к.т. $\lambda$., was in the Apostle's own handwriting. This seems to have been the Apostle's general practice, even where he does not call attention to his own signature. In 2 Thess. iii. 17 sq., I Cor. xvi. 2I, as here, he directs his readers' notice to the fact, but in other epistles he is silent. In some cases however he writes much more than the final sentence. Thus the whole letter to Philemon is apparently in his own handwriting (see ver. r9), and in the Epistle to the Galatians he writes a long paragraph at the close (see the note on vi. II).
 phrase occurs in 2 Thess. iii. 17, 1 Cor. xvi 2I. For the construction comp. e.g. Philo Leg.ad Gai. 8 (II. p. 554) and see Kühner § 406 (II p. 242), Jelf § 467 .

т $\bar{\omega} \nu \delta \in \sigma \mu \omega \bar{\omega}]$ His bonds establish an additional claim to hearing. He who is suffering for Christ has a right to speak on behalf of Ohrist. The appeal is similar in Ephes. iii. I rovitov which is resumed again (after a long

 9 тоюи̂tos ${ }^{*} \nu$ ©s $\Pi a v ̂ \lambda o s . . . ~ \delta ́ \epsilon ́ \sigma \mu L o s ~$ X $\rho \iota \sigma \tau 0 \overline{\text { u }}$ 'I $\eta \sigma 0 \hat{0}$. These passages seem to show that the appeal here is not for himself, but for his teaching-not for sympathy with his sufferings but for obedience to the Gospel. His bonds were not his own; they were rà $\delta \in \sigma \mu \mathrm{a}$ тov̂ єvंaryèiov (Philem. 13). In Heb. x. 34 the right reading is not rois $\delta \epsilon \sigma$ pois $\mu \mathrm{ov}$, but tais $\delta \in \sigma \mu$ ions avyetaOrंबarє (comp. xiii. 3). Somewhat similar is the appeal to his oriypara in Gal. vi. 17, 'Henceforth let no man trouble me.' See the notes on Philem. 10, 13. of the final benediction appears only here and in I Tim. vi. 21, 2 Tim. iv. 22. In Tit iii. 15 गqurrov is inserted, and so in Heb. xiii. 25. In Ephes. vi. 24 the form so far agrees with the examples quoted, that $\eta^{\dot{j}} \chi^{\dot{a} \rho}$ ¢s is used absolutely, thongh the end is lengthened out. In all the carlier epistles $\dot{\eta}$ $\chi^{\alpha}$ pıs is defined by the addition of rov̀
 v. 28, 2 Thess. iii. 18 , 1 Cor. xvi. 23, 2 Cor. xiii. 13, Gal. vi. 18, Rom. xvi. 20, [z4], Phil. iv. 23. Thus the absolute $\eta^{\dot{d}} \chi^{d}$ ats in the final benedietion may be taken as a chronological note. A similar phenomenon has been al-$\kappa \lambda$ poiaus) in the opening addresses: see the note on i. 2.

Harmon- In one respect the letters to the Ephesians and Colossians hold a unique istic read- position among the Epistles of St Paul, as regards textual criticism. They

Preponderant evidence (i) for the correct reading; external testimony, and the suspicious character of the reading is quite same verse (both from Ephes. v. 19).

(2) against In other instances again there can hardly be any doubt about the text, the correct even though the vast preponderance of authority is in favour of the harmoreading. nistic reading; and these are especially valuable becanse they enable us Examples. to test the worth of our authorities. Such examples are: iii. 6. The omission of the words $\dot{\epsilon} \pi i$ rovis vious $\tau \hat{\eta} s$ antet $\theta$ eias (taken from Ephes. v. 6). Apparently the only extant ms in favour of the omission iii. 6, $\begin{aligned} & \text { iii. 6. The omission of the words } \\ & \text { wordsin- from Ephes. v. 6). Apparently the only extant ms in favour of the omission }\end{aligned}$ serted. alone have been exposed, or exposed in any considerable degree, to those harmonizing tendencies in transcribers, which have had so great an influence on the text of the Synoptic Gospels.

In such cases there is sometimes no difficulty in ascertaining the correct reading. The harmonistic change is condemned by the majority of the oldest and best authorities; or there is at least a nearly even balance of is B. In D however they are written (though by the first hand) in smaller letters and extend beyond the line (in both Greek and Latin), whence we may infer that they were not found in a copy which was before the transcriber. They are wanting also in the Thebaic Version and in one form of the Ethiopic (Polyglott). They were also absent from copies used by Clement of Alexandria (Paed. iii, 11, p. 295, where however they are inserted in the printed texts ; Strom. iii. 5, p. 531), by Cyprian (Epist. 1v. 27, p. 645

[^74]Wilkins being commonly adopted, though full of errors, and no attention being paid to the various readings of Boetticher's text. Besides the errors corrected in the following pages, I have also observed these places where the text of this version is incorrectly reported; ii. $7 \dot{\epsilon} \boldsymbol{y}$ aúvnी not omitted; ii. 13 the second $\dot{v} \mu \bar{\alpha} s$ not omitted ; ii. if the singular (b), not the plural (ü) ; iii. $4 \dot{j} \mu \hat{\omega}$, not $\dot{\eta} \mu \hat{\nu} y$; iii.

 whether $\delta i i^{8}$ or $\delta i i^{\prime} \gamma ;$ and probably there are others.
ed．Hartel），by au unknown writer（de Sing．Cler．39，in Cypr．Op．ITr．p．215）， by the Ambrosian Hilary（ad loc．），and by Jerome（Epist．xir．5，I．p．32） though now found apparently in all the Latin mss．
iii．21．द́ $\rho \in \theta i \xi \in \tau \epsilon$ is only found in $B \mathrm{~K}$ and in later hands of D （with its iii．21 transcript E）among the uncial mss．All the other uncials read mapopyifcre，efeticere． which is taken from Ephes．vi．4．In this case however the reading of $\mathbf{B}$ is supported by the greater number of cursives，and it accordingly has a place in the received text．The versions（so far as we can safely infer their read－ ings）go almost entirely with the majority of uncials．The true readings of Syriac the Syriac versions are just the reverse of those assigned to them even by version the chief critical editors，Tregelles and Tischendorf．Thus in the Peshito，misrepr the word used is the Aphel of $\mathbf{4} \boldsymbol{f}$ ，the same mood of the samo verb being employed to translate rapopyi $\zeta \in ⿺$ ，not only in Rom．x．19，but even in the parallel passage Ephes．vi．4．The word in the text of the Harclean is the same as ion，but in the margin the alternative a is h is given．White interprets this as saying that the text is $\dot{\epsilon} \rho \in \theta i \zeta \epsilon \tau \epsilon$ and the margin mapopyiscre，and he is followed by Tregelles and Tischendorf．But in this version，as in the Peshito，the former word translates mapopyi $\tilde{f} \epsilon \boldsymbol{y}$ in Rom．x．19，Ephes．vi．4；while in the Peshito the latter word is adopted where épe $\theta_{i} \mathrm{j} \epsilon \iota v$ occurs）．In the Harclean of 2 Cor．ix， 2 a different word from either，dwodu，is used．It seems tolerably clear therefore that mapopyi乡ere was read in the text of both Peshito and Harclean here，while i $\rho \in \theta i \zeta \mathrm{fere}$ was given in the margin of the latter．The Latin versions seem Latin also to have read $\pi a \rho o p \gamma^{i} \zeta \epsilon \tau \epsilon$ ；for the Old Latin has ad iram（or in iram versions． or ad iracundiam）prowocare，and the Vulgate ad indignationem provo－ care here，while both have ad iracundiam provocare in Ephes．vi． 4. The Memphitic too has the same rendering $\ddagger$ xwrt in both passages．Of the earlier Greek fathers Clement，Strom．iv． 8 （p．593），reads épe Oiject $^{\text {：}}$ and it is found in Chrysostom and some later writers．

These examples show how singularly free $B$ is from this passion for Great harmonizing，and may even embolden us to place reliance on its authority value of $B$ ． in extreme cases

For instance，the parallel passages Ephes．v．i9 and Col iii． 16 stand Perallel thus in the received text：

| Ephesians． | Colossians． | Col．iii．r6， |
| :---: | :---: | :---: |
|  |  | Eph．\％．Ig． |
|  |  |  |
|  |  |  |
| т $\hat{\varphi}$ Kıрі¢． |  |  |

And A carries the harmonizing tendency still further by inserting ${ }^{4}$ $\chi^{\dot{a} \rho ı t ı}$ before ặóovtes in Ephes．from the parallel passage．

In B they are read as follows ：

入a入oûvtes éavroîs èv $\psi$ ад $\mu$ îs каi тovis $\psi a \lambda \mu o i ̂ s ~ i ́ \mu \nu o u s ~ థ i \delta a i ́ s ~ \pi v e v \mu a-~$ карঠías $\dot{v} \mu \hat{\omega} \nu \tau \hat{\iota} \Theta \epsilon \hat{q}$ ．

Altera- Here are seven divergences from the received text. (I) The insertion of in tions for the esike of harmonizing. before $\psi$ a $\lambda \mu$ ois in Ephes. ; (2) The omission of $\kappa a i$, кai, attaching $\psi a \lambda \mu o i s$, insertion of $\tau \hat{g}$ before $\chi$ ápırı in Col.; (5) The omission of $\bar{\epsilon} \nu$ before $\tau \hat{\eta}$ кap8iáa in Ephes.; (6) The substitution of taîs kapסiats for $\tau \hat{\eta}$ кapoía in Col. : (7) The substitution of $\tau \hat{\varphi} \Theta \epsilon \bar{\varphi}$ for $\tau \hat{\varphi}$ Kvpíq in Col.

Of these seven divergences the fourth alone does not affect the question: of the remaining six, the readings of B in (2), (6), (7) are supported by the great preponderance of the best authorities, and are unquestionably right. In (r), (3), (5) however the case stands thus:
(3) $\pi \nu \in \nu \mu a \tau \iota k a i ̂ s ~ o m i t t e d ~ i n ~ B, ~ d, ~ e . ~ O f ~ t h e ~ A m b r o s i a n ~ H i l a r y ~ T i s c h e n-~$ dorf says 'fluct lectio'; but his comment 'In quo enim est spiritus, semper spiritualia meditatur' scems certainly to recognise the word. It appears to be found in every other anthority.

$\hat{\epsilon} \nu \tau \hat{\eta}$ кap $\begin{gathered}i ́ a \\ \mathrm{~K} \\ \mathrm{~L}\end{gathered}$, and the vast majority of later mss, the Armenian and Ethiopic Versions, Euthalius (Tischendorf7s ms), Theodoret, and others. The Harclean Syriac (text) is quoted by Tischendorf and Tregelles in favour of $\bar{\epsilon} \nu \tau \hat{\eta}$ kap $\delta i a$, but it is impossible to say whether the translator had or had not the preposition.
є̀ тais кapoiaıs $\mathbb{N o}^{\circ} \mathrm{A}$ D F G P, 47, $8^{\mathrm{po}}$; the Old Latin, Vuigate, Memphitic, Peshito Syriac, and Gothic Versions, together with the margin of the Harclean Syriac; the fathers Basil (II. p.464), Victorinus (probably), Theodore of Mopsuestia, the Ambrosian Hilary, Jerome, and others. Chrysostom (as read in the existing form of the reading is an attempt to bring Ephes. into harmony with Col., just as (6) is an attempt to bring Col. into harmony with Ephes.
It will be seen how slenderly $B$ is supported; and yet we can hardly resist the impression that it has the right reading in all three cases. In the omission of тиеvцатıkais more especially, where the support is weakest, this impression must, I think, be very strong.
Excellence This highly farourable estimate of B is our starting-point; and on the of B else- whole it will be enhanced as we proceed. Thus for instance in i. 22 and ii. 2 where.
we shall find this ms alono (with one important Latin father) retaining the correct text; in the latter case amidst a great complication of various readings. And when again, as in iv. 8, we find B for once on the side of a reading which might otherwise be suspected as a harmonistic change, this support alone will weigh heavily in its favour. Other cases in which $B$ (with more or less support) preserves the correct reading against the mass of authorities

v. 12 oraAñ $\tau$, together with several instances which will appear in the course of the following investigation. On the other hand its value must סéffuac ${ }^{1}$ there can be little doubt that the great majority of ancient autho- False rities correctly read $\delta \imath^{\prime}{ }^{\circ}$, though B F G have $\delta \iota^{\prime}$ ó $\nu$ : but the variation is easily explained. A single stroke, whether accidental or deliberate, alone would be necessary to turn the neuter into a masculine and make the relative agree with the substantive nearest to it in position. Again in plainly wrong, though supported in this instance by D F G 47*, by the Latin text d, and by Hilary in one passage (de Trin. ix. 8, In. p. 263), though elsewhere (ib. i. 13, r. p. 10) he reads ó. But here again we have only an instance of a very common interchange. Whether for grammatical reasons or from diplomatic confusion or from some other cause, five other instances of this interchange occur in this short epistle alone; i. 15 ö for ös F G; i. I8 ${ }^{\boldsymbol{o}}$ for: N* $^{*}$ D. Such readings again as the omission of kai airoúpevo i. 9 by $B$ alone, need not be considered, since the motive for the omission is obvious, and the authority of $B$ will not carry as great weight as it would consideration, because in both instances these readings would suggest themselves as obvious improvements. In other cases, as in the omission of т $\hat{\eta} s$ before $\gamma \hat{\eta} s$ (i. 20), and of 'evi' in év évi $\sigma \omega_{\mu} \mu a r t$ (iii. 15), the scribe of $B$ has erred as any scribe might err.

The various readings in this epistle are more perplexing than perhaps in any portion of St Paul's Epistles of the same length. The following deserve special consideration.

i. $3 \tau \hat{\varphi} \theta \in \hat{\omega}$ matpí.

On this very unusual collocation I have already remarked in the notes i. $3 \boldsymbol{\tau} \hat{\varphi}$ (p. 133). The authorities stand as follows:

(2) $\tau \hat{\psi} \theta \in \Phi \bar{\varphi} \tau \varphi \uparrow \pi a \tau \rho i D^{*} \mathrm{~F}$ G Chrysostom.

One or other is also the reading of the Old Latin ( $d, e, g$, harl), of the Memphitic, the two Syriac (Peshito and Harclean), the Ethiopic, and the Arabic (Erpenius, Bedwell, Leipzig) Versions; and of Augustine (de Unit. Eccl.45, IX. p. 368) and Cassiodorus (II. p. 135 r, Migne).
(3) $\tau \hat{\varphi} \theta_{\epsilon} \dot{\varphi} \times a i \pi a \tau \rho i \times \Delta \mathrm{C}^{2} \mathrm{D}^{\mathrm{C}} \mathrm{K} \mathrm{L} \mathrm{P}$ and apparently all the other mss; the Vulgate and Armenian Versions; Euthalius (Tischendorf's ms), Theodore of Mopsuestia (transl.), Theodoret, the Ambrosian Hilary, and others.

A comparison of these authorities seems to show pretty clearly that

${ }^{1}$ In this passage $B$ (with some fow other authorities) has $70 \hat{v}$ 日eố for roü Xptas of, thus substituting a commoner expression (ii. 2, 1 Cor. iv. i, Rev. x. 7 ; comp. $x$ Cor. ii. 1 , $\mathbf{y}$. 1.) for a less common (Eiphes. iii. 4). for getting rid of a very unusual collocation of words. The scribes have compared withiii. I7, à่̇ov̂, and there again we find кai inserted before $\pi a r \rho i$. In this latter instance however the great preponderance of ancient authority is in favour of the unusual form $\tau \underset{\omega}{\hat{\omega}} \theta \in \hat{\omega}$ tarpi. It is worth observing also that in $\mathbf{i}$. 12 , where $\tau \bar{\varphi} \pi a r \rho i$ has the highest support, there is sufficient authority for $\tau \hat{\varphi} \theta \epsilon \bar{\varphi} \pi a \tau \rho i$ to create a suspicion that there too it may be possibly the correct reading. Thus $\tau \hat{\omega} \theta \in \hat{\omega} \pi$ ratpi is read in $\mathcal{N} 37$, while $\theta \in \hat{\varphi} \hat{\hat{Q}} \tau \hat{\varphi} \pi a r \rho i$ stands in F G. One or other must have been the reading of some Old Latin and Vulgate texts ( $\mathbf{f}, \mathrm{g}, \mathrm{m}$, fuld.), of the Peshito Syriac, of the Memphitic (in some texts, for others read $\tau \bar{\varphi} \pi a \tau \rho i$ simply), of the Arabic (Bedwell), of the Armenian (Uscan), and of Origen (II. p. 45 I, the Latin translator); while several other authorities, Greek and Latin, read $\tau \hat{\varphi} \theta_{\epsilon} \hat{\varphi}$ кай $\pi a \tau p i$. There is no other instance of this collocation of words, $\delta$ Өès matyp, Unique collocation.
i. 4

 in the Greek Testament, so far as I remember; and it must be regarded as peculiar to this epistle.

Here the various readings are ;

 Latin and Vulgate, Memphitic (apparently), and Harclean Syriac Versions; the Ambrosian Hilary, Theodore of Mopsuestia (transl.), and others.
 and Armenian (apparently) Versions; Chrysostom, Theodoret and others.
If the question were to be decided by external authority alone, we could not hesitate. It is important however to observe that (z) conforms ported and though it helps out the sense, it is open to suspicion. Still the omission in B may be an instance of that impatience of apparently superfiuous words, which sometimes appears in this ms.

i. 7 fiாèp нimên هlákonoc.

Here there is a conflict between mss and Versions.
(1) $\dot{\eta} \mu \hat{\omega} \boldsymbol{\nu} \mathrm{A} \mathrm{B} \aleph^{} \mathrm{D}^{} \mathrm{~F}$ G $, 3,13,33,43,52,80,91,109$. This must, also have been the reading of the Ambrosian Hilary though the editors make him write 'pro vobis'), for he explains it 'qui eis ministravit gratiam Christi vice apostoli.'
(2) $\dot{v} \mu \omega \bar{\nu} \mathfrak{N}^{c} \mathrm{OD}^{\mathrm{b}} \mathrm{K} \mathrm{L} \mathrm{P}, \mathrm{I} 7,37,47$, and many others; the Vulgate, the Peshito and Harclean Syriac, the Memphitic, Gothic, and Armenian Versions; Chrysostom, Theodore of Mopsuestia (transl.), and Theodoret (in their respective texts, for with the exception of Chrysostom there is nothing decisive in their comments), with others.

The Old Latin is doubtful ；d，e having vobis and g nobis．
Though the common confusion between these two words even in the best mss is a caution against speaking with absolute certainty，yet such a combination of the highest authorities as we have here for $\eta^{j} \mu \omega \nu$ does not leave much room for doubt：and considerations of internal criticism point in the same direction．See the note on the passage．

i． 12 T $\hat{\varphi}$ íkanácanti．

Against this，which is the reading of all the other ancient authorities，i． 12 we have

ixavผ́artь

$\mathrm{f}, \mathrm{g}, \mathrm{m}$ ，and the Gothic，Armenian，and Ethiopic Ver－ sions．It is so read also by the $\Delta$ mbrosian Hilary，by Didymas de Trin．iii． 4 （p．346），and by Vigilius Thap－ sensis c．Varim．i． 50 （p．409）．

Here the confusion between TWIIKan $\omega c \neq A N T I$ and TMIKAAECANTI would be easy，more especially at a period prior to the earliest existing mes， when the iota adscript was still written；while at the same time кa入érauti would suggest itself to scribes as the obvious word in such a connexion．It is a Western reading．

The text of B obviously presents a combination of both readings．

i．I4 EN $\underset{1}{\text { E }}$ EXOMEN．

 sage，Ephes．i．7，several authorities（ $\overbrace{}^{} \mathrm{D}^{*}$ ，the Memphitic and Ethiopic ${ }^{\prime} \sigma \chi{ }^{\prime} \mu \epsilon \nu$ ？ Versions，and the translator of Irenæus v．I4．3）similarly read $\tilde{\sigma} \sigma \chi$ нен for harmonistic change in Ephes．i．7，to conform to the text which they or their predecessors had in Col．i．I4 Tischendorf on Fiphes．l．c．says＇aut utroque loco eХоцєע aut єब $\chi о \mu \varepsilon \nu$ Paulum scripsisse puto＇；but if any infer－ ence can be drawn from the phenomena of the mss，they point rather to a different tense in the two passages．

This reading is perhaps the highest testimony of all to the great value i． 22 of B ．

The variations are；
 Hilary of Poitiers In xci Psalm． 9 （r．p．270），who trans－ fers the Apostle＇s language into the first person，＇cum aliquando essemus alienati et inimici sensus ejus in factis malis，nunc antem reconciliati sumus corpore carnis ejus．＇

（3）àmoxara入入aүє́vтes $D^{*}$ F G，and the Latin authorities $\mathrm{d}, \mathrm{e}, \mathrm{g}$ ， m , the Gothic Version, the translator of Irenæus (v. 14. 3), and others.
(4) $\dot{\alpha} \pi$ токат $\dot{\eta} \lambda \lambda a \xi \in y$, all the other authorities.

Of these (2) is obviously a corruption of (I) from similarity of sound; and (3) is an emendation, though a careless emendation, of (1) for the sake of the grammar. It should have been àmoкarà $\boldsymbol{a}_{\text {áevas. The reading }}$ however is probably a grammatical correction to straighten the syntax. In the Memphitic a single letter ar for ae would make the difference latter is recorded.

ii. 2 тоү̂ $\theta \in O \hat{\text {, }}$, хРІстоүे.

ii. 2 tô $\theta$ © 0 û Xpuatod.

Original reading.

Variations;
(a) by in-terpretation,

The various readings here are very numerous and at first sight perplexing; but the result of an investigation into their several claims is far from unsatisfactory. The reading which explains all the rest may safely be adopted as the original.
(1) тоү өєoy Xpictoy.

This is the reading of B and of Hilary of Poitiers, de Trin. ix. 62 (1. p. 306), who quotes the passage sacramenti Dei Christi in quo etc., and wrongly explains it 'Deus Christus sacramentum est.'

All the other variations are derived from this, either by explanation or by omission or by amplification.

By explanation we get;
(2) toy өeoy 0 естin Xpictoc, the reading of D , with the Latin authorities d, e, which have Dei quod est Christus. So it is quoted by Vigilius Thapsensis e. Varim. i. 20 (p. 380), and in a slightly longer form by Augustine de Trin. xiii. 24 (vilu. p. 944) mysterium Dei quod est Christaws Jesus.
(3) Toy $\theta \in 0 Y$ en XPICTw.

So it is twice quoted by Clement of Alexandric Strom. v. $10(\mathrm{p} .683$ ), ib. 12 (p. 694); or toy $\theta$ eoy roy en Xpicto, the reading of 17 .
So the Ambrosian Hilary (both text and commentary) has Dei in Christo. And the Armenian has the same lengthened out, Dei in Christo Jesu (Zohrab) or Dei patris in Christo Jesu (Uscan).
(4) Domini quad de Christo is the Eithiopic rendering. Whether this represents another various reading in the Greek or whether the paraphrase is the translator's own, it is impossible to say.

The two following variations strive to overcome the difficulty by omission;
(b) by omission,
(5) TOY ӨEOY,
the reading of $D$ by a second hand, of $P, 37,67^{* *}, 75,80,116$.
(6) tоу Xpictoy, the reading of Euthalius in Tischendorf's ms; but Tischendorf adds the caution 'sed non satis apparet.'

All the remaining readings are attempts to remedy the text by amplification. They fall into two classes; those which insert marpós so as to Xiproraû by the interposition of a кaí, (9), (10), (1I).
(7) тоү $\theta \in о$ т патрос ХРІстоY, the reading of $N$ (by the first hand). Tischendorf also adds $b^{* e c t}$ and $\mathbf{o n e r}^{\text {er }}$; but I read Scrivener's collations differently (Cod. Aug. p. 506) : or тоу $\theta$ еоу matpoc toy хрістоу, the reading of A C, 4
One or other is the reading of the Thebaic Fersion (given by Griesbach) and of the Arabic (Leipz.).

A lengthened form of the same, Dei patris Christi Jesu, appears in the oldest mss of the Vulgate, am. fuld. f : and the same is also the reading of the Memphitic (Boetticher).
(8) toy өєoy кal matpoc toy Xpictoy.

So $x$ (the third hand) $b^{n e r}$, $0^{\text {nerf }}$, and a corrector in the Harclean Syriac.
(9) тоү $\theta$ еоу каI XPICToy, (ii) by the simplest form of the other class of emendations by amplification. It is found in Cyril. Thes. p. 287.
(10) toy $\theta$ eoy tiatpoc kal toy xpictoy.

So 47, 73, the Peshito Syriac (ed. princeps and Schaaf). And so it junction. stands in the commentators Chrysostom (but with various readings) and Theodore of Mopsuestia (Spicil. Solesm. 1. p. I3I Dei patris et Christi, but in Rab. Maur. Op. vi. p. 521 Dei patris Christi Jesu).

Pelagius has Dei patris et, Christi Jesu, and so the Memphitic (Wilkins).

Ihis, which may be regarded as the latest development, is the reading of the received text. It is found in D (third hand) KL , and in the great majority of cursives; in the text of the Harclean Syriac, and in Theodoret and others.

Besides these readings some copies of the Vulgate exhibit other variations; e. g. demid. Dei patris at domini nostri Christi Jesu, tolet. Dei Christi Jesu patris et Domini.

It is not necessary to add any remarks. The justification of rav̂ Өcov̂ Xptorov̂ as the original reading will have appeared in the variations to which it has given rise. The passage is altogether an instructive lesson in textual criticism.
ii. 16 én Bpócel kai én móceı.

In this reading $B$ stands alone among the $M s s$; but it is supported by ii. 16 the Peshito Syriac and Memphitic Versions, by Tertullian (adv. Marc. v. kat or ip 19), and by Origen (in Ioann. x. § 1I, IV. p. 174). The testimony of Tertullian however is infalidated by the fact that he uses et as the connecting particle throughout the passage; and the Peshito Syriac also has 'and' for $\tilde{\eta}^{n}$ in the two last clauses, though not in the second obvious, though not very intelligent, alteration of scribes to conform to the

In this same context it is probable that $B$ retains the right form veo-others) has resisted the tendency to Attic forms.

ii. I8 & édpaxen.
ii. 18 , the omission of the negative.

The form tóракео.
ii. 23. Is ral to be omitted?

That this is the oldest reading which the existing texts exhibit, will appear from the following comparison of authorities.
 thorities d, e, m; the Memphitic, Ethiopic, and Arabic (Leipz.) Versions; Tertull. c. Marc. v. I9 ('ex visionibus angelicis'; and apparently Marcion himself also) ; Origen (c. Cels. v. 8, r. p. 583 , thougil the negative is here inserted by De la Rue, and in Cant. ii, IIL p. 63, in his quae videt); Lucifer (De non conv. c. haer. p. 782 Migne); the Ambrosian Hilary (ad loc. explaining it 'Inflantur motum pervidentes stellarum, quas angelos vocat'). So too the unknown author of Quaest. ex N. T. ii. 62 in August. Op. III. Appx. p. 156. Jerome (Epist. cxxi ad Alg. § 10 , L p. 880) mentions both readings (with and without the negative) as found in the Greek text: and Augustine (Epist. 149, I. p. 514), while giving the preference to quae non vidit, says that some mss have quae vidit.
 cursives;

The negative is also read in $g$; in the Vulgate, the Gothic, both the Syriac and the Armenian Versions ; in the translator of Origen In Rom. ix. § 42 (Iv. p. 665), in Ambrose in Psalm. cxviii Exp. xx. (I. p. 1222), and in the commentators Pelagius, Chrysostom, Theodore of Mopsuestia (Spic. Solesm. I. p. 132 'quae nee sciunt'), Theodoret, and others.

From a review of these authorities we infer that the insertion of the negative was a later correction, and that á écipacev (or èopake ${ }^{\text {) }}$ ) represents the prior reading. In my note I have expressed my suspicion that á évpa$\kappa \epsilon y$ (or éppaкєע) is itself corrupt, and that the original reading is lost.

The untsual form épaкєy is found in $\boldsymbol{}^{} \mathrm{~B}^{*} \mathrm{CD}$ P, and is therefore to be preferred to éє́ракєข.

Here kai is found in all the Greck copies except B, but is omitted in these Latin authorities, m, the translator of Origen (In Rom. ix. § 42 , w. p. 665), Hilary of Poitiers (Tract. in xiv Ps. §7, p. 73), the Ambrosian Hilary, Ambrose (de Noe 25, p. 267), and Paulinus (Epist. 50, p. 292 sq.). We have more than once found B and Hilary alone in supporting the correct reading (i. 22 , ii. 2); and this fact gives weight to their joint aathority here. The omission also seems to explain the impossible reading of $d$, $e$, which have in religione et humilitate sensus et vexationem corporis, where for et vexationem we should perhaps read ad cexationem, as in the Ambrosian Hilary. There was every temptation for a scribe to insert the кai so as to make ádecíía range with the other datives: while on the other band a finer appreciation of the bearing of the passage suggests that St Paul would have dissociated it, so as to give it a special prominence.

 кai äytot is read for áyto кai. The great gain in force leads to the suspicion that this omission may be correct, notwithstanding the enormous preponderance of authority on the other side.

Of the various readings of this passage $I$ have already spoken (p. 29 sq., iv. 8 note $\mathrm{I}, \mathrm{p} .235$ ).

The authorities are as follows:
 1II, 116, 137 ; d, e, g; the Armenian and Ethiopic Versions; Theodore of Mopsuestia ${ }^{1}$, Theodoret ${ }^{2}$, Jerome (on Ephes. vi. 21 sq., vL p. 682), and Euthalins (Tischendorf's ms). This is also the reading of $\Omega^{*}$, except that it has $\dot{v} \mu \hat{\omega} \nu$ for $\dot{\eta} \mu \hat{\omega} \nu$.
 the Memphitic, Gothic, Vulgate, and both Syriac Versions; the Ambrosian Hilary, Jerome (on Philem. r, vir. p. 748), Ohrysostom (expressly), and others.
The internal evidence is considered in the note on the passage, and found to accord with the vast preponderance of external authority in favour of $\gamma \nu \hat{\omega} \tau \epsilon \tau \dot{a} \pi \epsilon \rho \dot{\eta} \mu \hat{\omega} \nu$. The reading of $\leqslant$ by the first hand exhibits a transitional stage. It would appear as though the transcriber intended it and of Io. Damasc. Op. II. p. 214 . The variation $\gamma \nu \hat{\varphi} \tau \dot{\alpha} \pi \epsilon \rho \grave{v} \tilde{v}_{\mu \omega \nu}$ is thus easily explained. (1) $\dot{\eta} \mu \hat{\omega} \nu$ would be accidentally substituted for $\dot{\imath} \mu \hat{\omega} \nu$; (2) $\gamma \nu \omega \bar{\tau} \epsilon$ would then be read $\gamma \nu \hat{\varphi} \tau \epsilon$; (3) the awkward and superfiuous $\tau \epsilon$ would be omitted. In illustration of the tendency to conform the persons of the

${ }^{1}$ It is true that in the text (Spicil.
Solesm. 1. p. 123 , Rab. Menur. Op. vil.
p. 539 , Migne) he is oredited with the later Latin reading ut cognoseat quae circa vos sunt, but his comment implies the other; 'Quoniam omnia vobis nota faciet Tychicus illa quae erga me sunt, propterea a me directus est cum Onesimo fratre qui a vobis venerat, ut nots vobis faciant quae erga nos sunt $[=\gamma \nu \hat{\omega} \tau \epsilon \tau \dot{a} \pi \epsilon \rho i \dot{\eta} \mu \hat{\omega} \nu]$ et oblectent vos per suum adventum omnia quae hic aguntur manifesta facientes vobis.' See Spicil. Solesm. I. o.; the comment is mutilated in Rab. Maur. Op. 1. c.
${ }_{2}$ In the text; but in the commentary he is made to write tua $\gamma \nu \varphi$ रdip, $\phi \eta \sigma l$, $\tau d \quad \pi \epsilon \rho i \quad \dot{\eta} \mu \hat{\omega} \nu$, an impossible reading.
iv. I5. кат oỉkon ait
iv. 15

Nymphas or Nympha? The readings here are:
(1) av่ $\omega \omega \mathcal{L} \& \subset P, 5,9,17,23,34,39,47,73$; together with the Memphitic Version, the Arabic (Lejpz.), and Euthalius (Tischendorf's MS). The Memphitic Version is commonly but wrongly quoted in favour of avirov, owing to a mistranslation of Wilkins. But both Wilkins and Boetticher give without any various reading novнı, i.e. oikov av̇т $\omega \nu$. This seems also to be the reading of Theodore of Mopsuestia (Spic. Solesm. i. p. 133) quae in domo corum est ecclesia; though in Rab. Maur. Op. vi. p. 540 his text runs quas in domo ejus est ecclosiam, and he is made to say Nympham cum omnibus suis qui in domo ejus sunt.
(2) aủचis B $67^{* *}$.
(3) aúrof $\mathrm{D} F \mathrm{G} K \mathrm{~K}$ and the great majority of cursives; and so the Gothic Version, Chrysostom, and Theodoret (the latter distinctly).
The singular, whether aủrov̂ or au่rîs, is the reading of the old Latin and Vulgate, which have ejus, and of the Armenian. The pronoun is also singular in the Peshito and Harclean Syriac. In this language the same consonants express masculine and feminine alike, the difference lying in the pointing and vocalisation. And here the copies are inconsistent with themselves. In the Peshito (both the editio princeps and Schaaf) the proper

The Syrise versions.

The Latin suthorities. is treated as having a masculine affix, xa' aikoy autrov. In the text of the Harclean $\dot{\operatorname{cin}} \boldsymbol{\pi}$ is pointed thus, as a feminine aivins; while the margin itself is written Nympha, which according to the transliteration of this version might stand either for a masculine (as Barnaba, Luka, in the context, for Bapváßar, Aovkâs) or for a feminine (since Demas, Epaphras, are written with an $s)^{1}$. The Latin ejus leaving the gender undetermined, the Latin commentators were free to take either Nymphas or Nympha; and, as Nympha was a common Latin form of $N v{ }^{\prime} \mu \phi \eta$, they would naturally adopt the female name. So the commeutator Hilary distinctly.

It should be added that the word is accentuated as a masculine $\nu \nu \mu \phi$ ay in $D^{\circ} \mathrm{L} P$, and as a feminine $\boldsymbol{\nu} \mu \phi a^{\prime}$ in $\mathrm{B}^{\circ}$ and Euthalius (Tischendorfs M s ).

[^75]
On the meaning of $\pi \lambda \dot{\eta} \rho \omega \mu a$.

Tref verb $\pi \lambda \eta \rho o u ̂ \nu$ has two senses. It signifies either (i) 'To fill', e.g. The mean-accomplish', e.g. Matt. xxvi. 56 iva $\pi \lambda \eta \rho \omega \theta \hat{\omega} \sigma \iota$ ai $\gamma \rho a \not \subset a i$, Rom. xiii. $\delta$ indeed is derived from the former, but practically it has become separate from it. The word occurs altogether about a hundred times in the New Testament, and for every one instance of the former seuse there are at least four of the latter.

In the investigations which have hitherto been made into the significa tion of the derived substantive $\pi \lambda \dot{\lambda} \rho \omega \mu a$, as it occurs in the New Testament, an almost exclusive prominence has been given to the former meaning of the verb; and much confusion has arisen in consequence. The question has been discussed whether $\pi \lambda \dot{\eta} \rho \omega \mu a$ has an active or a passive seuse, whether it describes the filling substance or the filled receptacle: and not unfrequently critics have arrived at the result that different grammatical senses must be attached to it in different passages, even within the limits of the same epistie. Thus it has been maintained that and an active sense 'id quod implet' in Ephes. iii. 19 İva $\pi \lambda \eta \rho \omega \theta \bar{\eta} \tau \epsilon \epsilon i s$ тãy тò $\pi \lambda \dot{\eta} \rho \omega \mu a$ tav̂ $\Theta \epsilon 0 \hat{v}$. Indeed so long as we see in $\pi \lambda \eta \rho o u ̂ \nu$ only the sense 'to fill', and refuse to contemplate the sense 'to complete', it seems impossible to escape from the difficulties which meet us at every turn, otherwise than by assigning to its derivative $\pi \lambda \eta \dot{\prime} \rho \mu \mu$ both an active and a passive sense; but the greatest violence is thas done to the connexion of theological ideas.

Moreover the disregard of lexical rules is not less violent ${ }^{1}$. Substan- and disretives in $-\mu a$, formed from the perfect passive, appear always to have a gard of passive sense. They may denote an abstract notion or a concrete thing; verb $\pi \lambda \eta \rho \circ$ й.

Faise issue raised respecting

$\pi \lambda$ др $\omega \mu a$ they may signify the action itself regarded as complete, or the product of the action; but in any case they give the resull of the agency involved in Meaning the corresponding verb. Such for example are ä $\gamma \gamma \epsilon \lambda \mu a$ 'a message', á $\alpha \mu a$

1 The meaning of this word $\pi \lambda \eta{ }^{\prime} \rho \omega \mu$ is the subject of a paper De vocis $\pi \lambda \eta$. pьرua vario sensu in $N$. I. in Storr's Opusc. Acad. r. p. 144 sq., and of an elam borate note in Fritzsche's Rom. Ir. p. 469 sq . Storr attempts to show that it always has an active sense 'id quod implet' in the New Testament. Fritzsche rightly objects to assigning a persistently active sense to a word which has a directily passive termination: and he himself attributes to it two main senses, 'id quod impletur' and 'id quo res impletar', the latter being the more common. He apparently considers that he has surmounted the difficulties involved in Storr's view, for he speaks of this last as a passive sense, though in fact it is nothing more than 'id quod implet" expressed in other words. In Rom.
 active sense 'legis completio', b.e. 'observatio'.

Apparent exceptions.
$\pi \lambda \eta \dot{\rho} \omega \mu a$ connected with the second sense of $\pi \lambda \eta \rho o \hat{v}$.
 same word will have two meanings, both however passive; it will denote both the completed action and the result or object of the action: e.g. ápтaүнa the 'robbery' or the 'booty', àrà $\lambda \lambda a \gamma \mu a$ the 'exchange' or the 'thing given or taken in exchange', өipervaa the 'hunt' or the 'prey', $\pi \dot{\pi} \boldsymbol{\pi} \eta \mu a$ the 'tread' or the 'carpet', and the like. But in all cases the word is strictly passive; it describes that which might have stood after the active verb, either as the direct object or as the cogmate notion. The apparent exceptions are only apparent. Sometimes this deceptive appearance is in the word itself. Thus кádıuнa ' $a$ veil' seems to denote 'that which cocers', but it is really derived from another sense and construction кад $\dot{\sim} \psi \omega)$, and therefore is strictly passive. Sometimes again we may be led astray by the apparent connesion with the following genitive. Thus in Plut. Mor. $78 \mathrm{E} \delta \dot{\eta} \lambda \omega \mu a$ тov $\pi \rho о к \dot{\sigma} \pi \tau \epsilon \iota \nu$ the word does not mean, as might appear at first sight, 'a thing showing' but 'a thing shown', 'a demonexplain évoct $\frac{1}{\mu \mu a}$ 'a thing proving', but 'a thing proved', 'a proof'. And the same is probably the case also with such expressions as $\sigma v \mu \pi \sigma \sigma i \omega n$ and the like; where the substantives in $-\mu a$ are no more deprived of their passive sense by the connexion, than they are in $\dot{v} \pi \dot{\delta} \dot{\eta} \mu a \operatorname{\pi o\delta } \bar{\omega} \nu \nu$ or $\sigma \tau \rho \hat{\omega} \mu a$ кגiuns; thongh in such instances the license of poetical construction may often lead to a false inferenco. Analogous to this last class of cases is Eur.

 but 'the fulness of the cups, the brimming cups, of Zeus.'

Now if we confine ourselves to the second of the two sonses above ascribcd to $\pi \lambda \eta \rho o \hat{v} \nu$, it seems possible to explain $\pi \lambda \eta \rho^{\prime} \rho \omega \mu$ in the same way, at all erents in all the theological passages of St Paul and St John, without doing any violence to the grammatical form. $\Delta s \pi \lambda \eta \rho o i ̂ \nu$ is ' to complete', so $\pi \lambda \dot{\eta} \rho \omega \mu a$ is 'that which is completed', i.e. the complement', the full tale, the entire number or quantity, the plenitude, the perfection.

This indeed is the primary sense to which its commonest usages in-

Its uses in classical writers.
(I) ' A

ship's

 orew.' classical Greek can be most conveniently referred. Thus it signifies (i) frequent, it is generally explained as having an active force, 'that which fills the ships'; and this very obvious explanation is recommended by the fact that $\pi \lambda \eta \rho o \hat{v} y \nu a \hat{v} \nu$ is a recognised expression for 'manning a ship', e.g.
${ }^{1}$ The English word complement has two distinct senses. It is either (i) the complete set, the entire quantity or number, which satisfies a given standard or cadre, as e.g. the complement of a regiment; or (ii) the number or quantity which, when added to a preexiating number or quantity, produces completeness; as e.g. the complement of an angle, i.e. the angle by which it falls short of being a complete right angle. In other words, it is either the whole or the part. As a theological term, $\pi \lambda$ ирршда corresponds to the first of these two senses; and with this meaning alone the word 'complement' will be used in the following dissertation.
 a ship, but also of the ship which is manned with a crow; e.g. Polyb. i. 49.

 єiरoy $\pi \lambda \eta \rho \omega^{\prime} \mu a r a$; and it is difficult to see how the word could be transferred from the crew to the ship as a whole, if the common explanation were correct. Fritzsche (Rom. Ir. p. 469 sq.), to whom I am chiefly indebted for the passages quoted in this paragraph, has boldly given the word two directly opposite senses in the two cases, explaining it in the one 'ea quibus naves complentur, h.e. vel socii navales vel milites classiarii vel utrique', and in the other 'id quod completur, v.c. navigium'; but this severance of meaning can hardly be maintained. On the other hand, if we suppose that the crew is so called as 'the complement', (i.e. 'not that which fills the ship', but 'that which is itself full or complete in respect of the ship'), we preserfe the passive sense of the word, while at the same time the transference to the fully equipped and manned vessel itself becomes natural. In this sense 'a complement' we have the word used again of an army, тараб $\chi^{\epsilon} \sigma \theta a t$. (2) It sometimes signifies 'the population of a city', Arist. lation.'
 iv. 4, p. i291). Clearly the same idea of completeness underlies this meaniug of the word, so that bere again it signifies 'the complement':

 'the whole body of his friends'. (3) 'The entire sum', Arist. Wesp. 660 amount.'
 total of nearly two thousand talents accrues to us'. (4) 'The full term', term.'
 (5) 'The perfect attainment', ' the full accomplishment', e.g. Philo do Abr. ment.' 46 (ri. p. 39) $\pi \lambda \dot{\eta} \rho \omega \mu a \quad \chi \rho \eta \sigma \tau \hat{\omega} \nu \bar{\jmath} \lambda \pi i \hat{\partial} \omega \nu$. In short the fundamental meaning of the word generally, though perhaps not universally, is neither 'the filling material', nor 'the vessel filled'; but 'that which is complete in itself', or in other words ' plenitude, fulness, totality, abundance'.

In the Gospels the uses of the word present some difficulty. (i) In Use of $\pi \lambda \eta \dot{\eta} \rho \omega \mu a$ need not therefore be equivalent to $\dot{\varepsilon} \pi i \beta \lambda \eta \mu a$ so as to mean the Matt. ix. patch itself, as is often assumed. The following pronoun av่roû is most 16. naturally referred to $\dot{\varepsilon} \pi i \beta \lambda \eta \mu a$; and if so $\pi \lambda \dot{\eta} p \omega \mu a$ describes 'the completeness', which results from the patch. The statement is thus thrown into the form of a direct paradox, the very completeness making the garment more imperfect than before. In the paraliel passage Mark Mark ii. ii. 2 I the variations are numerous, but the right reading seems certainly 21 .

 text omits the preposition before aùrồ, but a glance at the authorities is convineing in favour of its insortion. In this case the construction will be 'The completeness takes away from tho garment, the new completeness

Mark vi． 43.

Mark viii． 20.
of the old garment＇，where the paradox is put still more emphatically．
 yovs \＃入пјю＇jaта，i．e．＇fill＇or＇complete measures＇，where the apposition to кopivous obviates the temptation to explain $\pi \lambda \eta \rho \omega_{\mu} \mu \mathrm{a} a$ as＇ea quae im－ plent＇．On the other hand in Mark viii． $20 \pi \dot{\sigma} \sigma \omega \nu \quad \sigma \pi v \rho i \delta \omega \nu \quad \pi \lambda \eta \rho \omega \mu a \tau a$ $k \lambda a \sigma \mu a ́ t \omega \nu$ グpaтe；this would be the prima facie explanation；comp．
 $\delta \rho \alpha_{\kappa} \omega \nu \mu_{0}{ }_{\chi} \theta o v$ ．But it is objectionable to give an active sense to $\pi \lambda \dot{\eta} \rho \omega \mu \alpha$ under any circumstances；and if in such passages the patch itsclf is meant， it must still be so called，not because it fills the hole，but because it is itself fulness or full measure as regards the defect which needs sup－ plying．

Ussge in St Paul＇s Epistles 1 Cor．$x$. 26.

From the Gospels we pass to the Epistles of St Paul，whose usage bears more directly on our subject．And here the evidence seems all to $\pi \lambda \eta \dot{\eta} \rho \omega \mu a$ avi $\tilde{\eta} s$ it occurs in a quotation from Ps．xxiv（xxiii）．I．The ex－ translation of מלא ，a word denoting primarily＇fulness＇，but having in its secondary uses a considerable latitude of meaning ranging between＇con－ tents＇and＇abondance＇．This last sense seems to predominate in its Greek rendering $\pi \lambda$ rij $\rho \mu a$ ，and indeed the other is excinded altogether in nom．xiii． IO．

Rom．${ }^{2} \mathrm{~V}$ ． 29.

Gal．iv． 4.
Eph．i．ı．$\pi \lambda \eta \rho \omega^{\prime} \mu a \tau o s$ т $\hat{\nu}$ кaup $\hat{\nu}$ ，its force is illustrated by such passages as Mark $\pi \lambda \eta \rho \omega \mu \alpha$ עó $\mu$ ov $\dot{\eta}$ àd $\dot{\alpha} \pi \eta$ ，the best comment on the meaning of the word is here means tho＇completeness＇and so＇fulfilment，accomplishiment＇：see è $\lambda \in \dot{\prime} \sigma \square \mu a$, ，it plainly has the sense of＇fulness，abundance＇．（4）In Gal． that the expressions will mean＇the full measure of the time，the full tale

Rom．xi． 25.

Fom．xi． 12.

General result．

 ber＇，＇the whole body＇，（whether the whole absolutely，or the whole rela－ tively to God＇s purpose），of whom only a part had hitherto been gathered into tho Church．（6）In an earker passage in this chapter the same

 Here the antithesis between $\hat{\eta} \tau \tau \eta \mu a$ and $\pi \lambda \eta j \rho \omega \mu a$ ，＇failure＇and＇fulness＇，is not sufficiently direct to fix the sense of $\pi \lambda \eta{ }^{\prime \prime} \rho \omega \mu a$ ；and（in the absence of anything to guide us in the context）we may fairly assume that it is used in the same sense of the Jews here，as of the Gentiles in ver． 25.

Thus，whatever hesitation may be felt about the exact force of the word as it occurs in the Gospels，yet substantially one meaning runs through all the passages hitherto quoted from St Paul In these $\pi \lambda \dot{\eta} \rho \omega \mu a$ has its proper passive force，as a derivative from $\pi \lambda_{\eta \rho o i n}^{\prime}$＇to make com－ plete＇．It is＇the full complement，the entire measuro，the plenitude，the fulness'. There is therefore a presumption in favour of this meaning in other passages where it occurs in this Apostle's writings.

We now come to those theological passages in the Epistles to the TheologiColossians and Ephesians and in the Gospel of St John, for the sako of cal paswhich this investigation has been undertaken. They are as follows;

sages in

 Xpıбтov̀.

 $\chi$ ápıros.

To these should bo added two passages from the Ignatian Epistles ${ }^{1}$, Ignatius, which as belonging to the confines of the Apostolic age afford valuable illustration of the Apostolic language.

It will be evident, I think, from the passages in St Piaul, that the word The term $\pi \lambda \eta \rho_{\omega \mu}{ }^{\text {' fulness, }}$, plenitude', must have had a more or less definite theological value when he wrote. This inference, which is suggested by the frequency of the word, seems almost inevitable when we consider the form of the expression in the first passage quoted, Col. i. 19. The absolute use of the word, $\pi \hat{a} \nu$ т $\dot{o} \pi \lambda \eta \eta^{\prime} \rho \omega \mu a$ 'all the fulness', would otherwise be unintelligible, for it does not explain itself. In my notes I have taken ó $\theta$ cós to be $\pi \lambda \eta j \rho \omega \mu$, as some suppose, the inference would be still more necessary. The word however, regarded as a theological term, does not appear to have been
${ }^{1}$ The first of the two passages is contained in the short Syriac recension, though loosely translated; the other is wanting there. I need not stop to enquire whather the second was written by Ignatius himself or not. The seven epistles, even if not genuine (as I now believe them to be), can hardily date later than the middle of the gecond centary and are therefore early enough to afford valuable illustrations of the Apostles' language.
${ }^{2}$ The common texts read kal $\pi \lambda \eta \rho \omega^{\prime}-$ $\mu a t c$, but there can be little doubt (from a comparison of the authorities) that sal should be struck out. The present Syriac text has et perfectae for $\pi \lambda \eta \rho \dot{\omega} \mu a \tau t$; but there is no reason for supposing that the Syriae translator had another reading befora him. A slight change in the Syriac,

revorara for relozera,

would bring this version into entire accordance with the Greek; and the confasion was the more easy, because the latter word occurs in the immediate context. Or the translator may have indulged in a paraphrase according to his wont; just as in the longer Latin version $\pi \lambda \eta \rho \dot{\mu} \mu a \tau \iota ~ h e r e$ is translated repletae.
has a recognised value derived from Palestine and not Alexandria.

It denotes the totality of the Divine powers, etc. in the Colossian letter.

Analogy to its usage elsewhere:
e.g.
in Philo, of the family,
and in Aristotle, of the state.
adopted, like so many other expressions in the Apostolic writers ${ }^{1}$, from the nomenclature of Alexandrian Judaism. At least no instance of its occurrence in this sense is produced from Philo. We may therefore conjecture that it had a Palestinian origin, and that the Essene Judaizers of Colosser, whom St Paul is confronting, derived it from this source. In this case it would represent the Hebrew wh, of which it is a translation in the lxu, and the Aramaic תیهیی or some other derivative of the same root, such being its common rendering in the Peshito.

The sense in which St Paul employs this term was doubtless the sense which he found already attached to it. He means, as he explicitly states in the second Christological passage of the Colossian Epistle (ii. 9), the pleroma, the plenitude of 'the Godhead' or 'of Deity'. In the first passage (i. 19), though the word stands without the addition $\tau \hat{\jmath} s$ $\theta \in o ́ r \eta r o s, ~ t h e ~ s i g n i-~$ fication required by the context is the same. The true doctrine of the one Christ, who is the absolute mediator in the creation and government of the world, is opposed to the false doctrine of a plurality of mediators, 'thrones, dominions, principalities, powers'. An absolute and unique position is claimed for Him, because in Him resides 'all the pleroma', i.e. the full complement, the aggregate of the Divine attributes, virtues, energies. This is another way of expressing the fact that He is the Logos, for the Logos is the synthesis of all the various $\delta v y a ́ \mu \epsilon t s$, in and by which God manifests Himself whether in the kingdom of nature or in the kingdom of grace.

This application is in entire harmony with the fundamental meaning of the word. The term has been transferred to the region of theology, but in itself it conveys exactly the same idea as before. It implies that all the several elements which are required to realise the conception specified aro present, and that each appears in its full proportions. Thus Philo, describing the ideal state of prosperity which will result from absolute obedience to God's law, mentions among other blessings the perfect development of the family : 'Men shall be fathers and fathers too of goodly sons, and women shall be mothers of goodly children, so that each household shall be the pleroma of a mumerous kindred, where no part or name is wanting of all those which are used to designate relations, whether in the ascending line, as parents, uncles, grandfathers, or again in the descending line in like manner, as brothers, nephews, sons' sons, daughters' sons, cousins, cousins' sons, kinsmen of all degrees ${ }^{2}$.' So again Aristotle, criticizing the Republic of Plato, writes; 'Socrates says that a city (or state) is composed of four classes, as its indispensable elements ( $\boldsymbol{r} \boldsymbol{\omega} \nu$ ávayкauofát $\omega \nu$ ): by these he means the weaver, the husbandman, the shoemaker, and the builder; and again, because these are not sufficient by themselves, he adds the smith and persons to look after the necessary cattle, and besides them the merchant and the retail dealer: these together make up the pleroma of a

${ }^{1}$ See the notes on Col. i. 15 sq.
${ }^{2}$ de Praem. et Poen. 18 (II. p. 425). The important words are is étкaбтov

[^76]thus he assumes that a city is formed to supply the bare necessities of life ( $\quad \bar{\omega} \nu \dot{\nu} \nu a \gamma к a i \omega \nu \chi \alpha^{\prime} \rho \iota \nu$ ) etc.'. From these passages it will be seen that the adequacy implied by the word, as so used, consists not less in the variety of the elements than in the fulness of the entire quantity or number.

So far the explanation seems clear. But when we turn from the Colos- Transition sian letter to the Ephesian, it is necessary to bear in mind the different aims of the two epistles. While in the former the Apostle's main object is to assert the supremacy of the Person of Christ, in the latter his prin-from Colossians to Ephesians. cipal theme is the life and energy of the Church, as dependent on Christ? ${ }^{\text {? }}$ So the pleroma residing in Christ is viewed from a different aspect, no longer in relation to God, so much as in relation to the Church. It is that Correplenitude of Divine graces and virtues which is communicated through sponding Christ to the Church as His body. The Church, as ideally regarded, the bride 'without spot or wrinkle or any such thing', becomes in a manner identified with $\mathrm{Him}^{3}$. All the Divine graces which reside in Him are to the imparted to her; His 'fulness' is communicated to her: and thus she may Ohurch. be said to be His pleroma (i. 23). This is the ideal Church. The actual militant Church must be ever advancing, ever struggling towards the attainment of this ideal. Hence the Apostle describes the end of all offices and administrations in the Church to be that the collective body may attain its full and mature growth, or (in other words) may grow up to the complete stature of Christ's fulness'. But Christ's fulness is God's fulness. Hence in another passage he prays that the brethren may by the indwelling of Christ be fulfilled till they attain to the pleroma of God (iii. 19). It is another way of expressing the continuous aspiration and effort after haliness which is enjoined in our Lord's precept, 'Ye shall be perfect as your heavenly Father is perfect's.

The Gospel of St Johu, written in the first instance for the same Gospel of churches to which the Epistle to the Ephesians was sent, has numerous and St Johm. striking points of resemblance with St Paul's letter. This is the case here. As St Paul tells the Ephesians that the ideal Chureh is the pleroma of Christ and that the militant Church musit strive to become the pleroma of Christ, so St John (i. 14 sq .) after describing our Lord as povoyevís, i.e. the unique and absolute representative of the Father, and as such 'full ( $\pi \lambda \lambda^{\prime} \rho \eta \mathrm{s}$ ) of grace and of truth', says that they, the disciples, had 'received out of His pleroma' ever fresh accessions of grace. Each indi-

[^77]these varions partial graces bestowed on individuals to be the unity and mature growth of the whole, 'the building up of the body', $\mu \in \chi \rho i$ кarav-т $\lambda \eta \rho \omega \mu a t o s$ тоv̂ Xptotov̂. This corporate being must grow up into the one colossal Man, the standard of whose spiritual and moral stature is nothing less than the pleroma of Christ Himzelf.

${ }^{5}$ Matt. v. 48.
vidual believer in his degree reeeives a fraction of that pleroma which is oommunicated whole to the ideal Church.

Gnostic sects.

The $\mathrm{Ce}-$ rinthians.

The use of the word is not very different in the Ignatian letters. St Ignatius greets this same Ephesian Church, to which St Paul and St John sucoessively here addressed the language already quoted, as 'blessed in greatness by the pleroma of God the Father', i. e. by graces imparted from the pleroma. To the Trallians again he sends a greeting 'in the pleroma', where the word denotes the sphere of Divine gifts and operations, so

When we turn from Catholic Christianity to the Gnostic sects we find this term used, though (with one important exception) not in great frequency. Probably however, if the writings of the earlier Gnostics had been preserved, we should have found that it occupied a more important place than at present appears. One class of early Gnostics separated the siniritual being Christ from the man Jesus; they supposed that the Christ entered Jesus at the time of His baptism and left him at the moment of His crucifixion. Thus the Christ was neither born as a man nor suffered as a man. In this way they obviated the diffeulty, insuperable to the Gnostic mind, of couceiving the connexion between the highest spiritual agency and gross corporeal matter, which was involved in the Catholic doctrine of the Incarnation and Passion, and which Gnostics of another type more effectually set aside by the theory of docetism, i.e. by assuming that the human body of our hord was only a phantom body and not real flesh and blood. Irenæus represents the former class as teaching that 'Jesus was the receptacle of the Christ', and that the Christ 'descended upon him from heaven in the form of a dove and after He had declared (to mankind) the nameless Father, entered (again) into the pleroma imperceptilly and invisibly'. Here no names are given. But in another passage he ascribes precisely the same doctrine, without however naming the pleroma, to Cerinthus ${ }^{2}$. And in a third passage, which links together the other two, this same father, after mentioning this heresiarch, again alludes to the doctrine which maintained that the Christ, having descended on Jesus at his baptism, 'flew back again into His own pleroma'3. In this last passage indeed the opinions of Cerinthus are men-

1 iii. r6. r 'Quoniam autem sunt qui dicunt Iesum quidem receptacnlum Christi fuisse, in quem desuper quasi columbam descendisse, et quum indicasset innominabilem Patrem, incomprehensibiliter et invisibiliter intrasse in pleroma'.
2i. 26. I 'post baptismum descendisse in eum ab ea principalitate, quae est saper omnia, Christum figura columbse; et tunc annuntiasse incognitum Patrem et virtutes perfecisse: in fine autem revolasse iterum Christum do Iesu et Iesum passum esse et resurrexisse, etc.'
${ }^{\text {B }}$ iii. II. I 'iterom revolasse in suum pleroma. This expression is the connecting link between the other two passages. This third passage is quoted more at length above, p. if2. In this passage however the reference of illi in 'quemadmodum illi diennt' is doubtful. Several critics refer it to the Valentinians, and certainly some characteristic errors of the Falentinian teaching are specified immediately after. The probable explanation seems to be that it is intended to include the Gnostics generally, and that Irenœus mentions in inlustration the principal errors of Gnostic teaching, irrespective of the schools to which tioned in connexion with those of other Gnostics, more especially the Valentinians, so that we cannot with any certainty attribute this expression to Cerinthus himself. But in the first passige the unnamed heretics who maintained this return of the Christ 'into the pleroma' are expressly distinguished from the Valentinians; and presumably therefore the allusion is to the Cerinthians, to whom the doctrine, though not the expression, is ascribed in the second passage. Thus there seems to be sufficient reason Connexion for attributing the use of the term to Cerinthns. This indeed is probable of this use on other grounds. The term pleroma, we may presume, was common to St Paul and the Colossian heretics whom he controverts. To both alike it conveyed the same idea, the totality of the divine powers or attributes or agencies or manifestations. But after this the divergence begins. They maintained that a single divine power, a fraction of the pleroma, resided in our Lord: the Apostle urges on the contrary, that the whole pleroma has its abode in $\mathrm{Him}^{2}$. The doctrine of Cerinthus was a development of the Colossian heresy, as I have cndeavoured to show above ${ }^{3}$. He would therefore inherit the term pleroma from it. At the same time he The pleseems to have given a poetical colouring to his doctrine, and so doing to have treated the pleroma as a locality, a higher spiritual region, from which this divine power, typified by the dove-like form, issued forth as on wings, and to which, taking flight again, it reascended before the Passion. If so, his language would prepare the way for the still more elaborate poetic imagery of the Valentinians, in which the pleroma, conceived as a locality, a region, an abode of the divine powers, is conspicuous.

The attitude of later Gnostics towards this term is widely divergent. The term The word is not, so far as I am aware, once mentioned in connexion with avoided by the system of Basilides. Indeed the nomenclature of this heresiarch be- Basilides, longs to a wholly different type; and, as he altogether repudiated the doctrine of emanations ${ }^{4}$, it is not probable that he would have any fondness for a term which was almost inextricably entangled with this doctrine.

On the other hand with Valentinus and the Falentinians the doctrine but promiof the pleroma was the very key-stone of their system; and, since at first sight it is somewhat difficult to connect their use of the term with St Paul's, a few words on this subject may not be out of place.

Valentinus then dressed his system in a poetic imagery not unlike the Poetio teaching they belong. He goes on to say that St John in his Gospel desired to exclude 'omnia talia'.
${ }^{1}$ I have not been able however to verify the statement in Harvey's Irenaus I. p. Ixxiii that 'The Valentinian notion of a spiritual marriage between the souls of the elect and the angels of the Pleroma originated with Ce sinthus'.
${ }^{2}$ See p. 101 sq. , and the notes on i. 19 .
${ }^{3}$ p. 107 sq.

 रeroustur oúalas ó Bacdelóns. Basilides asked why the absolute First Cause showld be likened to a spider spinning threads from itself, or a smith or carpenter working up his materiais. The later Basilideans, apparently influenced by Valentinianism, superadded to the teaching of their founder in this respect; but the strong langrage quoted by Hippolytus leaves no doubt about the mind of Basilides himself.
of Valen－ tinus．

Topogra－ phical conception of the ple． roma． Antithesis of pleroma and leno－ ma．

Pleroma

the abode of the来石的，

Different forms of Valenti－ nianism． myths of his master Plato．But a myth or story involves action，and action requires a scone of action．Hence the mysteries of theology and cosmogony and rodemption call for a topographical representation，and the pleroma appears not as an abstract idea，but as a locality．

The Valentinian system accordingly maps out the universe of things into two great regions，called respectively the pleroma and the lenoma， the＇fulness＇and the＇void＇．From a Christian point of view these may be described as the kingdoms of light and of darkness respectively．From the side of Platonism，they are the regions of real and of phenomenal existences－the world of eternal archetypes or ideas，and the world of material and sensible things．The ideatification of these two antitheses was rendered easy for the Gnostic ；because with lim knowledge was one with morality and with salvation，and because also matter was absolutely bound up with evil．It is dificult to say whether the Platonism or the Christianity predominates in the Valentinian theology；but the former at all events is especially prominent in their conception of the relations between the pleroma and the kenoma．

The pleroma is the abode of the $\nrightarrow 0 n s$ ，who are thirty in number． These सlons are successive emanations，of which the first pair sprang im－ mediately frons the preexistent Bythus or Depth．This Bythus is deity in itself，the absolute first principle，as the name suggests；the profound， unfathomable，limitless，of whom or of which nothing can be predicated and nothing known．Here again we have something like a local repre－ scntation．The $\not \pm o n s$ or emanations are plainly the attributes and energies of deity；they are，or they comprise，the eternal ideas or archetypes of the Platonic philosophy．In short they are deity relative，deity under self－ imposed limitations，deity derived and divided up，as it were，so as at length to be conceivable．

The topographical relation of Bythus to the derived Fions was dif－ ferently given in different developments of the Valentinian teaching． According to one representation he was outside the pleroma；others placed his abode within it，but even in this case he was separated from the rest by Horus（＂Opos），a personified Boundary or Fence，whom none，not even the Alons themselves，could pass ${ }^{1}$ ．The former mode of representa－
${ }^{1}$ For the various modes in which the relation of the absolute first prin－ ciple to the pleroma was represented in different Valentinian schools，see Iren．i．I．т，i．2．4，i．If．I，3，5，i．i2． $r$ ，ete．The main distinction is that stated in the text；the first principle was represented in two ways；either （i）as a monad，outside the pleroma； or（ii）as a dyad，a syzygy，most com－ monly under the designation of Butds and $\Sigma(y n$, ，included within the pleroma but fenced off from the other wons． The Valentinian doctrine as given by Hippolytus（vi，29 sq．）represents the former type．There are good，though perkaps not absolutely decisive，rea－ sons for supposing that this father gives the original teaching of Valentinus himself．For（r）this very doctrine of the monad seems to point to an earlier date．It is the link which connects the system of Valemtinus not only with Pythagoramism to which（as Hippolytus points out）he was so largely indebted，but also with the teaching of the earlier heresiarch Ba － silides，whose first principle likewise was a monad，the absolute nothing， the non－existent God．The conception tion might be thought to accord better with the imagery, at the same time that it is more accurate if regarded as the embodiment of a philosophical conception. Nevertheless the latter was the favourite mode of delineation; and it had at least this recommendation, that it combined in one all that is real, as opposed to all that is phenomenal. In this pleroma every existence which is suprasensual and therefore true has its abode.

Separated from this celestial region by Horus, another Horus or Kenoma, Boundary, which, or who, like the former is impassable, lies the 'kenoma' the region or 'void'-the kingdom of this world, the region of matter and material things, the land of shadow and darkness ${ }^{1}$. Here is the empire of the Demiurge or Creator, who is not a celestial AFon at all, but was born in this very void over which he reigns. Here reside all those phenomenal, deceptive, transitory things, of which the eternal counterparts are found only in the pleroma.

It is in this antithesis that the Platonism of the Valentinian theory Platonism reaches its climax. All things are set off one against another in these two of this anregions ${ }^{2}$ : just as tithesis.

The swan on still St Mary's lake Floats double, swan and shadow.

Not only have the thirty Alons their terrestrial counterparts; but their subdivisions also are represented in this lower region. The kenoma too has its ogdoad, its decad, its dodecad, like the pleroma ${ }^{3}$. There is one Sophia in the supramundane region, and another in the mundane; there is one Christ who redeems the ENons in the spiritual world, and a second Christ who redeems mankind, or rather a portion of mankind, in the sensible world. There is an Eon Man and another Allon Ecclesia in the celestial kingdom, the ideal counterparts of the Human Race and the Christian Church in the terrestrial. Even individual men and women, as we shall see presently, lave their archotypes in this higher sphere of intelligible being.
of the first principle as a dyad seems to have been a later, and not very happy, modification of the doctrine of the founder, being in fact an extension of the principle of syzygies which Ya . lentinus with a truer philosophical conception had restricted to the derived essences. (2) The exposition of Hippolytus throughout exhibits as system at once more consistent and more simple, than the laxuriant developments of the later Valentinians, such as Ptolemeus and Marcus. (3) The sequence of his statement points to the same conclusion. He gives a consecutive account of some one system, turning aside from time to time to notioe the variations of different Valentinian sehools from this standard and again resuming the main thread of his exposition. It seems most natural therefore that he should have taken the system of the founder as his pasis. On the other hand Irenæus (i. II. I) states that Valentinus represented the first principle as a dyad there is no evidence that he had any direct or indirect knowledge of the writings of Valentinus himself, and his information was derived from the later disciples of the school, more especially from the Ptolemæans.
${ }^{1}$ Iren. i. 4. I, 2, ii. 3. 1 , ii. 4. r, 3, ii. 5. 1, ii. 8. I-3, ii. 14. 3, iii. 25 . 6, 7 , etc.
${ }^{2}$ Iren. i. 6. 3, i. 7. I sq., ii. 14 3, ii. 15.3 sq., ii. 20.5 ii. 30.3 , etc.
${ }^{3}$ Iren. i. 5. 2, ii. 14. 3; comp. Hippol. vi. 34 .

The locali－ sation of the plero－ ma carried out in de－ tail．

The con－ nexion with St Prul＇s ase of the term obscured， owing partly to the false antithesis $\kappa \in \nu \omega \mu a$

The topographical conception of the pleroma moreover is carried out in the details of the imagery．The second Sophia，called also Achamoth，is the desire，the offspring，of her elder namesake，separated from her mother，cast out of the pleroma，and left＇stranded＇in the void beyond＇， being prevented from returning by the inexorable Horus who guards the frontier of the supramundano kingdom．The second Christ－a being com－ pounded of elements contributed by all the 巴lons ${ }^{2}$－was sent down from the pleroma，first of all at the eve of creation to infuse something like order and to provide for a spiritual element in this lower world；and secondly， when He united Himself with the man Jesus for the sale of redeeming those who were capable of redemption ${ }^{3}$ ．At the end of all things Sophia Achamoth，and with her the spiritual portion of mankind，shall be redeemed and received up into tho pleroma，while the psychical portion will be left outsido to form another kingdom under the dominion of their father the Demiurge．This redemption and ascension of Achamoth（by a perversion of a scriptural image）was represented as her espousals with the Saviour，the second Christ；and the pleroma，the scene of this happy union，was called the bridal－chamber ${ }^{4}$ ．Indeed the localisation of the pleroma is as complete as language can make it．The constant repetition of the words＇within＇ and＇without＇，＇above＇and＇beneath＇，in the development of this philoso－ phical and religious myth still further impresses this local sense on the term ${ }^{5}$ ．

In this topographical representation the connexion of meaning in the word pleroma as employed by St Paul and by Valentinus respectively seems at first sight to be entirely lost．When we read of the contrast be－ tween tho pleroma and the kenoma，tho fulness and the void，we are naturally reminded of the plenum and the oacuum of physical specula－ tions．The sense of pleroma，as expressing completeness and so denoting the aggregate or totality of the Divine powers，seems altogether to hato disappeared．But in fact this antithesis of $火 \in \nu \omega \mu a$ was，so far as we can make out，a mere afterthought，and appears to have been borrowed，as Ironæus states，from the physical theorics of Democritus and Epicuras ${ }^{6}$ ． It would naturally suggest itself both because the opposition of $\pi \lambda j \rho \eta s$ and kevos was obvions，and because the word кevopa materially assisted the imagery as a description of the kingdom of waste and shadow．But in ${ }^{2}$ Iren．i．4． 1 入érovocy tep okiaîs
 otac к．т．$\lambda$ ．The Greek ms reads kal $\sigma \kappa \eta \nu \dot{\omega} \mu a r o s$, but the rendering of the early Latin translation＇in umbrae ［et？］vacuitatis locis＇leaves no doubt about the word in the original text． Tertullian says of this Achamoth（adv． Falent．14）＇＇explosa est in loca lu－ minis aliena．．．in vacuum atque inane illud Epicuri＇．See note 6.
${ }^{2}$ Iren．i．2． 6 ，Hippol．vi． 32.
3 They quoted，as referring to this descent of the second Christ into the kenoma，the words of St Paul，Phil．
 Theod． 35 （p． 978 ）．
${ }^{4}$ Iren．i．7．I kal tô̂тo eipat $\nu v \mu$－
 $\pi \lambda \dot{\eta} \rho \omega \mu$ ：comp．Hippol．vi． $34 \dot{\text { ó } \nu \nu \mu-~}$ фícs aútグs．
${ }^{5}$ This language is so frequent that special references are needless．In Iren．ii．5． 3 we have a still stronger expression，＇in ventre pleromatis＇．

6 Iren．ii．14． 3 ＇Jmbram antem et vacuum ipsorum a Demoorito et Epi－ curo sumentes sibimetipsis aptaverunt， quam illi primum multum sermonem fecarint de racuo et de atomis＇．
italf it is a false antithesis. The true antithesis appears in anothor, and borrowed probably an earlier, term used to describe the mundane kiigdom. In this earlier representation, which there is good reason for aseribing to Valen-ciency, incompleteness ${ }^{31}$. Moreover the common phraseology of the appears in Valentinian schools shows that the idea suggested by this opposition to $\kappa^{\prime} v \omega \mu a$ was not the original idea of the term. They speak of $\tau \grave{̀} \pi \lambda \dot{p} \rho \omega \mu a$ $\tau \hat{\nu} \nu{ }^{1} \dot{\omega} \nu \omega \nu$, $\tau \dot{\delta} \pi \hat{a} \nu \pi \lambda \eta \dot{\eta} \rho \omega \mu a \tau \hat{\omega} \nu$ à $\omega \nu \omega \nu$, 'the whole agyregate of the सons ${ }^{\prime 2}$. And this (making allowance for the personification of the 太ons) corresponds exactily to its use in St Paul.

Again the teaching of the Valentinian schools supplies other uses The origiwhich serve to illustrate its meaning. Not only does the supramundane kingdom as a whole bear this name, but each separate $\not$ Eon, of which that kingdom is the aggregation, is likewise called a pleroma ${ }^{3}$. This designation is given to an clon, because it is the fulmess, the perfection, of whieh its mundane counterpart is only a shadory and defective copy. Nor does the narrowing of the term stop here. There likewise dwells in this higher region a pleroma, or eternal archetype, not only of every comprehensive mundane power, but of each individual man; and to wed himself with this heavenly partner, this Divine ideal of himself, must be the study of his life. InterpreThe profound moral significance which underlies the exaggerated Platonism and perverse exegesis of this conception will be at once apparent. But the manner in which the theory was carried out is curionsly illustrated by the commentary of the Valentinian Heracleon on our Lord's discourse with the Samaritan woman ${ }^{4}$. This woman, such is his explana-between the $\pi \lambda \dot{\eta} \rho \omega \mu a$ and $v \sigma \tau \epsilon \rho \eta \mu a)$.

 р'́paros aldyyuv. Irenæus represents the Marcosians as designating the Demi-
 I, ii. praft. 1, ii. r. I (comp. i. 14. I). This was perhaps intended originally as an antithesis to the name of the Christ, who was карпds $\pi \lambda \eta p \dot{c}^{\prime} \mu a \tau o s$. The Marcosiains however apparently meant Sophia Achamoth by this iov $\epsilon$ $\rho \eta \mu a$. This transference from the whole to the part would be in striet accordance with their terminology: for as they calted the sapramundane mons $\pi \lambda \eta \rho \dot{\mu} \mu \boldsymbol{\tau} \alpha$ (Iren. i. 14. 2, 5 ; quoted in Hippol. vi. 43, 46), so also by analogy they might designate the mundane powers ї $\sigma \tau \epsilon \rho \eta_{\mu} \mu \mathrm{ta}$ (comp. Iret. i. 16. 3). The term, as it occurs in the document used by Hippolytas, plainly denotes the whole mundane region.

Hippolytus does not use the word кep $\nu \mu \mu$, though so common in Irenaus. This fact seems to point to the earlier date of the Valentinian document which he rises, and so to bear out the result arrived at in a previous note (p. 266) that we have here $a$ work of Valentinus himself. The word $\dot{v} \sigma \tau$ t$\rho \eta \mu \alpha$ appears also in Exc. Theod. 22 (p. 974).

2 e.g. Hippol. vi. 34 , Iren. i. 2. 6. See especially Iren. ii. 7. 3 'Quoniam enim pleroma ipsoram triginta Aeones sunt, ipsi testantur ${ }^{3}$.
${ }^{3}$ See the passages from Irenæus quoted above, note 1 ; comp. Exc. Theod. $3^{2}, 33$ ( p .977 ). Similarly $\lambda$ ćzoc is a synonym for the 居ons, 975).
${ }^{4}$ Heracleon in Orig. in Yoann. xiii, iv. p. 205 sq . The passages are collected in Stieren's Trenæus p. 947 sq. See sical physical philosophers; but reappears in mon phraseology.

tion, belongs to the spiritual portion of mankind. But she had had six ${ }^{1}$ husbands, or in other words she had entangled herself with the material world, had defiled herself with sensuous things. The husband however, whom she now has, is not her husband; herein she has spoken rightly: the Saviour in fact means 'her partner from the pleroma'. Hence she is bidden to go and call him; that is, sho must find 'her pleroma, that coming to the Saviour with him (or it), she may be able to obtain from Him the power and the union and the combination with her pleroma' (rì $\nu$ adds Heracleon, "He did not speak of a mundane ( $\kappa \sigma \sigma \mu \mu \kappa \bar{v}$ ) husband when He told her to call him, since He was not ignorant that she had no lawful husband'.

Falentinians accept St Paul and St John, and quote them in sapport of their views.

Impossible as it seems to us to reconcile the Valentinian system with the teaching of the Apostles, the Valentinians themselves felt no such difficulty. They intended their philosophy not to supersede or contradict the Apostolic doctrine, but to supplement it and to explain it on philosophical principles. Hence the Canon of the Valentinians comprehended the Canon of Catholic Christianity in all its essential parts, though some Valentinian schools at all events supplemented it with Apocryphal writings. More particularly the Gospel of St John and the Epistles to the Colossians and Ephesians were regarded with especial favour ; and those passages which speak of the pleroma are quoted more than once in their writings to illustrate their teaching. By isolating a few words from the context and interpreting them wholly without reference to their setting, they had no difficulty in finding a confrmation of their views, where we see only an incongruity or even a contradiction. For instance, their second Christ-the redeemer of the spiritual element in the mundane world-was, as we saw, compacted of gifts contributed by all the Nons of the pleroma. Hence he was called 'the common fruit of the pleroma', 'the fruit of all the pleroma', 'the most perfect beauty and constellation of the pleroma's; hence $\pi є \rho l \dot{a} \nu \delta \rho \delta s, \phi \eta \sigma$, коб $\mu<\kappa о \hat{u}$ єौ $\lambda \in \gamma \in \nu . . .$.

 juroy. Lower down Heracleon says last expression $I$ suppose he means that the great xon Man of the Ogdoad, the eternal archetype of mankind, comprises in itself archetypes correspoading to each individual man and woman, not indeed of the whole human race (for the Valentinian would exclude the psychicol and carnal portion from any participation in this higher region) but of the spiritual portion thereof.
${ }^{1}$ Origen expressly states that Heraoleon read $\stackrel{y}{\xi}$ for $\pi \dot{v} v \tau$. The number six was supposed to symbolize the material creatare; see Heracleon on 'the forty and six years' of John ii. 20 (Stieren p. 947). There is no reason to think that Heracleon falsified the text here; he appears to have found this various reading already in his copy.
${ }_{2}$ The expression is ó kotvos $\tau 00 \pi \lambda \eta$ p山́uatos кapтòs in Hippolytas vi. 32, 34, 36 (pp. 190, 19r, 192, 193, Ј96). In Irenæus i. 8. 5 it is карлоेs тaptòs то仑 тлұоы́ратоя.

a'so he was designated "All' ( $\pi \bar{a} v)$ and 'All things' ( $\pi \dot{a} v a \alpha)^{\text {t }}$. Accordinglr, to this second Christ, not to the first, they applied these texts; Col. iii. I I 'And He is all things', Rom. xi. $36^{\text {'All things are unto Him and from Him }}$ are all things', Col. ii. 9 'In Him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead', Ephes. i. ro 'To gather together in one all things in Christ through God'a. So too they styled lim Evioóontas, with a reference to Col. i. 19, becauso 'all the pleroma was pleased through Him to glorify the Father's. And inasmuch as this second Christ was according to the Falentinian theory instrumental in the creation of the mundane powers, they quoted, or rather misquoted, as referring to this participation in the work of the Demiurge, the passage Col. i. 16 ' In Him were created all things, visible and invisible, thrones, deities, dominions'4. Indeed it seems clear that these adaptations were not always afterthoughts, but that in several instances at least their nomenclature was originally chosen for the sake of fitting the theory to isolated phrases and expressions in the Apostolic writings, however much it might conflict with the Apostolic doctrine in its main lines ${ }^{5}$.

The heretics called Docetae by Hippolytus have no connexion with Use of the docetism, as it is generally understood, i.e. the tenet that Christ's body was not real flesh and blood, but merely a phantom body. Their views on this point, as represented by this father, are wholly different ${ }^{6}$. Of their system generally nothing need be said here, except that it is largely saturated with Valentinian ideas and phrases. F'rom the Valentinians they evidently borrowed their conception of the pleroma, by which they understood the argregate, or (as localised) the abode, of the Nons. With them, as with the Valentinians, the Saviour is the common product of all the Eons ${ }^{7}$; and in speaking of him they echo a common Valentinian phrase 'the pleroma of the entire ※ons's.

The Ophite heresy, Proteus-like, assumes so many various forms, that and by the skill of critics has beon taxed to the utmost to bind it with cords two Ophite and extract its story from it. It appears however from the notices of Hippolytus, that the tern pleroma was used in a definite theological sense by at least two branches of the seet, whom he calls Naassenes and Peratae.

Of the Naassenes Hippolytus tells us that among other images bor- (i) Naasrowed from the Christian and Jewish Scriptures, as well as from heathen senes. poetry, they described the region of true knowledge-their kingdom of $\dot{v} \pi \varepsilon \rho \mathcal{U}^{\psi} \psi \omega \sigma \in \boldsymbol{\prime}$ к. т. $\lambda$. (the last words being taken from Phil. ii. 9 sq .).

[^78]
5 Thus they interpreted Ephes. iii.
 al $\omega v \omega y$ as referring to their generated æons: Iren. i. 3. I. Similar is the use which they made of expressions in the opening chapter of St John, where they found their first Ogdoad described: ib. i. 8 . 5 .

[^79]heaven, which was entered by initiation into their mysteries-as the land flowing with milk and honey, 'which when the perfect (the true Gnostics, the fully initiated) have tasted, they are frecd from subjection to kings ( $\boldsymbol{i} \beta$ uбidéroos) and partake of the pleroma.' Here is a plain allusion to Joh. i. 16. 'This', the anonymous Naassene writer goes on to say, 'is the pleroma, through which all created things coming into being are produced and fulfilled ( $\pi \in \pi \lambda \dot{\eta} \rho \omega \tau a l$ ) from the Uncreated ${ }^{\prime \prime}$. Here again, as in the Valentinian systcm, the conception of the pleroma is strongly tinged with Platonism. The pleroma is the region of ideas, of archetypes, which intervenes between the author of creation and the material world, and communicates their specific forms to the phenomenal existences of the latter.
(ii)Peratas. The theology of the second Ophite sect, the Peratae, as desoribed by Hippolytus, is a strange phenomenon. They divided the universe into

Their theology
and corresponding application of $\boldsymbol{\pi} \lambda \boldsymbol{\eta} \rho \boldsymbol{\rho} \mu \boldsymbol{\alpha}$. three regions, the uncreate, the self-create, and the created. Again the middle region may be said to correspond rouglly to the Platonic kingdom of ideas. But their conception of deity is entirely their own. They postulate three of every being; three Gods, three Words, threo Minds (i.e. as we may suppose, three Spirits), three Men. Thus thore is a God for each region, just as there is a Man. In fall accordance with this perverse and abnormal theology is their application of St Paul's language. Their Christ has three natures, belonging to these three kingdoms respectively; and this completencss of His being is implied by St Paul in Col. i. 19 , ii. 9 , which passages are combined in their looso quotation or paraphrase, 'All the pleroma was pleased to dwell in him bodily, and there is in him all the godhead', i.e. (as Hippolytus adds in explanation) 'of this altogether arbitrary, having no relation whatever to the theological meaning of the term in St Paul. It is also an entire departure from the conception of the Cerinthians, Valentinians, and Naassenes, in which this meaning, however obscured, was not altogrether lost. These three heresies took a horizontal section of the universe, so to speak, and applied the term as coextensive with the supramundane stratum. The Peratae on the other hand divided it vertically, and the pleroma, in their interpretation of the text, denoted the whole extent of this vertical section. There is nothing in common between the two applications beyond the fundamental meaning of the word, 'completeness, totality'.

Pistis Sophia.

Frequent use of the term.

The extant Guostic work, called Pistis Sophia, was attributed at one time on insufficient grounds to Valentinus. It appears however to exlibit a late development of Ophitism ${ }^{3}$, far more Christian and less heathen in its character than those already considered. In this work the word pleroma occurs with tolerable frequency; but its meaning is not easily fixed. Early in the treatise it is said that the disciples supposed a certain 'mystery', of which Jesus spoke, to be 'the end of all the ends' and 'the head ( $\kappa \leqslant ф$ a $\lambda^{\prime} \nu$ ) of the Universe' and 'the whole pleroma'4. Here we seem to hare an allusion to the Platonic kingdom of ideas, [^80]i.e. of intelligible being, of absolute truth, as reproduced in the Valentinian pleroma. And the word is used sometimes in connexion with the completeness of revelation or the perfection of knowledge. Thus our Lord is represented as saying to His disciples, 'I will tell you the whole mystery and the whole pleroma, and I will conceai nothing from you from this hour; and in perfection will I perfect you in every pleroma and in every perfection and in every mystery, which things are the perfection*of all the perfections and the pleroma of all the pleromas'. Elsewhere however Mary, to whom Jesus is represented as making some of His chief revelations, is thus addressed by Him; 'Blessed art thou above ( $\pi a \rho a \mathfrak{)}$ all women that are on the earth, for thou shalt be pleroma of all the pleromas and perfection of all the perfections', where the word must be used in a more general sense.

One heresy still remains to be noticed in connexion with this word. Monoimus Hippolytus has proserved an account of the teaching of Monoimus the the AraArabian, of whom previously to the discovery of this father's treatise we bian. knew little more than the name. In this strange form of heresy the absolute first principle is the uncreate, imperishable, eternal Man. I need not stop to enquire what this statement means. It is sufficient for the present purpose to add that this oternal Man is symbolized by the letter x , the 'one iota', the 'one tittle' of the Gospel'; and this I , as representing the number ten, includes in itself all the units from one to mine. 'This', added Monoimus, 'is (meant by) the saying (of scripture) All the pleroma was pleased to dwoll upon the Son of Man bodily's. Here tho original idea of the word as denoting completeness, totality, is still preserved.

[^81]parently in the sense of 'completion'.
${ }^{3}$ Matt. v. 18.
${ }^{4}$ R. H. viii. 13.

The Epistle from Laodicea ${ }^{1}$.

Different theories classified.

The different opinions respecting the epistle thus designated by St Paul, which have been held in ancient or modern times, will be seen from the following table;

1. An Epistle written by the Laodiceans; to
(a) St Paul;
( $\beta$ ) Epaphras;
( $\gamma$ ) Colosse.
2. An Epistle written by St Paul from Laodicea.
(a) 1 Tlimothy;
( $\beta$ ) ix Thessalonians;
( $\gamma$ ) 2 Thessalonians;
(8) Galatians.
3. An Epistle addressed to the Laodiceans by
(a) St John (the First Epistle);
(b) Some companion of St Paul (Epaphras or Luke);
(c) St Paul himself;
(i) A lost Epistle.
(ii) One of the Canonical Epistles.
(a) Hebrews;
(B) Philemon;
( $\gamma$ ) Ephesians.
(iii) The Apocryphal Epistle.

In this mare of conflicting hypotheses we might perhaps be tempted to despair of finding our way and give up the search as hopeless. Yet I vonture to think that the true identification of the epistle in question is not, or at least ought not to be, doubtful.
r. An epistle written b the Laodiceans.
Adrocates of this theory.
I. The opinion that the epistle was addressed by the Laodiceans to St Paul, and not conversely, found much support in the age of the Greek commentators. It is mentioned by St Chrysostom as held by 'some persons', though he himself does not pronounce a definite opinion on the subject? It is eagerly advocated by Theodore of Mopsuestia. He supposes that the letter of the Laodiceans contained some reflexions on the Colossian Church, and that St Paul thought it good for the Colossians to hear

[^82]elaborate, is less satisfactory. $\Delta$ later monograph by A. Sartori, Ueber den Laodicenserbrief(Labeck 1853), is much slighter and contribates nothing new.

 kelas.
what their neighbours said of them ${ }^{3}$. Theodoret, though not mentioning Theodore by name, follows in his footsteps ${ }^{2}$. The same opinion is also expressed in a note ascribed to Photius in the CEcumenian Catena. This view seems to have been very widely entertained in ancient times. It possibly underlies the Latin Version 'ea qua Laodicensium est'3: it is distinctly expressed in the rendering of the Peshito, 'that which was written by the Laodiceans'4. At a more recent date too it found great favour. It was adopted on the one hand by Calvin ${ }^{\text {s }}$ and Beza ${ }^{6}$ and Davenant and Lightfoot ${ }^{7}$, on the other by Baronius ${ }^{8}$ and à Lapide and Estius, besides other very considerable names ${ }^{2}$. Latterly its popularity has declined, but it has secured the support of one or two commentators even in the present centary.

The underlying motive of this interpretation was to withdraw the sup- Reasons port which the apocryphal epistle seemed to derive from this reference, for it. without being obliged at the same time to postulate a lost epistle of St Paul. The critical argument adduced in its support was the form of ex-explanation. The Colossian and Laodicean Epistles are obviously regarded to it. as in some sense companion epistles, of which the Apostle directs an interchange between the two churches. And again, if the letter in question had [^83]been written by the Laodiceans to St Paul, why should he enjoin the Colossians to get it from Laodicea? How could he assume that a copy had been kept by the Laodiceans; or, if kept, would be given up when required? Indeed the difficulties in this hypothesis are so great, that nothing but the most imperious requirements of the Greek language would justify its acceptance. But the expression in the original makes no such demand. It is equally competent for us to explain $\tau \boldsymbol{\eta} \boldsymbol{y}$ ék naodickias either 'the letter written from Laodicea', or 'the letter to be procured from Laodicea', as the context may suggest. The latter accords at least as well with Greek usage as the former ${ }^{1}$.

Views respectin the person addressed.

The vast majority of those who interpret the expression in this way assume that the letter was written to (a) St Paul. The modifications of this view, which suppose it addressed to some one else, need bardly be considered. The theory for instance, which addresses it to ( $\beta$ ) Epaphras ${ }^{2}$, removes none of the objections brought against the simpler lyypothesis. Another opinion, which takes $(\gamma)$ the Colossians themselves to have been the recipients ${ }^{3}$, does indeed dispose of ono difficulty, the necessity of assuming a copy kept by the Laodiceans, but it is even more irreconcileable with the language of the context. Why then should St Paul so studiously charge them to see that they read it? Why above all should he say кai $\dot{\text { j }}$ eis, 'ye also', when they were the only persons who would read it as a matter of course?
2. A second class of identifications rests on the supposition that it
2. A letter written from Laodicea by St Pavi.

1 Timothy. was a letter written from Laodicea, though not by the Laodiceans themselves. The considerations which recommend this hypothesis for acceptance are the same as in the last case. It withdraws all support from the apocryphal Epistle to the Laodiceans, and it refrains from postulating a lost $\Delta$ postolic epistle. It is not exposed to all the objections of the other theory, but it introduces new difficulties still more serious. Here a choice of several epistles is offered to us. (a) The First Epistle to Timothy. This view is distinctly maintained by John Damascene ${ }^{4}$ and by Theophylact ${ }^{5}$; but it took its rise much earlier. It appears in the margin of the Philoxenian Syriace, and it seems to have suggested the subseriptions found in many authorities at the close of that epistle. The words éypád $\eta$ $\dot{a} \pi{ }^{\prime} \dot{o}$ saodiceias are found in AKL 47 etc., and many of these define the
 A similar note is found in some Latin mas. It is quite possiblo that this subscription was prior to the theory respecting the interpretation of Col. iv. 16 , and gave rise to it; but the converse is more probable, and in some ${ }^{1}$ See the note on iv. 16.
${ }^{2}$ e.g. Storr Opusc. 11. p. 124 sq.
${ }^{8}$ So for instance Corn. à Lapide, as an alternative, 'vel certe ad ipsos Colossenses, ut rult Theodor.'; bat I do not find anything of the kind in Theodoret. This view elso commends itself to Beza.
${ }^{4}$ Op. 11. p. 2 r4 (ed. Lequien) $\boldsymbol{\text { min }}$

[^84]mss ( $a^{\text {nce }} 74$ ) the bearing of this subseription on Col. iv. I6 is emphasized, iỏoù $\delta \grave{\eta}$ kaì $\dot{\eta}$ ék Aaodıкsias. This identification has not been altogether without support in later times ${ }^{1}$. ( $\beta$ ) The First Epistle to the Thessalo- i Theseanians. A final colophon in the Philoxenian Syriac asserts that it was lonians. 'written from Laodicea': and the same is stated in a later hand of d, 'scribens a Laodicea' Again an Ethiopic ms, though giving Athens as the place of writing, adds that it was 'sent with Timotheus, Tychicus, and Onesimus ${ }^{2}$.' This identification was perhaps suggested by the fact that I Thessalonians follows next after Colossians in the common order of St Paul's Epistles. ( $\gamma$ ) The Second Epistle to the Thessalonians. In the 2 ThessanPeshito (as given by Schaaf ${ }^{\text {s }}$ ) there is a final colophon stating that this lonians. epistle 'was written from Laodicea of Pisidia and was sent by the hand of Tychicus ${ }^{3}$. Though the addition of Pisidia wrongly defines the place as Laodicea Combusta, instead of Laodicea ad Lycum, yet the mention of the messenger's name shows plainly that the identification with the missing epistle of Col. iv. 16 was contemplated. So too the Memphitic 'per Silvanum et Tychicum', and a Latin prologue 'per Titum et Onesimum.' Again, an Ethiopic ms points to the same identification, though strangely confused in its statements. In the superscription we are told that this epistle was written when the Apostle was at Laodicea, but in the subscription that it 'was written at Athens to Laodicea and sont by Tychicus'; while the prolegomena state that it was written and left at Laodicea, and that afterwards, when St Paul wrote his letter to the Colossians from Rome, he gave directions that it should be transmitted to the Thessalonians by the Colossians ${ }^{4}$. (8) The Epistle to the Galatians ${ }^{5}$. This might have GaIatians. been chosen, partly because it affords no internal data for deciding where it was written, partly because like the Colossian Epistle it is directed against a form of Judaism, and the adrocates of this hypothesis might not be careful to distinguish the two types, though very distinct in themselves. I find no support for it in the subscriptions, except the notice 'per Tychicum' in some Slavonic mss.

The special difficulties attending this class of solutions are manifold. (r) It does not appear that St Paul had ever been at Laodicea when he wrote the letter to the Colossians. (2) All the epistles thus singled out solutions. are separated from the Colossian letter by an interval of some years at least. (3) In every case they can with a high degree of probability be shown to have been written elsewhere than at Laodicea. Indeed, as St Paul had been long a prisoner either at Cæsarea or at Rome, when he wrote to Colossa, he could not have despatched a letter recently from Laodicea.

[^85]3. A letter 3. Thus we are thrown back on some form of the solution which to the Lao makes it a letter written to the Laodiceans. And here we may at once diceans written by
(a) St

John,
(b) A. companion of St Paul.
(c) StPaul. reject the hypothesis that the writer was (a) St John ${ }^{1}$. The First Epistle of St John, which has been selected, was written (as is allowed on all hands) much later than this date. Nor again does St Paul's language favour the alternative, which others have maintained, that the letter in question was written by (b) one of St Paul's companions, e.g. Ipaphras or Luke'. The writer must therefore have been (c) St Paul himself.

On this assumption three alternatives offer themselves.
(i) A lost
(i) We may suppose that the epistle in question has been lost. It has letter.
(ii) A Ca nonical epistie. (a) $\mathrm{He}-$ brews. Philastrius. been pointed out elsewhere that the Apostle must have written many letters which are not preserved in our Canon ${ }^{3}$. Thus there is no a priori objection to this solution; and, being easy and obrious in itself, it has found common support in recent times. If therefore we had no positive reasons for identifying the Laodicean letter with one of the extant epistles of our Canon, we might at once close with this account of the matter. But such reasons do exist. And moreover, as we are obliged to suppose that at Ieast three letters-the Epistles to the Colossians, to the Ephesians, and to Philemon-were despatched by St Paul to Asia Minor at the same time, it is best not to postulate a fourth, unless we are obliged to do so.
(ii) But, if it was not a lost letter, with which of the Oanonical Fpisties of St Paul can we identify it with most probability? Was it
(a) The Epistle to the Helrews? The supporters of this hypothesis are able to produce ancient evidence of a certain kind, though not such as carries any real weight. Philastrius, writing about the close of the fourth century, says that some persons ascribed the authorship of the Epistle to the Hebrews to Luke the Evangelist, and adds that it was asserted (apparently by these same persons, though this is not quite clear) to have been written to the Laodiceans ${ }^{4}$. Again in the Græco-Latin ms G of St Paul's
${ }^{1}$ A conjectare of Lightfoot (Works II. pp. 326, 339, London 1684), but he does not lay much stress on it. He offers it ' rather then conceive that any epistle of Paul is lobt.' See also Anger p . 17, note m .
${ }^{2}$ Baumgarten Comm. ad loc., quoted by Anger p. 25, note g.
${ }^{3}$ Philippians p. 136 sq.
${ }^{4}$ Her. lxxxix 'Sunt alii quoque qui epistolam Pauli ad Hebraos non adserant esse ipsius, sed dicant ant Barnabæe esse apostoli aut Clementis de urbe Roma episcopi; alii autem Lacæ evangelistm aiunt epistolam etiam ad Laodicenses scriptam. Et quia addiderunt in ea quedam non bene sentientes, inde non legitur in ecolesia; et ai legitur a quibusdam, non tamen in ecclesia legitur popalo, nisi tredecim epistolm ipsius, et ad

Hebroos interdum. Et in ea quia rhetorice scripsit, sermone plausibili, inde non putant esse ejusdem apostoli; et quia factuma Christum dicit in ea [Heb. iii. 2], inde non legitur; de penitentia antem [Heb. vi. 4, x. 26] propter Novatianos æque. Cum ergo factum dicit Christum, corpore, non divinitate, dicit factum, cum doceat ibidera quod divinge sit et paterna substantim flinus, Qui est splendor glorice, inquit, et imago substantia ejus [Heb. i. 3]' etc. Oehler punctuates the sentence with which we are concerned thus : 'alii antem Lucw evangelistm. Aiunt epistolam etism ad Laodicenses scriptam,' and in his note he udds 'videlicet Pauli esse apostoli.' Thus he supposes the clause to refer to the apoeryphal Epistle to the Lsodiceans: and Fa-

Epistles, the Codex Boernerianus, probably written in the ninth century, Supposed after the Epistle to Philemon, which breaks off abruptly at ver. 20, a testimony vacant space is left, as if for the conclusion of this epistle: and then follows of ms $G$. $a$ fresh title > ad laudicenses incipit epistola

> прос лаоүдакнсас арХетаі епוстодн

This is evidently intended as the heading to another epistle. No other epistle however succeeds, but the leaf containing this title is followed by several leaves, which were originally left blank, but were filled at a later date with extraneous matter. What then was this Epistle to the Laodiceans, which was intended to follow, but which the scribe was prevented from transcribing? As the Epistle to the Hebrews is not found in this ME, and as in the common order of the Pauline Epistles it would follow the Epistle to Philemon, the title has frequently been supposed to refer to it. This opinion however does not appear at all probable. Anger ${ }^{1}$ indeed argues in its favour on the ground that in the companion ms $F$, the Codex Augiensis, which (so far as regards the Greek text) must have been derived immediately from the same archetype ${ }^{3}$, the Epistle to the Hebrews does really follow. But what are the facts? It is plain that the Greek Relation texts of $G$ and $F$ came from the same original: but it is equally plain that of G. to F. the two scribes had different Latin texts before them-that of $G$ being the Old Latin, and that of F Jerome's revised Vulgate. No argument therefore derived from the Latin texi holds good for the Greek. But the phenomena of both mss alike ${ }^{3}$ show that the Greek text of their common archetype ended abruptly at Philem, 20 (probably owing to the loss of the final leaves of the volume). The two scribes therefore were left severally to the resources of their respective Latin ass. The scribe of $F$, whose Greek and Latin texts are in parallel columns, concluded the Epistle to Philemon in Latin, though he could not match it with its proper Greek; and after this he added the Epistle to the Hebrews in Latin, no longer however leaving a blank column, as he had done for the last few verses of Philemon. On the other hand the Latin text in $G$ is interlinear, the Latin bricius explains the notice similarly. Such a reference however would be quite out of place here: The whole paragraph before and after is taken up with discussing the Epistle to the Hebrews ; and the interposition of just six words, referring to a wholly different matter, is inconceivable. We must therefore panctuate either 'alii autem Lucse evangelistes aiunt epistolam, etiam ad Laodicenses scriptam', or 'alii autem Lacm evangelista aiunt; epistolam etiam ad Laodicenses scriptam.' In either case it will mean that some persons supposed the Epistle to the Hebrews to have been written to the Laodiceans.

1 Laodicenerbrief p. 29 sq.
${ }^{2}$ If indeed the Greek text of $\mathrm{F}^{\text {w }}$ was not copied immediately from $G$, as maintained by Dr Hort in the Journal of Philology IIr. p+ 67. The divergent phenomena of the two Latin texts seem to me unfavourable to this hypothesis; but it ought not to be hastily rejected.

3 Volkmar, the editor of Credner's Geschichte des Neutestanentlichen Kanon p. 299, with strange carelessness speaks of 'the appearance (das Forkommen) of the Laodicean Epistle in both the Codices Augiensis and Boernerianus which in other respects are closely allied.' There is no mention of it in the Coder Augiensis, words being written above the Greek to interpret them. When therefore the Greek text came to an end, the scribe's work was done, for he could no longer interlineate. But he left a blank space for the remainder of Philemon, hoping doubtless hereafler to find a Greek ms from which he could fill it in; and he likewise gave the title of the epistle which he found next in his Latin copy, in Greêk as well as in Latin. The Greek title however he had to supply for himself. This is clear from the form, which shows it to have been translated from the Latin by a person who had the very smallest knowledge of Greek. No Greek in the most barbarous age would a Latin corroption $a u$ for $a 0$, and the termination ac is a Latin's notion of the Greek accusative. Thus the whole word is a reproduction of the Latin
The spu- 'Laudicenses,' the en being represented as usual by the Greek $\eta$. If so, rious Lao- we have only to ask what writing would probably appear as Epistola ad dicean Epistle Laudicenses in a Latin copy; and to this question there can be only one answer. The apocryphal Epistle to the Laodiceans occurs frequently in the Latin Bibles, being found at least two or three centuries before the ms G was written. Though it does not usually follow the Epistle to Philemon, yet its placs varies very considerably in different Latin copies, and an instance will be given below ${ }^{2}$ where it actually occurs in this position.
This iden- Thus beyond the notice in Philastrius there is no ancient support for tification unsatisfactory. the identification of the missing letter of Col. iv. 16 with the Epistle to the Hebrews; and doubtless the persons to whom Philastrius alludes had no more authority for their opinion than their modern successors. Critical conjecture, not historical tradition, led them to this result. The theory therefore must stand or fall by its own merits. It has been maintained by one or two modern writers ${ }^{3}$, chiefly on the ground of some partial coincidences between the Epistles to the Hebrews and the Colossians; but the general character and purport of the two is wholly. dissimilar, and they obviously deal with antagonists of a very different type. The insuperable difficulty of supposing that two epistles so unlike in style were written by the same person to the same neighbourhood at or about the same time would still remain, even though the Pauline authorship of the Epistle to the Hebrews should be for a moment granted.
( $\beta$ ) The Epistle to Philemon has been strongly advocated by Wieseler ${ }^{4}$, tained this view are mentioned by Anger, p. 25, notef. It has since been more fully developed and more vigorously urged by Wieseler, first in a programme Commentat. de Epist. Laodicena guam vulgo perditam putant 1844, and afterwards in his well-known work Chronol. des Apostol. Zeit. p. 405 sq. It may therefore be identified with his name. He speaks of it with much confidence as 'scarcely open to a doubt,' but he has not succeeded in convincing others.
as the letter to which St Paul refers in this passage. For this identification it is necessary to establish two points; (i) that Philemon lived not at Colossae, but at Laodicea; and (2) that the letter is addressed not to a private individual, but to a whole church. For the first point there is something to be said. Though for reasons explained elsewhere the abode of Philemon himself appears to have been at Colosse, wherever Archippus may have resided ${ }^{1}$, still two opinions may very fairly be held on this point. But Wieseler's arguments entirely fail to establish his other position. The This epistheme, the treatment, the whole tenour of the letter, mark it as private: and tle does the mere fact that the Apostle's courtesy leads him to include in the opening salutation the Christians who met at Philemon's house is powerless to change its character. Why should a letter, containing such intimate confidences, be read publicly in the Church, not only at Laodicea but at Colossex, by the express order of the Apostle? The tact and delicacy of the Apostle's pleading for Onesimus would be nullified at one stroke by the demand for publication.
( $\gamma$ ) But may we not identify the letter in question with the Epistle to the ( $\gamma$ ) EpheEphesians, which also is known to have been despatched at the same time ${ }^{\text {aians. }}$ with the Epistle to the Colossians? Unlike the Epistle to Philemon, it was addressed not to a privato person but to a church or churches. If therefore it can be shown that the Laodiceans were the recipients, either alone or with others, we have found the object of our search. The argu- This is the ments in favour of this solution are reserved for the introduction to that true soluepistle. Meanwhile it is sufficient to say that educated opinion is tending, though slowly, in this direction, and to express the belief that ultimately this view will be generally received ${ }^{3}$.
(iii) Another wholly different identification remains to be mentioned. (iii) The It was neither a lost epistle nor a Canonical epistle, thonght some, but extant onthe writing which is extant under the title of the 'Epistle to the Laodi- $\begin{gathered}\text { canonical } \\ \text { Epistie to }\end{gathered}$ ceans,' though not genorally received by the Church. Of the various the Lacodiopinions held respecting this apocryphal letter I shall have to speak ceans. presently. It is sufficieut here to say that the advocates of its genuineness fall into two classes. Either they assign to it a place in the Canon with the other Epistles of St Paul, or they acquiesce in its exclusion, holding that the Church has authority to pronounce for or against the canonicity even of Apostolic writings.

The apocryphal Epistle to the Laodiceans is a cento of Pauline General phrases strung together without any definite connexion or any clear object. character They are taken chiefly from the Epistle to the Philippians, but here and there one is borrowed elsewhere, e.g. from the Epistle to the Galatians. of the sparious Of course it closes with an injunction to the Laodiceans to exchange epistles with the Colossians. The Apostle's injunction in Col. iv. is suggested the forgery, and such currency as it ever attained was due to the support which that passage was supposed to give to it. Unlike most forgeries, it had no uiterior aim. It was not framed to advance any [^86]particular opinions, whether heterodox or orthodox. It has no doctrinal peculiarities. Thus it is quite harmless, so far as falsity and stupidity combined can ever be regarded as harmless.

Among the more important mss which contain this epistle are the following. The letters in brackets [ ] give the designations adopted in the apparatus of various readings which follows.

1. Fuldensis [F]. The famous ms of the Vulgate N. T. written for Victor Bishop of Capua, by whom it was read and corrected in the years 546, 547 ; edited by Ern. Ranke, Marburgi et Lipsiae 1868. The Laodicean Epistle occurs between Col and I Tim. without any indication of doubtful authenticity, except that it has no argunent or table of contents, like the other epistles. The scribe however has erroneously interpolated part of the argament belonging to I Tim. between the title and the epistle; sec p. 291 sq. of Ranke's edition.
2. Cavensis. A ms of the whole Latin Bible, at the Monastery of La Cava near Salerno, ascribed to the 6th or 7 th or 8th century. See Vercellone Var. Lect. Vulg. Lat. Bibl. c. p. lxxxviii. Unfortunately we have no account of the readings in the Laodicean Epistle (for which it would be the most important authority after the Codex Fuldensis), except the last sentence quoted by Mai Nov. Patr. Bibl. i. 2. p. 63, 'Et facite legi Colossensium vobis.' Laod here oceurs between Col. and 1 Thess. (Mai p. 62). Dr Westcott (Smith's Dict. of the Bible s. v. Vulgate, p. 1713) has remarked that the two oldest authorities for the interpolation of the three heavenly witnesses in I Joh: v. 7, this La Cara us and the Speculum published by Mai, also support the Laodicean Kpistle (see Mai l. c. pp. 7, 62 sq.). The two phenomena are combined in another very ancient ms, Brit. Mus, Add. 1 1,852 , described below.
3. Armachanus [A]. A ms of the N. T., now belonging to Trinity College, Dublin, and known as the 'Book of Armagh.' It was written in the year 807, as ascertained by Bp. Graves; see the Proceedings of the Royal Irish Academy III. pp. 316, 356. The Laodicean Epistle follows Colossians on fol. 138 , but with the warning that Jerome denies its genuineness. The text of the Laodicean Epistle in this Ms is not so pure as might have been anticipated from its antiquity. I owe the collation of readings which is given below to the kindness of Dr Reeves, who is engaged in editing the ms.

4 Darmstadiensis [D]. A fol. ms of the whole Bible, defective from Apoc. xxii. 12 to the end, now in the Grand-ducal library at Darmstadt, but formerly belonging to the Cathedral Library at Cologne; presented by Hermann Pius, Archbishop of Cologne from 4.D. 890-g25. Laod. follows Col. A collation was made for Anger, from whom (p. 144) this account is talen.
5. Bornensis no. 334 [B]. A 4 to Ms of miscellaneous contents, ending with the Pauline Epistles, the last being the Epistle to the Laodiceans; written in the gth cent. The Laodicean Epistle is a fragment, ending with 'Gaudete in Christo et praecavete sordibus in lucro' (ver. I3). This account is taken by Anger from Sinner Catal. Cod. MSSS. Bibl. Bern. I p. 28. In his Addenda (p. 179) Anger gives a collation of this ms.
6. Toletanus [T]. A ms of the Latin Bible belonging to the Cathedral Library at Toledo, and written about the 8th century: see Westcott in Smith's Dict. of the Bible, s. v. Vulgate p. 1710, Vercellone Var. Lect. 1. p. Ixxxiv. sq. The readings in the Laodicean Epistle are taken from the copy of Palomares given in Bianchini Vind. Canon. Script. Vulg. Lat. Edit. p. cxct (Romae, 1740). In my first edition I had followed Joh. Mariana Schol. in Vet. et Nov. Test. p. 831 (Paris, 1620), where also this epistle is printed in full from the Toledo ms. The two differ widely, and the copy of Mariana is obviously very inaccurate. Anger (see p. 144) does not mention Bianchini's copy. In this ms Laod. follows Col.

7. Parisiensis Reg. Lat. 3 (formerly 3562 ${ }^{1}$ [ $\mathrm{P}_{1}$ ]. A Latin Bible, in one volume fol, called after Anowaretha by whom it was given to the monastery of Glanfeuille (St Maur), and ascribed in the printed Catalogue to the gth cent. Laod. follows Col. on fol. 379.
8. Parisiensis Reg. Lat. $6\left[\mathrm{P}_{2}\right]$. A ms of the Latin Bible in 4 vols. fol., according to the Catalogue probably written in the ioth cent. [2]. It belonged formerly to the Duc de Noailles. Laod. follows Col. It contains numerous corrections in a later hand either between the lines or in the margin. The two hands are distinguished as $\mathrm{P}_{2}{ }^{}, \mathrm{P}_{2}{ }^{ *}$.
9. Parisiensis Reg. Lat. 250 (formerly 3572 ) [ $\mathrm{P}_{3}$ ]. A fol. ms of the N.T., described in the Catalogue as probably belonging to the end of the 9th cent. Laod. follows Col. It has a few corrections in a later hand. The two hands are distinguished as $\mathrm{P}_{3}{ }^{}, \mathrm{P}_{3}{ }^{ *}$.

These three Parisian mss I collated myself, but I had not time to examine them as carefully as I could have wished.
10. Brit. Mus. Add. $1 \mathrm{I}, 852$ [G]. An important ms of St Paul's Epistles written in the gth cent. It formerly belonged to the monastery of St Gall, being one of the books with which the library there was enriched by Hartmot who was abbot from Ad. 872 to 884 or 885 . Laod. follows Heb. and has no capitula like the other epistles.
11. Brit. Mus. Add. 10,546 [C]. A fol. ms of the Vulgate, commonly known as 'Charlemagne's Bible,' but probably belonging to the age of Charles the Bald ( +877 ). Laod. stands between Heb. and Apoc. It has no argument or capitula.
12. Brit. Mus. Reg. I. E. vii, viia [R]. An English ms of the Latin Bible from Christ Church, Canterbury, written about the middle of the roth cent. Laod. follows Heb. This is the most ancient ms , so far as I am aware, in which the epistle has capitulations. It is here given in its fullest form, and thus presents the earliest example of what may be called the modern recension.
13. Brit. Mus. Harl. 2833,2834 [ $\mathrm{H}_{1}$ ]. A ms of the 13 th cent. written for the Cathedral of Angers. Laod. follows Apoc.

The readings of the four preceding mss are taken from the collations in Westcott Canon Appx. Ep. 572 sq. (ed. 4).
14. Brit. Mus. Harl. 3131 $\left[\mathrm{H}_{2}\right]$. A smallish 4 to of the 12 th cent., said to be of German origin, with marginal and interlinear glosses in some parts. Laod, stands between Philem. and Heb. It has no heading bat only a red initial letter P. At the end is 'Expl. Epla ad Laodicenses. Prologus ad Ebreos.'
${ }^{1}$ So at least I find the number given in my notes. But in Bentl. Crit. Sacr. p. xxyvii it is 356 r .
15. Brit. Mus. Sloane 539 [S]. A small fol. of the 12th cent., said to be German. It contains St Paul's Epistles with glosses. The gloss on Col. iv. 16' et ea quae est Laodicensium etc.' runs' quam ego eis misi ut ipsi michi ut videatis hic esse responsum.' Laod. follows Heb., and has no glosses.

The two last mss I collated myself.
16. Bodl. Laud. Lat. 13 (formerly 8ro) [ $\mathrm{L}_{1}$ ]. A. 4 to ms in double columns of the I 3th cent. containing the Latin Bible. See Catal. Bibl. Laud. Cod. Lat. p. io. Laod. follows Col. Notwithstanding the date of the mg, it gives a very ancient text of this epistle.
17. Bodl. Laud. Lat. 8 (formerly 757) [L $\mathrm{L}_{\text {] }}$ ]. A fol. ms of the Latin Bible, belonging to the end of the 12th cent. See Catal. Biol. Laud. Cod. Lat. p. 9. This is the same ms, which Anger describes (p. 145) as 115 C (its original mark), and of which he gives a collation. Laod. stands between 2 Thess. and I Tim.

I am indebted for collations of these two Landian ass to the kindness of the Rev. J. Wordsworth, Feilow of Brasenose College.

I8. Vindob. 287 [V]. The Pauline Epp., written by Marianus Scotus (i. e. the Irishman), A.D. 1079. See Alter Nov. Test. ad Cod. Vindob. Graece Expressum II. p. 1040 sq., Denis Cod. MSS Lat. Bibl. Vindob. I. no. lviii, Zeuss Grammatica Celtica p. xviii (ed. 2). The Epistle to the Laodiceans is trazscribed from this ms by Alter l. c. p. 1067 sq . It follows Col.
19. Trin. Coll. Cantabr. B. 5. I [X]. A fol. Ms of the Latin Bible, written probably in the iath century. Laod. follows Col. I have given a collation of this ms, because (like Brit. Mus. Reg. I. E. viii) it is an early example of the completed form. The epistlo is preceded by capitula, as follows.

Incipiont Capitula Epistole ad Laodicensebs.

1. Paulus apostolus pro Laodicensibus domino gratias refert et hortatur eos ne a seductoribus decipiantur.
2. De manifestis vinculis apostoli in quibus letatur et gaudet.
3. Monet Laodicenses apostolus ut sicut sui audierunt praesentia ita retineant et sine retractu faciant.
4. Hortatur apostolus Laodicenses ut fide sint firmi et quae integra et vera et deo placita sunt faciant. et salutatio fratrum. Exphoront Capityhad. Incipit Epistola beati Pauli Apostoli ad Laodicenses.

These capitulations may be compared with those given by Dr Westcott from Reg. I. E. viii, with which they are nearly identical.

Besides these nineteen mss, of which (with the exception of Cavensis) collations are given below, it may be worth while recording the following, as containing this epistle.

Among the Lambeth mas are (i) no. 4, large folio, 12 th or 13 th cent. Laod. stands between Col. and I Thess. (ii) no. go, small folio, 13th or r 4 th cent. Laod. stands between Col. and r Thess. without title or heading of any kind. Apparently a good text. (iii) no. 348, 4to, isth cent. Laod. stands between Col. and I Thess., without heading etc. (iv) no. 544, 8 vo , 15 th cent. Laod. stands between Col. and I Thess., without heading etc. (v) no. 1152, 4to, 13th or 14th cent. Laod. occupies the same position as in the four preceding mss and has no heading or title. The first and last of these five mas are collated by Dr Westcott (Canon p. 572 sq ). I inspected them all.

In the Bodleian Library at Oxford, belonging to the Canonici collection, are (i) Canon. Bibl. 82 (see Catal. p. 277), very small 4to, I3th cent., containing parts of the N.T. St Paul's Epp. are at the end of the volume, following Apoc. Laod. intervenes between Tit. and Philem., beginning ' Explicit epistola ad titum. Incipit ad laud.', and ending 'Explicit epistola ad Iaudicenses. Incipit ad phylemonem'. (ii) Canon. Bibl. 7 (see Catal. p. 251), small 4to, beginning of 14th cent., containing Erv., Acts, Cath. Epp., Apoc., Paul. Epp. Laod. is at the end. (iii) Canon. Bibl. 16 (Catal. p. 256), small 4to, containing the N. T., 15 th cent, written by the hand 'Stephani de Tautaldis'. Laod. follows Col. (iv) Canon. Bibl. 25 (Catal. p. 258), very small 4to, mutilated, early part of the 15 th cent. It contains a part of St Paul's Epp. (beginning in the middle of Gal.) and the Apocalypse. Laod. follows Col. For information respecting these mss I am indebted to the Rev. J. Wordsworth.

In the University Library, Cambridge, I have observed the Epistle to the Laodiceans in the following mss. (i) Dd. 5.52 (see Catal. L p. 273), 4to, double columns, 14 th cent. Laod. is between Col. and I Thess. (ii) Ee. I. 9 (see Catal. II. p. 10), 4to, double columns, very small neat hand, i5th cent. It belonged to St Alban's. Laod. is between Col, and I Thess. (iii) Mm. 3. 2 (see Catal. 1v. p. 174), fol., Latin Bible, double columns, I3th cent. Laod. is between Col. and I Thess., but the heading is 'Explicit epistola ad Colocenses, et hic incipit ad Thesalocenses', after which Laod. follows immediately. At the top of the page is 'Ad Laudonenses'. (iv) Ee. I. 16 (see Catal. II. p. 16), 4to, double columns, Latin Bible, I3th or I4th cent. The order of the N. T. is Evv., Acts, Cath. Epp., Paul. Epp., apoc. Here Laod. is between Heb. and Rev.; it is treated like the other books, except that it has no prologue.

In the College Libraries at Cambridge I have accidentally noticed the following mss as containing the epistle; for I have not undertaken any systematic search. (i) St Peter's, 0.4 6, fol., 2 columns, 13 th cent., Latin Bible. The order of the N. T. is Err., Acts, Cath. Epp., Paul Epp., Apoc. The Epistle to the Laodiceans is between Hob. and Apoc. (ii) Sidney $\Delta$. 5. II, fol., 2 columns, Latin Bible, 13 th cent. The order of the N. T. is Evr., Paul. Epp., Acts, Cath. Epp., Apoc.; and Laod. is between 2 Thess. and I Tim. (iii) Emman. 2. 1. 6, large fol. Latin Bible, early I4th cent. The order of the N. T. is different from the last, being Evv., Acts, Cath. Epp., Paul. Epp., Apoc.; but Laod. is in the same position, between 2 Thess. and 1 Tim.

Notice of a few other mss, in which this epistle occurs, will be found in Hody de Brbl. Text. Orig. p. 664, and in Anger p. 145 sq.

This list, slight and partial as it is, will serve to show the wide circulation of the Laodicean Epistle. At the same time it will have been observed that its position varies very considerably in different copies.
(i) The most common position is immediately after Colossians, as the notice in Col. iv. 16 would suggest. This is its place in the most ancient authorities, e.g. the Fulda, La Cava, and Toledo mss, and the Book of Armagh.
(ii) Another position is after 2 Thess. So Laud. Lat. 8, Sidn. $\Delta$. 5. II, Emman. 2. 1. 6: see also mss in Hody Bibl. Text. Orig. p. 664 . It must be remembered that in the Latin Bibles the Epistles to the Thessalonians sometimes precede and sometimes follow the Epistle to the Colossians. Hence we get three arrangements in different mss; (i) 1 , 2 Thess., Col. Laod.; (2) Col., Laod., 1, 2 Thess.; (3) Col., I, 2 Thers., Laod.
(iii) It occurs at least in one instance between Titus and Philemon; Oxon. Bodl. Canon. 82. Mai also (Nov. Patr. Bibl. 1. 2. p. 63) mentions a 'very ancient ms', in which it stonds between Titus and I John; but he does not say how Titus and I John appear in such close neighbourhood.
(iv) Again it follows Philemon in Brit. Mus. Harl. 3131. This also must have been its position in the Latin as which the scribe of the Codex Boernerianus had before him : see above p. 28o.
(v) Another and somewhat common position is after Hebrews; e.g. Brit. Mus. Add. 11,852, Add. 10,546, Reg. i. E. viii, Sloane 539, Camb. Univ. Ee. 1. 16, Pet. O. 4. 6. See also Hody l. c.
(vi) It is frequently placed at the end of the New Testament, and so after the Apocalypse when the Apocalypse comes last, e. g. Harl. 2833. Sometimes the Pauline Epistles follow the Apacalypse, so that Laod. occurs at the end at once of the Pauline Epistles and of the N.T.; e.g. Bodl. Canon. Lat. 7.

Other exceptional positions, e.g. after Galatians or after 3 John, are found in versions and printed texts (see Anger p. 143); but no authority of Latin mss is quoted for them.

The Codex Fuldensis, besides being the oldest ms, is also by far the most trustworthy. In some instances indeed a true reading may be preserved in later mss, where it has a false one; but such cases are rare. The text however was already corrupt in several places at this time; and the variations in the later mss are most frequently attempts of the scribes to render it intelligible by alteration or amplification. Such for instance is the case with the mutilated reading 'quod est' (ver. 13), which is amplified, even as early as the Book of Armagh, into 'quodcunque optimum est', though there can be little doubt that the expression represents tò $\lambda o t \pi o ́ \nu$ of Phil. iii. 2 , and the missing word therefore is 'reliquum'. The greatest contrast to F is presented by such mss as RX, where the epistle has not only been filled out to the amplest proportions, but also supplied with a complete set of capitulations like the Canonical books. Though for this reason these two mss have no great value, yet they are interesting as being among the oldest which give the amplified text, and I have therefore added a collation of them. On the other hand some much later mss, especially $L_{1}$, preserve a very ancient text, which closely resembles that of F. ${ }^{1}$ [^87]In the apparatus of various readings, which is subjoined to the epistle, I have not attempted to give aroh minute differences of spelling as $e$ and ae, or $c$ and $t$ (Laodicia, Laoditia), nor is the panctuation of the sass noted.

AD LAODICENSES.

Paclots Apastolus non ab hominibus neque per hominem sed per Text of the Thesum Christum, fratribus qui sunt Laodiciae. ${ }^{s}$ Gratia vobis et pax epistle. a Deo patre et Domino Ihesu Christo.
${ }^{3}$ Gratias ago Christo per omnem orationem meam, quod perman nentes estis in eo et perseverantes in operibus eius, promissum expectantes in diem iudicii. ${ }^{4}$ Neque destituant vos quorundan vaniloquia insinuantium, ut vos avertant a veritate evangelii quod a me praedicatur. ${ }^{s}$ Et nunc faciet Deus ut qui sunt ex me ad profectum veritatis evangelii deservientes et facientes benignitatem operum quae salutis vitae aeternae.
${ }^{6}$ Et nunc palam sunt vincula mea quae patior in Christo ; quibus

Inc. ad laodicenses $F$; Incipit epistola ad laodicenses (laudicenses $\mathrm{P}_{3} \mathrm{R}$ ) $\operatorname{BDTP}_{1} \mathrm{P}_{2} \mathrm{P}_{3} \mathrm{CRH}_{2} \mathrm{SV}$; Epistola ad laodioenses M (if this heading be not due to the editor); Incipit epistola parli ad laodicenses $\mathrm{GH}_{1}$; Incipit epistola beati panli ad laodicenses X ; Incipit aepistola ad laudicenses sed hirunimus eam negat esse parli A: no heading in $\mathrm{I}_{2} \mathrm{~L}_{2} \mathrm{H}_{2}$.
apostolus] om. TM. hominibus] homine G. ihesum christum] christum ihesum T. christam] add. 'et deam patrem omnipotentem qui suscitavit eum a mortris' RX. fratribus qui sunt] his qui sant fratribus A. For fratribus B has fratres. Iaodicize] landociae $T$; ladoicie L ; laudaciae A; laudiciae R ; laodicene $B$.
2. patre] et patre nostro $\mathrm{I}_{1}$; patre nostro $\mathrm{H}_{1} \mathrm{H}_{2} \mathrm{SM}$; nostro A. domino] add. nostro $\mathrm{P}_{2} \mathrm{P}_{3} \mathrm{RGGL}_{g}$.
3. christo] deo meo $\mathrm{DP}_{1} \mathrm{P}_{2} \mathrm{P}_{3} \mathrm{CL}_{1}$; deo meo et christo ihest RX . meam] memoriam M. permanentes estis] estis permanentes AGR. in operibus eius] in operibas bonis $\mathrm{H}_{1} \mathrm{H}_{2} \mathrm{~S}$; om. $\mathrm{BDTP}_{1} \mathrm{P}_{\mathbf{2}} \mathrm{P}_{3} \mathrm{CM}$. promissam expectantes] promissum spectantes $T$; et promissum expectantes M; promissionem expectantes V ; sperantes promissionem AG ; sperantes promissum RX . diem] die $\operatorname{BIDP}_{1} \mathrm{P}_{3} \mathrm{GCRH}_{1} \mathrm{H}_{2} \mathrm{SL}_{1} \mathrm{VMX}$. indicii] indicationis GRX.
4. neque] add. enim R . destituant] distituant A ; destituunt $\mathrm{H}_{1}$; destituat M, Spec.; destitrait DTP $\mathbf{P}_{1} \mathrm{P}_{3} \mathrm{CM}$; distituit B; destitai $\mathrm{P}_{2}$. raniloquia] vaniloquentia $\mathrm{BDTP}_{1} \mathrm{P}_{2} \mathrm{P}_{2}$ GCVM; vaneloquentia, Spec. insinuantium] insinuantium se $G M$; insanientium $H_{1} \mathrm{~S}$. ut] sed ut BAT; sed peto ne R ; seductorem ne X . avertantj Spee.; evertant $\mathrm{FTML}_{2}$; evertent B. evangeiii] aevanguelii $\mathbb{A}$ (and so below).
5. et nunc...veritatis evangelii] $\mathrm{om} . \mathrm{L}$. faciet deus] deas faciet AG . $\mathrm{nt}]$ add. sint G . qui] que (altered from qui) $\mathrm{P}_{\mathrm{a}}{ }^{}$ (or $\mathrm{P}_{3}{ }^{ }$ ). me] add. perveniant TM; add. proiciant V. ad profectum] imperfectum $A$; ad perfectum $\mathbf{R}$; in profectum $G$. veritatis evangelii] evangelii veritatis $V$. deservientes] add. sint $\mathrm{P}_{2}{ }^{ } \mathrm{P}_{3}{ }^{ } \mathrm{H}_{1} \mathrm{H}_{2} \mathrm{~S}$. For deservientes RX have dei servientes. et facientes] repeated in $\mathrm{L}_{1}$. operam] eorum RX; operam $T$; opera $\mathrm{I}_{2}$. quae] om. M; add, sunt $\mathrm{AP}_{2}{ }^{ *} \mathrm{GCRH}_{1} \mathrm{H}_{2} \mathrm{SVX}$. It is impossible to say in many cases whether a scribe intended operum quae or operumque. Ranke prints operamque in F . salutis] add. $\mathrm{I}_{1}$.
6. nunc] $n \bar{o}=$ non $L_{2}$. palam sunt] sunt palam $G$; sunt (om. palam) A.

Textof the laetor et gaudeo. ${ }^{7} \mathrm{Et}$ hoc mihi est ad salutem perpetuam ; quod epistile. ipsum factum orationibus vestris et administrante Spiritu sancto, sive per vitam sive per mortem. ${ }^{8}$ Est enim mihi vivere in Christo et mori gaudium. ${ }^{9} \mathrm{Et}$ id ipsum in vobis faciet misericordia, sua, ut eandem dilectionem habeatis et sitis unianimes.
${ }^{20}$ Ergo, dilectissimi, ut audistis praesentia mei, ita retinete et facite in timore Dei, et erit vobis vita in aeternum : "Est enim Deus qui operatur in vos. ${ }^{12} \mathrm{Et}$ facite sine retractu quaecumque facitis.
${ }^{13}$ Et quod est [reliquum], dilectissimi, gaudete in Christo ; et praecavete sordidos in Iucro. ${ }^{14}$ Omnes sint petitiones vestrae palam apud Deum ; et estote firmi in sensu Christi. ${ }^{18}$ Et quae integra et vera et Christo] add. Ihesu (iesn) $\mathrm{DP}_{1} \mathrm{P}_{2} \mathrm{P}_{3} \mathrm{CVE}$ quibub] in quibus $\mathrm{TRMP}_{2}$. et] at C .

7. mihi] michi $\mathrm{H}_{\mathrm{T}} \mathrm{S}$ (and so below); enim (for mihi) M. fretum] fletam $\mathrm{TL}_{2} \mathrm{M}$; factum est $\mathrm{P}_{3}{ }^{}{ }^{} \mathrm{H}_{2} \mathrm{~S}$. orationibus] operationibus B . vestris] meis $\mathrm{DP}_{1}$. et] est TM : om. $\mathrm{GRL}_{1} \mathrm{X}$. administranfe spirita sancto] administrantem (or ad ministrantem) spiritum sanctum $\mathrm{FBTL}_{2}$; amminisistrante spiritum sanctum DCP $_{1} \mathrm{P}_{2}{ }^{*}$ (but there is an erasure in $\mathrm{P}_{\mathrm{I}}$ ). For administrants $\mathrm{I}_{1} \mathrm{X}$ have amministrante; and for spiritu sancto G transposes and reads sancto spiritu. per mortem] mortem (om. per) $\mathrm{H}_{1}$.
8. mibi] om. M. vivere] vivere vita $\mathrm{DTP}_{2} \mathrm{P}_{2} \mathrm{P}_{\mathrm{s}} \mathrm{CVH}_{1} \mathrm{H}_{3} \mathrm{~S}$; vere vita $\mathrm{FL}_{2} \mathrm{RMX}$; vera vita B ; vere (altered into vivere prima manu) vita $\mathrm{L}_{2}$. gandium] lucrum et gaudium A; gandium ut lacrum $\mathrm{H}_{2} \mathrm{P}_{2}{ }^{* *}$; gaudium vel lacrom $\mathrm{H}_{1} \mathrm{~S}$.
9. et] qui $\nabla$. id ipsum] in ipsum $\mathrm{FBL}_{2}$; in idipsum $\mathrm{I}_{1} \nabla$; ipsum $\mathrm{TP}_{\mathbf{g}} \mathrm{GM}$; ipse $\mathrm{AH}_{1} \mathrm{H}_{2} \mathrm{SRX}$. in vobis] vobis $\mathrm{P}_{2}$; in nobis $\mathrm{H}_{2}$. misericordis sua] misericordiam suam FBDAP ${ }_{1} \mathrm{P}_{2} \mathrm{P}_{3} \mathrm{CH}_{1} \mathrm{H}_{2} \mathrm{RSVL}_{1} \mathrm{~L}_{2} \mathrm{X}$ (but written misericordis suā in several cases). et] cm. $\mathrm{I}_{1}$; иt V . urianimes] unanimes BDTP $_{1}$ $\mathrm{P}_{2} \mathrm{P}_{\mathrm{g}} \mathrm{GCH}_{1} \mathrm{RL}_{1} \mathrm{I}_{2} \mathrm{VMSX}$.
 praesentiam mei T; praesentiam $\mathrm{G}^{* }$; in praesentia mei $\mathrm{P}_{\mathrm{s}}{ }^{ }$; praesentiam mihi M; presenciam eius $\mathrm{L}_{2}$; praesentiam dei A; presentiam domini (dni) $\mathrm{P}_{2}{ }^{ } \mathrm{H}_{1} \mathrm{H}_{3} \mathrm{~S}$. ita] om. $\mathrm{Dr}_{1} \mathrm{P}_{\mathrm{g}}{ }^{ } \mathrm{P}_{\mathrm{B}} \mathrm{CX}$. retinete] retinere A . in] cum TM; om. B. timore] timorem AB . dei] domini $\mathrm{H}_{1} \mathrm{~S}$. vita] pax et vita RX . in aeternum] in aeterno A ; in reterna $\mathrm{G}^{}$; aeterna (eterna) $\mathrm{G}^{* *} \mathrm{PL}_{1}$.
II. onim] om. B. vos] yobis $\mathrm{GATH}_{2} \mathrm{H}_{2} \mathrm{SRVP}_{2}^{* }$ (or $\left.\mathrm{P}_{2}{ }^{}\right) \mathrm{P}_{8}{ }^{4 *} \mathrm{MXX}$.
12. retractu] retractatu $\mathrm{BP}_{2} \mathrm{RL}_{2}$; retractatione $\mathrm{A} G \mathrm{~V}$; tractu T ; reatu $\mathrm{H}_{1} \mathrm{~S}$. In $\mathrm{P}_{2}{ }^{* *}$ ut peccato is added; in $\mathrm{H}_{8}$ t peccato. quaecumque] quodenmque TM.
r3. quod est reliquum] quod est FBTDP $_{1} \mathrm{P}_{2}{ }^{} \mathrm{P}_{3}{ }^{} \mathrm{RCL}_{1} \mathrm{~L}_{2} \mathrm{MX}$; quod est optimum $\mathrm{GH}_{1} \mathrm{H}_{2} \mathrm{ST}$; quodounque optimum est A ; quodcunque est obtimum $P_{2}{ }^{* }$; quod bonum est $P_{3}{ }^{ }$ : seo p. 2go. dilectissimi] dilectissime B. ohristo] domino $\mathrm{DP}_{1} \mathrm{P}_{2} \mathrm{P}_{3} \mathrm{CX}$. sordidos] add. omnes $\mathrm{P}_{2}{ }^{ *} \mathrm{H}_{2} \mathrm{H}_{3} \mathrm{~S}$; add. homines A . in] ut $\mathrm{L}_{1}$. luero] Iucrum RX.
x4. omnes] in omnibus $G$; homines (attached to the preceding sentence) TM. petitiones] petiones T. sint] omitted here and placed after palam $H_{1} \mathrm{~S}$. apud] aput F; ante AG. deum] dominum A . estote] stote T . firmi in sensul christij sensa firmi in christo ihess $R$.
15. quae] add. sunt R. integra] intigra A. vera] add, sunt $\mathrm{DP}_{1} \mathrm{P}_{3} \mathrm{P}_{2}$ pudica et iusta et amabilia, facite. ${ }^{16}$ Et quae audistis et accepistis in Text of the corde retinete ; et erit vobis pax. epistle.
${ }^{18}$ Salutant vos sancti.
${ }^{19}$ Gratia Domini Thesu cum spiritu vestro.
${ }^{30}$ Et facite legi Colosensibus et Colosensium vobis.
CVX. pudica et insta] iusta et pudica R. insta] insta et casta AGV; casta et iusta $\mathrm{P}_{2}^{* *} \mathrm{H}_{1} \mathrm{H}_{2} \mathrm{~S}$. amabilia] add. sunt $\mathrm{TH}_{1} \mathrm{H}_{2} \mathrm{SM}$; add. et sancta RX.
16. andistis] add. et vidistis $\mathrm{I}_{2}$. accepistis] accipistis A. pax] add. ver. $\mathrm{I}_{7}$, salutate omnes fratres (sanctos for fratres GV) in oseulo sancto $A G P_{8}{ }^{* *}$ $\mathrm{H}_{1} \mathrm{H}_{2} \mathrm{SR} \overline{\mathrm{V} X}$.
18. sancti] omnes sancti $\mathrm{AGRH} \mathrm{H}_{1} \mathrm{SVX}$; sancti omnes $\mathrm{H}_{3}$; add. in christo ihesa RX.
19. domini ibesu] domini nostri ihesu (iesu) christi $\mathrm{DTAP}_{1} \mathrm{P}_{2} \mathrm{P}_{3} \mathrm{GCH}_{1} \mathrm{H}_{2} \mathrm{~S}$ VMRX.
20. et] add. hanc $\mathrm{H}_{1} \mathrm{H}_{2} \mathrm{SP}_{2}{ }^{* }$. legi] add. epistolam $\mathrm{I}_{1} \mathrm{P}_{3}{ }^{ }$. colosensibus et] om. $\mathrm{FTDP}_{1} \mathrm{P}_{2}{ }^{} \mathrm{P}_{3} \mathrm{CVL}_{1} \mathrm{~L}_{2}$. They are also omitted in the La Cava MS; see above p. 282. colosensium] add. epistolarn $\mathrm{L}_{2}$. The words colosensibus, colosensium, are commonly written with a single s , more especially in the oldest MSS. In $\mathrm{I}_{1}$ the form is cholosensium.

The last sentence et facite etc. is entirely omitted in M. In RX it is expanded into et facite legi colosensibus hanc epistolam et colosensium (colosensibus R ) vos legite. dens autem et pater domini nostri ihesu ehristi custodiat vos immaculatos in christo ihesa cai est honor et gloria in secula seculorum, amen.

Subscriptions. Explicit $\mathrm{P}_{\mathbf{8}} \mathrm{P}_{\mathbf{g}} \mathrm{H}_{1}$; Exp. ad laodicenses F ; Explicit epistola ad laodicenses (laudicenses R) $\mathrm{DP}_{1} \mathrm{GCH}_{8} \mathrm{SRVX}$; Finis T. There is no subscription in $\mathrm{AL}_{1} \mathrm{~L}_{2}$, and rone is given for M .

The following notes are added for the sake of eluciJating one or two Notes on points of difficulty in the text or interpretation of the epistle.

- 4 Neque] This is the passage quoted in the Speculum $\S 50$ published by tle. Mai Now. Patr. Bibl. 1. 2. p. 62 sq., 'Item ad Laodicenses: Neque destituat vos quorundam vaneloquentia (sic) insinuantium, ut vos avertant a veritate evangelii quod a me pracdicatur'. We ought possibly to adopt the reading 'destituat...vaniloquentia' of this and other old mss in preference to the 'destituant...vaniloguia' of F. 'Vaniloquium' however is the rendering of $\mu a r a i o \lambda o y i a$ I Tim. i. 6 , and is supported by such analogies as inaniloquium, maliloquium, multiloquium, stultiloquium, etc.; see Hagen Sprachl. Erörter. zur Vulgata p. 74, Roensch Das Neue Testament Tertullians p. 710.
destituant] Properly 'leave in the lurch' and so 'cheat', 'beguile', e.g. Cic. pro Rosc. Am. 40 'induxit, decepit, destituit, adversariis tradidit, omni fraude et perfidia fefellit.' In Heb. ix. 26 els dं $\theta$ ér $\eta \sigma \iota \nu ~ \tau \tilde{\eta} s ~ \dot{\alpha} \mu a \rho t i a s ~ i s ~ t r a n s-~$ lated 'ad destitutionem peccati'. The original here may have been ' 'gara-little more than 'to communicate', 'to inculcate', 'to teach': see the references in Roensch Itala u. Vulgata p. 387, Heumann-Hesse Handlexicon des römischen Rechts s. v., Ducange Glossarium s. v. So too 'insinuator' Tertull. ad Nat. ii. 1, 'insinuatrix' August. Ep. 1 1о ( I. . p. 317). In Acts xvii. 3 it is the rendering of mapart $\theta$ épevos.

Notes on the epistle.

5 ut qui sunt etc. 3 The passage, as it stands, is obviously corrupt; and $y \in \lambda i o v e \therefore \lambda \dot{\eta} \lambda \nu \partial \epsilon \nu$ seems to reveal the nature of the corruption. (I) For 'qui' we should probably read 'quae', which indeed is found in some late wss of no authority. (2) There is a lacuna somewhere in the sentence, probably after 'evangelii'. The original therefore would run in this form 'ut quae sunt ex me ad profectum veritatis [eveniant]...deservientes etc., the participles belonging to a separate sentence of which the beginning is lost. The supplements 'perveniant', 'proficiant', found in some mss give the right sense, though perhaps they are conjectural. The Vulgate of Phil. i. 12 is 'quae circa me sunt magis ad profectum venerunt evangelii'. In the latter part of the verse it is impossible in many cases to say whether a ms intends 'operum quae' or 'operumque'; but the former is probably correct, as representing ${ }_{\epsilon}^{\epsilon} p \gamma \omega \nu \tau \hat{\omega} \nu \tau \hat{\eta} s \sigma \omega \tau \eta$ ias: unless indeed this sentence also is corrupt or mutilated.

7 administrante etc.] Considering the diversity of readings here, we may perhaps venture on the emendation 'administratione spiritus sancti', as this more closely resembles the passage on which our text is founded,

12 retractu] 'wavering', 'hesitation'. For this sense of 'retractare', 'to rehandle, discuss', and so 'to question, hesitate', and even 'to shirk', 'decline', see Oehler Tertullian, index p. cxciii, Roensch N. T. Tertullians p. 66 g , Ducange Glossarium s. v.: comp. e.g. Iren. v. in. r 'ne relinqueretur quaestio his qui infideliter retractant de co'. So 'retractator' is equivalent to 'detractator' in Tert. de Jejun. 15'retractatores hujus officii' (see Oehler's note); and in I Sam. xiv. $39^{\text {' }}$ absque retractatione morietur' is the rendering of 'dying he shall die', өavát凶̣ ad oөaveíra. Here the expression probably represents $\chi \omega \rho$ is ... $\delta 1 a \lambda o \gamma \iota \sigma \mu \omega \nu$ of Phil. ii. I4, which in the Old Latin is 'sine...detractionibus'. All three forms occur, retractus (Tert. Scorp. i), retractatus (Tert. Apol. 4, ado. Marc. i. 1, v. 3, adv. Prax. 2, and frequently), retractatio (Cic. Tusc. v. 29, 'sine retractatione' and so frequently; I Sam. 1. c.). Here 'retractus' must be preferred, both as being the least common form and as having the highest ms authority. In Tert. Scorp. I however it is not used in this same sense.

13 quod est reliquum] I have already spoken of this passage, p. 286, and shall have to speak of it again, p. 29r. The oldest and most trustworthy mss have simply 'quod est'. The word 'reliquum' must be supplied, as Anger truly discerned (p. 163); for the passage is taken from Phil. iii. I to $\lambda o m \delta \nu$ in x Cor. vii. 29. Later and less trustwortby authorities supply 'optimum' or ' bonum'.

14 in sensu Christi] 'in the mind of Christ': for in I Cor. ii. 16 yoyn X $\rho \iota \sigma \tau 0 \hat{\text { in }}$ is rendered 'sensum Christi'.

20 facite legi etc.] Though the words 'Colusensibus et' are wanting in wery many of the authorities which are elsewhere most trustworthy, yet I have felt justificd in retaining them with other respectable copies, because (I) The hommeteleuton would account for their omission even in very ancient mss; (2) The parallelism with Col. iv. 16 requires their insertion; (3) The insertion is not like the device of a Latin scribe, who would bardly have manipulated the sentence into a form which savours so strongly of a Greek original.

It is the general, though not universal, opinion that this epistle was Theory of altogether a forgery of the Western Church ${ }^{1}$; and consequently that the a Greek Latin is not a translation from a lost Greek original, but preserves the earliest form of the epistle. Though the forgery doubtless attained its widest circulation in the West, there are, I venture to think, strong reasons for dissenting from this opinion.

If we read the epistle in its most authentic form, divested of the addi- Frequent tions contributed by the later mss, we are struck with its cramped style. Grecisms Altogether it has not the run of a Latin original. And, when we come to examine it in detail, we find that this constraint is due very largely to the original discussed.
$\qquad$i- fetters imposed by close adherence to Greek idiom. Thus for instance we salutis, $\tilde{\epsilon}^{\rho} \gamma \omega \nu$ т $\hat{\omega} \nu \tau \hat{\eta} s$ бштทрias; ver. 6 palam vincula mea quaß patior, ver. 20 et facite legi Colosensibus et Colosensium vobis, ка̀̀ noйбатє ïva toîs possible indeed that parallels for some of these anomalies may be found in Latin writers. Thus Tert. c. Marc. i. 23 'redundantia justitiae super scribarum et Pharisacorum' is quoted to illustrate the genitive 'Colosensium' ver. $20^{2}$. The Greek cast however is not confined to one or two expressions but extends to the whole letter.

But a yet stronger argument in favour of a Greek original remains. It differs This epistle, as we saw, is a cento of passages from St Paul If it had been written originally in Latin, we should expect to find that the passages were taken directly from the Latin versious. This however is not the case. Thus compare ver. 6 'palam sunt vincula mea' with Phil. i. I3'ut vincula mea manifesta flerent': ver. 7 'orationibus vestris et administrante spiritu sancto' [administratione spiritus sancti'?] with Plil. i. 19 'per vestram obsecrationem (V. orationem) et subministrationem spiritus sancti'; ver. 9 'ut eandem dilectionem habeatis et sitis unianimes' with Phil. ii. 2 'candem caritatem habentes, unanimes'; ver. $10^{\prime}$ 'ergo, dilectissimi, ut audistis praesentia mei.. facite in timore' with Phil. ii. 12 'Propter quod (V. Itaque) dilectissimi mihi (V. charissimi mei) sicut semper obaudistis (V. obedistis)... praesentia (V. in praesentia) mei...cum timore (V. metu)...operamini'; ver. II, 12 ' Est enim Deus qui operatur in vos (v. l. vobis). Et facite sine retractu quaecumque facitis' with Phil. ii. 13, I4 Deus enim est qui operatur in vobis...Omnia autem facite sine...detractionibus (V. haesitationibus)'; ver. I3 'quod est [reliquum], dilectissimi, gaudete in Christo et praecavete' with Phil, iii. 1,2 'de caetero, fratres mei, gaudete in Domino...Videte'; ib. 'sordidos in lucro' with the Latin renderings of aio $\chi$ poкє $\rho \delta \in i s$ I Tim. iii. 8 'turpilucros' (V. 'turpe lucrum sectantes'), al $\sigma \boldsymbol{\chi} \boldsymbol{\rho} \boldsymbol{\kappa} \in \rho \delta \bar{\eta}$ Tit. i. 7 turpi-

[^88]rum quidem, qui testetur eam a se lectam?' The acouracy of this statement will be tested presently.
${ }^{2}$ Anger p. 165.

Iucrum (V. 'turpis lucri cupidum '); ver. 14 'sint petitiones testrae palam apud Deum' with Phil. iv. 6 'postulationes (V. petitiones) vestrae innotescant apud Deum'; ver. 20 'facite legi Colosensibns et Colosensium vobis' with Col. iv. 16 'facite $u t$ et in Laodicensium ecclesia legatur et eam quae Laodicensium (mss Laodiciam) est ut (om. V.) ros legatis'. These Thas internal evidence favours a Greek ariginal.

External testimony to the same ef. fect. [Muratorian Frag. ment.] examples tell their own tale. The occasional resemblances to the Latin Version are easily explained on the ground that reminiscences of this version would naturally occur to the translator of the epistle. The habitual divergences from it are only accounted for on the hypothesis that the original compiler was better acquainted with the New Testament in Greek than in Latin, and therefore presumably that he wrote in Greek.

And, if we are led to this conclusion by an examination of the epistle itself, we shall find it confirmed by an appeal to external testimony. There is ample evidence that a spurious Epistle to the Laodiceans was known to Greek writers, as well as Latin, at a sufficiently early date. A mention of such an epistle occurs as early as the Muratorian Fragment on the Canon (about A.D. I70), where the writer speaks of two letters, one to the Laodiceans and another to the Alexandrians, as circulated under the name of Paul ${ }^{1}$. The bearing of the words however is uncertain. He may be referring to the Marcionite recension of the canonical Epistle to the Ephesians, which was entitled by that heretic an epistle to the Laodiceans ${ }^{2}$. Or, if this explanation of his words be not correct (as perhaps it is not), still we should not feel justified in assuming that he is referring to the extant apocryphal epistle. Indeed we should hardly expect that an epistle of this character would be written and circulated at so early a date. The reference in Col. iv. 16 offered a strong temptation to the forger, and proba-
${ }^{I}$ Canon Murat. p. 47 (ed. Tregelles). The passage stands in the ms, 'Fertur etiam ad Laudecenses aliz ad Alexandrinos Panli nomine fincte ad heresem Marcionis et alia plura quae in catho. licam eclesiam recepi non potest.' There is obviously some corruption in the text. One very simple emendation is the repetition of 'alia', so that the words would run 'ad Laudicensea alia, alia ad Alexandrinos'. In this case fincte ( $=$ finctae) might refer to the two epistles first mentioned, and the Latin would construe intelligibly. The writing described as 'ad Laodicenses alia' might then be the Epistle to the Ephesians under its Marcionite title, the writer probably not having any personal knowledge of it, but supposing from its name that it was a different and a forged writing. But what can then be the meaning of 'alia ad Alexandrinos'? Is it, as soms have thought, the Epistle to the Hebrews? But this could not under any circomstances be described as 'fincta ad haeresem Marcionis', even though we should strain the meaning of the preposition and interpret the words 'against the heresy of Marcion'. And again our knowledge of Marcion's Canon is far too full to admit the hypothesis that it included a spurious Epistle to the Alexandrians, of which no notice is elsewhere preserved. We are therefore driven to the conclusion that there is a hiatus here, as in other places of this fragment, probably after 'Panli nomine'; and 'finctae' will then refer not to the two epistles named before, but to the mutilated epistles of Marcion's Canon which he had 'tampered with to adapt them to his heresy'. In this case the letter 'ad Laudicenses' may refer to our apocryphal epistle or to some earlier forgery.
${ }^{2}$ See the Introduction to the Epistle to the Ephesians.
bly more than one unscrupulous person was induced by it to try his hand at falsification ${ }^{1}$. But, however this may be, it seems clear that before the close of the fourth century our epistle was largely circulated in the East and West alike. 'Certain persons', writes Jerome in his account of St Panl, 'read Jerome. also an Epistle to the Laodiceans, but it is rejected by all ${ }^{23}$. No doubt is entertained that this father refers to our epistle. If then we find that Theodore. about the same time Theodore of Mopsuestia also mentions an Epistle to the Laodiceans, which he condemns as spurious ${ }^{3}$, it is a reasonable inference that the same writing is meant. In this he is followed by Theodoret ${ }^{4}$; and Theodoret. indeed the interpretations of Col. iv. i6 given by the Greek Fathers of this age were largely influenced, as we have seen, by the presence of the spurious epistle which they were anxious to discredit ${ }^{5}$. Even two or three centuries later the epistle seems to have been read in the East. At the Second and CounCouncil of Nicra (A. D. 787) it was found necessary to warn people agaiust cil of 'a forged Epistle to the Laodiceans' which was 'circulated, having a place Nicæa. in some copies of the Apostle ${ }^{\text {0 }}$ ?

The Epistle to the Laodiceans then in the original Greek would run The Greek somewhat as follows ${ }^{7}$ : restored.

ПРО

" TAY

 X pictô.

1 Timotheus, who became Patriarch of Constantinople in 511 , while still a presbyter includes in a list of apocryphal works forged by the Manicheans $\dot{\eta}$ $\pi \epsilon \nu \tau \epsilon \kappa \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \kappa \dot{d} \tau \eta$ [i..ө. тồ $\Pi a u ̀ \lambda o v]$ т $\rho d$ ds by Fabricius, Cod. Apocr. N. T. r. p. 139). Anger (p. 27) suggests that there is a confusion of the Marcionites and Manicheans here. I am disposed to think that 'Timotheus recklessly credits the Manicherns with several forgeries of which they were innocent, among others with our apocryphal Epistle to the Laodiceans. Still it is possible that there was another Laodicean Epistle forged by these heretics to support their peculiar tenets.
${ }^{2}$ Vir. Ill. 5 (iI. p. 840 ) 'Legunt quidam et ad Laodicenses, sed ab omnjbus exploditur'.
${ }^{9}$ The passage is quoted above, $\mathbf{p}$. 275, note 1 .

5 Angar ( $p .143$ ) argues against a Greek original on the ground that the Eastern Church, unlike the Latin, did not generally interpret Col. iv. i 6 as meaning an epistle written to the Laodiceans. The fact is true, but the inference is wrong, as the language of the Greek commentators themselves shows.
${ }^{6}$ Act. vi. Tom. $\nabla$ (Labbe virr. p. 1125 ed. Colet.) кal $\gamma$ à $\rho$ тố $\theta$ eiou áro-

${ }^{7}$ A Greel version is given in Elias Hutter's Polyglott New Testament (Noreb. 1599): see Anger p. 147, note g. But I have retranslated the epistle anew, introducing the Pauline passages, of which it is almost entirely made up, as they stand in the Greek Testament. The references are given in the margin.
${ }^{c}$ Phil. i. 3. © Gal. จ. 5. ${ }_{2}$ Pet. ii. 9 ;
iii. 7; of.

Phil. ii. 16.
${ }_{\mathrm{f}}^{1}$ Tim. i. 6.
$\mathrm{E}_{2}$ Tim. iv. 4.
${ }^{6}$ Col. i. 5 ;
Gal. ii. 5, 14 .
${ }^{1}$ Gal. i. I I
(cf. i. 8).
${ }^{2}$ Phill i. 12.
${ }^{1}$ Phil. i. I3.
m Matt. v. I2; cf. Phil. i. 18 .
${ }^{n}$ Phil, i. 19.

- Phil. ì. 20.

P Phil. i. 2 r.
$q$ Phil. ii. 2.
Phil. ii. 12.
${ }_{2}$ Thess. ii. 5 (see vulg.).
${ }^{t}$ Phil. ii. $\quad$ z.
${ }^{4}$ Phil. ii. 14.
$\times$ Col. iii. 17,23 .
7 Phil. iii. r.
${ }^{2}$ Tim. iii. 8;
Tit. i. 7.
${ }^{3}$ Phil. iv. 6.
${ }^{b} 1$ Cor. xy. 58.
${ }^{-}{ }_{1}$ Cor, ii. 16.
${ }^{a}$ Phil. iv. 8, 9.

- Phil. iv. 22.
${ }^{1}$ Phil. iv. ${ }^{23}$.
s Col. iv. r 6.

 TH'N émarreגian e élc himépan kpiceac.

 Kai molốntec XPHCTÓthta ëpron tôn TĤc cothpíac [Kaí] tĥc кai $\frac{\mathrm{H}}{}$ Eiphinh êctal me ${ }^{\prime}$ ÝMÔN.

18e²AcmázONTAI ÝMÂC of ä「1OI.
19£'H XÁpIC tố KYpioy 'Incố Xpictô̂ metá tố mneýmatoc ÝMÔN.
 Kodaccaéon îna kai fimin.

Scanty circulation in the East, but wide diffusion in the West.

But, though written originally in Greek, it was not among Greek Christians that this epistle attained its widest circulation. In the latter part of the 8th century indeed, when the Second Council of Nicea met, it had found its way into some copies of St Paul's Epistles ${ }^{1}$. But the denunciation of this Council seems to have been effective in securing its ultimate exclusion. We discover no traces of it in any extant Greek ms, with the very doubtful exception which has already been considered ${ }^{2}$. But in the Latin Church the case was different. St Jerome, as we saw, had pronounced very decidedly against it. Yet even his authority was not sufficient to stamp it

[^89]out. At least as early as the sixth century it found a place in some copies of the Latin Bibles: and before the close of that century its genuineness was affirmed by perhaps the most influential theologian whom the Latin Church produced during the eleven centuries which elapsed between the age of Jerome and Augustine and the era of the Reformation. Gregory the Great Gregory did not indeed affirm its canonicity. He pronounced that the Church had the Great. restricted the canonical Epistles of St Paul to fourteen, and he found a mystical explanation of this limitation in the number itself, which was attained by adding the number of the Commandments to the number of the Gospels and thus fitly represented the teaching of the Apostle which combines the two ${ }^{1}$. But at the same time he states that the Apostle wrote fifteen; and, though he does not mention the Epistle to the Laodiceans by name, there can be little doubt that he intended to include this as his fifteenth opistle, and that his words were rightly understood by subsequent writers as affirming its Pauline authorship. The influence of this great name is perceptible in the statements of later writers. Haymo of Halber- Haymo of stadt, who died a.d. 853, commenting on Col. iv. i6, says, The Apostle 'en- Halberjoins the Laodicean Epistle to be read to the Colossians, because though it stadt. is very short and is not reckoned in the Canon, yet still it has some use ${ }^{\text {s. }}$. And between two or three centuries later Hervey of Dole (c. A.D. ir 30), if it Hervey of be not Anselm of Laon', commenting on this same passage, says: 'Although Dole. the Apostle wrote this epistle also as his fifteenth or sixteenth ${ }^{4}$, and it is established by Apostolic authority like the rest, yet holy Church does not reckon more than fourteen ${ }^{2}$, and he proceeds to justify this limitation of the Canon with the arguments and in the language of Gregory ${ }^{5}$. Others
${ }^{1}$ Greg. Magn. Mor. in Tob. $\operatorname{xxxp}$. $\$ 25$ (III. p. 433, ed. Gallice.) 'Recte vita ecelesias multiplicata per decem et quattuor compatatar; quia utrumque testamentum custodiens, et tam secundum Legis decalogum quam secuadum quattuor Evangelii libros vivens, usque ad perfectionis culmen. extenditur. Unde et Paulus apostolus quamvis epistolas quindecim seripserit, sancta tamen ecclesia non amplius quam quatuordecim tenet, ut ex ipso epistolarum numero ostenderet quod doctor egregius Legis et Evangelii secreta rimasset'.
${ }^{2}$ Patrol. Lat. cxpm. p. 765 (ed. Migne) 'Et eam quae erat Laodicensiom ideo praecipit Colossensibus legi, quia, licet perparva sit et in Canone non habeatur, aliquid tamen utilitatis habet'. He uses the expression 'eam quae erat Laodicensium ', because $\tau \grave{\eta} \nu \epsilon \kappa$ Maoonctas was translated in the Latin Bible 'eam quae Laodicensium est'.
${ }^{3}$ See Galatians p. ${ }^{2}{ }^{2}$ on the authorship of this commentary.
${ }^{4}$ A third Epistle to the Corinthians being perhaps reckoned as the 15 th; see Fabric. Cod. Apocr. Nov. Test. in. p. 866 .
${ }^{5}$ Patrol. Lat. Clxxyi. p. 1355 sq(ed. Migne) 'et ea similiter epistola, quae Laodicensium est, i.e. quam ego Laodicensibus misi, legatur vobis. Quamvis et hane epistolam quintamdecimam vel sextamdecimam apostolas seripserit, et auctoritas eam apostolica sicut caetera firmarit, sancta tamen ecclesia non amplius quam quatuordecim tenet, ut ex ipso epistolarum numero ostenderet etc.' At the end of the notes to the Colossians he adds, 'Hucusque protenditur epistola quae missa est ad Colossenses. Congruum autem videtur ut propter notitiam legentium subjiciamus eam quas est ad Laodicenses directa; quam, ut diximus, in usu non habet ecclesia. Est ergo talis.' Then follows the text of the Laodicean Epistle, but it is not annotated.
however did not confine themselves to the qualified recognition given to the epistle by the great Bishop of Rome. Gregory had carefully distinguished between genuineness and canonicity; but this important distinction was not

English Church.
Aelfric.

John of Salisbury. seldom disregarded by later writers. In the English Church more especially it was forgotten. Thus Aelfric abbot of Cerne, who wrote during the closing years of the tenth century, speaks as follows of St Paul: 'Fifteen epistles wrote this one Apostle to the nations by him converted unto the faith : which are large books in the Bible and make much for our amendment, if we follow his doctrine that was teacher of the Gentiles'. He then gives a list of the Apostle's writings, which closes with ' one to Philemon and one to the Laodiceans; fifteen in all as loud as thunder to faithful people ${ }^{1}$. Again, nearly two centuries later John of Salisbury, likewise writing on the Canon, reckons 'Fifteen epistles of Paul included in one volume, though it be the wide-spread and common opinion of nearly all that there are only fourteen; ten to churches and four to individuals: supposing that the one addressed to the Hebrews is to be reckoned among the Epistles of Paul, as Jerome the doctor of doctors seems to lay down in his preface, where he refuteth the cavils of those who contended that it was not Paul's. But the fifteenth is that which is addressed to the Church of the Laodiceans; and though, as Jerome saith, it be rejected by all, nevertheless was it written by the Apostle. Nor is this opinion assumed on the conjecture of others, but it is confirmed by the testimony of the Apostle himself: for he maketh mention of it in the Epistle to the Colossians in these words, When this epistle shall have been read among you, etc. (Col. iv. 16$)^{22}$. Aelfric and Jobn are the typical theologians of the Church in this country in their respective ages. The Conquest effected a revolution in ecclesiastical and theological matters. The Old English Church was separated from the Anglo-Norman Church in not a few points both of doctrine and of discipline. Yet here we find the representative men of learning in both agreed on this one point-the authorship and canonicity of the Epistle to the Laodiceans. From the language of John of Salisbury however it appears tiat such was not the common verdict at least in his age, and that on this point the instinct of the many was more sound than the learning of the few. Nor indeed was it the undisputed opinion even of the learned in this coun-

The epistie repudiated by Laufranc. try during this interval. The first Norman Archbishop, Lanfranc, an Italian by birth and education, explains the passage in the Colossian Epistle as referring to a letter written by the Laodiceans to the A postle, and adds that otherwise 'there would be more than thirteen Epistles of Paul'. Thus he tacitly ignores the Epistle to the Laodiceans, with which he can hardly have been unacquainted.

[^90]rum dissolvens argutias qui eam Pauli non esse contendebant. Caeterum quintadecima est illa quae ecclesiae Laodicensium scribitur ; et licet, ut ait Hieronymus, ab omnibue explodatur, tamen ab apostolo scripta est: neque sententia haec de aliorum praesumitur opinione sed ipsius apostoli testimonio roboratur. Meminit enim ipsius in epistola ad Colossenses his verbis, Quum lecta fuerit apud vos haec epistola, etc.'

Indeed the safest criterion of the extent to which this opinion prevailed, Occuris to be found in the manuscripts. At all ages from the sixth to the rence in fifteenth century we have examples of its occurrence among the Pauline Epistles and most frequently without any marks which imply doubt respectmss of all ages and ing its canonicity. These instances are more common in proportion to the number of extant mss in the earlier epoch than in the later ${ }^{2}$. In one of the three or four extant authorities for the Old Latin Version of the Pauline Epistles it has a place ${ }^{\text {a }}$. In one of the two most ancient copies of Jerome's revised Vulgate it is found ${ }^{4}$. Among the first class mss of this latter version its insertion is almost as common as its omission. This phenomenon moreover is not confined to any one country. Italy, Spain, France, Ireland, England, Germany, Switzerland-all the great nations of Latin Christendom-contribute examples of early manuscripts in which this epistle has a place ${ }^{5}$.

And, when the Scriptures came to be translated into the vernacular Versions. languages of modern Europe, this epistle was not uncommonly included. AlbigenThus we meet with an Albigensian version, which is said to belong to the sian. thirteenth century ${ }^{6}$. Thus too it is found in the Bohemian Ianguage, both Bohemian. in manuscript and in the early printed Bibles, in various recensions?. And again an old German translation is extant, which, judging from lin- German. guistic peculiarities, cannot be assigned to a later date than about the fourteenth century, and was printed in not less than fourteen editions of the German Bible at the close of the fifteenth and the beginning of the sizteenth centuries, before Luther's version appeared ${ }^{8}$. In the early Eng- English. lish Bibles too it has a place. Though it was excluded by both Wycliffe and Purvey, yet it did not long remain untranslated and appears in two different and quite independent versions, in mss written before the middle of the fifteenth century? The prologue prefixed to the commoner of the two forms runs as follows:
${ }^{1}$ Patrol. Lat. cl. p. 33: (ed. Migne) on Col.iv. i6 'Haee si esset apostoli, ad Laodicenses diceret, non Laodicensium; et plusquam tredecim essent epistolae Pauli'. We should perhaps read xiiii for ziii, 'quatuordecim' for 'tredecim', as Lanfrane is not likely to have questioned the Pauline authorship of the Epistle to the Hebrews.
${ }^{2}$ The proportion however is very differentin different collections. In the Cambridge University Library I found the epistle in four only out of some thirty 485 which I inspected; whereas in the Lambeth Library the proportion was far greater.
${ }^{3}$ The Speculum of Mai, see above, p. 282.

4 The Codex Fuldensig, which was written within a few years of the Codex Amiatinus.
${ }^{5}$ The list of mss given above, p. 282 sq., will substantiate this statement.
${ }^{6}$ An account of this ms, which is at Lyoms, is given by Reuss in the Revue de Theologie v. p. 334 (Strassb. 1852). He ascribes the translation of the New Testament to the $13^{\text {th }}$ century, and dates the as a little later.
7 This version is printed by Anger, p. 170 sq .
${ }^{8}$ See Anger, p. 149 sq., p. 166 sq.
${ }^{9}$ These two versions are printed in Lewis's New Testament translated by J.Wiclif ( I 73 I ) p. 99 sq ., and in Forshall and Madden's Wycliffte Versions of the Holy Bible ( 1850 ) 1v. p. 438 sq. They are also given by Anger p. 168 sq.

Enflish prologue.

Two Versions of the epistie.
${ }^{\text {Landicensis ben also Colocenses, as tweye townes and oo peple in }}$ maners. These ben of Asie, and among hem hadden be false apostlis, and disceyuede manye. Therfore the postle bringith hem to mynde of his conuersacion and trewe preching of the gospel, and excitith hem to be stidfast in the trewe witt and loue of Crist, and to be of oo wil. But this pistil is not in comyn Latyn bookis, and therfor it was but late translatid into Englisch tunge ${ }^{1}$.'

The two forms of the epistle in its English dress are as follows ${ }^{2}$. The version on the left hand is extant only in a single ms; the other, which occupies the right column, is comparatively common.
'Poul, apostle, not of men, ne bi man, but bi Jhesu Crist, to the britheren that ben of Laodice, grace to 3 ou, and pees of God the fadir, and of the Lord Jhesu Crist. Gracis I do to Crist bi al myn orisoun, that 3 be be dwellinge in him and lastinge, bi the biheest abidinge in the dai of doom. Ne he vnordeynede vs of sum veyn speche feynynge, that ws ouerturne fro the sothfastnesse of the gospel that of me is prechid. Also now schal God do hem leuynge, and doynge of blessdnesse of werkis, which heelthe of lyf is. And now openli ben my boodis, whiche I suffre in Crist Jhesu, in whiche I glad and ioie. And that is to me heelthe euerlastynge, that that I dide with oure preieris, and mynystringe the Holy Spirit, bi lijf ( 1843 ), who takes the rarer form from Lewis and the other from a Dresden ms. Dr Westcott also has printed the commoner version in his Canon, p. 457 (ed. 4), from Forshall and Madden.

Of one of these two versions Forshall and Madden give a collation of several mss; the other is taken from a single ms (r. p. xxxii). Lewis does not state whence he derived the rarer of these two versions, but there can be little doubt that it came from the same ${ }_{m 8}$ Pepys. 2073 (belonging to Magd.Coll. Cambridge) from which it was taken by Forshall and Madden (r. p. Ivii); since he elsewhere mentions using this ws (p. 104). The version is not known to 'Poul, apostle, not of men,ne by man, but bi Jhesu Crist, to the britheren that ben at Laodice, grace to zou, and pees of God the fadir, and of the Lord Jhesu Orist. I do thankyngis to my God bi al my preier, that ze be dwelling and lastyng in him, abiding the biheest in the day of doom. For neithir the veyn spekyng of summe vnwise men hath lettide gou, the whiche wolden turne 300 fro the treuthe of the gospel, that is prechid of me. And now hem that ben of me, to the profist of truthe of the gospel, God schal make disseruyng, and doyng benygnyte of werkis, and helthe of euerlasting lijf. And now my boondis ben open, which Y suffire in Crist Jhesu, in whiche $\bar{Y}$ glade and ioie. And that is to me to euerlastyng helthe, that this same thing be doon by zoure preiers, and mynystryig of the Holi Goost, either bi exist in any other. Forshall and Madden given the date of the ms as about 1440.
${ }^{1}$ From Forshall and Madden, rv. p. 438. The earliest ass which contain the common version of the Laodicean Epistle (to which this prologue is prefixed) date aboat A.D. 1430 .
${ }^{2}$ Printed from Forshall and Madden 1.c. I am assured by those who are thoroughly conversant with old English, that they can discern no differ. ence of date in these two versions, and that they both belong probably to the early years of the 15 th century. The rarer version is taken from a better Latin text than the other.
or bi deeth. It is forsothe to me lijf into Crist, and to die ioie withouten eende. In va he sehal do his merci, that 30 haue the same louynge, and that $3 e$ be of o wil. Therfore, derlyngis, as $3 e$ han herd in presence of me, hold 3 e , and do 3 e in drede of God; and it schal be to 30 u lijf withouten eend. It is forsothe God that worchith in vs. And do 30 withonten ony withdrawinge, what soevere 30 doon. And that it is, derlyngis, ioie 30 in Crist, and flee $t e$ maad foul in clay. Alle zoure axiugis ben open anentis God, and be 3 e fastned in the witt of Crist. And whiche been hooi, and sooth, and chast, and rightwijs, and louable, do 30 ; and whiche herden and take in herte, hold $3 e$; and it schal be to $30 u$ pees. Holi men greeten 3 ou weel, in the grace of oure Lord Shesu Crist, with the Holi Goost. And do 30 that pistil of Colosensis to be red to zou. Amen. lijf, either bi deeth. Forsothe to me it is lijf to lyue in Crist, and to die ioie. And his mercy schal do in 300 the same thing, that 3 e moun have the same loue, and that 30 be of oo will. Therfore, 30 weel biloued britheren, holde $3 e$, and do $3 e$ in the dreede of God, as $3 e$ han herde the presence of me; and lijf schal be to 3 ou withouten eende. Sotheli it is God that worchith in jou. And, my weel biloued britheren, do se without eny withdrawyng what euer thingis 3 e don. Joie $3 e$ in Crist, and eschewe ze men defoulid in lucre, either foul wynnyng. Be alle joure askyngis open anentis God, and be 3e stidefast in the witt of Crist. And do 30 tho thingis that ben hool, and trewe, and chaast, and iust, and able to be loued; and kepe 3 e in herte tho thingis that 38 haue herd and take; and pees schal be to 300. Alle holi men greten $30 u$ weel. The grace of oure Lord Jhesu Crist be with zoure spirit. And do 30 that pistil of Colocensis to be red to 30 u .

Thus for more than nine centuries this forged epistle hovered about Revival of the doors of the sacred Canon, without either finding admission or being learming peremptority excluded. At length the revival of learning dealt its death- and conblow to this as to so many other spurious pretensions. As a rule, Roman Catholics and Reformers were equally strong in their condemnation of its epistle. worthlessness. The language of Erasmns more especially is worth quoting for its own sake, and must not be diluted by translation:
'Nihil habet Pauli praeter voculas aliquot ex caeteris ejus epistolis Strictares mendicatas......Non est cujusvis hominis Paulinum pectus effingere. Tonat, of Erasfulgurat, meras flammas loquitur Paulus. At haec, praeterquam quod brevis- mus. sima est, quam friget, quam jacet 1...Quanquam quid attinet argumentari? Legat, qui volet, epistolam......Nullum argumentum efficacius persuaserit eam non esse Pauli quam ipsa epistola. Et si quid mihi maris est, ejusdem est opificis qui naeniis suis omnium veterum theologorum omnia scripta contaminavit, consparcavit, perdidit, ac praecipue ejus qui prae caeteris indignus erat ea contumelia, nempe D. Hieronymi ${ }^{1}$.'

[^91]this hypothesis is consistent with the condemnation of the Epistle to the Laodiceans in Hieron. Vir. Ill. 5 (quoted above p. 293).

Excep- But some eccentric spirits on both sides were still found to maintain its tions. genuineness. Thus on the one hand the Lutheran Steph. Protorius prefaces his edition of this epistle (A.D. 1595) with the statement that he 'restores Pretorius. it to the Christian Church'; he gives his opinion that it was written 'either by the Apostle himself or by some other Apostolic man': he declares that to himself it is 'redolent of the spirit and grace of the most divine Paul'; and he recommends younger teachers of the Gospel to 'try their strength in explaining it', that thus 'accustoming themselves gradually to the Apostolic doctrine they may extract thence a flavour sweeter than Stapleton, ambrosia and nectar ${ }^{1}$ ' On the other hand the Jesuit Stapleton was not less eager in his advocacy of this miserable cento. To him its genuineness had a controversial value. Along with several other apocryphal writings which he accepted in like manner, it was important in his eyes as showing that the Church had authority to exclude even Apostolic writings from the Canon, if she judged fit ${ }^{2}$. But such phenomena were quite abnormal. The dawn of the Reformation epoch had effectually scared away this ghost of a Pauline epistle, which (we may confidently hope) has been laid for ever and will not again be suffered to haunt the mind of the Charch.

1 Pauli Apostoti ad Laodicenses Epistola, Latine et Germanice, Hamburg. 1595, of which the preface is given in Fabricius Cod. Apocr. Nov. Test. In. p. 867. It is curions that the only two arguments against its gennineness which he thinks worthy of notice are (I) Its brevity; which he answers by appealing to the Epistle to Philemon; and (2) Its recommendation of works ('quod seripsit opera esse facienda quae sunt solutis aeter. nse'); which he explains to refer to works that proceed of faith.
${ }^{2}$ See Bp. Davenant on Col. iv. 16: ${ }^{-}$Detestanda Stapletonis opimio, qui ipsius Pauli epistolam esse statuit, quam omnes patres ut adulterinam et insulsam repudiarunt; nec sanior conclusio, quam inde deducere voluit, posse nimirum ecclesiam germanam et veram apostoli Pauli epistolam pro sua authoritate e Canone excludere'. So also Whitaker Disputation on Scripture passim (see the references given above, p. 275, note 3).

EPISTLE TO PHILEMON.

INTRODUCTION TO THE EPISTLE.

THE Epistle to Philemon holds a unique place among the Unique Apostle's writings. It is the only strictly private letter of the $\begin{gathered}\text { char }\end{gathered}$ which has been preserved. The Pastoral Epistles indeed are epistle. addressed to individuals, but they discuss important matters of Church discipline and government. Evidently they were intended to be read by others besides those to whom they are immediately addressed. On the other hand the letter before us does not once touch upon any question of public interest. It is addressed apparently to a layman. It is wholly occupied with an incident of domestic life. The occasion which called it forth was altogether common-place. It is only one sample of numberless letters which must have been written to his many friends and disciples by one of St Paul's eager temperament and warm affections, in the course of a long and chequered life. Yet to ourselves this fragment, which has been rescued, we know not how, from the wreck of a large Its value. and varied correspondence, is infinitely precious. Nowhere is the social influence of the Gospel more strikingly exerted; nowhere does the nobility of the Apostle's character receive a more vivid illustration than in this accidental pleading on behalf of a runaway slave.

The letter introduces us to an ordinary household in a The small town in Phrygia. Four members of it are mentioned persons by name, the father, the mother, the son, and the slave.
r. The head of the family bears a name which, for good or r. Philefor evil, was not unknown in connexion with Phrygiau story. ${ }^{\text {mion. }}$

Occurrence of the name in Phrygia.

The legend of Philemon and Baucis, the aged peasants who entertained not angels but gods unawares, and were rewarded by their divine guests for their homely hospitality and their conjugal love ${ }^{1}$, is one of the most attractive in Greek mythology, and contrasts favourably with many a revolting tale in which the powers of Olympus are represented as visiting this lower earth. It has a special interest too for the Apostolic history, because it suggests an explanation of the scene at Lystra, when the barbarians would have sacrificed to the Apostles, imagining that the same two gods, Zeus and Hermes, had once again deigned to visit, in the likeness of men, those regions which they had graced of old by their presence ${ }^{2}$. Again, in historical times we read of one Philemon who obtained an unenviable notoriety at Athens by assuming the rights of Athenian citizenship, though a Phrygian and apparently a slave ${ }^{3}$. Otherwise the name is not distinctively Phrygian. It does not occur with any special frequency in the inscriptions belonging to this country; and though several persons bearing this name rose to eminence in literary history, not one, so far as we know, was a Phrygian.

This Philemon a Colossian

The Philemon with whom we are concerned was a native, or at least an inhabitant, of Colossæ. This appears from the fact that his slave is mentioned as belonging to that place. It may be added also, in confirmation of this view, that in one of two epistles written and despatched at the same time St Paul [^92]bant'. The familiarity with this beautiful story may have suggested to the barbarians of Lystra, whose ' Lycaonian speech' was not improbably a dialect of Phrygian, that the same two gods, Zeus and Hermes, had again visited this region on an errand at once of beneficence and of vengeance, while at the same time it would prompt them to conciliate the deities by a similar mode of propitiation, y" $\theta \in \lambda \frac{1}{}$ $\theta$ ứcl.

 Tô̂ $\Phi_{i} \lambda_{\eta j \mu o v o s ~}^{\text {rélyous. }}$ announces the restoration of Onesimus to his master, while in the other he speaks of this same person as revisiting Colosser ${ }^{\text { }}$. On the other hand it would not be safe to lay any stress on the statement of Theodoret that Philemon's house was still standing at Colossæ when he wrote ${ }^{2}$, for traditions of this kind have seldom any historical worth.

Philemon had been converted by St Paul himself ${ }^{3}$. At converted what time or under what circumstances he received his first ${ }_{\text {Panit }}^{\text {by }}$ lessons in the Gospel, we do not know : but the Apostle's long residence at Ephesus naturally suggests itself as the period when he was most likely to have become acquainted with a citizen of Colossm ${ }^{4}$.

Philemon proved not unworthy of his spiritual parentage. His evanThough to Epaphras belongs the chief glory of preaching the $\begin{gathered}\text { geilical } \\ \text { zeal }\end{gathered}$ Gospel at Colossæ ${ }^{5}$, his labours were well seconded by Philemon. The title of 'fellow-labourer,' conferred upon him by the Apostle ${ }^{6}$, is a noble testimony to his evangelical zeal. Like Nymphas in the neighbouring Church of Laodicea ${ }^{7}$, Philemon had placed his house at the disposal of the Christians at Colosse for their religious and social gatherings ${ }^{8}$. Like Gaius ${ }^{s}$, to whom the only other private letter in the Apostolic Canon is addressed ${ }^{\text {º }}$, he was generous in his hospitalities. All those and wide with whom he came in contact spoke with gratitude of his hospita-

[^93]Legendary kindly attentions ${ }^{\text { }}$. Of his subsequent career we have no cer-martyrdom.
7. Apphia his wife. tain knowledge. Legendary story indeed promotes him to the bishopric of Colosse ${ }^{9}$, and records how he was martyred in his native city under Nero ${ }^{3}$. But this tradition or fiction is not entitled to any credit. All that we really know of Philemon is contained within this epistle itself.
2. It is a safe inference from the connexion of the names that Apphia was the wife of Philemon ". The commentators assume without misgiving that we have here the familiar Roman name Appia, though they do not explain the intrusion
A etrietily Phrygian name. of the aspirate ${ }^{5}$. This seems to be a mistake. The word occurs very frequently on Phrygian inscriptions as a proper name, and is doubtless of native origin. At Aphrodisias and Philadelphia, at Eumenia and Apamea Cibotus, at Stratonicea, at Philomelium, at Æzani and Cotiæum and Dorylæum, at almost all the towns far and near, which were either Phrygian or subject to Phrygian influences, and in which any fair number of inscriptions has been preserved, the name is found. If no example has been discovered at Colossm itself, we must remember that not a single proper name has been preserved on any monumental inscription at this place. It is generally written either Apphia or Aphphia ${ }^{6}$; more rarely Aphia, which is perhaps [^94]Like other direct statements of this same writer, as for instance that the Colossians sent a depatation to St Paul (L'Antéehrist p. go), this assertion rests on no authority.

${ }^{5}$ They speak of 'A $A \phi l a$ as a softened form of the Latin Appia, and quote Acts xxviii. I 5 , where however the form is 'Antioy. Even Ewrald writes the word Appia.

6 'A $\overline{6}$ la, no. 2782, 2835, 2950, 3432, 3446,2775 b, c, d, 2837 b, 3902 m, 3962, 4124, 4I 45 : 'A $\phi$ фla, no. 3814, 4 I4I, $4277,43^{2 I} \mathrm{f}, 3827 \mathrm{l}, 384^{6} \mathrm{z}$, $3846 \mathrm{z}^{17}$. So far as I could trace any law, the form 'Apфla is preferred in the northern and more distant towns like 巴̉zani and Cotimam, while 'Ampia prevails in the soathern towns in the more immediste neighbourhood of Colossee, such as Aphrodisias. This due merely to the carelessness of the stonecutters ${ }^{1}$. But, so far Its affinias I have observed, it always preserves the aspirate. Its dimi- ${ }^{\text {ties }}$ nutive is Apphion or Aphphion or Aphion 2. The allied form Aphphias or Aphias, also a woman's name, is found, though less commonly'; and we likewise frequently meet with the shorter form Apphe or Aphphe ${ }^{4}$. The man's name corresponding to Apphia is Apphianos, but this is rare ${ }^{5}$. The root would appear to be some Phrygian term of endearment or relationship ${ }^{6}$. It occurs commonly in connexion with other Phrygian and ananames of a like stamp, more especially Ammia, which under- ${ }^{\text {logies. }}$ goes the same modifications of form, Amia, Ammias, Ammion or Amion, Ammiane or Ammiana, with the corresponding masculine Ammianos ${ }^{7}$. With these we may also compare accords with the evidence of our mss, in which 'Andla is the best supported form, though ' $\Delta \phi \phi$ ia is found in some. In Theod. Mops. (Cramer's Cat. p. 105) it becomes 'Aupla by a common corruption ; and Old Latin copies write the dative Apphiadi from the allied form Apphias.
The most interesting of these inscriptions mentioning the name is no. 2782 at Aphrodisias, where there is a $\mu \eta \tau \rho d s$ кal $\dot{\alpha} \delta \in \lambda \phi \hat{\eta} s \kappa \alpha i \mu d \mu \mu \eta, \sigma v v \kappa \lambda \eta-$

${ }^{1}$ no. $2720,3827$.
2 "Aㅎфוov or "Aффlov 2733, 2836, 3295, 3849, $3902 \mathrm{~m}, 4207$; "Афเข , $3^{846}$ z $^{34}$ and "Apetov 3846 z $^{31}$; and even 3902 m the mother's name is 'A A 中la and the daughter's "A Atolov.
:'Aффlas 3697, 3983 ; 'Aфias 3879.
${ }^{4}$ " $\Delta \phi \phi \eta$ 3816, 3390, 4143; " $\Delta \pi \phi \eta$ 3796, 4 122.

6 It is met with at the neighbouring town of Hierapolis, in the form 'A $\pi$ plavos no. 3911. It also occurs on coins of not very distant parts of Asin Minor, being written either 'Axфlayos or 'Aффlavos; Mionnet iII. p. 179,184 , ग. p. 65, 67, Suppl. vi. p. 293, vir. p. 365 .
 фой üтокбряन $\mu a$, and so Bekk. Anecd. p. 441. Eustath, Il. p. 565 says äтфаи

 $\delta \pi a i ̂ s ~ \kappa . \tau . \lambda$. , and he adds lattow dè $\delta \tau t$

 $\kappa^{6} y$. These words were found in writers of Attio comedy (Pollux iii. 74 方 $\pi \alpha \rho d$ кal ámфáplov; comp. Xenarchus toùs

 Meineke Fragm. Com, unI. p. 6r7): and doabtless they were heard commonly in Attic homes. But were they not learnt in the nursery from Phrygian slaves? 'Aтфáptoy appears in two inscriptions almost as a proper name, 4o 1 d.avy. In no. 4207 (at Telmissus)
 it seems sometimes to have been employed side by side with a Greek name; comp. no. 3912 Ia Патfas...ó калои́иеуоs $\Delta$ to $\boldsymbol{t} \boldsymbol{\prime} \eta \eta$ s, quoted above, p. 48. This will account for the frequency of the names, Apphia, Apphion, etc. In Theocr. xv. 13 we have dirфûs, and in Callim. Hym. Dian. 6 äña, as a term of endearment applied to a father.

7 This appears from the fact that Ammias and Ammianos appear sometimes as the names of mother and son respectively in the same insoriptions; e. $8.3846 \mathrm{z}^{82}, 3^{84}$ t $\mathrm{k}, 3^{883}$ i.

Tatia, Tatias, Tation, Tatiane or Tatiana, Tatianos. Similar too is the name Papias or Pappias, with the lengthened form Papianos, to which corresponds the feminine Papiane ${ }^{1}$. So again we have Nannas or Nanas, Nanna or Nana, with their

Not to be confused with the Latin Appia.

Her share in the letter. derivatives, in these Phrygian inscriptions ${ }^{2}$. There is a tendency in some of the allied forms of Apphia or Aphphia to drop the aspirate so that they are written with a $p p$, more especially in Appe ${ }^{3}$, but not in the word itself; nor have I observed conversely any disposition to write the Roman name Appia with an aspirate, Apphia or Aphphia ${ }^{4}$. Even if such a disposition could be proved, the main point for which I am contending can hardly be questioned. With the overwhelming evidence of the inscriptions before us, it is impossible to doubt that Apphia is a native Phrygian name ${ }^{5}$.

Of this Phrygian matron we know nothing more than can be learnt from this epistle. The tradition or fiction which represents her as martyred together with her husband may be safely disregarded. St Paul addresses her as a Christian ${ }^{6}$. Equally with her husband she had been aggrieved by the misconduct of their slave Onesimus, and equally with him she might interest herself in the penitent's future well-being.
3. Archip- 3. With less confidence, but still with a reasonable degree pus, the son. of probability, we may infer that Archippus, who is likewise mentioned in the opening salutation, was a son ${ }^{7}$ of Philemon

[^95]${ }^{4}$ In the Greek historians of Rome for instance the personal name is always" $A \pi \pi$ los and the road ' $A \pi \pi i a$; so too in Acts xaviil. 15 it is 'Amilou \$ópos.
s The point to be observed is that examples of these names are thickest in the heart of Phrygia, that they diminish in frequency as Phrygian in. fluence becomes weaker, and that they almost, though not entirely, disappear in other parts of the Greek and Boman world.

6 ver. $2 \tau \hat{\eta} \dot{d} \delta \delta \lambda \phi \hat{n}$. See the note.
$T$ So Theodore of Mopsnestis, But Chrysostom Érepón riva tows фliov, and and Apphia. The inscriptions do not exhibit the name in any such frequency, either in Phrygia or in the surrounding districts, as to suggest that it was characteristic of these parts ${ }^{1}$. Our Archippus held some important office in the Church ${ }^{2}$; His office but what this was, we are not told. St Paul speaks of it as a 'ministry' ( $\delta$ lakovia). Some have interpreted the term technically as signifying the diaconate; but St Paul's emphatic message seems to imply a more important position than this. Others again suppose that he succeeded Epaphras as bishop of Colosse, when Epaphras left his native city to join the Apostle at Rome ${ }^{3}$; but the assumption of a regular and continuous episcopate in such a place as Colossæ at this date seems to involve an anachronism. More probable than either is the hypothesis which makes him a presbyter. Or perhaps he held a missionary charge, and belonged to the order of 'evangelists ": Another question too arises respecting Archippus. Where was he exercisiry this ministry, whatever it may have been? At Colossæ, or at Laodicea? His connexion with Philemon andabode, would suggest the former place. But in the Epistle to the Colossians his name is mentioned immediately after the salutation to the Laodiceans and the directions affecting that Church; and this fact seems to connect him with Laodicea. Laodicea, On the whole this appears to be the more probable solution ${ }^{5}$. than Laodicea was within walking distance of Colosss ${ }^{6}$. Archippus ${ }^{\text {Colossm. }}$ must have been in constant communication with his parents, who lived there; and it was therefore quite natural that, writing to the father and mother, St Paul should mention the son's name also in the opening address, though he was not on the spot. An early tradition, if it be not a critical inference [^96][^97]from the allusion in the Colossian letter, makes him bishop not of Colossa, but of Laodicea ${ }^{\text {: }}$.

Hiscareer. Of the apprehensions which the Apostle seems to have entertained respecting Archippus, I have already spoken ${ }^{\text {a }}$. It is not improbable that they were suggested by his youth and inexperience. St Paul here addresses him as his 'fellowsoldier ${ }^{\text {s }}$, but we are not informed on what spiritual campaigns they had served in company. Of his subsequent career we have no trustworthy evidence. Tradition represents him as having suffered martyrdom at Colosse with his father and mother.
4. Onesimus.

A servile name.
4. But far more important to the history of Christianity than the parents or the son of the family, is the servant. The name Onesimus was very commonly borne by slaves. Like other words signifying utility, worth, and so forth, it naturally. lent itself to this purpose ? Accordingly the inscriptions offer a very large number of examples in which it appears as the name of some slave or freedman ${ }^{5}$; and even where this is not the case, the accompaniments frequently show that the person was of servile descent, though he might never himself have been a slave ${ }^{6}$. Indeed it occurs more than once as a fictitious name for a slave ${ }^{7}$, a fact which points significantly to [^98]sponding female nsme Onesime in mocexxix. 12, MDXLyi. 6, mDCXIL. 9. A more diligent search than $I$ have made would probably increase the number of examples very largely.

${ }^{6}$ e.g. Corp. Inscr. Lat. Int. p. 238, no. 1467 , D. M. M. AYR . ONESIMO. CARpion . AYG . LIB . TABYL . FILIO. In the next generation any direct notice of servile origin would disappear; but the names very often indicate it. It need not however necessarily denote low extraction : see e.g. Liv. xliv. 16.

7 Menander Inc. 312 (Meineke Fragm. addressed is a slave, as appears from the mention of his toóфt $\mu a s$, i. e. master; Galen de Opt, Doctr. I (1. p. 41) ed. Kiihn), where there is a reference to a work of Phavorinus in which was introduced one Onesimus í Пגoutápxov the social condition naturally suggested by it. In the inscriptions of proconsular Asia it is found ${ }^{1}$; but no stress can be laid. on this coincidence, for its occurrence as a proper name was doubtless coextensive with the use of the Greek language. More important is the fact that in the early history of Christianity it attains some eminence in this region. One Onesimus Its prois bishop of Ephesus in the first years of the second century, minence ${ }_{\text {among the }}^{\text {the }}$ when Ignatius passes through Asia Minor on his way to Christians martyrdom, and is mentioned by the saint in terms of warm sular Asia. affection and respect ${ }^{2}$. Another, apparently an influential layman, about half a century later urges Melito bishop of Sardis to compile a volume of extracts from the Scriptures; and to him this father dedicates the work when completed ${ }^{3}$. Thus it would appear that the memory of the Colossian slave had invested the name with a special popularity among Christians in this district.

Onesimus represented the least respectable type of the Position least respectable class in the social scale. He was regarded by duct of and conphilosophers as a. 'live chattel,' a 'live implement'; and he had Onesimus. taken philosophy at her word. He had done what a chattel or an implement might be expected to do, if endued with life and intelligence. He was treated by the law as having no rights ${ }^{5}$; and he had carried the principles of the law to their logical consequences. He had declined to entertain any responsibilities.

[^99]There was absolutely nothing to recommend him. He was a slave, and what was worse, a Phrygian slave; and he had confirmed the popular estimate of his class ${ }^{1}$ and nation ${ }^{2}$ by his own conduct. He was a thief and a runaway. His offence did not differ in any way, so far as we know, from the vulgar type of slavish offences. He seems to have done just what the representative slave in the Roman comedy threatens to do, when he gets into trouble. He had 'packed up some groods and taken to his heels ${ }^{3}$.' Rome was the natural cesspool for these offscourings of humanity ${ }^{4}$. In the thronging crowds of the metropolis was his best hope of secresy. In the dregs of the city rabble he would find the society of congenial spirits.

But at Rome the Apostle spread his net for him, and he was caught in its meshes. How he first came in contact with the imprisoned missionary we can only conjecture. Was it an accidental encounter with his fellow-townsman Epaphras in the streets of Rome which led to the interview? Was it the pressure of want which induced him to seek alms from one whose large-hearted chàrity must have been a household word in his master's family? Or did the memory of solemn words, which he had chanced to overhear at those weekly gatherings in the upper chamber at Colossa, haunt him in his loneliness, till, yielding to the fascination, he was constrained to unburden himself to the one man who could soothe his [^100]terrors and satisfy his yearnings? Whatever motive may have drawn him to the Apostle's side-whether the pangs of hunger or the gnawings of conscience-when he was once within the range of attraction, he could not escape. He and conlistened, was impressed, was convinced, was baptized. The ${ }^{\text {version. }}$ slave of Philemon became the freedman of Christ ${ }^{1}$. St Paul found not only a sincere convert, but a devoted friend, in his latest son in the faith. Aristotle had said that there ought not to be, and could not be, any friendship with a slave qua slave, though there might be qua man ${ }^{2}$; and others had held still stronger language to the same effect. The Apostle did not recognise the philosopher's subtle distinction. For him the conventional barrier between slave and free had altogether vanished before the dissolving presence of an eternal verity ${ }^{8}$. He found in Onesimus something more than a slave, a beloved st Pauls brother, both as a slave and as a man, 'both in the flesh and in for him the Lord ". The great eapacity for good which appears in the typical slave of Greek and Roman fiction, notwithstanding all the fraud and profligacy overlying it, was evoked and developed here by the inspiration of a new faith and the incentive of a new hope. The genial, affectionate, winning disposition, purified and elevated by a higher knowledge, had found its proper scope. Altogether this new friendship was a solace and a strength to the Apostle in his weary eaptivity, which he could ill afford to forego. To take away Onesimus was to tear out Paul's heart ${ }^{5}$.

1 Plant. Pseud. 1. 2, 6 'Uhi data occasiost, rape, clepe, tene, harpaga, bibe, es, fuge; hoo eormm opust'; Ovid Amor. i. 15. 17 'Dum fallax servus,'

2 Cicero spoaks thas of Phrygia and theneighbouring districts; pro Flacc. 27 - Utram igitur nostram est an vestrum hoc proverbium Phrygem plagis fieri solere metiorem? Quid de tota Caria? Nonne hoc vestra voce vulgatum est; si quid cam periculo experiri velis, in Care id potissimum esse faciendum? Quid porro in Graeco sermone tam tritum est, quam si quis despicatui dacitar, nt Mysorum ultimus esse dicatur? Nam quid ego dicam de Lydia? Quis maquam Graecus comoedism scripsit in qua servus primarum partium

But there was an imperious demand for the sacrifice. One- Nocessity simus had repented, but he had not made restitution. He $\begin{gathered}\text { for his } \\ \text { return }\end{gathered}$ could only do this by submitting again to the servitude from [^101][^102]which he had escaped. Philemon must be made to feel that when Onesimus was gained for Christ, he was regained for his old master also. But if the claim of duty demanded a great sacrifice from Paul, it demanded a greater still from Onesimus.

notwithstanding the risk.

Mediation of Tychicus
'supplemented by the Apostle's letter.

Analysis of the letter. By returning he would place himself entirely at the mercy of the master whom he had wronged. Roman law, more cruel than Athenian, practically imposed no limits to the power of the master over his slave ${ }^{1}$. The alternative of life or death rested solely with Philemon, and slaves were constantly crucified for far lighter offences than his ${ }^{2}$. A thief and a runaway, he had no claim to forgiveness.

A favourable opportunity occurred for restoring Onesimus to his master. Tychicus, as the bearer of letters from the Apostle to Laodicea and Colosse, had occasion to visit those parts. He might undertake the office of mediator, and plead the cause of the penitent slave with the offended master. Under his shelter Onesimus would be safer than if he encountered Philemon alone. But St Paul is not satisfied with this precaution. He will with his own hand write a few words of eager affectionate entreaty, identifying himself with the cause of Onesimus. So he takes up his pen.

After the opening salutation to Philemon and the members of his family, he expresses his thankfulness for the report which has reached his ears of his friend's charitable deeds. It is a great joy and encouragement to the Apostle that so many brethren have had cause to bless his name. This wide-spread reputation for kindliness emboldens him to reveal his object in writing. Though he has a right to command, he prefers rather to entreat. He has a petition to prefer on behalf of a child of his own. This is none other than Onesimus, whom Philemon Analysis will remember only as a worthless creature, altogether untrue of the to his name, but who now is a reformed man. He would have wished to detain Onesimus, for he can ill afford to dispense with his loving services. Indeed Philemon would doubtless have been glad thus to minister vicariously to the Apostle's wants. But a benefit which wears the appearance of being forced, whether truly so or not, loses all its value, and therefore he sends him back. Nay, there may have been in this desertion a Divine providence which it would ill become him Paul to thwart, Onesimus may have been withheld from Philemon for a time, that he might be restored to him for ever. He may have left as a slave, that he might return more than a slave. To othersto the Apostle himself especially-he is now a dearly beloved brother. Must he not be this and more than this to Philemon, whether in earthly things or in beavenly things? He therefore begs Philemon to receive Onesimus as he would receive himself. As for any injury that he may bave done, as for any money that he may owe, the Apostle makes himself responsible for this. The present letter may be accepted as a bond, a security for repayment. Yet at the same time he cannot refrain from reminding Philemon that he might fairly claim the remission of so small an amount. Does not his friend owe to him his own soul besides? Yes, he has a right to look for some filial gratitude and duty from one to whom he stands in the relation of a spiritual father. Philemon will surely not refuse him this comfort in his many trials. He writes in the full confidence that he will be obeyed; he is quite sure that his friend will do more than is asked of him. At the same time he trusts to see him before very long, and to talk over this and other matters. Philemon may provide him a lodging: for he hopes through their prayers that he may be liberated, and given back to them. Then follow the salutations, and the letter ends with the Apostle's benediction.

[^103]quo crimine servas supplicinm? quis testis adest? quis detulit?... O demens, ita servas homo est? nil fecerit, esto. Hoc volo, sic jabeo, etc.' Compare the words of the slave in Plantus Mil. Glor. ii. 4. ig 'Noli minitari : scio crucem futuram mihi sepulerum : Ibi mei sunt majores siti, pater, avos, proavos, abavos.'

Of the result of this appeal we have no certain knowledge. Restlt It is reasonable to suppose however that Philemon would not of the apeal.
belie the Apostle's hopes; that he would receive the slave as a brother; that he would even go beyond the express terms of the Apostle's petition, and emancipate the penitent. But all this is a mere conjecture. One tradition makes Onesimus bishop of Ephesus ${ }^{1}$. But this obviously arises from a confusion with Legendary history. his namesake, who lived about half a century later ${ }^{2}$. Another story points to Berœea in Macedonia as his see ${ }^{3}$. This is at least free from the suspicion of having been suggested by any notice in the Apostolic writings: but the authority on which it rests does not entitle it to much credit. The legend of his missionary labours in Spain and of his martyrdom at Rome may have been built on the hypothesis of his continuing in the Apostle's company, following in the Apostle's footsteps, and sharing the Apostle's fate. Another story, which gives a circumstantial account of his martyrdom at Puteoli, seems to confuse him with a namesake who suffered, or was related to have suffered, in the Decian persecution ${ }^{4}$.

Depreciation of the epistle in early times.

The estimate formed of this epistle at various epochs has differed widely. In the fourth century there was a strong bias against it. The 'spirit of the age' had no sympathy with either the subject or the handling. Like the spirit of more than one later age, it was enamoured of its own narrowness, which it mistook for largeness of view, and it could not condescend to such trivialities as were here offered to it. Its maxim seemed to be De minimis non curat evangelium. Of what account was the fate of a single insignificant slave, long since dead and gone, to those before whose eyes the battle of the creeds was still raging? This letter taught them nothing about questions of theological interest, nothing about matters of ecclesiastical disci-[^104]may be intended. But on the other hand the language of Ignatius (Ephes. I 8q.) leaves the impression that he is speaking of a person comparatively young and untried in office.

${ }^{8}$ Appst. Const. vii. 46, quoted above, p. 206, note I.
4. For the legend compare Act. Sanct. 1. c. p. 858 sq. See alsa the pline; and therefore they would have none of it. They denied that it had been written by St Paul. It mattered nothing to them that the Church from the earliest ages had accepted it as genuine, that even the remorseless 'higher criticism' of a Marcion had not ventured to lay hands on it ${ }^{1}$. It was wholly unworthy of the Apostle. If written by him, they contended, it must have been written when he was not under the influence of the Spirit: its contents were altogether so unedifying. We Reply may infer from the replies of Jerome ${ }^{2}$, of Chrysostom ${ }^{3}$, and of of the Theodore of Mopsuestia ${ }^{4}$, that they felt themselves to be stemming a fierce current of prejudice which had set in this direction. But they were strong in the excellence of their cause, and they nobly vindicated this epistle against its assailants.

In modern times there has been no disposition to under-rate High esits value. Even Luther and Calvin, whose bias tended to the ${ }_{\text {modern }}^{\text {timate }}$ depreciation of the ethical as compared with the doctrinal writers. portions of the scriptures, show a true appreciation of its beauty and significance. 'This epistle', writes Luther, 'showeth a Lather. right noble lovely example of Christian love. Here we see how note on the Ignatian Mart. Rom. 10.
${ }^{1}$ Hieron. Comm. in Philem. praef.
VII. p. 743 ' Pauli esse epistolam ad Philemonem saltem Marcione auctore doceantar: qui, quum caeteras epistolas ejusdem vel non susceperit vel quaedam in his mutaverit atque corroserit, in hanc solam manus non est ausus mittere, quia sua illam brevitas defendebat.' St Jerome has in his mind Tertullian adv. Marc. v. 2I 'Soli huia epistolae brevitas sna profuit, ut fal. sarias manus Marcionis evaderet.'
${ }^{2}$ ib. p. $74^{2}$ sq. 'Qui nolunt inter epistolas Parli eam resipere quae ad Philemonem scribitur, aiunt pon sem. per apostolum nec omnia Christo in se loquente dixisse, quia nec hamana imbecillitas unum tenorem Sancti Spiritusferre potuisset etc... His et caeteris istius modi volunt ant epistolam non esse Pauli quae ad Philemonem scribitur aut, etiamsi Paudi sit, nihil ha.
bere quod aedificare nos possit ete.... sed mịhi videntur, dum epistolam simplicitatis argaunt, suam imperitiam prodere, non intelligentes quid in singolis sermonibus virtutis et sapientiae lateat.'

 goes on to discuss the value of the epistle at some length.
4Spicil. Solesm. 1. p. 149 'Quid vero ex ea lucri possit acquiri, convenit manifestias explicare, quia nec omnibus id existimo posse esse cognitum; quod maxime heri jam ipse a nobis disseri postulasti'; ib. p. 152 'De his et nunc superiag dixi, quod non omnes similiter arbitror potius se (potuisse?) prospicere.'

St Paul layeth himself out for poor Onesimus, and with all his means pleadeth his cause with his master: and so setteth himself as if he were Onesimus, and had himself done wrong to Philemon. Even as Christ did for us with God the Father, thus also doth St Paul for Onesimus with Philemon...We are all his Onesimi, to my thinking.' 'Though he handleth a subject,'

Calvin.

Later writers.

The epistle compared with a letter of Pliny, says Calvin, 'which otherwise were low and mean, yet after his manner he is borne up aloft unto God. With such modest entreaty doth he humble himself on behalf of the lowest of men, that scarce anywhere else is the gentleness of his spirit portrayed more truly to the life.' And the chorus of admiration has been swelled by later voices from the most opposite quarters. 'The single Epistle to Philemon,' says one quoted by Bengel, 'very far surpasses all the wisdom of the world ${ }^{1}$.' 'Nowhere,', writes Ewald, 'can the sensibility and warmth of a tender friendship blend more beautifully with the loftier feeling of a commanding spirit, a teacher and an Apostle, than in this, letter, at once so brief, and yet so surpassingly full and significant ${ }^{2}$.' 'A true little chef d'couvre of the art of letter-writing,' exclaims M. Renan characteristically'. 'We have here,' writes Sabatier, 'only a few familiar lines, but so full of grace, of salt, of serious and trustful affection, that this short epistle gleams like a pearl of the most exquisite purity in the rich treasure of the New Testament ". Even Baur, while laying violent hands upon it, is constrained to speak of this 'little letter' as 'making such an agreeable impression by its attractive form' and as penetrated 'with the noblest Christian spirit ${ }^{5}$.'

The Epistle to Philemon has more than once been compared with the following letter addressed to a friend by the younger Pliny on a somewhat similar occasion ${ }^{6}$ :

Your freedman, with whom you had told me you were vexed, came to me, and throwing himself down before me clung to my feet, [^105][^106]as if they had been yours. He was profuse in his tears and his entreaties; he was profuse also in his silence. In short, he convinced me of his penitence. I believe that he is indeed a reformed character, because he feels that he has done wrong. You are angry, I know; and you have reason to be angry, this also I know: but mercy wins the highest praise just when there is the most righteous cause for anger. You loved the man, and, I hope, will continue to love him : meanwhile it is enough, that you should allow yourself to yield to his prayers. You may be angry again, if he deserves it; and in this you will be the more readily pardoned if you yield now. Concede something to his youth, something to his tears, something to your own indulgent disposition. Do not torture him, lest you torture yourself at the same time. For it is torture to you, when one of your gentle temper is angry. I am afraid lest I should appear not to ask but to compel, if I should add my prayers to his. Yet I will add them the more fully and unreservedly, because I scolded the man himself with sharpness and severity; for I threatened him straitly that I would never ask you again. This I said to him, for it was necessary to alarm him; but I do not use the same language to you. For perchance I shall ask again, and shall be successful again; only let my request be such, as it becomes me to prefer and you to grant. Farewell.

The younger Pliny is the noblest type of a true Roman as an exgentleman, and this touching letter needs no words of praise. of chaYet, if purity of diction be excepted, there will hardly be any racter. difference of opinion in awarding the palm to the Christian Apostle. As an expression of simple dignity, of refined courtesy, of large sympathy, and of warm personal affection, the Epistle to Philemon stands unrivalled. And its pre-eminence is the more remarkable because in style it is exceptionally loose. It owes nothing to the graces of rhetoric; its effect is due solely to the spirit of the writer.

But the interest which attaches to this short epistle as Its higher an expression of individual character is far less important than ${ }^{\text {interest. }}$ its significance as exhibiting the attitude of Christianity to a widely spread and characteristic social institution of the ancient world.

Slavery was practised by the Hebrews under the sanction of the Mosaic law, not less than by the Greeks and Romans.

Slavery among the Hebrews.

But though the same in name, it was in its actual working something wholly different. The Hebrew was not suffered either by law-giver or by prophet to forget that he himself had been a bondman in the land of Egypt; and all his relations to his dependents were moulded by the sympathy of this recollection. His slaves were members of his family; they were members also of the Holy Congregation. They had their religious, as well as their social, rights. If Hebrews, their liberty was secured to them after six years' service at the outside. If foreigners, they were protected by the laws from the tyranny and violence of their masters. Considering the conditions of ancient society, and more especially of ancient warfare, slavery as practised among the Hebrews was probably an escape from alternatives which would have involved a far greater amount of human misery. Still even in this form it was only a temporary concession, till the fulness of time came, and the world was taught that ' in Christ is neither bond nor free ${ }^{1}$.'

Among the Jews the slaves formed only a small fraction of the whole population ${ }^{2}$. They occupy a very insignificant place in the pictures of Hebrew life and history which have been

Large number of slaves in Greace and Rome. handed down to us. But in Greece and Rome the case was far different. In our enthusiastic eulogies of free, enlightened, democratic Athens, we are apt to forget that the interests of the many were ruthlessly sacrificed to the selfishness of the few. The slaves of Attica on the most probable computation were about four times as numerous as the citizens, and about three times as numerous as the whole free population of the state, including the resident aliens ${ }^{3}$. They were consigned for the most part to labour in gangs in the fields or the mines [^107][^108]or the factories, without any hope of bettering their condition. In the light of these facts we see what was really meant by popular government and equal rights at Athens. The proportions of the slave population elsewhere were even greater. In the small island of Agina, scarcely exceeding forty Euglish square miles in extent, there were 470,000 slaves; in the contracted territory of Corinth there were not less than $460,000^{1}$. The statistics of slave-holding in Italy are quite as startling. We are told that wealthy Roman landowners sometimes possessed as many as ten or twenty thousand slaves, or even more ${ }^{2}$. We may indeed not unreasonably view these vague and general statements with suspicion : but it is a fact that, a few years before the Christian era, one Claudius Isidorus left by will more than four thousand slaves, though he had incurred serious losses by the civil war ${ }^{3}$.

And these vast masses of human beings had no protection Cruelty of from Roman law ${ }^{4}$. The slave had no relationships, no con- homan jugal rights. Cohabitation was allowed to him at his owner's wards pleasure, but not marriage. His companion was sometimes assigned to him by lot ${ }^{5}$. The slave was absolutely at his master's disposal; for the smallest offence he might be scourged, mutilated, crucified, thrown to the wild beasts ${ }^{6}$. Only two or which is adoptedin the text. For other calculations see Wallon Histoire de l'Esclavage x. p. 22 s sq.
${ }^{1}$ Athen. l.c.p. $272 \mathrm{~B}, \mathrm{D}$. The statement respecting सgina is given on the anthority of Aristotle; that respecting Corinth on the aathority of Epitimæus.
${ }^{2}$ Athen. l. c. 'Pupalwi Žaбтos...

 Gallus II. p. 113 (ed. 3).
${ }^{3}$ Plin. N. H. xxxiii. 47-
${ }^{4}$ On the condition of Greek and Roman slaves the able and exhaustive work of Wallon Histoire de l'Esclavage dans l'Antiquite (Paris $18_{47}$ ) is the chief authority. See also Becker and Marquardt Röm. Alterth. r. I. p. 139 sq. ; Becker Charikles in. p. i sq., Gallus II. p. 99 sq. The practical working of slavery among the Romans is placed in its most favourable light in Gaston Bossier La Religion Romaine II. p. 343 sq. (Paris 1874), and in Overbeck Studien zur Gesch. d. Alten Kirche 1. p. 158 sq.
${ }^{5}$ Röm, Alterth.1.e. p. 184 sq.; Gallus II. p. 144 sq. In this, as in other respects, the cruelty of the legislature was mitigated by the hamanity of individual masters; and the inscriptions show that male and female slaves in many cases were allowed to live together through life as man and wife, though the law did not recognise or secure their umion. It was reserved for Constantine to take the initiative in protecting the conjugail and family rights of slaves by legislature; Cod. Theod. ii. 25 . 1 .
${ }^{6}$ Wallon II. p. 177 sq.; Röm. Alterth. l. c.; Gallus 11. p. $\mathbf{r} 45 \mathrm{sq}$; Rein Privat-three years before the letter to Philemon was written, and probably during St Paul's residence in Rome, a terrible tragedy had been enacted under the sanction of the law ${ }^{1}$. Pedanius Murder of Secundus, a senator, had been slain by one of his slaves in Pedanius Secundus. a fit of anger or jealousy. The law demanded that in such cases all the slaves under the same roof at the time should be put to death. On the present occasion four bundred persons were condemned to suffer by this inhuman enactment. The populace however interposed to rescue them, and a tumult ensued. The Senate accordingly took the matter into deliberation. Among the speakers C. Cassius strongly advocated the enforcement of the law. 'The dispositions of slaves,' he argued, 'were regarded with suspicion by our ancestors, even when they were born on the same estates or in the same houses and learnt to feel an affection for their masters from the first. Now however, when we have several nations among our slaves, with various rites, with foreign religions or none at all, it is not. possible to keep down such a rabble except by fear.' These sentiments prevailed, and the law was put in force. But the roads were lined by a military guard, as the prisoners were led to execution, to prevent a popular outbreak. This incident illustrates not only the heartless cruelty of the law, but also the social dangers arising out of slavery. Indeed the universal distrust had already found expression in a common proverb, 'As many enemies as slaves 2.' But this was not the only way in which slavery avenged itself on the Romans. The spread of luxury and idleness was a direct consequence of this state of things. Work came to be regarded as a low and degrading, because a servile occupation. Meanwhile sensuality in its vilest recht der Römer p. 552 sq. Hadrian first took away from masters the power of life and death over their slaves; Spart. Vit. Hadr. 18 'Servos a dominis occidi vetuit eosque jussit damnari per judices, si digni essent'. For earlier legislative enactments which had afforded a very feeble protection to slaves, see below p. 327 .

${ }^{1}$ Tac. Ann. xiv. 42. This incident

[^109]forms was fostered by the tremendous power which placed the slave at the mercy of the master's worst passions ${ }^{1}$.

With this wide-spread institution Christianity found itself Christianin conflict. How was the evil to be met? Slavery was in- revoluwoven into the texture of society; and to prohibit slavery was to tear society into shreds. Nothing less than a servile war with its certain horrors and its doubtful issues must have been the consequence. Such a mode of operation was altogether alien to the spirit of the Gospel. 'The New Testament', it has been truly said, 'is not concerned with any political or social institutions; for political and social institutions belong to particular nations and particular phases of society.' 'Nothing marks the divine character of the Gospel more than its perfect freedom from any appeal to the spirit of political revolution ${ }^{2}$.' It belongs to all time: and therefore, instead of attacking special abuses, it lays down universal principles which shall undermine the evil.

Hence the Gospel never directly attacks slavery as an in- St Panl's stitution: the Apostles never command the liberation of slaves of the as as an absolute duty. It is a remarkable fact that St Paul in $\begin{gathered}\text { case of } \\ \text { Onesimus. }\end{gathered}$ this epistle stops short of any positive injunction. The word 'emancipation' seems to be trembling on his lips, and yet he does not once utter it. He charges Philemon to take the runaway slave Onesimus into his confidence again ; to receive him
${ }^{1}$ See the saying of Haterius in the elder Semeca Controv. iv. Praef, ' Im-pudicitia in ingenuo crimen est, in servo necessitas, in liberto officium', with its context. Wallon (r. p. 332) sums up the condition of the slave thus: 'I'esclave appartenait an maítre: par lui même, il n'était rien, il n'avait rien. Voila le principe; et tout ce qu'on en pent tirer par voie de conséquence formait aussi, en fait, l'état commun des esclaves dans la plupart des pays. A toutes les fpo-ques, dans toutes les situations de la vie, cette autorite souveraine plane sur eux et modifie leur destinée par ses rigueurs comme par son indifference. Dans l'âge de la force et dans la plénitude de leurs facultés, elle less vouait, ì son choix, soit au travail, soit au viee; au travail les natures grossières; au vice, les natures plas délicates, nourries pour le plaisir du maitre, et qui lorsqu'il en était las, étaient reléguées dans Ia prostitution a son profit. Avant et après l'áge da travail, abandonnés a leur faiblesse ou a lears infirmités; enfants, ils grandissaient dans lo désordre ; viellards, ils mouraient souvent dans la misère; morts, ils étaient quelquefois délaissés sur la voie publiqne..." ${ }^{2}$ G. Smith Does the Bible etc.? pp. 95, 96.
with all affection; to regard him no more as a slave but as a brother; to treat him with the same consideration, the same love, which he entertains for the Apostle himself to whom he owes everything. In fact he tells him to do very much more than emancipate his slave, but this one thing he does not directly enjoin. St Paul's treatment of this individual case is an apt illustration of the attitude of Christianity towards slavery in general.

His lan. guage respecting slavery elsewhere.

Similar also is his language elsewhere. Writing to the Corinthians, he declares the absolute equality of the freeman and the slave in the sight of God ${ }^{1}$. It follows therefore that the slave may cheerfully acquiesce in his lot, knowing that all earthly distinctions vanish in the light of this eternal truth. If his freedom should be offered to him, he will do well to accept it, for it puts him in a more advantageous position ${ }^{2}$ : but meanwhile he need not give himself any concern about his lot in life. So again, when he addresses the Ephesians and Colossians on the mutual obligations of masters and slaves, he is content to insist on the broad fact that both alike are slaves of a heavenly Master, and to enforce the duties whick
${ }^{1}$ I Cor, vii. 2 I sq.
${ }^{2}$ The clause, à à’ ei kal dúvafac > been differently interpreted from early > - times, either as recommending the slave to avail himself of any opportunity of emancipation, or as advising him to refuse the offer of freedom and to remain in servitude. The earliest commentator whose opinion I have observed, Origen (in Cram. Cat. p. $\mathbf{1 4 0}^{\circ}$ ), interprets it as favourable to liberty, but he confuses the meaning by giving a metaphorical sense to үєүацпкбта. Again, Severianus (ib. p.

14 r) distinctly explains it as recommending a state of liberty. On the other hand Chrysostom, while mentioning that 'certain persons' interpret himself supposes St Paul to advise the slave's remaining in slavery. And so Theodoret and others. The bealance of argument seems to be decidedly in favour of the former view.
(i) The actual language must be considered first. And here (i) the particles $\epsilon l$ kal will suit either interpretation. If they are translated 'even though', the clause recommends the continuance in slavery. But кal may be equally well taken with dúvacal, and the words will then mean 'if it "should be in your power to obtain your freedom'. So above ver. II द̀d $\nu$ dè кal

 $\nu \eta \nu$. (ii) The expression $\mu \hat{a} \lambda \lambda o \nu \quad \chi \rho \hat{\eta} \sigma a \iota$ seems to direct the slave to avail himself of some new opportunity offered, and therefore to recommend liberty; comp. ix. 12, 15 .
(2) The immediate context will admit either interpretation. If slavery be preferred, the sentence is continuous. If liberty, the clause $d \lambda \lambda^{\prime} \epsilon l$ flow from its recognition ${ }^{1}$. He has no word of reproach for the masters on the injustice of their position; he breathes no hint to the slaves of a social grievance needing redress.

But meanwhile a principle is boldly enunciated, which must The in the end prove fatal to slavery. When the Gospel taught idea fatal that God had made all men and women upon earth of one to slavery. family; that all alike were His sons and His daughters; that, whatever conventional distinctions human society might set up, the supreme King of Heaven refused to acknowledge any; that the slave notwithstanding his slavery was Christ's freedman, and the free notwithstanding his liberty was Christ's slave; when the Church carried out this principle by admitting the slave to her highest privileges, inviting him to kneel side by side with his master at the same holy table; when in short the Apostolic precept that 'in Christ Jesus is neither bond nor free' was not only recognised but acted upon, then slavery was doomed. Henceforward it was only a question of time. Here was the idea which must act as a solvent, must disintegrate this venerable institution, however deeply rooted and however widely: spread. 'The brotherhood of man, in short, is the idea каl... $\mu \hat{\alpha} \lambda \lambda о \nu \quad \chi \rho \eta \hat{\sigma \alpha \iota}$ is parenthetical. In tiris latter case its motive is to correct misapprehension, as if the Apostle would say, ' When I declare the absolate indifference of the two states in the sight of God, I do not mean to say that you should not avail yourselves of freedom, if it comes in your way; it puts you in a more advantageous position, and you will do well to prefer it'. Such a corrective parenthesis is altogether after St Paul's manner, and indeed instances occur in this very context: e.g. ver.

 last passage is an exact parallel, for the $\gamma$ d̀ $\rho$ of ver. 16 is connected imme. diately with ver. 14, the parenthesis being disregarded as here.
(3) The argument which seems decisive is the extreme improbability that St Paul should have recommended slavery in preference to freedom. For
(i) Such a recommendation would be alien to the spirit of a man whose sense of political right was so strong, and who asserted his citizenship so stanchly on more than one occasion (Acts xvi. 37, xxii. 28). (ii) The independent position of the freeman would give him an obvious adrantage in doing the work of Christ, which it is difficult to imagine St Paul onjoining him deliberately to forego. (iii) Throughout the passage the Apostle, while maintaining the indifference of these earthly relations in the sight of God, yet always gives the preference to a position of independence, whenever it comes to a Christian naturally and withont any undue impatience on his part, The spirit which animates St Paul's injunctions here may be seen from V7. 8, 11, 15 . 26, 27 etc.
${ }^{1}$ Ephes. vi. 5-9, Col. iii. 22-iv. x.

Its general which Christianity in its social phase has been always striving tendency. to realise, and the progress of which constitutes the social history of Christendom. With what difficulties this idea has struggled; how it has been marred by revolutionary violence, as well as impeded by reactionary selfishness; to what chimerical hopes, to what wild schemes, to what calamitous disappointments, to what desperate conflicts, it has given birth; how often being misunderstood and misapplied, it has brought not peace on earth but a sword-it is needless here to rehearse. Still, as we look back over the range of past history, we can see beyond doubt that it is towards this goal that Christianity as a social principle has been always tending and still tends ${ }^{1}$.'
Its effeets And this beneficent tendency of the Gospel was felt at on slavery once in its effects on slavery. The Church indeed, even in the ardour of her earliest love, did not prohibit her sons from retaining slaves in their households. It is quite plain from extant notices, that in the earlier centuries, as in the later, Christians owned slaves ${ }^{2}$ like their heathen neighbours, without forfeiting consideration among their fellow-believers. But nevertheless the Christian idea was not a dead-letter. The Protection chivalry of the Gospel which regarded the weak and helpless and mancfrom whatever cause, as its special charge, which extended its $\underset{\substack{\text { glares. }}}{\text { mission }}$ protection to the widow, the orphan, the sick, the aged, and the prisoner, was not likely to neglect the slave. Accordingly we find that one of the earliest forms which Christian benevolence took was the contribution of funds for the liberation of slaves ${ }^{2}$.

Honours paid to slave martyrs. But even more important than overt acts like these was the moral and social importance with which the slave was now invested. Among the heroes and heroines of the Church were found not a few members of this class. When slave girls like [^110]Blandina in Gaul or Felicitas in Africa, having won for themselves the crown of martyrdom, were celebrated in the festivals of the Church with honours denied to the most powerful and noblest born of mankind, social prejudice had received a wound which could never be healed.

While the Church was still kept in subjection, moral in-Christfuence and private enterprise were her only weapons. But ianity preChristianity was no sooner seated on the throne of the Cæsars than its influence began to be felt in the imperial policy ${ }^{1}$. The legislation of Constantine, despite its startling inequalities, Legislaforms a unique chapter in the statute-book of Rome. In its $\begin{gathered}\text { tion of } \\ \text { Constan }\end{gathered}$ mixed character indeed it reflects the trausitional position of tine. its author. But after all allowance made for its very patent defects, its general advance in the direction of humanity and purity is far greater than can be traced in the legislation even of the most humane and virtuous of his heathen predecessors. More especially in the extension of legal protection to slaves, and in the encouragement given to emancipation, we have an earnest of the future work which Christianity was destined to do for this oppressed class of mankind, though the relief which it gave was after all very partial and tentative ${ }^{2}$.

Abstract

1 It mast not however be forgotten that, even before Christianity became the predominant religion, a more humane spirit had entered into Roman legislation. The important enactment of Fiadrian has been already mentioned, p. 321 , note 6. Even eaxlier the lex Petronia (of which the date is uncertain) had prohibited masters from making their slaves fight with wild beasts in mere caprice and without an order from a judge (Dig. xlviii. 8. 1 I) ; and Claudius (A. D. 47), finding that the practice of turning out sick slaves into the strects to die was on the increase, ordered that those who survived this treatment should have their freedom (Dion Oass. lx. 29, Suet. Claud. 25). For these and similar enactments of the heathen emperors see Wallon in. p. 60 sq ., Röm. Alterth. จ. 1. 197, Rein Privatrecht d. Römer

p. 560 sq . The character of this exceptional legislation is the strongest impeachment of the general cruelty of the law; while at the same time subsegrent notices show how very far from effective it was even within its own narrow limits. See for instance the passage in Galen, 7. p. 17 (ed. Kiihn)

 ib. p. $5^{84}$ ), or Seneca de Ira iii. 3.6 'eculei et fidiculae et ergastula et cruces et circumdati defossis corporibus ignes et cadavera quoque trahens ancus, varia vinculorum genera, varia poenaram, lacerationes membrorum, inscriptiones frontis et bestiarum immanium caveae.'

On the causes of these ameliorations in the law see Röm. Alterth. v. I. p, 199.
${ }^{2}$ On the legislation of Constantine affecting slavery see Do Broglie Subsequent activity of the Church.

The conquests and hopes of the present time.

And on the whole this part has been faithfully and courageously performed by the Church. There have been shameful exceptions now and then: there has been occasional timidity and excess of caution. The commentaries of the fathers on this epistle are an illustration of this latter fault ${ }^{2}$. Much may be pardoned to men who shrink from seeming to countenance a violent social revolution. But notwithstanding, it is a broad and patent fact that throughout the early and middle ages the influence of the Church was exerted strongly on the side of humanity in this matter ${ }^{2}$. The emancipation of slaves was regarded as the principal aim of the higher Christian life ${ }^{8}$; the amelioration of serfdom was a matter of constant solicitude with the rulers of the Church.

And at length we seem to see the begiming of the end. The rapid strides towards emancipation during the present generation are without a parallel in the history of the world. The abolition of slavery throughout the British Empire at an enormous material sacrifice is one of the greatest moral L'Eglise et L'Empire Romain 1. p. 304 sq. (ed. 5), Chawner Infitence of Christianity upon the Legislation of Constantine the Great p. 73 sq., Wallon xm . p. 414 sq. The legislation of Justinian is still more honourably distinguished for its alleviation of the evils of slavery.

${ }^{1}$ E.g. Chrysostom and Theodore of Mopsuestia (Spic. Solesm. r. p. 152). Yet St Chrysostom himself pleads the cause of slaves earnestly elsewhere. In Hom. xl ad i Cor., x. p. 385 he says of slavery, 'It is the penalty of sin and the punishment of disobedience. But when Christ came, he annulled even this, For in Christ Jesus there is no slave nor free. Therefore it is not neeessary to have a slave; but, if it should be necessary, then one only or at most a second'. And he then tells his audience that if they really care for the welfare of slaves, they must 'buy them, and having taught them some art that they may maintain themselves, set them free.' 'I know,' he adds, 'that I am annoying my hearers; but what can I do? For this purpose I am appointed, and I will not oease spenking so.' On the attitude of this father towards slavery see Möhler p. 89 sq.
${ }^{2}$ On the influance of Christianity in this respect see Wailon III. p. 314 sq., Biot De l'Abolition de l'Esclavage Ancien en Occident (1840), Ch. Babington Infuence of Christianity in promoting the Abolition of Slavery etc. (1846), Schmidt Essai historique sur la Sociéte Civile dans le Monde Romain etc. p. 228 sq. (1853), Möhler Gesammelte Schriften II. P. 54 sq., G. Smith Does the Bible etc.? p. 95 sq ., E. S.Talbot Slavery as affected by Christianity (1869), Leoky Rationalism in Europe In. p. 255 sq., European Morals II. p. 65 sq., Overbeck Studien etc. I. p. 172 Aq., Allard Les Esclaves Chrêtiens (4876). The last-maentioned work, which appeared after this introduction was first published (1875), treats the question very fully.
${ }^{8}$ Möhler p. 99 sq., Schmidt p. 246 sq., Lecky E. M. II. p. 73 sq.
conquests which England has ever achieved. The liberation of twenty millions of serfs throughout the Russian dominions has thrown a halo of glory round the name of Alexander II., which no time can dim. The emancipation of the negro in the vast republic of the New World was a victory not less important than either to the well-being of the human race. Thus within the short period of little more than a quarter of a century this reproach of civilisation and humanity has been wiped out in the three greatest empires of the world. It is a fit sequel to these achievements, that at length a well-directed attack should have been made on the central fortress of slavery and the slave-trade, the interior of Africa. May we not venture to predict that in future ages, when distance of view shall have adjusted the true relations of events, when the brilliancy of empires and the fame of wars shall have sunk to their proper level of significance, this epoch will stand out in the history of mankind as the era of liberation? If so, the Epistle to Philemon, as the earliest prelude to these magnificent social victories, must be invested with more than common interest for our gencration.

IIPOS ФIAHMONA.

Where the spirit of the lord is, there is LIBERTY.

WHO IS WEAK, AND I AM NOT WEAK?  wHo is offended, and I burn not?

Such ever was love's way: to rise, it stoops.

ПPOУ $\Phi$ IAHMONA.

$\Pi$

1-3. 'Patl, now a prisoner of Christ Jesus, and Thmoter a brother in the faith, unto Philemon our dearly-beloved and fellow-labourer in the Gospel, and unto Arphia our sister, and unto Archippus our fellowsoldier in Christ, and to the Church which assembles in thy house. Grace and peace to you all from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christr' of 'Apostle' is dropped, because throughout this letter St Paul desires to entreat rather than to command (ver. 8, 9); see the note on Phil. i. 1. In its place is substituted a designation which would touch his friend's heart. How could Philemon resist an appeal which was penned within prison walls and by a manacled hand? For this characteristic reference to his 'bonds' see the note on ver. 13 .

Tr $\quad \dot{\theta} \theta$ ess $]$ Timothy seems to have been with St Paul during a great part of his three years' sojourn in Ephesus (Acts xix. 22), and could hardly have failed to make the acquaintance of Philemon. For the designation o dide $\lambda$ фós applied to Timothy see the note on Col. i. I.
$\Phi i \lambda j \mu_{0} v_{1}$ к.т. $\lambda$.] On the persons here addressed, and the language in which they are described, see the introduction p. 303 sq .
ovvepyఱै] It would probably be during St Paul's long sojourn at Ephesus that Philemon had laboured with him: see above p. 3 sq s.
$\left.\dot{\eta}^{\dot{\eta}} \mu \hat{\omega} \nu\right]$ should probably be attached to $\dot{a} \gamma a \pi \eta \tau \bar{\phi}$ as well as to $\sigma v \nu \varepsilon \rho \gamma \bar{\oplus}$; comp. Rom. xvi. 5, 8, 9, 1 Cor. x. 14, Phil. ii. I2.
2. Tin $\left.{ }^{1} \delta \bar{\epsilon} \lambda \phi_{n} \overline{]}\right]$ For this the received text has $\tau \hat{\eta}$ áyarivin. Internal probabilities can be urged in favour of both readings. On the one hand à $a_{\pi} \eta \tau \bar{\eta}$ might have been introduced for the sake of conformity to the preceding $\dot{a} \gamma a \pi \eta r \hat{\omega}$; on the other $\dot{d} \delta e \lambda \phi \hat{\eta}$ might have been substituted for aja$\pi \eta \tau \hat{l}$ on grounds of false delicacy. Theodore of Mopsuestia (Spicil. Solesm. I. p. 154), who had the reading ajarrifî, feels an apology necessary : 'Istius temporis (i.e. of the present time) homines propemodum omnes in crimine vocandos esse existimant, modo si audierint nomen charitatis. Apostolus vero non sic sentiebat; sed contrario etc.' I have preferred $\tau \hat{y}$ $\dot{d} \delta \in \lambda \phi \hat{\eta}$, because the preponderance of ancient authority is very decidedly in its favour.

бvиarpartw'т7] These spiritual campaigns, in which Archippus was his comrade, probably took place while St Paul was at Ephesus (A.d. 24-57). For the word avyarparcótys see Phil. ii. 25. The metaphor of $\sigma \tau \rho a r \epsilon i$, arparєvंध $\theta a t$, is common in St Paul.

т lossæ; see above p. 304 sq. For the meaning of the expression see the note on Col. iv. 15.
 X $\rho \iota \sigma \tau$ иิ.

4-7. 'I never cease to give thanks to my God for thy well-doing, and thou art ever mentioned in my prayers. For they tell me of thy love and faith -thy faith which thou hast in the Lord Jesus, and thy love which thou showest towards all the saints; and it is my prayer that this active sympathy and charity, thus springing from thy faith, may abound more and more, as thou attainest to the perfect knowledge of every good thing bestowed upon us by God, looking unto and striving after Christ. For indeed it gave me great joy and comfort to hear of thy loving-kindness, and to learn how the hearts of God's people had been cheered and refreshed by thy help, my dear brother'.

The Apostle's thanksgiving and iirtercessory prayer (ver. 4)-the cause of his thanksgiving (ver. 5)- the purport of his prayer (ver. 6)--the joy and comfort which he has in Philemon's good deeds (ver. 7)-this is the very simple order of topics in these verses. But meanwhile all established principles of arrangement are defied in the anxiety to give expression to the thought which is uppermost for the moment. The clanse áкои́шy к.т.ג. is separated from $\epsilon^{3} \chi a \rho เ \sigma \tau \hat{\omega}$ к.т. $\lambda$, on which it depends, by the intervening clause $\mu \nu$ гiay gov к.т. $\lambda$. which introduces another thought. It itself interposes between two clauses, $\mu \nu \mathrm{cia} \mathrm{\nu}$ which stand in the closest logical and grammatical connexion with each other. Its own component elements are dislocated and inverted in the struggle of the several ideas for immediate utterance. And lastly, in $\chi^{a-}$ рày $\gamma \dot{a} \rho$ к.т. $\lambda$. there is again a recurrence to a topic which has occurred in an earlier part of the sentence ( $\boldsymbol{\pi} \boldsymbol{\eta} \nu$, áүárŋŋц...cis тávias rò̀s áyiovs) but which has been dropped, before it was exhausted, owing to the pressure of another more importunate thought.

4 Eu'xaplatai] See the note on I Thess. i. 2.

талтотє] should probably be taken with $\epsilon v^{\prime} \chi a p ı \sigma \tau \hat{\omega}$ (rather than with $\mu \nu \epsilon i a \nu$ к. $\tau . \lambda$. .), according to St Paul's usual collocation in these opening thanksgivings: see the notes on Col. i. 3 , Phil. i. 3 .

رעviav бov к.т.入.] ' making mention of thee.' For $\mu \nu \mathrm{vi}$ ia noleival see the note on I Thess. i. 2. Here the ' mention' involves the idea of intercession on behalf of Philemon, and so introduces the $\tilde{\sigma}_{\pi \omega \omega}$ к.r.д. of ver. 6. See the note there.
5. ̇ंkovi $\omega \nu$ ] This information would probably come from Epaphras (Col. i. 7, 8, iv. I2) rather than from Onesimus. The participle is connected more directly with ev̉xaptote than with the intervening words, and explains the grounds of the Apostle's thanksgiving.
 which thou hast towards the Lord Jesus Christ and the love which thou showest to all the saints. The logical order is violated, and the clauses are inverted in the second part of the sentence, thus producing an example of the figure called chiasm; see Gal. iv. 4, 5. This results here from the Apostle's setting down the thoughts in the sequence in which they occur to him, without paying regard to symmetrical arrangement. The first and prominent thought is Philemon's love. This suggests the mention of his faith, as the source from which it springs. This again requires a reference to the object of faith. And then at length comes the deferred sequel to the first thought-the range and comprehensiveness of his love. The transition from the object of faith to the object of love is more easy, because the love is represented as springing from the faith. Some copies transpose the $\dot{\pi} q-$ an obvious emendation. Others would obviate the dificulty by giving to $\pi i \sigma \pi \iota \nu$ the meaning 'fidelity, stedfastness'; Winer §l. p. 5xI sq. Thus they are enabled to refer both words, the clauses which follow. But though this is a legitimate sense of míros in St Paul (see Galatians p. 155), yet in immediate connexion with $\hat{\eta}_{\nu}$ hardly possible that the word can have any other than its proper theological meaning. Sce the opening of the contemporary epistle, Col. i. 4 .

rןòs к.т. ${ }^{\text {. }] ~ T h e ~ c h a n g e ~ o f ~ p r e p o-~}$ sitions, $\pi \rho \grave{s}_{s}$ rò $\nu$ Kípıo ' towards the Lord' and cis rovis áyiovs 'unto the saints', deserves attention. It seems to arise from the instinctive desire to separate the two clauses, as they refer to different words in the preceding part of the sentence. Of the two prepositions the former ( $\pi \rho 0-s$ ) signifies direction 'forward to', 'towards'; the latter ( $\dot{e} \nu-s$ ) arrical and so contact, 'in-to', 'unto.' Consequently either might be used in either connexion; and as a matter of fact eis is much more common with $\pi i \sigma \pi t s$ ( $\pi \iota \sigma \tau \epsilon \dot{v} \epsilon \iota \nu$ ), as it is also with áyánt, $\pi$ ós being quite î roós tò̀ Ө́óv; comp. 2 Cor. iii. 4). But where a distinction is necessary, there is a propriety in using arós of the faith which aspires towards Christ, and eis of the love which is exerted upon men. Some good copies read cis here in both clauses.
 $\mu \nu \varepsilon i a \nu$ боv тоtoí $\mu \boldsymbol{\nu} 0$ к. к.т. $\lambda$., as giving the aim and purport of St Paul's prayer. Others connect it with $\hat{\eta} \nu$ ${ }^{\prime}{ }^{\prime} X \in t s$, as if it described the tendency of Philemon's faith, 'ita ut'; but, even if $\boldsymbol{\delta} \pi \omega s$ could bear this meaning, such a connexion is altogether harsh and improbable.
$\dot{\eta}$ кoıLшиia к.r. $\lambda$.] Of many interpretations which have been, or might be, given of these words, two seem to deserve consideration. (I)'Your friendly offices and sympathies, your kindly deeds of charity, which spring from your faith': comp. Phil. i. 5 '̇ $\pi i$ tn̂ whence kotvavia is used especially of 'contributions, almsgiving', Rom. xv. 26, 2 Cor. viii. 4, ix. 13. (2) 'Your commanion with God through faith': comp. I Cor. i. 9 , and see also 2 Cor. xiii. I3, 1 Joh. i. 3, 6, 7. The parallel passages strongly support the former sense. Other interpretations proposed are, 'The participation of others in your faith, through your example', or 'your communion with me, springing out of your faith'. This last, which is widely received, is suggested by ver. 17; єi кoıvolos $\epsilon i$, $\phi \eta \sigma i, \kappa a \tau \alpha ̀ ~ \tau \grave{\eta} \nu \pi i \sigma \tau \iota \nu$, writes Chrysos$\nu \epsilon i \nu$ (comp. Tit. i. 3 кarà кoLv $\nu \nu \pi i \sigma r \nu \nu)$ : but it is out of place in this context.

evepyis] 'effective'. The Latin translators must have read ėvapy ${ }^{2} \mathrm{~s}$, for they render the word evidens or manifesta. Jerome (ad. loc.) speaks of evidens as the reading of the Latin, and efficax of the Greek text. The converse error appears in the mss of Clem. Hom. xvii. 5, èvépyєıa for èváp-yeta. See also similar vr. ll in Orig. c. Cels. i. 25 , ii. $52, \mathrm{iv} .89$.

 $\dot{\alpha} \nu \alpha \pi \epsilon ́ \pi \pi \alpha \nu \tau \alpha \iota ~ \delta \iota a ̀ ~ \sigma o \hat{u}, \dot{a} \delta_{\epsilon} \lambda \phi \epsilon ́$.

 knowledge of every good thing ${ }^{3}$. This eni $\boldsymbol{y} \nu \omega \sigma t s$, involving as it does the complete appropriation of all truth and the unreserved identification with God's will, is the goal and crown of the believer's course. The Apostle does not say 'in the possession'or 'in the performance' but 'in the knowledge of cvery good thing'; for, in this higher sense of knowledge, to know is both to possess and to perform. In all the epistles of the Roman captivity St Paul's prayer for his correspondents culminates in this word ériyveats: see the note on Col. i. 9. This $\epsilon \pi i \gamma v \omega \sigma t s$ is the result and the reward of faith manifesting itself in $\sigma \tau \epsilon \omega s$ к.т. $\lambda$. For the sequence comp.

 The entivע $\omega \sigma$ ts therefore which the Apostle contemplates is Philemon's own. There is no reference to the force of his example on others, as it is sometimes interpreted, 'in their recognition of every good thing which is wrought in you'.
rô̂ ย้̇ $\dot{\eta} \mu \hat{\nu}]$ ' which is in us Christians', 'which is placed within our reach by the Gospel'; i.e. the whole range of spiritual blessings, the complete cycle of Christian truth. If the reading rov iv vipiv be adopted, the reference will be restricted to the brotherhood at Colosse, but the meaning must be substantially the same. Though $\dot{v} \mu i \nu$ has somewhat better support, we seem to be justified in preferring $\eta^{\eta} \mu i \nu$ as being much more expressive. In such cases the mss are of no great authority; and in the present instance scribes would be strongly tempted to alter $\dot{\eta} \mu \hat{i} \nu$ into $\dot{v} \mu \hat{\nu} \nu$ from a misapprehension of the sense, and a wish to apply the words to Philemon and his household. A similar misapprehension doubtless led in some copies to tho omission of rov, which seemed to be superfluous but is really required for the sense.
cis X $\rho$ เGTö $\nu$ ] 'unto Christ', i.e. leading to Hin as the goal. The words should be connected not with rov $\hat{\varepsilon}$ $\tilde{\eta}_{\mu i \nu}$, but with the main statement of the sentence éve $\rho \gamma \eta \eta^{\prime} \gamma^{\prime}{ }^{\prime} \nu \eta \tau a i$ к.т. $\lambda$.
7. $\left.\chi^{\text {apà } \nu} \gamma \dot{\alpha} \rho\right]$ This sentence again must not be connected with the words immediately preceding. It gives the motive of the Apostle's thanksgiving mentioned in ver. 4. This thanksgiving was the outpouring of gratitude for the joy and comfort that he had received in his bonds from the report of Philemon's generous charity. The connexion therefore is $\epsilon \dot{\chi} \chi a \rho \sigma \sigma \tau \hat{\omega} \tau \hat{\varphi}$

 xapaiv the received text (Steph. but not Elz.) reads $\chi$ ápı, which is taken to mean 'thankfulness' ( I Tim. i. 12, 2 Tim. i. 3); but this reading is absolutely condemned by the paucity of ancient authority.

тà $\left.\sigma \pi \lambda \dot{a} \gamma \chi^{\nu}{ }^{\prime}\right]$ 'the heart, the spirits'. On тà $\sigma \pi \lambda{ }^{\prime} \gamma^{\prime}{ }^{\nu}{ }^{\nu}$, the nobler viscera, regarded as the seat of the emotions, see the note on Phil. i. 8. Here the prominent idea is that of terror, grief, despondency, ete.
àvaтє́таuтаи] 'have been relieved, refreshed', comp. ver. 20. The compound ì uanav́ध天fal expresses a temporary relief, as the simple $\pi a \dot{v} \epsilon \sigma \theta a t$ expresses a final cessation: Plut. Vit. Lucull. $5 \pi 0 \lambda \lambda \omega \nu$ avi $\theta_{t s}$ à $\nu a \kappa \iota \nu o u ́ \nu \tau \omega \nu$

 $\pi a \hat{v} \sigma \theta a c$. Thus it implies 'relaxation, refreshment', as a preparation for the renewal of labour or suffering. It is an Igratian as well as a Pauline word; Ephes. 2, Smyrn. 9, 10, 12, Trall. 12, Magn. 15, Rom. 10.
$\left.{ }_{a} \dot{\delta} \in \lambda \phi \epsilon \bar{\epsilon}\right]$ For tho appeal suggested by the emphatic position of the word, comp. Gal. vi. i8. See also the note on ver. 20 below.

8-17. 'Encouraged by these tidings of thy loving spirit, I prefer to entreat, where I might command. My office gives me authority to dictate thy duty in plain language, but love bids me plead as a suitor. Have I not indeed a right to command-I Paul whom Christ Jesus long ago commissioned as His ambassador, and whom now He has exalted to the rank of His prisoner? But I entreat thee. I have a favour to ask for a son of my ownone doubly dear to me, because I became his father amidst the sorrows of my bonds. I speak of Onesimus, who in times past was found wholly untrue to his name, who was then far from useful to thee, but now is useful to thee-yea, and to myself also. Him I send back to thee, and I entreat thee to take him into thy favour, for in giving him I am giving my own heart. Indeed I would gladly have detained him with me, that he might minister to me on thy behalf, in these bonds with which the Gospel has invested me. But I had scruples. I did not wish to do anything without thy direct consent; for then it might have seemed (though it were only sceming) as if thy kindly offices had been rendered by compulsion and not of free will. So I have sent him back. Indeed it may have been God's providential desirrn, that he was parted from thee for a season, only that thon mightest regain him for ever; that he left thee as a slave, only that he might return to thee a beloved brother. This indeed he is to me most of all; and, if to me, must he not be so much more to thee, both in worldly things and in spiritual? If therefore thou regardest me as a fricud and companion, take him to thee, as if he were mrself.'
8. $\Delta t t^{\prime}$ ] i.e. 'Seeing that I have these proofs of thy love, I prefer to entreat, where I might command'.

таррүбiav] 'confidence', literally
'freedom' or 'prinilege of speech'; see the notes on Col. ii. 15, Ephes. iii. 12. It was his Apostolic authority which gave him this right to command in plain language. Hence the addi-тò $\dot{a} \nu \bar{\eta} \kappa \sigma \nu]$ ' 'what is fllting': see the note on Col. iii. 18.

9. ס̀à $\tau \grave{\eta} \nu$ à $\mathbf{\alpha} \boldsymbol{\pi} \pi \eta \nu]$ 'for love's sake', i. e. 'having respect to the claims of love'. It is not Philemon's love (vr. 5, 7), nor St Paul's own love, but love absolutely, love regarded as a principle which demands a deferential respect.
rotoûtos ڤ̀ $\boldsymbol{\kappa}$ к.т. ..] 'being such an one as Paul an ambassador, and now also a prisoner, of Christ Jesus'. Several questions of more or less difficulty arise on these words. (I) Is тotoútos $\stackrel{\omega}{\boldsymbol{\omega}} \boldsymbol{\nu}$ to be connected with or parated, roucivtos $\omega \nu$ will mean 'though as an Apostle I am armed with such authority', and $\omega_{s} \Pi \alpha \hat{u} \lambda o s$ к.т.д. will describe his condescension to entreaty, 'yet as simply Panl, ete.' But the other construction is much more probable for the following reasons. (a) rotov̀ros wiv so used, implying, as it would, something of a personal boast, seems unlike St Paul's usual mode of speaking. Several interpreters indecd, taking тotồtos ※้̈ soparately, refer it to ver. 8 , 'seeing that this is my disposition', i.e. 'seeing that I desire to entreat'; but roooûtos suggests more than an accidental impulse. (b) As rotoutos and ws are correlative words, it is more natural to connect them together; comp. Plato Symp. I81 玉 к.т.ג., Alexis (Meineke Fragm. Com.

 oi kíßol. Such passages are an answer to the objection that rooovros would require some stronger word than is, such as oios, ös, or ${ }_{\omega}^{\circ} \sigma r \epsilon$. Even after such expressions as ó aùrós, tò aùtó, instances occur of $\omega$ ( $\boldsymbol{\omega} \sigma \pi \epsilon \rho$ ): see Lobeck Phryn. p. 427, Stallbaum on Plat. Phred. 86 A. Indeed it may be questioned whether any word but ws would give exactly St Paul's meaning hore. (c) All the Greek commentators without a single exception connect gether. (2) Assuming that the words тotoûtos $\hat{\omega} \nu$ ผs к.т.入. are taken together, should they be connected with the preceding or the following sentence? On the whole the passage is more forcible, if they are linised to the preceding words. In this case the resumptive таракал $\bar{\omega}$ (ver. ro) begins a new sentence, which introduces a fresh subject. The Apostle has before described the character of his appeal; he now speaks of its object. (3) In either commexion, what is the point of the words rooôtos $\hat{\omega} \nu$ wis Maîגos к.c...? Do they lay down the grounds of his entreaty, or do they enforce his right to command? If the view of $\pi \rho \varepsilon \sigma \beta \dot{u} \pi \bar{\prime}$ adopted below be correct, the latter must be the true interpretation; but even though mocoßúr $\eta$ s be taken in its ordinary sense, this will still remain the more probable alternative; for, while $\pi \rho \epsilon \sigma \beta \dot{u} \boldsymbol{m}^{2}$ s and ס́ $\sigma$ - $\mu$ os would suit either entreaty or command, the addition X $\rho \iota \sigma \tau o \hat{v}$ 'I $\eta \sigma o \hat{v}$ suggests an appeal to authority.
ws Mā̃hos] The mention of his personal name infolves an assertion of authority, as in Ephes. iii. I; comp. Gal. v. 2, with the note there. Theodoret writes, $\dot{\delta}$ חaîhon dikoú $\sigma a s$ tĥs $\sigma к \in \hat{\omega} а \varsigma$, к. $\boldsymbol{\tau} . \lambda$.

$\pi \rho \in \tau \beta \dot{\prime} \pi \eta_{s}$ ] Comparing a passage in the contemporary epistle, Ephes. vi.
 had occurred to me that we should read $\pi \rho \in \sigma \beta \epsilon v \tau \eta$ 's here, before I was aware that this conjecture had been anticipated by others, e.g. by Bentley (Crit. Sacr. p. 93) and by Benson (Paraphrase etc. on Six Epistles of St Paul, p. 357). It has since been suggested independently in Linwood's Observ. quad. in nonnzlla N. T. loca 1865, and probably others have entertained the same thought. Still believing that St Pand here speaks of himself as an 'ambassador', I now question whether any change is necessary. There is reason for thinking that in the common dialect $\pi p \in \sigma \beta \dot{r} \eta \mathrm{~s}$ may have been written indifferently for $\pi \rho \epsilon \sigma \beta \leqslant v r i s$ in St Paul's time; and if so, the form here may be due, not to some comparatively late scribe, but to the original autograph itself or to an immediate transcript. In I Macc. xiv. 21 the Sinaitic ms has of $\pi \rho \in \sigma \beta u$ $\tau \in \rho \circ$ (a corruption of $0 t \pi \rho \in \sigma \beta v \tau a$ $o \iota$, for the common reading is oi $\pi \rho \epsilon \sigma$ Bevtai oì; in xiv. 22 it reads $\pi \rho \epsilon \sigma \beta v-$ тat Iovdat $\omega \nu$; but in xiii. $21 \pi \rho \epsilon \sigma \beta \in \nu-$ ras: though in all passages alike the meaning is 'ambassadors'. Again the Alexandrian ms has $\pi \rho \in \sigma \beta u t a s$ in xiii. 2 1, but n $\rho \epsilon \sigma \beta_{\epsilon v \tau a l}$ in xiv. 22, and ot $\pi \rho \in \sigma \beta \in u \tau \epsilon$ of (i.e. oi $\pi \rho \epsilon \sigma \beta \in u \tau a i$ oi) in xiv. 2I. In 2 Mace. xi. 34 this same us has $\pi \rho \epsilon \sigma \beta \nu_{t \epsilon}$, and the reading of the common texts of the Lxx (even Tischendurf and Fritzsche) here is mpeçivitac. Grimm treats it as meaning 'ambassadors', without even noticing the form. Other mss are also mentioned in Holmes and Farsons which lave the form $\pi \rho \in \sigma \beta u r \eta s$ in I Mace. xiii. 2I. In 2 Chron. xxxii. 3I again the word for 'ambassador'

 understand how St Paul should make is written thus in the Vatican ms, though the $\epsilon$ is added above the line; and here too several mss in Holmes and Parsons agree in reading $\pi \rho \epsilon \sigma$ Búrats. Thus it is plain that, in the age of our carliest extant mss at all events, the scribes used both forms indifferently in this sense. So also Eusebius on Isaiah xviii. 2 writes

 Búras. Again in Iguat. Smyrn. 1 I $\theta \in o \pi \rho \epsilon \sigma \beta \dot{v}^{\prime} \tau \eta$ s is the form in all tho mss of either recension, though the meaning is plainly 'an ambassador of God.' So too in Clem. Hom. Ep. Clem. 6 the mss read $\dot{\delta} \tau \hat{\eta} s \dot{a} \lambda \eta \theta$ cias $\pi \rho \epsilon \sigma \beta u \dot{u} \eta \eta$, which even Schwegler and Dressel tacitly retain. See also Appian Samn. 7, where $\pi \rho \in \sigma \beta є v$ тov is due to the later editors, and Acta Thomae § 10 , where there is a v.l. $\pi \rho \in \sigma \beta i \pi \eta s$ in at least one ms. And probably examples of this substitution might be largely maltiplied.

The main reason for adopting this rendering is the parallel passage, which suggests it very strougly. The difficulty which many find in St Paul's describing himself as an old man is not serious. On any showing he must have been verging on sixty at this time and may have been some years older. A life of unintermittent toil and suffering, such as he had lived, would bring a premature decay: and looking back on a long eventful life, he would naturally so think and speak of himself. Thus Roger Bacon (Opus Majus r. 10, p. 15, ed. Jebb; Opus Tertium p. 63, ed. Brewer) writes ' me senem', 'nos senes', in 1267, though he appears to have been not more than fifty-two or fifty-three at the time and lived at least a quarter of a century after (see E. Charles Roger Bacon, Sa Vie etc. pp. 4 sq, 40). So too Scott in his fifty-fifth year speaks of himself as 'an old grey man' and 'aged' (Lochhart's Life viII, pp. 327,357 ). It is more difficult to his age a ground of appeal to Philemon who, if Archippus was his son, cannot have been much younger than himself. The commentator Hilary says that the Apostle appeals to his friend 'quasi coaevum aetatis', but this idea is foreign to the context. The comment of Theophylact is, towoûtos $\omega v, \phi \eta \sigma t, \pi \rho \in \sigma \beta \varepsilon v-$ тท̆s, каì oűt

 Does he mean to include both meanings in $\pi \rho \in \sigma \beta u ́ r \eta s$ ? Or is he accidentally borrowing the term 'ambassador' from some earlier commentator without seeing its bearing?

кai ס́́ó $\mu$ oos] Another title to respect. The mention of his bonds might suggest either an appeal for commiseration or a claim of authority: see the note on ver. 13. Here the addition of X $\rho t a r o u$ 'I $\eta \sigma o \hat{u}$ invests it with the character of an official title, and so gires prominence to the latter idea. To his old ofice of 'ambassador' Christ Has added the new title of ' prisoner.' The genitive X рıatồ I Incoû belongs to in both cases describes the person who confers the office or rank.
10. $\pi \alpha \rho a k a \lambda \omega \sigma \varepsilon$ к.т. ${ }^{\text {.] }}$ ] St Chrysostom remarks on the Apostle's withholding the name, uutil he has favourably disposed Philemon both to the request and to the object of it; roorov-

 $\lambda$ лтar к.т.入. The whole passage deserves to be read.

ề éyévעض 15. In Gal. iv. 19 he speaks of himself as suffering a mother's pangs for his children in the faith. Comp. Phil. Leg. ad Cai. 8 (II. p. 554) ${ }^{4} \mu \dot{\partial} \nu$ е́бть

dear to the Apostle, as being the child of his sorrows.

 formard he will be true to his name, Ruth i. 20 'Call me not Naomi (pleasant) but call me Mara (bitter) ete.' The word $\ddot{d}_{X} \rho \eta \sigma \sigma o s$ is a synonyme for àvónquos, Demosth. Phil. iii. § 40 (p. áขóvŋта к.т. $\lambda$.: comp. Pseudophocyl.
 $\delta^{\prime}$ déckề duvountos. The significance of names was a matter of special importance among the ancients. Hence they were careful in the inauguration of any great work that only those who had bona nomina, prospera nomina, fausta nomina, should take part: Cic. de Dio. i. 45, Plin. N. H. xxviii. 2. 5, Tac. Hist. iv. 53. On the value attached to names by the ancients, and more especially by the Hebrews, see Farrar Chapters on Language p. 267 sq., where a large number of instances are collected. Here however there is nothing more than an affectionate play on a name, such as might occur to any one at any time: comp. Euseb. H. E. v. 24 ó Eippuaíos фєрผ́vvuós tıs $\pi \varphi$ єiрqчотоо́s.

 $\sigma \tau o v . . . \epsilon \pi \pi o i \eta \sigma \epsilon \nu$. Of these words, äX ${ }^{2} \eta-$ aros is found only liere, єüxp occurs also 2 Tim. ii. 21, iv. II, in the New Testament. Both appear in the lxx. In Matt. xxp. 30 a slave is described as áxpeios. For the mode of expression comp. Ephes. v. $15 \mu \boldsymbol{\eta}$ ws covered in these words a reference to $\chi$ диorós, as commonly pronounced $\chi \rho \eta$ otós; comp. Theoph. ad Autol. i. 12 and see Philippians p. 16 note. Any such allusion however, even if it should not involve an anachronism, is far too recondite to be probable here. The play on words is exhansted in the reference to 'Ovioupos.

кai $\left.\epsilon^{\epsilon} \mu o i\right]$ An after-thought; comp.

 for the exceptional order, where according to common Greek usage the first person would naturally precede the second.
$\dot{\alpha} \nu \dot{\epsilon} \pi \epsilon \mu \Psi a]$ ' $I$ send back', the epistolary aorist used for the present: see $\psi a$, ver. 19, 21 (see the note). It is clear both from the context here, and from Col. iv. 7-9, that Onesimus accompanied the letter.
12. aủzò $\nu$ к.r.入.] The reading of the received text is $\sigma \dot{i} \delta \dot{\epsilon}$ à̇óv, rour$\dot{\epsilon} \sigma \pi \iota \tau \grave{a}$ द́ $\mu \dot{a} \sigma \pi \lambda a ́ \gamma \chi \nu a, \pi \rho o \sigma \lambda a \beta o \hat{v}$. The words thus supplied doubtless give the right construction, but must be rejected as deficient in authority. The accusative is suspended; the sentence changes its form and loses itself in a number of dependent clauses; and the main point is not resumed till ver. $17 \pi \rho \sigma \sigma \lambda a \beta o \hat{u}$ aütò $\nu$ wis $\epsilon^{\prime} \mu \dot{\epsilon}$, the grammar having been meanwhile dislocated. For the emphatic position of aúróv comp. John ix. 21, 23, Ephes. i. 22 .

тà ধ’ $\mu a ̀ ~ \sigma \pi \lambda a ́ \gamma \chi \nu a]$ ' my very hearl', a mode of speech common in all languages. For the meaning of $\sigma \pi \lambda \lambda^{\prime} \gamma^{\nu}{ }^{\nu}$ see the note on Phil. i. 8. Comp. Test. Patr. Zab. 8, Neph. 4, in both which passages Christ is called $\tau \dot{d}$ $\sigma n \cdot \lambda a ́ \gamma \chi \nu o p$ of God, and in the first it то仑̂ $\grave{\epsilon} \pi \grave{\iota}$ т $\eta \boldsymbol{s} \gamma \hat{\eta} s$ к.т. $\lambda$. Otherwise тà $\epsilon \mu \dot{\alpha} \sigma \pi \lambda \alpha \dot{\alpha} \gamma \chi \nu a$ has been interpreted k.r...), and it is so rendered here in the Peshito. For this sense of $\sigma \pi \lambda$ á $\gamma$ $\chi^{\nu a}$ comp. Artemid. Oneir. i. 44 oi

 With this meaning it is used not less of the father than of the mother; e.g. Philo de Joseph. 5 (II. p. 45) A $\eta \rho-$ $\nu o t s \ldots \tau \bar{\omega} \nu \dot{\epsilon} \mu \bar{\omega} \nu \sigma \pi \lambda a \dot{\gamma} \gamma^{\prime} \nu \omega \nu$, Basil. Op.
 $\chi^{\nu a \tau \tau \mu \grave{\nu} \nu \tau \hat{\omega} \nu \tau \rho о \phi \hat{\omega} \nu . ~ T h e ~ L a t i n ~ v i s . ~}$ cera occurs still more frequently in this sense, as the passages quoted in Wetstein and Suicer show. For this latter interpretation there is much to be said. But it adds nothing to the previous ồ é $\gamma^{\prime}$ ย́vøшa к.т. $\lambda$., and (what is a more serious objection) it is wholly unsupported by St Paul's usage elsewhere, which connects $\sigma \pi \lambda a ́ \gamma \chi \nu a$ with a different class of ideas: see e.g. vv. 7, 20 .
13. ' $\beta$ مovлó $\mu \eta \nu$ ] 'I was of a mind', distinguished from $\eta \theta \epsilon \lambda \eta \sigma a$, which follows, in two respects; (1) While ßov́neo $\theta a c$ involves the idea of 'purpose, deliberation, desire, mind', $\theta$ є́$\lambda_{\epsilon \epsilon \nu}$ denotes simply 'will'; Epictet. i.

 $\lambda_{\epsilon \iota \nu} \omega_{s} \delta \epsilon \bar{c}$ ypá $\phi \in \sigma \theta a l$, iii. 24. 54 тov̂-
 The change of tenses is significant. The imperfect implies a tentative, inchoate process; while the aorist describes a definite and complete act. The will stepped in and put an end to the inclinations of the mind. Indeed the imperfect of this and similar verbs are not infrequently used where the wish is stopped at the outset by some antecedent consideration which renders it impossible, and thus practically it is not entertained atall: e.g.
 $\dot{\epsilon} \rho i \xi \epsilon \iota \nu \dot{\epsilon} \nu \theta a ́ \hat{i ́ c}$, Antiph. de Herod.caed.

 Esch. c. Ctes. 2 (р. 53) с́ $\beta$ аидо́ $\mu \eta \nu$ see Kühner § $392 b$ (II. p. 177). So Acts xxv. 22 éßovдó $\mu \eta \nu$ каì avंтòs то̂ à âpómov áкойбat, not 'I should wish' (as Winer § xli. p. 353) but 'I could have wished', i.e. 'if it had not been too much to ask'. Similarly See Revision of the English New Testament p. 96. So here a not improbable meaning would be not 'I was desirous', but 'I could have desired'.

катє́ $\chi \in и \nu]$ 'to detain' or 'retain', opposed to the following a $\pi \pi \in \chi \eta s$, ver. 15.

 See the note on Col. i. 7. With a delicate tact the Apostle assumes that Philemon would have wished to perform these friendly offices in person, if it had been possible.

є̀ rois $\delta \in \sigma \mu o i s]$ An indirect appeal to his compassion: see v. I, 9, Io. In this instance however (as in ver. 9) the appeal assumes a tone of authority, by reference to the occasion of his bonds. For the genitive $\tau 0 \hat{0}$ є $\dot{\alpha} a \gamma \gamma \epsilon-$ $\lambda i o u$, describing the origin, comp. Col.
 were not shackles which self had riveted, but a chain with which Christ had invested him. Thus they were as a badge of office or a decoration of honour. In this respect, as in others, the language of St Paul is echoed in the epistles of St Igmatius. Here too entreaty and triumph alternate; the saint's bonds are at once a ground for appeal and a theme of thanksgiving: Trall. 12 таракалеi í $\mu a ̄ s ~ \tau \grave{a ̀ ~} \delta \epsilon \sigma \mu \dot{a} \mu о v$, Phitad. $7 \mu$ áptus то̀̀s тиєчратькоѝs $\mu$ apyapítas, Smyrn.

 Ephes. 1, 3, 21, Magn. 12, Trall. 1, 5, 10, Smyrn. 4, 11, Polyc. 2, Rom. 1, 4, 5, Philad. 5.
14. Xшріs к.т.入.] ' without thy approval, consent'; Polyb. ii. 2I. I, 3, $\chi \omega \rho$ is $\tau \hat{\eta} s \quad \sigma \phi \epsilon \tau \epsilon \rho a s \quad \gamma \nu \omega \mu \eta s, \chi \omega \rho i s \tau \hat{\eta} s$ yvळ́ $\mu \eta$ s, e. g. Polyb. xxi. 8. 7, Ign. Polyc. 4.
©s кaтà à $\nu$ á $\gamma к \eta \nu$ ] St Paul does not say кaтà à ád $\gamma \kappa \eta \nu$ but wis катà $\dot{\alpha} \nu \dot{\alpha} \gamma \kappa \eta \nu$. He will not suppose that it wonld really be by constraint; but it must not even wear the appearance ( $\omega$ s) of being so; comp. 2 Cor. xi. $17 \omega^{\boldsymbol{\omega}} \dot{\epsilon}^{\prime} \nu$ áфробúvp. See Plin. Ep.ix. $21{ }^{6}$ Vereor ne videar non rogare sed cogere'; where, as here, the writer is asking his correspondent to forgive a domestic who has offended.

т $\grave{a}$ ajatón orov] 'the benefit arising from thee', i. e. 'the good which I should get from the continued presonce of Onesimus, and which would be owing to thee'.

ката̀ é кои́ $\sigma t o \nu]$ as in Num. xv. 3. The form ka $\theta^{\text {énovatay }}$ is perhaps more classical: Thuc. viii. $27 \mathrm{ka} \theta^{\circ}$ ékováa, $\hat{\eta} \pi \dot{a} \nu v \gamma \in \dot{a} \nu \bar{\partial} \gamma \kappa \eta$. The word understood in the one case appears to be тоо́тоу (Porphyr. de Abst. i. 9 ка $\theta^{\circ}$ є́кои́б七оу тоótoу, comp. Wur. Med. 75 I $\dot{\varepsilon}$ коvбí $\boldsymbol{\omega} \tau \rho о \dot{\pi} \pi \varphi)$; in the other, $\gamma \nu \omega^{\prime} \mu \eta \nu$ (so éxovaía, $\mathfrak{e} \xi \dot{\xi}$ éováas, etc.) : comp. Lobeck Phryn. p. 4.
 plains an additional motive which guided the Apostle's decision: 'I did not dare to detain him, however much I desired it. I might have defeated the purpose for which God in Iis good providence allowed him to leave thee?
 Chrysostom, 'For theis cause he fied, but for this cause he was parted: for he would appease Philemon by a more euphemistic phrase. And again he does not say he parted himself, but he was parted: since the design was not Onesimus' own to depart for this or that reason: just as Joseph also, when excusing his brethren, says (Gen. xlv. 5) God did send me hither.'
$\left.\pi \rho o ̀ s \omega^{\prime} \rho a v\right]$ 'for an hour,' 'for a short season': 2 Cor vii. 8 , Gal. ii. 5 . ' It was only a brief moment after all', the Apostle would say, 'compared with the magnitude of the work wrought in it. He departed a reprobate; he returns a saved man. He departed for a fow months; he returns to be with you for all time and for eternity'. This sense of aiwivoy must not be arbitrarily limited. Since he left, Onesimus had obtained eternal life, and eternal life involves eternal interchange of friendship. His services to his old master were no longer barred by the gates of death.
$\dot{a} \pi \dot{\pi} \chi n s]$ In this connexion $\dot{\alpha} \pi \epsilon^{\epsilon} \chi \in L \nu$ may bear either of two senses: (I)'to have back, to have in return': or (2) ' to have to the full, to have wholly', as in Philiv. is $\dot{\alpha} \pi \epsilon \in \bar{\epsilon} \pi a ́ v \tau a$ (see the note). In other words the prominent idea in the word may be either restitution, or completeness. The former is the more probable sense here, as suggested by кaтє́Xєцע in verse 13 and by é $\chi \omega \rho i \sigma \theta \eta$ in this verse.
16. ws $\delta o \hat{\lambda} \lambda_{0 \nu}$ ] St Paul does not say $\delta o u ̄ \lambda o v$ but $\tilde{\omega}^{s}$ 8oūhov. It was a matter of indifference whether he were outwardly $\delta o \hat{v} \lambda o s$ or outwardly entí $\theta_{\text {foos }}$, since both are one in Christ (Col. iii. II). But though he might still remain a slave, he could no longer be as a slave. A change had bcen wrought in him, independently of his possible manumission : in Christ he had become a brother. It should be noticed also that the negative is not $\mu \eta \times$ ќть, but oíкétı. The negation is thus wholly independent of iva...atéxps. It describes not the possible view of Philemon, but the actual state of Onesimus. The'no moreas a slave' is an absolute fact, whether Philemon chnoses to recognise it or not.

 кє́рฎакая каі̀ т $\hat{\eta}$ тоь́́rŋтı, writes Chrysostom, apostrophizing Philemon.
 said 'most of all to me', he goes a step further, ' more than most of all to thee'.

кaì ধ̇̀ $\sigma \alpha \rho \kappa \grave{\imath}$ к.т. $\lambda$.] 'In both spheres alike, in the affairs of this world and in the affairs of the higher life.' In the former, as Meyer pointedly says, Philemon had the brother for a slave; in the latter he had the slave for a brother: comp. Ign. Trall. 12 кarà $\mu a t$.
17. Ë́ets кotvavóv] 'thou holdest me to be a comrade, an intimate friend.' For this use of ' $\chi$ ' ${ }^{\prime \prime}$ comp. Lukexiv. is $\epsilon_{\chi} \in \mu \epsilon \pi a \rho \eta \tau \eta \mu \mathcal{\epsilon}^{\prime} \nu 0 \nu$, Phil.
 Those are кouvapol, who have common interests, common feelings, common work.

18-22. 'But if he has done thee any injury, or if he stands in thy debt, set it down to my account. Here is my signature-Paul-in my own handwriting. Accept this as my bond. I will repay thee. For I will not insist, as I might, that thou art indebted to me for much more than this; that thou owest to me thine own self. Yes, dear brother, let me receive from my son in the faith such a return as a father has a right to expect. Cheer and refresh my spirits in Christ. I have full confidence in thy compliance, as I write this; for I know that thou wilt do even more than I ask. At the same time also prepare to receive me on a visit; for I hope that through your prayers I shall be set free and given to you once more.'
18. $\left.\epsilon i \delta_{\epsilon}^{\prime} \quad \pi l\right]$ The case is stated hypothetically but the words doubtless describe the actual offence of Onesimus. He had done his master some injury, probably had robbed him; and he had fled to escape panishment. See the introduction.
$\hat{\eta}$ ó $\phi \in i \lambda \epsilon i]$ defining the offence which has been indicated in $\dot{j} \delta \dot{\delta} \kappa \eta \sigma \epsilon \tau$. But still the Apostle refrains from using the plain word $\notin \kappa \lambda \epsilon \psi \in \nu$. Le would spare the penitent slave, and avoid irritating the injured master.
' $\left.\lambda \lambda o^{\prime} a^{\prime}\right]$ ' reckon it in', 'set it down'. This form must be adopted instead of è $\lambda \lambda \dot{c}^{\prime} \notin \iota$ which stands in the received text, as the great preponderance of authority shows. On the other hand we have endoyeita Rom. v. 13 (though woal Edict. Diocl. in Corp. Inscr. Lat. III. p. 836. But the word is so rare in any form, that these occurrences of endoyeiv aftord no ground for excluding è $\lambda \lambda 0 y a \hat{v}$ as impossible. The two forms might be employed side by side, xy．23），and the like；see Buttmann Ausf．Gramm．§ 112 （II．p．53）．The word doyà ，as used by Lucian Lexiph． 15 （where it is a desiderative＇to be cager to speak＇，like фovàv，Aavarà ， фар $\mu а к \hat{\nu} \nu$ ，etc．），has nothing to do with the use of è $\lambda \lambda o y a \hat{\nu}$ here．

19．$\epsilon \gamma \omega$ Шaū̃os］The introduc－ tion of his own name gives it the cha－ racter of a formal and binding signa－ ture：comp． 1 Cor．xvi．21，Col．if． 18 ， 2 Thess．iii．17．A signature to a deed in ancient or medireval times would commonly take this form，${ }^{\prime} \gamma \omega$ os Seipa，－＇I so and so＇；where weshould omit the marks of the first person．
Éүpaqa］An epistolary or docu－ mentary aorist，as in ver． 2 r ；so too
 ＇r $\gamma \rho a \psi a$ Gal．vi．I r．The aorist is the tense commonly used in signatures； e．g．inध́रpa廿a to the conciliar de－ crees．

This incidental mention of his auto－ graph，occurring where it does， shows that he wrote the whole letter with his own hand．This procedure is quite exceptional，just as the pur－ port of the letter is exceptional．In all other cases he appears to have employed an amanuensis，only adding a few words in his own bandwriting at the close：see the note on Gal．l．c． îva $\left.\mu \dot{\eta} \lambda_{\epsilon} \gamma^{\prime}\right]$ ］＇not to say＇，as 2 Cor． ix．4．There is a suppressed thought， ＇though indeed you cannot fairly claim reparment＇，＇though indeed you owo mo（ó $\phi$ einecs）as muchas this＇，on which the $\tilde{z \nu a} \mu \dot{\eta} \kappa . \tau . \lambda$ ．is dependent．Hence тробофеі建＇owest besides＇；for this is the common meaning of the word． ofavtóp］St Paul was his spiritu－ al father，who had begotten him in the faith，and to whom therefore he owed his being；comp．Plato Legg．iv．

 $\epsilon \bar{i} \nu a \ell \tau \hat{\omega} \nu \gamma є \nu \nu \eta \sigma a ́ \nu \tau \omega \nu \ldots \hat{a} \rho \chi o ́ \mu \in \nu о \nu$

 $\nu \in i \sigma \mu a \tau a \kappa . \tau . \lambda$ ．

20．vai＇］introducing an affectionate $\sigma \in$ ．
$\dot{a} \hat{\delta} \epsilon \lambda \phi \epsilon \cdot]$ It is the entreaty of a bro－ ther to a brother on behalf of a bro－ ther（ver．16）．For the pathetic ap－ peal involved in the word see the notes on Gal．iii．15，vi． 1,18 ；and comp，ver． 7 ．
$\epsilon^{\epsilon} \gamma \omega$ ］＇I seem to be entreating for Onesimus；but I am pleading for $m y$－ solf：the favour will be done to me＇；
 The emphatic $\epsilon^{\prime} \gamma \omega$ identifies the cause of Onesimus with his own．

Gov óvaí $\mu \nu]$＇may I have satis－ faction，find comfort in thee＇，i．e．＇may I receive such a retrum from thee，as a father has a right to expect from his child．＇The common use of the word $\dot{\text { oraia }} \boldsymbol{y}$ would suggest the thought of filial offices；e．g．Arist． $\nu \omega \nu$ ，Lucian Philops． 27 трòs тウ̀ $\nu$ тои́тad，Ps－Igaat．Hero 6 óvaía $\eta$ бov，

 other passages quoted in Wetstein． So too for ${ }^{\prime} \nu \alpha \sigma \theta a \iota$ ，$\partial \nu \eta \sigma t s$, compare Eur．Med． 1025 sq．$\pi \rho i \nu \quad \sigma \phi \dot{\varphi} \nu$ oै $\nu a-$

 Philem．Inc． 64 （Iv．p． 55 Meineke）

 Fou，Ecclus．xxx． 2 ó maiévín tò $\nu$ only passage in the Lxx where the word occars）．The prayer oेyaimp $\sigma o v$ ， $\dot{d \nu a i \mu \eta \nu} \dot{\nu} \mu \omega \bar{\nu}$ ，etc．，occurs several times in Ignatius；Polyc．1，6，Magn．2，i2， Ephes．2．It is not unlikely that ovai－ $\mu \eta \nu$ here involves a reference to the name Onesimus；see the note on ver． i1．The Hebrew foudness for playing on names makes such an allusion at least possible． lemon ${ }^{t} \boldsymbol{y}$ Kvpị（comp． 1 Cor．iv．15，17）， so it was èv Kupice that he looked for the recompense of filial offices． àdáravoov к．т．．．］See the note ver． 7 ． on ver． 19.

 thought upwost in the Apostle＇s mind when he penned these words？Did he contemplate the manumission of Onesimus？If so，the restraint which he imposes upon himself is signifi－ cant．Indeed throughout this epistle the idea would seem to be present to his thoughts，though the word never passes his lips．This reserve is emi－ nently characteristic of the Gospel． Slavery is never directly attacked as such，but principles are inculcated whick must prove fatal to it．
22．ä $\mu a \quad \delta \dot{\epsilon} \kappa$ к．т．．．］．］When St Paul first contemplated visiting Rome，he had intended，after leaving the me－ tropolis，to pass westward into Spain； Rom．xv．24，28．But by this time he appears to have altered his plans，pur－ posing first to revisit Greece and Asia Minor．Thus in Phil ii． 24 he looks forward to seeing the Philippians shortly；while here he contemplates a risit to the Churches of the Lycus valley．
There is a gentle compulsion in this mention of a personal visit to Colosse． The Apostle would thus be able to see for himself that Philemon had not disappointed his expectations．Simi－ larly Serapion in Eus．H．E．vi． 12

$\xi \in v i a v]$＇a lodging＇；comp．Clem．
 $\mu \dot{a}$ joves．So the Latin parare hospi－ tium Cic．ad Att．xiv．2，Mart．Ep． ix．I．This latter passage，＇Vale et para hospitium＇，closely resembles St Paul＇s langrage here．In the expres－ sion before us $\xi^{\prime} \nu^{\prime}$ a is probably the place of entertainment：but in such
 $i \pi i \xi \in v i a \nu, \phi \rho o v \tau i j \epsilon \omega \psi \in \nu i a s$ ，and the like，it denotes the offices of hospital－ ity．The Latin hospitium also in－ cludes both senses．The $\xi \in e v i a$ ，as a lodging，may denote either quarters in aninn or a room in a private house： see Philippians p．g．For the latter comp．Plato Tim． 20 o $\pi$ napà K $\operatorname{litiay~}$

 would doubtless be a hospitable recep－ tion in Philemon＇s home；but the request does not assume so much as this． $\chi$ aptoөiooual］＇I shall be granted to you＇．The grant（ $\chi a \rho i \zeta_{\epsilon} \epsilon \theta a z$ ）of one person to another，may be for purposes either（1）of destruction，as Acts xxy．II oviôeis $\mu \mathrm{e}$ dúvaral aùtois харíra⿱丷天at（comp．ver．16），or（2）of preservation，as Acts iii． $14 \dot{\eta} \boldsymbol{\eta} \dot{\eta} \dot{\sigma} a \sigma \theta_{\epsilon}$ here．
23－25．＇Epaphras my fellow－eap－ tive in Christ Jesus salutes you．As do also Mark，Aristarchus，Demas， and Luke，my fellow－labourers．The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with thee and thy household，and sanctify the spirit of you all．＇ 23 sq ．For these salutations see the notes on Col．iv．ro sq．Epaphras oi $\sigma v \nu \in \rho \gamma o i ́ \mu o v$.

 то仑̂ $\pi \nu \in \dot{u} \mu \alpha \tau о \varsigma \dot{\cup} \mu \hat{\omega} \nu$.
is mentioned first because he was a Colossian (Col.iv. 12) and, as the evangelist of Colosse (see p. 29 sq.), doubtless well known to Philemon. Of the four others Aristarchus and Mark belonged to the Circumcision (Col.iv. II) while Demas and Luke were Gentile Christians. All these were of Greek or Asiatic origin and would probably be well known to Philemon, at least by name. On the other hand Jesus Justus, who is honourably mentioned in the Colossian letter (iv. II), but passed over here, may have been a Roman Christian.
 meanings of this title see Col. iv. Io, where it is given not to Epaphras but to Aristarchus.
25. 'H $\chi$ d́ $\rho \iota s$ к. $\tau . \lambda$.$] The same form$ of farewell as in Gal. vi. 18 ; comp. 2 Tim. iv. 22.
$\dot{v} \mu \omega \nu$ ] The persons whose names are mentioned in the opening salutation.

DISSERTATIONS.

On some points connected with the Essenes.

I.

THE NAME ESSENE.
II.

ORIGTN AND AFFINITY OF THE ESSENES.

III.

 ESSENISM AND CERISTIANITY.
I.

THE NAME ESSENE.

The name is variously written in Greek:

Various forms of

1. 'E $\sigma \sigma \eta$ vós : $^{\text {: Joseph. Ant. xiii. 5. 9, xiii. 1o. 6, xv. to. 5, xtiii. the name }}$ 1. 2, 5, B. J. ii. 8. 2, 13, Vit. 2 ; Plin. N. II. v. $15.17{ }^{\text {in Greel. }}$ (Essenus) ; Dion Chrys. in Synes. Dion 3; Hippol. Haer. ix. 18, 28 (ws Eqquós); Epiphan. Haer. p. 28 sq., 127 (ed. Pet.).
2. 'Earaîos : Philo il. pp. 457, 471, 632 (ed. Mang.); Hegesippus in Euseb. H. E. iv. 22; Porphyr. de Abstin. iv. ri. So too Joseph. B. J. ii. 7.3 , ii. 20. 4, iii. 2. 1; Ant. xv. ro. 4; though in the immediate context of this last passage he writes 'Earquoós, if the common texts may be trusted.
3. 'Oббâos: Epiphan. Haer. pp. 40 sq., 125, 462. The common texts very frequently make him write 'Oorचyós, but see Dindorf's notes, Epiphan. Op. I. pp. 380, 425. With Epiphanius the Essenes are a Samaritan, the Osseans a Judaic sect. He has evidently got his information from two distiuct sources, and does not see that the same persons are intended.
4. 'I $\epsilon \sigma \sigma a \hat{i o s}$, Epiphan. Haer. p. 117. From the connexion the same sect again seems to be meant: but owing to the form Epiphanius conjectures (oipal) that the name is derived from Jesse, the father of David.
If any certain example could be produced where the name occurs All etymoin any early Hebrew or Aramaic writing, the question of its deriva- $\begin{aligned} & \text { logeses to } \\ & \text { bejected }\end{aligned}$ tion would probably be settled; but in the absence of a single decisive which deinstance a wide field is opened for conjecture, and critics have not name been backward in availing themselves of the license．In discussing the claims of the different etymologies proposed we may reject：
（i）From the Greek；

First ：derivations from the Greek．Thus Philo connects the word with öalos＇holy＇：Quod omn．prob．12，p． 457 ＇Eб大aiol．．．סua入́кктov

 Philo is here playing with words after the manner of his master Plato，or whether he holds a pre－established harmony to exist among different languages by which similar sounds represent similar things， or whether lastly he seriously means that the name was directly derived from the Greek word öfos．The last supposition is the least probable ；but he certainly does not reject this derivation＇as incor－ dered＇from an incorrect derivation from the Greek homonym hosiotes＇ （ib．p．32），since the word $\pi \alpha \rho$ órvpos never involves the notion of false etymology．The amount of truth which probably underlies Philo＇s statement will be considered hereafter．Another Greek derivation is＂̈oos，＇companion，associate，＇suggested by Rapoport，Erech Millin p．41．Several others again are suggested by Löwy，s．v．Essüer，e．g． fow from their esoteric doctrine，or aiva from their fatalism．All such may be rejected as instances of ingenious trifling，if indeed they deserve to be called ingenious．
（ii）From names of persons or pilaces；

Seconclly：derivations from proper names whether of persons or of places．Thus the word has been derived from Jesse the father of David（Eyiphan．l．c．），or from one Vevai，the disciple of R． Joshua ben Perachia who migrated to Egypt in the time of Alexander Jannæus（Löw in Ben Chananja 1．p．352）．Again it has been referred to the town Essa（a doubtful reading in Joseph．Ant．xiii． 15．3）beyond the Jordan．And other similar derivations have been suggested．
（iii）From ITebrew roots not supplying the right conso－ nants，

Thirdly：etymologies from the Hebrew or Aramaic，which do not supply the right consonants，or do not supply them in the right order．Under this head several must be rejected；

TON asar＇to bind，＇Adler Volkslehrer vi．p．50，referred to by Ginsburg Essenes p． 29.

T＇DT chāsīd＇pious，＇which is represented by＇Aoı反aĩos（ 1 Macc． ii． 42 （v．1．），vii．13， 2 Macc．xiv．6），and could not possibly assume the form 'Eqcaios or 'Eqбquós. Yet this derivation appears in Josippon ben Gorion (iv. 6, 7, v. 24, pp. 274, 278, 451), who substitutes Chasidim in narratives where the Essenes are mentioned in the original of Josephus; and it has been adopted by many more recent writers.

D s'chá 'to bathe,' from which with an Aleph prefixed we might get 'smos as'chai 'bathers' (a word however which does not occur): Grätz Gesch. der Juden in. pp. 82, 468.
y 1846, p. 449, Monatsschrift II. p. 32) after a. suggestion by Löw.

To this category must be assigned those etymologies which con- such as $\operatorname{tain}$ a $\mid$ as the third consonant of the root; since the comparison which of the parallel forms 'Earainos and 'Erorquós shows that in the latter make $n$ word the $\nu$ is only formative. On this ground we must reject: part of
"ח chäsin; see below under
; $\boldsymbol{Y}$ chätsen 'a fold' of a garment, and so supposed to signify the $\pi \in \rho i \zeta \sigma \mu a$ or 'apron', which was given to every neophyte among the Essenes (Joseph. B. J. ii. 8. 5, 7): suggested by Jellinek Ben Chananja rv. p. 374.
’שׁy eashīn 'strong': see Cohn in Frankel's Monatsschrift vir. p. 27I. This etymology is suggested to explain Epiphanius Haer.

 is so interpreted also in Makrisi (de Sacy, Chrestom. Arab. I. p. II4, 306) ; but, as he himself writes it with Elif and not Ain, it is plain that he got this interpretation from some one else, probably from Epiphanius. The correct reading however in Epiphanius is 'Oqraíov, not 'O $\sigma \sigma \neq \nu \omega \bar{\nu}$; and it would therefore appear that this father or his informant derived the word from the Hebrew root iv rather than from the Aramaic עעש. The 'O $\sigma \sigma a \hat{i}$. is so far a possible derivation, that the $n$ does not enter into the root. Another word suggested to explain the etymology of Epiphanius is the Hebrew and Aramaic achasīn 'powerful, strong' (from ;ロח); but this is open to the same oljections as

When all such derivations are climinated as untenable or impro- Other debable, considerable uncertainty still remains. The ist and 3 rd radi- rivations cals might be any of the gutturals $\kappa, \pi, \Gamma, y$; and the Greek $\sigma$, as the ed: and radical, might represent any one of several Shemitic sibilants.

Thus we have the choice of the following etymologies, which have found more or less favour.
(1) NOM'a
(r) ND ${ }_{s} s \bar{a}$ 'to heal,' whence NoN asyā, 'a physician.' physician'; The Essenes are supposed to be so called because Josephus states (B. J, ii. 8.6) that they paid great attention to the qualities of herbs $\pi a \theta \hat{\omega} \nu$. This etymology is supported likewise by an appeal to the name $\theta_{\epsilon \rho a \pi \epsilon ч \tau a i,}$ which Philo gives to an allied sect in Egypt (de Fit. Cont. § I, II. p. 471). It seems highly improbable however, that the ordinary name of the Essenes should have been derived from a pursuit which was merely secondary and incidental; while the supposed analogy of the Therapeutz rests on a wrong interpretation of the word. Philo indecd (l. c.), bent upon extracting from it as much moral significance as possible, says, $\theta$ єратєvтai кaì $\theta \in \rho a \pi \epsilon \tau \tau \rho(\hat{\delta} \epsilon s$ кa-тò ôv к.т. $\lambda$. : but the latter meaning alone accords with the usage of the word; for $\theta$ eparєutris, used absolutely, signifies 'a worshipper, devotee,' not 'a physician, healer.' This etymology of 'E $\sigma \sigma a \hat{0}$ os is asoribed, though wrongly, to Philo by Asaria de' Rossi (Meor Enayim 3 , fol. 33 a) and has been very widely received. Among more recent writers, who have adopted or favoured it, are Bellermann (Ueber Essüer u. Therapeuten p. 7), Gf̈rörer (Plilo n. p. 341), Dähne (Ersch u. Gruber, s. v.), Baur (Christl. Kirche der drei erst. Jahrh. p. 20), Herzfeld (Gesch. des Judenthums ir. p. 37x, 395, 397 sq.), Geiger (Urschrifift p. 126), Derenbourg (LHistoive et la Geographie de la Palestine pp. 170, 175, notes), Keim (Jesus ron Nazara I. p. 284 sq.), and Hamburger (Real-Encyclopädie für Bibel u. Talmud, s. v.). Several of these writers identify the Essenes with the Baithusians (ביתוםי) of the Talmud, though in the Talmud the Baithusians are connected with the Sadducees. This identification was suggested by Asaria de' Rossi (1. c. fol. 33 ) , who interprets 'Baithusians' as 'the school of the Essenes' (בית ציםים) : while subsequent writers, going a step further, have explained it 'the school of the physicians' (ב'ת אםיא).

(2)
"a seer';
(2) NTM chăzäa 'to see', whence sun chazyā 'a seer', in reference to the prophetic powers which the Essenes claimed, as the result of ascetic contemplation: Joseph. B. J. ii. S. i2 єivì đ̀̀ ẻv av̉roîs such Essene prophets see $A n t$. xiii. r1. 2, xv. ro. 5, B. J. i. 3. 5, ii. 7.

 тккоí. For this derivation, which was suggested by Baumgarten (see Bellermann p. ro) and is adopted by Hilgenfeld (Jüd. Apocal. p. 278 ), there is something to be said: but Nin is rather $\dot{\circ} \rho \hat{\alpha} \nu$ than $\theta \epsilon \omega \rho \in i v$; and thus it must denote the result rather than the process, the vision which was the privilege of the few rather than the contemplation which was the duty of all. Indeed in a later paper (Zeitschr. xı. p. 346, 1868) Hilgenfeld expresses himself doubtfully about this derivation, feeling the difficulty of explaining the $\sigma \sigma$ from the $\%$. This is a real objection. In the transliteration of the Lxx the $;$ is persistently represented by $\xi$, and the $\mathbf{3}$ by $\sigma$. The exceptions to this rule, where the manuscript authority is beyond question, are very few, and in every case they seem capable of explanation by peculiar circumstances.
 doers, the observers of the law,' thus referring to the strictness of 'to do'; Essene practices: see Oppenheim in Frankel's Monatsschrift vir. p. 272 sq. It has been suggested also that, as the Pharisees were especially designated the teachers, the Essenes were called the 'doers' by a sort of antithesis: see an article in Jost's Annalen 1839, p. 145. Thus the Talmudic phrase אמנשי מעשה, interpreted 'men of practice, of good deeds,' is supposed to refer to the Essenes (see Frankel's Zeitschrift III. p. 458, Monatsschrift in. p. 70). In some passages indeed (see Surenhuis Mishna III. p. 3I3) it may possibly mean 'workers of also it might be explained of the thaumaturgic powers claimed by the Essenes. (See below, p. 362.) On the use which has been made of a passage in the Aboth of R. Nathan c. 37 , as supporting this derivation, I shall have to speak hereafter. Altogether this etymology has little or nothing to recommend it.

I have reserved to the last the two derivations which seem to deserve most consideration.
 Syriac. 'This derivation, which is also given by de Sacy (Chrestom. 'pious'; Arab. 1. p. 347), is adopted by Ewald (Gesch. des V. Isr. 1v. p. 484, COL.
ed. 3, 1864; viI. pp. 154s 477, ed. 2, 1859), who abandons in its favour another etymology (חון chazzan 'watcher, worshipper' = $\theta$ epa$\left.\pi \epsilon v \tau \eta \eta^{\prime}\right\rangle$ which he had suggested in an earlier edition of his fourth volume (p. 420). It is recommended by the fact that it resembles not only in sound, but in meaning, the Greek ócıos, of which it is a common rendering in the Peshito (Acts ii. 27, xiii. 35, Tit. i. 8). Thus it explains the derivation given by Philo (see above, p. 350), in Greek. Ewald moreover points out how an Essenizing Sibylline poem (Orac. Sib. iv; see above, p. 96) dwells on the Greek equiva-
 ${ }_{1} 7^{8} \mathrm{sq}$., ed. Alexandre), as if they had a special value for the writer : see Gesch. vir. p. 154, Sibyll. Bücher p. 46. Lipsius (Schenkel's Bibel-Lexicon, s. v.) also considers this the most probable etymology.
(5) (5) (ח) Heb. 'to be silent'; whence $c h \bar{a} \bar{a} h \bar{a} \bar{a}$ (also silent ones.' chashshā̀m 'the silent ones,' who meditate on mysteries. Jost (Gesch. d. Judenth. r. p. 207) believes that this was the derivation accepted by Josephus, since he elsewhere (Ant. iii. 7. 5, iii. 8. 9) writes out $ן$, $n$, chōshen ' the high-priest's breast-plate' (Exod. xxviii. 15 sq.), é $\sigma \sigma \eta{ }^{\prime} v$ or in the Lxx. Even though modern critics should be right in connecting חחשן with the Arab. 'pulcher fuit, ornavit' (see Gesen. Thes. p. 535 , s. v.), the other derivation may have prevailed in Josephus' time. We may illustrate this derivation by Josephus' description of equivalent $\theta$ є $\omega \rho \eta \tau \iota \kappa \circ$ i, which Suidas gives for 'E $\sigma \sigma \alpha i o$. The use of the Hebrew word $\begin{gathered}\text { n in Mishna Shelalim v. } 6 \text {, though we need }\end{gathered}$ not suppose that the Essenes are there meant, will serve to show how it might be adopted as the name of the sect. On this word see Levy Chaldäisches Wörterbuch p. 287. On the whole this seems the most probable etymology of any, though it has not found so much favour as the last. At all events the rules of transliteration are entirely satisfied, and this can hardly be said of the other derivations which come into competition with it.

II.

ORIGIN AND AFFINITIES OF THE ESSENES.

THE ruling principle of the Restoration under Ezra was the isola- The printion of the Jewish people from all influences of the surrounding the resto. nations. Only by the rigorous application of this principle was it ration. possible to guard the nationality of the Hebrews, and thus to preserve the sacred deposit of religious truth of which this nationality was the husk. Hence the strictest attention was paid to the Levitical ordinances, and more especially to those which aimed at ceremonial purity. The principle, which was thos distinctly asserted at the period of the national revival, gained force and concentration at a later date from the active antagonism to which the patriotic Jews were driven by the religious and political aggressions of the Syrian kings. During the Maccabean wars we read of a party or sect Rise of called the Chasidim or Asidocans (A A $\dot{\delta} \alpha \hat{1} \circ$ ), the 'pious' or 'devout,' the Asiwho zealous in their observance of the ceremonial law stoutly resisted any concession to the practices of Hellenism, and took their place in the van of the struggle with their national enemies, the Antiochene monarchs (I Macc. ii. 42, vii. 13, 2 Macc. xiv. 6). But, though their names appear now for the first time, they are not mentioned as a newly formed party; and it is probable that they had their origin at a much earlier date.

The subsequent history of this tendency to exclusiveness and isolation is wrapt in the same obscurity. At a somewhat later date Phariit is exhibited in the Pharisees and the Essenes; but whether these | saism and |
| :---: |
| Essenism |
| $\substack{\text { sin }}$ | were historically connected with the Chasidim as divergent offshoots traced to of the original sect, or whether they represent independent develop- principle. ments of the same principle, we are without the proper data for deciding. The principle itself appears in the name of the Pharisees, which, as denoting 'separation,' points to the avoidance of all foreign and contaminating influences. On the other hand the meaning of the name Essene is uncertain, for the attempt to derive it directly from Chasidim must be abandoned ; but the tendency of the sect is unmistakeable. If with the Pharisees ceremonial purity was a principal aim, with the Essenes it was an absorbing passion. It was enforced and guarded morenver by a special organization. While the Pharisees were a sect, the Essenes were an order. Like the Pythagoreans in Magna Grecia and the Buddhists in India before them, like the Christian monks of the Egyptian and Syrian deserts after them, they were formed into a religious brotherhood, fenced about by minute and rigid rules, and carefully guarded from any contamination with the outer world.

Frankel's theory well received,

Thus the sect may have arisen in the heart of Judaism. The idea of ceremonial purity was essentially Judaic. But still, when we turn to the representations of Philo and Josephus, it is impossible to overlook other traits which betoken foreign affinities. Whatever the Essenes may have been in their origin, at the Christian era at least and in the Apostolic age they no longer represented the current type of religious thought and practice among the Jews. This foreign element has been derived by some from the Pythagoreans, by others from the Syrians or Persians or even from the farther East; but, whether Greek or Oriental, its existence has until lately been almost universally allowed.

The investigations of Frankel, published first in 1846 in his Zeitschrift, and continued in 1853 in his Monatsschrift, have given a different direction to current opinion. Frankel maintains that Essenism was a purely indigenous growth, that it is only Pharisaism in an exaggerated form, and that it has nothing distinctive and owes nothing, or next to nothing, to foreign influences. To establish this point, he disparages the representations of Philo and Josephus as coloured to suit the tastes of their heathen readers, while in their place he brings forward as authorities a number of passages from talmudical and rabbinical writings, in which he discovers references to this sect. In this view be is followed implicitly by some later writers, and has largely influenced the opinions of others; while nearly all speak of his investigations as throwing great light on the subject.

It is perhaps dangerous to dissent from a view which has found but so much favour ; but nevertheless $I$ am obliged to confess my belief less and that, whatever value Frankel's investigations may have as contribu- misleadtions to our knowledge of Jewish religious thought and practice, they throw little or no light on the Essenes specially; and that the blind acceptance of his results by later writers has greatly obscured the distinctive features of this sect. I cannot but think that any one, who will investigate Frankel's references and test his results step by step, will arrive at the conclusion to which I myself have been led, that his talmudical researches have left our knowledge of this sect where it was before, and that we must still refer to Josephus and Philo for any precise information respecting them.

Frankel starts from the etymology of the name. He supposes His donble that 'Eraaios, 'Eargyo's, represent two different Hebrew words, the derivation able Greek dresses ${ }^{1}$. Wherever therefore either of these words occurs, there is, or there may be, a direct reference to the Essenes.

It is not too much to say that these etymologies are impossible; Fatal oband this for several reasons. (r) The two words 'Eoraios, 'Eoron jections to vos, are plainly duplicate forms of the same Hebrew or Aramaic and Cutтทvós (Steph. Byz. s. v., Hippol. Her. vi. 7), with which we may compare Boarpaios and Boarpqvós, Mètraios and Mètrvvós, and numberless other examples. (2) Again; when we consider either word singly, the derivation offered is attended with the most serious difficulties. There is no reason why in 'Eroaios the $d$ should have disappeared from chasid, while it is hardly possible to conceive that tsanuae should have taken such an incongruous form as 'E $\sigma \sigma \eta$ vós. (3) And lastly; the more important of tho two words, chasid, had already a recognised Greek equivalent in 'Aciôaios; and it seems highly improbable that a form so divergent as 'Eoraios should have taken its place.

Indeed Frankel's derivations are generally, if not universally, Dependabandoned by later writers; and yet these same writers repeat his the the [^111]on the derivation.

The term chasid not applied epecially to the Essenes.
quotations and accept his results, as if the references were equally valid, though the name of the sect has disappeared. They seem to be satisfied with the stability of the edifice, even when the foundation is undermined. Thus for instance Grätz not only maintains after Frankel that the Essenes 'were properly nothing more than stationary or, more strictly speaking, logically consistent (consequente) Chasidim,' and 'that therefore they were not so far removed from the Pharisees that they can be regarded as a separate sect,' and 'accepts entirely these results' which, as he says, 'rest on critical investigation' (III. p. 463), but even boldly translates chasiduth 'the Essene mode of life' (ib. 84), though he himself gives a wholly different derivation of the word 'Essene, making it signify ' washers'. or 'baptists' (see above, p. 351). And even those who do not go to this length of inconsistency, yet avail themselves freely of the passages where chasid occurs, and interpret it of the Essenes, while distinctly repudiating the etymology ${ }^{1}$.

But, although 'Eqcaios or 'Ecбクvós is not a Greek form of chasid, it might still happen that this word was applied to them as an epithet, though not as a proper name. Only in this case the reference ought to be unmistakeable, before any conclusions are based upon it. But in fact, after going through all the passages, which Frankel gives, it is impossible to feel satisfied that in a single instance there is a direct allusion to the Essenes. Sometimes the word seems to refer to the old sect of the Chasidim or Asidwans, as for instance when Jose ben Joezer, who lived during the Maccabæan war, is called a chasid ${ }^{2}$. At all events this $R$. Jose is known to have been a married man, for he is stated to have disinherited his children (Baba Bathra 133 ) ; and therefore he cannot have belonged to the stricter order of Essenes. Sometimes it is employed quite generally to denote pious observers of the ceremonial law, as for instance when it is said that with the death of certain famous teachers the Chasidim ceased ${ }^{5}$. In this latter sense the expression ${ }^{\text {an }}$, 'the ancient or primitive Chasidim' (Monatsschr. pp. 3I, 62), is perhaps used ; for these primitive Chasidim again are mentioned as having [^112]wives and children', and it appears also that they were scrupulously exact in bringing their sacrificial offerings ${ }^{2}$. Thus it is impossible to identify them with the Essenes, as described by Josephus and Philo. Even in those passages of which most has been made, the reference is more than doubtful. Thus great stress is laid on the saying of $R$. Joshua ben Chananiah in Mishna Sotah iii. 4, 'The foolish chasid and the clever villain (חסיד שוטה ורשע ערום), etc., are the ruin of the world.' But the connexion points to a much more general meaning of chasid, and the rendering in Surenhuis, 'Homo pius qui insipiens, improbus qui astutus,' gives the correct antithesis. So we might say that there is no one more mischievous than the wrong-headed conscientious man. It is true that the Gemaras illustrate the expression by examples of those who allow an over-punctilious regard for external forms to stand in the way of deeds of mercy. And perhaps rightly. But there is no reference to any distinctive Essene practices in the illustrations given. Again; the saying in Mishna Pirke Aboth v. ro, 'He who says Mine is thine and thine is thine is [a] chasid (שלוי שלך וישלך , is quoted by several writers as though it referred to the Essene community of goods ${ }^{\text {a }}$. But in the first place the idea of community of goods would require, 'Mine is thine and thine is mine': and in the second place, the whole context, and especially the clause which immediately follows (and which these writers do not give), 'He who says Thine is mine and mine is mine is wicked (רשׁ),' show plainly that must be taken in its general sense 'pious,' and the whole expression implies not reciprocal interchange but individual self-denial.

${ }^{1}$ Niddah $38 a$; see Löwy s.v. Essäer.
${ }^{2}$ Mishaa Kerithuth vi. 3, Nedarim 10 $a$; see Monatsschr. p. 6 E.
3 Thas Grätz (III p. 81) speaking of the commonity of goods among the Essenes writes, 'From this view springs the preverb; Every Chassid says; Mine and thine belong to thee (not me)' thas giving a turn to the expression which in its original oonnexion it does not at all justify. Of the existence of such a proverb I have found no traces. It certainly is not suggested in the passage of Pirke Aboth. Later in the volume ( $p$-46j) Grätz tacitly alters the words to make them express, as he [^113]Yossible connexion of chasid and chasyo the Syriac rems, Resass, ch'sē, chasyo (a possible derivation), discussed.

It might indeed be urged, though this is not Frankel's plea, that Usage is unfavourable to this view. chasid might have been its Hebrew equivalent as being similar in sound and meaning, and perhaps ultimately connected in derivation, the exactly corresponding triliteral root NDM (comp. not being in use in Hebrew ${ }^{1}$. But before we accept this explanation we have a right to demand some evidence which, if not demonstrative, is at least circumstantial, that chasid is used of the Essenes : and this we have seen is not forthcoming. Moreover, if the Essenes had thus inherited the name of the Chasidim, we should have expected that its old Greek equivalent 'Agı $\delta \alpha \hat{0} \circ$, which is still used later than the Maccabæan era, would also have gone with it ; rather than that a new Greek word 'Eroraîos (or 'Eorqvós) should have been invented to take its place. But indeed the Sfriac Version of the Old Testament furnishes an argument against this convertibility of the Hebrew chasid and the Syriac chasyo, which must be regarded as almost decisive. The numerous passages in the Psalms, where the expressions 'My chasidim,' 'His chasidim,' occur (xxx. 5, xxxi. 24, xxxfii. 28, lii. 1 , lexix. 2, lexxv. 9, xcvii. 10, cxvi. 15, cxxxii. 9, cxlix. 9: comp. xxxii. 6, cxlix. $r, 5$ ), seem to have suggested the assumption of the name to the original Asidæans. But in such passages Peshito not by resm, it it in , but by a wholly different word zadik. And again, in the Books of Maccabees the Syriac rendering for the name 'A泣aiot, Chasidim, is a word derived from another quite distinct root. These facts show that the Hebrew chasid and the Syriac chasyo were not practically equivalents, so that the one would suggest the other; and thus all presumption in favour of a connexion between 'A $\sigma \kappa \alpha \hat{i}$ os and 'E $\sigma \sigma a \hat{\imath} o s$ is removed.

Frankel's second derivation tsana $a_{\varepsilon}$ considered. valent to 'Earquoós, has found no favour with later writers, and indeed is too far removed from the Greek form to be tenable. Nor do the passages quoted by $\mathrm{him}^{2}$ require or suggest any allusion quotes the passage correctly, but refers by the later Jews because the Syrian it nevertheless to Essene communism.
${ }^{2}$ This is Hitzig's view (Geschichte. des Volkes Israel p. 427). He maintains that "they were called 'Hasidim' Essenes means exactly the same as 'Hasidim.'" ${ }^{2}$ Zeitschr. pp. 455, 457; Monatsschr. p. 32.

to this sect. Thus in Mishna Demai, vi. 6, we are told that the school of Hillel permits a certain license in a particular matter, but it is added, 'The צמוע of the school of Hillel followed the precept of the school of Shammai.' Here, as Frankel himself confesses, the Jerusalem Talmud knows nothing about Essenes, but explains the word by בשׁר, i.e. 'upright, worthy'; while elsewhere, as he allows ${ }^{\approx}$, it must have this general sense. Indeed the mention of the 'school of Hillel' here seems to exclude the Essenes. In its comprehensive meaning it will most naturally be taken also in the other passage quoted by Frankel, Kiddushin $7 \mathrm{r} a$, where it is stated that the pronunciation of the sacred name, which formerly was known to all, is now only to be dizulged to the צנוע, i.e. the discreet, among $^{\text {a }}$ the priests ; and in fact it occurs in reference to the communication of the same mystery in the immediate context also, where it could not possibly be treated as a proper name; שצנוע ועניו ועומר בהצי ימיו, 'who is discreet and meek and has reached middle age,' etc.

Of other etymologies, which heve bsen suggested, and through Other supwhich it might be supposed the Essenes are mentioned by name in posed etythe Talmud, s'os, asya, 'a physician,' is the one which has fcund in the most favour. For the reasons given above (p. 352) this derivation (I) Asyyd seems highly improbable, and the passages quoted are quite insufficient to overcome the objections. Of these the strongest is in the Talm. Jerus. Yoma iii. 7 , where we are told that a certain physician ( D א) offered to communicate the sacred name to R. Pinchas the not snpson of Chama, and the latter refused on the ground that he ate of ${ }_{\text {the pas- }}^{\text {ported by }}$ the tithes-this being regarded as a disqualification, apparently sages because it was inconsistent with the highest degree of ceremonial its behalf. purity ${ }^{3}$. The same story is told with some modifications in Midrash Qoheleth iii. 11 ${ }^{4}$. Here Frankel, though himself (as we have seen) adopting a different derivation of the word 'Essene,' yet supposes that this particular physician belonged to the sect, on the sole ground that ceremonial purity is represented as a qualification for the initiation into the mystery of the Sacred Name. Löwy (l. c.) denies that the allusion to the tithes is rightly interpreted: but even supposing it to be correct, the passage is quite an inadequate basis either [^114]for Frankel's conclusion that this particular physician was an Essene, or for the derivation of the word Essene which others maintain. Again, in the statement of Talm. Jerus. Kethuboth ii. 3, that correct manuscripts were called books of '0א', the word $A s i$ is generally taken as a proper name. But even if this interpretation be false, there is absolutely nothing in the context which suggests any allusion to the Essenes ${ }^{2}$. In like manner the passage from Sanhedrin 99 b, where a physician is mentioned ${ }^{\text {a }}$, supports no such inference. Indeed, as this last passage relates to the family of the $A s i$, he obviously can have had no connexion with the celibate Essenes.

Hitherto our search for the name in the Talmud has been unsuccessful. One possibility however still remains. The talmudical wribers speak of certain אנישי טעשה 'men of deeds'; and if (as some suppose) the name Essene is derived from ney have we not here the mention which we are seeking? Frankel rejects the etymology, but presses the identification ${ }^{4}$. The expression, he urges, is often used in connexion with chasidim. It signifies 'miracle workers,' and therefore aptly describes the supernatural powers supposed to be exercised by the Essenes ${ }^{5}$. Thus we are informed in Mishna Sotah ix. r5, that ' When R. Chaninah ben Dosa died, the men of deeds ceased; when R. Jose Ketinta died, the chasidim ceased.' In the Jerusalem Talmud however this mishna is read, 'With the death of R. Chaninah ben Dosa and R. Jose Ketinta the chasidim ceased'; while the Gemara there explains R. Chaninah to have been one of the vex חמיךים מעשה becomes still more plain.' Now it seems clear that this expression אנשש4 מעשה in some places cannot refer to miraculous powers, but must mean 'men of practical goodness,' as for instance in Succal, $5 \mathrm{ra}, 53 a$; and being a general term expressive of moral excellence, it is naturally connected with chasidim, which is likewise a general [^115] $\mu \eta \nu$ á入入à $\sigma u v e r \hat{\eta} \rho \in t$ тa $\rho^{\prime}$ Eaut $\left.\hat{\eta}\right)$, is also the meaning suggested here by the context.

${ }^{3}$ The passage is adduced in sapport of this derivation by Derenbourg p. 175.

4 See Zeitschr. p. 438, Monatsschr. pp. 68-70.
${ }^{5}$ See above, p. 353.
term expressive of piety and goodness. Nor is there any reason why it should not always be taken in this sense. It is true that stories are told elsewhere of this R. Chaninah, which ascribe miraculous powers to him ${ }^{2}$, and hence there is a temptation to translate it ' won-der-worker,' as applied to him. But the reason is quite insufficient. Moreover it must be observed that R. Chaninah's wife is a prominent person in the legends of his miracles reported in Taanith $24 b$; and thus we need hardly stop to discuss the possible meanings of אנשי מצשה , since his claims to being considered an Easens are barred at the outset by this fact ${ }^{2}$.

It has been asserted indeed by a recent author, that one very ancient Jewish writer distinctly adopts this derivation, and as distinctiy states that the Essenes were a class of Pharisees ${ }^{\text { }}$. If this were the case, Frankel's theory, though not his etymology, would receive a striking confirmation: and it is therefore important to enquire on what foundation the assertion rests.

Dr Ginsburg's authority for this statement is a passage from The anthe Aboth of Rabbi Nathan, c. 37 , which, as he gives it, appears thority conclusive; 'There are eight kinds of Pharisees...and those Phari- derivation sees who live in celibacy are Essenes.' But what are the facts an error. of the case? First; This book was certainly not written by its reputed author, the R. Nathan who was vice-president under the younger Gamaliel about A.D. 140. It may possibly have been founded on an earlier treatise by that famous teacher, though even this is very doubtful : but in its present form it is a comparatively modern work. On this point all or almost all recent writers on Hebrew literature are agreed ${ }^{4}$. Secondly; Dr Ginsburg has taken the reading מחופתו עשאני, without even mentioning any alternative. Whether the words so read are capable of the meaning which he has assigned to them, may be highly questionable; but at all events this cannot have been the original reading, as the parallel passages, [^116]Babl. Sotah fol. 22 b, Jerus. Sotah v. 5, Jerus. Berakhoth ix. 5, (quoted by Buxtorf and Levy, s.v. פֿריש), distinctly prove. In Babl. SotaK l.c., the corresponding expression is פה חובתי ואעשנה 'What is my duty, and I will do it,' and the passage in Jerus. Berakhoth l.c. is to the same effect. These parallels show that the reading טה חובתי ואעשנה must be taken also in Aboth c. 37, so that the passage will be rendered, 'The Pharisee who says, What is my duty, and I will do it.' Thus the Essenes and celibacy disappear together. Lastly; Inasmuch as Dr Ginsburg himself takes a wholly different view of the name Essene, connecting it either with jצn 'an apron,' or with Nיח ' 'pious',' it is difficult to see how he could translate עשת ע 'Essene' (from do') in this passage, except on the supposition that $R$. Nathan was entirely ignorant of the orthography and derivation of the word Essene. Yet, if such ignorance were conceivable in so ancient a writer, his authority on this question would be absolutely worthless. But indeed Dr Ginsburg would appear to have adopted this reference to R. Nathan, with the reading of the passage and the interpretation of the name, from some other writer ${ }^{2}$. At all events it is quite inconsistent with his own opinion as expressed previously.

Are the Essenes alluded to, thoughnot named, in the Talmud?
(5) The chaber or Associate.

But, though we have not succeeded in finding any direct mention of this sect by name in the Talmud, and all the identifications of the word Essene with diverse expressions occurring there have failed us on examination, it might still happen that allusions to them were so frequent as to leave no doubt about the persons meant. Their organisation or their practices or their tenets might be precisely described, though their name was suppressed. Such allusions Frankel finds scattered up and down the Talmud in great profusion.
(1) He sees a reference to the Essenes in the אחרוֹא chăbbūra or 'Society,' which is mentioned several times in talmudical writers ${ }^{3}$. The chäber (חבר) or 'Associate' is, he supposes, a member of this brotherhood. He is obliged to confess that the word cannot always have this sense, but still he considers this to be a common desig-

[^117][^118]nation of the Essenes. The chaber was bound to observe certain rules of ceremonial purity, and a period of probation was imposed upon him before he was admitted. With this fact Frankel connects the passage in Mishna Chagigah ii. 5, 6, where several degrees of ceremonial purity are specified. Having done this, he considers that he has the explanation of the statement in Josephus (B. J. ii. 8. 7, 10), that the Essenes wero divided into four different grades or orders according to the time of their continuance in the ascetic practices demanded by the sect.

But in the first place there is no reference direct or iudirect A passage to the chaber, or indeed to any organisation of any kind, in the ${ }_{\text {gigah con }}^{\text {in Cha- }}$ passage of Chagigah. It simply contemplates different degrees of sidered. purification as qualifying for the performance of certain Levitical rites in an ascending scale. There is no indication that these lustrations are more than temporary and inmediate in their application; and not the faintest hint is given of distinct orders of men, each separated from the other by formal barriers and each demanding a period of probation before admission from the order below, as was the case with the grades of the Essene brotherhood described by Josephus. Moreover the orders in Josephus are four in number ${ }^{1}$,

Abstract

1 As the notices in Josephas (B. J. ii. 8) relating to this point have been frequently misunderstood, it may be well once for all to explain his meaning. The grades of the Essene order are mentioned in two separate notices, spparently, though not really, discordant. (I) In § io he says that they are 'divided into four sections according to the duration of their discipline'  cls $\mu$ oipas $т$ '́бoapas), adding that the older members are considered to be defiled by contact with the younger, i. e. each superior grade by contact with the inferior. So far his meaning is clear. (2) In § 8 he states that one who is anxious to become a member of the sect undergoes a year's probation, submitting to discipline bat 'remaining outside.' Then, 'after he has given evidence of his perseverance ( $\mu \in \tau \dot{d} \tau \dot{\eta} \varphi$  is tested for two years more; and, if found worthy, he is accordingly admitted into the society.' A comparison with the other passage shows that these two years comprise the period spent in the second and third grades, each extending over a jear. After passing through these three stages in three successive years, he enters upon the fourth and highest grade, thus becoming a perfect member.

It is stated by Dr Ginsburg (Essenes p. 12 sq., comp. Kitto's Cyclopaedia s. 7. p. 828) that the Essenes passed through eight stages 'from the beginning of the noviciate to the achievement of the highest spiritual state,' this last stage qualifying them, like Elias, to be forerunners of the Messiah. But it is a pure hypothesis that the Talmudical notices thas combined have anything to do with the Essenes; and, as I shall have occasion to point out afterwards, there is no ground for ascribing to this sect any Messianic expectations whatever.
while the degrees of ceremonial purity in Chagigah are five. Frankel indeed is inclined to maintain that only four degrees are intended in Chagigah, though this interpretation is opposed to the plain sense of the passage. But, even if he should be obliged to grant that the number of degrees is five ${ }^{\text {' }}$, he will not surrender the allusion to the Essenes, but meets the difficulty by supposing (it is a pure hypothesis) that there was a fifth and highest degree of purity among the Essenes, to which very few attained, and which, as I understand him, is not mentioned by Josephus on this account. But enough has already been said to show, that this passage in Chagigah can have no connexion with the Essenes and gives no countenance to Frankel's views.

Difference between the chaber and the Essene.

As this artificial combination has failed, we are compelled to fall back on the notices relating to the chaber, and to ask whether these suggest any connexion with the account of the Essenes in Josephus. Aud the facts oblige us to answer this question in the negative. Not only do they not suggest such a connexion, but they are wholly irreconcilable with the account in the Jewish historian. This association or confraternity (if indeed the term is applicable to an organisation so loose and so comprehensive) was maintained for the sake of securing a more accurate study and a better observance of the ceremonial law. Two grades of purity are mentioned in connexion with it, designated by different names and presenting some difficulties ${ }^{2}$, into which it is not necessary to enter here. A chaber, it would appear, was one who had entered upon the second or higher stage. For this a period of a year's probation was necessary. The chaber enrolled himself in the presence of three others who were already members of the association. This apparently was all the formality necessary : and in the case of a teacher even this was dispensed with, for being presumably acquainted with the law of things clean and unclean he was regarded as ex officio a chaber. The chaber was bound to keep himself from ceremonial defilements, and was thus distinguished from the eqm haarets or common people ${ }^{3}$; but he was under no external surveillance and ${ }^{2}$ Zeitschr. p. 452, note.
${ }_{2}$ The entrance into the Iower grade was described as 'taking בנפים' or 'wings.' The meaning of this expression has been the subject of much ${ }^{\text {discus- }}$ sion; see e.g. Herzfeld in. p. 390 sq., Frankel Monatssehr. p. 33 sq.
${ }^{3}$ The contempt with which a chaber would look down upon the vulgar herd, the cam haarets, finds expression in decided for himself as to his own purity. Moreover he was, or might be a married man: for the doctors disputed whether the wives and children of an associate were not themselves to be regarded as associates ${ }^{1}$. In one passage, Sanhedrin $4 \mathrm{I} a$, it is even assumed, as a matter of course, that a woman may be an associate (חברה). In another (Niddah $33 b)^{2}$ there is mention of a Sadducee and even of a Samaritan as a chaber. An organisation so flexible as this has obviously only the most superficial resemblances with the rigid rules of the Essene order; and in many points it presents a direct contrast to the characteristic tenets of that sect.
(2) Having discussed Frankel's hypothesis respecting the chaber, (2) The I need hardly follow his speculations on the Bĕne-Jakkĕneseth, Bene hak, 'sons of the congregation' (Zabim iii. 2), in which expression probably few would discover the reference, which he finds, to the lowest of the Essene orders ${ }^{3}$.
(3) But mention is also made of a 'holy congregation' or 'as- (3) The sembly' (ערה קדישה, (עה (in Jerusalem'; and, following 'holy con Rapoport, Frankel sees in this expression also an allusion to the at JerusaEssenes ${ }^{4}$. The grounds for this identification are, that in one passage (Berakhoth 9 ) they are mentioned in connexion with prayer at daybreak, and in another (Midrash QoheTeth ix. 9) two persons are stated to belong to this 'holy congregation,' because they divided their day into three parts, devoting one-third to learning, another to prajer, and another to work. The first notice would suit the Essenes very well, though the practice mentioned was not so distinctively Essene as to afford any safe ground for this hypothesis. Of the second it should be observed, that no such division of the day is recorded of the Essenes, and indeed both Josephus (B.J. ii. 8. 5) and Philo (Fragm. p. 633) describe them as working from morning till night with the single interruption of their mid-day meal ${ }^{s}$. But the langnage of the Pharisees, Joh, vii.
 vóroo éráparol eløLv. Again in Acts iv. 13, where the Apostles are described as $l \delta t \omega \tau a l$, the expression is equivalent to cam haarets. See the passages quoted in Buxtorf, Lex. p. 1626.

1 All these particnlars and others may be gathered from Bekhoroth $30 b$, Mishna Demai ii. 2. 3, Jerus. Demai
ii. 3, V. 1, Tosifta Demai 2, Aboth R.

Nathan e. 4 I .
${ }^{2}$ See Herzfeld in. p. $3^{86 .}$
${ }^{3}$ Monatsschr. p. 35.
4 Zeitschr. pp. 458, 461, Monatsschr. pp. 32, 34 .
${ }^{5}$ It is added however in Midrash Qokeleth ix. 9 'Some say that they (the holy congregation) devoted the whole of the winter to studying the Scziptures and the summer to work.'
in fact the identification is beset with other and more serious diffculties. For this 'holy congregation' at Jerusalem is mentioned long not an Essene commanity. after the second destruction of the city under Hadrian ${ }^{2}$, when on Frankel's own showing ${ }^{2}$ the Essene society had in all probability ceased to exist. And again certain members of it, e. g. Jose ben Meshullam (Mishna Belhoroth iii. 3, vi. 1), are represented as uttering precepts respecting animals fit for sacrifice, though we have it on the authority of Josephus and Philo that the Essenes avoided the temple sacrifices altogether. The probability therefore seems to be that this 'holy congregation' was an assemblage of devout Jews who were drawn to the neighbourhood of the sanctuary after the destruction of the nation, and whose practices were regarded with peculiar reverence by the later Jews ${ }^{3}$.
(4) The (4) Neither can we with Frankel ${ }^{4}$ discern any reference to the Vathikin. Essenes in those ותיקיקין Vathikin, 'pious' or 'learned' men (whatever may be the exact sense of the word), who are mentioned in Berakhoth 96 as praying before sunrise; because the word itself seems quite general, and the practice, though enforced among the Essenes, as we know from Josephus ( $B . J$. ii. 8. 5), would be common to all devout and earnest Jews. If we are not justified in saying that these $\boldsymbol{\text { ותיקין were not Essenes, we have no sufficient grounds for }}$ maintaining that they were.
(5) The 'primitive elders.'
(5) Nor again can we find any such reference in the הראושונים or 'primitive elders ".' It may readily be granted that this
 'the primitive chasidim'; but, as we failed to see anything more than a general expression in the one, so we are naturally led to take the other in the same sense. The passages where the expression occurs (e.g. Shabbath $64{ }^{b}$ ) simply refer to the stricter observances of early times, and do not indicate any reference to a particular society or body of men.
(6) The - morning bathers.'
(6) Again Frankel finds another reference to this sect in the טמבלי שחרית Tōble-shachărith, or 'morning-bathers,' mentioned in Tosifta Yadayim c. $2^{6}$. The identity of these with the $\dot{\eta} \mu \in \rho o \beta a$ rroorai of Greek writers seems highly probable. The latter however, though they may have had some affinities with Essene practicea

[^119]and tenets, are nevertheless distinguished from this sect wherever they are mentioned '. But the point to be observed is that, even though we should identify these Toble-shacharith with the Essenes, the passage in Tosifta Yadayim, so far from favouring, is distinctly adverse to Frankel's view which regards the Essenes as only a branch of Pharisees: for the two are here represented as in direct antagonism. The Toble-shacharith say, ' We grieve over you, Pharisees, because you pronounce the (sacred) Name in the morning without having bathed.' The Pharisees retort, 'We grieve over you, Tobleshacharith, because you pronounce the Name from this body in which is impurity.'
(7) In connexion with the Toble-shacharith we may consider another name, Banāim (בנטים), in which also Frankel discovers Banaim. an allusion to the Essenes ${ }^{2}$. In Mishma Mikvaoth ix. 6 the word is opposed to בōr, 'an ignorant or stupid person'; and this points to its proper meaning 'the builders,' i.e. the edifiers or teachers, according to the common metaphor in Biblical language. The word is discussed in Shabbath 114 and explained to mean 'learned.' But, because in Mikvaoth it is mentioned in connexion with ceremonial purity, and because in Josephus the Essenes are stated to have carried an 'axe and shovel' (B. J. ii. 8. 7, 9), and because moreover the Jewish historian in another place (Fit. 2) mentions having spent some time with one Banus a dweller in the wilderness, who lived on vegetables and fruits and bathed often day and night for the sake of purity, and who is generally considered to have been an Essene ; therefore Frankel holds these Banaim to have been Essenes. This is a specimen of the misplaced ingennity which distinguishes Frankel's learned speculations on the Essenes. Josephus does not mention an 'axe and shovel,' but an axe only ( $\$ 7$ d $\xi^{\prime}$ cráptov), Josephus which he afterwards defines more accurately as a spade ( $\S 9 \tau_{\hat{\eta}}^{\hat{\eta}}$ preted.
 aráross) and which, as he distinctly states, was given them for the purpose of burying impurities out of sight (comp. Deut. xxiii. 12-14). Thus it bas no connexion whatever with any 'building' implement. And again, it is true that Banus has frequently been regarded as an Essene, but there is absolutely no ground for this supposition. On the contrary the narrative of Josephus in his Life seems to
$$
1 \text { See below, p. } 406 . \quad \text { Zeitschr. p. } 455 .
$$

Another derivation of Banaim.

Results of this inves tigation.

Philo and Josephus our main authorities.

Frankel's depreciation of them is unreasonable, and explains mothing.
exclude it, as I shall have occasion to show hereafter ${ }^{1}$. I should add that Sachs interprets Banaim 'the bathers,' regarding the explanation in Shabbath l. c. as a 'later accommodation ${ }^{2}$.' This seems to me very improbable; but, if it were conceded, the Banaim would then apparently be connected not with the Essenes, but with the Hemerobaptists.

From the preceding investigation it will have appeared how little Frankel has succeeded in establishing his thesis that 'the 'talmudical sources are acquainted with the Essenes and make mention of them constantly ${ }^{3}$.' We have seen not only that no instance of the name Essene has been produced, but that all those passages which are supposed to refer to them under other designations, or to describe their practices or tenets, fail us on closer examination. In no case can we feel sure that there is any direct reference to this sect, while in most cases such reference seems to be excluded by the language or the attendant circumstances ${ }^{4}$. Thus we are obliged to fall back upon the representations of Philo and Josephus. Their accounts are penned by eye-witnesses. They are direct and explicit, if not so precise or so full as we could have wished. The writers obviously consider that they are describing a distinct and exceptional phenomenon. And it would be a reversal of all established rules of historical criticism to desert the solid standingground of contemporary history for the artificial combinations and shadowy hypotheses which Frankel would substitute in its place.

But here we are confronted with Frankel's depreciation of these ancient writers, which has been echoed by several later critics. They were interested, it is argued, in making their accounts attractive to their heathen contemporaries, and they coloured them highly for this purpose ${ }^{5}$. We may readily allow that they would not be uninfluenced by such a motive, but the concession does not touch the main points at issue. This aim might lave led Josephus, for example, to throw into bold relief the coincidences between the Essenes and Pythagoreans; it might even have induced him to give a semi-pagan [^120]tinge to the Essene doctrine of the future state of the blessed (B. J. iii 8. ir). But it entirely fails to explain those peculiarities of the sect which marked them off by a sharp line from orthodox Judaism, and which fully justify the term 'separatists' as applied to them by a recent writer. In three main features especially the portrait of the Essenes retains its distinctive character unaffected by this consideration.

(i) How, for instance, could this principle of accommodation have led both Philo and Josephus to lay so much stress on their divergence from Judaic orthodoxy in the matter of sacrifices? Yet this is san perhaps the most crucial note of heresy which is recorded of the for Essenes. What was the law to the orthodox Pharisee without the sacrifices, the temple-worship, the hierarchy? Yet the Essene declined to take any part in the sacritices; he had priests of his own independently of the Levitical priesthood. On Frankel's hypothesis that Essenism is merely an exagyeration of pure Pharisaism, no explanation of this abnormal phenomenon can be given. Frankel does indeed attempt to meet the case by some speculations respecting the red beifer ${ }^{1}$, which are so obviously inadequate that they have not been repeated by later writers and may safely be passed over in silence here. On this point indeed the language of Josephus is not The noquite explicit, He says (Ant. xviii. 1. 5) that, though they send $\begin{aligned} & \text { Josephus } \\ & \text { tices of }\end{aligned}$ offerings (ajva日ウ̈uara) to the temple, they perform no sacrifices, and and Pbilo he assigns as the reason their greater strictness as regards ceremonial con.
 reason being exeluded from the common sanctuary ( $\tau \in \mu \in v^{\prime} \sigma \mu a r o s$ ) they perform their sacrifices by themselves ('̇ $\phi^{\prime}$ avituv tàs $\theta v \sigma i a s$ $\dot{\epsilon} \pi เ \tau \epsilon \lambda o z a r t)$.' Frankel therefore supposes that their only reason for abstaining from the temple sacrifices was that according to their severe notions the temple itself was profaned and therefore unfit for sacrificial worship. But if so, why should it not vitiate the offerings, as well as the sacrifices, and make them also unlawful? And indeed, where Josephus is vague, Philo is explicit. Philo (ir. p. 457) distinctly states that the Essenes being more scrupulous than any in the mals (ov̉ ̧̂̂a кaтaӨ́ovтєs), but hold it right to dedicate theirown hearts consists in the abstention from shedding blood, as a pollution in itself. And, when he speaks of their substitutiag private sacrifices, his own qualifications show that he does not mean the word to be taken literally. Their simple meals are their sacrifices; their refectory is their sanctuary; their president is their priest ${ }^{1}$. It should be added also that, though we once hear of an Essene apparently within the temple precincts (B.J.i.3.5, Ant. xiii. 1I. 2) ${ }^{s}$, no mention is ever made of one offering sacrifices. Thus it is clear that with the

Their statements confirmed by the doc. trine of Ghristian Essenes.

The Cle. mentine Homilies justify this doctrine by Essene it was the sacrifices which poluted the temple, and not the temple which polluted the sacrifices. And this view is further recommended by the fact that it alone will explain the position of their descendants, the Christianized Essenes, who condemned the slaughter of victims on grounds very different from those alleged in the Epistle to the Hebrews, not because they have been suparseded by the Atonement, but because they are in their very nature repulsive to God; not because they have ceased to be right, but because they never were right from the beginning.

It may be said indeed, that such a view could not be maintained without impugning the authority, or at least disputing the integrity, of the Old Testament writings. The sacrificial system is so bound up with the Mosaic law, that it can only be rejected by the most arbitrary excision. This violent process however, uncritical as it is, was very likely to have been adopted by the Esseness. As a matter of fact, it did recommend itself to those Judaizing Christians who reproduced many of the Essene tenets, and who both theologically and historically may be regarded as the lineal descendants of this Judaic sect ${ }^{4}$. Thus in the Clementine Homilies, an Ebionite work which exhibits many Essene features, the chief spokesman St Peter is represented as laying great stress on the duty of distinguishing the true and the false elements in the current [^121][^122]Scriptures (ii. 38,5 r, iii. $4,5,10,42,47,49,50$, comp. xviii. 19). The arbitrary saying traditionally ascribed to our Lord, 'Show yourselves approved of the by the Apostle as enforcing this duty (ii. 5 I , iii. 50 , xviii. 20 ). Among these false elements he places all those passages which represent God as enjoining sacrifices (iii. 45, xviii. 19). It is plain, so he argues, that God did not desire sacrifices, for did He not kill those who lusted after the taste of flesh in the wilderness? and, if the slaughter of animals was thus displeasing to Him, how could He possibly have commanded victims to be offered to Himself (iii. 45) ? It is equally clear from other considerations that this was no part of God's genuine law. For instance, Christ declared that He came to fulfil every tittle of the Law; yet Christ abolished sacrifices (iii. 51). And again, the saying 'I will have mercy and not sacrifice' is a condemnation of this practice (iii. 56). The true prophet 'hates sacrifices, bloodshed, libations'; he 'extinguishes the fire of altars' (iii. 26). The frenzy of the lying soothsayer is a mere intoxication produced by the reeking fumes of sacrifice (iii. 13). When in the immediate context of these denunciations we find it reckoned among the highest achievements of man 'to know the nomes of angels, to drive away demons, to endeavour to heal diseases by charms ($ap-pents (iii. 36 )'; when again St Peter is made to condemn as false Essene those scriptures which speak of God swearing, and to set against them features in Christ's command 'Let your yea be yea' (iii. 55) ; we feel how thoroughly this strange production of Ebionite Christianity is saturated with Essene ideas ${ }^{1}$.

[^123]^124 The tssene worship of the Sun can. not be ex plained away.
(ii) Nor again is Frankel successful in explaining the Essene prayers to the sun by rabbinical practices ${ }^{1}$. Following Rapoport, he supposes that Josephus and Philo refer to the beautiful hymn of praise for the creation of light and the return of day, which forms part of the morning-prayer of the Jews to the present time ${ }^{2}$, and which seems to be enjoined in the Mishna itself ${ }^{3}$; and this view has been adopted by many subsequent writers. But the łanguage of Josephus is not satisfied by this explanation. For he says plainly (B. J. ii. 8. 5) that they addressed prayers to the sun ${ }^{4}$, and it is difficult to suppose that he has wantonly introduced a dash of paganism into his picture; nor indeed was there any adequate motive for his doing so. Similarly Philo relates of the Therapentes (Vit. Cont. II, II. p. 485), that they 'stand with their faces and their whole body towards the East, and when they see that the sun is risen, holding out their hands to heaven they pray for a happy day (evjpépiav) and for truth and for keen vision of reason the confirmation which these accounts receive from the history of cortain Christian heretics deriving their descent from this Judaic sect.
The Samp- Epiphanius (Hcer. xix. 2, xx. 3, pp. 40 sq., 47) speaks of a sect swans are an Essene sect, called the Sampszans or 'Sun-worshippers'; as existing in his own time in Perea on the borders of Moab and on the shores of the Dead Sea. He describes them as a remnant of the Ossenes (i.e. Essenes), who have accepted a spurious form of Christianity and are neither Jews nor Christians. This debased Christianity which they adopted is embodied, he tells us, in the pretended revelation of the Book of Elchasai, and dates from the time of Trajan ${ }^{6}$. Elsewhere (xxx. 3, p. 127) he seems to use the terms Sampsean, Ossene, and Elchasaite as synonymous ( $\pi$ apà roîs इa $\mu \psi \eta$ - know something of this book of Elchasai, not only from Epiphanius himself (xix. I sq., p. 40 sq., xxx. 17, p. 14I), but also from Hippoas appears lytus (Hcer. ix. i3 sq.) who describes it at considerable length. From from their sacred book of Elchasai. these accounts it appears that the principal feature in the book was the injunction of frequent bathings for the remission of sins

[^125](Hipp. Hor: ix. $\mathbf{1 3}_{3}, \mathrm{I}_{5} \mathrm{sq}$.). We are likewise told that it 'anathematizes immolations and sacrifices ( $\theta v o i a s$ кaì iepovpyías) as being alien to God and certainly not offered to God by tradition from (ek) the fathers and the law,' while at the same time it 'says that men ought to pray there at Jerusalem, where the altar was and the sacrifices (were offered), prohibiting the eating of flesh which exists among the Jews, and the rest (of their customs), and the altar and the fire, as being alien to God' (Epiph. Hcer. xix. 3, p. 42). Notwithstanding; we are informed that the sect retained the rite of circumcision, the Its Essene observance of the sabbath, and other practices of the Mosaic law pecaliari(Hipp. Hoer. ix 14 ; Epiph. Her, xix. 5, p. 43, comp. xxx. 17 , p. 141). This inconsistency is explained by a further notice in Epiphanius (l. c.) that they treated the Scriptures in the same way as the Nasaræans' ; that is, they submitted them to a process of arbitrary excision, as recommended in the Clementine Homilies, and thus rejected as falsifications all statements which did not square with their own theory. Hippolytus also speaks of the Elchasaites as studying astrology and magic, and as practising charms and incantations on the sick and the demoniacs (\$ 14). Moreover in two formularies, one of expiation, another of purification, which this father has extracted from the book, invocation is made to 'the holy spirits and the angels of prayer' (\$ 15, comp. Epiph. Herr. xix. r). It should be added that the word Elchasai probably signifies the 'hidden power'?; while the book itself directed that its mysteries should be guarded as precious pearls, and should not be communicated to the worid at large, but only to the faithful few (Hipp. Horr. ix. I5, 17). It $^{\text {7 }}$ is hardly necessary to call attention to the number of Essene features which are here combined ${ }^{3}$. I would only remark that the value of the notice is not at all diminished, but rather enhanced, by the uncritical character of Epiphanius' work; for this very fact prevents us from ascribing the coincidences, which here reveal themselves, to this father's own invention.

[^126]In this respect they departed from tho original principles of Essenism, alleging, as it would appear, a special revelation ( $\omega s \delta \bar{\eta} \theta \in \nu \dot{\alpha} \pi$ ока $\lambda u \cup \psi \epsilon \omega s$ ) in justification. In like manner marriage is commended in the Clementine Homilies.

In this heresy we have plainly the dregs of Essenism, which has only been corrupted from its earlier and nobler type by the admixture of a spurious Christianity. But how came the Essenes

Doubtfal bearing of this Sunworship.

The practice repugnant to Jewish orthodoxy. to be called Sampsæans? What was the original meaning of this outward reverence which they paid to the sun? Did they regard it merely as the symbol of Divine illumination, just as Philo frequently treats it as a type of God, the centre of all light (e.g. de Somn. i. r3 sq., r. p. 63 r sq.), and even calls the heavenly bodies 'visible and sensible gods' (de Mund. Op. 7, r. p. 6) ${ }^{1}$ ? Or did they honour the light, as the pure ethereal element in contrast to gross terrestrial matter, according to a suggestion of a recent writer ${ }^{2}$ ? Whatever may have been the motive of this reverence, it is strangely repugnant to the spirit of orthodox Judaism. In Ezek. viii. I6 it is denounced as an abomination, that men shall turn towards the east and worship the sun; and accordingly in Berakhoth 7 a a saying of R. Meir is reported to the effect that God is angry when the sun appears and the kings of the East and the West prostrate themselves before this luminary ${ }^{\text {a }}$. We cannot fail therefore to recognise the action of some foreign influence in this Essene practice-whether Greek or Syrian or Persian, it will be time to consider hereafter.
(iii) The depreciation of marriage not accounted for.
(iii) On the subject of marriage again, talmudical and rabbinical notices contribute nothing towards elucidating the practices of this sect. Least of all do they point to any affinity between the Essenes and the Pharisees. The nearest resemblance, which Frankel can produce, to any approximation in this respect is an injunction in Mishna Kethuboth v. 8 respecting the duties of the husband in providing for the wife in case of his separating from her, and this he ascribes to Essene influences ${ }^{4}$; but this mishna does not express any approval of such a separation. The direction seems to be framed entirely in the interests of the wife: nor can I see that it is at all inconsistent, as Frankel urges, with Mishna Kethuboth vii. r which allows her to claim a divorce under such circumstances. But however this may be, Essene and Pharisaic opinion stand generally in the sharpest contrast to each other with respect to marriage. The talmudic

[^127]writings teem with passages implying not only the superior sanctity, but even the imperative duty, of marriage. The words ' Be fruitful and multiply' (Gea. i. 28) were regarded not merely as a promise, but as a command which was binding on all. It is a maxim of the Talmud that 'Any Jew who has not a wife is no man' (אינו ארם), Yebamoth $63 a$. The fact indeed is so patent, that any accumulation of examples would be superfluous, and I shall content myself with referring to Pesachim $113 a, b$, as fairly illustrating the doctrine of orthodox Judaism on this point ${ }^{1}$. As this question affects the whole framework not only of religious, but also of social life, the antagonism between the Essene and the Pharisee in a matter so vital could not be overlooked.
(iv) Nor again is it probable that the magical rites and incan- (iv) The tations which are so prominent in the practice of the Essenes would, as a rule, have been received with any favour by the Pharisaic Jew. Essene practice of magio In Mishna Pesachim iv. 9 (comp. Berakhoth io b) it is mentioned ditiliculty. with approval that Hezekiah put away a 'book of healings'; where doubtless the author of the tradition had in view some volume of charms ascribed to Solomon, like those which apparently formed part of the esoteric literature of the Essenes ${ }^{2}$. In the same spirit in Mishna Sanhedrin xi. I R. Akiba shuts out from the hope of eternal life any 'who read profane or foreign (i.e. perhaps, apocryphal) books, and who mutter over a wound' the words of Exod. xv. 26. On this point of difference however no great stress can be laid. Though the nobler teachers among the orthodox Jews set themselves steadfastly against the introduction of magic, they were unable to resist the inpouring tide of superstition. In the middle of the second century Justin Martyr alludes to exorcists and magicians among the Jews, as though they were neither few nor obscure ${ }^{3}$. Whether these were a remnant of Essene Judaism, or whether such practices

[^128][^129]had by this time spread throughout the whols body, it is impossible to say; but the fact of their existence prevents us from founding an argument on the use of magio, as an absolutely distinctive feature of Essenism.

Other divergences elso have been enumerated '; but, as these do not for the most part involve any great principles, and refer only to practical details in which much fuctuation was possible, they cannot under any circumstances be taken as crucial tests, and I have not thought it worth while to discuss them. But the antagonisms on which I have dwelt will tell their own tale. In three respects more especially, in the avoidance of marriage, in the abstention from the temple sacrifices, and (if the view which I have adopted be correct) in the outward reverence paid to the sun, we have seen that there is an impassable gulf between the Essenes and the Pharisees. No known influences within the sphere of Judaism proper will serve to account for the position of the Essenes in these respects; and we are obliged to look elsewhere for an explanation.

It was shown above that the investigations of Frankel and others failed to discover in the talmudical writings a single reference to the Essenes, which is at once direct and indisputable. It has now appeared that they have also failed (and this is the really important point) in showing that the ideas and practices generally considered characteristic of the Essenes are recognised and incorporated in these representative books of Jewish orthodoxy; and thus the hypothesis that Essenism was merely a type, though an exaggerated type, of pure Judaism falls to the ground.

Affnities between Essenes and Phar sees confined to the Judaic side.

Some affinities indeed have been made out by Frankel and by those who have anticipated or followed him. But these are exactly such as we might have expected. Two distinct features combine to make up the portrait of the Essene. The Judaic element is quite as prominent in this sect as the non-Judaic. It could not be more strongly emphasized than in the description given by Josephus himself. In everything therefore which relates to the strictly Judaic side of their tenets and practices, we should expect to discover not only affinities, but even close affinities, in talmudie and rabbinic authorities. And this is exactly what, as a matter of fact, we do [^130]find. The Essene rules respecting the observance of the sabbath, the rites of lustration, and the like, have often very exact parallels in the writings of more orthodox Judaism. But I have not thought it necessary to dwell on these coincidences, because they may well be taken for granted, and my immediate purpose did not require me to emphasize them.

And again; it must be remembered that the separation between Pharisee and Essene cannot always have been so great as it appears in the Apostolic age. Both sects apparently arose out of one great movement, of which the motive was the avoidance of pollution ${ }^{1}$. The fharisees divergence therefore must have been gradual. At the same time, it gradual. does not seem a very profitable task to write a hypothetical history of the growth of Essenism, where the data are wanting; and I shall therefore abstain from the attempt. Frankel indeed has not been deterred by this difficulty; but he has been obliged to assume his data by postulating that such and such a person, of whom notices are preserved, was an Essene, and thence inferring the character of Essenism at the period in question from his recorded sayings or doings. But without attempting any such reconstruction of history, we may fairly allow that there must have been a gradual development ; and consequently in the earlier stages of its growth we should not expect to fiud that sharp antagonism between the two sects, which the principles of the Essenes when fully matured would involve. If therefore it should be shown that the talmudical and rabbinical Hence the writings here and there preserve with approval the sayings of certain Essenes, this fact would present no difficulty. At present however no decisive example has been produced; and the discoveries of Jellinek for instance ${ }^{2}$, who traces the influence of this sect in almost every orthodor $\begin{aligned} & \text { Judaism. }\end{aligned}$ page of Pirke Aboth, can only be regarded as another illustration of the extravagance with which the whole subject has been treated by a large section of modern Jewish writers. More to the point is a notice of an earlier Essene preserved in Josephus himself. We learn from this historian that one Judas, a member of the sect, who had prophesied the death of Antigonus, saw this prince ' passing by through the temple ${ }^{3}$, when his prophecy was on the point of fulfilment [^131](about b.C. IIo). At this moment Judas is represented as sitting in the midst of his disciples, instructing them in the science of prediction. The expression quoted would seem to imply that he was actually teaching within the temple area. Thus he would appear not only as mixing in the ordinary life of the Jews, but also as frequenting the national sanctuary. But even supposing this to be the right explanation of the passage, it will not present any serious difficulty. Even at a later date, when (as we may suppose) the principles of the sect had stiffened, the scruples of the Essene were directed, if I have rightly interpreted the account of Josephus, rather against the sacrifices than against the locality ${ }^{1}$. The temple itself, iudependently of its accompaniments, would not suggest any offence to his conscience.

The appro- Nor again, is it any obstacle to the view which is here maintained, bation of Philo and Josephus is no evidence of orthodoxy. that the Essenes are regarded with so much sympathy by Philo and Josephus themselves. Even though the purity of Judaism might have been somewhat sullied in this sect by the admixture of foreign elements, this fact would attract rather than repel an eclectic like Philo, and a latitudinarian like Josephus. The former, as an Alexandrian, absorbed into his system many and diverse elements of heathen philosophy, Platonic, Stoic, and Pythagorean. The latter, though professedly a Pharisee, lost no opportunity of ingratiating himself with his heathen conquerors, and would not be unwilling to gratify their curiosity respecting a society with whose fame, as we infer from the notice of Pliny, they were already acquainted.

What was But if Essenism owed the features which distinguished it from the foreign Pharisaic Judaism to an alien admixture, whence were these foreign &ssenism? influences derived? From the philosophers of Greece or from the religious mystics of the East? On this point recent writers are divided.

Theory of Neopythagorean influence.

Those who trace the distinctive characteristics of the sect to Greece, regard it is an offshoot of the Neopythagorean School grafted on the stem of Judaism. This solution is suggested by the statement of Josephus, that 'they practise the mode of life which among but the less precise notice must be interpreted by the more precise. Even then however it is nof directly stated

[^132]the Greeks was introduced ( $\kappa a \pi a \delta \delta \delta \epsilon \epsilon \gamma \mu \epsilon^{\prime} \eta$ ) by Pythagoras ${ }^{1}$.' It is thought to be confirmed by the strong resemblances which as a matter of fact are found to exist between the institutions and practices of the two.

This theory, which is maintained also by other writers, as for Statement instance by Baur and Herzfeld, has found its ablest and most per- of theory by sistent advocate in Zeller, who draws out the parallels with great Zeiler. force and precision. 'The Essenes,' he writes, 'like the Pythagoreans, desire to attain a higher sanctity by an ascetic life; and the abstentions, which they impose on themselves for this end, are the same with both. They reject animal food and bloody sacrifices; they avoid wine, warm baths, and oil for anointing; they set a high value on celibate life: or, so far as they allow marriage, they require that it be restricted to the one object of procreating children. Both wear only white garments and consider linen purer than wool. Washings and purifications are prescribed by both, though for the Essenes they have a yet higher significance as religious acts. Both prohibit oaths and (what is more) on the same grounds. Both find their social ideal in those institutions, which indeed the Essenes alone set themselves to realise-in a corporate life with entire community of goods, in sharply defined orders of rank, in the unconditional submission of all the members to their superiors, in a society carefully barred from without, into which new members are received only after a severe probation of several years, and from which the unworthy are inexorably excluded. Both require a strict initiation, both desire to maintain a traditional doctrine inviolable; both pay the highest respect to the men from whom it was derived, as instruments of the deity : yet both also love figurative clothing for their doctrines, and treat the old traditions as symbols of deeper truths, which they must extract from them by means of allegorical explanation. In order to prove the later form of teaching original, newly-composed writings were unhesitatingly forged by the one as by the other, and fathered upon illustrious names of the past. Both parties pay honour to divine powers in the elements, both invoke the rising sun, both seek to withdraw everything unclean from his sight, and with this view give special directions, in which they agree as well with each other as with older Greek superstition, in a remarizable

[^133]way. For both the belief in intermediate beings between God and the world has an importance which is higher in proportion as their own conception of God is purer ; both appear not to have disdained magic; yet both regard the gift of prophecy as the highest fruit of wisdom and piety, which they pique themselves on possessing in their most distinguished members. Finally, both agree (along with the dualistic character of their whole conception of the world...) in their tenets respecting the origin of the soul, its relation to the body, and the life after death ${ }^{1}$...'

Absence of distinctive Pythagorean featuresin the Essenes. marshalled might appear at first sight invincible. But a closer examination detracts from its value. In the first place the two distinctive characteristics of the Pythagorean philosophy are wanting to the Essenes. The Jewish sect did not believe in the transmigration of souls; and the doctrine of numbers, at least so far as our information goes, had no place in their system. Yet these constitute the very essence of the Pythagorean teaching. In the next place several of the coincidences are more apparent than real. Thus for instance the demons who in the Pythagorean system held an intermediate place between the Supreme God and man, and were the result of a compromise between polytheism and philosophy, have no near relation to the angelology of the Essenes, which arose out of a wholly different motive. Nor again can we find distinct traces among the Pythagoreans of any such reverence for the sun as is ascribed to the Essenes, the only notice which is adduced having no prominence whatever in its own context, and referring to a rule which would be dictated by natural decency and certainly was not peculiar to the Pythagoreans ${ }^{2}$. When these imperfect and (for the purpose) valueless resemblances have been subtracted, the only basis on which the theory of a direct affliation can rest is withdrawn. All the remaining coincidences are unimportant. Thus the respect paid to founders is not confined to any one sect or any one age. The reverence of the Essenes for Moses, and the reverence of the ${ }^{1}$ Zeller Philosophis der Griechen Th. Mir. Abth. 2, p. 28 r .
${ }^{2}$ Diog. Laert. viii. $\mathrm{I}_{7}$; see Zeller 1. c. p. 282, note 5. The precept in question occurs among a number of insignificant details, and has no special prominence given to it. In the Life of Apollonius by Philostratus (e.g. vi. io) considerable stress is laid on the worship of the sun (Zeller 1. c. p. r37, note 6); but the syncretism of this late work detracts from its value as representing Pythagorean doctrine.

Pytiagoreans for Pythagoras, are indications of a common humanity, but not of a common philosophy. And again the forgery of supposititious documents is unhappily not the badge of any one school. The Solomonian books of the Essenes, so far as we can judge from the extant notices, were about as unlike the tracts ascribed to Pythagoras and his disciples by the Neopythagoreans as two such forgeries could well be. All or nearly all that remains in common to the Greek school and the Jewish sect after these deductions is a certain similarity in the type of life. But granted that two bodies and in of men each held an esoteric teaching of their own, they would $\begin{gathered}\text { otherss } \\ \text { notrggest }\end{gathered}$ secure it independently in a similar way, by a recognised process of any hissinitiation, by a solemn form of oath, by a rigid distinction of orders. connexion. Granted also, that they both maintained the excellence of an ascetic life, their asceticism would naturally take the same form; they would avoid wine and flesh; they would abstain from anointing themselves with oil; they would depreciate, and perhaps altogether prohibit, marriage. Unless therefore the historical conditions are themselves favourable to a direct and immediate connexion between the Pythagoreans and the Essenes, this theory of affiliation has little to recommend it.

And a closer examination must pronounce them to be most Twofold unfayourable. Chronology and geography alike present serious objection obstacles to any solution which derives the peculiarities of the theory. Essenes from the Pythagoreans.
(i) The priority of time, if it can be pleaded on either side, must (i) Chrobe urged in favour of the Essenes. The Pythagoreans as a philo- nological sophical school entirely disappear from history before the middle of adverse. the fourth century before Christ. The last Pythagoreans were scholars of Philolaus and Eurytus, the contemporaries of Socrates and Plato. For nearly two centuries after their extinction we hear nothing of them. Here and there persons like Diodorus of Aspendus Disappearare satirised by the Attic poets of the middle comedy as 'pytha- ance of the Pythagorizers,' in other words, as total abstainers and vegetarians ${ }^{\text {; }}$; but goreans.
${ }^{1}$ Zeller l. c. p. 68 (comp. 1. p. 242). While disputing Zeller's position, I have freely made use of his references. It is impossible not to admire the mastery of detail and clearness of exposition in this work, even when the conclusions seem questionable.
${ }^{2}$ Athen. iv. p. 161, Diog. Laert. viii. 37. See the index to Meineke Fragm. Com. s. vr. $\pi$ veayopcoós, etc. The words commonly used by these satirists are $\pi v$ Өa yooļev, $\pi$, $\pi v o a \gamma o p \iota \sigma \mu \sigma^{\prime} s$. The persons so satirised were probahly in many cases not mone the philosophy had wholly died or was fast dying out. This is the universal testimony of ancient writers. It is not till the first century before Christ, that we meet with any distinct traces of a revival. In Alexander Polyhistor', a younger contemporary of Sulla, for the first time we find references to certain writings, which wonld seem to have emanated from this incipient Neopythagoreanism, rather than from the elder school of Pythagoreans. And a little later Cicero commends his friend Nigidius Figulus as one specially raised up to revive the extinct philosophy ${ }^{2}$. But so slow or so chequered was its progress, that a whole century after Seneca can still speak of the Priority of school as practically defunct ${ }^{3}$. Yet long before this the Essenes to Neopy-thagoreanism.

The Essene tenets developed more than the Neopythagorean. formed a compact, well-organized, numerous society with a peculiar system of doctrine and a definite rule of life. We have seen that Pliny the elder speaks of this celibate society as having existed 'through thousands of ages'.' This is a gross exaggeration, but it must at least be taken to imply that in Pliny's time the origin of the Essenes was lost in the obscurity of the past, or at least seemed so to those who had not access to special sources of information. If, as I have given reasons for supposing ${ }^{6}$, Pliny's authority in this passage is the same Alexander Polyhistor to whom I have just referred, and if this particular statement, however exaggerated in expression, is derived from him, the fact becomes still more significant. But on any showing the priority in time is distinctly in favour of the Essenes as against the Neopythagoreans.

And accordingly we find that what is only a tendency in the Neopythagoreans is with the Essenes an avowed principle and a definite rule of life. Such for instance is the case with celibacy, of which Pliny says that it has existed as an institution among the Essenes per sceculorum millia, and which is a chief corner-stone of Pythagoreans than modern teetotallers are Rechabites.

${ }^{1}$ Diog. Laert. viii. 24 sq.; see Zeller 1. e. p. 74-88.
${ }^{2}$ Cis. Tim. I 'sic judico, post illos nobiles Pythagoreos quorum discipline extincta est quodammodo, cum adiquot mecula in Italia Siciliaque viguisset, hunc exstitisse qui illam renovaret.'
${ }^{3}$ Sen. N. Q. vii. $3^{2}$ 'Pythagorica illa invidiosa turbes schola proceptorem non invenit.'
${ }^{4}$ N.H. v. 15. The passage is quoted abovep. 85 , note 3. The point of time, at which Josephus thinks it necessary to insert an account of the Essenes as already flourishing (Ant. xiii. 5.9), is prior to the revival of the Neopythagorean school. How much earlier the Jewish sect arose, we are without data for determining.
${ }^{5}$ See p. 83, note I .
their practical system. The Pythagorean notices (whether truly or not, it is unimportant for my purpose to enquire) speak of Pythagoras as having a wife and a daughter ${ }^{1}$. Only at a late date do we find the attempt to represent their founder in another light ; and if virginity is ascribed to Apollonius of Tyana, the great Pythagorean of the first Christian century, in the fictitious biography of Philostratus ${ }^{8}$, this representation is plainly due to the general plan of the novelist, whose hero is perhaps intended to rival the Founder of Christianity, and whose work is saturated with Christian ideas. In fact virginity can never be said to have been a Pythagorean principle, though it may have been an exalted ideal of some not very early adherents of the school. And the same remark applies to other resemblances between the Essene and Neopythagorean teaching. The clearness of conception and the definiteness of practice are in almost every instance on the side of the Essenes; so that, looking at the comparative chironology of the two, it will appear almost inconceivable that they can have derived their principles from the Neopythagoreans.
(ii) But the geographical dififulty also, which this theory of (ii) Geoaffiliation involves, must be added to the chronological. The home graphical of the Essene sect is allowed on all hands to have been on the eastern borders of Palestine, the shores of the Dead Sea, a region least of all exposed to the influences of Greek philosophy. It is true that we find near Alexandria a closely allied school of Jewish recluses, the Therapeutes; and, as Alexandria may have been the home of Neopythagoreanism, a possible link of connexion is here disclosed. But, as Zeller himself has pointed out, it is not among the Therapeutes, but among the Essenes, that the principles in question appear fully developed and consistently carried out ${ }^{3}$; and therefore, if there be a relation of paternity between Essene and Therapeute, the latter must be derived from the former and not conversely. How then can we suppose this influence of Neopythagoreanism brought to bear on a Jewish community in the southeastern border of Palestine? Zeller's answer is as follows ${ }^{4}$. Judæa was for more than a hundred and fifty years before the Maccabean period under the sovereignty first of the Egyptian and then of the

[^134] COL.
had been differently represented by others.
${ }^{3}$ 1. c. p. 288 sq.
${ }^{4}$ l. c. p. 290 sq.

Syrian Greeks. We know that at this time Hellenizing influences did infuse themselves largely into Judaism : and what more natural than that among these the Pythagorean philosophy and discipline should have recommended itself to a section of the Jewish people? It may be said in reply, that at all events the special locality of the Essenes is the least favourable to such a solution: but, without pressing this fact, Zeller's hypothesis is open to two serions objections which combined seem fatal to it, unsupported as it is by any historical notice. First, this influence of Pythagoreanism is assumed to have taken place at the very time when the Pythagorean school was practically extinct: and secondly, it is supposed to have acted upon that very section of the Jewish community, which was the most vigorous advocate of national exclnsiveness and the most averse to Hellenixing influences.

The foreign element of Essenism to be sought in the East, to which also $\mathrm{P}_{5-}$ thagoreanism may have been indebted.

It is not therefore to Greek but to Oriental influences that considerations of time and place, as well as of internal character, lead us to look for an explanation of the alien elements in Essene Judaism. And have we not here also the account of any real coincidences which may exist between Essenism and Neopythagoreanism? We should perhaps be hardly more justified in tracing Neopythagoreanism directly to Essenism than conversely (though, if we had no other alternative, this would appear to be the more probable solution of the two) : but were not both alike due to substantially the same influences acting in different degrees? I think it will hardly be denied that the characteristic features of Pythagoreanism, and especially of Neopythagoreanism, which distinguish it from other schools of Greek philosophy, are much more Oriental in type, than Hellenic. The asceticism, the magic, the mysticism, of the sect all point in the same direction. And history moreover contains indications that such was the case. There seems to be sufficient ground for the statement that Pythagoras himself was indebted to intercourse with the Egyptians, if not with more strictly Oriental nations, for some leading ideas of his system. But, however this may be, the fact that in the Iegendary accounts, which the Neopythagoreans invented to do honour to the founder of the school, he is represented as taking lessons from the Chaldeans, Persians, Brahmins, and others, may be taken as an evidence that their own philosophy at all events was partially derived from eastern sources ${ }^{1}$.

[^135]But, if the alien elements of Essenism were borrowed not so much from Greek philosophy as from Oriental mysticism, to what nation or what religion was it chiefly indebted? To this question it is difficult, with our very imperfect knowledge of the East at the Christian era, to reply with any confidence. Yet there is one system Resemto which we naturally look, as furnishing the most probable answer. $\begin{aligned} & \text { bances to } \\ & \text { Parsism. }\end{aligned}$ The Medo-Persian religion supplies just those elements which distinguish the tenets and practices of the Essenes from the normal type of Judaism, (I) First; we have here a very definite form of (i) Dualdualism, which exercised the greatest influence on subsequent Gnostic sects, and of which Manicheism, the most matured development of dualistic doctrine in connexion with Christianity, was the ultimate fruit. For though dualism may not represent the oldest theology of the Zend-Avesta in its unadulterated form, yet long before the era of which we are speaking it had become the fundamental principle of the Persian religion. (2) Again; the Zoroastrian symbolism (ii) Sunof light, and consequent worship of the sun as the fountain of light, worship. will explain those anomalous notices of the Essenes in which they are represented as paying reverence to this luminary ${ }^{2}$. (3) Moreover; (iii) Angelthe 'worship of angels' in the Essene system has a striking parallel olatry. in the invocations of spirits, which form a very prominent feature in the ritual of the Zend-Avesta. And altogether their angelology is illustrated, and not improbably was suggested, by the doctrine of intermediate beings concerned in the government of nature and of man, such as the Amshaspands, which is an integral part of the Zoroastrian system ${ }^{2}$. (4) And once more; the magic, which was so (iv) Magic. attractive to the Essene, may have received its impulse from the priestly caste of Persia, to whose world-wide fame this form of superstition is indebted for its name. (5) If to these parallels I venture also to add the intense striving after purity, which is the noblest ing pafter feature in the Persian religion, I do so, not because the Essenes

[^136]
 к.т. $\boldsymbol{\lambda}$.
${ }^{2}$ See e.g. Fendidad Farg. xix; and the liturgical portions of the book are largely taken up with invocations of these intermediate beings. Some extracts are given in Davies' Colossians p. 146 sq .
might not have derived this impulse from a higher source, but because this feature was very likely to recommend the Zoroastrian system to their favourable notice, and because also the particular form which the zeal for purity took among them was at all events congenial to the teaching of the Zend-Avesta, and may not have been altogether free from its influences.

Other coincidences accidental.

The destruction of the Persian empire not adverse

I have preferred dwelling on these broader resemblances, because they are much more significant than any mere coincidence of details, which may or may not have been accidental. Thus for instance the magi, like the Essenes, wore white garments, and eschewed gold and ornaments; they practised frequent lustrations; they avoided flesh, living on bread and cheese or on herbs and fruits; they had different orders in their society; and the like'. All these, as I have already remarked, may be the independent out-growth of the same temper and direction of conduct, and need not imply any direct historical connexion. Nor is there any temptation to press such resemblances; for even without their aid the general connexion seems to be sufficiently established ${ }^{\text {. }}$.

But it is said, that the history of Persia does not favour the hypothesis of such an influence as is here assumed. The destruction of the Persian empire by Alexander, argues Zeller ${ }^{3}$, and the subsequent erection of the Parthian domination on its ruins, most have been fatal to the spread of Zoroastrianism. From the middle of the third century before Christ, when the Parthian empire was established, till towards the middle of the third century of our era, ${ }^{1}$ Hilgenfeld (Zeitschrift $\mathrm{x} . \mathrm{p} .99$ sq.) finds coincidences even more special than these. He is answered by Zeller (ini. 2, p. 276), but defends his position again (Zeitschrift xi. p. 347 sq .), though with no great suecess. Among other points of coincidence Hilgenfeld remarks on the axe (Jos. B. J. ii. 8. 7) which was given to the novices among the Essenes, and connects it with the d $k$ wouavela (Plin. N. H. xxxvi. 19) of the magi. Zeller contents himself with replying that the use of the axe among the Essenes for parposes of divination is a pure conjecture, not resting on any known fact. He might have answered with much more effect that Josephus elsewhere (8 9) defines it as a spade or shovel, and assigns to it a very different use. Hilgenfeld has damaged his cause by laying stress on these accidental resemblances. So far as regards minor coincidences, Zeller makes out as good a case for his Pythagoreane, as Hilgenfeld for his magians.
${ }^{2}$ Those who allow any foreign Oriental element in Essenism most commonly ascribe it to Persia: e.g. among the more recent writers, Hilgenfeld (1. c.), and Lipsius Schenkel's Bibel-Lexikon s. v. Essäer p. 189.
${ }^{3}$ 1. c. p. 275.
when the Persian monarchy and religion were once more restored ${ }^{1}$, its influence must have been reduced within the narrowest limits. But does analogy really suggest such an inference? Does not the butfavourhistory of the Jews themselves show that the religious influence of able to the of a people on the world at large may begin just where its national Parsism. life ends? The very dispersion of Zoroastrianism, consequent on the fall of the empire, would impregnate the atmosphere far and wide; and the germs of new religious developments would thus be implanted in alien soils. For in tracing Essenism to Persian influences I have not wished to imply that this Jewish sect consciously incorporated the Zoroastrian philosophy and religion as such, but only that Zoroastrian ideas were infused into its system by more or less direct contact. And, as a matter of fact, it seems quite certain that Persian ideas were widely spread during this very interval, when the Persian nationality was eclipsed. It was then that Hermippus gave to the IndicaGreeks the most detailed account of this religion which had ever been laid before them ${ }^{2}$. It was then that its tenets suggested or moulded tions of its influence during this period. the speculations of the various Gnostic sects. It was then that the worship of the Persian Mithras spread throughout the Roman Empire. It was then, if not earlier, that the magian system took root in Asia Minor, making for itself (as it were) a second home in Cappadocia ${ }^{3}$. It was then, if not earlier, that the Zoroastrian demonology stamped itself so deeply on the apocryphal literature of the Jews themselves, which borrowed even the names of evil spirits ${ }^{4}$ from the Persians. There are indeed abundant indications that Palestine was surrounded by Persian influences during this period, when the Persian empire was in abeyance.

Thus we seem to have ample ground for the view that certain [^137][^138]Are Buddhist in. fluences also perceptible?

Supposed Budahist establishment at Alexandria.

The anthority misinter. preted alien features in Essene Judaism were derived from the Zoroastrian religion. But are we justified in going a step further, and attributing other elements in this eclectic system to the more distant East? The monasticism of the Buddhist will naturally occur to our minds, as a precursor of the cenobitic life among the Essenes; and Hilgenfeld accordingly has not hesitated to ascribe this characteristic of Essenism directly to Buddhist influences '. But at the outset we are obliged to ask whether history gives any such indication of the presence of Buddhism in the West as this hypothesis requires. Hilgenfeld answers this question in the affirmative. He points confidently to the fact that as eariy as the middle of the second century before Christ the Buddhist records speak of their faith as flourishing in Alasanda the chief city of the land of Yavana. The place intended, he conceives, can be none other than the great Alexandria, the most famous of the many places bearing the name ${ }^{2}$. In this opinion however he stands quite alone. Neither Köppen ${ }^{3}$, who is his authority for this statement, nor any other Indian scholar ${ }^{4}$, so far as I am aware, for a moment contemplates this identification. Yavana, or Yona, was the common Indian name for the Greco-Bactrian kingdom and its dependencies ${ }^{5}$; and to this region we naturally turn. The Alasanda or Alasadda therefore, which is here mentioned, will be one of several Eastern cities bearing the name of the great conqueror, most probably Alexandria ad Caucasum.

[^139][^140]But indeed I hardly think that, if Hilgenfeld had referred to the original authority for the statement, the great Buddhist history Mahawoanso, he would have ventured to lay any stress at all on this notice, as supporting his theory. The historian, or rather and wholig fabulist (for such he is in this earlier part of his chronicle), is re- worthy in lating the foundation of the Maha thúpo, or great tope, at Ruanwelli itself. by the king Dutthagamini in the year b.c. 157 . Beyond the fact that this tope was erected by this king the rest is plainly legendary. All the materials for the construction of the building, we are told, appeared spontaneously as by miracle-the bricks, the metals, the precious stones. The dewos, or demons, lent their aid in the erection. In fact the fabric hugeRose like an exhalation.

Priests gathered in enormous numbers from all the great Buddhist monasteries to do honour to the festival of the foundation. One place alone sent not less than 96,000 . Among the rest it is mentioned that ' Maha Dhammarakkito, théro (i.e. senior priest) of Yóna, accompanied by 30,000 priests from the vicinity of Alasadda, the capital of the Yóna country, attended ${ }^{1}$.' It is obvious that no weight can be attached to a statement occurring as part of a story of which the other details are so manifestly false. An establishment of $3^{\circ}, 000$ Buddhist priests at Alexandria would indeed be a phenomenon of which historians have shown a strange neglect.

Nor is the presence of any Buddhist establishment even on a much smaller scale in this important centre of western civilisation at all reconcilable with the ignorance of this religion, which the Greeks and Romans betray at e much later date? For some centuries after the Christian era we find that the information possessed by western writers was most shadowy and confused; and in almost every instance we are able to trace it to some other cause than the actual presence of Buddhists in the Roman Empire ${ }^{\text {a }}$. Thus Strabo, Strabo.

[^141][^142]who wrote under Augustus and Tiberius, apparently mentions the Buddhist priests, the sramanas, under the designation sarmanoe (Kap$\mu a ́ v a s)^{1}$; but he avowedly obtains his information from Megasthenes,
'Ivồv Tudás. The qualifying ruda's shows how very slight was the commanication between India and Alexandria. The mission of Pantenus may have been suggested by the presence of such stray visitors. Jerome (Vir. Ill. 36) saya that he went 'rogatus ab illins gentis legatis.' It must remain doubtful however, whether some other region than Hindostan, such as Ethiopia for instance, is not meant, when Pantenus is said to have gone to India: see Cave's Lives of the Primitive Fathers p. 188 sq .
How very slight the communication was between India and the West in the early years of the Christian era, appears from this passage of Strabo which he goes on to say that the only instance of Indian travellers in the West was the embassy sent to Augustus (bee below p. 394), which came ' $\phi$ '

The communications between Indis and the West are investigated by two reeent writers, Reinaud Relations Politiques et Commerciales de l'Empire Romain avec lasie Centrale, Paris 1863, and Priauls The Indian Travels of Apollonius of Tyana and the Indian Embassies to Rome, 1873. The latter work, which is very thorough and satisfactory, would have saved me mich labour of independent investigation, if I had seen it in time.

1 Strabo xv. I. 59, p. 712. In the wss it is written 「appuapas, but this must be an error either introduced by Strabo's transcribers or foand in the copy of Megasthenes which this author used. This is plain not only from the Indian word itself, but also from the parallel passage in Clement of Alexandria (Strom. i, 15). From the coincidences of language it is clear that Clement also dorived his information from Megasthenes, whose name he mentions just below. The iragments of Megasthenes relating to the Indian philosophers will be found in Miiller Fragm. Hist. Graec. II. p. 437. They were previously edited by Schwanbeck, Megasthenis Indica (Bonnæ 1846).

For $\Sigma$ Lappâval we also find the form इapavaio in other writers; e.g. Clem. Alex. 1. c., Bardesmes in Porphyr. de Abstin. iv. 17, Orig. c. Cels. i. 19 (1. p. 342). This divergence is explained by the fact that the Pali word sammana corresponds to the Sanskrit sramana. See Schwanbeck, 1. 0. p. 17, quoted by Müller, p .437.

It should be borne in mind however, that several eminent Indian scholars believe Megasthenes to have meant not Buddhists but Brahmins by his Eapuduas. So for instance Lassen Rhein. Mus, 1833, p. 180 sq., Ind. Alterth. II. p. 700: and Prof. Max. Müller (Pref. to Rogers's Translation of Buddhaghosha's Parables, London 1870, p. lii) says; 'That Lassen is right in toking the Eapuaval, mentioned by Megasthenes, for Brahmanic, not for Buddhist ascetics, might be proved also by their dress. Dresses made of the bark of trees are not Buddhistic.' If this opinion be correct, the carlier notices of Buddhism in Greek writers entirely disappear, and my position is strengthened. But for the following reasons the other view appears to me more probable: (1) The term sramana is the common term for the Buddhist ascetic, whereas it is very seldom used of the Brahmin. (2) The Zá $\mu$ avos (another form of sramana), mentioned below p. 394 , note 2, appears to have been a Buddhist. This view is taken even by Lassen, Ind. Alterth. III. p. 60. (3) The distinction of Bpaxpâves and Sappaval in Megasthenes or the writers following lim corresponds to the dis-who travelled in India somewhere about the year 300 B.c. and wrote a book on Indian affairs. Thus too Bardesanes at a much later date Bardegives an account of these Buddhist ascetics, without however naming sanes. the founder of the religion; but he was indebted for his knowledge of them to conversations with certain Indian ambassadors who visited Syria on their way westward in the reign of one of the Antonines ${ }^{1}$. Clement of Alexandria, writing in the latest years of the second CIement century or the earliest of the third, for the first ${ }^{2}$ time mentions of AlexanBuddha by name; and even he betrays a strange ignorance of this Eastern religion ${ }^{3}$.
tinction of Bрaұuâves and इapavaios in Bardesanes, Origen, and others; and, as Schwambeck has shown (1. c.), the account of the इappầac in Megrsthenes for the most part is a close parallel to the account of the ミapavato: in Bardesanes (or at least in Porphyry's report of Bardesanes). It seems more probable therefore that Megasthenes has been guilty of confusion in describing the dress of the Eapuâvat, than that Brahmins are intended by the term.
The Pali form, Eapavaiol, as a designation of the Buddhists, first occurs in Clement of Alezandria or Bardesanes, whichever may be the earlier writer. It is generally ascribed to Alezander Polyhistor, who flourished в.c. $80-60$, because his authority is quoted by Cyril of Alexandria (c. Julian. iv. p. 133) in the same context in which the Eapavaioo are mentioned. This inference is drawn by Schwan. beck, Max Müller, Lassen, and others. An examination of Cyril's language however shows that the statement for which he quotes the authority of Alexander Polyhistor does not extend to the mention of the Samanmi. Indeed all the facts given in this passage of Cyril (including the reference to Polyhistor) are taken from Clement of Alexandria (Strom. i. 15 ; see below n. 3), whose account Cyril has abridged. It is possible indeed that Clement himself derived the statement from Polyhistor, but nothing in Clement's own language points to this.

1 The narrative of Bardesanes is given by Porphyry de Abst. iv. 17. The Buddhist ascetios are there called Eapavaiol (see the last note). The work of Bardesanes, recounting his conversations with these Indian ambassadors, is quoted again by Porphyry in a fragment preserved by Stobæus Ecl. iii. 55 (p. 141). In this last pessage the embassy is said to have arrived
 'E $\mu \tau \sigma \hat{\omega} \nu$, by which, if the words be correct, must be meant Elagabalus (A.D. 218-222), the spurious Antonine (see Hilgenfeld Bardesanes p. 12 sq .). Other ancient authorities however place Bardesanes in the reign of one of the older Antonines; and, as the context is somewhat corrupt, we cannot feel quite certain about the date. Bardesames gives by far the most accurate account of the Buddhists to be found in any ancient Greek writer; but even here the monstrous stories, which the Indian ambassadors related to him, show how little trustworthy such sources of information were.
${ }^{2}$ Except possibly Arrian, Ind. viii. I, who mentions an ancient Indian king, Budyas (Bovolus) by name; but what he relates of him is quite inconsistent with the history of Buddha, and probably some one else is intended.
${ }^{3}$ In this passage (Strom. i. i5, p. 359) Clement apparently mentions these same persons three times, supposing that he is describing three different schools of Oriental philosophers. (1) He speaks of Va, (comp. Cyrill. Alex. 1. c.); (2) He distinguishes two classes of Indian gymno-

Hippoly. tus.
A. Buddhist at Athens.

Still later than this, Hippolytus, while he gives a fairly intelligent, though brief, account of the Brahmins', says not a word about the Buddhists, though, if he had been acquainted with their teaching, he would assuredly have seen in them a fresh support to his theory of the affinity between Christian heresies and pre-existing heathen philosophies. With one doubtful exception-an Indian fanatic attached to an embassy sent by king Porus to Augustus, who astonished the Greeks and Romans by burning himself alive at Athens"-there sophists, whom he calls $\Sigma$ aquẫac and Bpaxaãval. These are Baddhists and Brahmins respectively (see p. 392, note 1); (3) He says afterwards elol $\delta \xi$

 Schwanbeck indeed maintains that Clement here intends to describe the same persons whom he has just mentioned as $\Sigma a \rho \mu a ̈ v a t$; but this is not the natural interpretation of his language, which must mean 'There are also among the Indians those who obey the precepts of Buddiha.' Probably Sehwanbeek is right in identifying the $\Sigma a \rho \mu \hat{a}-$ pai with the Buddhist ascetics, but Clement appears not to hare known this. In fact he has obtained his information from different sources, and so repeated himself without being aware of it. Where he got the first fact it is impossible to say. The second, as we saw, was derived from Megasthenes. The third, relating to Buddha, came, as we may conjecture, either from Pantrenus (if indeed Hindostan is really meant by the India of his missionary labours) or from some chance Indian visitor at Alexandria.

In another passage (Strom. iii. 7, p. 539) Clement speaks of certain Indian celibates and ascetics, who are called $\Sigma_{\epsilon \mu \nu o f . ~ A s ~ h e ~ d i s t i n g u i s h e s ~}^{\text {a }}$ them from the gymnosophists, and mentions the pyramid as a saored bailding with them, the identification with the Buddhists can hardly be doubted. Here therefore $\Sigma_{\epsilon \mu \nu 0}$ is a Grecized form of $\Sigma$ इamapaioo ; and this modification of the word would occur naturally to Clement, because oe $\mu \nu 0$ o, $\sigma \epsilon \mu \nu \varepsilon$ iov, Werealreadyused of the ascetic life: evg. Philo de Vit. Cont. 3 fp.

${ }^{2}$ Haer. i. 24.
${ }^{2}$ The chief authority is Nieolans of Damascus in Strabo xv. x. 73 (p. 270). The incident is mentioned also in Dion Cass. liv. 9. Nicolaus had met these ambassadors at Antioch, and gives an interesting account of the motley company and their strange presents. This fanatic, who was one of the number, immolated himself in the presence of an astonished crowd, and perhaps of the emperor himself, at Athens. He anointed himself and then Ieapt smiling on the pyre. The inscription on द̇autò data日avatioas кeital. The tomb was visible at least as late as the age of Platarch, who recording the selfimmolation of Calanus before Alexander (Vit. Alex. 69) says, тои̂то тоддоís решбнevov. Strabo also places the two incidents in conjunction in another passage in which he refers to this person, xv. I. 4 (p. 686) é катакай́as

The reasons for supposing this person to have been a Buddhist, rather than a Brahmin, are: (i) The name Zapuavox ${ }^{\text {rads }}$ (which appears with some variations in the mss of Strabo) being apparently the Indian sramanakarja, i.e. 'teacher of the ascetics,' in other words, a Buddhist priest; (2) The place Bargosa, i.e. Barygaza, is apparently no notice in either heathen or Christian writers, which points to the presence of a Buddhist within the limits of the Roman Empire, till long after the Essenes had ceased to exist ${ }^{1}$.

And if so, the coincidences must be very precise, before we are justified in attributing any peculiarities of Essenism to Buddhist influences. This however is far from being the case. They both exhibit a well-organized monastic society: but the monasticism of the Buddhist priests, with its systematized mendicancy, has little Monastiin common with the monasticism of the Essene recluse, whose life ${ }^{\text {cism. }}$ was largely spent in manual labour. They both enjoin celibacy, both prohilit the use of flesh and of wine, both abstain from the slaughter of animals. But, as we have already seen, such resemblances prove nothing, for they may be explained by the independent development of the same religious principles. One coincidence, and one only, is noticed by Hilgenfeld, which at first sight seems more striking and might suggest a historical connexion. He observes Four orthat the four orders of the Essene community are derived from the ders and where Buddhism flourished in that age. See Priaulx p. 78 sq . In Dion Cassins it is written Zópuapos.

And have we not here an explana-mas be the right reading? The passage, being written before the fires of the Neronian persecution, requires explanation. Now it is clear from Platarch that the 'Tomb of the Indian' was one of the sights shown to strangers at Athens: and the Apostie, who observed the altar arNWCTWI $\theta \in \omega$, was not likely to overlook the sepulchre with the strange inscription eayton amabanaticac keital. Indeed the incident would probably be pressed on his notice in his discussions with Stoics and Epicureans, and he would be forced to declare himself as to the value of these Indian self-immolations, when he preached the doctrine of self-sacrifice. We may well imagine therefore that the fate of this poor Buddhist fanatio was present to his mind when he penned the words farnish an almost equally good illustration of the tezt, whether we read iva Cassius (1. c.) suggests that the deed

 How mach attention these religious suicides of the Indians attracted in the Apostolic age (doubtless because the act of this Buddhist priest had brought the subject vividly before men's minds in the West), we may infer from the speech which Josephus puts in the mouth of Eleazar (B. J. vii. 8. 7), $\beta \lambda \epsilon$ -

 ขоúucrot re入eutī̃ol...ãp’ dî̀ ouk aldoú-

${ }^{1}$ In the reign of Claudins an embassyarrived from Taprobane (Ceylon); and from these ambassadors Pliny derived his information regarding the island, N. H. vi. 24. Respecting their religion however he says only two words 'coli Herealem,' by whom probably Rama is meant (Priaulx p. 116). From this and other statements it appears that they were Tamils and not Singalese, and thus belonged to the non-Buddhist part of the island; see Priaulx p. 91 sq.
four steps of Buddhism. Against this it might fuirly be argued that such coincidences of numbers are often purely accidental, and that in the present instance there is no more reason for connecting the four steps of Buddhism with the four orders of Essenism than there would be for connecting the ten precepts of Buddha with the Ten Commandments of Moses. But indeed a nearer examination will show that the two have nothing whatever in common except the number. The four steps or paths of Buddhism are not four grades of an external order, but four degrees of spiritual progress on the way to nirvana or amikilation, the ultimate goal of the Buddhist's religious aspirations. They are wholly unconnected with the Buddhist monastic system, as an organization. A reference to the Buddhist notices collected in Hardy's Eastern Monachism (p. 280 sq.) will at once dispel any suspicion of a resemblance. A man may attain to the highest of these four stages of Buddhist illumination instantaneously. He does not need to have passed through the lower grades, but may even be a layman at the time. Some merit obtained in a previous state of existence may raise him per saltum to the elevation of a rahat, when all earthly desires are crushed and no future birth stands between him and nirvana. There remains therefore no coircidence which would suggest any historical connexion between Essenism and Buddhism.

Budahist influences seen first in Manicheism. Indeed it is not till some centuries later, when Manicheism ${ }^{1}$ starts into being, that we find for the first time any traces of the influence of Buddhism on the religions of the West ${ }^{2}$.

[^143][^144]
III.

ESSENISM AND CHRISTLANITY.

IT has become a common practice with a certain class of writers to Thetheory call Essenism to their aid in accounting for any distinctive features of Christianity, which they are unable to explain in any other way. Wherever some external power is needed to solve a perplexity, bere is the deus ex machina whose aid they most readily invoke. which explains Christianity as an Constant repetition is sure to produce its effect, and probably not a few persons, who want either the leisure or the opportunity to investigate the subject for themselves, have a lurking suspicion that the Founder of Christianity may have been an Essene, or at all events that Christianity was largely indebted to Essenism for its doctrinal and ethical teaching ${ }^{1}$. Indeed, when very confident and sweeping assertions are made, it is natural to presume that they rest on a substantial basis of fact. Thus for instance we are told by one writer that Christianity is 'Essenism alloyed with foreign elements, ${ }^{\text {s }}$ : while another, who however approaches the subject in a different spirit, says; 'It will hardly be doubted that our Saviour himself belonged to this holy brotherhood. This will especially be apparent, when we remember that the whole Jewish community at the advent of Christ was divided into three parties, the Pharisees, the Sadducces, and the Essenes, and that every Jew had to belong to one of these sects. Jesus who in all things conformed to the Jewish law, and who was holy, harmless, undefiled, and separate from sinners, would therefore naturally associate Himself with that order [^145]ceived in a wholly different spirit from the theories of the writers mentioned in the text; bat it is even more antenable and does not deserve serions refutation.

${ }^{2}$ Grätz IIL. p. ${ }^{217}$.
tested by facts.

Our Liord need not have belonged to any sect.

The argument from the silence of the New Testament answered.
of Judaism which was most congenial to His nature ${ }^{\text {? }}$. I purpose testing these strong assertions by an appeal to facts.

For the statements involved in those words of the last extract which I have underlined, no authority is given by the writer himself; nor have I been able to find confirmation of them in any quarter. On the contrary the frequent allusions which we find to the vulgar herd; the i $\delta \hat{1} \hat{\sigma} \tau a$, the cam haarets, who are distinguished from the disciples of the schools", suggest that a large proportion of the people was unattached to any sect. If it had been otherwise, we might reasonably presume that our Lord, as one who 'in all things conformed to the Jewish law,' would have preferred attaching Himself to the Pharisees who 'sat in Moses' seat' and whose precepts He recommended His disciples to obey ${ }^{3}$, rather than to the Essenes who in one important respect at least-the repudiation of the temple sacrifices-acted in flagrant violation of the Mosaic ordinances.

This preliminary barrier being removed, we are free to investigate the evidence for their presumed connexion. And here we are met first with a negative argument, which obviously has great weight with many persons. Why, it is asked, does Jesus, who so unsparingly denounces the vices and the falsehoods of Pharisees and Sadducees, never once mention the Essenes by way of condemnation, or indeed mention them by name at all? Why, except that He Himself belonged to this sect and looked favourably on their teaching? This question is best answered by another. How can we explain the fact, that throughout the enormous mass of talmudical and early rabbinical literature this sect is not once mentioned by name, and that even the supposed allusions to them, which have been discovered for the first time in the present century, turn out on investigation to be hypothetical and illnsory? The difficulty is much greater in this latter instance; but the answer is the same in both cases. The silence is explained by the comparative insignificance of the sect, their small numbers and their retired habits. Their settlements were far removed from the great centres of political and religious life. Their recluse habits, as a rule, provented them from interfering in the common business of the world. Philo and Josephus have given prominence to them, because their ascetic [^146]practices invested them with the character of philosophers and interested the Greeks and Romans in their history; but in the national life of the Jews they bore a very insignificant part ${ }^{2}$. If the Sadducees, who held the highest offices in the hierarchy, are only mentioned directly on three occasions in the Gospels ${ }^{3}$, it can be no surprise that the Essenes are not named at all.

As no stress therefore can be laid on the argument from silence, The posiany hypothesis of connexion between Essenism and Christianity ments for must make good its claims by establishing one or both of these two a connexpoints: first, that there is direct historical evidence of close inter-twofold. course between the two; and secondly, that the resemblances of doctrine and practice are so striking as to oblige, or at least to warrant, the belief in such a connexion. If both these lines of argument fail, the case must be considered to have broken down.

1. On the former point it must be premised that the Gospel r. Absence narrative does not suggest any hint of a connexion. Indeed its general $\frac{\text { of direct }}{\text { historical }}$ tenor is directly adverse to such a supposition. From first to lest evidence Jesus and His disciples move about freely, taking part in the nexion. common business, even in the common recreations, of Jewish life. The recluse ascetic brotherhood, which was gathered about the shores of the Dead Sea, does not once appear above the Evangelists' horizon. Of this close society, as such, there is not the faintest indication. But two individuals have been singled out, as holding an important place either in the Evangelical narrative or in the Apostolic Church who, it is contended, form direct and personal links of communi- leged. cation with this sect. These are John the Baptist and James the Lord's brother. The one is the forerunner of the Gospel, the first [^147]is so imperfect and has no chance of being extended, the greatest prudence is required of science, if ahe prefers to be true rather than adventurous, if she has at heart rather to enlighten than to surprise ' (p. 46r). Even Grätz in one passage can write soberly on this subject: 'The Essenes had throughoat no influence on political movements, from which they held aloof as far as possible' (irr. p. 86).

2 These are (I) Matt. iii. 7; (2) Matt. xvi. r sq. ; (3) Matt. zxii, 23 sq., Mark xii. 18, Lulke xx. 27.
t Two indi. vidual cases al-herald of the Kingdom; the other is the most prominent figure in the early Church of Jerusalem.
(i) John the Baptist
(i) John the Baptist was an ascetic. His abode was the desert; his clothing was rough; his food was spare; he baptized his penitents. Therefore, it is argued, he was an Essene. Between the premisses and the conclusion however there is a broad gulf, which cannot very easily be bridged over. The solitary independent life, which not an Es- John led, presents a type wholly different from the cenobitic estaBene.

External resemblances to John in Banus, blishments of the Essenes, who had common property, common meals, common hours of labour and of prayer. It may even be questioned whether his food of locusts would have been permitted by the Essenes, if they really ate nothing which had life ( ${ }^{( } \mu^{\prime} \psi^{\prime} \chi^{o v}{ }^{1}$ ). And again; his baptism as narrated by the Evangelists, and their lustrations as described by Josephus, have nothing in common except the use of water for a religious purpose. When therefore we are told confidently that 'his manner of life was altogether after the Essene pattern',' and that 'he without doubt baptized his converts into the Essene order,' we know what value to attach to this bold assertion. If positive stateroents are allowable, it would be more true to fact to say that he could not possibly have been an Essene. The rule of his life was isolation; the principle of theirs, community ${ }^{2}$.

In this mode of life John was not singular. It would appear that not a few devout Jews at this time retired from the world and buried themselves in the wilderness, that they might devote themselves unmolested to ascetic discipline and religious meditation. One such instance at all events we have in Banus the master of Josephus, with whom the Jewish historian, when a youth, spent three years in the desert. This anchorite was clothed in garments made of bark or of leaves; his food was the natural produce of the earth; he bathed day and night in cold water for purposes of purification. To the careless observer doubtless John and Banus would appear to be men of the same stamp. In their outward mode of life there was perhaps not very much difference ${ }^{4}$. The conscious-

[^148][^149]ness of a divine mission, the gift of a prophetic insight, in John was the real and all-important distinction between the two. But here who was also the same mistake is made ; and we not uncommonly find Banus $\begin{gathered}\text { not an } \\ \text { Essene. }\end{gathered}$ described as an Essene. It is not too much to say however, that the whole tenor of Josephus' narrative is opposed to this supposition '. He says that when sixteen years old he desired to acquire a knowledge of the three sects of the Jews before making his choice of one; that accordingly he went through ( $\delta \hat{\eta} \lambda \lambda \theta v$ ) all the three at the cost of much rough discipline and toil; that he was not satisfied with the experience thus gained, and hearing of this Banus he attached having remained three years with him he returned to Jerusalem; and that then, being nineteen years old, he gave in his adhesion to the sect of the Pharisees. Thus there is no more reason for connecting this Banus with the Essenes than with the Pharisees. The only natural interpretation of the narrative is that he did not belong to any of the three sects, but represented a distinct type of religious life, of which Josephus was anxious to gain experience. And his hermit life seems to demand this solution, which the sequence of the narrative suggests.

Of John himself therefore no traits are handed down which General suggest that he was a member of the Essene community. He was an result. ascetic, and the Essenes were ascetics ; but this is plainly an inadequate basis for any such inference. Nor indeed is the relation of his asceticism to theirs a question of much moment for the matter in hand; since this was the very point in which Christ's mode of life was so essentially different from John's as to provoke criticism and to point a contrast ${ }^{?}$. But the later history of his real or supposed disciples has, or may seem to have, some bearing on this investigation. Towards the close of the first and the beginning of the second century we meet with a body of sectarians called TheHeme- in Greek Hemerobaptists ${ }^{1}$, in Hebrew Toble-shacharith', 'day' or robaptists. 'morning bathers.' What were their relations to John the Baptist on the one hand, and to the Essenes on the other? Owing to the scantiness of our information the whole subject is wrapped in obscurity, and any restoration of their history must be more or less hypothetical ; but it will be possible at all events to suggest an account which is not improbable in itself, and which does no violence to the extant notices of the sect.
${ }^{1}$ The passage is so important that I give it in full; Joseph. Fit. $2 \pi \in \rho 2$

${ }^{2}$ Matt. ix. 14 sq., xi. 17 sq., Mark ii. 18 sq., Luke v. 33, vii. 3 I sq.
(a) Their (a) We must not hastily conclude, when we meet with certain relation to John the Baptist. persons at Ephesus about the years a.d. 53, 54, who are described as 'knowing only the baptism of John,' or as having been 'baptized unto John's baptism ${ }^{\text {a }}$, that we have here some early representatives John's dis- of the Hemerobaptist sect. These were Christians, though imperfectly ciples at Ephesus. informed Christians. Of A pollos, who was more fully instructed by Aquila and Priscilla, this is stated in the most explicit terms *. Of the rest, who owed their fuller knowledge of the Gospel to St Paul, the same appears to be implied, though the language is not free from ambiguity ${ }^{\text {b }}$. But these notices have an important bearing on our subject; for they show how profoundly the effect of John's preaching was felt in districts as remote as proconsular Asia, even after a lapse of a quarter of a century. With these disciples it was the initial [^150]or with the Talmudical ancedote of them quoted above, p. 369. Of Banus he reports (Vit. 2) that he 'bathed often day and night in cold water.'

${ }^{2}$ See above, p. 368 sq .
${ }^{3}$ The former expression is used of Apollos, Acts xviii. 24; the latter of ' certain disciples,' Acts xix. I.
${ }^{4}$ This appears from the whole nar. rative, but is distinctly stated in ver.

 the received text.
${ }^{5}$ The $\pi \iota \sigma \tau \in \sigma \sigma \nu \tau \epsilon s$ in xix. $r$ is slightly ambiguous, and some expressions in the passage might suggest the opposite : but $\mu$ a $\theta$ yrds seems decisive, for the word would not be used absointely except of Christian disciples; comp. Vi. $1,2,7$, ix. $10,19,26,38$, and frequently.
impulse towards Christianity；but to others it represented a widely different form of belief and practice．The Gospel of St John was Professed written，according to all tradition，at Ephesus in the later years of at a later the first century．Again and again the Evangelist impresses on his date． readers，either directly by his own comments or indirectly by the course of the narrative，the transient and subordinate character of John＇s ministry．He was not the light，says the Evangelist，but came to bear witness of the light ${ }^{1}$ ．He was not the sun in the heavens ：he was only the waning lamp，which shines when kindled from without and burns itself away in shining．His light might well gladden the Jews while it lasted，but this was only＇for a season．．＇ John himself lost no opportunity of bearing his testimony to the loftier claims of Jesus ${ }^{8}$ ．From such notices it is plain that in the interval between the preaching of St Paul and the Gospel of St John the memory of the Baptist at Ephesus had assumed a new attitude towards Christianity．His name is no longer the sign of imperfect appreciation，but the watchword of direct antagonism． John had been set up as a rival Messiah to Jesus．In other words，this Gospel indicates the spread of Hemerobaptist principles， if not the presence of a Hemerobaptist community，in proconsular Asia，when it was written．In two respects these Hemerobaptists distorted the facts of history．They perverted John＇s teaching，and they misrepresented his office．His baptism was no more a single rite，once performed and initiating an amendment of life；it was a
of history of history by them． daily recurrence atoning for sin and sanctifying the person ${ }^{4}$ ．He

1 John i． 8.
2 Johm v． 35 ékếvos グv ó 入ú ${ }^{2}$ vos ó каєоцеvos кal $\phi a i \nu \omega \nu$ к．т．$\lambda$ ．The word katety is not only＇to burn＇，but not unfrequentiy also＇to kindle，to set on fire＇，as e．g．Xen．Anab．iv．4． 12 ol кato $\mu \in v o s$ may mean either＇which burns away＇or＇which is lighted＇． With the former meaning it would de－ note the transitoriness，with the latter the derivative character，of John＇s ministry．There seems no reason for excluding either idea here．Thus the whole expression would mean＇the lamp which is kindled and burns away， and（only so）gives light＇．For an ex． ample of two verbs or participles joined together，where the second describes a result conditional upon the first，see r Pet．ii． 20 єl $\dot{\alpha} \mu a \rho \tau \dot{\alpha} \nu о \nu \tau \epsilon \varsigma$ каl кода－ ф८̧̧ß

3 See John i．I5－34，iii．23－30， v． 33 sq．：comp．x．4r，42．This aspect of St John＇s Gospel has been brought out by Ewald Jahrb．der Bibl． Wissensch．III．p． $156 \mathrm{sq} . ;$ see also Geschichte vir．p． 152 sq．，die Johan－ neischen Schriften p．I3．There is perhaps an allusion to these＇disciples каl тд $\pi \nu \in \hat{\imath} \mu \mathrm{\kappa}$ к．т．$\lambda$ ；comp．Acts i．5， xi． 16 ，xix． 4.

4 Apost．Const．vi．6；comp．§ 23． See 1．402，note I． himself was no longer the forerunner of the Messiah; he was the very Messiah ${ }^{1}$. In the latter half of the first century, it would Spread of seem, there was a great movement among large numbers of the Jews in favour of frequent baptism, as the one purificatory rite essential to salvation. Of this superstition we have had an instance already in the anchorite Banus to whom Josephus attached himself as a disciple. Its presence in the western districts of Asia Minor is shown by a Sibylline poem, dating about A.D. 80, which I have already had occasion to quote ${ }^{\text {a }}$. Some years earlier these sectarians are mentioned by name as opposing James the Lord's brother and the Twelve at Jerusalem ${ }^{3}$. Nor is there any reason for questioning their existence as a sect in Palestine during the later years of the Apostolic age, though the source from which our information comes is legendary, and the story itself a fabrication. But when or how they first connected themselves with the name of John the Baptist, and whether this assumption was made by all alike or only by one section of them, we do not know. Sucl a connexion, however false to history, was obvious and natural; nor would it be difficult to accumulate parallels to this false appropriation of an honoured name.

A wrong use made of John's name. Baptism was the fundamental article of their creed; and John was the Baptist of world-wide fame. Nothing more than this was needed for the choice of an eponym. From St John's Gospel it seems clear that this appropriation was already contemplated, if not completed, at Ephesus before the first century had drawn to a close. In the second century the assumption is recognised as a characteristic of these Hemerobaptists, or Baptists, as they are once called ${ }^{4}$, alike by those who allow and those who deny its ${ }^{1}$ Clem. Recogn. i. 54 'ex discipulis Johannis, qui...magistram suum veluti Christum praedicarunt,' ib. § 60 'Ecee unus ex discipulis Johannis adfirmabat Christum Johannem fuisse, et non Jesum; in tantum, inquit, ut et ipse Jesus omnibus hominibus et prophetis majorem esse pronuntiaverit Johannem etc.'; see also $$ 63$.
${ }^{2}$ See above, p. 96 .
${ }^{8}$ Clem. Recogn. l. c. This portion of the Clementine Recognitions is apparently taken from an older Judaizing romance, the Ascents of James (see Galatians pp. 330, 367 ). Hegesippus also (in Euseb. H. E. iv. 22) mentions the Hemerobaptists in his list of Jewish sects; and it is not improbable that this list was given as an introduction to his account of the labours and martyrdom of St James (see Euseb. H. E. ii. 23). Lí so, it was probably derived from the same source as the notice in the Recognitions.

* They are called Baptists by Justin Mart. Dial. ro, p. 307 A. He mentions them among other Jewish seets, without however alluding to John.
justice ${ }^{\text {' }}$. Even in our age the name of 'John's disciples' has been given, though wrongly given, to an obscure sect in Babylonia, the Mandeans, whose doctrine and practice have some affinities to the older sect, and of whom perhaps they are the collateral, if not the direct, descendants ${ }^{2}$.
(b) Of the connexion between this sect and John the Baptist (b) Their we have been able to give a probable, though necessarily hypothetical account. But when we attempt to determine its relation to to the Essenes. the Essenes, we find ourselves entangled in a hopeless mesh of perplexities. The notices are so confused, the affinities so subtle, the ramifications so numerous, that it becomes a desperate task to distinguish and classify these abnormal Jewish and Judaizing heresies. One fact however seems clear that, whatever affinities they may have had originally, and whatever relations they may have contracted They were at first
${ }^{1}$ By the author of the Recognitions (1.c.) who denies the claim; and by the author of the Homilies (see below, p. 406 , note 3), who allows it.
${ }^{2}$ These Mandeans are a rapidly diminishing sect living in the region about the Tigris and the Euphrates, south of Bagdad. Our most ezact knowledge of them is derived from Petermann (Herzog's Real-Encyklopädie s. wr. Mendäer, Zabier, and Deuteche Zeitschrift 1854 p. 18 r sq., 1856 p. $331 \mathrm{sq} ., 342 \mathrm{sq} ., 3^{63} \mathrm{sq} ., 3^{86} \mathrm{sq}$.) who has had personal intercourse with them; and from Chwolson (die Ssabier u. der Ssabismus 1. p. 100 sq.) who has investigated the Arabic authorities for their earlier histors. The names by which they are known axe (1) Mendeans, or more properly Mandeans, מַדיָ Mandäyé, contracted word of life.' This is their own name among themseives, and points to their Gnostic pretentions. (2) Sabeans, Tsabiyun, possibly from the root עב 'to dip' on account of their frequent lus. trations (Chwolson 1. p. iro; but see Galatians p. 325), though this is not the derivation of the word which they themselves adopt, and other etymologies have found favour with some recent writers (see Petermann Herzog's Real-Encykl. Suppl. xwiu. p. $34^{2}$ S. v .

Zabier). This is the name by which they are known in the Koran and in Arabio writers, and by which they call themselves when speaking to others.
(3) Nasoreans, لצֹצרייא Nātsōrāye. This term is at present confined to those among them who are distinguished in knowledge or in business. (4) 'Christians of St John, or Disciples of St John' (i.e. the Baptist). This name is not known among themselves, and was incorrectly given to them by European travellers and missionaries. At the same time John the Baptist has a very prominent place in their theological system, as the one true prophet. On the other hand they are not Christians in any sense.

These Mandeans, the true Sabeans, must not be confused with the false Sabeans, polytheists and star-worshippers, whose locality is Northern Mesopotamia. Chwolson (I. p. I 39 sq.) has shown that these last adopted the name in the $9^{\text {th }}$ century to escape persecution from the Mohammedans, because in the Koran the Sabeans, as monotheists, are ranged with the Jews and Christians, and viewed in a more favourable light than polytheists. The name however has generally been applied in modern times to the falso rather than to the true Sabeans.
distinct, if not antar gonistic.

But after the destruction of the Temple afterwards with one another, the Hemerobaptists, properly speaking, were not Essenes. The Sibylline poem which may be regarded as in some respects a Hemerobaptist manifesto contains, as we saw, many traits inconsistent with pure Essenism ${ }^{1}$. In two several accounts, the memoirs of Hegesippus and the Apostolic Constitutions, the Hemerobaptists are expressly distinguished from the Essenes ${ }^{2}$. In an early production of Judaic Christianity, whose Judaism has a strong Essene tinge, the Clementine Homilies, they and their eponym are condemned in the strongest language. The system of syzygies, or pairs of opposites, is a favourite doctrine of this work, and in these John stands contrasted to Jesus, as Simon Magus to Simon Peter, as the false to the true; for according to this author's philosophy of history the manifestation of the false always precedes the manifestation of the true ${ }^{3}$. And again, Epiphanius speaks of them as agreeing substantially in their doctrines, not with the Essenes, but with the Scribes and Phaxisees ${ }^{4}$. His authority on such a point may be worth very little; but connected with other notices, it should not be passed over in silence. Yet, whatever may have been their differences, the Hemerobaptists and the Essenes had one point of direct contact, their belief in the moral efficacy of lustrations. When the temple and polity were destroyed, the shock vibrated through the whole fabric of Judaism, loosening and breaking up existing societies, and preparing the way for new combinations. More especially the cessation of the sacrificial rites must have produced a profound effect equally on those who, like the Essenes, had condemned them already, and on those who, as possibly was the case ${ }^{1}$ See p. 96 sq.
${ }^{2}$ Hegesipp. in Euseb. $H$. E. iv. 22, Apost. Const. vi. 6. So also the Pseudo-Hieronymus in the Indiculus de Haeresibuc (Corp. Haeres. I. p. 283, ed. Oehler).
${ }^{2}$ Clem. Hom. ii. 23 'I $\omega$ ávins tis stated that, as Christ had twelve leading disciples, so John had thirty. This, it is argued, was a providential dispensation-the one number represents the solar, the other the lunar period; and so they illustrate another point in this writer's theory, that in the syzygies the true and the false are the male and female principle respectively. Among these 30 disciples he places Simon Magus. With this the doctrine of the Mandeans stands in direct oppasition. They too have their syzygies, but John with them represents the true principle.

 $\mu a \tau \epsilon \omega \nu$ kal Фaptoalwy фpovṑoa. But he adds that they resemble the Sadducees 'not only in the matter of the resurrection of the dead, but also in their unbelief and in the other points.'
with the Hemerobaptists, had hitherto remained true to the orthodox ritual. One grave obstacle to friendly overtures was thus removed; and a fusion, more or less complete, may have been the consequence. At all events the relations of the Jewish sects must have been there may materially affected by this great national crisis, as indeed we know to have been have been the case. In the confusion which follows, it is impossible to attain any clear view of their history. At the beginning of the second century however this pseudo-baptist movement received a fresh impuise from the pretended revelation of Elchasai, which came from the farther East ${ }^{1}$. Henceforth Elchasai is the prominent name in the history of those Jewish and Judaizing sects whose proper home is east of the Jordan ${ }^{2}$, and who appear to have reproduced, with various modifications derived from Christian and Heathen sources, the Gnostic theology and the pseudo-baptist ritual of their Essene predecessors. It is still preserved in the records of the only extant people who have any claim to be regarded as the religious heirs of the Essenes. Elchasai is regarded as the founder of the sect of Mandeans ${ }^{3}$.
(ii) But, if great weight has been attached to the supposed connexion of John the Baptist with the Essenes, the case of James the Lord's brother has been alleged with still more confidence. Here, it is said, we have an indisputable Essene connected by the closest family ties with the Founder of Christianity. James is reported to invested have been holy from his birth; to have drunk no wine nor strong drink; to have eaten no flesh; to have allowed no razor to touch his head, no oil to anoint his body; to have abstained from using the bath; and lastly to have worn no wool, but only fine linen ${ }^{4}$. Here we have a description of Nazarite practices at least and (must it not be granted) of Essene tendencies also.

But what is our authority for this description? The writer, from whom the account is immediately taken, is the Jewish-Christian his-
${ }^{1}$ See Galatians p. 324 sq, on this Book of Elchasai.
${ }^{2}$ See above, p. 374.
${ }^{3}$ See Chwolson I. p. 112 日q., II. p. 543 sq. The Arabic writer En-Nedim, who lived towards the close of the tenth eentury, says that the foumder of the Sabeans (i.e. Mandeans) was El-chasaich (الاحكسيحم) who taught the doctrine of two coordinste principles, the male and female. This notice, as far as it goes, agrees with the account of Elchasai or Elxai in Hippolytus (Haer. ix. I3 sq.) and Epiphanius (Haer. xix. I sq.). But the derivation of the name Elchasai given by Epiphanius (Haer. xix. 2) ס'́va $\mu$ сs кека$\lambda_{\nu \mu \mu \epsilon \nu \eta}$ ( $)$ ( $)$ is different and probably correct (see Galatians p. 325 ).
4 Hegesippus in Euseb. H. E. ii. 23.
torian Hegesippus, who flourished about A.d. 170 . He cannot therefore have been an eye-witness of the facts which he relates. And

But the account comes from untrastworthy sources. his whole narrative betrays its legendary character. Thus his account of James's death, which follows immediately on this description, is highly improbable and melodramatic in itself, and directly contradicts the contemporary notice of Josephus in its main facts ${ }^{1}$. From whatever source therefore Hegesippus may have derived his information, it is wholly untrustworthy. Nor can we doubt that he was indebted to one of those romances with which the Judaizing Christians of Essene tendencies loved to gratify the natural curiosity of their disciples respecting the first founders of the Church ${ }^{2}$. In like manner Essene portraits are elsewhere preserved of the Apostles Peter ${ }^{2}$ and Matthew* which represent them as living on a spare diet of herbs and berries. I believe also that I have elsewhere pointed out the true source of this deseription in Hegesippus, and that it is taken from the 'Ascents of James';' a Judæo-Christian work stamped, as we happen to know, with the most distinctive Essene features ${ }^{6}$. But if we turn from these religious novels of Judaic Christianity to earlier and more trustworthy sources of information-to the features in the true portraits of James or of the earliest disciples. the faintest traces of Essenism in James. 'The historical James,' says a recent writer, 'shows Pharisaic but not Essene sympathies'.' This is true of James, as it is true of the early disciples in the mother Church of Jerusalem generally. The temple-ritual, the daily sacrifices, suggested no scruples to them. The only distinction of meats, which they recognised, was the distinction of animals clean and unclean as laid down by the Mosaic law. The only sacrificial victims, whick they abhorred, were victims offered to idols. They took their part in the religious offices, and mixed freely in the common life, of their fellow-Israelites, distinguished from them only in this, that to their Hebrew inheritance they superadded the knowledge of a higher trath1 See Galatians p. 366 sq.

No Essene

${ }^{2}$ See Galatians 10. 324.
${ }^{2}$ Clem. Hom. xii. 6, where St Peter

4 Clem. Alex. Paedag. ii, I (p. 154)

${ }^{5}$ See Galatians p. 367, note.

[^151]and the joy of a better hope. It was altogether within the sphere of orthodox Judaism that the Jewish element in the Christian brotherhood found its scope. Essene peculiarities are the objects neither of sympathy nor of antipathy. In the history of the infant Church for the first quarter of a century Essenism is as though it were not.

But a time came, when all this was changed. Even as early as the Essene year 58 , when St Paul wrote to the Romans, we detect practices in the influences Christian community of the metropolis, which may possibly have been fore the due to Essene influences ${ }^{2}$. Five or six years later, the heretical the Apoteaching which threatened the integrity of the Gospel at Colosss stolic age. shows that this type of Judaism was already strong enough within the Church to exert a dangerous influence on its doctrinal purity. Then came the great convulsion-the overthrow of the Jewish polity and nation. This was the turning-point in the relations between Essenism and Christianity, at least in Palestine. The Eissenes were Conseextreme sufferers in the Roman war of extermination. It seems $\begin{gathered}\text { quences of } \\ \text { the Jewish }\end{gathered}$ probable that their organization was entirely broken up. Thus cast war. adrift, they were free to enter into other combinations, while the shock of the recent catastrophe would naturally turn their thoughts into new channels. At the same time the nearer proximity of the Christians, who had migrated to Peræa during the war, would bring them into close contact with the new faith and subject them to its influences, as they had never been subjected befores'. But, whatever may be the explanation, the fact seems certain, that after the destruction of Jerusalem the Christian body was largely reinforced from their ranks. The Judaizing tendencies among the Hebrew Christians, which hitherto had been wholly Pharisaic, are henceforth largely Essene.
2. If then history fails to reveal any such external connexion with Essenism in Christ and His Apostles as to justify the opinion that Essene influences contributed largely to the characteristic features of the Gospel, such a view, if tenable at all, must find its support in some striking coincidence between the doctrines and practices of the

Do the resernblances favour the theory of a connexion? Essenes and those which its Founder stamped upon Christianity. This indeed is the really important point ; for without it the external connexion, even if proved, would be valueless. The question is not whether Christianity arose amid such and such circumstances, but how far it was created and moulded by those circumstances.

^152 Observ. (i) Now one point which especially strikes us in the Jewish nace of the gabbath. certain points in the Mosaic ceremonial law, more especially the ultra-Pharisaic rigour with which they kept the sabbath. How far their conduct in this respect was consistent with the teaching and practice of Christ may be seen from the passages quoted in the parallel columns which follow:
-Jesus went on the sabbath day throagh the corn fields; and his disciples began to plucls the ears of corn and to eat ${ }^{1}$. .. But when the Pharisces saw it, they said unto him, 'Behold, thy disciples do that which it is not lawfol to do upon the sabbath-day. But he said unto them; Have ye not read what David did...The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath. Therefore the Son of Man is Lord even of the sabbath-day...'
'It is lawful to do well on the sab-bath-daya' (Matt. xii. 1-12; Mark ii. 23-iii. 6; Luke ri. 1-II, xiv. 1-6.
${ }^{1}$ Grätz (III. p. 233) considers this narrative an interpolation made from a Pauline point of view ('eine pauLinistische Tendenz-interpolation ${ }^{1}$ ). This theory of interpolation, interposing wherever the evidence is unfavourable, cuts up all argument by the roots. In this instance however Grätz is consistently carrying out a principie which he broadly lays down elsewhere. He regards it as the great merit of Baor and his school, that they explained the origin of the Gospels by the conflict of two opposing camps, the Ebionite and the Pauline. 'By this master-key,' he adds, 'criticism was first put in a position to test what is historical in the Gospels, and what bears the stamp of a polemical tendency (was einen tendentiösen polemischen Charakter hat). Indeed by this means the element of trustworthy history in the Gospels melts down to a minimum ' (III, p. 224). In other words the judgment is not to be pronounced upon the evidence, but
'And they avoid...touching any work ( $\varepsilon \phi \alpha^{\prime} \pi \tau \epsilon \sigma \theta a u$ z $\varepsilon \gamma \omega \nu$ ) on the sabbath-day more scrupulonsly than any of the Jews

the evidence must be matilated to suit the judgment. The method is not new. The sectarians of the second century, whether Judaic or anti-Judaic, had severally their 'master-key.' The master-key of Marcion was a confiet also-the antagonism of the Old and New Testaments. Under his hands the historical element in the New Testament dissolved rapidly. The mas-ter-key of the anti-Marcionite writer of the Clementine Homilies was likewise a conflict, though of another kind-the conflict of fire and water, of the sacrificial and the baptismal systems. Wherever sacrifice was mentioned with approval, there was a 'Tendenz-interpolation' (see above, p. 372 sq .). In this manner again the genuine element in the Old Testament melted dowa to a minimum.
${ }^{2}$ Grätz however (III. p. 228) sees a coincidence between Christ's teaching and Essenism in this notice. Not to do him injustice, I will translate his own words (correcting however several See also a similar incident in Luke xiii. 10-17).

'The Jews therefore said unto him that was eured; $\mathrm{I}_{\mathrm{t}}$ is the sabbath-day; it is not lawful for thee to carry thy bed. But he answered them, He that made me whole, the same said unto me, Take up thy bed and walk.... Therefore the Jews did persecute Jesus and sought to slay him, because he did these things on the sabbath-day. But Jesus answered them, My Father worketh hitherto, and I work, etc. (John v. ro-18; comp. vii. 22, 23).'
'And it was the sabbath-day when Jesus made the clay, and opened his eyes......Therefore said some of the Pharisees, This man is not of God, because he keepeth not the sabbath-day (Johm ix. I4, I6).'
they do not venture so much as to move a vesssl ${ }^{2}$, nor to perform the most necessary offices of life (B. J. ii. 8. 9).'
(ii) But there were other points of ceremonial observance, in (ii) Luswhich the Essenes superadded to the law. Of these the most re- trations markable was their practice of constant lustrations. In this respect ceremonial ob. the Pharisce was sufficiently minute and scrupulous in his obser- servances. vances; but with the Essene these ablutions were the predominant feature of his religious ritual. Here again it will be instructive to compare the practice of Christ and His disciples with the practice of the Essenes.
'And when they saw some of his disciples eat bread with defiled (that is to say, unwashen) hands; for the Pharisees and all the Jews, except they wash their hamds oft ( $\pi v \gamma \mu \hat{n}$ ), eat not.. The Pharisees and scribes asked him, Why walk not thy disciples aocording to the tradition of the elders misprints in the Greek) : ‘For the connexion of Jesus with the Essenes compare moreover Mark xi. 16 каi оט́к ที申фє iepoû with Josephus B.J. ii. 8. 9 ad入 ${ }^{\prime}$ 'Eforiote).' He does not explain what this notice, which refers solely to the scrupulous observance of the sabbath, has to do with the profanation of the temple, with which the passage in the
'So they wash their whole body ( $\dot{\alpha} \pi \boldsymbol{1}$ and after this purification (izvelav)... being clean ( $\kappa \alpha \theta a p o l$ ) they come to the refectory (to dine)...... And when they have returned (from fheir day's work) they sup in like manner ( $B . J$. ii. 8. 5).'

Gospel is alone concerned. I have seen Grätz's history described as a 'masterly' work. The first requisites in a historian are accuracy in stating facts and sobriety in drawing inferences. Without these, it is difficult to see what claims a history can have to this honourable epithet: and in those partions of his work, which I have consulted, I have not found either.
......But he answered...Ye hypocrites, laying aside the commandment of God, ye hold the tradition of men....'
'Not that which goeth into the mouth defileth the man; but that which cometh out of the mouth, this defileth the man..... Let them alone, they be blind leaders of the blind...'
' To eat with unwashen hands defileth not the man (Matt. xv. 1-20, Mark vii. 1 - 23 ).'
' And when the Phariseo saw it, he marvelled that he had not first washed before dinner ( $\tau o \hat{v}$ ápigrou). And the Lord said unto him: Now do ye Pharisees make clean the outside of the cup and the platter... Ye fools... behold all things are olean unto you (Luke xi. 38-41)."
-After a year's probation (the novice) is admitted to closer intercourse ( $\pi \rho \dot{\rho} \sigma$. $\left.\epsilon \epsilon \sigma t \nu{ }_{\xi} \gamma_{\gamma} t a \nu \tau \hat{\eta} \quad \dot{j} a t r \eta\right)$, and the Iustral waters in which he participates have a higher degree of purity (каi каАаршт\&- $\beta$ a $1 / \epsilon$, § 7).'
'It is a enstom to wash after it, as if polluted by it ( $$ 9$ ).'
' Racked and dislocated, burnt and crushed, and subjected to every instrument of torture ... to make them eat strange food ( $\tau \iota \tau \hat{\omega} \nu$ d $\sigma v v \dot{\eta} \theta \omega \nu$ )... they were not induced to submit (§ ro).'
'Exercising themselves in...divers

Avoidance of strangers.

Connected with this idea of external purity is the avoidance of contact with strangers, as persons who would communicate ceremonial defilement. And here too the Essene went much beyond the Pharisee. The Pharisee avoided Gentiles or aliens, or those whose profession or character placed them in the category of 'sinners'; but the Essene shrunk even from the probationers and inferior grades of his own exclusive community. Here again we may profitably compare the sayings and doings of Christ with the principles of this sect.

- And when the scribes and Pharisees saw him eat with the publicans and sinners they said unto the disciples, Why eateth your Master with the pablicans and the sinners...' (Mark ii. I5 sq., Matth. ix. Io sq., Luke F . 30 8q.).
'They say...a friend of publicans and sinners (Matth. xi. 19).'
'The Pharisees and the scribes murmared, saying, This man receiveth sinners and eateth with them (Luke xy. 2).'
'They all murmured saying that he was gone to be a guest with a man that is a sinner (Lake xix. 7).'

Behold, a woman in the city that was a sinner...began to wash his feet with her tears, and did wipe them with the hairs of her head and kissed his feet......Now when the Pharisee which had bidden him saw it, he spake within himself, saying, This man, if he had been a prophet, would have known who and what manner of woman this is that toucheth him; for she is a sinner (Luke vii. 37 sq.).'

- And they are divided into four grades according to the time passed under the discipline: and the juniors are regarded as so far inferior to the seniors, that, if they touch them, the latter wash their bodies clean (kio-入aúe $\sigma a \mathrm{a}$ ), as if they had come in con-$\phi u ́ \lambda \varphi \tau \nu \mu \phi \nu \rho \notin \nu \tau a s, \S 10)$.

In all these minute scruples relating to ceremonial observances, the denunciations which are hurled against the Pharisees in the Gospels would apply with tenfold force to the Essenes.
(iii) If the lustrations of the Essenes far outstripped the enactments of the Mosaic law, so also did their asceticism. I have ceticism. given reasons above for believing that this asceticism was founded on a false principle, which pastulates the malignity of matter and is wholly inconsistent with the teaching of the Gospel ${ }^{3}$. But without pressing this point, of which no absolutely demonstrative proof can be given, it will be sufficient to call attention to the trenchant contrast in practice which Essene habits present to the life of Christ. He who 'came eating and drinking' and was denounced in consequence Eating as 'a glutton and a wine-bibber',' He whose first exercise of power ing. and drinkis recorded to have been the multiplication of wine at a festive entertainment, and whose last meal was attended with the drinking of wine and the eating of flesh, could only have excited the pity, if not the indignation, of these rigid abstainers. And again, attention should be directed to another kind of abstinence, where the contrast is all the more speaking, because the matiter is so trivial and the scruple so minute.
'My head with oil thou didst not anoint (Luke vii. 46).'
'Thou, when thoufastest, anoint thy head (Matt. vi. r7).'

> 'And they consider oil a pollution $(\kappa \eta \lambda \hat{\alpha} \alpha)$, and though one is smeared involuntarily, he rubs his body clean $(\sigma \mu \eta \in \tau a l ~ \tau \grave{\delta} \sigma \omega \mu a, \& 3)$.'

And yet it has been stated that 'the Saviour of the world...... showed what is required for a holy life in the Sermon on the Mount by a description of the Essenes ${ }^{8}$.'

But much stress has been laid on the celibacy of the Essenes;

[^153]${ }^{3}$ Ginsburg Essenes p. $1_{4}$.

Celibacy. and our Lord's saying in Matt. xix. 12 is quoted to establish an identity of doctrine. Fet there is nothing special in the language there used. Nor is there any close affinity between the stern invectives against marriage which Josephus and Philo attribute to the Essene, and the gentle concession ' He that is able to receive it, let him receive it.' The best comment on our Lord's meaning here is the advice of St Paul ', who was educated not in the Essene, but in the Pharisaic school. Moreover this saying must be balanced by the general tenour of the Gospel narrative. When we find Christ discussing the relations of man and wife, gracing the marriage festival by His preseuce, again and again employing wedding banquets and wedded life as apt symbols of the highest theological truths, without a word of disparagement or rebuke, we see plainly that we are confronted with a spirit very different from the narrow rigour of the Essenes.
(iv) Aroidance of the Temple sacrifices.
(iv) But not only where the Essenes superadded to the ceremonial law, does their teaching present a direct contrast to the phenomena of the Gospel narrative. The same is true also of those points in which they fell short of the Mosaic enactments. I have already discussed at some length the Essene abstention from the temple sacrifices ${ }^{3}$. There can, I think, be little doubt that they objected to the slaughter of sacrificial victims altogether. But for my present purpose it matters nothing whether they avoided the temple on account of the sacrifices, or the sacrifices on account of the temple. Clurist did neither. Certainly He could not have regarded the temple as unholy; for His whole time during His sojourns at Jerusalem was spent within its precincts. It was the scene of His miracles, of His ministrations, of His daily teaching ${ }^{3}$. And in like manner it is the common rendezvous of His disciples after Him ${ }^{4}$. Nor again does He evince any abhorrence of the sacrifices. On the contrary He says that the altar consecrates the gifts ${ }^{\text {s }}$; He charges the cleansed lepers to go and fulfil the Mosaic ordinance and offer the sacrificial offerings to the priests ${ }^{6}$. And His practice also is

[^154][^155]conformable to His teaching. He comes to Jerusalem regularly to Practice attend the great festivals, where sacrifices formed the most striking $\begin{gathered}\text { of Christ } \\ \text { and } \\ \text { His }\end{gathered}$ part of the ceremonial, and He himself enjoins preparation to be disciples. made for the sacrifice of the Paschal lamb. If He repeats the inspired warning of the older prophets, that mercy is better than sacrifice ${ }^{1}$, this very qualification shows approval of the practice in itself. Nor is His silence less eloquent than His utterances or His actions. Throughout the Gospels there is not one word which can be construed as condeming the sacrificial system or as implying a desire for its cessation until everything is fuililled.
(v) This last contrast refers to the ceremonial law. But not (v) Denial less wide is the divergence on an important point of doctrine. The of the reeresurrection of the body is a fundamental article in the belief of the of the body. early disciples. This was distinctly denied by the Essenes ${ }^{2}$. However gross and sensuous may have been the conceptions of the Pharisees on this point, still they so far agreed with the teaching of Christianity, as against the Essenes, in that the risen man could not, as they held, be pure soul or spirit, but must necessarily be body and soul conjoint.

Thus at whatever point we test the teaching and practice of our Some supLord by the characteristic tenets of Essenism, the theory of affinity in incidences fails. There are indeed several coincidences on which much stress has been laid, but they cannot be placed in the category of distinctive features. They are either exemplifications of a higher morality, which may indeed have been honourably illustrated in the Essenes, but is in no sense confined to them, being the natural outgrowth of the moral sense of mankind whenever circumstances are favourable. Or they are more special, but still independent developments, which owe their similarity to the same influences of climate and soil, though they do not spring from the same root. To this latter class belong such manifestations as are due to the social conditions of the age or nation, whether they result from sympathy with, or from repulsion to, those conditions.

Thus, for instance, much stress has been laid on the aversion to Simplicity war and warlike pursuits, on the simplicity of living, and on the and brofeeling of brotherhood which distinguished Christians and Essenes love. alike. But what is gained by all this? It is quite plain that [^156]Christ would have approved whatever was pure and lovely in the morality of the Essenes, just as He approved whatever was true in the doctrine of the Pharisees, if any occasion had presented itself when His approval was called for. But it is the merest assumption to postulate direct obligation on such grounds. It is said however, that the moral resemblances are more particular than this. There is Prohibition of oaths.

Commanity of goods. for instance Christ's precept 'Swear not at all...but let your communication be Yea, yea, Nay, nay.' Have we not here, it is urged, the 'very counterpart to the Essene prohibition of oaths'? Yet it would surely be quite as reasonable to say that both alike enforce that simplicity and truthfulness in conversation which is its own credential and does not require the support of adjuration, both having the same reason for laying stress on this duty, because the leaders of religious opinion made artificial distinctions between oath and oath, as regards their binding force, and thus sapped the foundations of public and private honesty ${ }^{2}$. And indeed this avoidance of oaths is anything but a special badge of the Essenes. It was inculcated by Pythagoreans, by Stoics, by philosophers and moralists of all schools ${ }^{\text {a }}$. When Josephus and Philo called the attention of Greeks and Romans to this feature in the Essenes, they were simply asking them to admire in these practical philosophers among the 'barbarians' the realisation of an ideal which their own great men had laid down. Even within the circles of Pharisaism language is occasionally heard, which meets the Essene principle half-way ${ }^{4}$.

And again; attention has been called to the community of goods in the infant Church of Christ, as though this were a legacy of Essenism. But here too the reasonable explanation is, that we have [^157]an independent attempt to realise the idea of brotherhood-an attempt which naturally suggested itself without any direct imitation, but which was soon abandoned under the pressure of circumstances. Indeed the communism of the Christians was from the first wholly unike the communism of the Essenes. The surrender of property with the Christians was not a necessary condition of entrance into an order ; it was a purely voluntary act, which might be withheld without foregoing the privileges of the brotherhood ${ }^{1}$. And the common life too was obviousiy different in kind, at once more free and more sociable, unfettered by rigid ordinances, respecting individual liberty, and altogether unlike a monastic rule.

Not less irrelevant is the stress, which has been laid on an- Prohiother point of supposed coincidence in the social doctrines of the two bition of communities. The prohibition of slavery was indeed a highly honourable feature in the Essene order ${ }^{9}$, but it affords no indication of a direct connexion with Christianity. It is true that this social institution of antiquity was not less antagonistic to the spirit of the Gospel, than it was abhorrent to the feelings of the Essene ; and ultimately the influence of Christianity has triumphed over it. But the immediate treatment of the question was altogether different in the two cases. The Essene brothers proscribed slavery wholly; they produced no appreciable results by the proscription. The Christian Apostles, without attempting an immediate and violent revolution in society, proclaimed the great principle that all men are equal in Christ, and left it to work. It did work, like leaven, silently but surely, till the whole lump was leavened. In the matter of slavery the resemblance to the Stoic is much closer than to the Essene ${ }^{3}$. The Stoic however began and ended in barren declamation, and no practical fruits were reaped from his doctrine.

Moreover prominence has been given to the fact that riches are Respect decried, and a preference is given to the poor, in the teaching of our poperty. Lord and His Apostles. Here again, it is urged, we have a distinctly Essene feature. We need not stop to enquire with what limitations this prerogative of poverty, which appears in the Gospels, must be interpreted; but, quite independently of this question, we may [^158]fairly decline to lay any stress on such a coincidence, where all other indications of a direct connexion have failed. The Essenes, pursuing a simple and ascetic life, made it their chief aim to reduce their material wants as far as possible, and in doing so they necessarily exalted poverty. Ascetic philosophers in Greece and Rome had done the same. Christianity was entrusted with the mission of proclaiming the equal rights of all men before God, of setting a truer standard of human worth than the outward conventions of the world, of protesting against the tyranny of the strong and the luxury of the rich, of redressing social inequalities, if not always by a present compensation, at least by a future hope. The needy and oppressed were the special charge of its preachers. It was the characteristic feature of the ' Kingdom of Heaven,' as described by the prophet whose words gave the keynote to the Messianic hopes of the nation, that the glad tidings should be preached to the poor ${ }^{1}$. The exaltation of poverty therefore was an absolute condition of the Gospel.

The preaching of the Kingdom wrongly ascribed to the Essenes,

The Essenes not prophets, but for-tune-tellers.

The mention of the kingdom of heaven leads to the last point on which it will be necessary to touch before leaving this subject. 'The whole ascetic life of the Essenes,' it has been said, 'aimed only at furthering the Kingdom of Heaven and the Coming Age." Thus John the Baptist was the proper representative of this sect. 'From the Essenes went forth the first call that the Messiah must shortly appear, The kingdom of heaven is at hand". 'The announcement of the kingdom of heaven unquestionably went forth from the Essenes ${ }^{\prime s}$. For this confident assertion there is absolutely no foundation in fact; and, as a conjectural hypothesis, the assumption is highly improbable.

As fortune-tellers or soothsayers, the Essenes might be called prophets; but as preachers of righteousness, as heralds of the kingdom, they had no claim to the title. Throughout the notices in Josephus and Philo we cannot trace the faintest indication of Messianic hopes. Nor indeed was their position at all likely to foster such hopes ${ }^{4}$. The Messianic idea was built on a belief in the resur-

[^159]3 ib. p. 470.
${ }^{4}$ Lipsius Schenlel's Bibel-Lexikon ฐ. v. Essäer p. 190, Keim Jesus von Nazara. 1. p. 305. Both these writers express themselves very decidedly against the view maintained by Grätz. 'The Essene art of soothsaying,' writes Lipsius, 'has absolutely nothing to do rection of the body. The Essenes entirely denied this doctrine. The Messianic idea was intimately bound up with the national hopes and sufferings, with the national life, of the Jews. The Essenes had no interest in the Jewish polity; they separated themselves almost They had entirely from public affairs. The deliverance of the individual in the $\frac{\text { Mo vessianic }}{\text { nid }}$ shipwreck of the whole, it has been well said, was the plain watchword of Essenism ${ }^{3}$. How entirely the conception of a Messiah might be obliterated, where Judaism was regarded only from the side of a mystic philosophy, we see from the case of Philo. Throughout the works of this voluminous writer only one or two faint and doubtful allusions to a personal Messiah are found ${ }^{\text {s }}$. The philosophical tenets of the Essenes no doubt differed widely from those of Philo; but in the substitution of the individual and contemplative aspect of religion for the national and practical they were united; and the effect in obscuring the Messianic idea would be the same. When therefore it is said that the prominence given to the proclamation of the Messiah's kingdom is a main link which connects Essenism and Christianity, we may dismiss the statement as a mere hypothesis, unsupported by evidence and improbable in itself.
with the Messianic prophecy.' 'Of all this,' says Keim,' 'there is no trace.'
${ }^{1}$ Keim l.e.
2 How little can be made out of Philo's Messianic atterances by one who is anxious to make the most possible out of them, may be seen from Gfrörer's treatment of the subject, Philo I. p. 486 sq. The treatises which bear on this topic are the de Praemiis et Poenis (r. p. 408, ed. Mangey) and the de Execrationibus (1. p. 429). They deserve to be read, if only for the negative results which they yield.

ADDENDA.

The following collation of the text of the Epistle to the Laodiceans in the La Cava ms (see p. 282) was made by the Rev. J. Wordsworth, Fellow of Brasenose. It reached my hands too late for insertion in its proper place (p. 287 sq ).

Explicit ad colossenses incipit aepistoIa ad landicenses.
I Apostolus] om. Laodicize] laudiciae. 3 orationem omnem] homnem horationem. in operibus eius] om. in diem] in diae. 4 neque destituant ete.] neque destituit vos quormadam vaniloquentia insinuantium hat vos evertant. a me] ha me. 5 ut qui...profectum] hut qui sunt ex me perveniant ad profectum. operum etc.] hoperumque salatis aeternae (om. vitae). 6 quibus] in quibus. . 7 factam etc.] fletum orationibus vestris est. administrante eto. 8 vivere] vere vita. 9 ut] hut. unanimes] hananimes. 10 Ergo etc.] ergo dileotissimi hut audistis praesentiam mei (om. ita) retinete. II operatur in vos] hoperatur in robis. $\quad r_{3}$ reliquom] om. sordidos ete.] sordidos in lucro homines. sint petitiones. $\quad 15$ amabilia] add. sunt. 16 Et quae] quae (om. ot). ig Domini Jhesn] domini nostri jhesu christi. 20 colosensibas et] om. Colosensiom] colossensiam.

The capitula of I Thessalonians follow immediately.
p. 338 sq . The note on $\pi \rho \in \sigma \beta$ úr $\eta$ s.

In an inscription given in Wood's Ephesus, Inscr. vi. r. p. 24, 1. 72, highest value as an illustration of St Paul, since the inseription belongs to the age of Trajan.

INDEX.

Abercius (Ayircius), Bp. of Hierapolis, p. 54 sq.

Acts of the Apostles; passages explained, p. 23 (xiii. 4, xvi. 6); p. 95 (xix. 13, I9) ; p. 304 (xiv. Ix)
ædificatoriz, the sufferings of Christ as, i. 24 灰lfric on the Epistle to Laodiceans, p. 296

Alasanda or Alasadda, p. 390 sq.
Alexander of Tralles on charms, p. 92
Alexander Polyhistor, p. 83, 393
Alexandria, a supposed Buddhist establishment at, p. 390 sq.
Andrew, St, in Asia, p. 45
angelolatry condemned, p. ror, ro3, 118, i. 16 , ii. 10, 15, 18 ; forbidden by the Council of Laodicea, p. 68
angelology of Cerinthas, p. 110; of Essenism, p. 96; of the Jews, ii. 18 angels, orders of, i. 16
Anselm of Laon, p. 295
Antiochus the Great, colony of, in Asia Minor, p. 19 Antiochus Theos refounds Laodicea, p. 5 aorist, epistolary, iv. 8, Ph. II, 19, 21 ; contrasted with perfect, i. r 6
Apamea, p. 19, 20; Jews at, p. 21
Apocalypse, correspondences with St Paul's Epistles to Asia, 41 sq.
apocrypha, use of word, p. 90, ii. 3
Apollinaris, see Claudius Apollinaris
Apollo Archegetes worshipped at Hierapolis, p. 12
Apostolic Fathers, Christology of, p. 124

Apostolic Writings, Christology of, p. 123
Apphia, wife of Philemon, p. 306; the name Phrygian, 306 sq.
Archippus, iv. 17; son of Philemon, 308 ; his office and abode, 309 ; rebuke to, 43
Arian heresy in Hierapolis and Laodivea, p. 64
Arian ase of the expression 'Firstborn of all creation,' i. 15
Aristarchas, iv. 10
Aristion, p. 45
Aristotle, on slavery, p. 313 ; definition of 'knowledge,' ii. 3; of 'wisdom,' i. 9

Armagh, Book of, p. 280, 282, 286 article, omission of the definite, i. 4 asah, a supposed derivation of Essenes, p. 353, 362

Ascents of James, p. 408
Ascetioism among the Jewish sects, $p$. 87; among Colossian heretics, p. 104; Essenes, p. 408; a result of Gnostioism, p. 79
Aseis, a Laodicean title of Zeus, p. 8
Asia, meaning of, p. I9
Asia Minor, geography of, p. 1 sq. ; list of writers on, p. 1 : how divided under the Romans, p. 7 ; a modern hypothesis aboat Christianity in, $p$. 50
Asidæans, p. 355
asya, a supposed derivation of Essene, p. $35^{2}$

Athanasius, on 'Firstborn of sill Greation,' i. I5

Athens，slavery at，p． 320 ；a Buddhist burnt alive at，p． 394
Augustine，on＇Firstborn of all Orea－ tion，＇i．i5；on＇wisdom and know－ ledge，＇ii． 3 ä $\gamma$ cos，i． 2

iv． 12

$\dot{a} \theta \nu \mu \epsilon \mathrm{i} v$, iii． 2 I aloxpodayla，iii， 8 ג̀ к人日apota，iii． 5
ả $\lambda$ as，iv． 5

d $\lambda \lambda \alpha$ ，in apodosis after $\epsilon l$ ，ii． 5
$a_{\mu} \mu \omega_{\mu}{ }_{0 S}$ ，i． 22

$\dot{\alpha} \nu \dot{\delta} \gamma_{k} \lambda \eta \tau o s$, i． 22 $\dot{\alpha} \nu \in \psi(t \delta s, i v .10$

$\dot{\alpha} \nu \theta \rho \omega \pi d \rho \epsilon \sigma \kappa \circ \iota$, iii． 22 dдрта⿱㇒⿻二丿⿴囗⿱一一 àтат680аts，iii． 24
d́ 0 aros，i． 16
dं $\pi \epsilon \kappa \delta \dot{U} \in \sigma \theta a$, ii． 15 $\dot{\alpha} \pi \varepsilon \kappa \delta \nu \sigma \iota s$, ii． 11 d $\pi \in \dot{\chi} \chi \in \nu, \mathrm{Ph} .15$ $\dot{\alpha} \pi \eta \lambda \lambda о \tau \rho \iota \omega \mu \in \nu O$, i． 21 di $\pi$ ккрифая，ii． 3 à $\pi 0 \lambda \dot{c} \tau \rho \omega \sigma \iota s$, i． 14 ä $\pi \delta \times p \eta \sigma t s$, ii． 22 ärreatat，ii． 21

$\dot{\alpha} \rho \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \kappa \epsilon \epsilon a$, i． 10 af $\rho \chi$ ク，applied to Christ，p．41；i．16， 18 avisipecy，i． 6
aữòs धै $\sigma \tau \omega, 1.17$
$\dot{a} \phi \in \in \mathbb{i} \in \epsilon a$ ，ii． 23 $\dot{\alpha} \phi \dot{\eta}$, ii． 19 àxepotointos，ii．II
áxрทптоs，Ph．II
B（Cod．Vaticanus），excellence of，p． 247
Eanaim，p． 369 sq．

Banus，p．369， 400 sq ．
Bardesanes，on Buddhists，p． 393 ；his date，$i b$ ． Barnabas，life of，iv．ro；epistle ascribed to，$i b$ ． basilica，iv． 15
Basilides，p． 265
Baur，p．77，81， 318
Bene－halkeneseth，p． 367
Brahminism，p．393， 394
Buddhism，assumed influence on Es－ senism，p． 390 sq．；supposed esta－ blishment of，in Alexandria，p．390； unknown in the West，p．391 sq．， four steps of，p． 395 sq．
Buddhist at Athens，p． 394
$\beta \dot{\pi \tau \tau \tau \mu \pi, ~} \beta a \pi \tau t \sigma \mu \delta s$ ，ii． 12
$\beta$ ápßapos，iii．in $\beta \lambda a \sigma \phi \eta \mu l a$ ，iii． 8 ßoùneatat，Ph． 13

Cabbala，see Kabbala
Cainites，p． 79
Calvin，iii．8，p． $275,3 \times 8$
Canonical writings and Papias，p． 52
Carpocratians，p．79， 80
Cataphryges，p． $9^{8}$ Cavensis，codex，p．282， 420
celibacy，p．375，376， 4 I 3 gq ． Cerinthus，p． 107 sq ．；Judaism of，p． ro8；Gnosticism of，ib．；cosmogouy of，p．Iog；Christology of，p．III sq．；pleroma of，p． $266_{4}$
chaber，p． $36_{4}$ sq．
Chagigah，on ceremonial purity，p． $3^{6} 5 \mathrm{sq}$ ．
Chalcedon，council of，p． 65
chasha，chashaim，a derivation of Es－ sene，p． 354 chesi，chasyo，a derivation of Essene， p． 353 sq．；connexion with chasid，p． $360^{\circ}$ chasid，a false derivation of Essene，p． 350 sq． Chasidim，p． 355,357 sq．；not a proper name for the Essenes，p． 358 chasin，chosin，a false derivation for Essene，p． $35^{5}$ chaza, chazya, a derivation of Easene; p. 352 sq.

Chonos or Chonex, p. 15, 71
Christ, the Person of, p. 34 ; \$t Paul's doctrine about, p. $4 \mathrm{I}, 115$ sq., i. $15-$ 20, ii. 9-15; the Word Incernate, p. 101, 102; the pleroma in Him, p. 102, i. 29, ii. 9,10 ; life in Him, the remedy against sin, p. 34, i20 sq.; His teaching and practice not Essene, p. 409 sq.
Christianity, not an outgrowth of Es. senism, p. $397 \mathrm{sq} . ;$ in relation to Epictetus, p. 13; to Gnosticism, p. 80 ; to slavery, p. 323 sq.
Christianity in Asia Minor, p. 50
Christianized Essenes, p. 89,90, 372 sq.
Christians of St John, p. 405
Christology of Ep. to Col. p. 101, 122 ; of other Apostolic writings, p. 123; of succeeding ages, p. 124
Chronicon Paschale, p. 48, 6i
Chrysostom, i. 13, ${ }^{15}$, iii. 16, p. 274 , Ph. 15, p. 317
Cibotus, p. 21
Cibyratic convention, p. 7
circular letter-the Ep. to the Ephe-sians-p. 37
Claudius, embassy from Ceylon in the reign of, p. 395
Claudius Apollinaris, the name, p. 57 sq.; his works, p .58 sq .
Clement of Alexandria, p. 79, 98, i. g, ${ }^{15}$, ii. 8 , iii. 5,16, p. 393 sq.
Clement of Rome (87) i. 3; ($58) i. if; (§33) i. I5; (Ep. ii. §9), p. $10_{4}$
Clementine Homilies, p. $37^{2} \mathrm{sq}$., 375 , 406
Clementine Recognitions, p. 404 Clermont, p. 3
collegia, iv. $I_{5}$
Colossm, orthography of, p. 16, i. 2 ; situation, ete., p. I sq.; site, p. I3; ancient greatress and decline, p. I5; a Phrygian city, p. 18 sq.; Jewish colony at, p. ig; not visited by St Paul when the epistle was written, p. 23; Epaphras the evangelist of, p. 29 ; intended visit of Mark to, p.

40 ; visit of St Paul to, p. 4 I ; obseurity of, p. 70; a suffragan see of Laodicea, p. 69; Turkish conquest of, $p$. $7{ }^{1}$
Colossian heresy, natare of, p. 73 sq. 89 , ii. 8 ; writers upon, p. 74 ; had regard to the Person of Christ, p. II2; relation to Gnosticism, p. $9^{8}$; St Paul's answer to, p. 115 sq.
Colossimns, Epistle to, p. 33 ; bearers of, p. 35 ; salutations in, ib.; charge respecting Laodicea, p. $3^{6}$; written by an amanuensis, iv. 18; Christology of, p. 122; style of, p. 125 ; analysis of, p. 126; various readings, see readings colossinus, p. 4 community of goods, p. 416
Concord of the Laodiceans and Epho. sians, etc., p. $3^{\text {I }}$ congregation, the holy, at Jerusalem, p. 367

Constantine, legislation of, p. 327 Constantinople, Council of, p. 65 conventus, p. 7
Corinth, visit of St Paul to, during his residence at Ephesus, p. 30
Corinthiand, First Epistle to ; passages explained: (i. 19) i. 9; (ii. 6, 7) i. 28; (r. g) iv. 16; (vii. 21) p. 324 sq.; (viii. 6) p. 122; (ix. 24) ii. 18; (xi. 万) i. 15 ; (xiii. 3) p. 394 ; (xiii. 12) i. 9 ; (xy. 24) i. i6
Corinthians, Second Epistle to; passages explained: (i. 7) i. 24 ; (iii. 6) i. 12; (iv. 4) i. 15 ; (V. 14,15 ) ii. 20 ; (vi. I) i. 6; (vi. 4, 6) i. II; (viii. 9) i. 6 ; (ix. 12) $i b$; ; (xiii. 5) i. 27

Cornetius a Lapide, p. 233, 276
Creation, Gnostic speculations about, p. 78 sq.; Essene do., p. 90

Cyril of Alexandria, p. 393 кадӹs каட, і. 6, ііі. т kal in both members of a comparison, i. 6

кal ̈̈боц, ii 1
$\kappa \alpha u \nu \delta s$ and $\nu \neq 0 s$, ii. 10 какіа, ііі. 8
картофорєїо追и, і. 6

катєעळ́т катоккеì, i. 19
кєvєц $\beta a \tau \epsilon \dot{\epsilon} \neq t$, ii. 18
$\kappa \in \phi a \lambda \eta$, i. 18
$\kappa \lambda \eta \rho о$ к $^{\prime} \mu \boldsymbol{\mu} \alpha$, iii. 24 к $\lambda \hat{\eta} p o s$, i. 12 $\kappa \lambda \eta r b s$, iii. 12 кocpupla, Ph. 6

котเâr, i. 29 кораگós, p. 4 коббноя, ii. 8 кратеív, ii. 19
кра́тоs, i. II кplyety, ii. 16
ктlacs, i. 15
кúplos, d, (Ohrist) i. ıo; (master), ïi. 24 кขро́тәу, i. 16
характท̆р, і. 15
xapļєのөal, i. 13, iii, 13, Ph. 22
 i. 6

$\chi \rho \eta \sigma \tau$ о́т ${ }^{\prime}$ s, iii. 12

Damascene: see John Dantascene Darmstadiensis Codex, p. 282 dative (of instrument), ii. 7, iii. 16 ;
(of part affected), i. 4
Demas, p. 36, iv. 14, Ph. 24
Denizli, p. 7 ; earthquake at, p. 3 diocese, $p, 7$
Diognetus, Epistle to, i. 18
Dion Chrysostom, p. 8r, 391
Diospolis, an old name of Laodicea, p. 68

Divinity of Christ, p. Ior sq., 116 sq ., i. 15

Docetre, use of pleroma by, p. 271 dualism, p. $78,87,3^{87}$
dyes of Colossw and the neighbourhood, p. 4 סестиатľecy, ii. 15
סérucos, Ph. 1, 10
סeб $\mu \dot{\sigma}, \mathrm{Ph} . ~ I 3$ dod with gen., used of the Logos, p.
122, i. 16,20
סıaкovla, 8ıákovos, iv. 7, 17
$\delta \iota \delta \alpha \sigma \kappa \epsilon \iota \nu$, i. 28
SıoLкךотs, p. 7
$\delta^{\delta} \gamma \mu a$, ii. 14 §оүиatifect, ii. 20

 iv. 12
júvapts, i. 16
סuvapoûy, i. II

Earthquakes in the valley of the Lycus, p. 38
Ebionite Christology of Cerinthus, p. Io
Elchasai, founder of the Mandeans, $p$. 407
Elchasai, Book of, p. 375
elders, primitive, p. 368
Eleazar expels evil spirits, p. 91
English Church on the Epistle to Lanodicea, p. 296
Inglish versions of the Epistle to Laodices, p. 297 sq.
Epaphras, p. 34 ; evangelist of Colossx, p. 29, 3 I ; mission to St Paul, p. 32, iv. 12, Ph. 23

Tpaphroditus, p. 34
Ephesians, Epistle to ; a circular letter, p. 37; readings in, harmonistic with Epist. to Col. p. 246 sq. ; passages explained, i. 18 (i. 23); i. 2 r (i. 16); i. 23 (i. 18 ) ; ii. 3 (iii. 6); ii. 4 (iii. 1) ; ii. 4,5 (ii. 13) ; ii. 12 (i. 2I); ii. 14 (i. 17 ) ; ii. 15 (ii. 14) ; ii. 16 (i. 20) ; ii. 20 (ii. 7); iii. 17 (ii. 17); iii. 21 (i. 26) ; iv. 10, II (i. 17); iv. 18 (i. 2I) ; iv. 19, v. 3 (iii. 5); v. $3^{2}$ (i. 26)

Ephesus, Council of, p. 65
Ephesus, St Paal at, p. 30, 95 ; exorcists at, p. 95
Epictetus, p. 13
Epiphanius, account of Cerinthus, p. 107; on the Nasareans, p. 373 epistolary aorist, Ph, 1I, rg, 2 I epulones of Ephesian Artemis called Essenes, p. 96
Erasmus on the Epistle to Laodicea, p. 299

Essene, meaning of term, p. 94 ; the name, p. 349 sq.; Frankel's theory, p. $35^{6}$ sq.

Essenes, p. 82, ii. 8; list of writers upon, p. 83 ; localities of, p. 93 ; asceticism of, p. 85 ; speculations of, p. 87 ; exelusiveness of, p. 92 ; Josephus and Philo chief authorities upon, p. 370; oath taken by, p. 362 ; their grades, p. 365 ; origin and affinities, p. 355 sq. ; relation to Christianity, p. 397 sq.; to Pharisaism, p. ror, $35^{6}$; to Neopythagoreanism, p. $380 \mathrm{sq} . ;$ to Hemerobaptists, $\mathrm{p} .402 \mathrm{sq} . ;$ to Gnosticism, p. 92 8q.; to Parsism, p. $387 \mathrm{sq} . ;$ to Buddhism, p. 390 sq. ; avoidance of oaths, p. 415 sq .; for-tune-tellers, p. 418 ; silence of New Test.about, p. $39^{8}$; relation to John the Baptist, p. 400 sq.; to James the Lord's brother, p. 407 sq.; Christianized Essenes, p. 89, 90, $37{ }^{2} \mathrm{sq}$.
Essenism, p. 82 ; main features of, p. 83 sq.; compared with Christianity, p. 409 sq.; the sabbath, p. 410 ; lustrations, p. 4II; avoidance of strangers, p. $4{ }^{12}$; asceticism, celibacy, p. 4 I 3 ; aroidance of the Temple, p. 414 ; denial of the resurrection of the body, p. 415; certain supposed coincidences with Christianity, p. 415 sq.
Eusebius, on the earthquakes in the valley of the Lycus, p. 39 ; his mistake respecting some martyrdoms, p. 48 ; silence about quotations from Canonical writings, p. 52; on tracts against Montanism, p. 56; on the Thundering Legion, p. 6r ; on Marcellus, i. 15 evil, Gnostic theories about, p. 78
exorcists at Ephesus, p. 95
Ezra, restoration under, p. 353
éautov̂ and avitov̂, i. 20 ; and $\dot{a} \lambda \lambda \hat{\eta} \lambda \omega \omega$, iii. 13 ${ }^{\epsilon} \boldsymbol{\epsilon} \boldsymbol{\gamma} \boldsymbol{\omega}^{\prime}$, Ph. 19

El $\gamma \in, \mathbf{i} .23$ elкف́n, i. I5, iii. IT etval картофароі́цеעор, i. 6 eis, i. 6, ii. 22, Ph. 6

єккл $\eta \sigma\{\alpha$, iv. 15 єклєкто́s, iii. 12
е $\lambda \lambda 0 \gamma \alpha \bar{\alpha}$, Ph. 18 $\epsilon \lambda \pi i s$, i. 5
\& $\nu$, iv. 12; denoting the sphere, i. 4;

${ }^{\prime \prime} \nu \iota$, iii. II

$\epsilon \xi \alpha \lambda \epsilon i \phi \in \epsilon \nu$, ii. 14
दॄovala, i. I3, 16
${ }^{\boldsymbol{z}}{ }_{\xi} \omega(\mathrm{ol})$, iv. 5
غ́oprvi, ii. 16
 Ph. 6

єтоккодонєгे, іі. 7

épelljerr, iii. 21

${ }^{\ell} \rho \chi \in \sigma \theta a c$, iii. 6 eiá $\rho \in \sigma \tau 0 s$, iii. 20 єи̉סokia, eúסokeìv, i. 19 риттos, iii. 15

ex $x$ ool, i. 2 I F (Codex Augiensis) relation to G, p. 279
Firstborn of all Creation, i. 15
Flaceus, p. 20
Frankel on the Eissenos, p. $35^{5} \mathrm{sq}$.
G (Codex Boernerianus) relation to $F$, p. 279

Galatia, meaning of, in St Paul and St Luke, p. 24
Galatian and Colossian Judsism compared, p. 105, i. 28

Galatians, Epistle to ; passages explained, i. 24 (Gal. ii. 20), i. 28 (iv. 19), ii. 8 (iv. 3)

Galen, ii. 19, 20
Ginsburg (Dr), p. 88, 363 sq., 365, 397, Eq., 4 I3
Gnostic, p. 80 sq.
Gnostic element in Colossian heresy, p. 73 sq.

Gnostic sects, use of pleroma by, p. 264 sq.
Gnosticism, list of writers on, p. 77; definition of, p. $7^{6} \mathrm{sq}$, ; intellectual exclusiveness of, p. 77; speculations of, p. 77 sq. ; practical errors of, 79 sq.; independent of Christianity, p. 80 ; relation to Judaism, p. 8i; to Essenism, p.93; to Colossian heresy, p. 98

Grätz, p. 351, 359, 397, 399, 410, 411
Greece, slavery in, p. 320 Gregory the Great on the Epistle to the Laodiceans, p. 295
gaild of dyers, p. 4
Гар $\mu$ dipas, p. $39^{2}$
$\gamma^{\nu} \omega \bar{\sigma} \tau s$, i. 9, ii. 3 qumgтıкós, p. 81
Haymo of Halberstadt, on the Epistle to the Laodiceang, p. 295 Hebrew slavery, p. 3 r9 sq.
Hebrews, Epistle to the ; passages explained, i. 1 ( Heb. xi. 34); i. 15 (i. $2,3,6)$
Hefele on the date of Claudius Apollinaris, p. 60
Hemerobaptists, p. 402 sq .
Hervey of Dole, on the Epistle to the Laodiceans, p. 295
Hierapolis, p. 2, 9 ; modern name, p.9; physical features of, p. ro; a famous watering place, p. in; the Plutonium at, p. 12; dyes of, p. 4 ; birthplace of Epictetus, p. 13; political relations of, p. 18; attractions for Jews, p. 22; a Christian settlement, p. 45; Philipof Bethsaida at, p. 45 sq.; Council at, p. 59 ; Papias, bishop of, p. 48 sq. ; Abercius, bishop of, p. 54 sq.; Claudins Apollinaris, bishop of, p. 57 sq.
Hilgenfeld, p. 75 ; on the Essenes, p. 390 sq.

James the Lord's brother, p. 407 sq.
Jerome, p. 29; on St Panl's parents, p. 35 ; on the Epistle to the Laodiceans, p. 293 sq.
Jesus Justus, iv. ir Jews, sects of the, p. 82 imperfect, iii. 18
indicative after $\beta \lambda \lambda^{\prime} \pi \epsilon \epsilon \nu \mu^{\prime}$, ii. 8 infinitive of consequence, i. ro, iv. 3,6
John (St) in Asis Minor, p. 4I ; Apocalypse, passages explained, p. 4 I (iii. $\mathrm{I}_{4}-2$ I)
John (St), Gospel, p. 403 (i.8, v. 35) ; SecondEpistle, p. 305;ThirdEpistle, ib.
John the Baptist, not an Essene, p. 400 sq .; disciples of, at Ephesus, p. 402; claimed by Hemerobaptists, p. 403 sq.
John (St), Christians of, p. 405
John Damascene, p. r 5
John of Salisbury on the Epistle to the Laodiceans, p. 296
Josephus on Essenism, p. 369 sq.
Judaism and Gnosticism, p. 8I qua, iv. 16
'Ioûatos, iv. II
l $\sigma$ ór $\eta \mathrm{s}, \mathrm{iv} . \mathrm{I}$ Kabbała, p. 93, i. 16, ii. 8
Lanfrane on the Epistle to the Laodiceans, p. 297
Lrodicea, situation, p. 2; name and history, p. 5 ; condition, p. 6; political rank and relations, p. 7,18 ; religious worship at, p. 8; Council of, p. 66; ecclesiastical status, p. 69; dyes of, p. 4 ; surnamed Trimetaria, p. 18; the vaunt of, p. 44
Laodicea, the letter from, iv. 16, p. 274 sq .
Laodiceans, apocryphal Fpistle to the, p. $28 \mathrm{Iqq}$. ; list of mss of, p. ${ }^{283}$ sq.; Latin text of, p. 287; notes on, p. 28 g sq .; theory of a Greek originel, p. 291; restoration of the Greek, p. 293 ; circulation of, p. 294 sq.; English prologue and versions of, p. $29^{8}$; strictures of Erasmus on, p. 209 ; opinions on the genuineness of, p. 300 Latrocinium, see Robbers' Synod.
Legio Fulminata, p. 6I legislation of Constantine on slavery, p. 327

Logos, the, i. I5
Luke, St, iv, 14 ; his narrative of St Paul's third missionary journey, p. 24 sq. ; makes a distinction between Philip the Apostle and Philip the Evangelist, p. 45, 59
Iukewarmess at Laodicea, p. 42
lustrations of the Essenes, p. 413
Luther's estimate of the Epistle to Philemon, p. 317
Lyeus, district of the ; list of writers on, p. 1 sq.; physical features of, p. 2 sq.; produce of, p. 4 ; subterranean channel of the, p. $1_{4}$; earthquakes in the valley of the, p. $3^{8} \mathrm{sq}$.
Lyeus, churches of the, p. i sq.; evengelised by Epaphras, p. 29 sq.; ecclesiastical status of, p. 69
Maodıcla, iv. 13

Magic, forbidden by Cotunoil of Laodicea, p. 69; among the Essenes, p. $90 \mathrm{sq} ., 377 \mathrm{sq}$.
magical books at Ephestus, p. 95
Mandeans, p. 405
Marcosians, p. 269
Mark (St) iv. 10 ; visits Colossm, p. 40
Matthew (St) Gospel of, accepted by Cerinthus and the Ebionites, p. 108 Megasthenes, p. 392 sq .
monasticism of the Essenes and Buddhists, p. 395
Monoimus, the Arabian, p. 273
Montanism, Clandius Apollinaris on, p. 59; Phrygian origin of, p. 98 morning bathers, p. 368 sq., 402 sq .
Muratorian Fragment on the Epistle to the Laodiceans, p. 292

макроөид\{а, i. і, ііі. 12 $\mu \epsilon \rho i s$, i. 12

$\mu о \mu \phi \dot{\phi}$, iii. 13

$\mu \nu \sigma \tau \eta \eta_{\rho} \sigma \nu$, i. $2 \sigma$ Namssenes, p. 27 I
Nasareans, Nasoreans, p. 372, 375,405
Neander on Cerinthus, p. 108
Neopythagoreanism and Essenism, p. 380 sq .
New Testament, relation of, to the Old Testament, p. 118
Nieæa, Bishops of Hierapolis and Laodicea at the Council of, p. 65
Nicetas Choniates, p. 7r
Nicolans of Damascus, p. 394 nominative with definite article for vocative, iii. I8
Novatianism in Phrygia, p. 98 Nymphas, iv. 15, p. $3{ }^{\text {I }}$ ptos, iii. 10

you $\theta \in \varepsilon \in \mathrm{eq}$, i. 28
ग仑̂v with acrist, i. 21
Onesimus, p. 3ir, Ph. 10; at Rome,
p. 33; encounters St Paul, p. 312;
returns to Philemon, p. 35, 313 sq.; legendary history of, p. $3{ }^{16}$ Ophites, p. 81, 98, 27 I otкоуоніа, i. 25
otkos, тìv кat' otkov, iv. I5

$\delta \rho \gamma \dot{\eta}$, iii. 8
8̈ $\sigma \tau t s$, iii. 5, iv. 11
$\delta \phi \theta a \lambda \mu \sigma \delta o v \lambda \in l a$, iii. 23 $\dot{\psi} \delta \dot{\eta}$, iii. $\mathrm{I} \sigma$ ws, Ph. 14, 16

Pantænus in India, p. 392
Papias, p. 47 ; writings of, $i b$.; life and teaching of, p. 48 ; account of, given by Eusebius, p. 49; traditions collected by, p. 5 I sq.; references to the Canonical writings, p. 5 r sq.;
silence of Eusebins, p. 52; views inferred from his associates, p. 53 Parsism, resemblances to, in Essenism, p. 88,387 sq.; spread by the destruction of the Persian empire, p. $3^{88}$; influence of, p. $3^{89}$ participle used for imperative, iii. 16
Paschal controversy, p. 59, 63
Paul (St) visits Phrygia on his second missionary journey, p. 23; had not visited Colossex when he wrote, p. 23 sq.; visits Phrygia on his third journey, p. 24; silence about personal relations with Colossx, p. 28 ; at Ephesus, p. 30, 95 sq. ; at Rome, p. $3^{2}$; mission of Epaphras to, ib.; meets with Onesimus, p. 33, 312; despatches three letters, p. 33; visits Colossæ, P. 41 ; his plans after his release, Ph. 22; uses an amanuensis, iv. 18 ; his signeture, iv. 18, Pl . 19 ; coincidences with words of our Lord, ii. 22; his teaching on the universelity of the Gospel, p. 99; on the kingdom of Christ, i. 13 sq.; on the orders of angels, i. 16 sq .; on philosophy, ii. 8; on the Incarnation, ii. 9 ; on the abolition of distinctions, iii. 11; on slavery, iii. 22 sq., p. 323 sq.; his cosmogomy and theology, p. ior sq.; his answer to the Colossian heresy, p. 115 sq .; his Christology, p. 122, i. I5 sq.; his relations with Philemon, p. 304 sq .; connects baptism and death, ii. in, 20, iii. 3 ; makes use of metaphors from the mysteries, i. 26, 28 ; from the stadium, ii. 18 , iii. 14 ; his rapid change of metaphor, ii. 7
Paul (St) Epistles of, correspondences with the Apocalypse-on the Person of Christ, p. 4r; warning against lukewarmness, p. 42 ; against pride of wealth, p. 43
Paul (St) apocryphal Epistle of, to the Laodiceans, p. 281 sq.
Pedanius Seoundus, exeoution of his slaves, p. 322 Person of Christ, St Pand and St John on, p. $4^{1}$ sq. ; St Paul's answer to the Colossian heresy, p. 115 sq., $\mathbf{i}$ 15 sq .
personal pronoun ased for reflexive, i. 20, 22

Peter (St) and the Charch in Asia Minor, p. 41 petrifying stream at Colossw, p. 15
Pharisees, p. 82; reletion to Essenes, p. $82,35^{6}$ sq., 376,378

Philemon, p. 3I, 370 , sq.; legendary history of, p. 305 ; his wife, p. 306 ; his son, p. 308
Philemon, Epistle to; introduction to, p. 303 ; character of, p. 304 ; analysis of, p. $3^{1} 4$ sq.; different estimates of, p. 316 sq. ; compared with a letter of Pliny, p. 3 r8
Philip the Apostle, in Asia, p. 45 sq.; confused with Philip the Evangelist, p. 45

Philippopolis, synod of, p. 64
Philo, on the Essenes, p. 350, 380 ; his use of Logos, i. 15
Phrygia, p. 17 sq.; meaning of the phrase in St Luke, p. 23; religious tendencies of, p. 97; see Paul (St)
Pistis Sophia, p. 273
Pliny the elder, his account of the Essenes, p. 83
Pliny the younger, a letter of, p. $3^{18}$ sq.
pleroma, p. 257 sq.
Plutonium, at Fierapolis, p. 12
Polycarp, martyrdom of, p. 49 poverty, respect paid to, by Essenes and by Christ, p. 417 sq.
Pretorius on the Epistle to the Laodiceans, p. 300
Pythagoreanism and Essenism, p. 380 sq.; disappearance of, p. 383 $\pi \dot{d} \theta_{o s, ~ i i i . ~}^{5}$ таракалеip, іi. 2
тарала $\beta$ а́veı $\nu$, ii. 6 rар $\alpha \pi \tau \omega \mu a$, ii. 13 тapê̂vau els, i. 6
$\pi \alpha \rho \epsilon \chi \epsilon \sigma \theta a l$, iv. $\mathbf{I}$ тартүopla, iv. II
$\pi a \rho \rho \eta \sigma i \alpha, \epsilon \nu \pi \alpha \rho \rho \eta \sigma i q$, ii. ${ }_{15}, \mathrm{Ph} .8$
 i. 15 ; $\tau$ d $\pi \dot{d} p \tau a$, i. 16
 i. 2
$\pi a \dot{\varepsilon} \in \sigma \theta a c, \mathrm{Ph} .7$
$\pi$ tiavoloyla, ii. 4
$\pi$ ткра $\frac{1 \nu \in \sigma \theta a t, \text { iii. } 19}{}$

$\pi \lambda \epsilon \circ \mathrm{e} \xi \mathrm{la}$, iii. 5
$\pi \lambda \eta \rho о ф \circ \rho \in \bar{\imath}$, iv. 12
$\pi \lambda \eta \rho o \phi \quad \rho[\alpha$, ii. $z$
$\pi \lambda \eta \rho o u ̂$, i. 25, iv. 17
$\pi \lambda \eta$ ршја, i. 19, ii. 9, p. 257 sq.
$\pi \lambda \eta \sigma \mu .0 \nu \eta$, ii. 23
$\pi \lambda_{\text {ouvtos, }}$ i. 27 торрє $L a$, iii. 5
$\pi$ paừrทs, iii. 12
$\pi \rho \epsilon \sigma \beta \epsilon \omega \tau \eta \eta_{s}, \pi \rho \epsilon \sigma \beta \cup \dot{\tau} \eta \bar{\eta}, \mathrm{Ph} .8$ $\pi \rho \delta \pi \alpha \nu \tau \omega \nu$, i. 17 троакойєt, i. 5
$\pi \rho o s$, ii. ${ }^{23}$, Ph. 5 тробкартереїбөat, iv. 2
$\pi р о \sigma \omega \pi о \lambda \eta \mu \psi i a$, iii. 25
$\pi р \omega \tau \delta \tau о к а \varsigma$, i. 15,18
$\phi \lambda \lambda \sigma \sigma \Delta \phi$ la, ii. 8
$\phi \theta 0 \rho d$, ii. 22 $\phi \rho \partial \nu \eta \sigma t s$, i. 9 филактйрцор, p. 69
$\psi a \lambda \mu b s$, iii. 16
Quartodeciman controversy, p. 59, 63
Quinisextine Council, p. 68
Readings, harmonized with corresponding passages in the Epistle to the Ephesians, p. 246 (iii. 6); p. 247 (ii. 21, $\mathrm{\nabla}$. 19) readings, various, p. 249 (i. 3); p. 250 (i. 4 , i. 7); p. 251 (i. 12, i. 14, i. 22); p. 252 (ii. 2); p. 253 (ii. 16); p. 254 (ii. 18, ii. 23); p. 255 (iv. 8); p. 256 (iv. 15)

Renan, on the meaning of Galatia in St Paul and St Luke, p. 25; on the Epistle to Philemon, p. 318 resurrection of the body, p. 88, 415 Revelation; see Apocalypse Robbers' Synod, p. 65
Roman slavery, p. $3^{2 I}$

Rome, Onesimus at, p. 312; St Paul at, p. 32
pısoûv, ii. 7
Sabbath, obsorvance of, by Essenes, p. 84, 4 ro Sabmans, p. 405 sacrifices prohibited by Essenes, p. 8g, 371
Sadduceeism, p. 82
Sagaris, bishop of Laodicea, p. 63
Samanæi, p. 392 sq.
Sampswans, p. 374
Sarmanar, p. $39^{2}$ eq.
satisfactorim, safferings of Christ, regarded as, i. 25
Secundus, see Pedanius Secundus
Seven churches, literature relating to, p. I

Sibylline Oracle, p. 96 silence of Eusehius on canonical books, p. $52 \mathrm{sq}$. ; of the New Testament about tha Essenes, p. 398 sleve martyrs, p. 326 slavery, Hebrew, p. 319; Greek, p. 320;
Roman, p. 321 ; St Paul's treatment of, p. $3^{23}$ sq.; attitude of Christianity towards, p. 325 sq ; prohibited by Essones, p. 417 ; legislation of Constantine, p. $3^{2} 7$; of Justinian, p. $3^{28}$; abolition of, $i b$.

Socrates on Novatianism in Phrygia, p. $9^{8}$

Sophia of Valentinus, p. 267; Sophia Achamoth, p. 268 stadium, metaphor from the, ii. 18
Stapleton on the Epistle to the Laodiceans, p. 300 Strabo on Buddhism, p. 39r sq.
sunworship, p. 87,374 sq., 382,387
$\sigma \alpha \beta \beta a \tau \alpha$, i䒑. 16

इкígns, iii. 11
бофia, i. 9,28 , ii. 3, iii. 16
$\sigma \pi \lambda d \gamma \chi^{\nu a}$ ( ( $\tau \grave{\alpha}$ ); iï. 12, Ph. 7, 12
$\sigma \tau \epsilon \rho \epsilon \omega \mu a$, ii. 5
$\sigma \tau 01 \chi$ ヒía ( $\tau \grave{\alpha}$ ), ii. 8
$\sigma \nu \lambda a \gamma \omega \gamma \in i \hat{p}$, ii. 8
$\sigma u \mu \beta 1 \beta$ jea, ii. 2, 19

बvvaıरuid $\lambda \omega \pi o s$, iv. io $\sigma \dot{v} \delta \varepsilon \sigma \mu o s$, ii. 19, iii. 14 бüyסounos, i. 7 , iv. 7
ouyears, i. 9 , ii. 2

$\sigma \omega \mu a \tau \iota \kappa \overline{\mathrm{\omega}}, \mathrm{ii}, 9$
Tracitus on the earthquake at Laodioen, p. 39

Talmud, supposed etymologies of Essene in, p. 352 sq., 357 sq .; supposed allusions to the Essenes, p. 364 sq.
Testaments, Old and New, p. 119
Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs, on the orders of angels, i. 16 theanthropism of the New Testament, p. 119 thundering legion, p. 61
Thyatira, dyes of, p. 4
Timotheus, his position in these epistles, i. I, Ph. r; 'the brother,' i. r Tivoli compared with the valley of the Lycus, p. 3 travertine deposits in the valley of the Lycus, p. 3
Trimetaria, a surname of Laodicea, p. 18
Tychicus, iv. 7, p. 35, 3r4
талєєцофробйдク, iii. 12

$\tau \epsilon \lambda \in \cos$, i. 28 tis (indef.), St Paul's use of, ii. 8
тоюข̂тos แّv, Ph. 9, 12

$\theta \in \mu \in \lambda \iota o ̂ ̃$, i. 23
$\theta \epsilon \dot{\partial} \tau \eta s, \tau \dot{\partial} \theta \epsilon \grave{\imath} \nu$, ii. 9
$\theta \iota \gamma \times a ́ p e l \nu$, ii. 21

$\theta_{\rho}$ а $\alpha \beta$ вevect, ii. 15
$\theta \nu \mu$ ós, iii. 8
Oípa toû $\mathrm{\lambda ó}_{\text {órov, iv. }} 3$ $\ddot{v}_{\mu} \mu \mathrm{pos}$, iii. 16 ítevadtlas, ii. If $_{4}$

vं $\sigma \in \notin \eta \mu a$, i. 24, p. 269 sq.
Valentinianism, different forms of, p. 266 sq.
Valentinians accept St Paul and St John, p. 270 Valentinus, use of pleroma by, p. 265 vathikin, p. 368.
versions of the Epistle to the. Laodiceans, Latin, p. 29r; Bohemian, German, and English, p. 297 sq.

Word, the, p. ror, see Logos, Christ
Wycliffe, on the apoeryphal Epistle to the Laodiceans, p. 297

Yavana or Yona, p. 390
Zeller on Essenism, p. 380 sq.
Zend Avesta, p. 387
Zoroastrianism and Essenism, p. 387 sq.

WORKS BY THE ## REV. J. B. LIGHTF00T, D.D.

ST PAUL'S EPISTLE TO THE GALATIANS.

A Revised Text, with Introduction, Notes, and Dissertations. Fifth Edition, revised. 8vo. $12 s$.

ST PAUL'S EPISTLE TO THE PHILIPPIANS.

A Revised Text, with Introduction, Notes, and Dissertations. Fourth Edition, revised. 8vo. 12s.

ST CLEMENT OF ROME. THE TWO EPISTLES TO THE CORINTHIANS. A Revised Text, with Introduction and Notes. 8vo. 88. 6d.

ST CLEMENT OF ROME
An Appendix, containing the newly-recovered portions. With Introductions, Notes, and Translation of the whole. 8vo. 8s. $6 d$.

ON A FRESH REVISION OF THE ENGLISH NEW TESTAMENT. Second Edition, revised. Crown 8 vo . $6 s$.

[^0]:    ${ }^{1}$ Strabo xii. 8 (p. 578 ) тò та入úт $\rho \eta \tau о \nu$

     Lyd. p. 349 (ed. Bonn.) тuноо́тероу

    2 Thus Pococke (p.7I) in r 745 writes

[^1]:    ${ }^{1}$ See the passage of Strabo quoted p. 4, note 5. The place gives its name to the colour, and not conversely, es stated in Blakesley's Herod. vii. ri3. See also Plin. N. H. xxi. 9 § 27 , 'In vepribus naseitur cyclaminum ... flos ejus colossinus in coronas admittitur,' a passage which assists in determining the colorr.
    ${ }^{2}$ till Aúкч, Boeckh Gorp. Inscr. no. 3938, Ptol. Geogr. 7.2 2, Tab. Peat. 'landicium pilycum '; $\pi \rho d s$ [ $\tau \hat{\psi}]$ ] $\Lambda \dot{\prime} \kappa \varphi$, Eckhel Num. Vet. int. p. 166, Strabo 1. C., Boeckh C.I. $588 \mathrm{r}, 5893$; $\pi \rho \dot{\partial} s$ Aúxov, Boeckh $6_{47} 8$. A citizen was styled 12§ i16; C.I.L. VI. 374; comp. тepl т $\delta \nu$ иúkor Appian. Mithr. 20.
    ${ }^{8}$ Plin. N. H. т. 29.
    ${ }^{4}$ Steph. Byz. в. v., who quotes the oracle in obedience to which ( $\dot{\omega} \boldsymbol{s} \boldsymbol{e} \kappa \in \lambda \in \boldsymbol{\lambda}$ $\sigma e \mathbf{Z}_{\varepsilon} \dot{s} \boldsymbol{i} \psi \psi(\beta \rho \varepsilon \mu \epsilon \tau \eta s)$ it was founded.
    ${ }^{5}$ For descriptions of Laodicea see Smith p. 250 sq., Pococke p. 7 II sq., Chandlex p. 224 sq., Arundell Seven

[^2]:    ${ }^{1}$ On its ecelesiastical title of metropolis, see below, p. 69.

    ${ }^{3}$ Boeckh Corp. Inscr. 3909, 'A $\sigma$ î̀os

[^3]:    1 After the year B. C. 49 they seem to have been permanently attached to 'Asia': before that time they are bandied about between Asia and Cilicia. These alternations are traced by Bergmann de Asia provincia (Berlin, 1846) and in Philologus II. $4(1847)$ p. 641 sq. See Becker and Marquardt Riom. Alterth. III. 工. p. 130 sq. Laodicea is assigned to 'Asia' in Boeckh Corp. Inser. $6512,654 \mathrm{~L}, 6626$.

    The name 'Asia' will be used throughout this chapter in its political sense, as applying to the Roman prorince.
    ${ }^{2}$ Cic. ad Fam. xiii. 67 'ex provincia mea Giliciensi, oni scis rpeis סtouкйбєts Asiaticas [i. e. Oibyraticam, Apamensem, Synnadensem] attributas fuisse'; ad Att. V. 2I 'mea expectatio Asim nostrarum diœcesium" and "in hac mea Asia.' See also above, p. 7, notes 2,3 .
    ${ }^{\text {s }}$ Hierooles Symecd. p. 664 sq. Wessel.): see below, p. 69.

    4 Joseph. Antiq. xii. 3, 4.

[^4]:     тuìो $\chi$ '由́pap, the correct reading. For this use of $\Phi p$ orfay as an adjective
     Joh: iii. 22 els т $\grave{\eta} \mu$ 'Loujalay $\gamma$ भิp, Luko

[^5]:    iii. x tins 'Troupalas kal Tpaxcuítedos סiav (the correct reading).
    ${ }^{2}$ Seo Galatians, p. 18 sq., 22.

[^6]:    1 Acts xviii. 23.
    ${ }^{2}$ M. Renan (Saint Paul pp. 51 sq., 126,313) maintains that the Gelatia of [^7]:     ${ }^{2} \kappa \kappa \lambda \eta \sigma i a c ~ \tau \hat{\eta} s$ 'A ${ }^{\prime}$ ias. In accordance with these facts it should benoticed that St Paul himself alluding to this period speaks of 'Asia,' as the scene of his ministry ( 2 Oor. i. 8, Rom. xvi. 5).

    ${ }^{2}$ Acts xix. 1o 'disputing daily in the Sehool of Tyrannus; and this con. tinued for two years, so that all they which dwelt in Asia, etc.'
     Nold, Eickhel III. p. 165 , Mionnet ir.

[^8]:    ${ }^{1}$ Acts xx .16 , 17.
    ${ }^{2}$ See Philipnians p. 6 sq .
    ${ }^{3}$ Col. iv. ro, ir. See Philippians
    p. 17 sq. $\quad$ i. $4,8$.

[^9]:    1 iv. 12, 13.
    ${ }^{2}$ Tac. Ann. xv. 44.
     $\kappa . \boldsymbol{r} \boldsymbol{\lambda}$.

    COL.

[^10]:    ${ }^{1}$ i. I-20, ii. 9, iii. 4. The two threads ars elosely interwoven in St Paul's refutation, as these references will show. The connexion of the two errors, as arising from the same false principle, will be considered more in detail in the next chapter.
    ${ }^{2}$ i. 7, iv. 12 .
    ${ }^{3}$ For the reasons why Epaphras cannot be identified with Epaphroditus; who is mentioned in the Philippian letter, see Philippians p. 6s, note 4. The later tradition, which makes him bishop of Colosse, is doubtless an infarence from St Paul's language and has no independent value. The further statement of the martyrologies, that he suffered martyrdom for his flock, can hardly be held to deserve any higher oredit. His day in the rath of July in the Western Calendar. His body is said to lie in the Church of S. Maria Maggiore at Rome.

[^11]:    ${ }^{1}$ Col. iv. $10-14$.
    ${ }^{3}$ Pliniem. in, 16.
    ${ }^{2}$ iv. 15-17.
    ${ }^{4}$ ver. 19.

[^12]:    ${ }^{2}$ Fv. 23, 24-
    2 ver. 22.
    ${ }^{2}$ See the introduction to the epistle.

    - Ephes. 7i. 2I, 23.

[^13]:    ${ }^{5}$ See Philippians p. 30 sq.; where reasong are given for placing the Philippian Epistle at an earlier, and the others at a later stage in the Apostle's oaptivity.

[^14]:    1 Col. i. $15-18$.
    ${ }^{2}$ Rev. iii. 14. It should be cbserved that this designation of our
     Which so closely resembles the langaage of the Colossian Epistle, does not occur in the messages to the other six Churches, nor do we there find anything resembling it.
    ${ }^{3}$ Col. iii. r.
     $\kappa \dot{\alpha} \theta \iota \sigma \epsilon \nu \kappa . \tau$.

[^15]:    ${ }^{1}$ Rev. iii. 19. If the common vies, that by the angel of the Church its chief pastor is meant, were correct, and if Archippus (as is very probable) had been living when StJohn wrote, the coincidence would be still more striking; see Trench's Epistles to the Seven Churches in Asia p. I8o. But for reasons given elsewhere (Philippians p. 199 sq .), this [^16]:    ${ }^{1}$ Ganon Murator. fol. 1, 1. 14 (p. 17, ed. Tregelles), Cureton's Ancient $S y$ riac Documents pp. 32, 34. Comp. Papias in Euseb. H. E. iii. 39.

    ${ }^{2}$ Papias in Euseb. H. E. iii. 39.
    ${ }^{3}$ Polycrates in Euseb. H. E. iii. 3r, кal dióo avyatêpes aủтoî үеүпракиîal danghter the statement of Clement of Alexandria must refer, though by a common looseness of expression he uses the plural number (Euseb. H. E.

     other hand in the Dialogue between Gaius and Proelus, Philip the Evangelist was represented as residing at Hierapolis (Euseb. H. E. iii. 35) $\mu \in \tau \underset{\alpha}{ }$ of the four daughters prophesying iden-

[^17]:    1 See above p. 45, note 3 .
    ${ }^{2}$ Euseb. EI. E. iii. 39. This is the general reference for all those partionlars respecting Papias which are derived from Eusebius.
    ${ }^{3}$ See Westeott, Canon p. 63. On the opinions of Papias and on tho nature of his work, I may perhaps be allowed to refer to articles in the Contemporary Review Aug. 1867, Aug. and Sept. 1875, where I have investigated the notices of this father. The object of Papias' work was not to construct a Gospel narrative, but to interpret and illustrate those already existing. I ought to add that on two minor points, the martyrdom of Papias and the identity of Philip with the Evangelist, I have been led to modify my views since the first article was written.

[^18]:

     aútòv reүovvêà iotopeî, ral aû $\pi \dot{d} \lambda \iota \nu$

     information respecting the raising of the dead man might have come from the daughters of Philip, as the context seems certainly to imply, while yet the event happened in Papias' own timo ( $k a \tau^{\prime}$ aut ${ }^{2} \delta \nu$ ). It will be remembered that even Ireneus mentions similar miracles as occurring in his own age (Har. ii. 32. 4). Eusebius does not say that the miraculous preservation of Justus Barsabas also occurred in the time of Papias.

[^19]:    2 Iran. v. 33. 3. 4.
    ${ }^{3}$ See on this subject Westeott Canon

[^20]:    p. 64 sq.; Contemporary Review, August and September, 1875 .

    1 The theory of the Tübingen school may be studied in Baur's Christliche Kirche der drei ersten Jahrhunderte

[^21]:    ${ }^{1}$ § 3.

     $\sigma \tau 0 \lambda \hat{7} s$. This is all that Eusebias says with reference to Polyearp's knowledge of the Canonical writings. It so happens that in an earlier passage (iii. 36) he has given an extract from [^22]:    Polycarp, in which St Paul's neme is mentioned; but the quatation is brought to illustrate the life of Ignatius, and the mention of the Apostle there is purely accidental.

     тท̂s Пétpou тротépas.

[^23]:    ${ }^{1}$ It is necessary to press this argument, because though it has never been answered and (so far as I can see) is quite unanswerable, yet thoughtful men, who have no sympathy with the Tübingen views of early Christian his. tory, still continue to argue from the silence of Eusebius, as though it had some real significance. To illustrate the omissions of Eusebius I have given only the instances of Polycarp and Irenæus, because they are historically connected with Papias; but his silence

[^24]:    selves, contain an epitaph which has the ring of genuineness and which seems to have suggested the story to the pious forger who invented the Acts. This very interesting memorial is given and discussed at length by Pitra, Spicil. Solesm.11r. p. 532 sq. Itis inscribed by one Abercins of Hierapolis on his tomb, which he erected during his life-time. He deelares himself a disciple of the good shepherd, who

[^25]:    ${ }^{1}$ See below, p. 63.
    The main point at issuc was whether the exact day of the month should be observed, as the Quartodecimans maintained, irrespective of the day of the week. The fragments of Apollinaris (preserved in the Chron. Pasch. p. I3) relate to a discrepanay which some had found in the accounts of St Matthew and St John.
    ${ }^{3}$ Eusebius represents the dioceses of 'Asia' and the neighbourhood, as absolutely manimous; H.E. V. 23 тifs 'Aбtas dadarचs al $\pi$ apoukial, v. 24 тfis 'A $\sigma l a s ~ \pi a ́ \sigma \eta s ~ a ̈ \mu a ~ \tau \alpha i ̂ s ~ j ~ j \mu b p o t s ~ e ̀ к \kappa \lambda \eta \sigma l a s s ~$ Tds rapouklas. 'Asia' includes all this district, as appears from Polyerates, $i b$.

[^26]:    ${ }^{4}$ See Polycrates of Ephesus in Euseb. H.E. v. ${ }^{24}$.
    ${ }^{5}$ In Euseb. H. E. v. 19.
    ${ }^{6}$ Eusebius (H. E. iv. 27) at the close of his list of the works of $\Delta$ pollinaris gives kal á $\mu \in \tau \dot{a}$ râ̂va

     Montanus and his followers had already begun when Apollinaris wrote, but Montanism assumed a new phase shortiy after.

[^27]:    ${ }^{1}$ Euseb. H. E. iv. 26, 27. He referred in this Apology to the incident of the so-called Thundering Legion, which happened A. D. r74; and as reported by Eusebius (H. E. v. 5), he stated that the legion was thus named by the emperor in commemoration of this miraculous thunderstorm. As a contemporary however, he must probably have known that the title Legio Fulminata existed long before; and we may conjecture thas he used some ambiguous expression implying that it was fitly so named (e.g. éncidimop rŷs ovvruxlas), which Eusebins and later writers misunderstood; just as Eusebius himself (v. 24) speaks of Irenæus as фєрừv the words used by Eusebius, olxelap $\tau \hat{\omega}$ трoompoplav, we may suspect that ol-pression borrowed from Apollinaris himself, while $\pi \rho d s$ toú $\beta a \sigma c \lambda \epsilon \epsilon s \epsilon l \lambda \eta$ фtral gives Easebias' own erroneous [^28]:    fane literature.

    ${ }^{2}$ Photius l.c., a $\xi 66$ रoyos $\delta \varepsilon \dot{\delta} \dot{o}$ dimp

    ${ }^{3}$ Enseb. H. E. iv. 21, Jerome L. e., Theodoret. 1 c., Socr, H.E. $\mathbf{\text { jii. } 7 .}$

[^29]:    ${ }^{1}$ Iren. in Euseb. H. E. т. 24 方 $\delta$ oapurla $\tau \hat{\eta} \mathrm{s}$ vnotelas (the fast which pre-

    ${ }^{2}$ Melito in Euseb. H.E.iv. 26 Ent

     $\pi \in \rho l$ то̂́ $\pi \bar{c} \sigma \chi a \quad$ द́ $\mu \pi \epsilon \sigma \delta \nu \tau o s$ катà каı $\rho \grave{\nu}$
     (i.e. Melito's own treatise on the Paschal festival).
    ${ }^{3}$ The proconsulate of Parlius, under whom this martyrdom took place, is dated by Borghesi (Euvres virI. p. 507) somewhere between A.D. 163-168; by Waddington (Fastes des Provinces Asiatiques p. 73I, in Le Bas and Waddington Voyage Archéologique etc.) probably
    A.D. $6_{4}-166$. This resta on the assumption that the Servillius Paullus here named mast be identified with $L$. Sergius Paullus of the inseriptions. The name Sergius is elsewhere confounded with Servius (Servillius) (see Borghesi rv. p. 493, viII. p. 504, Mommsen Röm. Forsch. I. p. 8, Ephem Epigr. II. p. 338.). The mistake must have been introduced very early into the text of Eusebius. All the Greek mss have Servillius (Servilias), and so it is given in the Syriac Version. Ruffinus however writes it correctly Sergius.

    4 Besides Melito (l. o.), Polycrates of Ephesus refers to him with respect;

[^30]:    ${ }^{1}$ Labb. Conc. II. ${ }_{57}$, 62, ed. Coleti; $^{2}$, Cowper's Syriac Miscellanies p. 11, 28. It is remarkable that after Papias all the early bishops of Hierspolis of whom we hear have Roman names; Avircius Marcellus (?), Claudias Apollinaris, Flaccus, Lacius, Venantius.

[^31]:    ${ }^{2}$ Labb. Canc. If. 57, 62; Cowper's Syriac Miscellanies pp. ri, 28, 34. He had also been present at the Synod of Anoyra held about A.D. $3 \mathrm{I}_{4}$ (see Galatians p. 34) ; ib. p. 41.
    ${ }^{3}$ Labb. Conc. II. 136.
    ${ }^{4} i$. 744.

[^32]:    ${ }^{1}$ Athanas. ad Epise. Agypt. 8 (Op. 1. p. 219), Hist. Arian. ad Mon. 74 (ib. p. 307).
    ${ }^{2}$ Labb. Cone. II. 744.
    ${ }^{2}$ Cowper's Syriac Miscell. p. 39.
    ${ }^{4}$ Labb. Conc. III. 1085, 1222, Mans. Conc. Ev. 1357. The name of this bishop of Hierapolis is variously written, but Venantius seems to be the true orthography. For some unezplained reason, though present in person, he signs by deputy. He had before subscribed the protest to Cyril against commencing the proceedings before the arrival of John of Antioch (Mans. Conc. v. $^{767}$ ), and perhaps his acquiescence in the decisions of the Council was not very hearty.
    ${ }^{6}$ Labb. Conc. 18. 892, 925, 928, 1107, 1170, 1171, 1185. In the Acts of this heretical comncil, as occasion.

[^33]:    ${ }^{2}$ By the Quinisextine Council (A.d. 692) in the East (Labb. Conc. vil. I345), and by the Synod of Aix-laChapelle (1.D. 789) in the West (Conc. ix. ro sq.).

    * Theodoret about a century after the Laodicean Council, commenting on Col ii. I8, states that this disease
     ${ }^{4}$ long remained in Phrygia and Pi. sidia.' 'For this reason also,' he adds, 'a synod convened in Laodicea of Phrygia forbad by a decree the offering prayer to angels; and even to the present time oratories of the holy Michacl may be seen among them and their naighbours.' See also below p. 7o, note 3. A curious inscription, found in the theatre

[^34]:    at Miletus (Boeckh C. I. 2895), illus. trates this tendency. It is written in seven columas, each having a different planetary symbol, and a dif. ferent permutation of the vowels with THN . TOAIN . MIAHCILON . KAI . mantac • toyc . katoikoyntac, while at the common base is written apXaГГ入ic. MIAhCION . KAI . TANTEC . OI. Kat . . . Boeakh writes, 'Etsi hic titulus Gnosticorum et Busilidianorum commentis prorsus congraus est, ta. men potuit ab ethnicis Milesiis scrip. tus esse ; quare nolui eum inter Christianos rejicere, quum presertim publivæ Milesiorum supersitionis docr-

[^35]:    ${ }^{2}$ Col. ii. 16, 17, 2 sq .
    © ii. If .
    3 ii. 4, 8, $88,23$.

[^36]:    ${ }^{1}$ See below, p. 83 sq.
    ${ }^{2}$ See below, p. 107 eq.
    ${ }^{8}$ Col.ii. 8-23. Hilgenfeld (Der Gnos. ticismus etc. p. 250 sq .) contends strenuously for the separation of the two

[^37]:    elements. He argues that 'these two tendencies are related to one another as fire and water, and nothing stands in the way of allowing the axthor after the first side-glance at the Gnosties to [^38]:    ${ }^{1}$ The chief anthorities for the history of Gnosticism are Neander Church History In. p. I sq.; Baon Die Christliche Gnosis (Tübingen, I835); Matter Histoire Critique du Gnosticisme (2nd ed., Strasbourg and Paris, 1843); R. A. Lipsivs Gnostiezismus in Ersch u. Graber s. v. (Leipzig, 1860) ; Mangel Gnostic Heresies of the First and Second Centuries (London, 875 ); and for Gnostic art, King Gnostics and their Remains (London 1864).

    ${ }^{2}$ See esp. Iren. i. 6. I sq., Clem. Alex. Strom. ii. p. 433 sq. (Potter). On the words reגeco, tvevuartiol, by which tetar $\delta$ id $\delta v \sigma \sigma \epsilon \beta \in l a s$ nal $\phi i \lambda a \pi \epsilon \chi \chi^{\theta} \eta$.

[^39]:    ${ }^{1}$ On this point see Clem. Strom. iii.

[^40]:    $\mu о \sigma u ́ v \eta ร \kappa a r a \gamma \gamma \in \lambda \lambda 0 v \sigma t$, with the whole passage which follows. As examples of the one extreme may be instanced the Carpocratians and Cainites: of the other the Emeratites.

[^41]:    1 The name Epicureans seems to be applied to them even in the Talmud; see Eisenmenger's Entdecktes Judenthum I. pp. $95,694 \mathrm{sq} . ;$ comp. Keim Geschichte Jesu von Nazara x. p. 28r.

[^42]:    ${ }^{2}$ For the Pharisees see Vit. 2 пapa$\pi \lambda \dot{\eta} \sigma \sigma$ ós écorl $\tau \hat{\eta} \pi a \rho$ ' "E $\lambda \lambda \eta \sigma \iota \Sigma \tau \omega \ddot{\mu} \hat{\eta}$ $\lambda_{\text {evouer }}$ : for the Essenes, Ant. xv. 10.

[^43]:    ${ }^{1}$ The really important contemporary sources of information respecting the Essenes are Josephus, Bell. Jud. ii. 8. 2- 3 3, Ant. xiii. 5. 9, xviii. 1. 5, Vit. 2 (with notices of individual Essenes Bell. Jud. i. 3. 5, ii. 7. 3, ii. 20. 4, iii. 2. 1, Ant. xii. 11. 2, xv. 10. 4, 5); and Philo, Quod omnis probus liber § 12 sq . (11. p. 457 sq .), Apol. pro Jud. (in. p. 632 sq., a fragment quoted by Eusebius Prap, Evang. viii. 11). The account of the 'Therapeutes by the latter writer, de Vita Contemplativa (II. p. 47 I sq.), must also be consulted, as describing a closely allied sect. To these should be added the short notice of Pliny, N. H. v. 15. 17, as expressing the views of a Poman writer. His ac-

[^44]:     Of the Therapentes see Philo Vit. Cont. §3,4.
    ${ }^{2}$ B. J. 1. c. § 9 oţßas dè $\mu \epsilon ́ y \iota \sigma \tau o v$ comp. § 10.

     xviii. 1. 5; Philo Fragm. p. 633 रá

     $\pi \alpha \rho a \sigma a \lambda e \hat{\theta} \sigma a l$, with more to the same purpose. This peeuliarity astomished the heathen Pliny, N. H. V. I5, 'gens sola et in toto orbe preter ceteros mira, sine ulla femina, venere abdicata. . . In diem ex mquo convenarum turbs renascitur large frequentantibus... Ita per sqeulorum millia (incredibile dictu) gens aterna est, in qua nemo nascitar. Tam foecunda illis aliorum vitæ poenitentia est.'

[^45]:     татои тарарти́ov to the same effeot in $\$ 9$ : and compare the Essene story of St James in Hegesippus (Euseb. H. E. ii. 23) oivop каi Their abstention from animal food accounts for Porphyry's giving them so prominent a place in his treatise: see Zeller, p. $2 \not 43$.
    ${ }^{3}$ B.J.l. c. § 8.

[^46]:

     duarềac. Compare what Philo says of the Therapeutes, Vit. Cont. & 3

     On the attempt of Frankel (Zeitschr. p. $45^{8}$ ) to resolve this worship, which [^47]:

     So Philo Quod omn. prob. lib. § 12 de-

    ${ }^{2}$ The following considerations show that their abstention should probably be explained in this way: (I) Though the language of Josephus may be ambiguous, that of Philo is unequivocal on this point; (2) Their abstention

[^48]:    ${ }^{1}$ I have said nothing of the Kab. bala, as a development of Jewish thought illustrating the Colossian heresy : because the books containing the Kabbalistio specalations are comparatively recent, and if they contain ancient elements, it seems impossible

[^49]:     'Iovĩalwy $\begin{gathered}\xi \\ \xi\end{gathered}$
    ${ }^{2}$ See above p. gi, note 2.
    ${ }^{3}$ On the latter contact of Essenism with Christianity, see the third dissertation, and Galatians p. 322 sq.

    4 There is doubtless a referenco to [^50]:    ${ }^{1}$ Thus for instance, Ewaid (1. c., p. 47) points to the tacit approval of marriage in ver. 33. I hardly think however that this passage, which merely condemns adultery, can be taken to imply so much. More irreconcilable with pura Essenism is the belief in the resurreation of the body and the future life on earth, which is maintained in F . 176 sq .; though Fiilgenfeld (Zeitzchr. xry. p. 49) does not recognise the difficalty. See above p. 88. This Sibylline writer was perbaps rather a Hemerobaptist than an Essene. On the relation of the Hemerobaptists and Essenes see the third dissertation. Alexandre, Orac. Sibyll. (ir, p. 323), says of this Sibylifine Oracle, 'Ipse liber haud dubie Christianus est,' but there is nothing distinctly Christisn in its teaching.

    ${ }^{2}$ vv. 106 sq., 145 sq.; see above p. 40 , note 2. It begins $\kappa \lambda \hat{v} \theta_{l} \lambda \epsilon \omega \bar{s}{ }^{\prime}$ A $\sigma i \eta s$,

    ${ }^{3}$ The exceptional activity of the [^51]:    ${ }^{1}$ The prominence, which the Phrygian mysteries and Phrygian rites held in the syncretism of the Ophites, is clear from the account of Hippolytus Her. v. 7 вq. Indeed Phrygia appears to have been the proper home of Ophitism. Yet the admixtare of Judaic elements is not less obvious, as the name Naassene, derived from the He brew word for a serpent, shows.

    ${ }^{9}$ The name, by which the Montanists were commonly known in the eariy ages, was the sect of the 'Phrygians'; Clem. Strom. vii. 17, p. 900 al $\delta \epsilon$ [Tŵ aipt $\sigma \epsilon \omega \nu$ ] $\alpha \pi \delta \begin{gathered}\text { tivous [ } \pi \rho \sigma \sigma a \gamma o-~\end{gathered}$

    H. E. iv. 27, v. 16, Hipp. Har. viii. 19, 又: 25). From ol (or $\eta$ ) кard Ф́purás $^{2}$ (Eus. H. E. ii. 25, v. 16, 18, vi. 20) comes the solcesistio Latin name Cataphryges.
    ${ }^{3}$ Socrates (iv. 28) accounts for the spread of Novatianism in Phrygia by the $\sigma \omega \phi p o \sigma t y^{\prime}$ of the Phrygian temper. If so, it is a striking testimony to the power of Christianity, that under its influence the religious enthasiasm of the Phrygians should have taken this direction, and that they should have exchanged the fanatical orgiasm of their heathen worship for the rigid puritanism of the Novatianist.

[^52]:

     reiteration has offended the scribes; and the first $\pi d_{p r a}^{a} \mu \rho \rho \omega \pi o \nu$ is omitted

[^53]:    in some copies, the second in others. For $\tau \epsilon \lambda c o v$ see the note on the passage.

    2 The connexion of the sentences should be carefully observed. After the passage quoted in the last note comes the asseveration that this is

[^54]:    ${ }^{1}$ ii. 4,18 .
    ${ }^{2}$ i. 26, 27, ii. 2, iv. 3.
    3 ii. 2 दे $\bar{\psi}$ elolv тávtes of $\theta \eta \sigma a \nu \rho o l$
     For the meaning of $\dot{a} \pi \delta \kappa \rho v \phi о$ see above p. 90, and the note on the passage.

    4 The two great Christological pas.

[^55]:    sages are i. 15-20, ii. 9-15. They will be found to justify the statementa in this and the following paragraphs of the text. For the meaning of individual expressions see the notes on the passages.

[^56]:    ${ }^{1}$ See the detached note on $\pi \lambda \dot{\eta}$ $\rho \omega \mu a$.

     датıкஸ̂s.

[^57]:    ${ }^{1}$ See especially i. 16 eltre $\theta \rho \dot{\text { ónol }}$
     k.t. $\lambda$., compared with the parallel pas-

    Compare also ii. 10 भे кєф $\alpha \lambda \dot{\eta} \pi a ́ \sigma \eta s$ $\dot{d} \rho \chi \hat{\eta} s$ кal $\epsilon$ ૬̧ovolas, and ii. 15 d $\pi \epsilon \kappa \delta v \sigma a ́-$

    ${ }^{3}$ iii. so; comp. i. 9.

[^58]:    iv. 2 the ascetic tendoncy still predominates.
    ${ }_{5} 2$ Pet. ii. 10 sq., Jude 8, 6 Apoc. ii. 14, $20-22$.
    7 See the notes on Clem. Rom. Ep. ii. & 9 .

    $$
    8 \text { ii. } 16 .
    $$

    9 ii. 2 t .

[^59]:    1 ii. 23.
    2 Asceticism is of two kinds. There is the asceticism of dualism (whether consciousorunconscious), which springs from a false principle; and there is the asceticism of self-discipline, which is the training of the Christian athlete ( I Cor. ix. 27). I need not say that the > remarks in the text apply only to the former.

    > ${ }^{3}$ Gal. ii. 2 1, v. 2, 4.
    > ${ }^{4}$ ii. $8,20-22$.
    $\nu \dot{\eta} \nu \tau \hat{\eta} s$ बapkis: see the note on these words. $\quad 6$ iii. $1,2$.
    7 iii. 3, 5. $\quad 8$ jii. 10.

[^60]:    1 The relation of Cerinthus to the Colossian heresy is briefly indicated by Neander Planting of Christianity 1. p. 325 sq . (Eng. Trans.). It has been remarked by other writers also, both earlier and later. The subject appears to me to deserve a fuller investigation than it has yet received.
    ${ }^{2}$ Hippol. Har. vii. 33 Alyurrl $\omega \nu$

    ${ }^{3}$ Iren. i. 26. I 'et Cerinthus autem quidam...in Asia docuit,' Epiphan. Har. xxviii. I éytiveto dè ov̄tos ó Kท̂-

     Theodoret. 1. q. v̈arepod cis тì̀ 'Aбlay didiкeто. The scene of his encounter [^61]:    I Church History II. p. 42 (Bohn's Trans.).

    - See the Dialogue of Gaius and Proclus in Euseb. H. E. iii. 28, Dionysius of Alexandria, ib. vii. 25, Theodoret. 1. c., Auguetin. Har. 8.
    ${ }^{3}$ See below p. Iri.
    4 Epiphan. Har. xxviii 4, 5, Philastr. Har. 36, Angustin. 1. e. The [^62]:    ${ }^{1}$ Iren. i. 26. I 'Non a primo Deo factum esse mundom docuit, sed a virtute quadam valde separata et distante ab ea principalitate qua est super universa, et ignorante eum qui est super omnia Deum'; Hippol. Her. vii.

    ${ }^{2}$ Pseudo-Tertull. Her. 3 'Carpocrates proterea hanc tolit sectam: Unam esse dicit virtutem in superioribus principalem, ex iac prolatos angelos

[^63]:
     тоцทко́тur.
    ${ }^{2}$ I am quite unable to see any reference to the Gnostic conception of [^64]:    ${ }^{3}$ ii. 6 таре入а́ßете то̀у $\mathbf{X} \rho / \sigma \tau о ́ y, ~ ' \mathrm{I} \eta$ бoûv тò V K úptov.

    4 i. $20,22$.

[^65]:    1 Joh. xiv. 6, Acts iv. 12 , Joh. iii. 36 .

[^66]:    ${ }^{1}$ I am indebted for the term theonthropism, as describing the substance of the new dispensation, to an article by Prof. Westcott in the Contemporary Review 1v. p. 417 (December, 186\%); but it has been used independently, though in very rare instances, by other writers. The value of terms such as I have employed here in fixing ideas is enhanced by their strangeness, and will exouse any appearance of affectation.

    In applying the terms theanthropism and soteriology to the New Testament, as distinguished from the Old, it is not meant to suggest that the ideas involved in them were wholly wanting in the Old, but only to indicato that the conceptions, which were inchoate and tentative and subsidiary in the one, attain the most prominent position and are distinctly realised in the other.

[^67]:    ${ }^{1}$ ii. 20, 22.
    ${ }^{2}$ iii. I sq.

[^68]:

[^69]:
     notes on the several passuges.

[^70]:    ${ }^{1}$ I Thess. i. r. v. 28 。
     $\dot{\eta} \mu \mathrm{Ei} \hat{\mathrm{s}} \delta \delta^{\prime}$ aúroú. The expression $\delta l^{\prime}$ avi implies the conception of the Logos, [^71]:    even where the term itself is not used. See the dissertation on the doctrine of the Logos in the Apostolic writers.

[^72]:     aituras.

[^73]:    ${ }^{1}$ The remarks on the theology of the Apostolic Fathers, as compared with the Apostles, in Dorner's Lekre von der Person Christi i. p. 130 sq. seem to me perfectly just and higily signifioant. See also Pressenś Trois Premiers Siecles II. p. 406 sq. on the unsystematic spirit of the Apostolio Fathers.
    ${ }^{2}$ See for instance the pasrages

[^74]:    1 The references to the patristic quotations in the following pages have all been verified. I bave also consulted the Egyptian and Syriac Versions in every case, and the Armenian and Latin in some instances, before giving the readings. As regards the mss, I have contented myself with the collations as given in Tregelles and Tischendorf, not verifying them unless I had reason to suspect an error.

    The readings of the Memphitic Ver. sion are very incorrectly given even by the principal editors, such as Tregeles and Tischendorf; the translation of [^75]:    1 More probably the latter. In Rom. xvi the terminations $-a$ and as for the feminine and mascaline names respectively are carefully reproduced in the Harclean Version. In ver. I5 indeed we have Julias, but the trans-

[^76]:     The construction of the subsequent part of the sentence is obscare; and for juolous we should probably read ćnoicss.

[^77]:    ${ }^{1}$ Arist. Pol. iv. 4 (p. 129 I).
    ${ }^{2}$ See the notes on Col. ii. 19 (p. $260)$.
    ${ }^{3}$ Ephes. v. 27 sq.
    ${ }^{4}$ The Apostle in this passage (Ephes. iv. I3) is evidently contemplating the collective body, and not the individual believers. He mrites oi not avojas $\tau$ e入eious. As he has said gToî, so now he describes the result of [^78]:    ${ }^{1}$ Iren. i. 2. 6, i. 3.4.

    ${ }^{2}$ Iren. i. 3. 4. The passages are given in the text as they are quoted by Irenæus from the Valentinians. Three out of the four are incorrect.
    ${ }^{3}$ Iren. i. r2. 4; comp. Exc. Theod.

     $\sigma \omega \mu a \tau<\kappa \omega \bar{s}$.

     quotation is remarkable. In Exc. Theod. 43 ( p .979 ) the words run тdvia [^79]:    ${ }^{\text {E }}$ R. $L$. viii. 10 ( p .267 ).

    7 ib. viii. 9.
    ${ }^{8}$ ib. viii. гo (p. 266).

[^80]:    ${ }^{1}$ I. H. v. 8. ${ }^{\text { }}$ R. H. v. 12 . Tübingen 1854, p. 185.
    ${ }^{8}$ See Köstlin in Theolog. Jahru. * F'atis Sophia p. 3 sq .

[^81]:    ${ }^{1}$ ib. p. 15 sq.: comp. pp. $4,60,75$, 187, 275 .
    ${ }^{9}$ ib. p. 28 sq.: comp. p. 56 . On p. 7
    $\pi \lambda \dot{\eta} \rho \omega \mu \mathrm{a}$ is opposed to $\mathrm{d}_{\rho} \rho \chi_{n}^{n}$, ap-

[^82]:    ${ }^{1}$ The work of Anger, Ueber den Laodicenerbrief (Leipzig 1843), is very complete. He enumerates and discusses very thoroughly the opinions of his predecessors, omitting hardly anything relating to the literature of the sabject which was arcessible at the time when he wrote. His exposition of his own view, though not less [^83]:    ${ }^{1}$ Rab. Maur. Op. vi. p. $54^{\circ}$ (Migne) 'Non quia ad Laodicenses scribit. Unde quidam falsam epistolam ad Laodicenses ex nomine beati Pauli confingendam esse existimaverunt; nec enim erat vera epistola. Astimaverunt autem quidam illam esse, qua in hoc loco est significata. Apostolus vero non [ad] Laodicenses dicit sed ex Laodicea; quam illi seripserant ad apostolum, in quam aliqua reprehensionis digna inferebantur, quam etiam hac de causa jussit apud eos legi, ut ipsi reprehendant seipsos discentes qua de ipsis erant dicta etc.' (see Spic. Solesm. 1. p. r33).

    - After repeating the argument
     kelas, Theodoret sajs eikos de aúroús $\eta$ $\tau d$ t $\nu$ Ko入a $\sigma \sigma a i ̂ s ~ \gamma \epsilon \nu b \mu \in \nu a$ alrıá $\sigma a \sigma \theta a i$

    ${ }^{3}$ This however may be questioned. On the other hand Beza (ad loc.), Whitaker (Disputation on Scripture pp. 108, 303, 468 sq., 526, 531, Parker Society's ed.), and others, who explain the passage in this way, orge that it is required by the Greak edc Aaodscelas, and complain that the other interpretation depends on the erroneous Latin rendering.
    d Or, 'that which was written from Laodicen.' The difference depends on the vocalisation of rencil which may be either ( I ) 'Laodicea,' &s in vr. 13, 15, or (2) 'the Lrodiceans,' as in the previous clause in this same ver. 16.

    ${ }^{5}$ Calvin is very positive; 'Bis hallucinati sunt qui Paulam arbitrati annt ad Laodicenses saripsisse. Non dubito quin epistola fuerit ad Paulum missa ... Impostura autem nimis crassa fuit, quod nebulo nescio quis hoc pratextu epistolam supponere ausus est adeo insalsam, ut nihil a Pauli spiritu magis alienum fingi queat.' The last sentence reveals the motive which unconsciously led so many to adopt this unnatural interpretation of St Paul's language.
    ${ }^{6}$ ad loc. "Multo foodius errarmit qui ex hoc loco suspicati sunt quandam fuisse epistolam Pauli ad Laodicenses $\qquad$ quum potius significet Paulus epistolam aliquam ad se missam Laodicea, aut potitas qua responsuri essent Laodicenses Colossensibus.'

    7 Works II. p. 326.
    ${ }^{8}$ Ann. Eecl. s. a. 60, § xiii.
    ${ }^{9}$ e.g. Tillemont Mem. Eccl. I. p. 576.

[^84]:
     фєî̃au.

     $\beta$ eגtinotv.
    ${ }^{B}$ ad loc. 'Propter eam quæ est ad Timotheum dixit.'

[^85]:    ${ }^{1}$ It is adopted by Erasmus in his paraphrase; 'vicissim vos legatis epistolam quø Timotheo scripta fuit ex Laodicensium urbe': but in his commentary he does not commit himself to it. For other names see Anger p. 17, note k.
    ${ }^{2}$ Catal. Bill. Bodl. Cod. Ethiop. p. 23.

[^86]:    ${ }^{1}$ See the introduction to the Epistle to Philemon.
    ${ }^{2}$ See above p. 37.

[^87]:    1 The epistle has been critically edited by Anger Laodicenerbrief p. 155 sq. and Westcott Canon App. E. p. 572. I have already expressed my obligations to both these writers for their collations of yss.

[^88]:    1 e.g. Anger Laodicenerbrief p. 142 sq., Westcott Canon p. 454 sq. (ed. 4). Erasmus asks boldly, 'Qui factum est ut haeo epistola apud Latinos extet, cum nallus sit apud Graecos, ne vete-

[^89]:    1 Quoted above, p. 293, note 6. 2 See above, p. 279 sq.

[^90]:    1 A Saxon Treatise concerning the Old and New Testament by Ælfricus Abbas, p. 28 (ed. W. L'Isle, London 1623 ).
    ${ }^{2}$ Ioann. Sarisb. Epist. 143 (r. p. 210 ed. Giles) *Epistolae Pauli quindecim uno volumine comprehensae, licet sit vulgata et fere omnium communis opinio non esse nisi quatuordecim, decem ad ecclesias, quatuor ad personas; si tamen illa quae ad Hebraeos est connumeranda est epistolis Pauli, quod in praefatione ejus astruere videtur doctorum doctor Hieronymus, illo-

[^91]:    ${ }^{1}$ On Col. iv. 16. Erasmus is too hard upon the writer of this letter, when he charges him with such a mass of forgeries. He does not explain how [^92]:    ${ }^{1}$ Ovid. Met. vii. 626 kq. 'Jupiter huc, specie mortali, cumque parente Venit Atlantiades positis caducifer alis' etc.

    ${ }^{2}$ Acts xiv. ir ol $\theta \in a l$ j $\mu o t \omega \theta t y \tau \in s$
     There are two points worth observing in the Phrygian Iegend, as illustrating the Apostolic history. (I) It is a miraele, which opens the eyes of the peasant couple to the divinity of their guests thus disguised; (2) The immediate effect of this miracle is their attempt to sacrifice to their divine visitors, 'dis hospitibus mactare para-

[^93]:    ${ }^{1}$ Compare Col. iv. 9 with Philem. 11 &q.
    ${ }^{2}$ Theodoret in his preface to the Tds Koddaraxs kal ì olita de aùrov $\mu \epsilon \chi \rho \varepsilon$ той тарбитоs $\mu \epsilon \mu \dot{\epsilon} \nu \eta \kappa \epsilon$. This is generally taken to mean that Philemon's house was still standing, when Theodoret wrote. This may be the correct interpretation, but the Ianguage is not quite explicit.
    ${ }^{3}$ ver. 19.
    4 See above, p. 30 sq.
    ${ }^{5}$ See above, p. $3^{1} \mathrm{sq}$.
    ${ }^{6}$ ver. I $\sigma \omega \nu \epsilon \rho \gamma \hat{\varphi} \dot{\eta} \mu \hat{\omega} \nu$.
    7 Col. iv. 15.
     The Greek commentators, Chrysostom and Theodoret, suppose that St Paul designates Philemon's own family fincluding his slaves) by this honourable title of $\boldsymbol{\epsilon} \kappa \kappa \lambda \eta \sigma(\alpha$, in order to interest them in his petition. This is plainly wrong. See the note on Col. iv. 15 .
    ${ }^{9} 3$ Joh. 5 sq.
    ${ }^{10}$ I take the view that the kupia addressed in the Second Epistie of St John is some church personified, as indeed the whole tenour of the epistle seems to imply : see esp. vr. 4,7 sq. The salutation to the 'elect lady' (ver. r) from her 'elect sister' (ver. 15) will then be a greeting sent to one church from another; just as in I Peter the letter is addressed at the contains at the close a salutation from [^94]:    1 vv. 5, 7 .

    ${ }^{2}$ Apost. Const. Vii. 46 rîs $\delta$ हे दो

     The Greek Menaea however make PhiIemon bishop of Gaza; see Tillemont I. p. 574 , note lxvi.
    ${ }^{3}$ See Tillemont r. pp. 290,574 , for the references.

    4 Boeakh Corp. Inscr. 3814 Neikavסjos каl 'Aффía $\gamma$ vì av́roú. In the follo wing inscriptions also a wife bearing the name Apphia (Aphphia, Aphia) or Apphion (Aphphion, Aphion) is mentioned in connexion with her hasband: 2720, 2782, $2836,3446,2755$ b, c, d, $2837 \mathrm{~b}, 3849,3902 \mathrm{~m}, 3962$, $414 \mathrm{I}, 4277,43^{2 I} \mathrm{f}, 3^{8}{ }^{46} \mathrm{z}^{17}$, etc.
    M. Renan (Saint Paul p. 360) ksys 'Appia, diaconesse de cette ville.'

[^95]:    ${ }^{1}$ On the name Papias or Pappias see above, p. 48.
    ${ }^{2}$ See Boeokh Corp. Inscr. iII. p. 1085 for the names Návas, ete.
    ${ }^{3}$ We have not only the form "Aran several times (e.g. $3827 \mathrm{x}, 384^{6} \mathrm{p}$, $3846 \mathrm{x}, 38{ }^{6} 6 \mathrm{z}^{46}$, etc.); but aisó ${ }^{4} \mathrm{~A} \pi \pi \eta$ ) $3827 \mathrm{~g}, 3846 \mathrm{n}, 3846 \mathrm{z}^{\text {7 }}$, still as a woman's name. These all occur in the same neighbourhood, at Cotixum and Æzani. I have not noticed any instance of this phenomenon in the names Apphia, Apphion; though probably; where Roman influences were especially strong, there would be a tendency to trensform a Phrygian name into a Roman, e. g. Apphia into Appia, and Apphianus into Appianus, [^96]:    1 It occurs in two Smyrnwan inscriptions, no. 3 r43, 3224 .

    ${ }^{3}$ So the Ambrosian Hilary on Col. iv. 17 .

    4 Ephes. iv. 11 bears testimony to the existence of the office of evangelist at this date.

    - It is adopted by Theodore of [^97]:    Mopsuestia. On the other hand Theodoret argues against this view on critical grounds; tù's Éфaбav toûtop does not allege any traditional sapport for his own opinion.

    6 See above, pp. 2, 15.

[^98]:    ${ }^{1}$ Apost. Const. vii. 46 quoted above, p. 306, note r .

    2 See p. 42.
    3 ver. $2 \tau \hat{\varphi} \sigma \nu \nu \sigma \tau \rho a \tau \iota \dot{\omega} \tau \eta \dot{\eta} \mu \hat{\omega} \gamma$. See the note.

    4 e.g. Chresimus, Chrestus, Onesiphorus, Symphorus, Carpas, etc. So too the corresponding female names Onesime,Chreste, Sympherusa,eto.: but more commonly the women's names are of a different cast of meaning, Arescusa, Prepusa, Terpusa, Thallusa, Tryphosa, etc.

    5 e.g. in the Corp. Inscr. Lat. Irr. p. 223 , no. 2146, p. 359 , no. 2723 , p. 986, no. 6 ro7 (where it is spelled Honesimus) ; and in Muratori, cc. 6, Dxxix. 5, cmLXVIII. 4, MIII. 2, MDXVIII. 2, MDXXIII. 4, MDLI. 9, MDLEXI. 5, MDLXXV. 1, आDXCII. 8, MDxCFI. 7 , Mncvi. 2 , MDCE. 19, mbaxiv. 17,39 ; and the corre-

[^99]:    $\sigma$ Oat ; see also $\$ 82,5,6$.
    ${ }^{3}$ Melito in Euseb. H. E. iv. 26
     'Enetṑे $\pi 0 \lambda \lambda d \kappa c s \bar{\eta}_{\xi}(\omega \sigma \pi s$ к.т. $\lambda$.

    4 Aristot. Pol. i. 4 (p. 1253 ) i $\delta 00$ hos $\kappa \tau \hat{\eta} \mu \dot{a} \tau t \notin \psi \psi \chi o v, E t h$. Nic. viii. 13 (p.

     classification of 'implements' in Varro, de Re rust. r. 17. 1 'Instrumenti genus vocale et semivocale et mutum: vocale, in quo sunt servi; semivocale, in quo boves; mutum, in quo planstra.'

    5 Dig. iv. 5 "Servile caput nuilume jus habet' (Paulus); ib. 1. 17 'In personam sexvilem nulla cadit obligatio' (Ulpianus).

[^100]:    non Lydus esset': comp. Alciphr. póv к.т.入.: Apollod. Com. (Meineke, к.r.X. This last passage refers to the cowardice with which, besides all their other bad qualities, the Phrygians were credited; comp. Anon. Com, (ib. IV.
     de Anim. $20^{\circ}$ Comici Phrygas timidos illudunt': see Ribbeck Com. Lat. p. 106.
    ${ }^{3}$ Ter. Phorm. i. 4. r3 'aliquid convasassem, atque hine me protinam conjicerem in pedes.'
    ${ }^{4}$ Sali. Cat. $\mathrm{xxxvii} 5^{\text {' Romam sieuti }}$ in sentinam confluxerant': comp. Tac. Ann. x7. 44 -

[^101]:    1 I Cor. vil. 22.
    ${ }^{2}$ Eth. Nic. viii. 13 ( p .116 r) $\phi \mathrm{dla}$

     $\kappa . \tau+\lambda$. On the views of Aristotle respecting slavery see Beoker's Charikles [^102]:    III. p. 2 sq. (ed. 2, 1854) with the editor K. F. Hermann's references to the literature of the subject, p. 5.

    ${ }^{3} 1$ Cor. vii. 21 sq., Gal iii. 28, Col. iii. II. With this contrast the expression attributed to a speaker in Macrob. Sat. i. II 'quasi vero curent divina de servis.'

    4 Philem. ${ }^{6} 6$.
    6 ver. 12.

[^103]:    1 Dig. i. 6 "In potestate sunt servi dominorum; quae quidem potestas juris gentium est: nam apud omnes peraeque gentes animadvertere possumus dominis in seryos vitae necisque potestatem fuisse.' Comp. Senec, de Clem. i. $18{ }^{\prime}$ Cum in servam omnia liceant.'
    ${ }^{2}$ So the mistress in Jtip. Sat. vi. 219 sq. 'Pone crucem servo. Merait [^104]:    ${ }^{1}$ See Acta Sanct. Boll. xvi Febr. (II. p. 857 sq , ed. nov.) for the authorities, if they deserve the name.

    ${ }^{2}$ If we take the earlier date of the Epistles of St Ignatius, A.D. Io\%, we get an interval of 44 years between the Onesimus of St Paul and the Onesimus of Ignatius. It is not altogether impos. sible therefore that the same person [^105]:    ${ }^{1}$ Franke Praef. N.T.Graec.p. 26, 27 , quoted by Bengel on Philem. I.

    ${ }^{2}$ Die Sendschreiben etc. p. 458.
    ${ }^{3}$ L'Anteckrist p. 96.

    - L'ApAtre Paul p. r94. He goes on to say; 'Never has the precept which [^106]:    Paul himself gave at the end of his letter to the Colossians been better

    ${ }^{5}$ Paulus p. 476.
    ${ }^{6}$ Plin. Ep.ix. 2 I.

[^107]:    ${ }^{1}$ On slavery among the Hebrews see the admirable work of Prof. Goldwin Smith Does the Bible sanction American slavery? p. isq.
    ${ }^{2}$ In Ezra ii. 65 the number of slaves compared with the number of free is a little more than one to six.
    ${ }^{3}$ Boeckh Public Economy of Athens p. 35 sq . According to a census taken by Demetrius Phalereus there were in

[^108]:    the year 309 в.c. 21,000 citizens, 10,000 residents, and 400,000 slaves (Ctesicles in Athen. vi. p. 272 B). This would make the proportion of slaves to citizens rearly twenty to one. It is supposed however that the number of citizens here includes only adult males, whereas the number of slaves may comprise both sexes and all ages. Hence Boeckh's estimate [^109]:    took place A.D. 61 . The law in question was the Senatusconsultum Silonianum, passed under Augustus a. d. 10.

    ${ }^{2}$ Senec. Ep. Mor. 47 ' Deinde ejusdem arrogantiae proverbinm jactatur totidem hastes esse quot servas'; comp. Macrob. i. 11. 13. See also Festus p. 261 (Ed. Mueller) 'Quot servi tot hostes in proverbio est'.

[^110]:    ${ }^{1}$ G. Smith Does the Bible etc.? p. 121.

    2 Athenag. Suppl. 35 סoûdol eio七y
     It worid even appear that the domestio servant who betrayed Polycarp (Mart. Polyc. 6) was a slave, for he was put to the torture. Comp. Jastin. Apol. ii. 12. See also passages from bington Abolition of Slavery p. 20 sq .

     oulous, к.т. $\lambda$.

[^111]:    ${ }^{1}$ Zeitschrift p. 449 'Für Essäer Liegt, wie schon von anderen Seiten bemerkt warde, das Hebr.
    nach einer Bemerknng des Herrn L.
    Löw im Orient, das Hebr. Mgצ nahe';
    see also pp.454,455; Monatsschrift p.32.

[^112]:    ${ }^{1}$ e.g. Keim (p. 286) and Derenbourg
    (p. 166, 46 r sq.), who both derive Essene from S'Ds 'a physician.'
    ${ }^{2}$ Mishna Chagigah ii. 7; Zeitschr. p. 454, Monatsschr. pp. 33, 62. See Frankel's own account of this R. Jose in an earlier volume, Monatsschr. i. p. 405 sq .

    ${ }^{3}$ Zeitschr. p. 457 , Moratsschr. p. 69 sq.; see below, p. 362 .

[^113]:    supposes, reciprocation or community of goods, substituting 'Thine is mine' for 'Thine is thine' in the second clause; 'The Chassid mast have no property of his own, but must treat it as belonging to the Society (i) (שלחל gives no reference, I suppose that he refers to the same passage. This very expression ' mine is thine and thine is mine' does indeed occur previously in the same section, but it is applied as a formula of disparagement to the とam haarets (see below p. 366), who expect to receive again as much as they give. In this loose way Grätz treats the whole subject. Keim (p. 294)

[^114]:    1 Monatsschr. p. 32.
    2 Zeitschr. p. 455 .
    ${ }^{2}$ Frankel Monatsschr. p. 71: comp.
    Derenbourg p. 170 sq.
    ${ }^{4}$ See Lö̀wy Krit.-Talm. Lex. s. v . Essäer.

[^115]:    1 Urged in favour of this derivation by Herzield II. p. 398.

    3 The oath taken by the Essenes (Joseph. B, J. ii. 8. 7) $\sigma u \nu \tau \eta \rho \eta \sigma \epsilon \subset \nu . .$.
     nothing to do with aceuracy in transcribing copies, as Herzfeld (ri. pp. 398, 407 ) seems to think. The natural meaning of $\sigma v \nu \tau \eta p \in \hat{y}$, ' to keep safe or olose' and so 'not to divulge' (e.g. Polyb.

[^116]:    ${ }^{1}$ Taanith 24 b, Yoma 53 b; see Surenhuis Mishna inr. p. 313.
    ${ }^{2}$ In this and similar cases it is munecessary to consider whether the persons mentioned might have belonged to those looser disciples of Essenism, who married (see above, p. 85): because the identification is meaningless unless the strict order were intended.

[^117]:    ${ }^{1}$ Essenes p. 30; comp. Kitto's Cyclopaedia, s. v. Bssenes.

    2 It is given by Landsberg in the Allgemeine Zeitung des Judenthums [^118]:    s862, no. 33, p. 459, a reference pointed out to me by a friend.

    3 Zeitschr. p. $45^{\circ}$ sq., Monataschr. pp. 31, 70.

[^119]:    ${ }^{1}$ Monatsschr. p. 32.
    ${ }^{4}$ Monatsschr. p. 32.
    ${ }^{2}$ Ib. p. 70.
    ${ }^{3}$ See Derenbourg p. ${ }^{2} 5$.
    ${ }^{5}$ Monatsschr. pp. 32, 68.
    c Ib. p. $6 \%$

[^120]:    ${ }^{1}$ See below, p. 40 I.
    ${ }^{2}$ Beiträge ri. p. 199. In this dexivation he is followed by Graetz (iII. p. 82, 468) and Derenbourg (p. 166).
    ${ }^{3}$ Monatsschr. p. 3r-
    4 'The attempt to point out the Essenes in our patristic (i.e. rabbinical) literature,' says Hersfeld truly (II. p. 397), 'has led to a splendid hypo-thesis-hunt (einer stattlichen Hypothesenjagd).'
    ${ }^{5}$ Monatsschr. p. 3 r .

[^121]:
     see also the passages quoted above $p$. 89 , note 3 .
    2 See below, p. 379.
    ${ }^{3}$ Herzfeld (ir. p. 403) is unable to reconcile any rejection of the Old Testament Scriptures with the reverence paid to Moses by the Essenes (B, J. ii.

[^122]:    8.9, 10). The Christian Essenes however did combine both these incongruous tenets by the expedient which is explained in the text. Herzfeld him. self suggests that allegorical interpretation may have been employed to justify this abstention from the temple sacrifices.

    - See Galatians, p. 322 sq.

[^123]:    1 Epiphanius (Har. xviii. $\mathrm{I}_{1}$ p. 38) again describes, as the account was repté $x \in t$ 入ó $\gamma o s$ ), the tenets of a Jewish sect which he calls the Nasareans, aü $\tau \dot{\eta}$

[^124]:    matépwy yeyer刀̂a $\theta$ at. Here we have in combination all the features which we are seeking. The cradle of this sect is placed by him in Gilead and Bashan and 'the regions beyond the Jordan.' He uses similar language also (xxy. 18, p. 142) in describing the Ebionites, whom he places in much the same localities (naming Moab also), and whose Essene features are unmistake-will speak for themselves.

[^125]:    1 Zeitschr. p. 45 8.
    ${ }^{2}$ See Ginsburg Essenes p. 69 sq.
    8 Berakhoth i. 4; see Derenbourg, p. 169 sq .

    4 See above, p. 87, note I .
    ${ }^{5}$ See above, p. 83.
    6 Galatians p. 324 sq. See also below, p. 4.7.

[^126]:    ${ }^{1}$ See p. 372, note 3 .
    ${ }^{2}$ Galatians p. 325, note 1. For another derivation see below, p. 407.
    ${ }^{3}$ Celibacy however is not one of these: comp. Epiphan. Har. xix. I (p.

[^127]:    1 The important place which the heavenly bodies held in the system of Philo, who regarded them as animated beings, may be seen from Gfrörer's Philo 1. p. 349 sq.

[^128]:    ${ }^{1}$ Justin Martyr more than once taunts the Jewish rabbis with their reckless encouragement of polygamy. See Dial. ${ }^{3} 34$, p. $3_{3}{ }_{3}$ D, roîs davpérots

     نُ

[^129]:
     $\mu a \tau t$ үáuov $\gamma$ vvaîkas к.т.入., with Otto's note on the first passage.
    ${ }^{2}$ See above, p. 9r, note 2.

[^130]:    ${ }^{1}$ Herzfeld, In. p. 392 sq.

[^131]:    ${ }^{1}$ See above, p. 355 sq.
    2 Orient 1849, pp. 489, 537, 553.

    - B. J. i. 3. 5 таptóvta did. тov̀ lepoĩ.

    In the parallel narrative, Ant. zii. II. 2, the expression is $\pi a \rho u$ óvia $\tau \delta$ lepor, which does not imply so much;

[^132]:    that Judas himself was within the temple area.
    ${ }^{1}$ See above, pp. 89, 37 r sq.

[^133]:    1 Ant. xy. 10. 4 .

[^134]:    ${ }^{1}{ }^{1}$ Diog. Laert. viii. 42.
    ${ }^{2}$ Vit. Apol. i. 15 sq. At the same time Philostratus informs us that the conduct of his hero in this respect

[^135]:    ${ }^{1}$ See the references in Zeller I. p. 218 sq.; comp. III. 2, p. 67.

[^136]:    1 Keim (Geschichte Jesu von Nazara 1. p. 303) refers to Tac. Hist. iii. 24 - Undique clamor; et orientem solem (ita in Syria mos est) tertiani salutavere,' as illustrating this Essene practice. The commentators on Tacitus quote a similar notice of the Parthians in Herodian iv. $\mathrm{I}_{5}$ dua ot

[^137]:    1 See Gibbon Decline and Fall c. viii, Milman History of Christianity II. p. 247 sq . The latter speaks of this restoration of Zoroastrianism, as 'perhaps the only instance of the vigorous revival of a Pagan religion.' It was far purer and less Pagan than the system which it superseded; and this may account for its renewed life.
    ${ }^{2}$ See Müller Fragm. Hist. Graec. III. p. 53 sq. for this work of Hermippus $\pi \epsilon \rho l$ Mdywu. He flourished about b.o. 200. See Max Müller Lectures an [^138]:    the Science of Language 1 st ser. p. 86.

    ${ }^{3}$ Strabo xv. 3.15 (p. 733 ) 'E $\nu \delta \hat{\epsilon} \tau \hat{\eta}$ к.т. $\lambda$.

    ${ }^{4}$ At least in one instance, Asmodeus (Tob. iii. 17); see M. Miller Chips from a German Workshop I. p. $\mathrm{I}_{4} 8 \mathrm{sq}$. For the different dates assigned to the book of Tobit see Dr Westcott's artiole Tobit in Smith's Dictionary of the Bible p. 1525 .

[^139]:    ${ }^{1}$ Zeitschrift x. p. 103 sq.; comp. xi. p. 351. M. Renan also (Langues Sémitiques mur. iv. I, Vie de Jésus p. 98) suggests that Buddhist influences operated in Palestine.

    * x. p. 105 'was schon an sich, zumal in dieser Zeit, schwerlich Alexandria ad Caucasum, sondern nur Alexandrien in Aegypten bedenten kann.' Comp. xI. p. 351, where he repeats the same argument in reply to Zeiler. This is a very natural inference from a western point of view; but, when we place ourselves in the position of a Buddhist writer to whom Bactria was Greece, the relative proportions of things are wholly changed.
    ${ }^{3}$ Die Religion des Buddha 1. p. 193.
    ${ }^{4}$ Comp. e.g. Weber Die Verbindungen Indiens mit den Ländern im Westen p. 675 in the Alljem. Monatsschr.

[^140]:    f. Wissensch. u. Literatur, Braunschweig 1853 ; Lassen Indische Alterthumskunde II. p. 236; Hardy Manual of Budhism p. 51 .
    ${ }^{5}$ For its geographical meaning in older Indian writers see Köppen 1. c. Since then it has entirely departed from its original signifieation, and Yavana is now a common term used by the Hindoos to designate the Mohammedans. Thus the Greek name has come to be applied to a people which of all others is most unlike the Greeks. This change of meaning admirably illustrates the use of "E $\lambda \lambda \eta \nu$ among the Jewf, which in like manner, from being the name of an alien nation, became the name of an alien religion, irrespective of nationality; see the note on Cal. ii. 3 .

[^141]:    1 Mahawanso p. 171, 'Iurnour's translation.
    ${ }^{2}$ How for instance, if any such establishment had ever existed at Alezandria, could Strabo have used the language which is quoted in the next note?
    ${ }^{3}$ Consistently with this view, we

[^142]:    may allow that single Indians would visit Alexandria from time to time for purposes of trade or for other reasons, and not more than this is required by the rhetorical passage in Dion Chrysost. Or, xxxii (p. 373) d $\rho \hat{\omega} \gamma^{\alpha} \rho{ }_{\varepsilon}^{\epsilon} \gamma \omega \gamma \epsilon$

[^143]:    ${ }^{1}$ Even its infurnce on Manicheism however is disputed in a learned article in the Home and Foreign Review m. p. 143 sq. (1863), by Mr P. Le Page Renouf (see Academy 1873, p. 399).
    ${ }^{2}$ An extant inscription, containing an edict of the great Buddhist king Asoka and dating about the middie of the $z^{2}$ d century $8 . c$. , was explained by Prinsep as recording a treaty of this monarch with Ptolemy and other suc-

[^144]:    cessors of Alexander, by whichreligious freedom was secared for the Baddhists throughout their dominions. If this interpretation had been correct, we must have supposed that, so far as regards Egypt and Western Asia, the treaty remained a dead letter. But later critios have rejected this interpretation of its purport : see Thomas's edition of Prinsep's Essays on Indian Antiquities II. p. 18 sq.

[^145]:    1 De Quincey's attempt to prove that the Essenes were actually Christians (Works vi. p. 270 sq., Ix. p. 253 sq.), who used the machinery of an esoteric society to inculcate their doctrines 'for fear of the Jews,' is con-

[^146]:    ${ }^{I}$ Ginsburg Essenes p. 24 . 3 Matt. xxiii. 2, 3 .
    ${ }^{2}$ See above, p. 366 .

[^147]:    ${ }^{1}$ This fact is fully recognised by several recent writers, who will not be suspected of any undue bias towards traditional views of Christian history. Thus Lipsius writes (p. 190), 'In the general development of Jewish life Essenism oceupies a far more snbordinate place than is commonly ascribed to it.' And Keim expresses himself to the same effect (1. p. $30_{5}$ ). Derenbourg also, after using similar language, adds this wise caution, 'In any case, in the present state of our acquaintance with the Essenes, which [^148]:    1 See albove p. 86.

    ${ }^{2}$ Grätz III. p. 100.

    8. 3. See also Philo Fragm. 632 ù $\pi \dot{\epsilon} \rho$ тoî кolvoфe入oûs, and the context.

    4 Ewald (vi. p. 649) regards this

[^149]:    Banus as representing an extravagant development of the school of John, and thus supplying a link between the real teaching of the Baptist and the doctrine of the Hemerobaptists professing to be derived from him.

[^150]:    ${ }^{1}$ The word $\dot{\eta} \mu \epsilon \rho о \beta a \pi \tau \iota \sigma \tau a l$ is generally taken to mean 'daily-bathers,' and this meaning is suggested by Apost. Const. vi. 6 ойтLLEs, ка $\theta^{\circ}$ éx $\alpha \sigma \sigma \tau \eta \nu \dot{\eta} \mu \epsilon \rho a \nu$

     $\epsilon y$ üdart. But, if the word is intended as a translation of Toble-shacharith ' morning bathers,' as it seems to be, it must signify rather 'day-bathers'; and this is more in accordance with the analogy of other compounds from $\sigma \kappa \delta \pi o s$, etc.

    Josephus (B. J. ii. 8. 5) represents the Essenes as bathing, not at dawn, but at the fifth hour, just before their meal. This is hardly consistent either with the name of the Toble-shacharith, [^151]:    ${ }^{6}$ Epiphanius (Haer. xxx. 16) mentions two points especially, in which the character of this work is shown: (I) It represented James as condemning the sacrifices and the fire on the altar (see above, pp. $37 \mathrm{I}-373$ ): (2) It published the most unfounded calumnies against St Paul.

    ${ }^{7}$ Lipsius, Schenkel's Bibel-Lexicon, p. 191.

[^152]:    1. Rom. xiv. 2, 2 土. $\quad{ }^{2}$ See Galatians p. 322 日q.
[^153]:    ${ }^{1}$ Sce abore, p. 87. $\quad{ }^{2}$ Matt. xi. 19, Lake vii. 34.

[^154]:    ${ }^{1}$ I Cor. vii. 26-3r.
    ${ }^{2}$ See p. 371 kq .
    ${ }^{2}$ Matt. xxi. 12 sq., 23 sq., xxiv. isq., xxvi. 55 , Mark xi. 11, 15 вq., 27, xii. 35, xiii. I sq., xiv. 49, Luke ii. 46, xix. 45 , xx. 1 sq., xxi. 37 sq. , xxii. 53 , [^155]:    John ii. 14 sq., v. 14, vii. I4, viii. 2, 20,59 , x. 23, xi. 56 , xviii. 20.

    ${ }^{4}$ Luke xxiv. 53, Acts ii. 46, iii. r sq..s $\mathbf{\text { v. }} 20 \mathrm{sq} ., 42$.
    ${ }_{5}$ Matt. xxiii. 18 sq. : comp. $7.23,24$.
    ${ }^{6}$ Matt. viii. 4, Marki. 44, Luke 7. I4.

[^156]:    ${ }^{1}$ Matt. ix. 13, xii. 7.
    ${ }^{2}$ See above, p. 88.

[^157]:    ${ }^{1}$ Jos. D. J. ii. 8. $6 \pi \alpha \nu \nu \dot{\partial} \rho \eta \theta \dot{\epsilon} \nu \quad \dot{v}^{\prime}$

     Omn. prob. lib. 12 (II, p. 458) то̂́ фь-relates (Ant. xv. 10. 4) that Herod the Great excused the Essenes from taking the oath of allegiance to him. Fet they were not altogether trae to their principles ; for Josephas says (B. J. ii. 8. 7), that on initiation into the sect the members were bound by fearful oaths (0"ркоиs $\phi \rho \iota \kappa \omega_{0} \delta \epsilon c s$ ) to falfil certain

[^158]:    1 Aets ${ }^{2} .4^{-}$
    2 Philo Omn. prob. lib. § 12 (II. p.

     COL.

    ${ }^{3}$ See for instance the passages from Seneca quoted in Philippians p. 307.

[^159]:    1 Is. Ixi. I $\omega^{\prime} \alpha \gamma \gamma \in \lambda l \sigma \alpha \sigma \theta \alpha \iota \quad \pi \tau \omega \chi 0 \hat{\kappa}$, quoted in Luke iv. 18. There are references to this particular part of the prophecy again in Matt. xi. 5, Luke vii. 22, and probably also in the beatitude $\mu$ ackaptot ol $\pi \tau \omega \chi$ ol к.r. ., Matt. v. 3, Luke vi. 20.

    2 Grätz Gesch. III. p. 259 .

