PREFACE

BY THE GENERAL EDITOR.

The General Editor of The Cambridge Bible for Schools thinks it right to say that he does not hold himself responsible either for the interpretation of particular passages which the Editors of the several Books have adopted, or for any opinion on points of doctrine that they may have expressed. In the New Testament more especially questions arise of the deepest theological import, on which the ablest and most conscientious interpreters have differed and always will differ. His aim has been in all such cases to leave each Contributor to the unfettered exercise of his own judgment, only taking care that mere controversy should as far as possible be avoided. He has contented himself chiefly with a careful revision of the notes, with pointing out omissions, with suggesting occasionally a reconsideration of some question, or a fuller treatment of difficult passages, and the like.

Beyond this he has not attempted to interfere, feeling it better that each Commentary should have its own individual character, and being convinced that freshness and variety of treatment are more than a compensation for any lack of uniformity in the Series.

INTRODUCTION.

CHAPTER I.

LIFE OF ST MARK.

1. When the Saviour was about to leave the earth, His last command to His Apostles was that they should go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature (Mark xvi. 15).

2. Thus the first work, and that out of which all their other functions grew, was to proclaim as heralds the Glad Tidings of the Great Hope which had arisen for mankind, and to deliver a personal testimony to the chief facts of the Gospel History, the life, death, and resurrection of their Lord (Acts i. 21, 22, iv. 33, xi. 20, xx. 20, 21).

3. Of the way in which they did this, the narrative contained in the Acts of the Apostles gives us many instances. Two instances may be taken as examples of all; (i) the preaching of St Peter before Cornelius (Acts x. 37—43), and (ii) of St Paul in the synagogue of Antioch (Acts xiii. 23—39). It will be noticed that both these discourses contain a sketch of the outlines of the Saviour's ministry, from the Baptism of John to the world's first Easter-day, and both dwell on the historical events of His Passion and Resurrection.

4. Thus the teaching of the Apostles was in the first instance oral and not written, and out of the multitude of things which Jesus did (John xxi. 25), a cycle of representative facts was gradually selected, which formed the common groundwork of their message.

1 See Professor Westcott's Introduction to the New Testament, p. 165, and his Bible in the Church, p. 57.

2 "How few have been preserved, perhaps we can hardly realize, without reckoning up what a small number of days contribute all the incidents of the Gospels, and how little remains even in the record of those to bear witness to the labours which left no leisure so much as to eat (Mark vi. 31)." Westcott's Bible in the Church, p. 58.
INTRODUCTION.

5. But in the course of time another step was taken. Many, as St Luke expressly tells us (i. 1—4), endeavoured to commit to writing this oral Gospel, and to form in a connected shape written collections of the words and actions of our Lord.

6. What they designed or endeavoured to do, was actually done under Apostolic sanction. As long, indeed, as the Twelve were still living and proclaiming the Word at Jerusalem, they were themselves "abiding witnesses to the facts which they preached," but when the time came for them to be scattered throughout the world, an anxiety arose that the Church should possess authoritative records to supply the place of the oral Gospel previously in use.

7. Hence originated the Four "Memoirs" or "Biographies" of the Saviour, which have come down to us in the Four Gospels. Of these, two, those of St Matthew and St John, were written by Apostles, close friends and contemporaries of the Saviour; two, those of St Mark and St Luke, were written by "Apostolic men," who, if they had no personal knowledge of Him, were at least the constant companions of those, who had the most intimate acquaintance with His Person and His Work.

8. The writer of the second and briefest of the Gospels was St Mark.

9. Marcus was his Latin surname. His Jewish name was John, which is the same as Johanan (the grace of God). We can almost trace the steps, whereby the former became his prevalent name in the Church. "John, whose surname was Mark" in Acts xii. 12, 25, xv. 37, becomes "John" alone in Acts xiii. 5, 13, "Mark" in Acts xv. 39, and thenceforward there is no change, Col. iv. 10; Philemon 24; 2 Tim. iv. 11.

10. The Evangelist was the son of a certain Mary, a Jewish matron of some position, who dwelt at Jerusalem (Acts xii. 12),

1 The history of the original word translated Gospel deserves attention. In Classical Greek it denotes (i) the reward given to the messenger of glad tidings (as in Homer, Od. xiv. 152, 166); (ii) the sacrifice offered up as a thank-offering for glad tidings (Ar. Eq. 656); (iii) the glad tidings themselves. Thus the word passed into the Greek of the New Testament, where it denotes the Glad Tidings of Jesus Christ, i.e. the Gospel, A. S. Gode-spell.
and was probably born of a Hellenistic family in that city. Of his father we know nothing, but we do know that the future Evangelist was cousin\(^1\) of Barnabas of Cyprus, the great friend of St Paul.

11. His mother would seem to have been intimately acquainted with St Peter, and it was to her house, as to a familiar home, that the Apostle repaired (A.D. 44) after his deliverance from prison (Acts xii. 12). This fact accounts for St Mark's\(^3\) intimate acquaintance with that Apostle, to whom also he probably owed his conversion, for St Peter calls him "his son" (1 Pet. v. 13).

12. We hear of him for the first time in Acts xii. 25, where we find him accompanying Paul and Barnabas on their return from Jerusalem to Antioch A.D. 45. He next comes before us on the occasion of the earliest missionary journey of the same Apostles, A.D. 48, when he joined them as their "minister" (Acts xiii. 5). With them he now visited Cyprus, with which island he may have been previously acquainted, as being the native country of Barnabas. But at Perga in Pamphylia (Acts xiii. 13), when they were about to enter upon the more arduous part of their mission, he left them, and for some unexplained reason\(^3\) returned to Jerusalem, to his mother and his home.

13. This occurred about A.D. 48. Three years afterwards, A.D. 51, the same Apostles resolved to set out on a second missionary tour. But on this occasion, in spite of the earnest desire of his kinsman to take him with them, St Paul resolutely

\(^1\) The Greek word, used in Col. iv. 10, is applied to cousins german, the children, whether of two brothers, or of two sisters, or of a brother and a sister. In very late writers the word comes to be used for a "nephew." See Professor Lightfoot on Col. iv. 10.

\(^2\) There is no solid ground for the conjecture that \(a\) the Evangelist was one of the Seventy disciples, or that \(b\) he was one of those who were offended at the saying of Christ in the synagogue of Capernaum (John vi. 53, 60) but was afterwards won back by St Peter. The theory, however, is not to be wholly rejected which would identify him with the young man, who on the night of our Lord's apprehension, followed in his light linen robe, which he left in the hands of the officers when he fled from them (Mark xiv. 51, 52, where see note).

\(^3\) (i) Some think he simply wished to rejoin St Peter and the other Apostles, and share their labours at Jerusalem; (ii) others hold that he shrank from the \textit{perils of rivers} and \textit{perils of robbers} (2 Cor. xi. 26) in the interior of Asia Minor.
declined to associate himself again with one, who "departed from them from Pamphylia, and went not with them to the work" (Acts xv. 38). The issue was a "sharp contention" which resulted in the separation of St Paul from his old friend, who taking Mark with him once more repaired to Cyprus, while the great Apostle of the Gentiles, accompanied by Silas, proceeded through Syria and Cilicia (Acts xv. 39—41).

14. At this point St Luke's narrative takes leave of the Evangelist. But whatever was the cause of his vacillation, it did not lead to a final separation between him and St Paul. We find him by that Apostle's side during his first imprisonment at Rome, A.D. 61—63, and he is acknowledged by him as one of his few "fellow-labourers unto the kingdom of God," who had been a "comfort" to him during the weary hours of his imprisonment (Col. iv. 10, 11; Philemon 24); while from the former of these passages it would also seem that St Mark contemplated a journey to Asia Minor, and that St Paul had prepared the Christians of Colosse to give him a friendly reception (Col. iv. 10).

15. We have next traces of him in another passage of the New Testament. In 1 Pet. v. 13 occur the words, "The church that is at Babylon, elected together with you, saluteth you; and so doth Marcus my son." From this we infer that he joined his spiritual father, the great friend of his mother, at Babylon, then and for some hundred years afterwards one of the chief seats of Jewish culture, and assisted him in his labours amongst his own countrymen.

16. From Babylon he would seem to have returned to Asia Minor, for during his second imprisonment, A.D. 68, St Paul writing to Timothy, charges him to bring Mark with him to Rome, on the ground that he was "profitable unto him for the ministry" (2 Tim. iv. 11). From this point we gain no further information from the New Testament respecting the Evangelist. It is most probable, however, that he did join the Apostle at Rome, whither also St Peter would seem to have proceeded, and suffered martyrdom along with St Paul. After the death of these two great Pillars of the Church, Ecclesiastical tradition affirms that St Mark visited Egypt, founded the church of Alexandria, and died by martyrdom.

CIRCUMSTANCES OF THE COMPOSITION OF THE GOSPEL.

1. When we pass from the Evangelist himself to the Gospel, which he wrote, it is natural to ask four questions. (1) When was it written? (2) Where was it written? (3) For whom was it written? (4) In what language was it written?

2. When? Upon this point nothing absolutely certain can be affirmed, and the Gospel itself affords us no information. The Evangelist is mentioned as a relative of Barnabas, as a "comfort" to St Paul, and "profitable for the ministry." But nothing is said of any greater distinction. We may conclude, therefore, that his Gospel was not written before A.D. 63. Again, we may as certainly conclude that it was not written after the destruction of Jerusalem, for it is not likely that he would have omitted to record so remarkable a fulfilment of our Lord's predictions. Hence A.D. 63—70 become our limits, but nearer than this we cannot go.

3. Where? As to the place, the weight of testimony is uniformly in favour of the belief that the Gospel was written and published at Rome. In this Clement, Eusebius, Jerome, Epiphanius all agree. Chrysostom indeed asserts that it was published at Alexandria, but his statement receives no confirmation, as otherwise it could not fail to have done, from any Alexandrine writer.

4. For whom? The traditional statement is that it was in-

1 According to later legends his body was removed from Alexandria to Venice A.D. 827, which was formally placed under his protection. Hence "the Lion," the symbol of St Mark, became the standard of the Venetian Republic.

2 The most direct testimony on this point is that of Irenæus, who says that it was after the deaths of the Apostles Peter and Paul.

3 In modern times Storr has conjectured that St Mark wrote at Antioch. But his ground for this, a comparison of Mark xv. 21 with Acts xi. 20, is not a sufficient basis for the theory.
tended primarily for Gentiles, and especially for those of Rome. A review of the Gospel itself confirms this view. For

(i) All reference to the Jewish Law is omitted, and on his own authority the Evangelist makes no quotations from the Old Testament, with the exception of those in the opening verses from Mal. iii. 1, and Isaiah xl. 3.

(ii) Words are explained which would not be understood by Gentile readers; "Boanerges" (iii. 17); "Talitha cumi" (v. 41); "Corban" (vii. 11); "Bartimæus" (x. 46); "Abba" (xiv. 36); "Eloï, Eloï, lama sabachthani" (xv. 34).

(iii) Jewish usages and other points, with which Jews only could be expected to be familiar, are elucidated. Thus we are told that "the Jews eat not unless they wash their hands off" (vii. 3); that the Mount of Olives "is over against the Temple" (xiii. 3); that "the Passover was killed on the first day of unleavened bread" (xiv. 12); that "the preparation was the day before the Sabbath" (xv. 42).

(iv) Again, St Mark uses several Latin forms, which do not occur in the other Gospels, as Speculator="a soldier of the guard" (vi. 27); xestes=sextarius (vii. 4, 8); quadrantes=a farthing (xii. 42); satisfacere=to content (xv. 15, comp. Acts xxiv. 27); Centurion (xv. 39, 44, 45).

5. In what language? As to the language in which it was written, there never has been any reasonable doubt that it was written in Greek. The hypothesis of a Latin original rests on no foundation. A portion of a supposed original autograph of the Evangelist is shewn in the library of St Mark's at Venice,

1 That in Mark xv. 28 is by many considered as interpolated.
2 Again, two mites are said to make a farthing (xii. 42), and Gehenna is explained as unquenchable fire (ix. 43).
3 "For some considerable part of the first three centuries, the Church of Rome, and most, if not all the Churches of the West, were, if we may so speak, Greek religious colonies. Their language was Greek, their writers Greek, their Scriptures Greek; and many vestiges and traditions shew that their ritual, their Liturgy was Greek... All the Christian extant writings which appeared in Rome and in the West are Greek, or were originally Greek; the Epistles of Clement, the Shepherd of Hermas, the Clementine Recognitions and Homilies; the works of Justin Martyr, down to Caius and Hippolytus the author of the Refutation of All Heresies," Milman's Latin Christianity, I, p. 34.
but it is merely part of an ancient MS. of the Four Gospels, another fragment of which exists at Prague, and was formerly preserved at Aquileia. If the Evangelist had written in Latin, it is unaccountable that no ancient writer should have made mention of the fact.

6. On another point the testimony of the early Church is also unanimous, viz. that the Evangelist composed his Gospel under the eye and direction of St Peter. As to this fact the words of John the Presbyter as quoted by Papias\(^1\) are explicit. "Mark," we read, "having become the interpreter of Peter, wrote accurately all that he remembered\(^2\); but he did not [record] in order that which was either said or done by Christ. For he neither heard the Lord nor followed Him; but afterwards, as I said, [attached himself to] Peter, who used to frame his teaching to meet the wants of his hearers, but not as making a connected narrative of the Lord's discourses." Here it is distinctly asserted that St Peter's teaching was the basis of the second Gospel.

7. Equally definite is the testimony of later writers. Thus Justin Martyr (A.D. 100–120) quotes from the present Gospel under the title of "the Memoirs of Peter\(^3\)." Irenæus (A.D. 177–202) asserts that "after the decease of these (Peter and Paul), Mark, the disciple and interpreter of Peter, himself also handed down to us in writing the things which were preached by Peter\(^4\)." Origen (A.D. 185–254) says still more expressly that "Mark made his Gospel as Peter guided him\(^5\)." Clement of Alexandria (A.D. 191–202) mentions as a "tradition of the elders of former time" that when Peter had publicly preached the Word in Rome, and declared the Gospel by Inspiration, "those who were present, being many, urged Mark, as one who had followed him from a distant time and remembered what he said, to record what he stated; and that he having made his Gospel, gave it to those who made the request of him." Tertullian again (A.D. 190—220) affirms that "the Gospel of Mark is maintained to be Peter's;" while Jerome (A.D. 346—420) tells us that the "Gospel of Mark was composed, Peter relating, and he writing."

\(^2\) Or "that he (Peter) mentioned." The word is ambiguous and may have either of these meanings. See Westcott's Introd. to the Gospels, p. 180, n.
\(^3\) Dial. c. 106. See Westcott's Hist. of N. T. Canon, p. 103.
INTRODUCTION.

8. With this testimony of the early Church before us we may conclude, not indeed that the narrative, as we have it in the second Gospel, was the Apostle's, but

(a) That when the Evangelist, after separation from his master, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, composed his Gospel, he reproduced many of the oral communications of St Peter;

(b) That to the keen memory of the Apostle, recalling scenes in which he had often borne a prominent part, and of which he was an eye-witness, we owe the graphic colouring, the picturesque touches, the minuteness of detail, which his "interpreter" reverently preserved, and faithfully enshrined in the pages of his Gospel.

9. In conformity with this view we find passages in St Mark where the Apostle is specially mentioned, while he is omitted by the other Evangelists. Thus we are told

(1) It was St Peter who followed after our Lord in the morning after the miracles at Capernaum (Mark i. 36);

(2) It was he, who drew attention to the rapid withering of the fig-tree (Mark xi. 21);

(3) It was he, who with three others of the Apostles, asked our Lord as He sat on the Mount of Olives respecting the destruction of Jerusalem (Mark xiii. 3);

(4) It was to him specially amongst the Apostles, to whom the angel directed that the announcement of the Resurrection should be made (Mark xvi. 7).

10. And, on the other hand, it has been thought that the modesty of the Apostle, anxious to pass over what might specially redound to his own honour, has caused the omission of

(a) His name as the prompter of the question respecting “meats not defiling a man” (comp. Mark vii. 17 with Matt. xv. 15);
(b) His walking on the sea (comp. Mark vi. 50, 51 with Matt. xiv. 28—31);
(c) The miracle of the coin in the fish’s mouth (comp. Mark ix. 33 with Matt. xvii. 24—27);
(d) His designation as the Rock, on which the Church should be built (comp. Mark viii. 29, 30 with Matt. xvi. 17—19);
(e) His being sent with another Apostle to make ready the Passover (comp. Mark xiv. 13 with Luke xxii. 8);
(f) The fact that it was for him especially that our Lord prayed that his faith might not “utterly fail” (Luke xxii. 31, 32).

11. As to the genuineness of the Gospel there is the strongest historical evidence in its favour. All ancient testimony makes St Mark the author of a certain Gospel, and that the Gospel, which has come down to us, is his, there is not the least real ground for doubting.

12. One section, however, has given rise to critical difficulties, viz. the concluding portion from xvi. 9—20. In this section, which is wanting in the Vatican and Sinaitic MSS., it has been urged that there is a change of style:—

(a) That everything pictorial, all minute details, all formulas of rapid transition, everything, in fact, which is so characteristic of the Evangelist, suddenly cease;

(b) That brief notices of occurrences more fully described in other Gospels take the place of the graphic narrative which is so striking a feature of the rest of the Book;

(c) That no less than twenty-one words and expressions occur, which are never elsewhere used by St Mark.

1 But it is found in all other Codices of weight, including A, C, D, in the Vet. Lat., Vulg., Syrr., Memph., Theb., Gothic Versions, is quoted by Irenaeus, and supported by Hippolytus, Chrysostom, Augustine, and Leo the Great.
INTRODUCTION.

13. Various reasons have been suggested for the change of style. It has been attributed by some to the death of St Peter, by others to the outbreak of the terrible persecution under Nero, A.D. 64, and the necessity of seeking safety by flight. But at this distance of time it is useless to speculate on the causes of the change, and the two most probable solutions are:

Either (i) That the Evangelist, being prevented at the time from closing his narrative as fully as he had intended, himself added "in another land, and under more peaceful circumstances," the conclusion which we now possess;

Or (ii) That it was added by some other hand, shortly if not immediately afterwards, but at any rate before the publication of the Gospel itself.

CHARACTERISTICS OF THE GOSPEL.

1. From the time and place of its composition we now pass on to the general characteristics of the Gospel.

2. One peculiarity strikes us the moment we open it,—the absence of any genealogy of our Lord. This is the key to much that follows. It is not the design of the Evangelist to present our Lord to us, like St Matthew, as the Messiah, "the Son of David and Abraham" (i. 1), or, like St Luke, as the universal Redeemer, "the Son of Adam, which was the son of God" (iii. 38).

3. His design is to present Him to us as the incarnate and wonder-working Son of God, living and acting amongst men, to portray Him in the fulness of His living energy.

4. The limits indeed and general character of the Work are nowhere more strikingly described than in the words of the Evangelist's own great teacher in Acts x. 36—42, when he addressed himself to Cornelius. Commencing with the Baptism of John and his announcement of the coming of One Mightier

2 Westcott's Introduction, p. 361.
than himself (Acts x. 37; Mark i. 7), he tells us how, at His Baptism, “God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost and with power” (Acts x. 38), and how after His temptation He “went about doing good,” proving Himself Lord over man and nature, and “healing all that were oppressed of the devil; for God was with Him” (Acts x. 38).

5. While doing this, the Evangelist does not merely chronicle each incident, but “surrounds them with all the circumstances that made them impressive to the bystanders,” and constrains us to feel how deep that impression was. Thus we notice

(a) In i. 22, 27, ii. 12, vi. 2, how words and actions of our Lord called forth awe and wonder from the crowds that beheld them;

(b) In iv. 41, vi. 51, x. 24, 26, 32, how the same feelings were evoked in the disciples;

(c) In iii. 10, v. 21, 31, vi. 33, viii., how the multitudes thronged and pressed upon Him so that there was scarce room to stand or sit (ii. 2, iii. 32, iv. 1), or leisure even to eat (iii. 20, vi. 31);

(d) In vi. 56, how the diseased were brought to Him in numbers, and whithersoever He entered, into villages, or cities, or country, they laid the sick in the streets, and besought Him that they might touch, if it were but the border of His garment; and as many as touched Him were made perfectly whole; comp. i. 33, 34, iii. 10.

(e) In i. 23—26, iii. 11, how the unclean spirits no sooner saw Him than they fell down before Him crying with a loud voice, Thou art the Son of God.

6. But while the Evangelist thus brings out the divine power of Him, Who was the “Lion of the tribe of Judah,” he also invites our attention in an especial manner to His human nature. Thus he tells us how our Lord

(a) Could grieve (vii. 34, viii. 12), could love (x. 21), could feel pity (vi. 34), could wonder (vi. 6), could be moved with righteous anger and indignation (iii. 5, viii. 12, 33, x. 14);

(b) Could be sensible of human infirmities, could hunger (xi. 12), could desire rest (vi. 31), could sleep (iv. 38).

7. Again, it is St Mark, who alone describes, on several occasions, the very position, the very gesture, the very words of his Divine Master:

(i) Thus we are bidden to notice
(a) How He looked round with comprehensive gaze upon His hearers (iii. 5, 34), upon the woman with the issue of blood (v. 32), upon His disciples (x. 23), upon the scene of noisy buying and selling in the Temple (xi. 11);
(b) How He took little children into His arms, laid His hands upon them and blessed them (ix. 36, x. 16); how He turned round in holy anger to rebuke St Peter (viii. 33); how He went before His Apostles on the way towards Jerusalem (x. 32); how He sat down and called the Twelve to Him to instruct them in a lesson of humility (ix. 35);

(ii) Again we seem to hear (a) the very Aramaic words that fell from His lips, "Boanerges" (iii. 17); "Talitha cumi" (v. 41); "Corban" (vii. 11); "Ephphatha" (vii. 34); "Abba" (xiv. 36); and (b) the sighs which the sight of human misery drew forth from His compassionate breast (vii. 34, viii. 12).

8. In keeping with this trait, St Mark is careful to record minute particulars of person, number, time, and place, which are unnoticed by the other Evangelists:

(a) Person: i. 29, "They entered into the house of Simon and Andrew with James and John;" i. 36, "Simon and they that were with Him followed after Him;" iii. 6, "the Pharisees took counsel with the Herodians;" iii. 22, "the Scribes which came down from Jerusalem said;" xi. 11, "He went out unto Bethany with the Twelve;" xi. 21, "Peter calling to remembrance, saith unto him;" xiii. 3, "Peter and James and John and Andrew asked him privately;" xiv. 65, "the servants did strike him with the palms of their hands;" xv. 21, "Simon, a Cyrenian...the father of Alexander and Rufus;" xvi. 7, "Go your way, tell his disciples and Peter;"

(b) Number: v. 13, "they were about two thousand," vi. 7, "He began to send them forth, two and two;" vi. 40, "they sat down in ranks, by hundreds and by fifties;” xiv. 30, “before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny me thrice.”

1 For St Mark's use of diminutives, see note v. 23.
INTRODUCTION.

(c) Time: i. 35, “in the morning... a great while before day;” ii. 1, “after some days;” iv. 35, “the same day, when the even was come;” vi. 2, “when the sabbath day was come;” xi. 11, “and now the eventide was come;” xi. 19, “when even was come;” xvi. 25, “and it was the third hour;” xvi. 2, “very early in the morning, the first day of the week.”

(d) Place: ii. 13, “He went forth again by the sea side;” iii. 7, “Jesus withdrew Himself to the sea;” iv. 1, “He began again to teach by the sea side;” v. 20, “He began to publish in Decapolis;” vii. 31, “through the midst of the coasts of Decapolis;” xii. 41, “and Jesus sat over against the treasury;” xiii. 3, “He sat upon the Mount of Olives, over against the temple;” xiv. 68, “and he went out into the porch;” xiv. 39, “and when the centurion, which stood over against him;” xvi. 5, “they saw a young man sitting on the right side.”

9. This minuteness and particularity of observation are reflected in the language and style of the Evangelist:—

(1) His phrases of transition are terse and lively: e. g. “And straightway” occurs about 27 times in his Gospel.

(2) He frequently prefers the present to the historic tense: i. 40, “there cometh a leper to him;” i. 44, “and saith unto him;” ii. 3, “they come unto him, bringing one sick of the palsy;” ii. 10, “He saith to the sick of the palsy;” ii. 17, “When Jesus heard it, He saith unto them;” xi. 1, “And when they came nigh to Jerusalem,... He sendeth forth two of His disciples;” xiv. 43, “immediately, while He yet spake, cometh Judas;” xiv. 66, “there cometh one of the maids of the high priest.”

(3) He often uses a direct instead of an indirect form of expression; iv. 39, “He said unto the sea, Peace, be still;” v. 8, “He said, Come out of the man, thou unclean spirit;” v. 9, “He asked him, What is thy name?” v. 12, “the devils besought Him saying, Send us into the swine;” vi. 23, “he swore unto her, WHATSOEVER thou shalt ask of me, I will give it thee;” vi. 31, “He said unto them, Come yourselves apart," ix. 25, "He rebuked the foul spirit, saying unto him, Thou dumb and deaf spirit, I charge thee;" xii. 6, "He sent him, saying, They will reverence my son."

(4) For the sake of emphasis he repeats what he has said, and couples together words or phrases of similar import to heighten and define his meaning; i. 13, "He was there, in the wilderness;" i. 45, "but he went out and began to publish it much, and to blaze abroad the matter;" iii. 26, "he cannot stand, but hath an end;" iv. 8, "that sprang up and increased; and brought forth;" iv. 33, 34, "and with many such parables spake He unto them...but without a parable spake He not unto them;" v. 23, "that she may be healed, and she shall live;" vi. 25, "and she came in straightway with haste;" vii. 21, "from within, out of the heart of men;" viii. 15, "the leaven of the Pharisees, and the leaven of Herod;" xiv. 68, "I know not, neither understand I what thou sayest."

10. To sum up. "In substance and style and treatment," it has been well said, "the Gospel of St Mark is essentially a transcript from life. The course and issue of facts are imaged in it with the clearest outline. If all other arguments against the mythic origin of the Evangelic narratives were wanting, this vivid and simple record, stamped with the most distinct impress of independence and originality, totally unconnected with the symbolism of the Old Dispensation, totally independent of the deeper reasonings of the New, would be sufficient to refute a theory subversive of all faith in history. The details which were originally addressed to the vigorous intelligence of Roman hearers are still pregnant with instruction for us. The teaching, which 'met their wants' in the first age, finds a corresponding field for its action now."

CHAPTER IV.

ANALYSIS OF THE GOSPEL.

The following Analysis will give a general idea of the construction of St Mark's Gospel:—

PART I.

I. The Preparation:—1. 1—13.

(a) The Baptism and Preaching of John…i. 1—8.
(b) The Baptism of Jesus ..........................i. 9—11.
(c) The Temptation ..................................i. 12—13.

Observe in this Section (i) the conciseness of the Introduction; (ii) the absence of any genealogy of our Lord; (iii) the first use of St Mark's favourite formula of transition, "And straightway;" (iv) the graphic touch that our Lord was "with the wild beasts."

ST MARK.

1—8. The Preaching and Baptism of John.

The beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God; as it is written in the prophets, Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee. The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight. John did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism.

CH. I. 1—8. The Preaching and Baptism of John.

The object of St Mark is to relate the official life and ministry of our Lord. He therefore begins with His baptism, and first relates, as introductory to it, the preaching of John the Baptist.

1. The beginning] St Mark commences his Gospel suddenly and concisely. He does not begin with a genealogy of our Lord, like St Matthew, or with the history of the Infancy, as St Luke, or with the doctrine of the Eternal Word, as St John. He desires to portray Christ in the fulness of His living energy. See Introduction, pp. 16, 17.

of Jesus Christ] The Gospel of Jesus Christ denotes the Glad Tidings concerning Jesus Christ—the Messiah, the anointed Prophet, Priest, and King. For the meaning of the name Jesus see Matt. i. 21.

the Son of God] Contrast this with St Matt. i. 1, “the Son of David, the Son of Abraham.” The first Evangelist writes for Jews, the second for Gentiles.

2. in the prophets] The citation is from two prophets, (1) Mal. iii. 1, (2) Isai. xl. 3. Some would read here in Isaiah the Prophet according to certain MSS. Observe that St Mark in his own narrative quotes the Old Testament only twice, here and xv. 28. See Introduction, p. 12.

4. the wilderness] i.e. the dry and unpeopled region extending from the gates of Hebron to the shores of the Dead Sea. “It is a dreary waste of rocky valleys; in some parts stern and terrible, the rocks cleft and shattered by earthquakes and convulsions into rifts and gorges, sometimes a thousand feet in depth, though only thirty or forty in width...The whole district is, in fact, the slope of the midland chalk and limestone hills, from their highest point of nearly 3000 feet near Hebron, to 1000 or 1500 feet at the valley of the Dead Sea. The 5 of repentance for the remission of sins. And there went out unto him all the land of Judæa, and they of Jerusalem, and were all baptized of him in the river of Jordan, confessing their sins. And John was clothed with camel’s hair, and with a girdle of a skin about his loins; and he did eat locusts and wild honey; and preached, saying, There cometh one mightier than I after me, the latchet of whose shoes I Hebrews fitly call it Jeshimon (1 Sam. xxi. 19, 24), ‘the appalling desolation,’ or ‘horror.’" for the remission] or unto the remission. See margin and comp. Matt. xxvi. 28; Luke i. 77. This remission was to be received of the Messiah. John required of all who came to him a change of mind and life with a view to pardon from Christ. Thus his baptism was preparatory to that of Christ.

5. all the land] This strong expression is peculiar to St Mark. But it is illustrated by the other Gospels. The crowds that flocked to his baptism included representatives of every class, Pharisees and Sadducees (Matt. iii. 7), tax-gatherers (Luke iii. 12), soldiers (Luke iii. 14), rich and poor (Luke iii. 10).

of Jordan] Of here is redundant and appositional. We use it after "town," "city," "valley." For its use after river, comp. "the river of Cydnus," Shak. A. and C. ii. 2. 192. The word "river" does not occur in the best MSS. of Matt. iii. 6. It is used by St Mark, who writes for those who were unacquainted with the geography of Palestine.

6. was clothed] The Evangelist draws our attention to three points in reference to the Baptist:

(a) His appearance. He recalled the asceticism of the Essene. His raiment was of the coarsest texture, such as was worn by Elijah (2 Kings i. 8) and the prophets generally (Zech. xiii. 4). His girdle, an ornament often of the greatest richness in Oriental costume and of the finest linen (Jer. xiii. 1; Ez. xvi. 10) or cotton or embroidered with silver and gold (Dan. x. 5; Rev. i. 13, xv. 6), was of untanned leather (2 Kings i. 8), like that worn by the Bedouin of the present day.

(b) His diet was the plainest and simplest. Locusts were permitted as an article of food (Lev. xi. 21, 22). Sometimes they were ground and pounded, and then mixed with flour and water and made into cakes; sometimes they were salted and then eaten. For wild honey comp. the story of Jonathan, 1 Sam. xiv. 25—27.

(c) His message. (1) That the members of the Elect Nation were all morally unclean, and all needed moral and spiritual regeneration; (2) that One mightier than he was coming; (3) that He would baptize with the Holy Ghost.

7. cometh] present tense. With prophetic foresight the Baptist sees Him already come and in the midst.

latchet] diminutive of latch, like the Fr. lacet dim. of lace, comes from the Latin lagurus=a “noose,” and means anything that catches. We now only apply latch to the catch of a door or gate. We speak of am not worthy to stoop down and unloose. I indeed have baptized you with water: but he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost.

9—11. The Baptism of Jesus.

And it came to pass in those days, that Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan. And straightway coming up out of the water, he saw a "shoe-lace," and "lace" is radically the same word. Here it denotes the thong or fastening by which the sandal was fastened to the foot; comp. Gen. xiv. 23; Isa. v. 27. The office of bearing and unfastening the sandals of great personages fell to the meanest slaves.

to stoop down] This expression is peculiar to St Mark. It is the first of those minute details which we shall find in such abundance in his Gospel.

9—11. The Baptism of Jesus.

9. in those days] i.e. towards the close of the year A.V.C. 781, or A.D. 28, when our Lord was thirty years of age (Lk. iii. 23), the time appointed for the Levite's entrance on "the service of the ministry" (Num. iv. 3).

came from Nazareth] where He had grown up in peaceful seclusion, "increasing in wisdom and stature and in favour with God and man" (Luke ii. 52), in a town unknown and unnamed in the Old Testament, situated among the hills which constitute the southern ridges of Lebanon, just before they sink down into the Plain of Esdraelon.

baptized of] i.e. by John. Comp. Luke xiv. 8, "when thou art bidden of (=by) any man;" Phil. iii. 12, "I am apprehended of (=by) Christ;" Collect for 25th Sunday after Trinity, "may of (=by) Thee be plenteously rewarded."

in Jordan] Either (i) at the ancient ford near Succoth, which some have identified with the Bethabara or rather Bethany of St John (John i. 28); or (ii) at a more southern ford not far from Jericho, whither the multitudes that flocked from Judaea and Jerusalem (Mark i. 5) would have found a speedier and more convenient access. From St Matthew we learn that (i) the purport of the Saviour's journey from Galilee was that He might be thus baptized (Matt. iii. 13); that (ii) His Forerunner instantly recognised His superhuman and stainless nature; that (iii) he tried earnestly to prevent Him; that (iv) his objections were overruled by the reply that thus it became Him to "fulfil all righteousness," i.e. every requirement of the Law. St Luke tells us that the Baptism of our Lord did not take place till "all the people had been baptized" (Luke iii. 21).

10. straightway] This is St Mark's favourite connecting word, and constantly recurs; comp. i. 12, 28, iv. 5, 15, vii. 10, ix. 15, xi. 3. and other places.

he saw] i.e. Jesus, while engaged, as we learn from St Luke iii. 21, in solemn prayer. We find solemn prayer preceding (i) our Lord's Baptism, (ii) His choice of the Twelve (Luke vi. 12), (iii) His Transfiguration (Luke ix. 29), (iv) His Agony in the Garden (Matt. xxvi. 39).
saw the heavens opened, and the Spirit like a dove descending upon him: and there came a voice from heaven, saying, Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

12, 13. The Temptation.

12 And immediately the spirit driveth him into the wilderness.

13 And he was there in the wilderness forty days, tempted of opened] Lit. rent, or rending asunder, one of St Mark’s graphic touches: see the Introduction. The same word in the original Greek is applied to “the old garment rending the new piece” (Luke v. 36); to the veil of the Temple rent in twain at the Crucifixion (Luke xxiii. 45); to the rending of the rocks at the same time (Matt. xxvii. 51); and of the net in the Lake after the Resurrection (John xxi. 11).

11. a voice from heaven] The first of the three heavenly Voices to be heard during our Lord’s Ministry, viz., at (i) His Baptism; (ii) His Transfiguration (Mark ix. 7); (iii) in the courts of the Temple during Holy Week (John xii. 28). This Voice attested in the presence of His Forerunner the Divine Nature of our Lord, and inaugurated His public Ministry. The Baptism was a very important event in our Lord’s life:—

(1) Needing no purification Himself, He submitted to it as the Head of His Body, the Church (Eph. i. 22) for all His members;

(2) He was thus by baptism, and the unction of the Holy Ghost which followed (Matt. iii. 16; comp. Ex. xxix. 4—37; Lev. viii. 1—30), solemnly consecrated to His office as Redeemer;

(3) He “sanctified water to the mystical washing away of sin.” See the Baptismal Office;

(4) He gave to His Church for all time a striking revelation of the Divine Nature, the Son submitting in all lowliness to every requirement of the Law, the Father approving by a voice from heaven, the Spirit descending and abiding upon the Son. “I ad Jordanem, et videbis Trinitatem.”

12, 13. The Temptation.

12. immediately] See above, v. 10. The object of the Saviour’s first Advent was “to destroy the works of the devil” (1 John iii. 8). His very first work, therefore, was to enter on a conflict with the great Enemy of mankind.

driveth him] This is a stronger word than that employed by St Matthew, who says He was led up (Matt. iv. 1), or by St Luke, who says He was led by the Spirit (Luke iv. 1). The same word is here used as in Matt. ix. 38, “Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that He will send forth labourers into His harvest;” in John x. 4, “when He putteth forth His own sheep, He goeth before them.” The word denotes the Divine impulse of the Holy Ghost, which constrained Him to go forth to the encounter, and hints at a rapid translation, such as that by which Prophets and Evangelists were caught up and carried to a distance (1 Kings xviii. 12; 2 Kings ii. 16; Acts viii. 39).
Satan; and was with the wild beasts; and the angels ministered unto him.

14, 15. Beginning of our Lord's Ministry.

Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying, The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand: repent ye, and believe the gospel.

13. tempted of Satan] In Matt. iv. 1 and Luke iv. 2, He is said to have been tempted by the Devil, i.e. the "Slanderer," who slanders God to man (Gen. iii. 1-5) and man to God (Job i. 9—11; Rev. xii. 10). St Mark, who never uses this word, says He was tempted by Satan, i.e. "the Enemy" of God and man alike. He seems to have been permitted to tempt our Lord during the whole of the forty days, but at the end of that period to have assailed Him with increased intensity through every avenue that could allure, as afterwards in Gethsemane through every channel that could terrify and appal (Luke iv. 13).

15. the wild beasts] St Mark relates the Temptation very briefly, but he alone adds the graphic touch to the picture that the Saviour was "with the wild beasts," unhurt by them, as Adam was in Paradise. Comp. Daniel in the den of lions.

16. tempted of Satan] In Matt. iv. 1 and Luke iv. 2, He is said to have been tempted by the Devil, i.e. the "Slanderer," who slanders God to man (Gen. iii. 1-5) and man to God (Job i. 9—11; Rev. xii. 10). St Mark, who never uses this word, says He was tempted by Satan, i.e. "the Enemy" of God and man alike. He seems to have been permitted to tempt our Lord during the whole of the forty days, but at the end of that period to have assailed Him with increased intensity through every avenue that could allure, as afterwards in Gethsemane through every channel that could terrify and appal (Luke iv. 13).

the wild beasts] St Mark relates the Temptation very briefly, but he alone adds the graphic touch to the picture that the Saviour was "with the wild beasts," unhurt by them, as Adam was in Paradise. Comp. Daniel in the den of lions.

the angels] St Matthew records the ministry of Angels at the close as to a Heavenly Prince (Matt. iv. 11). St Mark records a ministry of the same celestial Visitants apparently throughout the trial.

14, 15. Beginning of our Lord's Ministry.

Between the events just described and those on which the Evangelist now enters, must be placed several recorded chiefly by St John; viz., (1) The testimony of the Baptist to Christ as the Lamb of God (John i. 19—34); (2) the early joining of Andrew, John, Simon, Philip and Nathanael (John i. 35—51); (3) the marriage at Cana (John ii. 1—12); (4) the first visit to Jerusalem, first cleansing of the Temple and conference with Nicodemus (John ii. 13—21, iii. 1—21); (5) the ministry with the Baptist (John iii. 22—36); (6) the imprisonment of the Baptist (Luke iii. 19, 20); (7) the return of Jesus to Galilee through Samaria, and the discourse with the woman at Jacob's well (John iv. 3—42); (8) cure of the nobleman's son at Cana (John iv. 43—54).

14. put in prison] The causes of the imprisonment of the Baptist are more fully related by the Evangelist ch. vi. 17—20.

came into Galilee] and commenced the great Galilean ministry. Galilee was the most northern and the most populous of the three provinces, into which the Romans had divided Palestine. It was to Roman Palestine what the manufacturing districts are to England, covered with busy towns and teeming villages, Roman custom-houses and thriving fisheries. See Stanley's Sinai and Palestine, pp. 375—377.

gospel of the kingdom of God] or according to some MSS. the Gospel of God.

15. The time, i.e. the great fore-ordained and predicted time of the Messiah.
16—20. Call of the first Four Disciples.

Now as he walked by the sea of Galilee, he saw Simon and Andrew his brother casting a net into the sea: for they were fishers. And Jesus said unto them, Come ye after me, and I will make you to become fishers of men. And straightway they forsook their nets, and followed him. And when he had gone a little farther thence, he saw James the son of Zebedee, the kingdom of God or as it is called in St Matthew the Kingdom of the Heavens (comp. Dan. ii. 44; vii. 13, 14, 27), denotes here the Kingdom of grace, the visible Church, of which our Lord described (a) in the parable of “the Mustard Seed” (Matt. xiii. 31, 32), its slight and despised beginning; (b) in that of “the Hidden Leaven” and the “Seed growing secretly,” its hidden and mysterious working (Matt. xiii. 33; Mark iv. 26—29); (c) and again in the first two Parables its final and assured triumph in spite of the obstacles set forth in the Parable of “the Tares” (Matt. xiii. 24—30).

16—20. Call of the first Four Disciples.

16. as he walked] The Saviour had come down (Luke iv. 31; John iv. 47, 51) from the high country of Galilee, and now made His permanent abode in the deep retreat of the Sea of Galilee at Capernaum “His own city” (Matt. iv. 13; Luke iv. 31), whence He could easily communicate, as well by land as by the Lake, with many important towns, and in the event of any threatened persecution retire into a more secure region.

the sea of Galilee called (i) in the Old Testament “the Sea of Chinnereth” or “Cinneroth” (Num. xxxiv. 11; Josh. xii. 3) from a town of that name which stood on or near its shore (Josh. xix. 35), in the New (ii) “the Sea of Galilee” from the province which bordered on its western side (Matt. iv. 18; Mark vii. 31), (iii) “the Lake of Gennesaret” (Luke v. 1), (iv) “the Sea of Tiberias” (John xx. 1), and sometimes (v) simply “the Sea” (Matt. iv. 15).

he saw Simon] whom He had already invited to His acquaintance (John i. 40—42); He now calls him to the Apostleship. The recent cure of the son of the officer in Herod’s court had roused much interest at Capernaum, and many pressed upon the Saviour to “hear the Word of God” (Luke v. 1). It became clear, therefore, that an opportunity was offered for an active and systematic ministry in Galilee, and four of the number afterwards known as “the Twelve” were now permanently attached to the Saviour’s Person, and invested with power to become “fishers of men.”

a net] The net here spoken of and in Matt. iv. 18 was a casting-net, circular in shape, “like the top of a tent,” in Latin funda or jaculum. The net spoken of in Matt. xiii. 47, 48 is the drag-net or hauling-net, the English seine or sean, sometimes half a mile in length; that alluded to in Luke v. 4—9 is the bag-net or basket-net, so constructed and worked as to enclose the fish out in deep water.
and John his brother, who also were in the ship mending their nets. And straightway he called them: and they left their father Zebedee in the ship with the hired servants, and went after him.

And they went into Capernaum; and straightway on the sabbath day he entered into the synagogue, and taught. And they were astonished at his doctrine: for he taught them as one that had authority, and not as the scribes.

19. James the son of Zebedee.] Two brothers had already been called and two more were now to join them.

20. straightway] Notice the frequency of this formula of transition. It has occurred just before, v. 18.

the hired servants] The mention of these, of the two vessels employed (Luke v. 7), and the subsequent allusion to St John's acquaintance with a person in so high a position as the high priest (John xviii. 15), seem to indicate that Zebedee, if not a wealthy man, was at any rate of some position at Capernaum.

went after him] For the miraculous draught of fishes which accompanied or followed this incident see Luke v. 2—11. Observe how gradually the Four had been called to their new work; (1) first they were disciples of the Baptist (John i. 35); (2) then they were directed by him to the Lamb of God (John i. 36); (3) afterwards they were invited by our Lord to see where He dwelt (John i. 39); (4) then they became witnesses of His first miracle (John ii. 2); (5) now after a further exhibition of His power over nature they are enrolled amongst His attached followers. The still more formal call was yet to come.

21. Capernaum] is not mentioned in the Old Testament or the Apocrypha. It was situated on the western shore of the Lake, in "the land of Gennesaret" (Matt. xiv. 34; John vi. 17, 24), and was of sufficient size to be always called "a city" (Matt. ix. 1). It was a customs station (Matt. ix. 9; Luke v. 27), and the quarters of a detachment of Roman soldiers (Matt. viii. 9; Luke vii. 8). It was the scene of many striking incidents in the Gospel History besides that here recorded. It was at Capernaum that the Lord healed Simon's wife's mother (Matt. viii. 14); wrought the miracle on the centurion's servant (Matt. viii. 5); cured the paralytic (Matt. ix. 1); called Levi from the toll-house (Matt. ix. 9); taught His Apostles the lesson of humility from the child set in their midst (Mark ix. 35—37), and delivered the wonderful discourse respecting the "Bread of Life" (John vi. 59).

22. not as the scribes] The Scribes, Sopherim, first came into prominence in the time of Ezra. Their duty was to copy, read, study, explain, and "fence round" the Law with "the tradition of the
And there was in their synagogue a man with an unclean spirit; and he cried out, saying, Let us alone; what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art, the Holy One of God. And Jesus rebuked him, saying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him. And when the unclean spirit had torn him, and cried with a loud voice, he came Elders” (Matt. xv. 2). The Scribes proper only lasted till the death of Simon “the Just,” b. c. 300. In the New Testament they are sometimes called “lawyers” (Matt. xxii. 35), or “Doctors of the Law” (Luke v. 17). Their teaching was preeminently second-hand. They simply repeated the decisions of previous Rabbis. But our Lord’s teaching was absolute and independent. His formula was not “It hath been said,” but “I say unto you.”

23. with an unclean spirit] lit. in an unclean spirit, i. e. in his power, under his influence. St Luke describes him as having a “spirit of an unclean demon” (Luke iv. 33). He seems to have entered unobserved amongst the throng, but could not resist the spell of that Pure Presence.

24. Let us alone] Many MSS. omit the Greek word thus translated. Even if genuine, it appears to be rather an exclamation of horror=the Latin vah! heu! It is not the man who cries out so much as the Evil Spirit which had usurped dominion over him.

Jesus of Nazareth] · As the angels had in songs of rapture recognised their King (Luke ii. 13, 14), so the evil spirits instantly recognise Him, but with cries of despair. They evince no hope and no submission, only inveterate hostility. They believe and tremble (James ii. 19). Man alone recognises not the “King in His beauty” (Is. xxxiii. 17). “He was in the world and the world was made by Him,” and yet “the world knew Him not” (John i. 10).

25. rebuked him] Though he had borne testimony to Christ, yet his testimony is not accepted, for it was probably intended only to do harm, “to anticipate and mar His great purpose and plan.” Compare the conduct of St Paul in reference to the girl possessed with the spirit of Apollo (Acts xvi. 16—18).

Hold thy peace] lit. Be muzzled. The same word is used by our Lord in rebuking the storm on the Lake, “Peace, be still” (Mark iv. 39). Wyclif translates it “wexe doumbe.” The word means (1) “to close the mouth with a muzzle,” comp. 1 Cor. ix. 9, “Thou shalt not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn,” cited here and in 1 Tim. v. 18 from Deut. xxv. 4; (2) to reduce to silence, as in Matt. xxii. 34. “But when the Pharisees had heard that He had put the Sadducees to silence,” and 1 Pet. ii. 15, “so is the will of God, that with well doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men.” It is also used in reference to the man who had not on the wedding garment, “he was speechless” (Matt. xxii. 12).

26. had torn him] i. e. thrown him into strong convulsions, and according to St Luke’s account, into the midst (Luke iv. 35), comp.
out of him. And they were all amazed, insomuch that they questioned among themselves, saying, What thing is this? what new doctrine is this? for with authority commandeth he even the unclean spirits, and they do obey him. And immediately his fame spread abroad throughout all the region round about Galilee.

29—34. The Cure of Peter’s Wife’s Mother and Others.

And forthwith, when they were come out of the synagogue, they entered into the house of Simon and Andrew, with James and John. But Simon’s wife’s mother lay sick of a fever, and anon they tell him of her. And he came and took her by the hand, and lifted her up; and immediately the fever left her, and she ministered unto them. And at even, when the sun did set, they brought unto him all that were diseased, and them that were possessed with devils. And all the city was gathered together at the door. And he healed many that were sick of divers diseases.

Mark ix, 26. The first miracle recorded by St Matt. is the healing of a leper by a touch (Matt. viii. 1—4); the first miracle which St John records is the changing water into wine (John ii. 1—11); the first miracle recorded by St Mark and St Luke (iv. 33—37) is this casting out of a demon in the synagogue of Capernaum.

29—34. The Cure of Peter’s Wife’s Mother and Others.

29. they] i.e. the Lord and the four disciples, whom He had already called. It was a Sabbath day, and He probably went to the Apostle’s house to eat bread. Comp. Luke xiv. 1.

30. Simon’s wife’s mother] For St Paul’s allusion to him as a married man see 1 Cor. ix. 5.

sick of a fever] a “great” or “violent fever” according to the physician St Luke. Intermittent fever and dysentery, the latter often fatal, are ordinary Arabian diseases.

31. he came] Observe all the graphic touches in this verse; the Lord (i) went to the sufferer, (ii) took her by the hand, (iii) lifted her up, and (iv) the fever, rebuked by the Lord of life (Luke iv. 39), left her, and (v) she began to minister unto them.

32. when the sun did set] All three Evangelists carefully record, that it was not till the sun was setting or had actually set, that these sick were brought to Jesus. The reason of this probably was (1) either that they waited till the mid-day heat was past and the cool of the evening was come, or (2) the day being the Sabbath (Mark i. 20—32), they were unwilling to violate the sacred rest of the day, and so waited till it was ended.

33. at the door] i.e. the door of St Peter’s house, “the door so well eases, and cast out many devils; and suffered not the devils to speak, because they knew him.

And in the morning, rising up a great while before day, he went out, and departed into a solitary place, and there prayed. And Simon and they that were with him followed after him. And when they had found him, they said unto him, All men seek for thee. And he said unto them, Let us go into the next towns, that I may preach there also: for therefore came I forth. And he preached in their synagogues throughout all Galilee, and cast out devils.

known to him who supplied St Mark with materials for his Gospel.” St Matthew connects the cures now wrought with the prophecy of Isaiah liii. 4, Himself took our infirmities and bare our sicknesses.

35. in the morning,—a great while before day] Another graphic touch of the Evangelist. He brings the scene before our eyes. The previous day had been a long day of conflict with and victory over the kingdom of sin and death. He now retires to refresh Himself in the heaven of prayer, in communion with His Father. He prepares Himself in the desert for a second great mission of Love, this time accompanied by His first four disciples.

a solitary place] “A remarkable feature of the Lake of Gennesaret was that it was closely surrounded with desert solitudes. These ‘desert places’ thus close at hand on the table-lands or in the ravines of the eastern and western ranges, gave opportunities of retirement for rest or prayer. ‘Rising up early in the morning while it was yet dark’ or ‘passing over to the other side in a boat,’ He sought these solitudes, sometimes alone, sometimes with His disciples. The Lake in this double aspect is thus a reflex of that union of energy and rest, of active labour and deep devotion, which is the essence of Christianity, as it was of the Life of Him, in whom that union was first taught and shewn.” Stanley’s Sinai and Palestine, pp. 378, 379.

followed after Him] The word in the original is very expressive and only occurs here. It denotes (i) to follow hard upon, (ii) to pursue closely, to track out. “Simon and his friends almost hunted for Him.” It generally implies a hostile intent. It occurs in a good sense in the LXX, rendering of Ps. xxiii. 6, “Thy mercy shall follow me.”

38. towns] rather village-towns or country-towns. The word only occurs here. His gracious Presence was not to be confined to Capernaum, Dalmanutha, Magdala, Bethsaida, Chorazin were all near at hand. For the crowded population of Galilee, see Josephus B. J. III. 3, 2.
40—45. Cleansing of a Leper.

And there came a leper to him, beseeching him, and kneel- ing down to him, and saying unto him, If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean. And Jesus, moved with compassion, put forth his hand, and touched him, and saith unto him, I will; be thou clean. And as soon as he had spoken, immediately the leprosy departed from him, and he was cleansed. And he straitly charged him, and forthwith sent him away; and saith unto him, See thou say nothing to any a leper] One afflicted with the most terrible of all maladies, "a living death, a poisoning of the springs, a corrupting of all the humours, of life; a dissolution little by little of the whole body, so that one limb after another actually decayed and fell away." The Jews called it "the Finger of God," and emphatically "the Stroke," they never expected to cure it (see 2 Kings v. 7). With lip covered (Ezek. xxiv. 17), and bare head (Lev. xiv. 8, 9), and rent garments, the leper bore about with him the emblems of mortality, "himself a dreadful parable of death." Compare the cases of Moses (Ex. iv. 6), Miriam (Num. xii. 10), Naaman (2 Kings v. 1), Gehazi (2 Kings v. 27).

kneeling down to him] St Mark alone describes this attitude of the leper, as also the look of compassion which beamed forth from the face of the Lord, spoken of in the next verse.

41. and touched him] though this act was strictly forbidden by the Mosaic Law as causing ceremonial defilement. But "He, Himself remaining undefiled, cleansed him whom He touched; for in Him life overcame death, and health sickness, and purity defilement."

43. And he straitly charged him] The word thus rendered occurs in four other places; (1) Matt. ix. 30, "Jesus straitly charged them, saying, See that no man know it;" (2) Mark xiv. 5, "And they murmured against her," said of the Apostles in their indignation against Mary; (3) John xi. 33, 38, "And He groaned in spirit," said of our Lord at the grave of Lazarus. It denotes (1) to be very angry or indignant, (2) to charge or command with sternness.

straitly = strictly. Comp. Gen. xliii. 7, "The man asked us straitly of our state;" Josh. vi. 1, "Now Jericho was straitly shut up." Comp. also Shakespeare, Richard III. i. 1. 85, 86, sent him away] or put him forth. "He would allow no lingering, but required him to hasten on his errand, lest the report of what had been done should outrun him." It is the same word in the original as in Mark i. 12.

"His majesty hath straitly given in charge That no man shall have private conference."

man: but go thy way, shew thyself to the priest, and offer for thy cleansing those things which Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them. But he went out, and began to publish it much, and to blaze abroad the matter, insomuch that Jesus could no more openly enter into the city, but was without in desert places: and they came to him from every quarter.

1—12. The Paralytic and the Power to forgive Sins.

2 And again he entered into Capernaum, after some days; and it was noised that he was in the house. And straightway many were gathered together, insomuch that there was no room to receive them, no, not so much as about the door: and he preached the word unto them. And they come unto him, bringing one sick of the palsy, which was borne of four. And when they could not come nigh unto him for the press, they uncovered the roof where he was:

44. shew thyself to the priest] that he may attest the reality of thy cure (Lev. xiv. 3).

those things which Moses commanded] viz. (1) two birds, "alive and clean," Lev. xiv. 4, (2) cedar wood, (3) scarlet, and (4) hyssop; this was for the preliminary ceremony (Lev. xiv. 4—7). On the eighth day further offerings were to be made, (1) two he lambs without blemish, (2) one ewe lamb, (3) three tenth deals of fine flour, (4) one log of oil. If the leper was poor, he was permitted to offer one lamb and two turtledoves or two young pigeons, with one tenth deal of fine flour.

for a testimony unto them] Rather, for a testimony against them, i.e. against their unbelief in refusing to acknowledge our Lord to be all He claimed to be in spite of His mighty works. Comp. Mark vi. 11 with Luke ix. 5.

45. began to publish it much] even as others in similar circumstances found it impossible to keep silence; comp. (1) the blind man, Matt. ix. 30, 31; (2) the man with an impediment of speech, Mark vii. 36.

could no more openly enter into the city] In these words we have perhaps one of the reasons why the Lord enjoined silence on the leper. A certain degree of secrecy and reserve was plainly necessary in respect to the Lord's miracles, or it would have been impossible for Him to have moved from place to place.

CH. II. 1—12. The Paralytic and the Power to forgive Sins.

1. he entered] after the subsidence of the late excitement.

the house] Either His own house, which He occupied with His mother and His brethren (Mark iii. 21), or possibly that of St Peter.

2. about the door] All the avenues of approach to the house were blocked up, and the courtyard or vestibule was filled.

3. borne of four] Notice the pictorial definiteness of the Evangelist.

4. they uncovered the roof] They appear (1) to have ascended to the flat roof probably by a flight of steps outside (Luke v. 19); (2) to have and when they had broken it up, they let down the bed wherein the sick of the palsy lay. When Jesus saw their faith, he said unto the sick of the palsy, Son, thy sins be forgiven thee. But there were certain of the scribes sitting there, and reasoning in their hearts, Why doth this man thus speak blasphemies? who can forgive sins but God only? And immediately when Jesus perceived in his spirit that they so reasoned within themselves, he said unto them, Why reason ye these things in your hearts? Whether is it easier to say to the sick of the palsy, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to broken up the tiling or thin stone slabs, sometimes used at this day; (3) to have lowered the paralytic upon his bed through the opening into the presence of the Great Healer. The room was probably an upper-chamber, which often extended over the whole area of the house. For other notices of such upper-rooms compare Acts i. 13, ix. 37, xx. 8.

5. their faith] The faith of all, of the paralytic himself and those that bore him. The Holy One did not reject this "charitable work" of theirs in bringing him before Him, any more than He does that of those who bring infants to Him in Holy Baptism.

Son] St Luke, v. 20, gives the words thus, "Man, thy sins are forgiven thee." St Mark has preserved to us the tenderer word, even as St Matthew has done in his account (Matt. ix. 22).

thy sins] His sufferings may have been due to sinful excesses. Comp. the words of the Saviour to the man, who had an infirmity thirty and eight years, "Behold thou art made whole; sin no more, lest a worse thing come unto thee," John v. 14. At any rate his consciousness of sin was such that it was necessary to speak to his soul before healing was extended to his body. See Luke vii. 48.

be forgiven] The mood here is not optative but indicative. Thy sins are, or rather, have been forgiven thee.

6. certain of the scribes] During our Lord's absence from Capernaum it would seem there had arrived not only from Galilee, but even from Judæa and Jerusalem (Luke v. 17), Pharisees and lawyers, who were insidiously watching all that He did. Emissaries from the hostile party at Jerusalem, where the Lord's death had already been decreed (John v. 18), they proceeded to carry out a settled plan of collecting charges against Him and thwarting His work of mercy.

7. blasphemies] for the claim to forgive sins implied a distinct equality with God in respect to one of His most incommunicable attributes.

8. in his spirit] His soul was human, but His "Spirit" was divine, and by this divine faculty He penetrated and then revealed to them the "thoughts and counsels of their hearts," comp. Heb. iv. 12. On this peculiarly Divine faculty see 1 Sam. xvi. 7; 1 Chron. xxviii. 9; 2 Chron. vi. 30.

9. Whether is it easier] Observe what is here contrasted. Not, "Which is easier, to forgive sin or to raise a paralytic?" but "Which is say, Arise, and take up thy bed, and walk? But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins, (he saith to the sick of the palsy,) I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy bed, and go thy way into thine house. And immediately he arose, took up the bed, and went forth before them all; insomuch that they were all amazed, and glorified God, saying, We never saw it on this fashion.

13—22. The Call of St Matthew; the Discourse at his House.

And he went forth again by the sea side; and all the multitude resorted unto him, and he taught them. And as he passed by, he saw Levi the son of Alphæus sitting at the easier, to claim this power or claim that; to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee, or to say, Arise and walk? as He had already said to the impotent man at the pool of Bethesda (John v. 8).

10. that ye may know] “By doing that which is capable of being put to the proof, I will vindicate My right and power to do that which, in its very nature, is incapable of being proved.”

the Son of man] This is the first time this title occurs in St Mark, where we find it 14 times. This title is never applied by the writers of the Gospels themselves to the Eternal Son of God. Whenever it occurs, it is so applied by our Lord, and no other. There are only three exceptions to this rule, (1) where the title is used by Stephen (Acts vii. 56), and (2) by St John (Rev. i. 13, xiv. 14). During, however, the period of His sojourn here on earth, there was no title our Lord was pleased so often and so constantly to apply to Himself. Son of a man He was not. Son of Man he was. The word used in the original for “man” implies human being; and the expression denotes that He who was the Son of God from all Eternity became the “Son of Man” in time, the second Adam, the second Head of our race, the crown of our humanity. For the expression in the O. T. see Dan. vii. 13.

on earth] This power is not exercised, as ye think, only in heaven by God, but also by the Son of Man on earth.

11. thy bed] The original word thus rendered means a portable pallet, little more than a mat, used for mid-day sleep, and the service of the sick. It was of the commonest description and used by the poorest.

12. immediately] Observe the suddenness and completeness of the cure, and contrast it with the miracles of an Elijah (1 Kings xvii. 17—24), or an Elisha (2 Kings iv. 32—36).

before them all] Now yielding before him and no longer blocking up his path.

13—22. Call of St Matthew; the Discourse at his House.

13. he went forth] i.e. from the town of Capernaum to the shore of the Lake, probably through a suburb of fishers’ huts and custom-houses.
receipt of custom, and said unto him, Follow me. And he arose and followed him. And it came to pass, that, as Jesus sat at meat in his house, many publicans and sinners sat also together with Jesus and his disciples; for there were many, and they followed him. And when the scribes and Pharisees saw him eat with publicans and sinners, they said unto

14. Levi] This was probably the name by which he was known to his Jewish brethren. He may have changed his name after and in memory of his call, so that he who had before been known by the name of Levi, was now known as Matthew, or Mattathias, a favourite name amongst the Jews after the Captivity, and = Theodore, the “Gift of God.”

son of Alpheus] Some have identified this Alpheus with Alpheus the father of St James the Less. But in the lists of the Apostles the two are never named together, like other pairs of brothers in the Apostolic body.

receipt of custom] Situated as Capernaum was at the nucleus of roads which diverged to Tyre, Damascus, Jerusalem, and Sepphoris, it was a busy centre of merchandise, and a natural place for the collection of tribute and taxes.

Follow me] Though he belonged to a class above all others hated and despised by the Jews, trebly hated where, as in the present instance, the tax-gatherer was himself a Jew, yet the Lord did not hesitate to invite him to become one of the Twelve.

and followed him] We cannot doubt that the new disciple had already listened to some of the discourses and beheld some of the wondrous miracles of Christ, so that he was now in the eyes of Him, Who read the heart, prepared for his call.

15. sat at meat] It is St Luke who tells us that St Matthew made “a great feast” in honour of his new Master (Luke v. 29), and to it, perhaps by way of farewell, he invited many of his old associates. This shews that he had made large sacrifices in order to follow Christ; see Neander’s Life of Christ, p. 230.

publicans and sinners] The “publicans” properly so called were persons who farmed the Roman taxes and in later times were usually Roman knights and men of wealth and position. Those here alluded to were the inferior officers, natives of the province where the taxes were collected, called properly portilores. So notorious were they for rapacity and dishonesty that Suetonius (Vit. Vesp. 1.) tells us how several cities erected statues to Sabinus, “the honest publican,” and Theocritus in answer to the question, which were the worst kind of wild beasts, said, “On the mountains bears and lions; in cities, publicans and pettifoggers.” The Jews included them in the same category with harlots and sinners; see Matt. xxi. 31, 32, xviii. 17. Observe that in his Gospel St Matthew alone styles himself in the list of the Apostles “the publican.”

16. they said unto his disciples] Overawed by the miracles He had wrought and the overthrow they had lately experienced at the healing of his disciples, How is it that he eateth and drinketh with publicans and sinners? When Jesus heard it, he saith unto them, They that are whole have no need of the physician, but they that are sick: I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance. And the disciples of John and of the Pharisees used to fast: and they come and say unto him, Why do the disciples of John and of the Pharisees fast, but thy disciples fast not? And Jesus said unto them, Can the children of the bridechamber fast, while the bridegroom is with them? as long as they have the bridegroom with them, they cannot fast. But the days will come, when the bridegroom shall be taken away from them, and then shall they fast in those days. No man also seweth a piece of new the paralytic, and not as yet venturing on any open rupture with Him, they vent their displeasure on His disciples. It is not likely that the Pharisees were present at the feast, or they would have involved themselves in the same blame. Probably they looked in while it was in progress, and afterwards came forward to the disciples coming out.

18. the disciples of John] The contrast between their Master in prison and Jesus at the feast could not fail to be felt. Perhaps the Pharisees had solicited them to make common cause with themselves in this matter. Their rigorous asceticism offered various points of contact between them and the disciples of the Baptist.

used to fast] The Jews were wont to fast on Thursday because on that day Moses was said to have re-ascended Mount Sinai; on Monday because on that day he returned. Comp. the words of the Pharisee, Luke xviii. 12, “I fast twice in the week.” Perhaps this feast took place on one of their weekly fasts.

19. the children of the bridechamber] i.e. the friends and companions of the bridegroom, who accompanied him to the house of the bride for the marriage. Comp. Judges xiv. 11.

the bridegroom] He reminds the disciples of John of the image under which their own great Master had spoken of Him as the Bridegroom (John iii. 29), at the sound of Whose voice he rejoiced.

20. the days will come] The thought of death accompanies our Lord even to the social meal, and in the now undisguised hatred of His opponents He sees a token of what must hereafter come to pass. A dim hint of the same kind He had already given in His saying to the Jewish rulers, “Destroy this Temple and in three days I will raise it up” (John ii. 19), and in His conversation with Nicodemus (John iii. 14).

taken away] The same word is used by each of the Synoptists, and implies a violent termination of His life. The words occur nowhere else in the New Testament. This is the first open allusion recorded by St Mark, though probably little understood at the time, to the death, which was so soon to separate Him from His disciples.
cloth on an old garment: else the new piece that filled it up taketh away from the old, and the rent is made worse. And 22 no man putteth new wine into old bottles: else the new wine doth burst the bottles, and the wine is spilled, and the bottles will be marred: but new wine must be put into new bottles.

23—28. The Disciples pluck the Ears of Corn.

And it came to pass, that he went through the corn 23 fields on the sabbath day; and his disciples began, as they went, to pluck the ears of corn. And the Pharisees said 24 unto him, Behold, why do they on the sabbath day that which is not lawful? And he said unto them, Have ye 25

21. new cloth] Literally uncarded or unteazed cloth.
else] i.e. if he do, the new piece taketh from the old garment, and makes worse its original rents.

22. new] Men do not pour new, or unfermented, wine into old and worn wine-skins. "My disciples," our Lord seems to say, "are not yet strong. They have not yet been baptized into the Spirit. They need tenderness and consideration. They could no more endure severe new doctrine than an old robe could the insertion of a piece of new cloth which had never passed through the hands of the fuller." In training His disciples our Lord never took the old wine from them till they were capable of relishing the new. In Rom. xiv. we have the best practical commentary on His words, to pluck the ears of corn] From St Matthew we learn that they were an hungry (Matt. xii. 1). The act described marks the season of the year. The wheat was ripe, for they would not have rubbed barley in their hands (Luke vi. 1). We may conclude therefore, the time was a week or two after the Passover, when the first ripe sheaf was offered as the firstfruits of the harvest. For the exact date of this Sabbath see Wieseler's Chronol. Synop. p. 225 sq.

23—28. The Disciples pluck the Ears of Corn.

23. on the sabbath day] St Luke tells us that this was a "second first Sabbath" i.e. either (1) the first Sabbath after the second day of unleavened bread; or (2) the first Sabbath in the second year of a Sabbatical cycle; or (3) the first Sabbath of the second month (Luke vi. 1). See Wieseler's Chronol. Synop. p. 353 sq.

24. that which is not lawful] They did not accuse them of theft, for the Law allowed what they were doing (Deut. xxiii. 25). They accused them of profaning the Sabbath. The Law of course forbade reaping and threshing on that day, but the Rabbis had decided that even to pluck corn was to be construed as reaping, and to rub it as threshing. They even forbade walking on grass as a species of threshing, and would not allow so much as a fruit to be plucked from a tree on that day. See Lightfoot, Hor. Heb, in Matt. xii. 2.
never read what David did, when he had need, and was an hungred, he, and they that were with him? how he went into the house of God in the days of Abiathar the high priest, and did eat the shewbread, which is not lawful to eat but for the priests, and gave also to them which were with him? And he said unto them, The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath: therefore the Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath.

1—6. The Man with the Withered Hand.

3 And he entered again into the synagogue; and there was a man there which had a withered hand. And they watched him, whether he would heal him on the sabbath

25. Have ye never read] Rather, Did ye never read? With a gentle irony He adopts one of the favourite formulas of their own Rabbis, and inquires if they had never read what David their favourite hero had done when flying from Saul. He came to the high priest at Nob, and entered the Tabernacle, and ate of the hallowed bread (1 Sam.
xxi. 1—9), of the “twelve cakes of fine flour” which no stranger might eat (Ex. xxix. 33).

xxviii. 16, we find Ahimelech substituted for Abiathar; while in 2 Sam.
xx. 25, and every other passage of the O. T., we are told it was Abiathar who was priest with Zadok in David's reign, and that he was the son of Ahimelech. Some therefore suppose that there is a clerical error here in the MSS. Others think that the loaves of shewbread belonged to Abiathar, at this time a priest (Lev. xxiv.
9), that he persuaded his father to let David have them, and gave them to him with his own hand.

CH. III. 1—6. THE MAN WITH THE WITHERED HAND.

1. And he entered] The narrative of St Mark here is peculiarly vivid and pictorial. He places the scene actually before us and relates it very much in the present tense. The incident occurred at Capernaum, and probably on the next Sabbath. See Luke vi. 6.

a withered hand] It is characteristic of the physician St Luke that he tells us it was his “right hand.” It was probably not merely paralysed in the sinews, but dried up and withered, the result of a partial atrophy. Comp. 1 Kings xiii. 4, for the parallel case of Jeroboam.
Such a malady, when once established, is incurable by any human art.

2. they watched him] The same company of Scribes and Pharisees had gathered together from Judæa, Jerusalem, and Galilee itself (Luke
v. 17), to find matter of accusation against Him. They watched Him with no friendly purpose. The word itself signifies stratagem and spies;” Acts ix. 24, “And they watched the gates day and night to kill him.”
day; that they might accuse him. And he saith unto the man which had the withered hand, Stand forth. And he saith unto them, Is it lawful to do good on the sabbath days, or to do evil? to save life, or to kill? But they held their peace. And when he had looked round about on them with anger, being grieved for the hardness of their hearts, he saith unto the man, Stretch forth thine hand. And he stretched it out: and his hand was restored whole as the other. And the Pharisees went forth, and straightway took

3. he saith] It would seem that the Pharisees first asked Him, "Is it lawful to heal on the Sabbath day?" (Matt. xii. 10). This question He answered, as was His wont (Matt. xxi. 24), by a counter-question, "I will ask you one thing. Is it lawful on the Sabbath days to do good or to do evil? to save life or to destroy it?"

4. But they held their peace] St Mark alone mentions this striking circumstance, as also what we read in the next verse, that "He looked round about on them with anger."

5. with anger] Not merely did He look upon them, He "looked round" upon them, surveyed each face with "an all-embracing gaze of grief and anger." Feelings of "grief" and "anger" are here ascribed to Him, who was "very God and very Man," just as in another place we read that "He wept" before the raising of Lazarus (John xi. 35), and "slept" before He stilled the storm (Mark iv. 38), and was an hungred (Matt. iv. 2), and was "exceeding sorrowful even unto death" (Matt. xxvi. 38).

being grieved] The word here used occurs nowhere else in the New Testament, and implies "a feeling of compassion for," even in the midst of anger at their conduct.

hardness] The word thus rendered denotes literally (1) the process by which the extremities of fractured bones are re-united by a callus; then (2) callousness, hardness. St Paul uses the word in Rom. xi. 25, saying, "I would not have you ignorant, brethren,...that hardness (see margin) in part is happened to Israel;" and again in Eph. iv. 18, "Having the understanding darkened...because of the hardness of their heart" (see margin again). The verb, which = "to petrify," "to harden into stone," occurs in Mark vi. 52, viii. 17; John xii. 40; 2 Cor. iii. 14.

whole as the other] This is one of the instances where our Lord may be said to have wrought a miracle without a word, or the employment of any external means. It also forms one of seven miracles wrought on the Sabbath-day. The other six were, (1) The demoniac at Capernaum (Mark i. 21); (2) Simon’s wife’s mother (Mark i. 29); (3) the impotent man at the pool of Bethesda (John v. 9); (4) the woman with a spirit of infirmity (Luke xiii. 14); (5) the man who had the dropsy (Luke xiv. 1); (6) the man born blind (John ix. 14).

6. And the Pharisees went forth] The effect of this miracle was very great. The Scribes and Pharisees were "filled with madness."
counsel with the Herodians against him, how they might destroy him.

7—12. Withdrawal of Jesus to the Lake of Gennesaret.

7 But Jesus withdrew himself with his disciples to the sea: and a great multitude from Galilee followed him, and from Judæa, and from Jerusalem, and from Idumæa, and from beyond Jordan, and they about Tyre and Sidon, a great multitude, when they had heard what great things he did, came unto him. And he spake to his disciples, that a small ship should wait on him because of the multitude, lest the Saviour had not merely broken their traditions, but He had put them to silence before all the people. In their blind hate they did not shrink even from joining the Herodians, the court party, and their political opponents, and taking counsel with them how they might put Him to death. As before at Jerusalem so now in Galilee this design is deliberately formed.

the Herodians] This is the first occasion on which the Herodians are mentioned. We shall meet with them again in Mark xii. 13, on the “Day of Questions” in Holy Week. Just as the partisans of Marius were called “Mariani,” of Pompeius “Pompeiani,” of Otho “Othoniani,” so the partisans of Herod the Great and his successors were called “Herodiani.” The sect was rather a political than a religious body. Adopting Sadducean opinions, they held that the hopes of the Jewish nation rested on the Herods as a bulwark against Roman ambition, and almost looked to them for a fulfilment of the prophecies respecting the advent of the Messiah. They favoured the compromise between the ancient faith and later civilisation, which Herod inaugurated, and his successors endeavoured to realise. On one occasion our Lord warns his disciples against “the leaven of Herod” in close connection with “the leaven of the Pharisees” (Mark viii. 15; Luke xii. 1). Galilee being the chief centre of Christ’s activity, the Pharisees from Judæa were glad on the present occasion to avail themselves of any aid from the tetrarch of this part of Palestine and his followers.

7—12. Withdrawal of Jesus to the Lake of Gennesaret.

7. a great multitude] Observe the wide area from which the multitude were now gathered together; the region (1) of Tyre and Sidon and Galilee in the North of Palestine; (2) of Judæa and Jerusalem in the centre; (3) of Pææa “beyond the Jordan” on the East, (4) of Idumæa in the extreme South. This is the only place where Idumæa, the country occupied by the descendants of Esau, is mentioned in the N. T. In the O. T. the name is found in Isai. xxxiv. 5, 6; Ezek. xxxv. 15, xxxvi. 5.

9. a small ship] The life on the sea, in the ship which was now His chief place of instruction in opposition to the synagogue, henceforth had its commencement.
they should throng him. For he had healed many; insomuch that they pressed upon him for to touch him, as many as had plagues. And unclean spirits, when they saw him, fell down before him, and cried, saying, Thou art the Son of God. And he straitly charged them that they should not make him known.

And he goeth up into a mountain, and calleth unto him whom he would: and they came unto him. And he ordained twelve, that they should be with him, and that

10. plagues] The word thus rendered denotes (1) a whip or scourge, and is used in this sense in Acts xxii. 24; Heb. xi. 36; (2) a plague or disease of the body. Comp. Mark v. 29, 34; Luke vii. 21.

11. Thou art the Son of God] In the Synagogue of Capernaum they had called Him the "Holy One of God" (Mark i. 24), they now acknowledge Him as the "Son of God" (comp. Luke iv. 41). The force of the imperfect tense in the original here is very striking, "when­ever the demons saw Him, they kept falling down before Him and saying" ...... and as often as they did so, "He straitly charged them that they should not make Him known," i.e. as the Messiah "the Son of God."

13. And he goeth] We have now reached an important turning-point in the Gospel History. (i) The fame of the Saviour had spread abroad in every direction throughout the land, and the current of popular feeling had set strongly in His favour. But (ii) the animosity of the ruling powers had deepened in intensity alike in Judæa and Galilee, and an active correspondence was going on between the Scribes and Pharisees in both districts respecting Him. Meanwhile (iii) He Himself had seemed to stand almost alone. A few indeed had gathered round Him as His disciples, but as yet they did not present the appearance of a regular and organized body, nor had they received a distinct commission to disseminate His doctrines. Such a body was now to be formed. Such a commission was now to be given. Accordingly He retired to the mountain-range west of the Lake, and spent the whole night in prayer to God (Luke vi. 12). The scene of His retirement and lonely vigil was in all probability the singular elevation now known as the Karûn Hattîn, or "Horns of Hattîn," the only conspicuous hill on the western side of the Lake, and "singularly adapted by its conformation both to form a place for short retirement, and a rendezvous for gathering multitudes." Then at dawn of the following day (Luke vi. 13), He calleth unto him whom he would] of the disciples, who had gradually gathered around Him, and when they had come to Him He selected for Himself (Luke vi. 13), and

14. ordained twelve] Hitherto they had been His friends and disciples in a wider sense, now He formally called them, and joined he might send them forth to preach, and to have power to heal sicknesses, and to cast out devils: and Simon he surnamed Peter; and James the son of Zebedee, and John the them in a united band, that (i) they “might be with Him” (comp. Acts
i. 21), (ii) that He might “send them forth” as heralds to preach, and
(iii) that they “might have power to cast out demons,” for the words “to heal sicknesses” are omitted in some of the best MSS.

(i) The number of the Apostles. The number selected, answering to the twelve sons of Jacob, was small indeed as compared with the hundreds who enrolled themselves as disciples of a Hillel or a Gamaliel, and their position in life was humble and obscure, but “the weak things of the world were to confound the things which are mighty” (1 Cor. i. 27), and these Twelve were to be the Twelve Pillars of the Church.

(ii) Their calling and training. Observe that the calling and training of the Twelve was a most important part of our Lord’s ministerial work.
(a) Immediately after His Baptism and Temptation He began to prepare some of them for their future vocation (John i. 35—51); (b) to their training He devoted the greater part of His time and strength; (c) after His resurrection He continued for forty days His personal efforts for their improvement, and (d) at last He bestowed upon them His promised gift of the Holy Ghost.

(iii) Their title. The name also which He gave to them deserves attention. He named them Apostles (Luke vi. 13). The word thus rendered means (i) as an adjective, despatched or sent forth, (ii) as a substantive, the actual delegate of the person who sends him.

(a) In Classical Greek the word was almost entirely restricted to the meaning of a “naval expedition,” a “fleet despatched on foreign service,” and this meaning entirely superseded any other.

(b) In the Septuagint the word occurs only once, namely, in 1 Kings
xiv. 6, in the sense of “a messenger,” “one who has a commission from God,” where Abijah says to the wife of Jeroboam, “I am a messenger unto thee of heavy tidings.”

(c) With the later Jews the word was in common use, and was the title of those, who were sent from the mother city on any foreign mission, especially the collection of the tribute for the Temple service.

(d) Thus when He employed it to designate His immediate and most favoured disciples, “our Lord was not introducing a new term, but adopting one which from its current usage would suggest to His hearers the idea of a highly responsible mission.” In Heb. iii. 1 He Himself is styled “The Apostle and high priest of our profession,” with which compare John xvii. 18. Canon Lightfoot on the Epistle to the Galatians, p. 94.

16. and Simon] We have in the New Testament four lists of the Apostles: (a) Matt. x. 2; (b) Mark iii. 16; (c) Luke vi. 14; (d) Acts i.
13. The position of some of the names varies in the lists, but in all four the leaders of the three groups are the same, Peter, Philip, and James, the son of Alphaeus, while in all four Judas Iscariot is placed last.
According to St Mark’s catalogue they may be arranged in three groups:
brother of James; and he surnamed them Boanerges, which is, the sons of thunder: and Andrew, and Philip, and Bar-

(i) 1 Peter. (ii) 5 Philip. (iii) 9 James the Less.
2 James. 6 Bartholomew. 10 Thaddæus.
3 John. 7 Matthew. 11 Simon the Cananite.
4 Andrew. 8 Thomas. 12 Judas Iscariot.

(a) Group i.

i. Simon. The name of Simeon (Acts xv. 14) or Simon, a "hearer," the son of Jonas (John i. 42, xxi. 16), whom our Lord surnamed Peter or Cephas, the Rock-man, stands first in all the four lists. He was brought up in his father's occupation, as a fisherman on the Galilean lake, and lived originally at Bethsaida, and afterwards in a house at Capernaum (Mark i. 21, 29). His earliest call came to him through his brother Andrew, who told him the Messias, the "Anointed One," had been found in the Person of the Lord (John i. 43). His second call took place on the lake near Capernaum, where he and the other three in this group were fishing. He is specially prominent on various occasions before the rest of the Apostles. Sometimes he speaks in their name (Matt. xix. 27; Luke xii. 41); sometimes answers when all are addressed (Matt. xvi. 16; Mark viii. 29); sometimes he is addressed as principal, even among the favoured Three by our Lord Himself (Matt. xxvi. 40; Luke xxii. 31); sometimes he is appealed to by others as representing the rest (Matt. xvii. 24; Acts ii. 37). After the Ascension he assumes a position of special prominence (Acts i. 15, ii. 14, iv. 8, v. 29).

17. ii. James the son of Zebedee and Salome (Matt. xxvii. 56; Mark xv. 40), a native of Bethsaida, commonly known as James "the Great," the first of the Apostolic body to suffer martyrdom, and the only one of the Twelve whose death is actually recorded in the New Testament.

iii. John] the brother of James, who never in his Gospel calls himself by this name, but sometimes "the disciple whom Jesus loved" (John xiii. 23, xix. 26), sometimes "the other disciple" (John xviii. 15, xx. 2, 3). To him our Lord committed the care of His earthly mother. These brothers were surnamed by our Lord, according to St Mark, Boanerges, i.e. "sons of thunder," in allusion we may believe to the fiery intrepid zeal which marked their character. Of this feature we have traces in Luke ix. 54; Mark ix. 38, x. 37.

18. iv. Andrew] a brother of St Peter (Matt. iv. 18), and like him a native of Bethsaida, and a former disciple of the Baptist (John i. 40). By his means his brother Simon was brought to Jesus (John i. 41). In the lists of the Apostles given by St Matthew and St Luke he appears second; but in St Mark and Acts i. 13, fourth. We have three notices of him in the Gospels. (i) On the occasion of the feeding of the Five Thousand it is he who points out the little lad with the five barley loaves and the two fishes; (ii) when certain Greeks desired to see Jesus, it was he in conjunction with Philip who introduced them to the Lord (John xii. 22); (iii) together with Peter, James, and John he inquired privately of our Lord respecting His future coming (Mark xiii. 3).
tholomew, and Matthew, and Thomas, and James the son of Alphæus, and Thaddæus, and Simon the Canaanite, and

(b) Group ii.

v. Philip] He also was a native of Bethsaida and one of the earliest disciples (John i. 43). To him first of the whole circle of the Apostles were spoken the solemn words "Follow Me." It was to him the question was put "to prove him," "Whence shall we buy bread, that these may eat?" (John vi. 5—9); together with his friend and fellow townsm­ man, St Andrew, he brought the inquiring Greeks to the Saviour (John xii. 20—22); it was he who asked "Lord, shew us the Father, and it sufficeth us" (John xiv. 8).

vi. Barthalomew] i.e. Bar-Tolmai, the "Son of Tolmai," and probably identical with Nathanael = "gift of God." For (i) St John twice mentions Nathanael, never Barthalomew (John i. 45, xxi. 2); (ii) the other Evangelists all speak of Barthalomew, never of Nathanael; (iii) Philip first brought Nathanael to Jesus, and Barthalomew is mentioned by each of the Synoptic Evangelists immediately after Philip; (iv) St John couples Philip with Nathanael precisely in the same way that Simon is coupled with his brother Andrew. Respecting him, at least under the name Nathanael, we learn from the Gospels little more than (a) his birth-place, Cana of Galilee (John xxi. 2); (b) his simple, guileless character (John i. 47); and (c) that he was one of the seven, to whom our Lord shewed Himself by the lake of Gennesaret after His resurrection (John xxi. 2).

vii. Matthew] or Levi, whose call has just been described. See above, on ii. 14.

viii. Thomas] or Didymus = a twin (John xi. 16, xxi. 2), whose character was marked by a deep attachment to his Master and a readiness even to die with Him (John xi. 16), but at the same time by a tendency to misgiving and despondency, which made him ever ready to take the darker view of things, and to distrust other evidence than that of sight (John xiv. 5, xx. 25).

(c) Group iii.

ix. James] or "James the Less" (see note below, xv. 40), the son of Alphæus, so called to distinguish him from James, the son of Zebedee, mentioned above. He is probably a distinct person from James the Lord's brother (Gal. i. 19), and author of the Epistle, which bears his name.

x. Thaddeus] i.e. Judas, a brother, or possibly a son of James, bishop of Jerusalem (Acts i. 13). He was surnamed Thaddeus and Lebæus (Matt.
x. 3), which some interpret as "cordatus or animosus" = "a man of energy and courage." He is the author of the Epistle which bears his name. Once only in the Gospels do we find any act or saying of his recorded, viz., in John xiv. 22, "Lord, how is it that thou wilt manifest thyself unto us, and not unto the world?"

xi. Simon] the Cananite, or Cananaean (Matt. x. 4), in Greek Zelotes (Luke vi. 15; Acts i. 13). The spelling of the English Version here is misleading. The word does not signify a native of Canaan, or Judas Iscariot, which also betrayed him; and they went into an house.

20—30. How can Satan cast out Satan?

And the multitude cometh together again, so that they could not so much as eat bread. And when his friends heard of it, they went out to lay hold on him: for they said, He is beside himself. And the scribes which came down from Jerusalem said, He hath Beelzebub, and by the prince of the devils casteth he out devils. And he of Cana, but comes from a Chaldee or Syriac word Kanean or Kaneniah, by which the Jewish sect or faction of “the Zealots” was designated. To this sect Simon had probably belonged before his call.

19. xii. Judas Iscariot sometimes called the son of Simon (John vi. 71, xiii. 2, 26), more generally Iscariot, i.e. probably “a native of Kerioth,” a little village in the tribe of Judah (Jos. xv. 25; Jer. xlviii. 24). For the probable motives that led him to become the traitor, see note on xiv. 10.

And they went into an house] The incident here related took place after the delivery of the Sermon on the Mount, and the Saviour’s second ministerial journey, an interval of a few months (?).

20—30. How can Satan cast out Satan?

20. the multitude cometh together again] i.e. at Capernaum, which had now become our Lord’s temporary home.

21. when his friends] not the Apostles, but His relatives, including “His brethren and His mother,” who are noticed here as going forth, and a few verses later on as having arrived at the house where our Lord was (Mark iii. 31), or the place where the crowds were thronging Him.

He is beside himself] They deemed the zeal and daily devotion to His labour of love a sort of ecstasy or religious enthusiasm, which made Him no longer master of Himself. St Paul uses the word in this sense in 2 Cor. v. 13, “For whether we be beside ourselves, it is to God.” Comp. the words of Festus to St Paul (Acts xxvi. 24).

22. And the scribes] The hostile party from Jerusalem, noticed above, consisting of Scribes and Pharisees, still lingered at Capernaum.

He hath Beelzebub] St Matthew tells us of the miracle, which was the occasion of this blasphemy, the cure of a man not only possessed with a demon, but also blind and dumb (Matt. xii. 21). Beelzebub or rather Beelzebul was the title of a heathen deity, to whom the Jews ascribed the sovereignty of the “evil spirits.” (a) Some would connect the name with sébab = habitation, so making it = the Lord of the dwelling (Matt. x. 25), in his character of “prince of the power of the air” (Eph. ii. 2), or of the lower world, or as occupying a mansion in the seventh heavens. (b) Others would connect it with sébel = dung, and so make it = the lord of dung or the dung-hill, a term of derision amongst the Jews for the lord of idols, the prince of false gods. This fearful blasphemy was repeated more than once. See Luke xi. 17 sq.
called them unto him, and said unto them in parables, How can Satan cast out Satan? And if a kingdom be divided against itself, that kingdom cannot stand. And if a house be divided against itself, that house cannot stand. And if Satan rise up against himself, and be divided, he cannot stand, but hath an end. No man can enter into a strong man’s house, and spoil his goods, except he will first bind the strong man; and then he will spoil his house. Verily I say unto you, All sins shall be forgiven unto the sons of men, and blasphemies wherewith soever they shall blaspheme: but he that shall blaspheme against the Holy Ghost hath never forgiveness, but is in danger of eternal damnation: because they said, He hath an unclean spirit.

There came then his brethren and his mother, and, standing without, sent unto him, calling him. And the multitude sat about him, and they said unto him, Behold, thy mother

23. How can Satan cast out Satan? Using an irresistible argumentum ad hominem He shews them the absurdity of supposing that Satan could be his own enemy. If neither kingdom, nor city (Matt. xii. 25), nor house could stand, when divided against itself, much less could the empire of the Evil One.

27. a strong man’s house] The “strong man” is Satan; his House or Palace is this Lower world; the Stronger than the Strong is Christ, who first bound the Evil One, when He triumphed over his temptations. Comp. Luke xi. 21, 22.

28. Verily I say unto you] a favourite formula of our Lord’s, which we often find in St John, when He would draw special attention to any of His Divine utterances.

29. but he that shall blaspheme] The sin, against which these words are a terrible but merciful warning, is not so much an act, as a state of sin, on the part of one, who in defiance of light and knowledge, of set purpose rejects, and not only rejects but perseveres in rejecting, the warnings of conscience, and the Grace of the Holy Spirit, who blinded by religious bigotry rather than ascribe a good work to the Spirit of Good prefer to ascribe it to the Spirit of Evil, and thus wilfully put “bitter for sweet” and “sweet for bitter,” “darkness for light,” and “light for darkness.” Such a state if persevered in and not repented of excludes from pardon, for it is the sin unto death spoken of in 1 John v. 16.

31. his brethren] Their names, James, Joses, Simon, Judas, are given in Matt. xiii. 55 and Mark vi. 3. Some understand them to have been His literal “brethren,” others think they were the sons of Cleophas and Mary, the sister and namesake of the Virgin.

and thy brethren without seek for thee. And he answered them, saying, Who is my mother, or my brethren? And he looked round about on them which sat about him, and said, Behold my mother and my brethren! For whosoever shall do the will of God, the same is my brother, and my sister, and mother.

1—9. The Parable of the Sower.

And he began again to teach by the sea side: and there was gathered unto him a great multitude, so that he entered into a ship, and sat in the sea; and the whole multitude was by the sea on the land. And he taught them

32. seek for thee] They had already left the place where they abode, and gone forth in quest of Him; see above, v. 21.

33. Who is] It is thought that the "brethren" wished to share in His fame, and to prove to the people their connection with Him and their influence over Him. But the tenderness of His love for His earthly mother, which He displayed so clearly upon the Cross, only brings out in stronger relief the devotion, with which He gave Himself up to the performance of the Will of His Father in heaven and the furtherance of His glory. "He despises not His Mother, He places before her His Father." Bengel.

34. looked round] Another graphic touch peculiar to the second Evangelist. See Introduction, p. 18. Our Lord repeated the saying here recorded on another occasion; Luke viii. 21.

CH. IV. 1—9. The Parable of the Sower.

1. by the sea side] The scenery round the Lake doubtless suggested many of the details of the Parables now delivered. (1) On the shore was the vast multitude gathered "out of every city." (Luke viii. 4); (2) from the fishing-boat the eye of the Divine Speaker would rest on (a) patches of undulating corn-fields with the trodden pathway running through them, the rocky ground of the hill-side protruding here and there, the large bushes of thorn growing in the very midst of the waving wheat, the deep loam of the good rich soil which distinguishes the whole of the Plain of Gennesaret descending close to the water's edge; (b) the mustard-tree, which grows especially on the shores of the Lake; (c) the fishermen connected with the great fisheries, which once made the fame of Gennesaret, plying amidst its marvellous shoals of fish, the drag-net or hauling-net (Matt. xiii. 47, 48), the casting-net (Matt. iv. 18; Mark i. 16), the bag-net and basket-net (Luke v. 4—9); (d) the women and children employed in picking out from the wheat the tall green stalks, called by the Arabs, Zuwdn = the Greek Zizania = the Lolium of the Vulgate, the tares of our Version; (e) the countless flocks of birds, aquatic fowls by the lake-side, partridges and pigeons hovering over the rich plain. See Stanley's Sinai and Palestine, pp. 425—427; Thomson's Land and the Book, p. 402; Tristram's Land of Israel, p. 431.
many things by parables, and said unto them in his doctrine,

Hearken; Behold, there went out a sower to sow: and it came to pass, as he sowed, some fell by the way side, and the fowls of the air came and devoured it up. And some fell on stony ground, where it had not much earth; and immediately it sprang up, because it had no depth of earth: but when the sun was up, it was scorched; and because it had no root, it withered away. And some fell among thorns, and the thorns grew up, and choked it, and it yielded no

2. by parables] (i) The Greek word thus rendered denotes (a) a placing beside, (b) a comparing, a comparison. In Hellenistic Greek it became coextensive with the Hebrew māshāl = similitude. (ii) In this sense it is applied

(1) In the Old Testament, to—

(a) The shortest proverbs: as 1 Sam. x. 12, “Therefore it became a proverb, Is Saul also among the prophets?” xxiv. 13, “As saith the proverb of the ancients;” 2 Chron. vii. 20, “I will make it to be a proverb and a byword among all nations.”

(b) Dark prophetic utterances: as Num. xxiii. 7, “And he took up his parable and said;” Ezek. xx. 49, “Ah Lord God! they say of me, Doth he not speak parables?”

(c) Enigmatic maxims: as Ps. lxxviii. 2, “I will open my mouth in a parable;” Prov. i. 6, “the words of the wise and their dark sayings.”

(2) In the Gospels, to—

(a) Short sayings: as Luke iv. 23, “Ye will surely say unto me this proverb, Physician, heal thyself.”

(b) A comparison without a narrative: as Mark xiii. 28, “Now learn its parable of the fig tree” (see note in loc.).

(c) Comparisons with narratives of earthly things with heavenly, as the Parables of our Lord.

3. Hearken] This summons to attention is peculiar to St Mark.

went out] The expression implies that the sower did not sow near his own house, or in a garden fenced or walled, but went forth into the open country. Thomson’s Land and the Book, p. 82.

4. by the way side] i.e. on the hard footpath, or road, passing through the cultivated land.

5. stony ground] This must be compared with “the rock” mentioned by St Luke (viii. 6). What is meant is not a soil mingled with stones, for then there would be no hindrance to the roots striking deeply; but a thin coating of mould covering the surface of a rock, which stretched below and presented an impassable barrier to the growth of the roots.

6. when the sun was up] For the reference of the word thus translated to the rising of the sun or stars comp. Num. xxiv. 17; Is. ix. 1; Mal. iv. 2.

7. thorns] The “Nābk” of the Arabs, which grows abundantly fruit. And other fell on good ground, and did yield fruit that sprang up and increased; and brought forth, some thirty, and some sixty, and some an hundred. And he said unto them, He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

10—25. The Explanation of the Parable.

And when he was alone, they that were about him with the twelve asked of him the parable. And he said unto them, Unto you it is given to know the mystery of the kingdom of God: but unto them that are without, all these things are done in parables: that seeing they may see, and not perceive; in Syria and Palestine, and of which the Crown of Thorns was probably woven.

and choked it] or as Wyclif translates it "bornes stieded up, and strangliden it." The seed and the thorns grew together, but the thorns gradually out-topped it, drew the moisture from the roots, and shut out the air and light, so that it pined and dwindled, and "yielded no fruit."

8. some thirty] St Luke says simply "and bare fruit an hundred-fold." St Matthew says "some an hundred-fold, some sixty-fold, some thirty-fold." St Mark begins from the lowest return, and ascends to the highest. It is said of Isaac that he sowed and "received in the same year an hundred-fold" (Gen. xxvi. 12). Herodotus tells us that two hundred-fold was a common return in the plain of Babylon, while a kind of white maize often in Palestine returns several hundred-fold. Observe the four kinds of soil. In the first the seed did not spring up at all; in the second it sprang up, but soon withered away; in the third it sprang up and grew, but yielded no fruit; in the fourth it sprang up, grew, and brought forth fruit; and as there are three causes of unfruitfulness, so there are three degrees of fruitfulness, but only one cause of fruitfulness.

9. He that hath ears to hear] These solemn words are found in the three Gospels. Our Lord is recorded to have used them on six occasions; (1) Matt. xi. 15; (2) xiii. 43; (3) Mark iv. 9; (4) iv. 23; (5) vii. 16; (6) Luke xiv. 35. They are not found in St John's Gospel, but occur eight times in the Book of Revelation, ii. 7, 11, 17, 29, iii. 6, 13, 22, xiii. 9.

10—25. The Explanation of the Parable.

10. And when he was alone] St Mark here anticipates what took place after the Saviour had "sent the multitudes away" and "gone into the house" (Matt. xiii. 36).

11. the mystery] The word Mystery denotes (1) a religious mystery like those of Eleusis, into which men were initiated; (ii) a secret (as in 1 Cor. xv. 51); and is applied (a) to the Gospel itself (as here and in 1 Cor. ii. 7; Rom. xvi. 25; Eph. i. 9); (b) to the various parts and truths of the Gospel (Matt. xiii. 11; Luke viii. 10; 1 Cor. iv. 1); (iii) to a symbolic representation or emblem (Rev. xvii. 5, 7).

them that are without] Comp. 1 Cor. v. 12, 13; Col. iv. 5; 1 Thess. iv. 12.

12. that seeing they may see, and not perceive] At the beginning of and hearing they may hear, and not understand; lest at any time they should be converted, and their sins should be forgiven them. And he said unto them, Know ye not this parable? and how then will ye know all parables? The sower soweth the word. And these are they by the way side, where the word is sown; but when they have heard, Satan cometh immediately, and taketh away the word that was sown in their hearts. And these are they likewise which are sown on stony ground; who, when they have heard the word, immediately receive it with gladness; and have no root in themselves, and so endure but for a time: afterward, when affliction or persecution ariseth for the word's sake, immediately they are offended. And these are they which are sown among thorns; such as hear the word, and the cares of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, and the His ministry our Lord did not teach by Parables. "The Sermon on the Mount may be taken as the type of the 'words of grace' which He spake 'not as the Scribes.' Beatitudes, laws, promises were uttered distinctly, not indeed without similitudes, but with similitudes that explained themselves." And so He continued for some time. But His direct teaching was met with scorn, unbelief, and hardness. From this time forward "parables" entered largely into His recorded teaching, and were at once attractive and penal. (a) Attractive, as "instruments of education for those who were children in age or character," and offering in a striking form much for the memory to retain, and for the docile and truth-loving to learn; (b) Penal, as testing the disposition of those who listened to them; withdrawing the light from such as loved darkness and were wilfully blind, and protecting the truth from the mockery of the scoffer; finding out the fit hearers, and leading them, but them only, on to deeper knowledge. See Article on Parables in Smith's Bible Dict.

13. Know ye not this parable? For it afforded the simplest type or pattern of a Parable.

14. The sower] This is applicable to (i) Christ, who "came forth from the Father and was come into the world" (John xvi. 28); (ii) His Apostles; (iii) all who go forth in His Name, and with His authority. For other comparisons of the relations of the teacher and the taught to those between the sower and the soil, comp. 1 Pet. i. 23; 1 John iii. 9.

17. affliction] The word thus translated denotes (i) pressure, that which presses upon or burdens the spirit; then (2) the distress arising therefrom. The word tribulation rests upon this image, coming as it does from tribulum = the threshing-roller.
lusts of other things entering in, choke the word, and it be­ cometh unfruitful. And these are they which are sown on 20 good ground; such as hear the word, and receive it, and bring forth fruit, some thirtyfold, some sixty, and some an hundred. And he said unto them, Is a candle brought to be put under a bushel, or under a bed? and not to be set on a candlestick? For there is nothing hid, which shall not be manifested; neither was any thing kept secret, but that it should come abroad. If any man have ears to hear, let him hear. And he said unto them, Take heed what ye hear:
and unto you that hear shall more be given. For he that hath, to him shall be given; and he that hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he hath.

26—29. The Seed growing secretly.

And he said, So is the kingdom of God, as if a man should cast seed into the ground; and should sleep, and rise night and day, and the seed should spring and grow up, he

19. the cares of this world] The word rendered “cares” denotes in the original “distracting anxieties,” which, as it were, “cut a man in sunder.” St Luke expands the one word here employed into “cares,” “riches,” and “pleasures” (Luke viii. 14).

21. Is a candle brought? Rather, The lamp is not brought, is it? The article here points to the simple and indispensable furniture in every Jewish household. The original word means not a candle but a lamp.
Wyclif renders it, “Wher a lanterne come, hit it be put vndir a bushel?”

21. to be put under a bushel] The original word Modius denotes a dry measure containing 16 sextarii, or about a peck. The English equiva­

24. with what measure ye mete] According to the measure of your ability and diligence as hearers, ye shall receive instruction, and be enabled to preach to others.

26—29. The Seed growing secretly.

26. as if a man should cast seed into the ground] This is the only parable which is peculiar to St Mark, and seems to take the place of “the Leaven” recorded by St Matthew (Matt. xiii. 33).

27. spring and grow up] We need not inquire too minutely who the Sower is, though primarily it refers to the Lord Himself. It is the knoweth not how. For the earth bringeth forth fruit of herself; first the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear. But when the fruit is brought forth, immediately he putteth in the sickle, because the harvest is come.

30—34. The Parable of the Mustard Seed.

And he said, Whereunto shall we liken the kingdom of God? or with what comparison shall we compare it? It is like a grain of mustard seed, which, when it is sown in the earth, is less than all the seeds that be in the earth: but when it is sown, it groweth up, and becometh greater than all herbs, and shooteth out great branches; so that the fowls property of the seed which is intended to engage our attention, the secret energy of its own, the principle of life and growth within itself, whereby it springs up and grows.

28. of her self] = of its own accord, spontaneously. It is used of the gate of St Peter's prison opening of its own accord in Acts xii. 10.

first the blade] There is a law of orderly development in natural growth, so also is it in reference to spiritual growth; comp. I John ii. 12—14.

after that the full corn] or rather, then (there is) full corn in the ear.

29. when the fruit is brought forth] Literally, when the fruit yields itself, or offers itself, i.e. is ripe. The original word only occurs here in this sense. Comp. Virgil Geo. i. 287, the sickle] The sickle is only mentioned here and in Rev. xiv. 14, 15, "And I looked, and behold a white cloud, and upon the cloud one sat, like unto the Son of Man, having on His head a golden crown, and in His hand a sharp sickle." For the entire Parable comp. I Pet. i. 23—25.

"Multa adeo gelida melius se nocte dedere."

30—34. The Parable of the Mustard Seed.

30. Whereunto shall we liken] This method of asking a question before beginning a discourse was not unknown to the Rabbis. See the parallel in Luke xiii. 18.

31. a grain of mustard seed] The growth of a worldly kingdom had been already set forth under the image of a tree, and that of the kingdom of God also had been similarly compared. (See Dan. iv. 10—12; Ezek. xvii. 22, 24, xxxi. 3—9.)

in the earth] In St Matt. xiii. 31 a man is represented as taking and sowing it "in his field," while St Luke, xiii. 19, says "in his garden.

less than all the seeds] "Small as a grain of mustard seed" was a proverbial expression among the Jews for something exceedingly minute. The mustard-seed is not the least of all seeds in the world, but of all which the husbandman was accustomed to sow, and the "tree," when full grown, was larger than the other herbs in his garden.

32. great branches] In hot countries, as in Judæa, the mustard-tree of the air may lodge under the shadow of it. And with many such parables spake he the word unto them, as they were able to hear it. But without a parable spake he not unto them: and when they were alone, he expounded all things to his disciples.

35—41. The Stilling of the Storm.

And the same day, when the even was come, he saith unto them, Let us pass over unto the other side. And when they had sent away the multitude, they took him even as he was in the ship. And there were also with him other little ships. And there arose a great storm of wind, and the waves beat into the ship, so that it was now full. And he was in the hinder part of the ship, asleep on a pillow: and they awake him, and say unto him, Master, attains a great size. Thomson, Land and the Book, p. 414, tells us he has seen it on the rich plain of Akkâr as tall as the horse and his rider. A variety of it may have been cultivated in the time of our Lord, which grew to an enormous size.

the fowl] The seed of the mustard-tree is a favourite food with birds. For the language comp. Ezek. xvii. 23.

35—41. The Stilling of the Storm.

35. he saith unto them] The three Synoptic Evangelists all agree in placing the Stilling of the Storm before the healing of the possessed in the country of the Gadarenes.

36. as he was] i.e. without any preparation for the voyage. Just before the boat put off three of the listeners to His words desired to attach themselves to Him as His disciples, (1) a scribe, (2) an already partial disciple, (3) another who wished first to bid farewell to his friends at home (Matt. viii. 19—22; Luke ix. 57—62).

37. a great storm] The word here used is found in Luke viii. 23. The word employed in Matt. viii. 24 generally means an earthquake. It was one of those sudden and violent squalls to which the Lake of Gennesaret was notoriously exposed, lying as it does 600 feet lower than the sea and surrounded by mountain gorges, which act "like gigantic funnels to draw down the cold winds from the mountains." These winds are not only violent, but they come down suddenly, and often when the sky is perfectly clear. See Thomson's Land and the Book, p. 374; Tristram's Land of Israel, p. 430.

38. a pillow] The word only occurs here. It was probably the leather cushion of the steersman. These details we learn only from St Mark.
39. carest thou not that we perish? And he arose, and rebuked the wind, and said unto the sea, Peace, be still. And the wind ceased, and there was a great calm. And he said unto them, Why are ye so fearful? how is it that ye have no faith? And they feared exceedingly, and said one to another, What manner of man is this, that even the wind and the sea obey him?

1—20. The Healing of the Gadarene Demoniac.

And they came over unto the other side of the sea, into the country of the Gadarenes. And when he was come out of the ship, immediately there met him out of the tombs

Master] The double "Master," "Master" of St Luke (viii. 24) gives vividness to their haste and terror. The exclamation recorded by St Mark sounds more like rebuke, as though He was unmindful of their safety.

39. rebuked the wind] All three Evangelists record that He rebuked the wind (comp. Ps. civ. 9), St Mark alone adds His distinct address to the furious elements. On be still see above, i. 25. Comp. Matt. viii. 26; Luke viii. 24, and note. The perfect imperative of the original implies the command that the result should be instantaneous.

the wind ceased] Lit. grew tired. We have the same word in Matt. xiv. 32, and again in Mark vi. 51. As a rule, after a storm the waves continue to heave and swell for hours, but here at the word of the Lord of Nature there was a "great calm."

CH. V. 1—20. The Healing of the Gadarene Demoniac.

1. they came] to the eastern shore, but not even there was the Lord destined to find peace or rest.

the Gadarenes] All three Gospels which record this miracle vary in their readings between (1) Gadarenes, (2) Gergesenas, and (3) Gerasenes. (a) Gadara, the capital of Perea, lay S. E. of the southern extremity of Gennesaret, at a distance of about 60 stadia from Tiberias, its country being called Gadaritis, (b) Gerasa lay on the extreme eastern limit of Perea, and was too far from the Lake to give its name to any district on its borders, (γ) Gergesa was a little town nearly opposite Capernaum, the ruined site of which is still called Kersa or Gersa. Origen tells us that the exact site of the miracle was here pointed out in his day. St Mark and St Luke using the word Gadarenes indicate generally the scene of the miracle, Gadara being a place of importance and acknowledged as the capital of the district. See Thomson's Land and the Book, pp. 375—378.

2. out of the tombs] These tombs were either natural caves or recesses hewn by art out of the rock, often so large as to be supported with columns, and with cells upon their sides for the reception of the dead. Such places were regarded as unclean because of the dead men's bones which were there (Num. xix. 11, 16; Matt. xxiii. 27). Such tombs can still be traced in more than one of the ravines on the eastern side of the Lake. Thomson's Land and the Book, p. 376.
a man with an unclean spirit, who had his dwelling among the tombs; and no man could bind him, no, not with chains: because that he had been often bound with fetters and chains, and the chains had been plucked asunder by him, and the fetters broken in pieces: neither could any man tame him. And always, night and day, he was in the mountains, and in the tombs, crying, and cutting himself with stones. But when he saw Jesus afar off, he ran and worshipped him, and cried with a loud voice, and said, What have I to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of the most high God? I adjure thee by God, that thou torment me not. For he said unto him, Come out of the man, thou unclean spirit. And he asked him, What is thy name? And he answered, saying, My name is Legion: for we are many. And he

a man] St Matthew (viii. 28) mentions two demoniacs, St Luke (viii. 27), like St Mark, only speaks of one. Probably one was better known in the country round than the other, or one was so much fiercer that the other was hardly taken any account of. “Amid all the boasted civilisation of antiquity, there existed no hospitals, no penitentiaries, no asylums; and unfortunates of this class, being too dangerous and desperate for human intercourse, could only be driven forth from among their fellow-men, and restrained from mischief by measures at once inadequate and cruel.” Farrar’s Life of Christ, i. p. 334.

no, not with chains] This is a general expression for any bonds confining the hands or feet. Comp. Acts xxi. 33; Eph. vi. 20; Rev. xx. 1; fetters were restricted to the feet.

he had been often] Each Evangelist adds something to complete the picture of the terrible visitation, under which the possessed laboured. St Matthew that he made the way impassable for travellers (viii. 28); St Luke that he was without clothing (viii. 27); St Mark that he cried night and day and cut himself with stones (v. 5).

broken in pieces] For another instance of the extraordinary muscular strength which maniacs put forth see Acts xix. 16.

afar off] St Mark alone tells us this. While, as a man, he is attracted towards the Holy One; as possessed by the Legion, he desires to withdraw from Him.

What have I to do with thee?] Literally, What is there between Thee and me? What have we in common? Why interferest Thou with us?

I adjure thee] Notice the intermixture of praying and adjuring, so characteristic of demoniac possession when brought into the presence of Christ.

My name is Legion] “He had seen the thick and serried ranks of a Roman legion, that fearful instrument of oppression, that sign of terror and fear to the conquered nations,” Even such, terrible in their strength, inexorable in their hostility, were the “lords many,” which besought him much that he would not send them away out of the country. Now there was there nigh unto the mountains a great herd of swine feeding. And all the devils besought him, saying, Send us into the swine, that we may enter into them. And forthwith Jesus gave them leave. And the unclean spirits went out, and entered into the swine: and the herd ran violently down a steep place into the sea, (they were about two thousand;) and were choked in the sea. And they that fed the swine fled, and told it in the city, and in the country. And they went out to see what it was that was done. And they come to Jesus, and see him that was possessed with the devil, and had the legion, sitting, and clothed, and in his right mind: and they were afraid. And they that saw it told them how it befel to him that was possessed with the devil, and also concerning the swine. And they began to pray him to depart out of their coasts.

had dominion over him. Compare (i) the “seven demons,” by whom Mary Magdalene was possessed (Luke viii. 2), (ii) the “seven other spirits” “worse than the first,” which our Lord describes as taking up their abode in a man (Matt. xii. 45).

10. out of the country] i.e. as it is expressed in St Luke, into “the abyss of hell” (viii. 31).
11. a great herd of swine] The lawless nature of the country, where Jews lived mingled with Gentiles, the Evangelist denotes by the circumstance of the two thousand swine, emphasizing the greatness of the herd. If their owners were only in part Jews, who merely trafficked in these animals, still they were not justified before the Law. The territory was not altogether Jewish.
13. down a steep place] At Kersa or Cersa, “where there is no precipice running sheer to the sea, but a narrow belt of beach, the bluff behind is so steep, and the shore so narrow, that a herd of swine rushing frantically down, must certainly have been overwhelmed in the sea before they could recover themselves.” Tristram’s Land of Israel p. 462.

the sea] This, as we have seen above (iii. 7), was one of the names, by which the Lake of Gennesaret was called.
15. clothed] because, as St Luke informs us (viii. 27), before the wretched man wore no clothes. “On descending from the heights of Lebanon, I found myself,” writes Warburton, “in a cemetery... The silence of the night was now broken by fierce yells and howlings, which I discovered proceeded from a naked maniac, who was fighting with some wild dogs for a bone.” The Crescent and the Cross, II. 352.
17. to depart out of their coasts] Many were doubtless annoyed at the losses they had already sustained, and feared greater losses might follow. “And their prayer was heard: He did depart; He took them
And when he was come into the ship, he that had been possessed with the devil prayed him that he might be with him.
Howbeit Jesus suffered him not, but saith unto him, Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee, and hath had compassion on thee. And  he departed, and began to publish in Decapolis how great things Jesus had done for him: and all men did marvel.

And when Jesus was passed over again by ship unto the other side, much people gathered unto him: and he was nigh unto the sea. And, behold, there cometh one of the rulers of the synagogue, Jairus by name; and when he saw at their word; and let them alone” (cf. Exod. x. 28, 29). Trench on the Miracles, p. 177.

18. And when he was come...] Rather, when He was in the act of stepping into the ship.

19. and tell them] On others (comp. Matt. viii. 4; Luke viii. 56) after shewing forth towards them His miraculous power, He enjoined silence; on this man He enjoined publicity. He appoints him to be a living memorial of His own saving Power, and so to become the first great preacher in the half-heathen district.

20. Decapolis] When the Romans conquered Syria, B.C. 63, they rebuilt, partially colonized, and endowed with peculiar privileges “ten cities,” the country which was called Decapolis. All of them lay, with the exception of Scythopolis, East of the Jordan, and to the East and South-East of the Sea of Galilee. They were (but there is some variation in the lists), 1 Scythopolis, 2 Hippos, 3 Gadara, 4 Pella, 5 Philadelphia, 6 Gerasa, 7 Dion, 8 Canatha, 9 Abila, 10 Capitolias. The name only occurs three times in the Scriptures, (a) here; (b) Matt. iv. 25, and (c) Mark vii. 31; but it seems to have been also employed to denote a large district extending along both sides of the Jordan.

21. unto the other side] i.e. the western side of the Lake, near Capernaum.

22. the rulers of the synagogue] Each synagogue had a kind of Chapter or College of Elders, presided over by a ruler, who superintended the services, and possessed the power of excommunication.
From this place, e.g., compared with Acts xiii. 15, it would appear that some synagogues had several rulers.

Jairus by name] It is but rarely we know the names of those who were the objects of the Saviour’s mercy. He afterwards probably was 23 him, he fell at his feet, and besought him greatly, saying, My little daughter lieth at the point of death: I pray thee, come and lay thy hands on her, that she may be healed; and she shall live. And Jesus went with him; and much people followed him, and thronged him.

25—34. The Healing of the Woman with an Issue of Blood.

25 And a certain woman, which had an issue of blood twelve years, and had suffered many things of many physicians, and had spent all that she had, and was nothing bettered, but rather grew worse, when she had heard of Jesus, came in the press behind, and touched his garment. For she said, If I may touch but his clothes, I shall be whole. And straightway the fountain of her blood was dried up; and she felt in her one of those who came to the Lord pleading for the centurion at Capernaum (Luke vii. 3). The aid he then asked for another, he now craves for himself, but under the pressure of a still greater calamity.

23. My little daughter] His "only daughter," Luke viii. 42. The use of diminutives is characteristic of St Mark. Here we have "little daughter;" in v. 41 "damsel," or "little maid;" in vii. 27, "dogs=little dogs," "whelps;" in viii. 7, a few "small fishes;" in xiv. 47, his ear, literally "a little ear." She was about 12 years of age, Lk. viii. 42.

at the point of death] The original word here used is one of the frequent Latinisms of St Mark. See Introduction. She lay a dying (Luke viii. 42), and all but gone when he left her, the sands of life ebbing out so fast, that he could even say of her that she was "dead" (Matt. ix. 18), at one moment expressing himself in one language, at the next in another.

24. thronged him] The word thus rendered only occurs here and at v. 31.

25—34. The Healing of the Woman with an Issue of Blood.

25. a certain woman] "Such overflowing grace is in Him, the Prince of Life, that as He is hastening to the accomplishing of one work of His power, He accomplishes another, as by the way." Trench, p. 188.

an issue of blood] Her malady was especially afflicting (Lev. xv. 19—27), for not only did it unfit her for all the relationships of life, but was popularly regarded as the direct consequence of sinful habits.

28. his garment] The law of Moses commanded every Jew to wear at each corner of his tallith a fringe or tassel of blue, to remind them that they were God’s people (Num. xv. 37—40; Deut. xxii. 12). “Two of these fringes usually hung down at the bottom of the robe, while one hung over the shoulder where the robe was fastened round the person.” Those who wished to be esteemed eminently religious were wont to make broad, or "enlarge the borders of their garments" (Matt. xxiii. 5).

29. of that plague] On this word see above, note on iii. 10.
body that she was healed of that plague. And Jesus, immediately knowing in himself that virtue had gone out of him, turned him about in the press, and said, Who touched my clothes? And his disciples said unto him, Thou seest the multitude thronging thee, and sayest thou, Who touched me? And he looked round about to see her that had done this thing. But the woman fearing and trembling, knowing what was done in her, came and fell down before him, and told him all the truth. And he said unto her, Daughter, thy faith hath made thee whole; go in peace, and be whole of thy plague.

35—43. The Raising of the Daughter of Jairus.

While he yet spake, there came from the ruler of the synagogue's house certain which said, Thy daughter is dead: why troublest thou the Master any further? As

30. Who touched my clothes?] He who with the eye of His Spirit saw Nathanael under the fig tree (John i. 47, 48), recognised at once (Mark v. 30) the magnetic touch of faith however weak and trembling (Luke viii. 46). "Many throng Him, but only one touches Him."

31. Caro premit, fides tangit," says St Augustine.

32. he looked round] Another proof of St Mark's graphic power. The tense in the original is still more expressive. It denotes that He kept on looking all round, that His eyes wandered over one after the other of the many faces before Him, till they fell on her who had done this thing.

33. fearing and trembling] She may have dreaded His anger, for according to the Law (Lev. xv. 19) the touch of one, afflicted as she was, caused ceremonial defilement until the evening.

34. told him] i.e. probably all the particulars we find in verses 25, 26, and this before all the people (Luke viii. 47).

35. Daughter] Our Lord is recorded to have addressed no other woman by this title. It calmed all her doubts and fears.

36. go in peace] This is not merely "go with a blessing," but abi in pacem, enter into peace, "as the future element in which thy life shall move," and be whole of thy plague. Be Esto perpetuo. "Post longam miseriae, beneficium durabili." Bengel.

35—43. THE RAISING OF THE DAUGHTER OF JAIRUS.

35. why troublest thou the Master?] Or as, literally rendered, it is in St Luke's Gospel (viii. 49), "trouble not the Master any further."

The word, here translated "trouble," one which is used here and here alone by St Mark and St Luke (except Luke vii. 6), denotes properly (1) to slay; then (2) to fatigue or to worry, often with a more particular allusion to fatiguing with the length of a journey.
soon as Jesus heard the word that was spoken, he saith unto the ruler of the synagogue, Be not afraid, only believe. And he suffered no man to follow him, save Peter, and James, and John the brother of James. And he cometh to the house of the ruler of the synagogue, and seeth the tumult, and them that wept and wailed greatly. And when he was come in, he saith unto them, Why make ye this ado, and weep? the damsel is not dead, but sleepest. And they laughed him to scorn. But when he had put them all out, he taketh the father and the mother of the damsel, and them that were with him, and entereth in where the damsel was lying. And he took the damsel by the hand, and said unto her, Talitha cumi; which is, being interpreted, Damsel, I say unto thee, arise. And straightway the damsel arose, and walked; for she was of the

36. heard] Perhaps according to a better reading, “overheard.” The very instant the Lord heard the message, He hastens to reassure the ruler with a word of confidence and encouragement.

37. save Peter, and James, and John] This is the first time we hear of an election within the election. “That which He was about to do was so great and holy that those three only, the flower and crown of the Apostolic band, were its fitting witnesses.” The other occasions when we read of such an election were equally solemn and significant, (1) the Transfiguration (Matt. xvii. 2); and (2) the Agony in the Garden of Gethsemane (Matt. xxvi. 37).

38. them that wept] These were the hired mourners, chiefly women; whose business it was to beat their breasts (Luke viii. 52), and to make loud lamentations at funerals; comp 7 Chron. xxxv. 25; Jer. ix. 17, 18; Amos v. 16. The Rabbinic rule provided for the poorest Israelite at least two flute-players, and one mourning woman. “A Ruler of the Synagogue, bereaved of his only child, may well have been prodigal in the expression of his grief.”

39. but sleepest] Comp. His words in reference to Lazarus (John xi. 11). The Lord of life takes away that word of fear, “She is dead,” and puts in its room that milder word which gives promise of an awakening, “She sleepest.”

41. Talitha cumi] = “Little Maid, arise.” Doubtless St Peter, who was now present, often recalled the actual words used on this memorable occasion by our Lord, and told them to his friend and kinsman St Mark. So it is the same Evangelist, who preserves the very word, which our Lord used, when He opened the ears of the deaf man, Ephphatha (vii. 34). The mention of these words goes to prove that in ordinary life our Lord availed Himself of the popular Aramaic dialect.

42. And immediately her spirit came again and she arose straightway (Luke viii. 55), and began to walk. There is no struggle, no effort on His part, Who is “the Resurrection and the Life” (John xi. 25); we read of no “crying unto the Lord,” or “stretching himself upon the age of twelve years. And they were astonished with a great astonishment. And he charged them straitly that no man should know it; and commanded that something should be given her to eat.

1—6. Christ is despised at Nazareth.

And he went out from thence, and came into his own country; and his disciples follow him. And when the sabbath day was come, he began to teach in the synagogue: and many hearing him were astonished, saying, From whence hath this man these things? and what wisdom is this which is given unto him, that even such mighty works are child three times" as in the case of Elijah at Sarepta (1 Kings xvii. 21); He "lieth not upon the child, or putteth his mouth upon her mouth, and his eyes upon her eyes, and his hands upon her hands" as in the case of Elisha (2 Kings iv. 34), He speaks but a word and instantly He is obeyed.

a great astonishment] The word thus rendered denotes sometimes (1) a trance, as in Acts x. 10, "but while they made ready, he (St Peter) fell into a trance," and Acts xxii. 17, "while I prayed in the temple, I was in a trance," with which comp. 2 Cor. xii. 2. (ii) amazement, awe, as in Luke v. 26, "and amazement seized all;" Mark xvi. 8, "trembling and amazement seized them;" Acts iii. 10, "and they were filled with wonder and amazement." Here it points to a very extremity of astonishment.

43. something should be given her to eat] At once to strengthen the life thus wonderfully restored, and to prove that she was no spirit, but had really returned to the realities of a mortal existence.

CH. VI. 1—6. CHRIST IS DESPISED AT NAZARETH,

1. his own country] that is, Nazareth. From this time forward He ceased to have His abiding residence at Capernaum, although He still assembled His disciples on passing occasions. This visit to Nazareth is recorded only by St Matthew and St Mark.

2. he began to teach in the synagogue] For his former visit here see Luke iv. 16 sq. The conduct of His hearers on this occasion did not betray the frantic violence exhibited at His first visit.

mighty works] Rather, powers. This is one of the four names given by the Evangelists to the miracles which the Lord was pleased to work while incarnate here on earth. They are called:

(a) "Wonders," a term never used alone, but always in conjunction with other names. They are continually styled "signs and wonders," or "signs" or "powers" alone, but never "wonders" alone. By this word the effect of astonishment, which the work produces on the beholder, is transferred to the work itself. The word only occurs once in St Mark, in xiii. 22, and there it is in conjunction with "signs."

(b) "Signs," as being tokens and indications of something beyond wrought by his hands? Is not this the carpenter, the son of Mary, the brother of James, and Joses, and of Juda, and themselves, of the near presence and working of God, the seals and credentials of a higher power. The word is an especial favourite with St John, though in our Version “sign” too often gives place to the vaguer “miracle,” to the great detriment of the true meaning and force of the word. It occurs three times in St John, twice in St Mark, xvi. 17, xvi. 20 alone, and once in conjunction with “wonders,” xiii. 22.

(7) “Powers,” that is of God, coming into and working in this world of ours. As in the “wonder” the effect is transferred and gives a name to the cause, so here the cause gives its name to the effect. The word occurs four times in St Mark: v. 30 (A. V. virtue), vi. 2, vi. 14, ix. 39. In our Version it is rendered sometimes “wonderful works” (Matt. vii. 22), sometimes “mighty works” (Matt. xi. 20; Mark vi. 14; Luke x. 13), and still more frequently “miracles.” (Acts ii. 22, xix. 11; Gal. iii. 5), thus doing away with a portion of its force.

(8) “Works.” This is a significant term very frequently used by St John. With him miracles are the natural form of working for Him, whose Name is Wonderful (Isaiah ix. 6), and Who therefore doeth “works of wonder.” Comp. John vi. 28, vii. 21, x. 25, 32, 38, xiv. 11, &c. See Abp. Trench on the Parables, Introd.

3. Is not this the carpenter?] Save in this one place, our Lord is nowhere Himself called “the Carpenter.” According to the custom of the Jews, even the Rabbis learnt some handicraft. One of their proverbs was that “he who taught not his son a trade, taught him to be a thief.” Hence St Paul learnt to “labour with his own hands” at the trade of a tent-maker (Acts xviii. 3; 1 Thess. ii. 9; 1 Cor. iv. 12). “In the cities the carpenters would be Greeks, and skilled workmen; the carpenter of a provincial village could only have held a very humble position, and secured a very moderate competence.” Farrar’s Life of Christ, i. 81.

the brother of James, and Joses...]. The four “brothers” here mentioned, and “the sisters,” whose names are nowhere recorded, were in all probability the children of Clopas and Mary, the sister and namesake of the blessed Virgin, and so the “cousins” of our Lord. (Compare Matt. xxvii. 56 with Mark xv. 40 and John xix. 25.) Joseph would seem to have died at some time between A.D. 8 and A.D. 26, and there is no reason for believing that Clopas was alive during our Lord’s ministry. It has been suggested, therefore, that the two widowed sisters may have lived together, the more so as one of them had but one son, and He was often taken from her by His ministerial duties. Three other hypotheses have been formed respecting them: (1) that they were the children of Joseph by a former marriage; (2) that they were the children of Joseph and Mary; (3) that Joseph and Clopas being brothers, and Clopas having died, Joseph raised up seed to his dead brother, according to the Levirate law.
Simon? and are not his sisters here with us? And they were offended at him. But Jesus said unto them, A prophet is not without honour, but in his own country, and among his own kin, and in his own house. And he could there do no mighty work, save that he laid his hands upon a few sick folk, and healed them. And he marvelled because of their unbelief. And he went round about the villages, teaching.

And he called unto him the twelve, and began to send them forth by two and two; and gave them power over unclean spirits; and commanded them that they should take nothing for their journey, save a staff only; no scrip, no

4. A prophet is not without honour] He repeats to them once more almost the same proverb which He before uttered in their hearing and from the same place (Luke iv. 24).

5. no mighty work] Literally, no power. He performed some miracles, but not all He would have done, because of their deep-seated unbelief. His miraculous power was not magical. It was an influence which required and presupposed faith.

6. he marvelled] Our Lord does not marvel at other human things generally, but He does marvel on the one hand, at faith, when, as in the case of the centurion, it overcomes in its grandeur all human hindrances, and, on the other, at unbelief, when it can, in the face of numerous Divine manifestations, harden itself into a wilful rejection of Himself. He now seems to have left Nazareth never to return to it, or preach in its synagogue, or revisit the home, where He had so long toiled as the village Carpenter.

he went round about] On the evening of the day of His rejection at Nazareth, or more probably on the morrow, our Lord appears to have commenced a short circuit in Galilee, in the direction of Capernaum.

7. he called] Rather, He calleth unto Him.

two and two] St Mark alone records this. They were sent forth probably in different directions on a tentative mission, to make trial of their powers, and fit them for a more extended mission afterwards. Their election had taken place in the solitude of a mountain range, their first mission occurred amidst the busy towns and villages of Galilee.

8. and commanded them] Now follows a brief summary of the charge, which the Lord proceeded to give them on this occasion, and which is recorded at far greater length by St Matthew, x. 5—42.

save a staff] They were to go forth with their staff as they had it at the time, but they were not (Matt. x. 10) to "seek," or "procure one carefully" for the purposes of this journey. The "staff" in Matt. x. 10, depends on "acquire not" or "provide not for yourselves" in verse 9.
9 bread, no money in their purse: but be shod with sandals; and not put on two coats. And he said unto them, In what place soever ye enter into an house, there abide till ye depart from that place. And whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear you, when ye depart thence, shake off the dust under no scrip] Scrip, from Sw. skrappa, denotes a “wallet” or “small bag.” Comp. 1 Sam. xvii. 40, “And (David) took his staff in his hand and chose him five smooth stones, and put them in a shepherd’s bag which he had, even in a scrip.” It was so called, perhaps, because it was designed to hold scraps, trifling articles, scraped off as it were from something larger. It was part of the pilgrim’s or traveller’s equipage: comp. Piers Ploughman’s Vis. 3573;

  “I seigh nevere palmere
With pyk ne with Scrippe,” and Shakespeare, As you like it, III. 2. 171,

  “Though not with bag and baggage, yet with scrip and scrippage.”

The scrip of the Galilean peasants was of leather, “the skins of kids stripped off whole, and tanned by a very simple process,” used especially to carry their food on a journey, and slung over their shoulders (Thomson’s Land and the Book, p. 355).

  no money] “There was no departure from the simple manners of the country in this. At this day the farmer sets out on excursions, quite as extensive, without a para in his purse, and a modern Moslem prophet of Tarshish thus sends forth his apostles over this identical region. No traveller in the East would hesitate to throw himself on the hospitality of any villager.” Thomson’s Land and Book; p. 346.

  be shod with sandals] That is, they were to take no other shoes with them for travelling “than their ordinary sandals of palm-bark.” So now “the Galilean peasants wear a coarse shoe, answering to the sandal of the ancients, but never take two pair with them.”

  two coats] That is, they were not to take with them a change of raiment.

  there abide] “When a stranger arrives in a village or an encampment, the neighbours, one after another, must invite him to eat with them. There is a strict etiquette about it, involving much ostentation and hypocrisy: and a failure in the due observance of this system of hospitality is violently resented, and often leads to alienation and feuds among neighbours. It also consumes much time, causes unusual distraction of mind, leads to levity, and everyway counteracts the success of a spiritual mission. The Evangelists...were sent, not to be honoured and feasted, but to call men to repentance, prepare the way of the Lord, and proclaim that the kingdom of heaven was at hand. They were, therefore, first to seek a becoming habitation to lodge in, and there abide until their work in that city was accomplished.” The Land and the Book, p. 347.

  the dust under your feet] For instances of the carrying out of this command, compare the conduct of St Paul at Antioch in Pisidia, your feet for a testimony against them. Verily I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrha in the day of judgment, than for that city. And they went out, and preached that men should repent. And they cast out many devils, and anointed with oil many that were sick, and healed them.

14—29. The Murder of John the Baptist.

And king Herod heard of him; (for his name was spread abroad:) and he said, That John the Baptist was risen from the dead, and therefore mighty works do shew forth themselves in him. Others said, That it is Elias. And others said, That it is a prophet, or as one of the prophets.

Acts xiii. 51, and at Corinth, Acts xviii. 6. The action must be regarded as symbolical of a complete cessation of all fellowship, and a renunciation of all further responsibility. It was customary with Pharisees when they entered Judea from a Gentile land, to do this in token of renunciation of all communion with heathenism; those who rejected the Apostolic message were to be looked upon as those who placed themselves beyond the pale of fellowship and communion.

13. anointed with oil] St Mark alone mentions this anointing as the method, whereby the healing of the sick was effected. Though not expressly ordered, it was doubtless implied in the injunction to "heal the sick" (Matt. x. 8). The prophet Isaiah (i. 6) alludes to the use of oil for medicinal purposes, and we find this form of cure prescribed thirty years later than this Gospel, by St James in his general Epistle (v. 14). It was much used by the Jews for curative purposes, and thus supplied at once a fitting symbol and an efficient means in these miraculous cures wrought by the Apostles. For the use of the symbolical media by our Lord Himself comp. Mark viii. 23; John ix. 6.

14—29. The Murder of John the Baptist.

14. And king Herod heard of him] This first missionary journey of the Apostles was but short, and they would seem to "have returned to Capernaum as early as the evening of the second day;" Bp. Ellicott's Gospel History, p. 196. This Herod was Herod Antipas, to whom, on the death of Herod the Great, had fallen the tetrarchy of Iturœa and Perea. He is here called "king," or "prince," in the ancient and wide sense of the word. St Matt. (xiv. 1), and St Luke (ix. 7), style him more exactly "the tetrarch."

his name] It is peculiar to St Mark that he connects the watching observation of Herod Antipas with the work of Christ as extended by the preaching and miracles of His Apostles.

was risen from the dead] Herod's guilty conscience triumphed over his Sadducean profession of belief that there is no resurrection. Comp. Matt. xvi. 6; Mark viii. 15.
But when Herod heard thereof, he said, It is John, whom I beheaded: he is risen from the dead. For Herod himself had sent forth and laid hold upon John, and bound him in prison for Herodias' sake, his brother Philip's wife: for he had married her. For John had said unto Herod, It is not lawful for thee to have thy brother's wife. Therefore Herodias had a quarrel against him, and would have killed him;

16. It is John] The words in the original, according to the best MSS., are very striking. John whom I (=I myself; the pronoun “has the emphasis of a guilty conscience”) beheaded—this is he—he is risen. Josephus confirms the account of these forebodings when he tells us that after the utter defeat of Herod Antipas by Aretas, the people regarded it as a righteous retribution for the murder of John (Jos. Ant. xviii. 5. 1, 2).

17. For Herod] St Mark now proceeds more fully than the first Evangelist to relate the circumstances of the murder of the Baptist.

For Herodias' sake] During one of his journeys to Rome, Herod Antipas had fallen in with Herodias the wife of his brother Herod Philip, a son of Herod the Great and Mariamne, who was living there as a private person. Herodias was not only the sister-in-law, but the niece of Antipas, and already had a daughter who was grown up. Herod himself had long been married to the daughter of Aretas, Emir of Arabia Petraea, but this did not prevent him from courting an adulterous alliance with Herodias, and she consented to become his wife, on condition that the daughter of the Arabian prince was divorced. But the latter, suspecting her husband's guilty passion, did not wait to be divorced, and indignantly fled to the castle of Machærus, and thence to her father's rocky fortress at Petra, who forthwith assembled an army to avenge her wrongs, and defeated Herod in a decisive battle (Jos. Ant. v. 1).

18. For John had said] Herod was probably on his way to meet his father-in-law, when he first encountered the Baptist, who, in the presence of the Galilean king, proved himself no “reed shaken by the wind” (Luke vii. 24), but boldly denounced the royal crimes (Luke iii. 19), and declared the marriage unlawful. For this outspoken faithfulness he was flung into prison, probably in the castle of Machærus or “the Black Fortress,” which Herod's father had built in one of the most abrupt wadys to the east of the Dead Sea, to overawe the wild Arab tribes of the neighbourhood. Though originally in the possession of Aretas, Herod had probably seized the fortress after the departure of his first wife to her father's stronghold at Petra (Jos. Ant. xviii. 5. 2).

19. had a quarrel] or as it is rendered in the margin, “had an inward grudge” against him. The word here translated “had a quarrel” occurs in Luke xi. 53, where we have rendered it, “and the Pharisees began to urge Him vehemently,” and in Gen. xlix. 23, where the dying Jacob says of Joseph, “The archers sorely grieved him, and shot at him, and hated him.” It denotes literally (1) to “hold” or “keep fast within one;” then (2) to “lay up” or “cherish but she could not; for Herod feared John, knowing that he was a just man and an holy, and observed him; and when he heard him, he did many things, and heard him gladly. And when a convenient day was come, that Herod on his birthday made a supper to his lords, high captains, and chief estates of Galilee; and when the daughter of the said Herodias came in, and danced, and pleased Herod and them wrath" against another. Comp. Herod. i. 118, vi. 119. In Tyndale and Cranmer's Versions it is rendered "laid waite for him," in the Rhemish, "sought all occasion against him."

would have killed] The word in the original is much stronger, and denotes that she had a settled wish to kill him. Some Versions read "she sought" or "kept seeking" means to kill him.

observed him] Rather, as in the margin, kept him, i.e. kept him safe from her machinations. The original word occurs in Matt. ix. 17, and Luke v. 38, "they put new wine into new bottles, and both are preserved."

heard him] The Greek here is still more emphatic; "and when he heard him, he used to do many things, and used to listen to him gladly." Not once or twice but many times Herod sent for his lonely prisoner, even as Felix sent for St Paul (Acts xxiv. 26), and listened to him as he reasoned with him of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come, and not only listened, but listened gladly; nay more, he "did many things;" many things, but not "the thing." He would not put away his unlawful wife.

lords, high captains] or "chiliarchs." The words here used denote servants of the state, civil and military.

chief estates] This term denotes men of high rank, and includes the Galilæan nobles generally. Comp. Fuller Ch. Hist. v. iii. 28, "God never gave grace nor knowledge of Holy Scripture to any great estate or rich man." State is also employed in the same way. Thus Adams says (Nichol's Puritan Divines), "Sin deals with her guests as that bloody prince that, having invited many great states to a solemn feast."

made a supper] probably at Machærus or some neighbouring palace.

the daughter of...Herodias] Her name was Salome, and she afterwards married (1) Philip the tetrarch of Trachonitis, her paternal uncle, and (2) Aristobulus, the king of Chalcis. "A luxurious feast of the period was not regarded as complete unless it closed with some gross pantomimic representation; and doubtless Herod had adopted the evil fashion of his day. But he had not anticipated for his guests the rare luxury of seeing a princess—his own niece, a granddaughter of that sat with him, the king said unto the damsel, Ask of me whatsoever thou wilt, and I will give it thee. And he sware unto her, whatsoever thou shalt ask of me, I will give it thee, unto the half of my kingdom. And she went forth, and said unto her mother, What shall I ask? And she said, The head of John the Baptist. And she came in straightway with haste unto the king, and asked, saying, I will that thou give me by and by in a charger the head of John the Baptist. And the king was exceeding sorry; yet for his oath's Herod the Great and of Mariamne, a descendant, therefore, of Simon the High Priest, and the great line of Maccabean princes—a princess, who afterwards became the wife of a tetrarch, and the mother of a king—honouring them by degrading herself into a scenic dancer.

Farrar's Life of Christ, i. 391.

23. unto the half of my kingdom] Compare the words of Ahasuerus (i.e. Xerxes) to Esther: "What is thy petition, queen Esther? and it shall be granted thee: and what is thy request? and it shall be performed, even to the half of the kingdom" (Esther v. 3, vii. 2).

24. The head of John the Baptist] Herodias saw that her hour was come. No jewelled trinket, no royal palace, no splendid robe, should be the reward of her daughter's feat—"Ask," said she, "for the head of John the Baptist."

25. straightway with haste] Observe the ready alacrity, with which she proved herself a true daughter of her mother.

by and by] i.e. "immediately." Comp. Matt. xiii. 21, "when tribulation or persecution ariseth because of the word, by and by he is offended;" Luke xvii. 7, "which of you, having a servant plowing or feeding cattle, will say unto him by and by?" xxi. 9, "but the end is not by and by." In all these instances the expression has its old meaning of "at once," "immediately." Thus Edward IV. is reported to have said on his death-bed, "I wote not whether any preachers' woordes ought more to moue you than I that is goyng by and by to the place that they all preche of," Hall, Ed. v. fol. 116; "Men dare not give the name of emperor to any other, for he punisheth his offender and traitor by and by; but they dare give the name of God to others, because He for repentance suffereth the offenders;" Homily Against Idolatry, pt. iii.

a charger] = "a large dish," or "platter." This word only occurs here and in the parallel, Matt. xiv. 8. It comes from the Fr. charger and O. E. charge="to load;" hence it means "that on which anything is laid, a dish," as the Hebrew word thus rendered (Num. vii. 13, &c.) is elsewhere given (Exod. xxv. 29). Thus Fuller says of Oswald, king of Northumberland, when he was told that a number of poor people were at his gate, that he commanded "not onely that the meat set before him should be given them, but also that the large Silver-Charger holding the same should be broken in pieces and (in want, perchance, of present coin) parted betwixt them:" Ch. Hist. ii. ii. 76.

26. exceeding sorry] The Greek word thus translated is very sake, and for their sakes which sat with him, he would not reject her. And immediately the king sent an executioner, and commanded his head to be brought: and he went and beheaded him in the prison, and brought his head in a charger, and gave it to the damsel: and the damsel gave it to her mother. And when his disciples heard of it, they came and took up his corpse, and laid it in a tomb.

30—44. Return of the Twelve. Feeding of the Five Thousand.

And the apostles gathered themselves together unto Jesus, and told him all things, both what they had done, and what they had taught. And he said unto them, Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place, and rest a while: for there were many coming and going, and they had no leisure so much as to eat. And they departed into a desert place by strong, and denotes very great grief and sorrow. It is used of (1) the rich young ruler, "when he heard this, he was very sorrowful," Luke xviii. 23; (2) of our Lord Himself in the Garden of Gethsemane, "My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death," Matt. xxvi. 38; Mark xiv. 34.

27. an executioner] Literally, a soldier of the guard. The word Speculator denotes (1) a looker-out, spy, scout; (2) a special adjutant, soldier of the guard. These scouts formed a special division in each legion; but under the emperors a body bearing this name was specially appointed to guard the emperor and execute his commands (Tac. Hist. 1. 24, 25; II. 11; Suet. Claud. xxxv.). Hence they were often employed as special messengers in seeking out those who were proscribed or sentenced to death (Seneca, de Ira I. 16). In the earlier English Versions the word is rendered "hangman," but this term describes a mere accident of his office. The use of a military term, compared with Luke iii. 14, is in accordance with the fact that Herod was at this time making war on Aretas (Jos. Antiq. xviii. 5. 1).

29. laid it in a tomb] and then "went and told Jesus" (Matt. xiv. 12) of the death of His great Forerunner, over whom He had pronounced so remarkable a eulogy (Luke vii. 27, 28).

30—44. Return of the Twelve. Feeding of the Five Thousand.

30. gathered themselves together] Their brief tentative mission was now over, and they returned to Capernaum.

31. there were many coming and going] The Passover was now nigh at hand (John vi. 4) and the pilgrim companies would be on the move towards the Holy City.

32. they departed into a desert place] They crossed the Lake of Gennesaret (John vi. 1) and proceeded in the direction of Bethsaida-Julias, at its north-eastern corner (Luke ix. 10), just above the entrance ship privately. And the people saw them departing, and many knew him, and ran afoot thither out of all cities, and outwent them, and came together unto him. And Jesus, when he came out, saw much people, and was moved with compassion toward them, because they were as sheep not having a shepherd, and he began to teach them many things. And when the day was now far spent, his disciples came unto him, and said, This is a desert place, and now the time is far passed: send them away, that they may go into the country round about, and into the villages, and buy themselves bread: for they have nothing to eat. He answered and said unto them, Give ye them to eat. And they say unto him, Shall we go and buy two hundred pennyworth of the Jordan into it. Bethsaida-Julias was originally only a village, but was rebuilt and enlarged by Herod Philip not long after the birth of Christ. He raised it to the dignity of a town, and called it Julius after Julia the daughter of Augustus. Philip occasionally resided there, and there died and was buried in a costly tomb (Jos. Antiq. XVIII. 4. 6). To the south of it was the green and narrow plain of El-Batthah, "with abundant grass, and abundant space for the multitudes to have sat down" (Tristram's Land of Israel, p. 439).

33. ran afoot] The multitudes saw the vessel start from Capernaum, and quickly ran along the coast and round the northern extremity of the Lake, where they met the little company disembarking on the shore. The motive of their coming in such large numbers is stated by St John, vi. 2.

34. he came out] Comparing the account in the Fourth Gospel, we may conjecture that on landing the Lord and His disciples ascended the hill-side (John vi. 3) and there waited awhile till the whole multitude was assembled. Then descending, He saw them all, and moved with compassion began to "teach them many things concerning the kingdom of God" (Luke ix. 11), and healed them that had need of healing.

35. a desert place] The locality was probably part of the rich but uninhabited plain at the mouth of the Jordan.

36. send them away] Already earlier in the day the Lord had asked the Apostle Philip, Whence shall we buy bread that these may eat? and he, thinking of no other supplies save such as natural means could procure, had replied that two hundred pence would not suffice to provide sustenance for such a number (John vi. 5—7). Then He left this confession of inability to work in their minds, and it was now in the eventide that the Apostles came to Him with the proposition contained in this verse.

37. Shall we go and buy] With one mouth they seem to have reiterated what St Philip had said earlier in the day.

two hundred pennyworth] The specifying of this sum is peculiar to St Mark and St John. The word translated penny is the denarius, a bread, and give them to eat? He saith unto them, How many loaves have ye? go and see. And when they knew, they say, Five, and two fishes. And he commanded them to make all sit down by companies upon the green grass. And they sat down in ranks, by hundreds, and by fifties. And when he had taken the five loaves and the two fishes, he looked up to heaven, and blessed, and brake the loaves, silver coin of the value originally of 10 and afterwards of 16 ases. The denarius was first coined in B.C. 269, or 4 years before the first Punic war, and originally was of the value of 8½d. of our money, later it = 7½d. It was the day-wages of a labourer in Palestine (Matt. xx. 2, 9, 13). "It so happens that in almost every case where the word denarius occurs in the N. T. it is connected with the idea of a liberal or large amount; and yet in these passages the English rendering names a sum which is absurdly small." Prof. Lightfoot on the Revision of the N. T., p. 166.

38. go and see] In the interval between their going and return they learnt that a lad in their company had five barley loaves, and two small fishes, which they could secure for purchase. They were only barley loaves (John vi. 9), the food even then, for the most part, of beasts, or of the poor and the unfortunate. Comp. 2 Kings vii. 1. The fact has an important bearing on Judges vii. 13.

39. by companies] Literally, drinking parties. The word alludes to an orderly social grouping, catervatim. The words are repeated by a Hebraism in the original, like the "two and two" of ver. 7.

40. upon the green grass] St Mark alone mentions the green grass, "still fresh in the spring of the year, before it had faded away in the summer sun." It was the season of the Passover, corresponding to our March or April, hence there was "much grass in the place;" comp. John vi. 10.

41. in ranks] Literally, they reclined in parterres (areolatim). "As they sat in these orderly groups upon the grass, the gay red and blue and yellow colours of the clothing, which the poorest Orientals wear, called up in the imagination of St Peter a multitude of flower-beds in some well-cultivated garden." Farrar's Life of Christ, p. 402. "Our English 'in ranks' does not reproduce the picture to the eye, giving rather the notion of continuous lines. Wyclif was better, 'by parties;' perhaps in groups would be as near as we could get to it in English." Trench, Miracles, p. 265. St Mark here, as elsewhere, doubtless reproduces the description of the scene by St Peter.

by hundreds, and by fifties] "Two long rows of 100, a shorter one of 50 persons. The fourth side remained, after the manner of the tables of the ancients, empty and open." Gerlach.

and blessed] The words, though not given, were probably those of the ordinary grace before meat in use in Israel. "He gives thanks to God, as the father surrounded by his household was on the occasion of the Passover wont to do, for His natural gifts and covenant blessings. This action is made almost equally prominent in each of the four Narraand gave them to his disciples to set before them; and the two fishes divided he among them all. And they did all eat, and were filled. And they took up twelve baskets full of the fragments, and of the fishes. And they that did eat of the loaves were about five thousand men.

45—52. The Walking on the Lake.

And straightway he constrained his disciples to get into the ship, and to go to the other side before unto Bethsaida, while he sent away the people. And when he had sent them away, he departed into a mountain to pray. And when even was come, the ship was in the midst of the sea, and he alone on the tides, and after the thanksgiving, He distributed the food, as the father was accustomed to do at the Paschal meal.” See note on xiv. 16.

and brake the loaves, and gave them to his disciples] The first of these words denotes an instantaneous, the second a continuous act. The multiplication of the loaves and fishes had a beginning and went on in the hands of Christ between the acts of breaking and distributing the bread. Comp. 2 Kings iv. 42—44.

43. they took up] in obedience to our Lord’s command (John vi. 12), Who would teach them that wastefulness even of miraculous power was wholly alien to the Divine economy.

baskets] “tuelue coffyns full,” Wyclif. All the Evangelists alike here use cophinot for the small common wicker-baskets, in which these fragments were collected, at the feeding of the Five Thousand, and the word spurides, or large rope-baskets, when they describe the feeding of the Four Thousand. These wicker baskets were the common possession of the Jews, in which to carry their food in order to avoid pollution with heathens; “Judaeis, quorum cophinus foenumque superlex,” Juv. Sat. III. 14. The same distinction is made by our Lord when He alludes to both miracles (Mark viii. 19, 20; Matt. xvi. 9, 10).

44. five thousand men] besides women and children (Matt. xiv. 21), who would not sit down with the men, but sit or stand apart.

45—52. The Walking on the Lake.

45. And straightway] The impression made upon the people by the miracle just narrated was profound. It was the popular expectation that the Messiah would repeat the miracles of Moses, and this “bread of wonder,” of which they had just partaken, recalled to the minds of the multitudes the manna, which the Great Lawgiver had given to their forefathers. They were convinced, therefore, that the Saviour was none other than “the Prophet,” of whom Moses had spoken, and in this conviction they would have taken Him by force and made Him a king (John vi. 14, 15). To defeat this intention the Saviour bade His Apostles take ship and cross over to the other side of the Lake.

unto Bethsaida] i. e. the western Bethsaida, the town of Philip, Andrew, and Peter, in the neighbourhood of Capernaum (John vi. 17).
the land. And he saw them toiling in rowing; for the wind was contrary unto them: and about the fourth watch of the night he cometh unto them, walking upon the sea, and would have passed by them. But when they saw him walking upon the sea, they supposed it had been a spirit, and cried out: for they all saw him, and were troubled. And immediately he talked with them, and saith unto them, Be of good cheer: it is I; be not afraid. And he went up unto them into the ship; and the wind ceased: and they were sore amazed in the midst of the sea]

With all their efforts and the toil of the entire night they had not in consequence of contrary winds (John vi. 18) accomplished more than five and twenty or thirty furlongs, i.e. scarcely more than half of their way, the Lake being forty or forty-five furlongs in breadth, when one of the sudden storms, to which the Lake is subject, rushed down from the western mountains. See above, iv. 37.

he saw them toiling in rowing] The word translated "toiling," which also occurs in Matt. xiv. 24, is a very striking expression. It denotes (1) to test metals with the touchstone, (2) to rack, torture, (3) to torment as in Matt. viii. 29, "art Thou come to torment us before the time?", and Matt. viii. 6, "Lord, my servant lieth at home sick of the palsy, grievously tormented." Here it seems to imply that they were tortured, baffled, by the waves, which were boisterous by reason of the strong wind that blew (John vi. 18). Wyclif translates it "travailing in rowing;" Tyndale and Cranmer, "troubled in rowing."

the fourth watch] The proper Jewish reckoning recognised only three watches or periods, for which sentinels or pickets remained on duty. They were entitled (1) the first, or beginning of the watches, from sunset to 10 p.m. (Lam. ii. 19), (2) the middle watch, from 10 p.m. to 2 a.m. (Judg. vii. 19), and (3) the morning watch, from 2 a.m. to sunrise (Ex. xiv. 24; I Sam. xi. 11). After the Roman supremacy the number of watches was increased to four, sometimes described by their numerical order, as here and in Matt. xiv. 25; sometimes by the terms (1) even, closing at 9 p.m.; midnight; cock-crowing, at 3 a.m.; morning, at 6 a.m.

would have passed by them] He came quite near their vessel on the storm-tost waves, and seemed to wish to lead the way before them to the western shore. Comp. Luke xxiv. 28, 29.

a spirit] An unsubstantial appearance. So they thought on the evening of the world's first Easter Day, when they saw Him after His resurrection. See Luke xxiv. 36, 37. Wyclif translates it "they gessiden him for to be a fantum;" Tyndale and Cranmer "a spret;" the Rhemish "a ghost."

be not afraid] St Mark does not record St Peter's attempt to go to his Lord upon the Lake, which is narrated only by St Matthew, xiv. 28—30.
	hey were sore amazed] Observe the strong expressions here employed. Not only were they "sore amazed," but "beyond measure."
themselves beyond measure, and wondered. For they considered not the miracle of the loaves: for their heart was hardened.

And when they had passed over, they came into the land of Gennesaret, and drew to the shore. And when they were come out of the ship, straightway they knew him, and ran through that whole region round about, and began to carry about in beds those that were sick, where they heard he was. And whithersoever he entered, into villages, or cities, or country, they laid the sick in the streets, and besought him that they might touch if it were but the border of his garment: and as many as touched him were made whole.

Never had the disciples been so impressed by the majesty of Christ as they were now in consequence of this miracle. St Matthew, xiv. 33, tells us that the impression made extended also to those who were with them in the ship, i.e. probably the crew. Not only did they approach Him with an outward unforbidden gesture of worship, “but they avowed for the first time collectively, what one of them had long since separately declared Him to be, the Son of God” (Matt. xiv. 33; comp. John i. 49), Bp. Ellicott’s Lectures, p. 211.

52. hardened] See note above, iii. 5.

53. the land of Gennesaret is only mentioned here and in Matt. xiv. 34. It is the same as the modern el-Ghuweir, a fertile crescent-shaped plain, on the north-western shore of the Lake of Gennesaret, about 3 miles in length and 1 in width. From its sheltered situation, and especially from its depression of more than 500 feet below the level of the ocean, its climate is of an almost tropical character. Josephus speaks of it as if it were an earthly paradise, in which every kind of useful plant grew and flourished. Jos. B. J. iii. 10. 8.

drew to the shore] or, as Tyndale and Cranmer translate it, “drew up into the haven.”

54. they knew him] The dawn had now broken, and the people on shore at once recognised the Great Healer, and craved His help in behalf of their sick and afflicted.

56. but the border of his garment] The numbers that pressed upon Him seemed almost too large for Him to be able to heal them singly by laying His hands upon them, therefore many begged that they might be allowed to touch if it were but the border of His garment. Comp. above, v. 27. Soon after followed the ever memorable discourse so strikingly in accordance with the present Passover-season in the synagogue of Capernaum respecting “the Bread of Life” (John vi. 22—65).
1—23. Contest with the Pharisees of Jerusalem concerning Traditions of Eating.

Then came together unto him the Pharisees, and certain of the scribes, which came from Jerusalem. And when they saw some of his disciples eat bread with defiled, that is to say, with unwashen, hands, they found fault. For the Pharisees, and all the Jews, except they wash their hands oft, eat not, holding the tradition of the elders. And when they

CH. VII. 1—23. Contest with the Pharisees of Jerusalem concerning Traditions of Eating.

1. Then came together] A few days only were assigned to the performance of those deeds of mercy described at the close of the last chapter. But the Saviour's labours of love were soon rudely interrupted. Having kept the Feast at Jerusalem the Scribes and Pharisees returned to seek out matter for accusation against Him. The combination of the Pharisees of Galilee and the Pharisees of Judaea had already been concerted and entered upon, and they now watched His every step.

2. with defiled, that is to say, with unwashen, hands] Thus St Mark explains for his Roman readers, and then proceeds more fully to set forth certain Jewish usages. The Pharisees had probably crept in secretly into some of the social gatherings of the disciples.

3. except they wash their hands oft] Oft, literally, with the fist. "When they washed their hands, they washed the fist unto the jointing of the arm. The hands are polluted, and made clean unto the jointing of the arm." Lightfoot Hor. Heb. upon St Mark. When water was poured on the hands, they had to be lifted, yet so that the water should neither run up above the wrist, nor back again upon the hand; best, therefore, by doubling the fingers into a fist. The Israelites, who, like other Oriental nations, fed with their fingers, washed their hands before meals, for the sake of cleanliness. But these customary washings were distinct from the ceremonial ablutions; in the former water was poured upon the hands; in the latter the hands were plunged in water. When, therefore, of the Pharisees remarked that our Lord's disciples ate with "unwashed hands," it is not to be understood literally that they did not at all wash their hands, but that they did not wash them ceremonially according to their own practice. And this was expected of them only as the disciples of a religious teacher; for these refinements were not practised by the class of people from which the disciples were chiefly drawn.

eat not] "The Jews of later times related with intense admiration how the Rabbi Akiba, when imprisoned and furnished with only sufficient water to maintain life, preferred to die of starvation rather than eat without the proper washings." Buxtorf, Syn. Jud.; quoted in Farrar's Life of Christ, i. p. 443; Geikie, ii. 203—205.

come from the market, except they wash, they eat not. And many other things there be, which they have received to hold, as the washing of cups, and pots, brassen vessels, and of tables. Then the Pharisees and scribes asked him, Why walk not thy disciples according to the tradition of the elders, but eat bread with unwashen hands? He answered and said unto them, Well hath Esaias prophesied of you hypocrites, as it is written, This people honoureth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me. Howbeit in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men. For laying aside the commandment of God, ye hold the tradition of men, as the washing of pots and cups: and many other such like things ye do. And he said unto them, Full well ye reject the commandment of God, that ye may keep your own tradition. For Moses said, Honour thy father and thy mother; and, Whoso curseth father or mother, let him die the death: but ye say, If a man shall say to his father or mother, It is Corban, that is to say, a gift,

4. except they wash] "Wash" here implies complete immersion as contrasted with the mere washing of the hands in verse 3.
pots] The original word thus translated is one of St Mark's Latinisms. It is a corruption of the Latin sextarius, a Roman measure both for liquids and dry things. In Tyndale and Cranmer's Versions it is translated "cruses." Earthen vessels were broken; those of metal and wood scoured and rinsed with water. See Levit. xv. 12.
tables] Rather, banqueting-couches, triclinia, the benches or couches on which the Jews reclined at meals.
6. Well hath Esaias] Rather, Well, or full well did Esaias prophesy of you. "Well" is said in irony. This expression recurs in v. 9, "full well ye reject" = "finely do ye set at naught and obliterate."
This people honoureth me] The words are found in Isaiah xxix. 13.
10. Honour thy father] The words are quoted partly from Ex. xx. 12, and partly from Ex. xxi. 17.
11. If a man shall say] Literally it runs, If a man shall say to his father or his mother, That, from which thou mightest have been benefited by me, is Corban, that is to say, a gift, or offering consecrated to God, he shall be free, and ye suffer him no longer to do aught for his father or his mother. A person had merely to pronounce the word Corban over any possession or property, and it was irrevocably dedicated to the Temple. Our Lord is quoting a regular formula, which often occurs in the Talmudic tracts Nedarim and Nazir. Others would give to the words an imperative force, Be it Corban from which thou mightest have been benefited by me, i.e. "If I give thee anything or do anything for thee, may it be as though I gave thee that which is devoted to God, and may I be accounted perjured and by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me; he shall be free. And ye suffer him no more to do any thing for his father or his mother; making the word of God of none effect through your tradition, which ye have delivered: and many such like things do ye. And when he had called all the people unto him, he said unto them, Hearken unto me every one of you, and understand: there is nothing from without a man, that entering into him can defile him: but the things which come out of him, those are they that defile the man. If any man have ears to hear, let him hear. And when he was entered into the house from the people, his disciples asked him concerning the parable. And he saith unto them, Are ye so without understanding also? Do ye not perceive, that whatsoever thing from without entereth into the man, it cannot defile him; because it entereth not into his heart, but into the belly, and goeth out into the draught, purging sacrilegious." This view certainly gives greater force to the charge made by our Lord, that the command "Whoso curseth father or mother, let him die the death" was nullified by the tradition.

13. through your tradition] The Jews distinguished between the "Written Law" and the traditional or "Unwritten Law." The Unwritten Law was said to have been orally delivered by God to Moses, and by him orally transmitted to the Elders. On it was founded the Talmud or "doctrine," which consists of (1) the Mishna or "repetition" of the Law, (2) the Gemara or "supplement" to it. So extravagant did the veneration for the Traditional Law become, that there was amongst many other sayings this assertion, "The Law is like salt, the Mishna like pepper, the Gemara like balmy spice." Buxtorf, Synag. Jut. ch. iii.

14. all the people] Rather, when He had called the people again unto Him. As Wyclif has it in his Version, "and he eftsone clepinge to be cumpanye of peple."

17. his disciples] From St Matthew we learn that the questioner was St Peter (Matt. xv. 15). As in the walking on the water, so here, he modestly suppresses himself in the Gospel which was written under his eye.

19. into the draught] Comp. 2 Kings x. 27, "And they......brake down the house of Baal, and made it a draughthouse unto this day." Draught=latrina, cloaca, from Icel. draf, dregs, dirt, connected with A.S. drabbe, dræfe. Comp. Shakespeare, Tim. of Ath. v. i. 105, "Hang them, or stab them, drown them in a draught." "There was a godde of idlenesse, a goddesse of the draught or jakes." Burton, Anat. of Mel.
all meats? And he said, That which cometh out of the man, that defileth the man. For from within, out of the heart of men, proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders, thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness: all these evil things come from within, and defile the man.

21. evil thoughts] Thirteen forms of evil are here noticed as proceeding from the heart. The first seven in the plural number, are predominant actions; the latter six in the singular, dispositions. Comp. the blending of the singular and plural in St Paul's enumeration of the works of the flesh, Gal. v. 19—21.

adulteries] The preferable order appears to be fornications, thefts, murders, adulteries, covetousnesses, wickednesses.

22. covetousness] "avarises," Wyclif. The original word denotes more than the mere love of money, it is "the drawing and snatching to himself, on the sinner's part, of the creature in every form and kind, as it lies out of and beyond himself." Hence we find it joined not only with "thefts" here and with "extortion" in 1 Cor. v. 10, but also with sins of the flesh as in 1 Cor. v. 11; Eph. v. 3, 5; Col. iii. 5. "Impurity and covetousness may be said to divide between them nearly the whole domain of human selfishness and vice." "Homo extra Deum quaerit pabulum in creatura materiali vel per voluptatem vel per avaritiam." See Canon Lightfoot on Col. iii. 5.

wickedness] or wickednesses. The word thus translated occurs in the singular in Matt. xxii. 18, "but Jesus perceived their wickedness," and again in Luke xi. 39; Rom. i. 29; 1 Cor. v. 8; Eph. vi. 12. In the plural it only occurs twice, here and in Acts iii. 26, where we have translated it "iniquities." It denotes the active working of evil, "the cupiditas nocendi," or as Jeremy Taylor explains it, an "aptness to do shrewd turns, to delight in mischief and tragedies; a love to trouble our neighbour and to do him ill offices; crossness, perverseness, and peevishness of action in our intercourse." Trench's N. T. Synonyms, p. 36.

lasciviousness] The word thus rendered is of uncertain etymology, and in our Version is translated generally "lasciviousness," as here and 2 Cor. xiii. 21; Gal. v. 19; Eph. iv. 19; 1 Pet. iv. 3; sometimes (2) "wantonness," as in Rom. xiii. 13; 2 Pet. ii. 18. The Vulgate renders it now "impudicitia," now "lascivia." "Wantonness" is the better rendering. In Classical Greek it signifies "lawless insolence" or "boisterous violence" towards another; in later Greek "sensuality.

an evil eye, blasphemy] Of these the first denotes concealed, the second open enmity. The evil eye is notorious in the East; here it is the description of an envious look; "invidia et de malis alienis gaudium," Bengel.

pride] The substantive thus translated only occurs here in the N. T., its adjective occurs in Luke i. 51, "He hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts;" Rom. i. 30, "proud, boasters;" 2 Tim. iii. 2, "proud, blasphemers;" James iv. 6, 1 Pet. v. 5, "God

And from thence he arose, and went into the borders of Tyre and Sidon, and entered into an house, and would have resisteth the proud." The true seat of this sin, the German "Hoch-muth," is within, and consists in comparing oneself secretly with others, and lifting oneself above others, in being proud in thought.

foolishness only occurs here in the Gospels, and three times in the Epistles of St Paul, 2 Cor. xi. 1, 17, 21. "Causa cur insipientia extremo loco ponatur: quae etiam reliqua omnia facit incurabiliora. Non in sola voluntate est corruptio humana." Bengel.

24—30. The Syrophœnician Woman.

24. from thence he arose The malevolence of our Lord's enemies was now assuming hourly a more implacable form. The Pharisaic party in Eastern Galilee were deeply offended (Matt. xv. 12); even those who once would fain have prevented Him from leaving them (Luke iv. 42) were filled with doubts and suspicions; Herod Antipas was inquiring concerning Him (Luke ix. 9), and his inquiries boded nothing but ill. He therefore now leaves for awhile eastern Galilee and makes His way north-west through the mountains of upper Galilee into the border-land of Phœnicia. See the Analysis of the Gospel, p. 22.

The borders of Tyre and Sidon His travelling towards these regions was the prophetic and symbolical representation of the future progress of Christianity from the Jews to the Gentiles. So in ancient times Elijah travelled out of his own land into Phœnicia (1 Kings xvii. 10—24). Our Lord, however, does not actually go into Phœnicia, but into the adjoining borders of Galilee, the district of the tribe of Asher.

Tyre A celebrated commercial city of antiquity, situated in Phœnicia. The Hebrew name "Tzôr" signifies "a rock," and well agrees with the site of Ṣrå, the modern town on a rocky peninsula, which was formerly an island, and less than 20 miles distant from Sidon. We first get glimpses of its condition in 2 Sam. v. 11 in connection with Ḥiram, King of Tyre, who sent cedar-wood and workmen to David and afterwards to Solomon (1 Kings ix. 11—14, x. 22). Ahab married a daughter of Ithobal, King of Tyre (1 Kings xvi. 31), and was instrumental in introducing the idolatrous worship of Baalim and Ashtaroth. The prosperity of Tyre in the time of our Lord was very great. Strabo gives an account of it at this period, and speaks of the great wealth which it derived from the dyes of the celebrated Tyrian purple. It was perhaps more populous even than Jerusalem.

Sidon The Greek form of the Phœnician name Zidon, an ancient and wealthy city of Phœnicia, situated on the narrow plain between the Lebanon and the Sea. Its Hebrew name Ṣisdon signifies "Fishing" or "Fishery." Its modern name is Saïda. It is mentioned in the Old Testament as early as Gen. x. 19; Josh. xi. 8; Judg. i. 31, and in ancient times was more influential even than Tyre, though from the time of Solomon it appears to have been subordinate to it.
25 no man know it: but he could not be hid. For a certain woman, whose young daughter had an unclean spirit, heard of him, and came and fell at his feet: the woman was a Greek, a Syrophenician by nation; and she besought him that he would cast forth the devil out of her daughter. But Jesus said unto her, Let the children first be filled: for it is not meet to take the children's bread, and to cast it unto the dogs. And she answered and said unto him, Yes, Lord: yet the dogs under the table eat of the children's crumbs.

would have no man know it] desiring seclusion and rest after His late labours.

25. heard of him] The fame of His miracles had already penetrated even to these old Phœnician cities, and we have seen (Mark iii. 8) “a great multitude” from Tyre and Sidon coming to Him (comp. also Matt. iv. 24).

26. a Greek] St Matthew describes her as a “woman of Canaan” (Matt. xv. 22), St Mark calls her a Greek, a Syrophenician. The first term describes her religion, that she was a Gentile; the second the stock of which she came, “which was even that accursed stock once doomed of God to total excision, but of which some branches had been spared by those first generations of Israel that should have extirpated them root and branch. Everything, therefore, was against this woman, yet she was not hindered by that everything from drawing nigh, and craving the boon that her soul longed after.” Trench on the Parables, p. 339. She is called a Syrophenician, as distinguished from the Libyphœnicians, the Phœnicians of Africa, that is, Carthage. Phœnicia belonged at this time to the province of Syria.

27. But Jesus said unto her] St Mark passes more briefly over the interview than St Matthew. The latter Evangelist points out three stages of this woman’s trial; (i) Silence; “He answered her not a word” (Matt. xv. 23); (ii) Refusal; “I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel” (Matt. xv. 24); (iii) Reproach; “It is not meet to take the children’s bread and cast it to the dogs” (Matt. xv. 26). But in spite of all she persevered and finally conquered.

the dogs] In the original the diminutive is used=“little dogs.” “Little whelps” Wyclif; “the whelps” Tyndale, Cranmer. The Jews, “the children of the kingdom” (Matt. viii. 12), were wont to designate the heathen as “dogs,” the noble characteristics of which animal are seldom brought out in Scripture (comp. Deut. xxiii. 18; Job xxx. 1; 2 Kings viii. 13; Phil. iii. 2; Rev. xxii. 15). Here however the term is somewhat softened. The heathen are compared not to the great wild dogs infesting Eastern towns (1 Kings xiv. 11, xvi. 4; 2 Kings ix. 10), but to the small dogs attached to households. In the East now the Mahometans apply this name to the Christians.

28. yet the dogs] Rather, Yea Lord, for even the little dogs under the table eat of the children’s crumbs. So it is rightly translated in
And he said unto her, For this saying go thy way; the devil is gone out of thy daughter. And when she was come to her house, she found the devil gone out, and her daughter laid upon the bed.

31—37. The Healing of one Deaf and Dumb.

And again, departing from the coasts of Tyre and Sidon, he Wyclifs and Cranmer's Versions, following the Vulgate "Etiam, Domine, nam et catelli edunt." "Truth it is Master, for indeed the whelpes eat under the table, of the childrens crommes." Geneva, 1557. Her "yea" is the "yea" of admission not of contradiction. She accepts the declaration of Christ, and in that very declaration she affirms is involved the granting of her petition. "Saidst Thou dogs? It is well; I accept the title and the place; for the dogs have a portion of the meat—not the first, not the children's portion, but a portion still—the crumbs which fall from the table." Her words speak to us even now across the centuries, and our Church adopts her words of faith in the "Prayer of Humble Access" at the celebration of the Holy Eucharist.

crumbs] These were probably something more than what would accidentally fall from the table. It was the custom during the meal for the guests after thrusting their hands into the common dish to wipe them on the soft white part of the bread, which, having thus used, they threw to the dogs.

30. she found the devil gone out] Thus the daughter was healed in consequence of the mother's faith and in answer to her prayers. This is an instance of a cure effected at a distance: other instances are, (1) the nobleman's son at Capernaum, whom our Lord healed while Himself at Cana (John iv. 46), (2) the centurion's servant (Luke vii. 6). The case also of this lonely woman not suffering the Lord "to go" until He had blessed her (comp. Gen. xxxii. 24—32) is the greatest of the three ascending degrees of faith, "as it manifests itself in the breaking through of hindrances which would keep from Christ. The paralytic broke through the outward hindrances, the obstacles of things merely external (Mark ii. 4); blind Bartimeus through the hindrances opposed by his fellow-men (Mark x. 48); but this woman, more heroically than all, through apparent hindrances, even from Christ Himself." Trench on the Miracles, p. 347.

31—37. The Healing of one Deaf and Dumb.

31. the coasts] A misleading archaism is this word for "border" or "region." No allusion is made in the original word to the sea-board. Thus we are told that Herod "slew all the children that were in Bethlehem, and in all the coasts thereof," though Bethlehem was not near the sea; and again we read of "the coasts" (=borders) of Judea in Matt. xix. 1; comp. Mark x. 1, where there is no sea-coast at all; of the coasts (=borders) of Gadara in Mark v. 17; "the coasts of Decapolis" in this verse; of "the coasts" (=regions) of Antioch in Pisidia (Acts xiii. 50). Comp. 1 Sam. v. 6. The word comes from the Latin costa, "a rib," "side," through Fr. "coste." Hence it = "a border" generally, came unto the sea of Galilee, through the midst of the coasts of Decapolis. And they bring unto him one that was deaf, and had an impediment in his speech; and they beseech him to put his hand upon him. And he took him aside from the multitude, and put his fingers into his ears, and he spit, and touched his tongue; and looking up to heaven, he sighed, though now applied to the sea-coast only. Wyclif translates it here "bitwix be Endis (or coostis) of Tire, be mydill endis of Decapoleos."

and Sidon] The preferable reading here, supported by several MSS. and found in several ancient versions, is, And again, departing from the coasts of Tyre, He came through Sidon unto the Sea of Galilee. This visit of the Redeemer of mankind to the city of Baal and Astarte is full of significance.

he came unto the sea of Galilee] The direction of the journey appears to have been (1) northward towards Lebanon, then (2) from the foot of Lebanon through the deep gorge of the Leontes to the sources of the Jordan, and thence (3) along its eastern bank into the regions of Decapolis, which extended as far north as Damascus, and as far south as the river Jabbok.

32. one that was deaf] The healing of this man, on the east side of the Jordan, is related only by St Mark.

and had an impediment] The word thus rendered does not imply that he was a mute, as some have thought, but that with his deafness was connected a disturbance of the organs of speech, so that he could make no intelligible sounds. Tyndale renders it "one that was deffe and stambred in hys speche."

they beseech him] This is one of the few instances where the friends of the sufferer brought the sick man to Christ. We have already met with another instance in the case of the paralytic borne of four (Mark ii. 3—5), and shall meet with another in the case of the blind man of Bethsaida in Mark viii. 22—26.

33. aside from the multitude] Comp. Mark viii. 23. Why? (1) Some think it was to avoid all show and ostentation; (2) others, to prevent a publicity which might bring together the Gentiles in crowds; (3) others, far more probably, that apart from the interruptions of the crowd the man might be more recipient of deep and lasting impressions.

and put his fingers into his ears] In this man's case there were evidently circumstances which rendered it necessary that his cure should be (1) gradual, and (2) effected by visible signs. And so our Lord (a) took him aside from the multitude; (b) put His fingers into his ears, (c) touched his tongue with the moisture of His mouth (comp. ch. viii. 23; John ix. 6; 2 Kings ii. 21); (d) looked up to heaven (comp. Matt. xiv. 19; Mark vi. 41; John xi. 41), and sighed (comp. Mark viii. 12; John ix. 33, 38), and (e) spake the one word Ephphatha (comp. Mark v. 41).

34. looking up to heaven] This upturned look expressive of an act of prayer and an acknowledgment of His oneness with the Father, occurs also (1) in the blessing of the five loaves and two fishes (Matt. xiv. 19;
and saith unto him, Ephphatha, that is, Be opened. And 35 straightway his ears were opened, and the string of his tongue was loosed, and he spake plain. And he charged them that 36 they should tell no man: but the more he charged them, so much the more a great deal they published it; and were 37 beyond measure astonished, saying, He hath done all things well: he maketh both the deaf to hear, and the dumb to speak.

1—9. The Feeding of the Four Thousand.

In those days the multitude being very great, and having 8 nothing to eat, Jesus called his disciples unto him, and saith unto them, I have compassion on the multitude, because they have now been with me three days, and have nothing to eat: and if I send them away fasting to their own houses, 3 they will faint by the way: for divers of them came from far. And his disciples answered him, From whence can a 4 he sighed] or “groaned” as in the Rhemish Version. The sigh of the “First-born among many brethren” (Rom. viii. 29), attesting that the Human sympathies of the Saviour were co-extensive with human suffering and sorrow. Comp: John xi. 33.

Ephphatha] The actual Aramaic word used by our Lord, like the “Talitha cumi” of Mark v. 41, treasured up by actual eye and ear witnesses, on whom the actions used and the word spoken made an indelible impression.

36. he charged them] i.e. the friends of the afflicted man, who had accompanied or followed him into the presence of his Healer.

so much the more] Observe the accumulation of comparatives, “The more He charged them, so much the more a great deal they published it, and were beyond measure astonished.” The original word for “beyond measure” occurs nowhere else in the New Testament.

CH. VIII. 1—9. The Feeding of the Four Thousand.

1. the multitude being very great] The effect of these miraculous cures on the inhabitants of the half-pagan district of Decapolis was very great. So widely was the fame of them spread abroad, that great multitudes brought their sick unto the Lord (Matt. xv. 30), and upwards of four thousand, without counting women and children (Matt. xv. 38), gathered round Him and His Apostles, and continued with Him upwards of three days (Mark viii. 2).

2. And his disciples answered him] Though the Apostles are the writers, they do not conceal from us their own shortcomings, or the fact that they had so soon forgotten so great a miracle.
man satisfy these men with bread here in the wilderness? And he asked them, How many loaves have ye? And they said, Seven. And he commanded the people to sit down on the ground: and he took the seven loaves, and gave thanks, and brake, and gave to his disciples to set before them; and they did set them before the people. And they had a few small fishes: and he blessed, and commanded to set them also before them. So they did eat, and were filled: and they took up of the broken meat that was left seven baskets. And they that had eaten were about four thousand: and he sent them away.

From whence can a man satisfy] It has been suggested that “it is evermore thus in times of difficulty and distress. All former deliverances are in danger of being forgotten; the mighty interpositions of God's hand in former passages of men’s lives fall out of their memories. Each new difficulty appears insurmountable; as one from which there is no extrication; at each recurring necessity it seems as though the wonders of God’s grace are exhausted and had come to an end.” Comp. (2) Ex. xvii. 1—7, and (b) Ex. xvi. 13 with Num. xi. 21, 23. Trench on the Miracles, p. 356. Still it has also been well observed that “many and many a time had the Apostles been with multitudes before, and yet on one occasion only had He fed them. Further, to suggest to Him a repetition of the feeding of the Five Thousand would be a presumption which their ever-deepening reverence forbade, and forbade more than ever as they recalled how persistently He had refused to work a sign, such as this was, at the bidding of others.” Farrar’s Life of Christ, I. p. 480.

6. to sit down] Where is not distinctly specified. All we can certainly gather is that it was on the eastern side of the Lake, and in a desert spot (Matt. xv. 33), possibly about the middle or southern end of the Lake.

8. seven baskets] Not the small wicker cophinoi of the former miracle, but large baskets of rope, such as that in which St Paul was lowered from the wall of Damascus (Acts ix. 25). We notice at once the difference between this and the Miracle of the Five Thousand:

(a) The people had been with the Lord upwards of three days, a point not noted on the other occasion;
(b) Seven loaves are now distributed and a few fishes, then five loaves and two fishes;
(c) Five thousand were fed then, four thousand are fed now;
(d) On this occasion seven large rope-baskets are filled with fragments, on the other twelve small wicker baskets.
(e) The more excitable inhabitants of the coast-villages of the North would have taken and made Him a king (John vi. 15); the men of Decapolis and the Eastern shores permit Him to leave them without any demonstration.

And straightway he entered into a ship with his disciples, and came into the parts of Dalmanutha. And the Pharisees came forth, and began to question with him, seeking of him a sign from heaven, tempting him. And he sighed deeply in his spirit, and saith, Why doth this generation seek after a

10. the parts of Dalmanutha] or as St Matthew says, into the coasts of Magdala (xv. 39), or according to some MSS. Magadan. Nothing is known of Dalmanutha. It must clearly have been near to Magdala, which may have been the Greek name of one of the many Migdols (i.e. watch-towers) to be found in the Holy Land, possibly the Migdal-el of Josh. ix. 38, and its place may now be occupied by a miserable collection of hovels known as el-Mejdel, on the western side of the Lake, and at the S. E. corner of the Plain of Gennesaret. "Just before reaching Mejdel, we crossed a little open valley, the Ain-el-Barideh, with a few rich cornfields and gardens straggling among the ruins of a village, and some large and more ancient foundations by several copious fountains, and probably identical with the Dalmanutha of the New Testament."—Tristram’s Land of Israel, p. 425. If the reading Magadan in Matt. xv. 39 stands, we may conjecture either (a) that it and Dalmanutha were different names for the same place, or (b) that they denoted contiguous spots, either of which might give its name to the same region.

11. And the Pharisees] Our Lord seems purposely to have avoided sailing to Bethsaida or Capernaum, which lay a little north of Magdala, and which had become the head-quarters of the Pharisees; but they had apparently watched for His arrival, and now "came forth" to meet Him accompanied for the first time by the Sadducees (Matt. xvi. 1), their rivals and enemies.

began] They had made their arrangements for a decisive contest, which began with a demand for a sign.

a sign from heaven] The same request had already been twice proffered. (1) After the first cleansing of the Temple (John ii. 18); (2) after the feeding of the Five Thousand (John vi. 30); and (3) again shortly after the walking through the cornfields (Matt. xii. 38). By such a "sign" was meant an outward and visible luminous appearance in the sky or some visible manifestation of the Shechtmah, the credentials of a prophet. They asked in effect, "Give us bread from heaven, as Moses did, or signs in the sun and moon like Joshua, or call down thunder and hail like Samuel, or fire and rain like Elijah, or make the sun turn back on the dial like Isaiah, or let us hear the Bath-Koll, the ‘daughter of the Voice,’ that we may believe Thee."

12. he sighed deeply in his spirit] Not merely, we may conclude, at their hardened disbelief, but also with the feeling that the decisive crisis of the severance from the ruling powers had come. "For the sign? verily I say unto you, There shall no sign be given unto this generation. And he left them, and entering into the ship again departed to the other side. Now the disciples had forgotten to take bread, neither had they in the ship with them more than one loaf. And he charged them, saying, Take heed, beware of the leaven of the Pharisees, and of the leaven of Herod. And they reasoned among themselves, saying, It is because we have no bread. And when Jesus knew it, he saith unto them, Why reason ye, because ye have no bread? perceive ye not yet, neither understand? have ye your heart yet hardened? having eyes, see ye not? and having ears, hear ye not? and do ye not remember? When I brake the five loaves among five demand for a sign from heaven was a demand that He should, as the Messiah of their expectation, accredit Himself by a great over-mastering miracle; thus it was fundamentally similar to the temptation in the wilderness, which He had repelled and overcome.” Lange.

There shall no sign be given] Literally, If a sign shall be given to this generation, a Hebrew form of strong abjuration. Comp. Heb. iii. 11, where see the margin; iv. 3, 5; Gen. xiv. 23; Num. xiv. 30. St Mark does not mention the sign of “Jonah the prophet” mentioned by St Matthew (xvi. 4).

13. he left them] “Justa severitas,” Bengel. “It was His final rejection on the very spot where He had laboured most, and He was leaving it, to return, indeed, for a passing visit, but never to appear again publicly, or to teach, or work miracles.”

14. had forgotten] In the hurry of their unexpected re-embarkation they had altogether omitted to make provision for their own personal wants.

15. the leaven of the Pharisees] Leaven in Scripture, with the single exception of the Parable (Matt. xiii. 33; Luke xiii. 20, 21), is always a symbol of evil (comp. 1 Cor. v. 6, 7, 8; Gal. v. 9), especially insidious evil, as it is for the most part also in the Rabbinical writers. See Lightfoot on Matt. xvi. 6. The strict command to the children of Israel that they should carefully put away every particle of leaven out of their houses during the Passover-week, rests on this view of it as evil.

16. the leaven of Herod] “and,” as it is in St Matthew’s Gospel, “of the Sadducees.” The leaven of the Pharisees was hypocrisy (Luke xii. 1), of the Sadducees, unbelief, of Herod, worldliness; all which working in secrecy and silence, and spreading with terrible certainty, cause that in the end “the whole man is leavened,” and his whole nature transformed.

17. yet hardened] as on the former occasion, the walking on the sea (Mark vi. 52).
thousand, how many baskets full of fragments took ye up? They say unto him, Twelve. And when the seven among four thousand, how many baskets full of fragments took ye up? And they said, Seven. And he said unto them, How is it that ye do not understand?

And he cometh to Bethsaida; and they bring a blind man unto him, and besought him to touch him. And he took the blind man by the hand, and led him out of the town; and when he had spit on his eyes, and put his hands upon him, he asked him if he saw ought. And he looked up, and said, I see men as trees, walking. After that he put his hands again upon his eyes, and made him look up: and he was restored, and saw every man clearly. And he sent

19. how many baskets] Observe how our Lord reproduces in this allusion to the putting forth of His miraculous power not only the precise number but the precise kind of baskets taken up on each occasion. See above, on vi. 43. Wyclif brings out this in his translation: "Whanne I brak fyue looues among fyve pousand, and hou many coffyns ful of brokene mete ye token up?...whanne also seuene looues among foure thousand, how many leepis of brokene mete se token up?"

21. ye do not understand] They seem to have thought that He was warning them against buying leaven of the Pharisees and Sadducees.

22—26. THE BLIND MAN IN EASTERN BETHSaida.

22. Bethsaida] i.e. Bethsaida julias, which lay upon the north-eastern coast of the Sea of Tiberias.

23. he took the blind man] Even as He did with the other sufferer, whose case came before us in Mark vii. 33. As then, so now, the Lord was pleased to work gradually and with external signs: (i) He leads the man out of the town; (ii) anoints his eyes with the moisture of His mouth; (iii) lays His hands upon him twice (Mark viii. 23, 25); (iv) inquires of the progress of his restoration.

24. as trees, walking] He had not been born blind. He remembered the appearance of natural objects, and in the haze of his brightening vision he saw certain moving forms about him, "trees he should have accounted them from their height, but men from their motion."

25. saw every man clearly] or rather, began to see all things clearly. "So þat he syþ clerely alle þingis," Wyclif. The word translated "clearly" literally = "far-shining," "far-beaming." The man meant that he could now see clearly far and near. This is one of the few instances of a strictly progressive cure recorded in the Gospels. "His friends asked that He would touch him. To this demand for an instant act followed by an instant cure, the Lord opposed His own slow and 27 And Jesus went out, and his disciples, into the towns of Cæsarea Philippi: and by the way he asked his disciples, circumstantial method of procedure." Lange. Comp. the cure of Naaman, 2 Kings v. 10, 11, 14.

26. to his house] Bethsaida, therefore, was not the place of his residence; he was to go immediately from the place to his own home—not even to the village to which he had already come, and he was not to mention it to any one dwelling in that village, or whom he might meet by the way.

27. And Jesus went out] The Redeemer and His Apostles now set out in a northerly direction, and travelled some 25 or 30 miles along the eastern banks of the Jordan and beyond the waters of Merom, seeking the deepest solitude among the mountains, for an important crisis in His Life was at hand. The solitude of the beautiful district, whither the Saviour now journeyed, is illustrated by the fact that it is the only district of Palestine where a recent traveller found the pelican of the wilderness (Ps. cii. 6). See Thomson’s Land and the Book, pp. 260, 261; Caspari’s Introduction, p. 163, n.

into the towns] The little company at length reached the “villages,” as it is literally, or the “parts” or “regions” (Matt. xvi. 13) of the remote city of Cæsarea Philippi, near which it is possible He may have passed in His circuit from Sidon a very few weeks before. See above, vii. 24, n., Bishop Ellicott’s Lectures, p. 225.

Cæsarea Philippi] “Sezarie of Philip” (Wyclif) lay on the north-east of the reedy and marshy plain of El Huleh, close to Dan, the extreme north of the boundaries of ancient Israel. (i) Its earliest name according to some was Baal-Gad (Josh. xi. 17, xii. 7, xiii. 5) or Baal-Heron (Judg. iii. 3; 1 Chron. v. 23), when it was a Phoenician or Canaanite sanctuary of Baal under the aspect of “Gad,” or the god of good fortune. (ii) In later times it was known as Panium or Paneas, a name which it derived from a cavern near the town, “abrupt, prodigiously deep, and full of still water,” adopted by the Greeks of the Macedonian kingdom of Antioch, as the nearest likeness that Syria afforded of the beautiful limestone grottoes, which in their own country were inseparably associated with the worship of the sylvan Pan, and dedicated to that deity. Hence its modern appellation Baneas. (iii) The town retained this name under Herod the Great, who built here a splendid temple, of the whitest marble, which he dedicated to Augustus Caesar. (iv) It afterwards became part of the territory of Herod Philip, tetrarch of Trachonitis, who enlarged and embellished it, and called it Cæsarea Philippi, partly after his own name, and partly after that of the Emperor Tiberius. Jos. Ant. xv. 10. 3; Bel. Jud. i. 21. 3. It was called Cæsarea saying unto them, Whom do men say that I am? And they answered, John the Baptist: but some say, Elias; and others, One of the prophets. And he saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am? And Peter answereth and saith unto him, Thou art the Christ. And he charged them that they should tell no man of him. And he began to teach them, that the Philippi to distinguish it from Cæsarea Palestine, or Cæsarea "on the sea." Dean Stanley calls it a Syrian Tivoli, and "certainly there is much in the rocks, caverns, cascades, and the natural beauty of the scenery to recall the Roman Tibur. Behind the village, in front of a great natural cavern, a river bursts forth from the earth, the "upper source" of the Jordan. Inscriptions and niches in the face of the cliffs tell of the old idol worship of Baal and of Pan." Tristram, Land of Israel, p. 581.

he asked his disciples] It was in this desert region that the Apostles on one occasion found Him engaged in solitary prayer (Luke ix. 18), a significant action which had preceded several important events in His life, as (a) the Baptism, (b) the election of the Twelve, and (c) the discourse in the synagogue of Capernaum. It was now the precursor of a solemn and momentous question. Hitherto He is not recorded to have asked the Twelve any question respecting Himself, and He would seem to have forborne to press His Apostles for an explicit avowal of faith in His full Divinity. But on this occasion He wished to ascertain from them, the special witnesses as they had been of His life and daily words, the results of those labours, which were now drawing in one sense to a close, before He went on to communicate to them other and more painful truths.

28. they answered] In this answer we have the explanation, which common rumour, in His own days, offered of His marvellous works. (1) Some, like the guilty Herod, said He was John the Baptist risen from the dead; (2) others that He was Elijah, who, like Enoch, had never died, but was taken up bodily to heaven and had now returned as Malachi predicted (iv. 5); (3) others that He was Jeremiah (Matt. xvi. 14), who was expected to inaugurate the reign of the Messiah; (4) others again that He was one of the "old prophets" (Luke ix. 19). But they did not add that any regarded Him as the Messiah.

29. Thou art the Christ] To the momentous question, But whom say ye that I am? St Peter, as the ready spokesman of the rest of the Apostles, made the ever-memorable reply, Thou art the Christ, the Messiah (Matt. xvi. 16; Luke ix. 20), the Son of the living God (Matt. xvi. 16), but in the Gospel written under his eye the great announcement respecting his own memorable confession and the promise of peculiar dignity in the Church the Lord was about to establish, find no place.

31. And he began to teach them] The question and the answer it called forth were alike preparatory to strange and mournful tidings, which He now began to reveal distinctly to the Apostles respecting Himself, for clear and full before His eyes was the whole history of
Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders, and of the chief priests, and scribes, and be killed, and after three days rise again. And he spake that saying openly. And Peter took him, and began to rebuke him.

But when he had turned about and looked on his disciples, he rebuked Peter, saying, Get thee behind me, Satan: for thou savourest not the things that be of God, but the things

His coming sufferings, the agents through whom they would be brought about, the form they would take, the place where He would undergo them, and their issue, a mysterious resurrection after three days.

32. openly] i.e. not publicly, but "plainly" ("plainli," Wyclif) and "without disguise." Comp. John xi. 14, "Then said Jesus unto them plainly, Lazarus is dead." Before this there had been intimations of the End, but then they had been dark and enigmatical. (a) The Baptist had twice pointed Him out as the Lamb of God destined to take away the sin of the world (John i. 29). (b) At the first Passover of His public ministry He Himself had spoken to the Jews of a Temple to be destroyed and rebuilt in three days (John ii. 19), and to Nicodemus of a lifting up of the Son of Man, even as Moses had lifted up the serpent in the wilderness (John iii. 14—16); (c) He had intimated moreover to the Apostles that a day would come when the Bridegroom should be taken from them (Matt. ix. 15), and (d) in the synagogue at Capernaum He had declared that He was about to give His flesh for the Life of the world (John vi. 47—51). Now for the first time He dwelt on His awful Future distinctly, and with complete freedom of speech.

And Peter] The selfsame Peter, who a moment before had witnessed so noble and outspoken a confession to his Lord's Divinity.

took him] i.e. took Him aside (and so Tyndale and Cranmer render it), by the hand or by the robe, and began earnestly and lovingly to remonstrate with Him. The idea of a suffering Messiah was abhorrent to him and to all the Twelve.

33. when he had turned about and looked on his disciples] Observe the graphic touches of St Mark. The Apostle who had restrained the Evangelist from preserving the record of that which redounded to his highest honour, suppresses the record neither of his own mistaken zeal, nor of the terrible rebuke it called forth.

Get thee behind me] The very words which He had used to the Tempter in the wilderness (Matt. iv. 10), for in truth the Apostle was adopting the very argument which the great Enemy had adopted there.

thou savourest not] Thou art thinking of, thy thoughts centre on. This rendering of the Greek word for "to think" is suggested by the Latin sapere, which is found in the Vulgate and retained from Wyclif's Version. It is derived directly from the substantive savour, Fr. savoir, Lat. sapor, from sapere. Thus Latimer quoting 1 Cor. xiii. 11 writes, "When I was a child I savoured as a child." "In confusion of them that so savorem earthly things." Chaucer, Parson's Tale. "Thy words shew," our Lord would say to the Apostle, "that in these things that be of men. And when he had called the people unto 34 him with his disciples also, he said unto them, Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. For whosoever will save his life shall 35 lose it; but whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's, the same shall save it. For what shall it profit 36 a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul? 37 Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me and of my 38 words in this adulterous and sinful generation; of him also shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father with the holy angels. And he said unto 9 them, Verily I say unto you, That there be some of them that stand here, which shall not taste of death, till they have seen the kingdom of God come with power.

thou enterest not into the thoughts and plans of God, but considerest all things only from the ideas of men. This attempt of thine to dissuade Me from My ‘baptism of death’ is a sin against the purposes of God.”

34. he had called] Even in these lonely regions considerable numbers would seem to have followed Him, apparently at some little distance. These He now called to Him, and addressed to them, as well as to His Apostles, some of His deepest teaching, making them sharers in this part of His instruction.

will] i.e. whosoever is resolved. “Will” here is not the will simply of the future tense, but the will of real desire and resolution. Comp. John vii. 17, if any man will do His will (i.e. is resolved at all costs to do it), he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God.

take up his cross] The first intimation of His own suffering upon the cross.

35. shall lose it] This solemn saying our Lord is found to have uttered on no less than four several occasions: (a) here, which corresponds with Matt. xvi. 25, Luke ix. 24; (b) Matt. x. 39; (c) Luke xvii. 33; (d) John xii. 25.

37. in exchange] i.e. to purchase back. By soul here is meant “life” in the higher sense. The “price” which the earthly-minded man gives for the world is his soul. But after having laid that down as the price, what has he for a “ransom-price,” to purchase it again? The LXX. use the original word in Ruth iv. 7; Jer. xv. 13.

38. adulterous] The generation is called “adulterous,” because its heart was estranged from God. Comp. Jer. xxxi. 32; Isai. liv. 5.

IX. 1. And he said unto them] The opening verse of the Ninth Chapter connects closely with what goes before.

Verily I say unto you] This well-known formula occurs 13 times in St Mark, 31 times in St Matthew, 7 times in St Luke, 25 times in St John. It always introduces solemn and important announcements.

the kingdom of God] On this expression see above, ch. i. 15. Of 2—13. The Transfiguration.

And after six days Jesus taketh with him Peter, and James, and John, and leadeth them up into an high mountain apart by themselves: and he was transfigured before those then standing with the Lord, three six days afterwards beheld Him transfigured; all, save one, were witnesses of His resurrection; one at least, St John, survived the capture of Jerusalem and the destruction of the Temple, and on each of these occasions “the kingdom of God” came “with power.”

CH. IX. 2–13. THE TRANSFIGURATION.

2. after six days] St Luke’s words “about an eight days after” (ix. 28) may be considered an inclusive reckoning. Peter, and James, and John] the flower and crown of the Apostolic band, the privileged Three, who had already witnessed His power over death in the chamber of Jairus: St Peter who loved Him so much (John xxii. 17), St John whom He loved so much (John xxi. 20), and St James “who should first attest that death could as little as life separate from His love (Acts xii. 2).” Trench’s Studies in the Gospels, p. 191.

leadeth them up] It is the same expression in the original, which is used in reference to His own Ascension (Luke xxiv. 51).

into an high mountain] One of the numerous mountain-ranges in the neighbourhood, probably one of the spurs of the magnificent snow-clad Hermon, the most beautiful and conspicuous mountain in Palestine or Syria. The Sidonians called it Sirion = “breastplate,” a name suggested by its rounded glittering top, when the sun’s rays are reflected by the snow that covers it (Deut. iii. 9; Cant. iv. 8). It was also called Sion = “the elevated,” and is now known as Jebel-esh Sheikh, “the chief mountain.” “In whatever part of Palestine the Israelite turned his eye northward, Hermon was there terminating the view. From the plain along the coast, from the mountains of Samaria, from the Jordan valley, from the heights of Moab and Gilead, from the plateau of Bashan, that pale-blue, snow-capped cone forms the one feature on the northern horizon.”

apart by themselves] St Luke (ix. 28) tells us that one object of His own withdrawal was that He might engage in solitary prayer. We may infer, therefore (comparing Luke ix. 37), that evening was the time of this solitary retirement. The fact that it was night must have infinitely enhanced the grandeur of the scene.

was transfigured] St Luke, writing primarily for Greek readers, avoids the word, “transfigured,” or “transformed,”—“metamorphosed” would be a still closer rendering,—which St Matthew and St Mark do not shrink from employing. He avoids it, probably, because of the associations of the heathen mythology which would so easily, and almost inevitably, attach themselves to it in the imagination of a Greek. In naming this great event, the German theology, calling it “die Verklärung,” or “the Glorification,” has seized this point, not them. And his raiment became shining, exceeding white as snow; so as no fuller on earth can white them. And there appeared unto them Elias with Moses: and they were talking with Jesus. And Peter answered and said to Jesus, Master, it is good for us to be here: and let us make three exactly the same as our "Transfiguration." From the records of the three Evangelists we infer that while He was engaged in prayer (Luke ix. 29), a marvellous change came over the Person of our Lord. The Divinity within Him shone through the veiling flesh, till His raiment became exceeding white as the light (Matt. xvii. 2), or as the glittering snow (Mark ix. 3) on the peaks above Him, so as no fuller on earth could white them; moreover the fashion of His countenance was altered (Luke ix. 29), and His face glowed with a sunlike majesty (Matt. xvii. 2, comp. Rev. i. 16). "St Mark borrows one image from the world of nature, another from that of man's art and device; by these he struggles to set forth and reproduce for his readers the transcendant brightness of that light which now arrayed, and from head to foot, the Person of the Lord, breaking forth from within, and overflowing the very garments which He wore; until in their eyes who beheld, He seemed to clothe Himself with light as with a garment, light being indeed the proper and peculiar garment of Deity (Ps. civ. 2; Hab. iii. 4)," Trench's Studies, pp. 194, 195.

4. there appeared unto them The three Apostles had not witnessed the beginning of this marvellous change. They had been weighed down with sleep (Luke ix. 32), lying wrapped like all Orientals in their abbas on the ground, but awakened probably by the supernatural light, they thoroughly roused themselves (Luke ix. 32), and saw His glory, and the two men standing with Him. It was clearly no waking vision or dream.

Elias with Moses] (i) Among all the prophets and saints of the Old Testament these were the two, of whom one had not died (2 Kings ii. 11), and the other had no sooner tasted of death than his body was withdrawn from under the dominion of death and of him that had the power of death (Deut. xxxiv. 6; Jude 9). Both, therefore, came from the grave, but from the grave conquered. (ii) Again, these two were the acknowledged heads and representatives, the one of the Law, the other of the Prophets (comp. Matt. vii. 12).

they were talking] St Luke tells us what was the subject of mysterious converse which the Three were privileged to hear—"the decease, which He was about to accomplish at Jerusalem" (Luke ix. 31). St Peter himself reproduces this remarkable word in his second Epistle i. 15. "Vocabulum valde grave, quo continetur Passio, Crux, Mors, Resurrectio, Ascensio." Bengel.

5. And Peter] Eager, ardent, impulsive as always. This proposal he made as the mysterious visitants were being parted from Him (Luke ix. 33). It was for him too brief a converse, too transient a glimpse and foretaste of the heavenly glory.

it is good for us to be here] "Better, as no doubt he felt, than to be tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias. For he wist not what to say; for they were sore afraid. And there was a cloud that overshadowed them:
and a voice came out of the cloud, saying, This is my beloved Son: hear him. And suddenly, when they had looked rejected of the Jews, better than to suffer many things of the Elders and Chief Priests and Scribes and be killed” (Matt. xvi. 21). Trench’s three tabernacles] Three booths of wattled boughs, like those of the Feast of Tabernacles. It seemed to him that the hour for the long­ looked-for reign had come. From the slopes of Hermon he would have had the Laws of the New Kingdom proclaimed, so that all men might recognise the true Messiah attended by the representatives of the Old Dispensation.
This word also occurs Ex. xvi. 15, and = he knew not. Wist is the past tense of A. S. witan=to know. Compare wit=knowledge (Ps. evii. 27), and wit=to know (Gen. xxiv. 21), “And the man wondering at her held his peace, to wit whether the Lord had made his journey prosperous or not;” Ex. ii. 4, “And his sister stood afar off, to wit what would be done to him;” 2 Cor. viii. 1, “Moreover, brethren, we do you to wit (=cause you to know) of the grace of God.” Witan=to sore afraid] The original word only occurs here and in Heb. xii.

19. Wyclif’s rendering is very striking, “forsope þei were agast by drede.”
7. a cloud] not dark and murky, but bright (Matt. xvii. 5), overshadowed the lawgiver and the prophet, and perhaps also the Lord.
“Light in its utmost intensity performs the effects of darkness, hides as effectually as the darkness would do.” Comp. 1 Tim. vi. 16, and the words of Milton, “dark with excess of light,” and of Wordsworth, “a glorious privacy of light.” Trench’s Studies, pp. 205, 206.
a voice came out of the cloud] The same Voice which had been heard once before at the Baptism (Matt. iii. 17), and which was to be heard again when He stood on the threshold of His Passion (John xii. 28), attesting His Divinity and Sonship at the beginning, at the middle, and at the close of His ministry. Looking back afterwards on the scene now vouchsafed to him and to the “sons of thunder,” St Peter speaks of himself and them as “eyewitnesses of His majesty” (2 Peter i. 16), i.e. literally, as men who had been admitted and initiated into secret and holy mysteries, and says that the Voice “came from the excellent glory” (2 Peter i. 17), from Him, that is, Who dwelt in the cloud, which was the symbol and the vehicle of the Divine Presence. St John also clearly alludes to the scene in John i. 14 and 1 John i. 1. round about, they saw no man any more, save Jesus only with themselves. And as they came down from the mountain, he charged them that they should tell no man what things they had seen, till the Son of man were risen from the dead. And they kept that saying with themselves, questioning one with another what the rising from the dead should mean. And they asked him, saying, Why say the scribes that Elias must first come? And he answered and told them, Elias verily cometh first, and restoreth all things; and how

This is my beloved Son] “In the words themselves of this majestic installation there is a remarkable honouring of the Old Testament, and of it in all its parts, which can scarcely be regarded as accidental; for the three several clauses of that salutation are drawn severally from the Psalms (Ps. ii. 7), the Prophets (Isaiah xiii. 1), and the Law (Deut. xviii. 15); and together they proclaim Him, concerning whom they are spoken, to be the King, the Priest, and the Prophet of the New Covenant.” Trench, Studies, p. 207.

8. when they had looked round about] At first (1) they fell prostrate on their faces (Matt. xvii. 6; comp. Ex. iii. 6; 1 Kings xix. 13), then (2) recovering from the shock of the Voice from heaven (Matt. xvii. 6; comp. Ex. xx. 19; Hab. iii. 2, 16; Heb. xii. 19), they (3) suddenly gazed all around them, and saw no man, save Jesus only. “Hinc constat, hunc esse Filium, audiendum, non Mosen, non Elias.” Bengel. “Quae ex Verbo coeperunt, in Verbo desinunt.” S. Ambrose.

9. they should tell no man] This implies that they were forbidden to reveal the wonders of the night, and what they had seen, even to their fellow-Apostles. The seal set upon their lips was not to be removed till after the Resurrection.

10. questioning one with another] St Mark alone mentions the perplexity which this language of their Lord occasioned to the Apostles. It was not the question of the resurrection generally, but of His resurrection, and the death, so abhorrent to their prejudices, that rendered it possible and necessary, which troubled them.

11. first come] that is before the Messiah (Mal. iv. 5). The Pharisees and Scribes may have urged as a capital objection against the Messiah-ship of their Master that no Elias went before Him. “It would be an infinite task,” says Lightfoot, “to produce all the passages out of the Jewish writings which one might concerning the expected coming of Elias.” He was to restore to the Jews the pot of manna and the rod of Aaron, to cry to the mountains, “Peace and blessing come into the world, peace and blessing come into the world!” “Salvation cometh, Salvation cometh, to gather all the scattered sons of Jacob, and restore all things to Israel as in ancient times.”

12. and how] Rather, but how is it written of the Son of Man that He must suffer many things and be set at naught? See Tischendorf, Synop. Evang. The words that He must, or in order that He may, are very striking. They set before us the design of the It is it is written of the Son of man, that he must suffer many things, and be set at nought. But I say unto you, That Elias is indeed come, and they have done unto him whatsoever they listed, as it is written of him.

written. "Elias cometh first. But how or to what purpose is it written of the Son of Man that He cometh? In order that He may suffer, not conquer like a mighty prince."

13. That Elias is indeed come] that is in the person of John the Baptist, to whom men acted even as it had been written of the persecution of the real Elijah. A few remarks here will not be out of place (i) On the three accounts of the Transfiguration; (ii) On the meaning and significance of the event itself.

(i) The three accounts. (a) All three Evangelists relate the conversation which preceded, and the Miracle which succeeded it. (b) St Matthew alone records the prostration of the disciples through excessive fear, and the Lord's strengthening touch and cheering words uttered once before on the stormy lake (Matt. xvii. 6, 7, xiv. 27), recalling, as the Hebrew Evangelist, the scene in the Exodus when the face of Moses shone, and the children of Israel were afraid to come nigh him (Ex. xxxiv. 29, 30). (c) St Mark, in describing the effect of the Transfiguration, uses the strongest material imagery, "white as snow," "so as no fuller on earth can whiten," and he alone has the sudden vanishing of the heavenly visitors, and the inquiring look around of the disciples, and their questioning amongst themselves what "the rising from the dead could mean." (d) St Luke alone tells us that our Lord was engaged in prayer at the moment of His glorification (Luke ix. 29), and mentions the slumbrous and wakeful condition of the three witnesses, the subject of mysterious converse between the Lord and His visitors from the other world (Luke ix. 31), and the fact that the Heavenly Voice succeeded their departure (Luke ix. 35). (e) Both St Matthew and St Mark place in immediate connection with the Event the remarkable conversation about Elias, but St Matthew alone applies the Lord's words concerning that great prophet to John the Baptist (Matt. xvii. 13).

(ii) The meaning and significance of the Event. This we may believe had respect (a) to the Apostles, and (b) to our Lord Himself.

(a) As regards the Apostles. This one full manifestation of His Divine glory, during the period of the Incarnation, was designed to confirm their faith, to comfort them in prospect of their Master's approaching sufferings, to prepare them to see in His Passion the fulfilment alike of the Law and the Prophets, to give them a glimpse of the celestial Majesty of Him, whom they had given up all to follow.

(b) As regards our Lord. As regards the Redeemer we may conclude that the transaction marked His consecration as the Divine Victim, Who was to accomplish the great "Decease" at Jerusalem, even as the Baptism inaugurated the commencement of His public ministry; it was the solemn attestation of His perfect oneness with

And when he came to his disciples, he saw a great multitude about them, and the scribes questioning with them. And straightway all the people, when they beheld him, were greatly amazed, and running to him saluted him. And he asked the scribes, What question ye with them? And one of the multitude answered and said, Master, I have brought unto thee my son, which hath a dumb spirit; and wheresoever he taketh him, he teareth him: and he foameth, and Hymn Father in heaven at the very time when He was about to descend into the valley of the shadow of death. It was, as it has well been called, “the summit-level” of the Life Incarnate. From this time forward there is a perceptible change. (a) Miracles, which hitherto had abounded in prodigal profusion, well-nigh cease. Only five mark the period between the Transfiguration and the Passion. Those, for whom “signs” could avail, were already won. For the rest, no more could be done. They were like those, amongst whom in His earlier ministry, “He could do no mighty work because of their unbelief.” (b) As regards His teaching, public addresses, before the rule, now become few and rare; His special revelations of the future to the chosen Twelve become more frequent, and they uniformly circle, unenshrouded in type or figure or dark saying, round the Cross.

14—29. THE HEALING OF THE LUNATIC CHILD.

14. And when he came to his disciples] The great picture of Raphael has enshrined for ever the contrast between the scene on the Mount of Glorification and that which awaited the Saviour and the three Apostles on the plain below, between the harmonies of heaven and the harsh discords of earth.

scribes] Thus far north had they penetrated in their active hostility to the Lord. Many of them would be found in the tetrarchy of Philip.

15. were greatly amazed] “was astonished and much afraid,” Rhemish Version. His face would seem, like that of Moses (Ex. xxxiv. 30), to have retained traces of the celestial glory of the Holy Mount, which had not faded into the light of common day, and filled the beholders with awe and wonder. The word points to an extremity of terror. It is used four times in the New Testament, and only by St Mark. What is here said of the multitudes is said (Mark xiv. 34) of our Lord in Gethsemane, and (Mark xvi. 5) of the holy women at the Sepulchre on the first Easter-day at the sight of the Angel seated, “they were affrighted.”

17. my son] and his “only son” (Luke ix. 38).

a dumb spirit] dumb in respect to articulate sounds, to which he could give no utterance, though he could suddenly cry out (Luke ix. 39).

18. wheresoever] According to St Matthew these crises had a connection with changes of the moon (Matt. xvii. 15).
gnasheth with his teeth, and pineth away: and I spake to thy disciples that they should cast him out; and they could not. He answereth him, and saith, O faithless generation, how long shall I be with you? how long shall I suffer you? bring him unto me. And they brought him unto him: and when he saw him, straightway the spirit tare him; and he fell on the ground, and wallowed foaming. And he asked his father, How long is it ago since this came unto him? And he said, Of a child. And oftentimes it hath cast him into the fire, and into the waters, to destroy him: but if thou canst do any thing, have compassion on us, and help us. Jesus said unto him, If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth. And straightway the father of the child cried out, and said with tears, Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief. When Jesus saw that the people he teareth him] Probably this manifested itself in violent convulsions, St Vitus' dance, or the like.

pineth away] “wexiō drye,” Wyclif. The word may denote either that he pined away like one, the very springs of whose life were dried up, or that in the paroxysms of his disorder his limbs became unnaturally stiff and stark. The fundamental form of his malady was epilepsy in its worst form, accompanied by dumbness, atrophy, and suicidal mania (Mark ix. 22).

19. O faithless generation] These words, though primarily addressed to the father, apply also to the surrounding multitude, and indeed to the whole Jewish people of which he was a representative, and in a sense to the disciples.

20. straightway the spirit] The mere introduction to our Lord brings on one of the sudden and terrible paroxysms, to which he was liable.

21. And he asked] This conversation with the father is parallel to another conversation with an actual sufferer (Mark v. 9).

22. if thou canst] More literally, if at all Thou canst. This is a strong expression of an infirm faith, which at the beginning had been too weak, but had become more and more weak owing to the failure of the disciples to aid him.

23. If thou canst] According to the best reading here the translation would be, Jesus said unto him, As for thy if thou canst, all things are possible to him that believeth. For the use of the article compare Matt, xix. 18; Luke ix. 46. “Thou hast said,” replies our Lord, *“if I can do anything. But as for thy if Thou canst, the question is if thou canst believe; that is the hinge upon which all must turn.” Then He pauses, and utters the further words, “all things are possible to him that believeth.” “Hoc, si potes credere, res est; hoc agitur.” Bengel.
came running together, he rebuked the foul spirit, saying unto him, Thou dumb and deaf spirit, I charge thee, come out of him, and enter no more into him. And the spirit cried, and rent him sore, and came out of him: and he was as one dead; insomuch that many said, He is dead. But Jesus took him by the hand, and lifted him up; and he arose. And when he was come into the house, his disciples asked him privately, Why could not we cast him out? And he said unto them, This kind can come forth by nothing, but by prayer and fasting.

30—32. Predictions of the Passion.

And they departed thence, and passed through Galilee;
31 and he would not that any man should know it. For he taught his disciples, and said unto them, The Son of man is delivered into the hands of men, and they shall kill him; and after that he is killed, he shall rise the third day. But they understood not that saying, and were afraid to ask him.

33—37. True Greatness in Christ's Kingdom.

33 And he came to Capernaum: and being in the house he asked them, What was it that ye disputed among yourselves by the way? But they held their peace: for by the way they had disputed among themselves, who should be the greatest. And he sat down, and called the twelve, and saith unto them, If any man desire to be first, the same shall be last of all, and servant of all. And he took a child, and set him in the midst of them: and when he had taken him in his arms, he said unto them, Whosoever shall receive one of such children in my name, receiveth me: and whosoever shall receive me, receiveth not me, but him that sent me.

38—50. The Question of John.

38 And John answered him, saying, Master, we saw one denote that, avoiding populous places, He and His Apostles sought bypaths among the hills, where He would meet few and be little known.

31. For he taught] The tense in the original implies that the constant subject of His teaching in private now was His approaching sufferings, death, and resurrection.

32. were afraid] St Matthew adds that they were “exceeding sorry.” His words concerning His violent death contradicted all their expectations.

33—37. True Greatness in Christ’s Kingdom.

33. he came] or rather they came, to Capernaum. Here, the next recorded event was the miraculous payment of the tribute-money (Matt. xvii. 24—27), the half-shekel for the Temple-service.

34. who should be the greatest] They called to mind perhaps the preference given on Hermon to Peter and the sons of Zebedee, and now disputed who should be the greatest in the Messianic kingdom, which they fondly believed was about to be speedily set up.

35. And he sat down] Observe the many graphic and pathetic touches in this and the following verse. (1) He sits down; (2) He calls the Twelve to Him; (3) He takes a little child, and places it in the midst of them; (4) He takes it into His arms, and then He speaks to them.

38. And John answered him] The words in My name of v. 37 casting out devils in thy name, and he followeth not us: and we forbad him, because he followeth not us. But Jesus said, Forbid him not: for there is no man which shall do a miracle in my name, that can lightly speak evil of me. For he that is not against us is on our part. For whosoever shall give you a cup of water to drink in my name, because ye belong to Christ, verily I say unto you, he shall not lose his reward. And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones that believe in me, it is better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he were cast into the sea. And if thy hand offend thee, cut it off: it is better for thee to enter into life maimed, than having two hands to go into

because he followeth not us] Observe what the Apostle affirms to have been the ground of their rebuke, "because he followeth not us," not "because he followeth not Thee." It is the utterance of excited party feeling. "We gather from this passage," observes Meyer, "how mightily the words and influence of Christ had wrought outside the sphere of His permanent dependants, exciting in individuals a degree of spiritual energy that performed miracles on others,"

39. Forbid him not] Compare the words of Joshua and the reply of Moses in Num. xi. 28, 29; "and Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of Moses...answered and said, My lord Moses, forbid them. And Moses said unto him, Enviest thou for my sake? Would God that all the Lord's people were prophets, and that the Lord would put His Spirit upon them."

41. a cup of water] which all gave readily in those sultry lands.

42. a millstone] Literally, an ass-mill-stone, a mill-stone turned by an ass. These were much larger and heavier than the stones of hand-mills. Comp. Ov. Fast. vi. 318,

"Et quae pumiceas versat asella molas."

It was not a Jewish punishment, but was in use among the Greeks, Romans, Syrians, and Phoenicians. "Pædagogum ministrosque C. fill...oneratos gravi pondere cervicibus precipitavit in flumen." Sueton. Oct. lxvii.

43. offend thee] or, as in margin, cause thee to offend, lead thee into sin. Our Lord makes special mention of the Hand, the Foot, the Eye, those members, whereby we do amiss, or walk astray, or gain on what is sinful.

into hell] Literally, the Gehenna, or the Gehenna of fire (v. 47). The "Ravine of Hinnom," also called "Topheth" (2 Kings xxiii. 10; Isai. xxx. 33), is described in Josh. xviii. 16, as on the south of Mount Zion. Its total length is a mile and a half. It is a deep retired glen, shut in by rugged cliffs, with the bleak mountain sides rising over all.
hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched: where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. And if thy foot offend thee, cut it off: it is better for thee to enter halt into life, than having two feet to be cast into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched: where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out: it is better for thee to enter into the kingdom of God with one eye, than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire: where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. For every one shall be salted with fire, and every sacrifice shall be salted with salt. Salt is good: but if the salt have lost his saltiness, wherewith will ye season it? Have salt in yourselves, and have peace one with another.

It became notorious in the times of Ahaz and Manasseh as the scene of the barbarous rites of Molech and Chemosh, when the idolatrous inhabitants of Jerusalem cast their sons and daughters into the red-hot arms of a monster idol of brass placed at the opening of the ravine (2 Kings xvi. 3; 2 Chron. xxviii. 3; Jer. vii. 31). To put an end to these abominations the place was polluted by Josiah, who spread over it human bones and other corruptions (2 Kings xxiii. 10, 13, 14), from which time it seems to have become the common cesspool of the city. These inhuman rites and subsequent ceremonial defilement caused the later Jews to regard it with horror and detestation, and they applied the name given to the valley to the place of torment.

44. "where their worm"
These words are cited from Isai. lxvi. 24.

49. "every one shall be salted with fire"
Salt and fire have properties in common. Salt, like a subtle flame, penetrates all that is corruptible, and separates that which is decaying and foul, whilst it fixes and quickens that which is sound. Fire destroys that which is perishable, and thereby establishes the imperishable in its purest perfection, and leads to new and more beautiful forms of being. Thus both effect a kind of transformation. Now "every one," our Lord saith, "shall be salted with fire;" either (1) by his voluntary entering upon a course of self-denial and renunciation of his sins, and so submitting to the purifying fire of self-transformation; or (2) by his being involuntarily salted with the fire of condemning judgment (Heb. x. 27, xii. 29), as the victims on the altar were salted with salt (Lev. ii. 13; Ezek. xliii. 24). See Lange.

50. Salt is good]
Salt is good in its kind and its effect, as preserving from corruption. If the salt have lost its virtue (Matt. v. 13) and become saltless. The same fact is implied in the expressions of Pliny sal iners, sal tabescere, and Maundrell asserts that he found the surface of a salt rock in this condition."

his saltiness]
Observe his here, where we should now use its. This is frequently the case in the Bible, and indeed the word its does not occur at all in the English Version of 1611.

And he arose from thence, and cometh into the coasts of Judæa by the farther side of Jordan: and the people resort unto him again; and, as he was wont, he taught them

Have salt in yourselves] In the common life of Orientals, salt was a sign of sacred covenant engagements and obligations (Lev. ii. 13; 2 Chron. xiii. 5). To eat salt together, meant to make peace, and enter into covenant with each other. Hence the connection here between the disciples having salt in themselves and being at peace one with another, which our Lord further enforced during this “brief period of tranquillity and seclusion” by speaking of the duty not only of avoiding all grounds of offence, but also of cultivating a spirit of gentleness and forgiveness (Matt. xviii. 15—20), which He illustrated by the Parable of the Lost Sheep (Matt. xviii. 12—14), and the Debtor who owed Ten Thousand Talents (Matt. xviii. 21—35).

1. And] Between the events just recorded and those of which the Evangelist now proceeds to treat, many others had occurred, which he has passed over. The most important of these were

(a) The visit of our Lord to Jerusalem at the Feast of Tabernacles (John vii. 8—10), which was marked by

(b) The renunciation of the “Sons of Thunder” at the churlish conduct of the inhabitants of a Samaritan village on their way to the Holy City (Luke ix. 51—56);

(c) Solemn discourses during the Feast, and an attempt of the Sanhedrim to apprehend Him (John vii. 11—51, viii. 12—59);

(d) The opening of the eyes of one born blind (John ix. 1—41), the revelation of Himself as the Good Shepherd (John x. 1—18);

(e) Visit to Jerusalem at the Feast of Dedication (John x. 22—39);

(f) Ministrations in Judæa and Mission of the Seventy (Luke x. 1—11.); (e) Tour in Pææa (Luke xiii. 22—xvii. 10);

(f) Resolve of the Sanhedrim to put Him to death, and His retirement to Ephraim (John xi. 47—54).

The place, whither He now retired, has been identified with Ophrah, and was situated in the wide desert country north-east of Jerusalem, not far from Bethel, and on the confines of Samaria. Caspari would identify it with a place now called El-Faria, or El-Farah, about 2 hours N.E. of Nablous. Chron. and Geog. Introd. p. 185. Here in quiet and seclusion He remained till the approach of the last Passover, and then commenced a farewell journey along the border-line of Samaria and Galilee (Luke xvii. 11) and so by the further side of Jordan towards Judæa (Mark x. 1).

Portions of His teaching are recorded by St Luke, and include the Parables of (a) the Unjust Judge, and (b) the again. And the Pharisees came to him, and asked him, Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife? tempting him. And he answered and said unto them, What did Moses command you? And they said, Moses suffered to write a bill of divorcement, and to put her away. And Jesus answered and said unto them, For the hardness of your heart he wrote you this precept. But from the beginning of the creation God made them male and female. For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and cleave to his wife; and they twain shall be one flesh: so then they are no more twain, but one flesh. What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder. And in the house his disciples asked him again of the same matter. And he saith unto them, Whosoever shall put away his wife, and marries another, committeth adultery against her. And if a woman shall put away her husband, and be married to another, she committeth adultery.

2. Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife “for every cause?” as St Matthew adds (Matt. xix. 3). On this point the rival schools of Hillel and Shammai were divided, the former adopting the more lax, the latter the stricter view: the one holding that any dislike, which he felt towards her, would justify a man in putting away his wife; the other, that only notorious unchastity could be a sufficient reason. It has also been suggested that the object of the question may have been to involve Him with the adulterous tetrarch, in whose territory He was.

7. For this cause He thus shews that from the beginning God had designed that the marriage tie should be the closest and most indissoluble of all ties, and in the words added by St Matthew (xix. 9) rebukes the adultery of Herod Antipas, though without naming him, in the severest terms.

9. What therefore God In Gen. ii. 24 these are the words of Adam; in St Matthew xix. 4 the words of God; in St Mark the words of Christ. They are words of Adam as uttering prophetically a Divine, fundamental, ordinance; they are words of God as being eternally valid; they are words of Christ, as rules for Christian life re-established by Him, Who “adorned and beautified” the holy estate of matrimony with His presence and first miracle at Cana of Galilee.

10. in the house St Mark records several confidential household words of our Lord to His disciples, e.g. concerning (a) the power of casting out demons (ix. 28, 29); (b) the great in the kingdom of heaven (ix. 33-37); and (c) here, the Christian law of marriage.
13—16. Suffer little Children to come unto Me.

And they brought young children to him, that he should touch them: and his disciples rebuked those that brought them. But when Jesus saw it, he was much displeased, and said unto them, Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God. Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein. And he took them up in his arms, put his hands upon them, and blessed them.

17—31. The Rich Young Ruler.

And when he was gone forth into the way, there came

13—16. Suffer little Children to come unto Me.

13. they brought] These probably were certain parents, who honoured Him and valued His benediction. The "children" in St Mark and St Matthew are "infants" in St Luke xviii. 15.

that he should touch them] or, as St Matthew adds, that he should lay his hands upon them and pray for them (xix. 13). Hebrew mothers were accustomed in this manner to seek a blessing for their children from the presidents of the synagogues, who were wont to lay their hands upon them. "After the father of the child," says the Talmud, "had laid his hands on his child's head, he led him to the elders one by one, and they also blessed him, and prayed that he might grow up famous in the Law, faithful in marriage, and abundant in good works."

14. he was much displeased] This feature is peculiar to St Mark. Only lately the Lord had expressed His love towards little children in a very remarkable manner (Mark ix. 36, 37).

of such] Rather, to such belongs the kingdom of God. He says not of these, but of such: shewing that it is not children only, but the disposition of children which obtains the kingdom, and that to such as have the like innocence and simplicity the reward is promised.

16. took them up in his arms] He ever giveth more than men ask or think. He had been asked only to touch the children. He takes them into His arms, lays His Hands upon them, and blesses them. Twice we read of our Lord taking into His arms, and both times they were children whom He embraced, and both times the scenes are recorded only by St Mark (ix. 36, x. 16).

blessed them] Rather, He blesses them, according to some MSS. The present tense is in keeping with the graphic style of the Evangelist.

17—31. The Rich Young Ruler.

17. when he was gone forth] Literally, when He was going forth. He was just starting, it would seem, on His last journey towards Bethany.
one running, and kneeled to him, and asked him, Good Master, what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life? And Jesus said unto him, Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is, God. Thou knowest the commandments, Do not commit adultery, Do not kill, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, Defraud not, Honour thy father and mother. And he answered and said unto him, Master, all these have I observed from my youth. Then Jesus beholding him loved him, and said unto him, One running] Running up to Him, apparently from behind, eager and breathless. Then he knelt before Him, as was usual before a venerated Rabbi.

what shall I do] He had probably observed our Lord’s gracious reception of little children, and he desired to have part in the Kingdom promised to them. But his question betrays his fundamental error. Not by doing, but by being, was an entrance into it to be obtained.

18. Why callest thou me good?] The emphasis is on the “why.” “Dost thou know what thou meanest, when thou givest Me this appellation?” If we combine the question and rejoinder as given by St Matthew and St Luke it would seem to have run, Why askest thou Me about the good? and why callest thou Me good? None is good save One, God. Our Lord does not decline the appellation “good.” He repels it only in the superficial sense of the questioner, who regarded Him merely as a “good Rabbi.”

19. Thou knowest the commandments] The young man is referred to the Commandments of the Second Table only, and they are cited generally from Ex. xx. 12—17. A striking instance of the free mode of quotation from the Old Testament even in such a case as the Ten Commandments.

Defraud not] The word thus rendered occurs in 1 Cor. vi. 7, 8, vii. 5; 1 Tim. vi. 5; James v. 4. It means deprive none of what is theirs, and has been thought to sum up the four Commandments which precede.

Honour thy father and mother] Rendered by Wyclif “worshippe þi fadir and modir,” which illustrates the meaning of the word as used in the Marriage Service, “with my body I thee worship” = honour. St Mark places this commandment at the end.

20. all these have I observed] adding, according to St Matthew, what lack I yet? We are told that when the Angel of Death came to fetch the R. Chanina, he said, “Go and fetch me the Book of the Law, and see whether there is anything in it which I have not kept.” Farrar’s Life of Christ, ii. 161, n.

21. beholding him] The same word, which occurs also in v. 27, in the original is applied (a) to the Baptist, when he “looked upon Jesus,” and said, “Behold the Lamb of God” (John i. 36), (b) to our Lord’s thing thou lackest: go thy way, sell whatsoever thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come, take up the cross, and follow me. And he was sad at that saying, and went away grieved: for he had great possessions. And Jesus looked round about, and saith unto his disciples, How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God! And the disciples were astonished at his words. But Jesus answereth again, and saith unto them, Children, how hard is it for them that trust in riches to enter into the kingdom of God! It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God.

Look at St Peter (i) when He named him Cephas (John i. 42), and (ii) when He turned and looked upon him just before the cock crew for the second time (Luke xxii. 61).

Loved him] Literally, esteemed him, or was pleased with him, for His Eye penetrated his inmost being, and saw within him an honest striving after better things, and the noblest form of life. Lightfoot remarks that the Jewish Rabbis were wont to kiss the head of such pupils as answered well. Some gesture at least we may believe that our Lord used to shew that the young man pleased Him, both by his question and by his answer.

One thing thou lackest] He thus proposed to him one short crucial test of his real condition, and way to clearer self-knowledge. He had fancied himself willing to do whatever could be required: he could now see if he were really so.

take up the cross, and follow me] See ch. viii. 34. But some MSS. omit the words. “Poor, friendless, outlawed, Jesus abated no jot of His awful claims, loftier than human monarch had ever dreamed of making, on all who sought citizenship in His Kingdom.”

22. he was sad] “Sorrowful,” says St Matthew (xix. 22); “very sorrowful,” says St Luke (xviii. 23); “sad,” says St Mark, or rather lowring, with a cloud upon his brow. The original word only occurs in one other place, Matt. xvi. 3, “for the sky is red and lowring.”

he had great possessions] and these he preferred to possessions in heaven, and made, as Dante calls it, “the great refusal!” “Yet within a few months,” to quote the words of Keble, “hundreds in Jerusalem remembered and obeyed this saying of our Lord, and brought their goods, and laid them at the Apostles’ feet” (Acts iv. 34—37).

24. Children] By this affectionate title He softens the sadness and sternness of His words.

for them that trust in riches] Some important MSS. omit these words, and then the verse would run, “Children, how hard it is to enter into the kingdom of God.”

25. It is easier for a camel] This figure has been variously interpreted. (a) Some have rendered it an “anchor-rope,” as though the word was through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God. And they were astonished out of measure, saying among themselves, Who then can be saved? And Jesus looking upon them saith, With men it is impossible, but not with God: for with God all things are possible. Then Peter began to say unto him, Lo, we have left all, and have followed thee. And Jesus answered and said, Verily I say unto you, There is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake, and the gospel’s, but he shall receive an hundredfold now in this time, houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions; and in the world to come eternal life. But many that are first shall be last; and the last first.

32—34. Predictions of the Passion.

And they were in the way going up to Jerusalem; and Jesus went before them; and they were amazed; and as

"kamilon" and not "kamelon;" (b) others think it refers to the side gate for foot passengers, close by the principal gate, called in the East the "eye of a needle;" but (c) it is best to understand the words literally. Similar proverbs are common in the Talmud.

28. and have followed thee] adding, as St Matthew relates, "what shall we have therefore?" In reply to which our Lord uttered glorious words respecting the Twelve Thrones to be occupied by the Apostles "in the Regeneration," or "restoration of all things" (Matt. xix. 28).

30. with persecutums] An important limitation. See 2 Cor. xii. 10; 2 Thess. i. 4; 2 Tim. iii. 11.

31. many that are first] Very signally was the former part of this verse fulfilled temporarily in the case of St Peter himself, finally in that of Judas; while the latter part was wonderfully realised in the instance of St Paul, so that this passage is chosen for the Gospel of the Festival of "the Conversion of St Paul." It was now that, to impress upon His hearers the important lesson that entrance into the kingdom of heaven is not a matter of mercenary calculation, our Lord delivered the memorable Parable of the Labourers in the Vineyard (Matt. xx. 1—16).

32—34. Predictions of the Passion.

32. they were in the way] Our Lord would seem to have now descended from Ephraim to the high road in order to join the caravans of Galilæan pilgrims going up to Jerusalem. St Mark gives a special prominence to this critical period in His human history: He describes (a) the prophetic elevation and solemnity of soul which He displayed; (b) His advancing before them as the destined Sufferer, (c) the awe of the disciples as they followed Him.

and Jesus went before them] "After the manner of some leader who they followed, they were afraid. And he took again the twelve, and began to tell them what things should happen unto him, saying, Behold, we go up to Jerusalem; and the Son of man shall be delivered unto the chief priests, and unto the scribes; and they shall condemn him to death, and shall deliver him to the Gentiles; and they shall mock him, and shall scourge him, and shall spit upon him, and shall kill him: and the third day he shall rise again.

35—45. The Ambitious Apostles.

And James and John, the sons of Zebedee, come unto him, saying, Master, we would that thou shouldest do for us whatsoever we shall desire. And he said unto them, What would ye that I should do for you? They said unto him, Grant unto us that we may sit, one on thy right hand, and heartens his soldiers by choosing the place of danger for himself.” Trench, Studies, p. 216.

34. and shall kill him] Or, as St Matthew adds, “crucify Him.” Now for the first time is revealed this last, this greatest horror (see Matt. xx. 19). St Luke lays stress upon the fact that the disciples would not and could not understand His words (Luke xviii. 34). This absence of all sympathy was one of His greatest trials.

35—45. The Ambitious Apostles.

35. James and John] and with them their mother Salome, to ask the same favour on their behalf. She was one of the constant attendants of our Lord, and now falling on her knees preferred her request (Matt. xx. 20). Nothing could have been more ill-timed than this selfish petition when He was going forth to His death.

37. that we may sit] The mention of Thrones (Matt. xix. 18), as in the other on thy left hand, in thy glory. But Jesus said unto them, Ye know not what ye ask: can ye drink of the cup that I drink of? and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with? And they said unto him, We can. And Jesus said unto them, Ye shall indeed drink of the cup that I drink of; and with the baptism that I am baptized withal shall ye be baptized: but to sit on my right hand and on my left hand is not mine to give; but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared. And when the ten heard it, they began to be much displeased with James and John. But Jesus called them to him, and saith unto them, Ye know that they which are accounted to rule over the Gentiles.

reversion for the Twelve at the coming of their Master in glory, may have suggested the idea to the aspiring Three. This session on the right hand and on the left was a Jewish form of expression for being next to the king in honour.

39. And they said unto him, We can] They knew not at the time what they said, and their words were recorded in heaven. They had yet to learn how serious their words were, and afterwards they were enabled to drink of that Cup, and to be baptized with that Baptism. To St James was given strength to be steadfast unto death, and be the first martyr of the Apostolic band (Acts xii. 2); to St John (a) to bear bereavement, first, of his brother, then of the other Apostles; (b) to bear a length of years in loneliness and exile in sea-girt Patmos (Rev. i. 9); and (c) then to die last of the Apostles, as St James first.

the cup] Comp. John xviii. 11, "The cup which my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?" and Mark xiv. ;6, "Take away this cup from me." Their thoughts were fastened on thrones and high places; His on a Cup of Suffering and a baptism of blood. For this use of the word "baptism" here, compare Luke xL 50, "I have a baptism to be baptized with."

40. but it shall be given] This is not a very happy interpolation. The verse really runs thus: But to sit on My right hand and on My left hand is not mine to give except to those for whom it is prepared. To "give" here denotes to give, as of mere favour; to lavish out of caprice, as in kingdoms of the world. "The throne," says one of old, "is the prize of toils, not a grace granted to ambition."

41. began to be much displeased] "hadden endigicioun," Wyclif. The sons of Zebedee had been in a better social position than most of their brethren, and this attempt to secure a pre-eminence of honour kindled a storm of jealousy.

42. which] Commonly used at the time our translation was made for the relative "who," and applied to persons, from the A.-S. hwic, Meso-Goth. hwelicis, literally, who-like. Comp. Laiyer's Sermons, p. 331, "Whosoever loveth God, will love his neighbour, which is made after the image of God." See Bible Word-Book, p. 528.
exercise lordship over them; and their great ones exercise authority upon them. But so shall it not be among you: but whosoever will be great among you, shall be your minister: and whosoever of you will be the chiefest, shall be servant of all. For even the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many.

exercise lordship] The word is used in an unfavourable sense. It is applied in Acts xix. 16 to the man possessed with an evil spirit prevailing against and overcoming the seven sons of Sceva. St Peter himself uses it in his first Epistle (v. 3), recalling possibly this very incident, where he warns the elders of the Church "not to be lords over God's heritage," or as it is in the margin, "to overrule." The preposition in the original is emphatic, and gives the force of oppressive, tyrannical rule, where the ruler uses his rights for the diminution of the ruled and the exaltation of himself. The same unfavourable sense attaches to the word rendered "exercise authority," which only occurs here and in the parallel in Matt. xx. 25.

45. and to give his life] We have here one of the early intimations of the mysterious purport of the Passion, that the Redeemer was about to give His life as a ransom for many (1 Tim. ii. 6). The word translated "ransom" only occurs here and in the parallel, Matt. xx. 28. Wyclif renders it "and sylue his soule, or lyf, redempcioun, or azen-biyng, for manye." The three great circles of images, which the Scriptures employ when they represent to us the purport of the death of Christ, are (a) a sin-offering, or propitiation (1 John ii. 2, iv. 10); (b) reconciliation (=at-one-ment) with an offended friend (Rom. v. 11, xi. 15; 2 Cor. v. 18, 19); (c), as here, redemption from slavery (Rom. iii. 24; Eph. i. 7; Col. i. 14).

46—52. Passing through Jericho.—Blind Bartimæus.

46. And they came] Leaving behind them the upland pastures of Pææ, the little company travelled along the road which led down to the sunken channel of the Jordan and the luxuriant "district" of Jericho.

to Jericho] This ancient stronghold of the Canaanites,—taken by Joshua (ii., vi.), founded for the second time under Hiel the Bethelite (1 Kings xvi. 34), visited by Elisha and Elijah before the latter "went up by a whirlwind into heaven" (1 Kings ii. 4—15)—was still in the days of Christ surrounded by tower and castles. Two of them lay in ruins since the time of Pompeius, but "Kypros, the last fortress built with his disciples and a great number of people, blind Bartimaeus, the son of Timaeus, sat by the highway side begging.
And when he heard that it was Jesus of Nazareth, he began to cry out, and say, Jesus, thou Son of David, have mercy on me. And many charged him that he should hold his peace:
but he cried the more a great deal, Thou Son of David, have mercy on me. And Jesus stood still, and commanded him by Herod the Great, who had called it after his mother, rose white in the sun on the south of the town. ... The great palace of Herod, in the far-famed groves of palms, had been plundered and burnt down in the tumults that followed his death, but in its place a still grander structure, built by Archelaus, had arisen amidst still finer gardens, and more copious and delightful streams. A grand theatre and spacious circus, built by Herod, scandalized the Jews, while a great stone aqueduct of eleven arches brought a copious supply of water to the city, and the Roman military road ran through it." Geikie's Life and Words of Christ, II. p. 385.

as he went] It is most probable that at the entrance of Jericho He met one of the sufferers, who having learnt from the crowd that He was passing, joined the other sufferer, whom the Saviour encountered as He was going out of the city on the following morning. (Comp. Luke xviii. 35; Matt. xx. 29, 30.)

a great number of pilgrims accompanied our Lord, who had come from Peræa and Galilee, and met at this central point to go up to the Passover, at Jerusalem.

Bartimaeus] The patronymic is made into a proper name after the analogy of Bartholomew and others. The true reading seems to be the son of Timæus, Bartimæus, a blind man. "This account of him hints that he was a personage well known to Christians in St Mark's time as a monument of the Lord's miracle, as was probably also Simon the Leper; and the designation 'son of Timæus' would dis­ inguish him, not merely from the father but also from other sons." Lange. As in the case of the Gadarene demoniacs, he was probably better known, and hence his case is more particularly recorded. "All the roads leading to Jerusalem, like the Temple itself, were much frequented at the time of the feasts, by beggars, who reaped a special harvest from the charity of the pilgrims."

47. Son of David] This was the popular designation of the Messiah.
He may have heard of the recent resurrection of Lazarus, which took place in his own neighbourhood.

48. charged him] "preteryden hym, þat he schulde be stille." Wyclif.
They rebuked him and his companion, deeming their clamours ill-mannered and unworthy of Him, who was passing onward to Jerusalem.

49. stood still] in the fulness of His compassionate heart.

commanded him to be called] Or, more graphically, according to some
to be called. And they call the blind man, saying unto him, Be of good comfort, rise; he calleth thee. And he, casting away his garment, rose, and came to Jesus. And Jesus answered and said unto him, What wilt thou that I should do unto thee? The blind man said unto him, Lord, that I might receive my sight. And Jesus said unto him, Go thy way; thy faith hath made thee whole. And immediately he received his sight, and followed Jesus in the way.

I—II. The Triumphal Entry.

And when they came nigh to Jerusalem, unto Beth-

50. casting away his garment] i.e. his abba, or upper garment, he rose, or, according to a better reading, leaped up. “Sturtinge cam to him,” Wyclif.

51. Lord] The original word is “Rabboni”=my Master. The blind man gives Him the title of greatest reverence that he knew. The title occurs only here and in John xx. 16, where it is used by Mary Magdalene to her risen Lord. The gradations of honour were Rab, Rabbi, Rabban, Rabboni.

52. and followed Jesus] or followed him along the road, glorifying God, as St Luke adds (xviii. 43), and joining the festal company of his Healer, who all likewise gave praise unto God for the miracle, which they had witnessed. Comp. Acts iii. 8—10. In the account of this Miracle the graphic power of St Mark is signally displayed. He describes (a) the great crowds that accompanied the Saviour, records (b) the full name of the blind man, (c) the words of the people to him, (d) how he cast away his garment, (e) started up, and (f) came to his Healer, (g) how he immediately recovered his sight, and (h) followed in the pilgrim train. After this signal proof of His miraculous power the Lord accepted the hospitality of Zacchæus, a superintendent of customs or tribute at Jericho (Luke xix. 1—10); uttered the Parable of “the Pounds” in order to correct the idea that the kingdom of heaven was about to appear immediately (Luke xix. 11—27); and at length, six days before the Passover, reached the safe seclusion of the mountain hamlet of Bethany (John xii. 1).

CH. XI. 1—11. THE TRIUMPHAL ENTRY.

1. And when] The order of events at this point needs explanation. (1) The Saviour apparently reached Bethany on the evening of Friday, Nisan 8. There (2) in quiet retirement He spent His last earthly Sabbath; and (3) in the evening, sat down to a festal meal provided by the sisters of Lazarus at the house of one Simon, who had been a leper (Matt. xxvi. 6; John xii. 1). (4) At this feast He was anointed by Mary (John xii. 3); and (5) during the night a council of the Jews was convened to consider the propriety of putting not Him only but Lazarus also to death (John xii. 10).

they came] Rather, when they draw near. The Evangelist, passphage and Bethany, at the mount of Olives, he sendeth forth
• two of his disciples, and saith unto them, Go your way into the village over against you: and as soon as ye be entered into it, ye shall find a colt tied, whereon never man sat;
• loose him, and bring him. And if any man say unto you,
Why do ye this? say ye that the Lord hath need of him;
and straightway he will send him hither. And they went their way, and found the colt tied by the door without in a how he writes in the present tense.

unto Bethphage] On the first day of the Holy Week the Saviour left Bethany and proceeded towards Bethphage = the house of unripe figs, a little hamlet on the road between Jericho and Jerusalem. As in a journey towards Jerusalem it is always mentioned before Bethany, it seems to have been to the east of that village.

two of his disciples] The minuteness of the description that follows suggests that St Peter may have been one of these. If so, he was not improbably accompanied by St John.

2. into the village over against you] Either Bethphage or an adjoining hamlet.

a colt tied] “In the East the ass is in high esteem. Statelier, livelier, swifter than with us, it vies with the horse in favour. Among the Jews it was equally valued as a beast of burden, for work in the field or at the mill, and for riding. In contrast to the horse, which had been introduced by Solomon from Egypt, and was used especially for war, it was the symbol of peace. To the Jew it was peculiarly national, for had not Moses led his wife, seated on an ass, to Egypt; had not the Judges ridden on white asses; and was not the ass of Abraham, the friend of God, noted in Scripture? Every Jew, moreover, expected, from the words of one of the prophets (Zech. ix. 9), that the Messiah would enter Jerusalem riding on an ass. No act could be more perfectly in keeping with the conception of a king of Israel, and no word could express more plainly that the king proclaimed Himself the Messiah.”
Geikie, II. p. 395.

whereon never man sat] This agrees with St Matthew’s account of the she-ass (Matt. xxi. 2) and her colt with her. The colt would not have been used, so long as it was running with the mother. Unused animals were put to sacred purposes. See Num. xix. 2; Deut. xxi. 3; 1 Sam. vi. 7.

3. the Lord hath need of him] The words suggest that the man may have been a secret disciple. “Secret disciples, such as the five hundred who afterwards gathered to one spot in Galilee, and the hundred and twenty who met after the resurrection (1 Cor. xv. 6; Acts i. 15), were scattered in many places.”
place where two ways met; and they loose him. And certain of them that stood there said unto them, What do ye, 5 loosing the colt? And they said unto them even as Jesus 6 had commanded: and they let them go. And they brought 7 the colt to Jesus, and cast their garments on him; and he sat upon him. And many spread their garments in the way: 8 and others cut down branches off the trees, and strawed them

4. in a place where two ways met] So Wyclif, "in the meeting of tweye weyes," following the Vulgate bivium. The word in the original thus rendered denotes (1) any road that leads round a place, a street, or a crooked lane; (2) a block of houses surrounded by streets; (3) the quarter of a town=Lat. vicus. Here it means the passage round the house. They went and found the ass tied at the door, and the colt with her, not in the highway, but in a back way or alley, which went round the house. Observe the minuteness of the circumstances specified. The Apostles would find the colt tied; it had never been ridden; and it would be found not in the courtyard, but outside, at the door of the house; not in the highway, but in a back lane or alley skirting the house; and persons would be near it; and the words which they would speak are predicted, and the answer is suggested which the Apostles were to make. The colt, untamed, and tied at the back gate, as if ready for a rider, has been interpreted as a symbol of the Gentile world to be brought to Christ from the lanes and alleys of Heathendom (Luke xiv. 21); the she-ass as symbolizing God's ancient people who were familiar with the yoke of the Law.

7. and cast their garments on him] over both indeed (Matt. xxi. 7), to do Him regal honour, just as the captains "took every man his garment, and put it under Jehu on the top of the stairs, and blew with trumpets, saying, Jehu is king" (2 Kings ix. 13).
he sat upon] the unused colt, while probably some of the Apostles led it by the bridle.

8. spread their garments in the way] i.e. their "abbas" or "hykes," the loose blanket or cloak worn over the tunic or shirt. So myrtletwigs and robes had been strewn by their ancestors before Mordecai, when he came forth from the palace of Ahasuerus (Targ. Esther viii. 15), so the Persian army had honoured Xerxes when about to cross the Hellespont (11erol. vii. 54), and so Robinson tells us the inhabitants of Bethlehem threw their garments under the feet of the horses of the English consul at Damascus, whose aid they were imploring (Biblical Researches, ii. 162).
branches] "sopeli obere men kittiden bowis, or branches, fro trees," Wyclif. These were not the "branches" (kladoi) cut from the trees as they went along, mentioned in Matt. xxi. 8, but "mattings" (stoibades) which they twisted out of the palm-branches as they passed.
The original word denotes (1) a bed of straw, rushes, or leaves, whether strawed loose or stuffed into a mattress; (2) a mattress, especially of soldiers; (3) the nest or lair of mice or fish.
in the way. And they that went before, and they that followed, cried, saying, Hosanna; Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord: blessed be the kingdom of our father David, that cometh in the name of the Lord: Hosanna in the highest. And Jesus entered into Jerusalem, and into the temple: and when he had looked round about upon all things, and now the eventide was come, he went out unto Bethany with the twelve.

off the trees] The reading of some MSS. here is from the gardens, and the verse would run, And many strewed their garments in the way, and others twisted branches, cutting them from the gardens. Eastern gardens are not flower gardens, nor private gardens, but the orchards, vineyards and fig-enclosures round a town.
The road from Bethany to Jerusalem wound through rich plantations of palm trees, and fruit- and olive-gardens.

9. they that went before] From St John xii. 12 we gather that a second stream of people issuing from the Holy City came forth to meet the Saviour, and these joining the others coming from Bethany, turned round and swelled the long procession towards Jerusalem. See Stanley’s Sinai and Palestine, p. 191.

10. blessed be the kingdom] The feelings of the multitudes found expression in the prophetic language of the Psalms, and they heralded the coming of the “Son of David” to establish His Messianic kingdom.
See Ps. cxviii. 26.

11. And Jesus entered] At a particular turn in the road the whole of the magnificent city, as if rising from an abyss, burst into view. Then it was that the procession paused, and our Lord wept over the devoted capital (Luke xix. 41—44), and afterwards resumed His route towards Jerusalem, crossing the bridge over the Kedron, and passing through the gate now St Stephen’s into Bezetha, the new town, through narrow streets, “hung with flags and banners for the feast, and crowded on the raised sides, and on every roof, and at every window, with eager faces.”

the temple] Jerusalem was stirred to its very centre (Matt. xxi. 10).
Who is this? inquired many, and were told by His exultant northern followers and disciples that it was “the prophet of Nazareth of Galilee.”
They doubtless expected that He would, as He passed on towards the Temple, display some unmistakable “sign,” and claim the sceptre, and ascend the throne. But they were doomed to disappointment.

when he had looked round about upon all things] “The actual procession would not proceed farther than the foot of Mount Moriah, beyond which they might not advance in travelling array, or with dusty feet.”
Before they reached the Shushan gate they dispersed, and Jesus entered the courts of the Temple, surveyed the scene of disorder and desecration which they presented, with prolonged and calm and searching glance, and when

And on the morrow, when they were come from Bethany, he was hungry; and seeing a fig tree afar off having leaves, he came, if haply he might find any thing thereon: and when he came to it, he found nothing but leaves; for the time of figs was not yet. And Jesus answered and said unto it, No man eat fruit of thee hereafter for ever. And his disciples heard it. And they come to Jerusalem: and Jesus went into the temple, and began to cast out them that sold and bought Twelve to the seclusion of Bethany, and the great Palm Sunday was over.

12. he was hungry] Probably, after a night of fasting; "shewing His Humanity, as usual, when about to give a proof of His Deity, that we may believe Him to be both God and Man." Bp Wordsworth.

13. seeing a fig tree] The very name Bethany means "the place for dates," while Bethphage is "the place for the green or winter fig," a variety which remains on the trees through the winter, having ripened only after the leaves had fallen.

having leaves] It stood alone, a single fig-tree, by the wayside (Matt. xxii. 19), and presented an unusual show of leaves for the season.

if haply] Rather, if therefore, if, as was reasonable to expect under such circumstances, fruit was to be found.

for the time of figs was not yet] that is, the ordinary fig-season had not yet arrived. The rich verdure of this tree seemed to shew that it was fruitful, and there was "every probability of finding upon it either the late violet-coloured autumn figs, which often hung upon the trees all through the winter, and even until the new spring leaves had come, or the first-ripe figs (Isai. xxviii. 4; Jer. xxiv. 2; Hos. ix. 10; Nah. iii. 12), of which Orientals are particularly fond." Farrar, Life, p. 213. But this tree had nothing but leaves. It was the very type of a fair profession without performance; a very parable of the nation, which, with all its professions, brought forth no "fruit to perfection." Comp. Luke xix. 41.

14. answered and said unto it] "arbori fructum neganti." Bengel.

No man eat fruit] "And presently," i.e. immediately, writes St Matthew (xxi. 19), "the fig tree withered away," though the disciples did not notice it till the following morning. Thus our blessed Lord exhibited at once a Parable and a Prophecy in action.

15. and Jesus went into the temple] The best MSS. omit the word Jesus here. The nefarious scene, which He had sternly rebuked on the occasion of His first Passover, and which is recorded only by St John (ii. 13—17), was still being enacted.

them that sold and bought] For the convenience of Jews and proselytes residing at a distance from the Holy City, a kind of market had been established in the outer court, and here sacrificial victims, incense, oil, in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the moneychangers, and the seats of them that sold doves; and would not suffer that any man should carry any vessel through the temple.

And he taught, saying unto them, Is it not written, My house shall be called of all nations the house of prayer? but ye have made it a den of thieves. And the scribes and chief priests heard it, and sought how they might destroy him: for they feared him, because all the people was astonished at his doctrine. And when even was come, he went out of the city.

wine, and other things necessary for the service and the sacrifices, were to be obtained.

The tables of the moneychangers] Money would be required (1) to purchase materials for offerings, (2) to present as free offerings to the Temple treasury (Mark xii. 41; Luke xxii. 1), (3) to pay the yearly Temple-tax of half a shekel due from every Jew, however poor. All this could not be received except in a native coin called the Temple Shekel, which was not generally current. Strangers therefore had to change their Roman, Greek, or Eastern money, at the stalls of the moneychangers, to obtain the coin required. This trade gave ready means for fraud, which was only too common.

that sold doves] Required for poor women coming for purification (Lev. xii. 6, 8; Luke ii. 24) from all parts of the country, and for other offerings. The sale of doves appears to have been in a great measure in the hands of the priests themselves, and one of the high priests especially is said to have gained great profits from his dovecots on Mount Olivet.

any vessel] i.e. a pail or basket. He would not allow laden porters and others to desecrate the honour due to His Father's house by crossing the Temple courts as though they were public streets, "quasi per plateam." Bengel. This particular is peculiar to St Mark.

of all nations] Rather, for all nations. See margin. The words are cited from Isaiah lvi. 7.

da den of thieves] Literally, a cave of robbers or bandits. See Jer. vii. 17. The distinction is to be borne in mind between "the robber," brigand or violent spoiler (Matt. xxi. 13, xxvi. 55; Luke xii. 58; John xviii. 40; 2 Cor. xi. 26), and the "thief" or secret pur­biner (Matt. vi. 19; John xii. 6; 1 Thess. v. 2; Rev. iii. 3, xvi. 15). Trench's Synonyms, § 44. What our Lord alludes to is one of "those foul caves which He had so often seen, where brigands wrangled over their ill-gotten gains." Farrar, Life, ii. 205.

 chief priests] This title was applied to (i) the high-priest properly so called; (ii) to all who had held the high-priesthood (the office under Roman sway no longer lasting for life, and becoming little more than annual); (iii) the heads of the twenty-four courses (1 Chron. xxiv., Luke i. 9).

20—26. The Withered Fig-Tree.

And in the morning, as they passed by, they saw the fig tree dried up from the roots. And Peter calling to remembrance saith unto him, Master, behold, the fig tree which thou cursedst is withered away. And Jesus answering saith unto them, Have faith in God. For verily I say unto you, That whosoever shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; and shall not doubt in his heart, but shall believe that those things which he hear Him (Luke xix. 48), and while He was thus high in favour, no one knew how far they might not be disposed to rise on His behalf, if an open effort was made to seize Him. Caution was therefore essential.

19. he went out] or rather, they went out, of the city, crossed the ridges of Olivet, and sought once more the retirement of Bethany.

20—26. The Withered Fig-Tree.

20. And in the morning] The early morning of Tuesday in Holy Week.

dried up from the roots] From St Matthew (xxi. 19) it would appear that “some beginnings of the threatened withering began to shew themselves, almost as soon as the word of the Lord was spoken; a shuddering fear may have run through all the leaves of the tree, which was thus stricken at its heart.” Trench.

21. And Peter] who doubtless related the incident with all its attendant circumstances to St Mark.

22. Have faith in God] as the personal source of miraculous power. (Comp. Matt. xvii. 20; Luke xvii. 6.)

23. verily I say unto you] With great solemnity He seeks to impress upon them a truth which would be of the greatest import to them, when they went forth, as His Apostles, to establish and spread His kingdom—that an unfaltering faith in God would overcome all difficulties, even the most insuperable to the eye of sense.

shall say unto this mountain] Language like this was familiar in the schools of the Jews. They used to set out those teachers among them, that were more eminent for the profundity of their learning, or the splendour of their virtues, by such expressions as these, “He is a rooter up or remover of mountains.” “They called Rabbah Bar Nachmani, A rooter up of mountains, because he had a piercing judgment.” Lightfoot, Hor. Heb.

shall not doubt in his heart] The word here translated “doubt” (a) in the active voice means to discriminate, distinguish, discern, as Matt. xvi. 3, “ye can discern the face of the heaven;” Acts xv. 9, “He put no difference between us and them;” 1 Cor. xi. 29, “not saith shall come to pass; he shall have whatsoever he saith.

Therefore I say unto you, What things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them. And when ye stand praying, forgive, if ye have ought against any: that your Father also which is in heaven may forgive you your trespasses. But if ye do not forgive, neither will your Father which is in heaven forgive your trespasses.

And they come again to Jerusalem: and as he was walking in the temple, there come to him the chief priests, and the scribes, and the elders, and say unto him, By what discerning the Lord's Body.” (b) In the passive and middle voice, it means (i) to get a decision, to go to law, to dispute, as Acts xi. 2, “they of the circumcision contended with him;” Jas. ii. 4, “are ye not partial (become litigants or partisans) in yourselves?” (ii) to dispute with oneself, to doubt, waver, as Acts x. 20, “go with them, doubting nothing;” Rom. iv. 20, “he staggered not at (i.e. with regard to) the promise through unbelief;” Jas. i. 6, “but let him ask in faith, nothing wavering; for he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea.”

24. What things soever ye desire, when ye pray] Because Prayer is the very language of Faith, He passes on to speak concerning Prayer.

25. when ye stand praying] The posture of prayer among the Jews seems to have been most often standing; comp. the instance of Hannah (1 Sam. i. 26), and of the Pharisee (Luke xviii. 11). When the prayer was offered with especial solemnity and humiliation, this was naturally expressed by (a) kneeling; comp. the instance of Solomon (1 Kings viii. 54), and Daniel (vi. 10); or (b) prostration, as Joshua (vii. 6), and Elijah (1 Kings xviii. 42).

26. your trespasses] The original word thus translated denotes (1) a falling beside, a falling from the right way. It is rendered in our Version (1) fault in Gal. vi. 1; Jas. v. 16; (2) offence in Rom. iv. 25, v. 15, 17, 18, 20; (3) fall in Rom. xi. 11, 12; (4) trespass, here, and in Matt. vi. 14, 15; 2 Cor. v. 19; Eph. ii. 1; Col. ii. 13; (5) sins in Eph. ii. 5; Col. ii. 13.

27. as he was walking] This is in keeping with St Mark's vivid style of delineation.
authority doest thou these things? and who gave thee this authority to do these things? And Jesus answered and said 29 unto them, I will also ask of you one question, and answer me, and I will tell you by what authority I do these things. The baptism of John, was it from heaven, or of men? an-30 swer me. And they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we 31 shall say, From heaven; he will say, Why then did ye not believe him? But if we shall say, Of men; they feared the 32 people: for all men counted John, that he was a prophet indeed. And they answered and said unto Jesus, We cannot 33 tell. And Jesus answering saith unto them, Neither do I tell you by what authority I do these things.

elders] “eldere men,” Wyclif. The ancient senators or representatives of the people. With the chief priests and scribes they constituted on this occasion a formal deputation from the Sanhedrim. We find the earliest notice of the elders acting in concert as a political body in the time of the Exodus (Ex. xix. 7; Deut. xxxi. 9). Their authority, which extended to all matters of the common weal, they exercised under (a) the Judges (Judg. ii. 7; 1 Sam. iv. 3); under (b) the Kings (1 Sam. xxx. 26; 1 Chron. xxi. 16; 2 Sam. xvii. 4); during (c) the Captivity (Jer. xxix. 1; Ezek. viii. 1); after (d) the Return (Ezra v. 5, vi. 7, 14, x. 8, 14); under (e) the Maccabees (1 Macc. xii. 6; 2 Macc. i. 10); in (f) the time of our Lord, when they denoted a distinct body in the Sanhedrim, amongst whom they obtained their seat by election, or nomination from the executive authority.

28. By what authority doest thou these things? They evidently wished to bring Him to account for His act of the day before, and for His assumption to teach as a Rabbi, without any license from the Schools, which was contrary to the established rule. The same question had been put to Him three years before and by the same persons (John ii. 18).

29. And Jesus answered] They doubtless hoped that He would have claimed Divine authority, and then they would have had matter for accusation against Him, but He answered their question by another.

30. The baptism of John] John was the most recent upholder of the validity of the prophetic order in Israel, and he had distinctly testified to the Messianic authority of our Lord (John i. 29—34, 36); from whom did he receive his commission to baptize? Was it from heaven, or a mere human assumption of his own?

32. if we shall say, Of men] Observe the impressive abruptness here, which is more significant than the full expression of St Matthew (xxxi. 26) and St Luke (xx. 6). They dared not face the alternative, and were driven to a feeble evasion.

33. Neither do I tell you] The counter-question of Jesus was the consequence of the question of these men. “Him that inquires,” saith 12 And he began to speak unto them by parables. A certain man planted a vineyard, and set an hedge about it, and dug a place for the winefat, and built a tower, and let one of old, "we are bound to instruct; but him that tempts, we may defeat with a stroke of reasoning."

CH. XII. 1—12. PARABLE OF THE WICKED HUSBANDMEN.

1. by parables] Another Parable spoken at this time was that of "the Two Sons" (Matt. xxii. 18–32), and "the Marriage of the King's Son" (Matt. xxii. 1—14). St Mark relates only the second of these three Parables.

A certain man planted a vineyard] Our Lord seems to take up the words of the prophet Isaiah (v. 1–7) and to build His teaching the more willingly on the old foundations, as He was accused of destroying the Law. Comp. Deut. xxxii. 32; Ps. lxxx. 8–16; Ezek. xv. 1–6; Hos. x. 1. By the Vineyard we are to understand the Kingdom of God, as successively realized in its idea (1) by the Jew, and (2) by the Gentile. Trench's Parables, p. 193.

planted] The householder not merely possessed, he "planted" the vineyard. So God planted His spiritual vineyard (a) under Moses (Deut. xxxii. 12–14; Ex. xv. 17), (b) under Joshua, when the Jews were established in the land of Canaan.

an hedge about it] Not a hedge of thorns, but a stone wall to keep out wild boars (Ps. lxxx. 13), jackals, and foxes (Num. xxii. 24; Cant. ii. 15; Neh. iv. 3). The word only occurs (a) here, (b) in the parallel Matt. xxii. 33, (c) in Luke xiv. 23, "go ye into the highways and hedges," and (d) Eph. ii. 14, "the middle wall of partition." "Enclosures of loose stone, like the walls of fields in Derbyshire or Westmoreland, everywhere catch the eye on the bare slopes of Hebron, of Bethlehem, and of Olivet." Stanley, Sinai and Palestine, p. 421.

a place for the winefat] "dalf a lake," Wyclif; "digg'd a pit to receave the lycoyr of the wynepresse," Geneva; "digg'd a trough," Rheinish Version. The original word only occurs here in the N. T., and= the Latin lacus. The winepress,=torcular (Matt. xxii. 33), consisted of two parts; (1) the press (gath) or trough above, in which the grapes were placed, and there trodden by the feet of several persons amidst singing and other expressions of joy (Judg. ix. 27; Isaiah xvi. 10; Jer. xxv. 30); (2) a smaller trough (yekeb), into which the expressed juice flowed through a hole or spout (Neh. xiii. 15; Isaiah lxiii. 2; Lam. i. 15). Here the smaller trough, which was often hollowed ("digg'd") out of the earth or native rock and then lined with masonry, is put for the whole apparatus, and is called a wine-fat. This word occurs also in Isaiah lxiii. 2; Hos. ix. 2, marg.; compare press-fat, Hag. ii. 16; and fat, Joel ii. 24, iii. 13. Fat from A. S. fet = a vessel, vat, according to the modern spelling. Comp. Shakespeare, Ant. and Cleop. II. 7. 120:—
it out to husbandmen, and went into a far country. And at the season he sent to the husbandmen a servant, that he might receive from the husbandmen of the fruit of the vineyard. And they caught him, and beat him, and sent him away empty. And again he sent unto them another servant;
and at him they cast stones, and wounded him in the head, “Come thou monarch of the vine,

Plumpie Bacchus, with pinke eyne:
In thy fayths our cares be drown’d.”

and built a tower] i.e. a “tower of the watchman,” rendered “cottage” in Isaiah i. 8, xxiv. 20. Here the watchers and vinedressers lived (Isaiah v. 2), and frequently, with slings, scared away wild animals and robbers. At the corner of each enclosure “rises its square grey towers, at first sight hardly distinguishable from the ruins of ancient churches or fortresses, which lie equally scattered over the hills of Judæa.”
Stanley, p. 421.

to husbandmen] By these the spiritual leaders and teachers of the Jewish nation (Mal. ii. 7; Ezek. xxxiv. 2) are intended. Their land, secluded and yet central, was hedged round on the east by the river Jordan, on the south by the desert of Idumea, on the west by the sea, on the north by Libanus and Anti-Libanus, while they themselves were separated by the Law, “the middle wall of partition” (Eph. ii. 14), from the Gentiles and idolatrous nations around.

went into a far country] “for a long while,” adds St Luke, or “many times.” “At Sinai, when the theocratic constitution was founded, and in the miracles which accompanied the deliverance from Egypt, the Lord may be said to have openly manifested Himself to Israel; but then to have withdrawn Himself again for awhile, not speaking to the people again face to face (Deut. xxxiv. 10—12), but waiting in patience to see what the Law would effect, and what manner of works the people, under the teaching of their spiritual guides, would bring forth.” Trench, Parables, p. 197.

2. at the season] i.e. when the fruit season drew near.
a servant] So Luke xx. 10; his servants, Matt. xxi. 34; the prophets and other eminent messengers of God raised up at particular periods for particular purposes. “Servi sunt ministri extraordinarii, majores; agricolae, ordinarii.” Bengel.
of the fruit] The householder’s share. The rent not being paid in money, but in a stipulated portion of the produce, according to the well-known metayer system once prevalent over great part of Europe. The prophets were sent to the people from time to time to require of them “the repentance and the inward longing after true inward righteousness, which the Law was unable to bring about.”

3. they caught him] The gradual growth of the outrage is clearly traced: (i) The first servant they “caught, beat, and sent away empty;”
(ii) at the second they “cast stones, and wounded him in the head, and sent him away shamefully handled;” (iii) the third “they killed.”

4. wounded him in the head] The original word, which generally
5 and sent him away shamefully handled. And again he sent another; and him they killed, and many others; beating some, and killing some. Having yet therefore one son, his well-beloved, he sent him also last unto them, saying, They will reverence my son. But those husbandmen said among themselves, This is the heir; come, let us kill him, and the inheritance shall be ours. And they took him, and killed him, and cast him out of the vineyard. What shall therefore the lord of the vineyard do? he will come and destroy the denotes to comprehend in one sum, or under one head, is nowhere else used in this sense. Some MSS. omit the words they cast stones, and instead of “sent him away shamefully handled,” read simply, “used him shamefully” (comp. 2 Sam. x. 4). Thus Jezebel “slew the prophets of the Lord” (1 Kings xviii. 13); Micaiah was thrown into a dungeon by Ahab (1 Kings xxii. 24—27); Elijah was threatened with death by Jezebel (1 Kings xix. 2); Elisha by Jehoram (2 Kings vi. 31); Zechariah was stoned at the commandment of Joash (2 Chron. xxiv. 21; comp. xxxvi. 16); Jeremiah was stoned by the exiles in Egypt; Isaiah, according to Jewish tradition, was sawn asunder (Heb. xi. 37, 38; 2 Chron. xxxvi. 15, 16).

6. Having yet therefore] Note here the description of this last of the ambassadors of the householder. Not only was he his son, but his only one, his well-beloved, “a sone most dereworj,” Wyclif. This marks as strongly as possible the difference of rank between Christ and the prophets, by whom “at sundry times and in divers manners God spake in times past unto the fathers” (Heb. i. 1), the distinction between them and the dignity of Him, Who only was in the highest sense His Son, and Whom He hath “appointed heir of all things” (Heb. i. 2, iii. 5, 6).

7. This is the heir] “he for whom the inheritance is meant, and to whom it will in due course rightfully arrive—not as in earthly relations, by the death, but by the free appointment, of the actual possessor.” Christ is “heir of all things,” not as He is the Son of God, but as He is the Son of Man.

come, let us kill him] Comp. Gen. xxxvii. 20; and especially John xi. 47—53, where “the servants” conspiring against “the Heir of all things” actually assign as their motive that “if they let Him alone,” they “will lose both their place and nation.”

8. and killed him, and cast him out of the vineyard] The order is reversed in the first and third Gospels, which remind us of Naboth, whom they “carried forth out of the city, and stoned him with stones that he died” (1 Kings xxii. 13), and of Him, Who suffered without the gate (Heb. xiii. 12, 13; John xix. 17). The second Evangelist represents them as first killing the son, and then flinging forth the body and denying it the ordinary rites of sepulture.

9. he will come] According to St Matthew, this was the answer of husbandmen, and will give the vineyard unto others. And 10 have ye not read this scripture; The stone which the builders rejected is become the head of the corner; this was the 11 Lord's doing, and it is marvellous in our eyes? And they 12 sought to lay hold on him, but feared the people: for they

the Pharisees themselves, either, before they were aware, pronouncing sentence against themselves, or pretending in the hardness of their hearts not to see the drift of the Parable. The answer was followed by "a deep God forbid" from several voices (Luke xx. 16).

10. And have ye] Rather, And did ye never read this Scripture? referring them to Psalm cxviii. 22, 23, a Psalm which the Jews applied to the Messiah, and which is actually twice applied to Him by St Peter, in Acts iv. 11; 1 Pet. ii. 7. St Luke (xx. 17) tells us that our Lord fastened His eyes upon His wondering hearers, while He directed their attention to this ancient prophecy respecting Himself in the very Psalm, whence had been taken the loud Hosannas of Palm Sunday (Mark xi. 9).

the head of the corner] The image of the vineyard is for a moment abandoned for that of a building. The "head of the corner" was a large and massive stone so formed as when placed at a corner to bind together the two outer walls of an edifice. Comp. for the application of the expression to Christ, Eph. ii. 20, and consult Isaiah xxviii. 16; Dan. ii. 44. The penalties of rejecting Him are more fully brought out in Matt. xxi. 43, 44; Luke xx. 18.

12. they sought] All three Evangelists take note of the exasperation of our Lord's hearers at words which they now clearly perceived were directed against themselves. The chief priests and Pharisees sought to arrest Him on the spot at once (Luke xx. 19), but they were afraid of the multitudes, who regarded Him if not with the same deep feelings as on Palm Sunday, yet still as a prophet (Matt. xxi. 46), so they left Him and went their way (Mark xii. 12). One more Parable followed, that of the "Marriage of the King's Son" (Matt. xxii. 1—14), and once more the rulers of the nation were solemnly warned of the danger they were incurring. "Thus within a few hours of crucifixion, and conscious of the fact; in the intervals of mortal contest with the whole forces of the past and present, the wandering Galilean Teacher, meek and lowly in spirit, so that the poorest and the youngest instinctively sought Him; full of Divine pity, so that the most sunken and hopeless penitent felt He was their friend; indifferent to the supports of influence, wealth, or numbers; alone and poor, the very embodiment of weakness, as regarded all visible help, still bore Himself with a serene dignity more than human. In the name of God He transfers the spiritual glory of Israel to His own followers; throws down the barriers of caste and nationality; extends the new dominion, of which He is Head, to all races, and through all ages, here and hereafter; predicts the Divine wrath on His enemies in this world, as the enemies of God, and announces the decision of the final judgment as turning on the attitude of men towards Himself and His message." Geikie's Life knew that he had spoken the parable against them: and they left him, and went their way.

13—17. The Question of the Tribute Money.

13. And they send unto him certain of the Pharisees and of the Herodians, to catch him in his words. And when they were come, they say unto him, Master, we know that thou art true, and carest for no man: for thou regardest not the person of men, but teachest the way of God in truth: Is it lawful to give tribute to Caesar, or not? Shall we give, or shall we not give? But he, knowing their hypocrisy, said unto them, Why tempt ye me? bring me a penny, that I

13—17. THE QUESTION OF THE TRIBUTE MONEY.

13. And they send] Having failed themselves, the Jewish authorities resolved to send some of the Pharisees in company with the Herodians, to try to force Him to commit Himself by the answers He might give to their treacherous questions. A series of distinct attacks was now made upon our Lord. (a) The Pharisees took the lead with theirs, which was, indeed, the most cunningly devised; (b) the Sadducees followed; and then (c) came the Scribes of the Pharisees' party.

the Herodians] See note on eh. iii. 6. As before, so now, the Jewish royalists united themselves with the ultra-orthodox Pharisaic party. The Herodians came in person. The Pharisees sent some of their younger scholars (Matt. xxii. 16) to approach Him with the pretended simplicity of a guileless spirit, and a desire to solve a perplexing question (Luke xx. 10).

14. Master, we know] This was said in a spirit of hypocritical flattery, as though they were ready to pay Him honour as the Messiah. We find Nicodemus saying the same thing in a spirit of sincerity (John iii. 2).

and carest for no man] This was a cunning temptation to lift Himself above all respect for the Roman authorities.

Is it lawful to give tribute...?] The snare was no longer laid in the sphere of ecclesiastical questions, but in the more dangerous area of political duty. The tribute-money alluded to was a capitation tax levied by the Roman government, and keenly resented by Judas the Gaulonite (Acts v. 37) and his followers. If our Lord held the payment unlawful, He would compromise Himself with the Romans; if He sanctioned it, He would embroil Himself with the national party.

15. knowing their hypocrisy] "verum se eis ostendit, ut dixerant." Bengel.

bring me] "They would not be likely to carry with them the hated Roman coinage with its heathen symbols, though they might have been at once able to produce from their girdles the Temple shekel.
may see it. And they brought it. And he saith unto them, 16 Whose is this image and superscription? And they said unto him, Cæsar's. And Jesus answering said unto them, 17 Render to Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's, and to God the things that are God's. And they marvelled at him.

18—27. The Question of the Sadducees respecting the Resurrection.

Then come unto him the Sadducees, which say there is 18

But they would only have to step outside the Court of the Gentiles, and obtain from the money-changers' tables a current Roman coin.” Farrar, Life, ii. p. 231.

a penny] Literally, a denarius, for the value of which see vi. 37.
18. Whose is this image] “The little silver coin, bearing on its surface the head encircled with a wreath of laurel, and bound round with the sacred fillet—the well-known features, the most beautiful and the most wicked, even in outward expression, of all the Roman Emperors, with the superscription running round, in the stately language of imperial Rome, Tiberius Cæsar, Divi Augusti filius Augustus, Imperator.” The image of the Emperor would be regarded by the stricter Jews as idolatrous, and to spare their feelings, the Romans had allowed a special coinage to be struck for Judæa, without any likeness upon it, and only the name of the Emperor, and such Jewish emblems as palms, lilies, grapes, and censers.

17. Render] Literally, Give back, pay as being due. “Therefore selde se to Cesar,” Wyclif. It was not a question of a voluntary gift, but of a legal due. The head of the Emperor on the coin, the legend round it, and its circulation in the country, were undeniable proofs of the right of the actually existing government to levy the tax. “Ubiunque numisma alicujus regis obtinet, illic incolae regem istum pro domino agnoscunt;” Maimonides. Remembrance of this precept “would have spared the Jewish war, the destruction of Jerusalem, and the downfall of their nation.” Lange.

and to God] He would remind them that besides the claims of the ruling powers, they had also the claim upon them of their Spiritual King, and obedience to Cæsar must ever be conditioned by obedience to God. “Render unto Cæsar all that he can lawfully demand, but render also to God, what He requires of you as His spiritual subjects.” “Give to God that which has the image and superscription of God, the soul.” Erasmus.

they marvelled at him] Neither the orthodox Pharisee nor the aristocratic royalist had expected such an answer from the Galilæan Teacher.

18—27. The Question of the Sadducees respecting the Resurrection.
18. the Sadducees] Hitherto the Sadducees, “few, rich, and 19 no resurrection; and they asked him, saying, Master, Moses wrote unto us, If a man's brother die, and leave his wife behind him, and leave no children, that his brother should take his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother. Now there were seven brethren: and the first took a wife, and dying left no seed. And the second took her, and died, neither left he any seed: and the third likewise. And the seven had her, and left no seed: last of all the woman died also. In the resurrection therefore, when they shall rise, whose wife shall she be of them? for the seven had her to wife. And Jesus answering said unto them, Do ye not therefore err, because ye know not the scriptures, neither the power of God? For when they shall rise from the dead, they neither marry, nor are given in marriage; but are as the angels which are in heaven. And as touching the dead, dignified," had stood aloof, and affected to ignore the disciples of the despised "Prophet of Nazareth."

19. Moses wrote] The Law concerning the Levirate marriage is found in Deuteronomy xxv. 5. It was ordained for the preservation of families, that if a man died without male issue, his brother should marry his widow, and that the firstborn son should be held in the registers to be the son of the dead brother.

20. there were seven brethren] It was probably a fictitious case, for the Jews were averse to the fulfilling of the enactment at all.

23. In the resurrection therefore] Their difficulty originated entirely in a carnal notion that the connections of this life must be continued in another.

24. because ye know not] Our Lord traces their error to ignorance (i) of the Scriptures, and (ii) of the power of God. He deals with the latter phase of ignorance first.

25. when they shall rise] Had they known the power of God they could not have imagined that it was limited by death, or that the life of "the children of the resurrection" was a mere repetition of man's present mortal existence. Compare the argument of St Paul in 1 Cor. xv. 39—44, based on the endless variety of the creative power of God.

as the angels] The Sadducees denied not only the Resurrection, but the existence also of angels and spirits (Acts xxiii. 8). In His reply, therefore, our Lord embraces the whole area of their unbelief. He refers to the angels in heaven as persons, whose personal existence was a fact. Moreover in these words we have one of the few revelations which He was pleased to make as to the state after death. They imply that, as St Paul teaches, at the Resurrection "we shall be changed" (1 Cor. xv. 44), and the "spiritual body" will not be liable to the passions of the "natural body." that they rise: have ye not read in the book of Moses, how in the bush God spake unto him, saying, I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob? He is not the God of the dead, but the God of the living: ye therefore do greatly err.

28-34. The Question of the Scribe.

And one of the scribes came, and having heard them reasoning together, and perceiving that he had answered them well, asked him, Which is the first commandment of

26. in the book of Moses] They had brought forward the name of Moses to perplex Him, He now appeals to the same great name in order to confute them. He does not reprove them for attaching a higher importance to the Pentateuch than to the Prophets, but for not tracing the Divine Mind on the important subject of the Resurrection even there.

in the bush] i.e. in the section of the Book of Exodus (iii. 6) called "the Bush." Similarly "the lament of David over Saul and Jonathan" in 2 Sam. i. 17—27 was called "the Bow;" and Ezekiel i. 15—28 "the Chariot." Compare also Rom. xi. 2; "in Elias"=the section concerning Elias. In the Koran the chapters are named after the matter they contain, and so also the Homeric poems. Wyclif alone of our English translators gives the right meaning, "Han je not rad in je book of Moyses on je bousche, how God seirle to him."

God spake unto him, saying] On that momentous occasion, which marked an epoch in the national history, God had revealed Himself to Moses as a personal God, by the august and touching title of "the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob," and therefore as bearing a personal relation to these patriarchs, upon whom He had set His seal of Circumcision, and so admitted them into covenant union with Himself. How unworthy would such a title be, if He, the Eternal and Unchangeable, had revealed Himself only as the God of men who had long since crumbled to dust and passed away into annihilation! How meaningless such a Name, if the souls of men at death perished with the body, "as the cloud faieth and passeth away"! Was it possible to believe He would have deigned to call Himself the God "of dust and ashes"?

27. He is not the God of the dead] Our Lord thus taught them that the words implied far more than that God was the God, in Whom Abraham and the patriarchs trusted and worshipped.

but the God of the living] Jehovah could not have called Himself the God of persons who do not exist, and over whom death had completely triumphed. The patriarchs, therefore, though their bodies were dead, must themselves have been still living in the separate state, and awaiting the resurrection.

28-34. The Question of the Scribe.

28. one of the scribes] From Matt. xxii. 34, 35, it appears that he was a Pharisee, and a Master of the Law.

Which is the first commandment of all?] This question, on which
And Jesus answered him, The first of all the commandments is, Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord; and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength: this is the first commandment. And the second is like, namely this, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these. And the scribe said unto him, Well, Master, thou hast said the truth: for there is one God; and there is none other but he: and to love him with all the heart, and with all the understanding, and with all the soul, and with all the strength, and to love his neighbour as himself, is more than all whole burnt offerings and sacrifices. And when Jesus the schools of Hillel and Shammai were disagreed, the Lawyer put, tempting our Lord (Matt. xxii. 35), hoping that He would commit Himself as an enemy of the Traditions. The Rabbinical schools taught that there were important distinctions between the Commandments, some being great and others small, some hard and weighty, others easy and of less importance. Great commands were the observance of the Sabbath, circumcision, minute rites of sacrifice and offering, the rules respecting fringes and phylacteries. Indeed, all the separate commandments of the ceremonial and moral Law had been carefully weighed and classified, and it had been concluded that there were "248 affirmative precepts, being as many as the members in the human body, and 365 negative precepts, being as many as the arteries and veins, or the days of the year; the total being 613, which was also the number of the letters in the Decalogue."

29. And Jesus answered him] Pointing, it may be, to the Scribe's tephillah, 1727, the little leather box containing in one of its four divisions the Shema (Deut. vi. 4), which every pious Israelite repeated twice a day.

The first of all the commandments] The Saviour quotes the introduction to the ten Commandments (Deut. vi. 4, 5) as the first command, not as forming one of the commandments, but as containing the principle of all.

31. the second is like, namely this] According to the best MSS. the reading is, the second is this. The Lord had named only one commandment as great to the rich young ruler (Luke x. 27). To the Scribe He names two, as forming together "the great and first commandment." Besides quoting Deut. vi. 4, 5, He refers him to Lev. xix. 18.

33. burnt offerings and sacrifices] The Scribe gathers up in his reply some of the great utterances of the Prophets, which prove the superiority of love to God and man over all mere ceremonial observances. See 1 Sam. xv. 22; Psalm li.; Hosea vi. 6; Micah vi. 6-8.
saw that he answered discreetly, he said unto him, Thou art not far from the kingdom of God. And no man after that durst ask him any question.

35—37. Our Lord's Counter-question.

And Jesus answered and said, while he taught in the temple, How say the scribes that Christ is the Son of David? For David himself said by the Holy Ghost, The Lord said to my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footstool. David therefore himself calleth him Lord; and whence is he then his son? And the common people heard him gladly.

34. discreetly] "wysely," Wyclif. The word only occurs here in the N. T., and denotes "with knowledge and understanding."

35. Thou art not far] The perception of Divine truth which his answer had shewed, revealed that he wanted but little to become a disciple of Christ. "Si non procul es, intra; alias præstiterit, procul fuisse."

36. no man... durst] No other attempt was henceforth made to entangle the Redeemer by replies to subtle questions; "all alike kept aloof from one, from Whom chief priests and Rabbis equally went away humbled." Some, however, would refer to this occasion the question respecting the woman taken in adultery (John viii. 1—11).

35—37. Our Lord's Counter-question.

35. And Jesus answered and said] He seemed to have turned to a number of the Pharisees (Matt. xxii. 41) who had collected together, to converse probably over the day's discomfiture. The great counter-question is brought forward by St Matthew in all its historic importance as the decisive concluding interrogation addressed to the Pharisees. St Mark points out by the words "Jesus answered" that the statement contained a reply to some question already put.

36. David himself said] The Pharisees are referred to the cxth Psalm, which the Rabbis regarded as distinctly Messianic. "The Lord (Jehovah) said unto my Lord (Adonai), Sit thou on My right hand till I make thy foes a footstool for thy feet." In this lofty and mysterious Psalm, David, speaking by the Holy Ghost, was carried out of and beyond himself, and saw in prophetic vision that his Son would also be his Lord. The Psalm is more frequently cited by the New Testament writers than any other single portion of the ancient Scriptures (Acts ii. 34, 35; i Cor. xv. 25; Heb. i. 13, v. 6, vii. 17, 21). "In later Jewish writings nearly every verse of it is quoted as referring to the Messiah." Perowne on the Psalms, ii. 291.

37. whence is he then his son?] Abraham had never called Isaac or Jacob or any of his descendants his lord. Why then had David done so? There could be but one answer: "Because that Son would be David's Son as regarded human birth, his Lord as regarded His Divine
38—40. Admonition to beware of the Scribes.

And he said unto them in his doctrine, Beware of the scribes, which love to go in long clothing, and love salutations in the marketplaces, and the chief seats in the synagogues, and the uppermost rooms at feasts: which devour widows' houses, and for a pretence make long prayers: these shall receive greater damnation.

Nature." This answer, however, the Pharisees declined to make, not through ignorance, but through unbelief in our Lord's Messianic claims.

the common people] Rather, the great multitude. "And moche cumpany gladli herde him." Wyclif. This fact is peculiar to St Mark, and implies that they listened to Him gladly, not merely in the general sense, but with special reference to His Divine dignity as the Messiah.

38—40. Admonition to beware of the Scribes.

38. And he said] The terrible denunciations of the moral and religious shortcomings of the leaders of the nation, which now fall from our Lord's lips, are given far more fully by St Matthew, xxiii. 1—39. It was only the Jewish Christians, for whom that Evangelist wrote, who could at once, and at that time, understand and enter into the terrible declension of Pharisaic Judaism. To the Gentile Christians of Rome, for whom St Mark wrote, "the great woe-speech" would be to a certain extent unintelligible. Hence the picture of the Scribes is here shortly given in their three principal features; (1) ambition, (2) avarice, and (3) hypocritical external piety.

in long clothing] "hat wolen wandre in stoolis," Wyclif. Stoolis from Latin stola—a robe. They came out to pray in long sweeping robes, wearing phylacteries of extra size, and exaggerated tassels, hung at the corners of their talliths. Many such were doubtless to be seen at Jerusalem at this very time, who had come up to celebrate the Feast of the Passover. See note on p. 64.

love salutations] The sounding title of "Rabbi," "Rabbi."

39. the chief seats] The seats of honour for the elders of the synagogue were placed in front of the ark containing the Law, in the uppermost part, where they sat with their faces to the people. In the synagogue at Alexandria there were seventy-one golden chairs, according to the number of the members of the Great Sanhedrim.

the uppermost rooms] Rather, the chief seats, "be first sitting places in soperis," Wyclif. The highest place on the divan, as amongst the Greeks. Amongst the Romans, when a party consisted of more than three persons, it was the custom to arrange three of the couches on which they reclined round a table, so that the whole formed three sides of a square, leaving the bottom of it open for the approach of the attendants. These couches were then respectively designated lectus medius, summus, and imus. The middle place in the triclinium was considered the most dignified. At a large feast there would be many such tricinia.

And Jesus sat over against the treasury, and beheld how the people cast money into the treasury: and many that were rich cast in much. And there came a certain poor widow, and she threw in two mites, which make a farthing.

40. devour widows' houses] as guardians and administrators of their property.

greater damnation] “be taken longe dom,” Wyclif. The word denotes “judgment,” “punishment.” The verb from which it comes denotes “to judge,” pass sentence, condemn. In 1 Cor. xi. 29, the words rendered damnation, discerning, judged, and condemnation, are all, in the original, parts or derivations of one and the same word; and so Wyclif admirably rendered them into the language of his day by words connected with one and the same English verb; “He that etith and drinkith unworthili, etith and drinkith doom to him, not wisely demyng the bodi of the Lord... and if we demyden wiseli us sif we schulden not be demyd, but while we be demyd of the lord we ben chastised, that we be not dampnyd with this world.” Compare also Chaucer, Monk's Tale, 150:1, “Dampnyd was he to deye in that prison.”

41—44. THE WIDOW'S MITE.

41. And Jesus sat] In perfect calm and quiet of spirit after all the fierce opposition of this “day of Questions.”

the treasury] This treasury, according to the Rabbis, consisted of thirteen brazen chests, called “trumpets,” because the mouths through which the money was cast into the chest were wide at the top and narrow below. They stood in the outer “Court of the Women.” “Nine chests were for the appointed temple-tribute, and for the sacrifice-tribute, that is, money-gifts instead of the sacrifices; four chests for freewill-offerings, for wood, incense, temple-decoration, and burnt-offerings.” Lightfoot, Hor. Heb.

42. a certain poor widow] One of the helpless class which He had just described as devoured by the extortion of the Scribes and Pharisees. In three words St Mark presents to us a picture of her desolation: she was alone, she was a widow, and she was poor.

two mites] “Sche sente tweye mynutis, ήt is, a fer>ing,” Wyclif. Mite is a contraction of minute, from Lat. minutum, though Fr. mite. Thus Becon says, “let us with the poor widow of the gospel at the least give two minutes, and God will surely approve and accept our good will.” The Lepton, here mentioned, was the very smallest copper coin. Two made one Roman quadrans, which was 4th of an as. The
And he called unto him his disciples, and saith unto them, Verily I say unto you, That this poor widow hath cast more in, than all they which have cast into the treasury: for all they did cast in of their abundance; but she of her want did cast in all that she had, even all her living.

And as he went out of the temple, one of his disciples saith as in Cicero’s time = nearly a halfpenny, and the quadrans = one-eighth of a penny. This poor widow gave two, though, as Bengel remarks, she might have kept back one. She gave her “all.” “If we have regard to the origin of the expression, it argues more of presumption than humility to call any gift, as many do, however liberal, unless it were our all, a ‘mite,’ while the frequent use of the term to excuse some shabby offering which costs the donor nothing, is a remarkable example of the serene unconscionableness with which persons will sometimes pass the most bitter sarcasms upon themselves.” Davies, Bible English, p. 251.

more in, than all they] It is not said that the gifts of the others were worthless. Many possessed, no doubt, no worth (Matt. vi. 1); others, a greater or a less. The greatest value, however, attached itself to her gift, because of the self-denial which it implied.
of their abundance] i.e. of their superfluity, “of pat ping pat was plenteous to hem.” Wyclif.
she of her want] “of hir myseste sente alle pingis pat she hadde, al hir lyfode,” Wyclif. Observe all the graphic touches in the account of the widow’s mite. (i) Our Lord was sitting over against the Treasury; (ii) He was watching the people casting in their contributions; (iii) He called to Him His disciples; and (iv) He points out to them the full meaning of her act of self-denial. After this incident in the “court of the women,” and apparently while the Saviour was still there, it came to pass, that two of the Apostles, Andrew and Philip, brought to Him the “inquiring Greeks,” who had desired to see Him (John xii. 20—22). No sooner did He behold these “inquirers from the West,” than He broke forth into words of mysterious joy (John xii. 24—26), and presentiments of His coming Passion (John xii. 27, 28); after which was heard the last of the Three Heavenly Voices, attesting the true dignity of His mission (John xii. 28). And so with the clear prevision that He was about to be “lifted up” upon His Cross, and, if “lifted up,” would “draw all men unto Him” (John xii. 32), He prepared to leave the Temple, which He was never to enter again. His public work was over. His last counsels, His final warnings, had been delivered.

And as he went] Leaving the Temple, He passed with His unto him, Master, see what manner of stones and what buildings are here! And Jesus answering said unto him, Seest thou these great buildings? there shall not be left one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down. And as he sat upon the mount of Olives over against the temple, Peter and James and John and Andrew asked him privately, Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign when all these things shall be fulfilled? And Jesus answering them began to say, Take heed lest any man deceive you: for Apostles down the eastern steps toward the valley of the Kidron. As they were passing on, one of his disciples invited His attention to the marvellous structure they were quitting, to the enormous size of its marble blocks, the grandeur of its buildings, and the gorgeous gifts with which, though still unfinished, it had been endowed (Luke xxi. 5). Josephus tells us that while some of the stones were forty-five feet, most were thirty-seven and a half feet long, twelve feet high, and eighteen broad, Jos. Bell. Jud. v. 6. 6; Ant. xv. ii. 3.

2. there shall not be left] Though now they seem fixed in their places for eternity. And even as He said, less than forty years afterwards, "Zion was ploughed as a field, and Jerusalem became heaps, and the mountain of the House as the high places of the forest" (Micah iii. 12). Titus himself was amazed at the massive buildings of Jerusalem, and traced in his triumph the hand of God (Jos. Bell. Jud. vii. 1. 1). At his departure after the capture of the city, he left the tenth legion under the command of Terentius Rufus to carry out the work of demolition, and Josephus tells us (Bell. Jud. vii. 1. 1) that the whole inclosing walls and precincts of the Temple were "so thoroughly levelled and dug up that no one visiting the city would believe it had ever been inhabited."

3. the mount of Olives] Nothing more appears to have been said now, and crossing the valley of the Kidron, the little company ascended the steep footpath that leads over the mount of Olives in the direction of Bethany. When they had reached the summit, He sat down (Matt. xxiv. 3; Mark xiii. 3).

over against the temple] Notice this minuteness as regards details of place peculiar to the second Evangelist, and see Introduction, p. 19.

Peter and James and John and Andrew] Observe again these minute particulars as to persons, and see Introd. p. 18. These Apostles probably now sat nearest to their Master, and were the most favoured of the apostolic band.

4. what shall be the sign] The question is given more fully by St. Matthew, xxiv. 3. It embraced three points: (i) the time of the destruction of the Temple; the sign (ii) of His Coming, and (iii) of the end of the world.

many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many. And when ye shall hear of wars and rumours of wars, be ye not troubled: for such things must needs be; but the end shall not be yet. For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be earthquakes in divers places, and there shall be famines and troubles: these are the beginnings of sorrows.
But take heed to yourselves: for they shall deliver you up to councils; and in the synagogues ye shall be beaten:
and ye shall be brought before rulers and kings for my sake, for a testimony against them. And the gospel must

6. many shall come] Five tokens are here given, to which the Lord directs the attention of His disciples: (i) the rise of false prophets;
(ii) wars and rumours of wars; (iii) the rising of nation against nation;
(iv) earthquakes; (v) famines (some MSS. omit troubles); but the Apostles were not to be terrified, these things were 8. the beginnings of sorrows] rather, of birth-pangs. The word only occurs in four places in the N. T. Here; in the parallel, Matt. xxiv. 8; in Acts ii. 24, “having loosed the pains (rather the pangs) of death;”
and 1 Thess. v. 3, “then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail (or birth-pangs) upon a woman with child.” The occurrence of the expression here is remarkable, and recalls other places of Scripture, where Creation is said to be “groaning and travelling” (Rom. viii. 22), waiting for its regeneration (Matt. xix. 28) or New Birth. For the fulfilment of these prophecies comp. Jos. Ant. xix. 1; Tac. Ann.
xii. 38, xv. 22, xvi. 13; Sen. Ep. xci. Tacitus describing the epoch (Hist. i. 2) calls it “optimum casibus, atrox praelis, discors seditionibus, ipsa etiam pace saevum.” These “signs” then ushered in the epoch of the destruction of Jerusalem, but realized on a larger scale they are to herald the End of all things; comp. 1 Thess. v. 3; 2 Thess. ii. 2.
9. to councils] Of the actual hearers of the Lord some were destined to find this true within little more than fifty days. Thus, in Acts iv. 3, we find all the Apostles brought before the Sanhedrim, and again in Acts v. 18, 27. Similarly, St Paul was brought before the same in the synagogues ye shall be beaten] “Of the Jews,” says St Paul (2 Cor. xi. 24), “five times received I forty stripes save one;” “thrice was I beaten with rods.” It was part of the duties of the Chazzan, or minister in each synagogue, to maintain order, and scourge the condemned.

before rulers and kings] Thus St Paul stood before Felix (Acts xxiv.
10—22), before Festus (Acts xxv. 1—11), before Agrippa (Acts xxvi.
1—23), before Nero (2 Tim. iv. 16). Our Lord also, we may believe, alluded to the general persecutions of the Christians in later times, and especially to that of the emperor Nero, in which St Peter and
first be published among all nations. But when they shall lead you, and deliver you up, take no thought beforehand what ye shall speak, neither do ye premeditate: but whatsoever shall be given you in that hour, that speak ye: for it is not ye that speak, but the Holy Ghost. Now the brother shall betray the brother to death, and the father the son; and children shall rise up against their parents, and shall cause them to be put to death. And ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake: but he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved.

10. the gospel must first be published] And even so while many of His hearers were yet alive, the Gospel was proclaimed throughout the Roman Empire, from Arabia to Damascus, from Jerusalem to Illyricum, in Italy and in Spain. Comp. Rom. xv. 19, 24, 28; Col. i. 6, 23.

11. take no thought beforehand] Rather, be not anxious beforehand, or distracted beforehand with anxiety. “Nyle þe þenke what þe schulen speke,” Wyclif. “Thought,” when our translation was made, signified undue care or anxiety. Thus Bishop Ridley in the Account of the Disputation at Oxford, 1544, says, “No person of any honesty, without thinking, could abide to hear the like spoken by a most vile varlet;” and Shakespeare, Jul. CAES. II. I. 186, says,

“If he love Caesar, all that he can do Is to himself, take thought and die for Caesar,”

and Hamlet III. 1. 84,

“And thus the native hue of resolution
Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought,”

and Ant. and Cleop. III. 13. 1, “Cleo. What shall we do, Enobarbus?

   Eno. Think, and die.”

See the Bible Word-Book, sub loc.; and Davies, Bible English, pp. 99, 100.

12. but whatsoever shall be given you] Comp. Matt. x. 19, 20, where the words occur as a portion of our Lord's charge to His Twelve Apostles. “These were very weighty words for the Roman Christians, at a time when the martyrdom of the Apostles Peter and Paul, in Rome, was about to take place.” Lange.

13. he that shall endure] “he þat schol susteyne in to þe ende,” Wyclif. The endurance here spoken of is the brave and persistent endurance of the Christian in faith and love. In this noble word, the “queen of virtues,” as Chrysostom does not fear to call it, “there always appears in the New Testament a background of manliness; it does not mark merely the endurance, the ‘sustinentiam,’ or even the ‘patientiam,’ but the ‘perseverantiam,’ the ‘brave

14. But when ye shall see] Hitherto He had distinctly foretold the destruction of the Holy City, now He gives them tokens which should forewarn them of its approach, and tells them how they may secure their own safety.

the abomination of desolation] The reference here is to Dan. ix. 27, “and for the overspreading of abominations he shall make it desolate,” or, as it is rendered in the margin, “and upon the battlements shall be the idols of the desolator.” The LXX. render it, “and upon the temple the abomination of desolations;” comp. 1 Macc. i. 54; 2 Macc. vi. 2. Hengstenberg would translate it, “and over the top of abomination comes the desolation.”

i. The verb from which the Greek word rendered “abomination” comes means to cause disgust by bad smell or otherwise. Hence it is translated by Tertullian “abominamentum.”

ii. In the Septuagint it is specially applied to (a) idols, and (b) things pertaining to idols. Thus in 1 Kings xi. 5 “Milcom” (=Molech) is called “the abomination of the Ammonites,” and in 1 Kings xi. 7 “Chemosh” is called “the abomination of Moab.” Again Ahab is said (1 Kings xxi. 26) “to have done very abominably in following idols,” and Ahaz (2 Kings xvi. 3) to have made “his son to pass through the fire according to the abominations of the heathen.” Comp. also 2 Kings xxi. 2.

iii. Thus the word passes into the New Testament, where it occurs 6 times. (a) Here; (b) in the parallel, Matt. xxiv. 15; (c) Luke xvi. 15, “that which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God;” and (d) Rev. xvii. 4, “having a golden cup in her hand full of abominations,” Comp. also Rev. xvii. 5, xxi. 27.

iv. The key to the interpretation seems to be supplied by St Luke, who says (xxi. 20), “And when ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh,” and thus shews that it is to be explained in some connection with the Roman legions.

v. Hence (a) Some would understand it to denote the vile abominations practised by the Romans on the place where the Temple stood. (b) Others, the Eagles, the standards of the Roman army, not, (let him that readeth understand,) then let them that be in Judæa flee to the mountains: and let him that is on the housetop not go down into the house, neither enter therein, to take any thing out of his house: and let him that is in the field not turn back again for to take up his garment. But woe to them that are with child, and to them that give suck in those days! And pray ye that your flight be not in which were held in abomination by the Jews, both on account of the representations of the Emperor which they bore, and because the soldiers were known to offer sacrifice to them. The Roman Eagles, therefore, rising over the site of the Temple, "where they ought not," and "compassing" the city (Luke xxi. 20), was the sign that the Holy Place had fallen under the dominion of the idolaters. (c) Others again would refer the words not only to the Roman Eagles, but to the outrages of lust and murder perpetrated by the "Zealots," which drove every worshipper in horror from the sacred Courts. See Jos. Bell. Jud. iv. 3. 7. But even this was in consequence of the compassing of the city by the Imperial Legions.

This of course is said parenthetically.

Compare the flight of Lot from the doomed "cities of the plain" to "the mountains," Gen. xix. 17. In accordance with these warnings the Christian Jews fled from Jerusalem to the Peraean town of Pella, a distance of about 100 miles. "Somewhere on the slopes of Gilead, near the scene of Jacob's first view of the land of his descendants, and of the capital of the exiled David, was Pella (identified with Tabathat Fakkil), so called by the Macedonian Greeks from the springing fountain, which likened it to the birthplace of their own Alexander......From these heights Abner in his flight from the Philistines, and David in his flight from Absalom, and the Israelites on their way to Babylon, and the Christian Jews of Pella, caught the last glimpse of their familiar mountains." Stanley's Sinai and Palestine, p. 330.

The houses of Palestine, as we have seen in the case of the "paralytic borne of four," ch. ii. 3—12, were furnished with a flight of steps outside, by which the housetop could be reached without actually entering the house. The Christians were thus warned by our Lord to flee along the flat roofs to the city wall, and so make their escape.

with its rains and storms and swollen torrents, "neither," as St Matthew adds (xxiv. 20), "on the Sabbath day." We may well believe that the Christians made both these petitions theirs. At any rate we know what did take place. (a) The compassing of the city by the Roman armies spoken of by St Luke (xxi. 20) took place at the commencement of October, a.d. 66, when the weather was yet mild and favourable for travelling. (b) The final siege, if any Christian Jews lingered on till then, took place in the still more open months of April or May. See Lewin's Fasti Sacri, p. 344 the winter. For in those days shall be affliction, such as was not from the beginning of the creation which God created unto this time, neither shall be. And except that the Lord had shortened those days, no flesh should be saved: but for the elect's sake, whom he hath chosen, he hath shortened the days. And then if any man shall say to such as was not from the beginning of the creation] The unexampled atrocity of the siege of Jerusalem are fully described by Josephus. He declares that “the misfortunes of all men, from the beginning of the world, if they be compared to those of the Jews, are not so terrible as theirs were,” “nor did any age ever produce a generation more fruitful in wickedness from the beginning of the world.” The horrors of war and sedition, of famine and pestilence, were such as exceeded all example or conception. The city was densely crowded by the multitudes which had come up to the Passover. Pestilence ensued, and famine followed. The commonest instincts of humanity were forgotten. Acts of violence and cruelty were perpetrated without compunction or remorse, and barbarities enacted which cannot be described. Mothers snatched the food from the mouths of their husbands and children, and one actually killed, roasted, and devoured her infant son. (Comp. Lev. xxvi. 29; Deut. xxviii. 56, 57). Dead bodies filled the houses and streets of the city, while cruel assassins rifled and mangled with the exultation of fiends. The besieged devoured even the filth of the streets, and so excessive was the stench that it was necessary to hurl 600,000 corpses over the wall, while 97,000 captives were taken during the war, and more than 1,100,000 perished in the siege. See Josephus, Bell. Jud. vi. 9. 3; Tacitus, Hist. v. 13; Milman’s History of the Jews ii. 16; Merivale’s History of the Romans, vi. 59.

20. except that the Lord had shortened] The word rendered “shortened” only occurs here and in the parallel, Matt. xxiv. 22. It denotes to dock or curtail. It occurs in the LXX. version of 2 Sam. iv. 12, where we read that David “commanded his young men, and they cut off the hands and the feet” of the murderers of Ishbosheth. If in God’s pitying mercy the number of those awful days had not been shortened, no flesh could have been saved.

you, Lo, here is Christ; or, lo, he is there; believe him not: for false Christs and false prophets shall rise, and shall shew signs and wonders, to seduce, if it were possible, even the elect. But take ye heed: behold, I have foretold you all things.

24—31. The Second Advent of the Lord.

But in those days, after that tribulation, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars of heaven shall fall, and the powers that are in heaven

22. for false Christs and false prophets] Josephus tells us that false prophets and impostors prevailed on multitudes to follow them into the desert, promising there to display signs and wonders (comp. Acts xxi. 38); and even at the last, when the Temple was in flames, numbers of all ages flocked thither from the city upon the proclamation of a false prophet, and of six thousand assembled there on this occasion, not one escaped the fire or the sword. But such imposture is to be still more signally realized with "signs and lying wonders" before the final coming of Christ (2 Thess. ii. 1—10).

24—31. The Second Advent of the Lord.

24. in those days] He, to Whom "a thousand years are as one day, and one day as a thousand years" (2 Pet. iii. 8), to Whom there is no past or future but one eternal Present, passes from one chapter to another in the history of the world with the ease of One, Who seeth all things clearly revealed.

the sun shall be darkened] Two of those then listening to the Lord, have themselves described the signs in the physical world which are to usher in the End; (a) St Peter, in his second Epistle, iii. 1—13, and (b) St John, in Rev. xx. xxi.
shall be shaken. And then shall they see the Son of man coming in the clouds with great power and glory. And then shall he send his angels, and shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from the uttermost part of the earth to the uttermost part of heaven. Now learn a parable of the fig tree; When her branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is near: so ye in like manner, when ye shall see these things come to pass, know that it is nigh, even at the doors. Verily I say unto you, that this generation shall not pass, till all these things be done.

26. shall they see the Son of man] Even when speaking of the "glorious majesty" of His Second Advent, He calls Himself by the name which links Him to the Humanity He came to save. For the title see note on ch. ii. 10, and compare John v. 22, 27, "the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son, and hath given him authority to execute judgment also, because he is the Son of man."

in the clouds] And so the Angels distinctly stated to the Apostles at the Ascension (Acts i. 11); and Daniel foresaw Him coming with the clouds of heaven (Dan. vii. 13, 14).

27. then shall he send his angels] As the only begotten Son, who is in the bosom of the Father (John i. 18), alone ever declared or manifested Him to His creatures, so to Him God hath delegated the universal and ultimate judgment of mankind, that "as in our nature He performed all that was requisite to save us, as in our nature He was exalted to God's right hand to rule and bless us, so He shall in our nature appear to judge us." Barrow's Sermons; comp. also Pearson On the Creed, Art. vii.

28. a parable] Rather, its parable, the lesson which in similitude it was meant to teach.

of the fig tree] They had already been taught one lesson from the withered fig-tree, they are now bidden to learn another from the tree when her branch is yet tender.

29. it is nigh] Rather, He is nigh, i.e. the Judge spoken of in verse 26. even at the doors] There is no "even" in the original. So St James says, "Behold, the Judge standeth before the door" (James v. 9). "There is something solemn in the brevity of the phrase, without the nominative expressed." Bp Wordsworth.

30. this generation shall not pass] The word thus rendered denotes (1) birth, age, as in the phrases "younger," "older in age," (2) descent; (3) a generation of men living at the same time; (4) in a wider sense, a race. He, Who surveys all things as an Eternal Present, "turns the thoughts of His disciples to two horizons, one near and one far off:"—

(i) In reference to the destruction of Jerusalem, He declares that the generation of the literal Israel then living would not pass away before the judgments here predicted would fall upon Jerusalem, just as God had made their forefathers wander in the wilderness "until all Heaven and earth shall pass away: but my words shall not pass away.

32—37. Final Exhortation to Watchfulness.

But of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father. Take ye heed, watch and pray: for ye know not when the time is. For the Son of man is as a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his

the generation was consumed” that had come out of Egypt “and done evil in the sight of the Lord” (Num. xxxii. 13);

(ii) In reference to His own Second Coming, and the world at large, He affirms that the race of men, and especially the generation of them that sought the Lord (Ps. xxiv. 6), the faithful seed of Abraham, should not pass away until all these things should be fulfilled.

31. but my words shall not pass away] Never did the Speaker seem to stand more utterly alone than when He uttered this majestic utterance. Never did it seem more improbable that it should be fulfilled. But as we look across the centuries we see how it has been realised. His words have passed into laws, they have passed into doctrines, they have passed into proverbs, they have passed into consolations, but they have never “passed away.” What human teacher ever dared to claim an eternity for his words?

32—37. Final Exhortation to Watchfulness.

32. neither the Son] As our Lord is said to have “increased in wisdom” as well as “in stature” (Luke ii. 52), to have prayed to the Father (Matt. xiv. 23, xxvi. 39, 42—44, &c.); to have received commandment from the Father (John xiv. 31), even so it is here said by Himself that His knowledge is limited. But we may believe (i) that it is only as the Son of Man, that anything could be unknown to Him, Who said “I and my Father are one,” and (ii) that as the Eternal Word, the one Messenger of Divine Revelation, He did not know of that day and that hour so as to reveal them to man. “In Patre Filius scit, though it is no part of His office to reveal it a Patre.” St Augustine, quoted by Bp Wordsworth.

33. Take ye heed, watch and pray] “Se 3e, wake 3e, and preie 3e,” Wyclif. The word rendered “watch” only occurs 4 times in the New Testament: (1) here; (2) in the parallel, Luke xxi. 36; (3) Eph. vi. 18, “Praying always...and watching thereunto with all perseverance;” (4) Heb. xiii. 17, “Obey them that have the rule over you...for they watch for your souls.” It denotes (1) to be sleepless, (2) to be vigilant.

34. For the Son of man is] These words do not occur in the original, taking a far journey] Literally, one who is absent from his people, who goes on foreign travel. “Which gon fer in pilgrimage,” Wyclif. The verb formed from it occurs in chap. xii. 1, “A certain man planted a vineyard...and went into a far country.” Even so our Lord left His servants, and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch. Watch ye therefore: for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cockcrowing, or in the morning: lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping. And what I say unto you I say unto all, Watch.

1. The Sanhedrim in Council.

After two days was the feast of the passover, and of Church, gave authority to His servants the Apostles, and to those who should come after them, and to every man his work, and is now waiting for the consummation of all things.

35. at even, or at midnight] On the night watches see above, ch. vi. 48. In the Temple the priest, whose duty it was to superintend the night sentinels of the Levitical guard, might at any moment knock at the door and demand entrance. "He came suddenly and unexpectedly, no one knew when. The Rabbis use almost the very words in which Scripture describes the unexpected coming of the Master, when they say, Sometimes he came at the cockcrowing, sometimes a little earlier, sometimes a little later. He came and knocked, and they opened to him." Mishnah, Tamid, 1, 1, 2, quoted in Ebersheim's The Temple and its Services, p. 120.

36. lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping] "During the night the 'captain of the Temple' made his rounds. On his approach the guards had to rise and salute him in a particular manner. Any guard found asleep when on duty was beaten, or his garments were set on fire—a punishment, as we know, actually awarded."—Edersheim, p. 120.

37. Watch] Observe in this chapter the emphasis given to Christ's exhortation, "Watch!" The Apostle, under whose eye St Mark wrote his Gospel, would seem to wish us to notice in spite of what frequent warnings he himself failed to watch and fell. St Matthew tells us how the Lord sought to impress these lessons of watchfulness and faithfulness still more deeply by the Parables of the "Ten Virgins" (Matt. xxv. 1—13), and the "Talents" (Matt. xxv. 14—30), and closed all with a picture of the Awful Day, when the Son of Man should separate all nations one from another as the shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats (Matt. xxv. 31—46). So ended the great discourse on the Mount of Olives, and the sun set, and the Wednesday of Holy Week had already begun before the little company entered the hamlet of Bethany.
unleavened bread: and the chief priests and the scribes sought how they might take him by craft, and put him to death. But they said, Not on the feast day, lest there be an uproar of the people.

And being in Bethany in the house of Simon the leper, he should come, and again speaks of its accompanying circumstances of unutterable degradation and infamy—death by Crucifixion.

and of unleavened bread] The Passover took place on the 14th of Nisan, and the "Feast of unleavened bread" commenced on the 15th and lasted for seven days, deriving its name from the Mazzoth, or unleavened cakes, which was the only bread allowed during that week (Exod. xii. 34, 39; Deut. xvi. 3). From their close connection they are generally treated as one, both in the Old and in the New Testament, and Josephus, on one occasion, even describes it as "a feast for eight days." Jos. Antiq. ii. 15. 1; Edersheim, p. 177.

and the chief priests] While our Lord was in quiet retirement at Bethany the rulers of the nation were holding a formal consultation in the court of the palace of Caiaphas (Matt. xxvi. 3) how they could put Him to death. Disappointed as they had been in ensnaring Him into matter for a capital charge, they saw that their influence was lost unless they were willing to take extreme measures, and the events of the Triumphal Entry had convinced them of the hold He had gained over many of the nation, especially the bold and hardy mountaineers of Galilee. The only place where He appeared in public after the nights had been spent at Bethany was the Temple, but to seize Him there would in the present excited state of popular feeling certainly lead to a tumult, and a tumult to the interposition of Pilate, who during the Passover kept a double garrison in the tower of Antonia, and himself had come up to Jerusalem.

by craft] It was formally resolved therefore to take Him by craft, and for this purpose to wait and take advantage of the course of events and of any favourable opportunity which might present itself.

3. And being in Bethany] Meanwhile circumstances had occurred which in their result presented to the Jewish authorities a mode of apprehending Him which they had never anticipated. To relate these the Evangelist goes back to the evening before the Triumphal Entry, and places us in the house of Simon the leper. He had, we may believe, been a leper, and possibly had been restored by our Lord Himself. He was probably a near friend or relation of Lazarus. Some suppose he was his brother, others that he was the husband of Mary.
as he sat at meat, there came a woman having an alabaster box of ointment of spikenard very precious; and she brake the box, and poured it on his head. And there were some that had indignation within themselves, and said, Why was this waste of the ointment made? for it might have been

there came a woman] This was Mary the sister of Lazarus, full of grateful love to Him, who had poured back joy into her once desolated home.

having an alabaster box] “hauynge a box of precious oynement spika­nard,” Wyclif. At Alabastron in Egypt there was a manufactory of small vases for holding perfumes, which were made from a stone found in the neighbouring mountains. The Greeks gave to these vases the name of the city from which they came, calling them alabastros. This name was eventually extended to the stone of which they were formed; and at length the term alabaster was applied without distinction to all perfume vessels, of whatever materials they consisted.

of ointment of spikenard] Or, as in margin, of pure (= genuine) nard or liquid nard. Pure or genuine seems to yield the best meaning, as opposed to the pseudo-nardus, for the spikenard was often adulterated. Pliny, Nat. Hist. xii. 26. It was drawn from an Indian plant, brought down in considerable quantities into the plains of India from such mountains as Shalma, Kedar Kanta, and others, at the foot of which flow the Ganges and Jumna rivers.

very precious] It was the costliest anointing oil of antiquity, and was sold throughout the Roman Empire, where it fetched a price that put it beyond any but the wealthy. Mary had bought a vase or flask of it containing 12 ounces (John xii. 3). Of the costliness of the ointment we may form some idea by remembering that it was among the gifts sent by Cambyses to the Ethiopians (Herod. iii. 20), and that Horace promises Virgil a whole cadus (= 36 quarts nearly) of wine, for a small onyx box of spikenard (Carm. iv. xii. 16, 17), brake the box] i.e. she broke the narrow neck of the small flask, and poured the perfume first on the head, and then on the feet of Jesus, drying them with the hair of her head. She did not wish to keep or hold back anything. She offered up all, gave away all, and her “all” was a tribute worthy of a king. “To anoint the feet of the greatest monarch was long unknown; and in all the pomp and greatnesses of the Roman prodigality, it was not used till Otho taught it to Nero.” Jeremy Taylor’s Life of Christ, iii. 13.

4. And there were some] The murmuring began with Judas Iscariot (John xii. 4), and his spirit of murmuring infected some of the others, simple Galileans, little accustomed to such luxury.

but me ye have not always. She hath done what she could: 8 she is come aforehand to anoint my body to the burying.

such an utter waste of good money.

they murmured] This word has already been explained in the note on chap. i. 43. Wyclif renders it here “hei groyneden in to hir.” De Wette, “they scolded her.” The word “expresses a passionate feeling, which we strive to keep back in the utterance.” “St Mark, without a doubt, presents here the most accurate historic picture; St John defines most sharply the motive; St Matthew gives the especially practical historic form.” Lange.

8. she is come aforehand] The word thus rendered only occurs three times in the New Testament. (1) Here; (2) 1 Cor. xi. 21, “for in eating every one taketh before other his own supper;” (3) Gal. vi. 1, “if a man be overtaken in a fault,” = “be surprised or detected in the act of com-mitt ing any sin.” It denotes (1) to take beforehand; (2) to take before another; (3) to outstrip, get the start of, anticipate.

9. this gospel shall be preached] A memorable prophecy, and to this day memorably fulfilled. The story of her devoted adoration has gone forth into all lands.

10, 11. The Compact of Judas with the Chief Priests.

10. And Judas Iscariot] The words “to the burying” must have fallen like the death knell of all his Messianic hopes on the ears of Judas Iscariot,
sciousness that his Master had read the secret of his life (John xii. 6), filled his soul with feelings of bitterest mortification and hostility.
Three causes, if we may conjecture anything on a subject so full of mystery, would seem to have brought about his present state of mind, and precipitated the course which he now took: (1) avarice; (2) disappointment of his carnal hopes; (3) a withering of internal religion.

(i) Avarice. We may believe that his practical and administrative talents caused him to be made the almoner of the Apostles. This constituted at once his opportunity and his trial. He proved unfaithful priests, to betray him unto them. And when they heard it, they were glad, and promised to give him money. And he sought how he might conveniently betray him.

to his trust, and used the common purse of the brotherhood for his own ends (John xii. 6). The germs of avarice probably unfolded themselves very gradually, and in spite of many warnings from his Lord (Matt. vi. 19—34, xii. 22, 23; Mark x. 25; Luke xvi. 11; John vi. 70), but they gathered strength, and as he became entrusted with larger sums, he fell more deeply.

(ii) Disappointment of his carnal hopes] Like all his brother Apostles, he had cherished gross and carnal views of the Messianic glory, his heart was set on the realization of a visible kingdom, with high places, pomp, and power. If some of the brotherhood were to sit on thrones (Matt. xix. 28), might he not obtain some post, profitable if not splendid? But the issue of the Triumphal Entry, and the repeated allusions of his Master to His death and His burying, sounded the knell of all these temporal and earthly aspirations.

(iii) A withering of internal religion] He had been for three years close to Goodness Incarnate, but the good seed within him had become choked with the thorns of greed and carnal longings. "The mildew of his soul had spread apace," and the discovery of his secret sin, and its rebuke by our Lord at Bethany, turned his attachment to his Master more and more into aversion. The presence of Goodness so close to him ceasing to attract had begun to repel, and now in his hour of temptation, while he was angry at being suspected and rebuked, and possibly jealous of the favour shewn to others of the brotherhood, arose the question, prompted by none other than the Evil One (Luke xxii. 3), Why should he lose everything? Might he not see what was to be gained by taking the other side? (Matt. xxvi. 15).

went unto the chief priests] Full of such thoughts, in the darkness of the night he repaired from Bethany to Jerusalem, and being admitted into the council of the chief priests asked what they would give him for betraying his Master into their hands.

11. they were glad] They shuddered not at the suggested deed of darkness. His proposal filled them with joy.

and promised] How much he expected when he went over to them we cannot tell. But by going at all he had placed himself in their hands. He had made his venture, and was obliged to take what they offered. Thirty pieces of silver (Matt. xxvi. 15), the price of a slave (Exod. xxi. 32), were equivalent to 120 denarii = \(120 \times 7\frac{1}{2}d. = \) about £3. 13s. of our money. At this time the ordinary wages for a day's labour was one denarius; so that the whole sum amounted to about four months' wages of a day labourer. It is possible, however, the sum, which seems to us so small, may have been earnest-money.

conveniently] That is without raising the hostility of the populace, and possibly after the conclusion of the Passover and the dispersion of the Galilean pilgrims to their own homes.

And the first day of unleavened bread, when they killed the passover, his disciples said unto him, Where wilt thou that we go and prepare that thou mayest eat the passover? And he sendeth forth two of his disciples, and saith unto them, Go ye into the city, and there shall meet you a man bearing a pitcher of water; follow him. And wheresoever he shall go in, say ye to the goodman of the house, The

12. the first day of unleavened bread] Wednesday in Passion week would seem to have been spent by our Lord in deep seclusion at Bethany preparing Himself for the awfulness of the coming struggle, and is hidden by a veil of holy silence. That night He slept at Bethany for the last time on earth. "On the Thursday morning He awoke never to sleep again." Farrar, Life, ii, p. 275.

when they killed the passover] i.e. the Paschal victim. Comp. Luke xxii. 7, "when the Passover must be killed," 1 Cor. v. 7, "Christ our Passover (=Paschal Lamb) is sacrificed for us." The name of the Passover, in Hebrew Pesach, and in Aramaean and Greek Pascha, is derived from a root which means to "step over," or to "overleap," and thus points back to the historical origin of the Festival. "And when I see the blood, I will pass over you, and the plague shall not be upon you to destroy you, when I smite the land of Egypt" (Exod. xii. 13).

Where wilt thou] On this Thursday morning the disciples came to our Lord for instructions as to the Passover. They may have expected, considering the complete seclusion of Wednesday, that He would eat it at Bethany, for "the village was reckoned as regards religious purposes part of Jerusalem by the Rabbis, and the Lamb might be eaten there, though it must be killed at the Temple." Lightfoot, Hor. Heb.

that we go and prepare] The lamb had, we may believe, already been bought on the tenth of Nisan, according to the rule of the Law (Exod. xii. 3), the very day on which He, the true Paschal Lamb, entered Jerusalem in meek triumph.

and there shall meet you] Observe the minuteness of the directions and of the predictions as to the events which would happen. It is the same mysterious minuteness which distinguishes the preparations for the Triumphal Entry.

a man] It was generally the task of women to carry water. Amongst the thousands at Jerusalem they would notice this man carrying an earthen jar of water drawn from one of the fountains. We need not conclude, because it was a slave's employment to do this (Deut. xxix. 11; Josh. ix. 21), that he was a slave. The Apostles were to follow him to whatever house he entered.

14. say ye to the goodman of the house] The words addressed to him, and the confidential nature of the communication, make it probable that Master saith, Where is the guestchamber, where I shall eat the passover with my disciples? And he will shew you a large upper room furnished and prepared: there make ready for us. And his disciples went forth, and came into the city, and found as he had said unto them: and they made ready the passover.

the owner of the house was a believing follower. "Discipulus, sed non ex duodecim," Bengel. Some have conjectured it was Joseph of Arimathæa, others John Mark: but the Gospels and tradition alike are silent. "Universal hospitality prevailed in this matter, and the only recompence that could be given was the skin of the paschal lamb, and the earthen dishes used at the meal." Geikie, II. 462.

the guestchamber] Curiously translated by Wyclif, "my fulfilling, or etynge place." The original word only occurs here, in the parallel Luke xxii. 11, and Luke ii. 7, "and she brought forth her firstborn son, and laid him in a manger, because there was no room for them in the inn."

16. a large upper room furnished] "a greet souping place strewid," Wyclif. The guest-chamber was on the upper floor, ready, and provided with couches, as the custom of reclining at meals required. We may conclude also from the word prepared that the searching for and putting away of every particle of leaven (1 Cor. v. 7), so important a preliminary to the Passover, and performed in perfect silence and with a lighted candle, had been already carried out.

16. they made ready the passover] This preparation would include the provision of the unleavened cakes, of the bitter herbs, the four or five cups of red wine mixed with water, of everything, in short, necessary for the meal. At this point it may be well to try to realise the manner in which the Passover was celebrated amongst the Jews in the time of our Lord. (i) With the Passover, by Divine ordinance, there had always been eaten two or three flat cakes of unleavened bread (Exod. xii. 18), and the rites of the feast by immemorial usage had been regulated according to the succession of four cups of red wine always mixed with water (Ps. xvi. 5, xxiii. 5, cxvi. 13). These were placed before the master of the house where the Paschal Feast was celebrated, or the most eminent guest, who was called the Celebrant, the President, or Proclaimer of the Feast. (ii) After those assembled had reclined, he took one of the Four Cups, known as the "Cup of Consecration," in his right hand, and pronounced the benediction over the wine and the feast, saying, "Blessed be Thou, Jehovah, our God, Thou King of the universe, Who hast created the fruit of the vine." He then tasted the Cup and passed it round. (iii) Water was then brought in, and he washed, followed by the rest, the hands being dipped in water. (iv) The table was then set out with the bitter herbs, such as lettuce, endive, succory, and horehound, the sauce called Charoseth, and the Passover lamb. (v) The Celebrant then once more blessed God for the fruits of the earth, and taking a portion of the
And in the evening he cometh with the twelve. And as he entered the house of the \textit{charoseth}, and ate a piece of it of "the size of an olive," and his example was followed by the rest. (vi) The \textit{Haggadah} or "shewing forth" (1 Cor. xi. 26) now commenced, and the Celebrant declared the circumstances of the delivery from Egypt, as commanded by the Law (Exod. xii. 27, xiii. 8). (vii) Then the second Cup of wine was filled, and a child or proselyte inquired, "What mean ye by this service?" (Exod. xii. 26), to which reply was made according to a prescribed formula or liturgy. The first part of the "Hallel," Psalms cxiii., cxiv., was then sung, and the second Cup was solemnly drunk. (viii) The Celebrant now washed his hands again, and taking two of the unleavened cakes, broke one of them, and pronounced the thanksgiving in these words, "Blessed be Thou, O Lord our God, Thou King of the universe, Who bringest forth fruit out of the earth." Then he distributed a portion to each, and all wrapping some bitter herbs round their portion dipped it in the \textit{charoseth} and ate it. (ix) The flesh of the lamb was now eaten, and the Master of the house, lifting up his hands, gave thanks over the third Cup of wine, known as the "Cup of Blessing," and handed it round to each person. (x) After thanking for the food of which they had partaken and for their redemption from Egypt, a fourth Cup, known as the "Cup of Joy," was filled and drunk, and the remainder of the Hallel (Pss. cxv.-cxviii.) was sung. \textbf{17—21. Commencement of the Supper. Revelation of the Traitor.}

\textit{17. in the evening} ["It was probably while the sun was beginning to decline in the horizon that Jesus and the disciples descended once more over the Mount of Olives into the Holy City. Before them lay Jerusalem in her festive attire. White tents dotted the sward, gay with the bright flowers of early spring, or peered out from the gardens and the darker foliage of the olive-plantations. From the gorgeous Temple buildings, dazzling in their snow-white marble and gold, on which the slanting rays of the sun were reflected, rose the smoke of the altar of burnt offering. . . . The streets must have been thronged with strangers, and the flat roofs covered with eager gazers, who either feasted their eyes with a first sight of the Sacred City for which they had so often longed, or else once more rejoiced in view of the well-remembered localities. It was the last day-view which the Lord had of the Holy City—till His resurrection!" Edersheim's \textit{The Temple and its Services}, pp. 194, 195.]

\textit{he cometh with the twelve} [Judas must have stolen back to Bethany before daylight, and another day of hypocrisy had been spent under the penetrating glance of Him Who could read the hearts of men.]
they sat and did eat, Jesus said, Verily I say unto you, One of you which eateth with me shall betray me. And they began to be sorrowful, and to say unto him one by one, Is it I? And others said, Is it I? And he answered and said unto them, It is one of the twelve, that dippeth with me in the dish. The Son of man indeed goeth, as it is written of

18. And as they sat] Grouping together the four narratives, which, as they approach the Passion, expand into the fulness of a diary, we infer that (i) when the little company had taken their places on the triclinia, the Saviour as Celebrant or Proclaimer of the Feast, remarking that with desire He had desired to eat this Passover before He suffered, took the first cup and divided it amongst them (Luke xxii. 15—18). (ii) Then followed the unseemly dispute touching priority (Luke xxii. 24—30), to correct which and to teach them in the most striking manner possible a lesson of humility, He washed His disciples’ feet, covered with dust from their walk along the road from Bethany (John xiii. 1—11). Then the meal was resumed and He reclined once more at the table (John xiii. 12), the beloved disciple lying on His right, with his head close to the Redeemer’s breast.

One of you which eateth with me shall betray me] He had already said, after washing their feet, “now ye are clean, but not all” (John xiii. 10), but at this moment the consciousness of the traitor’s presence so wrought upon Him that He broke forth into words of yet plainer prediction.

19. they began to be sorrowful] The very thought of treason was to their honest and faithful hearts insupportable, and excited great surprise and deepest sorrow.

one by one] Observe the pictorial and minute details of St Mark.

Is it I?] None of them said “Is it he?” So utterly unconscious were they of the treachery that lurked in their midst.

20. he answered and said unto them] “Answered” is omitted in the best MSS. The intimation was made privately to St John, to whom St Peter had made a sign that he should ask who could be so base (John xiii. 23—26).

that dippeth with me] “He who is just about to dip with Me a piece of the unleavened cakes into the charoseth”—a sauce consisting of a mixture of vinegar, figs, dates, almonds, and spice, provided at the Passover—“and to whom I shall give some of it presently” (John xiii. 26). To this day at the summit of Gerizim the Samaritans on the occasion of the Passover hand to the stranger a little olive-shaped morsel of unleavened bread enclosing a green fragment of wild endive or some other bitter herb, which may resemble, except that it is not dipped in the dish, the very ‘sop’ which Judas received at the hands of Christ.” Farrar, Life, II, p. 290.

21. woe to that man] The intimation just given was uttered privately for the ear of St John alone, and through him was possibly made known to St Peter; but the incident was of so ordinary a character, that him: but woe to that man by whom the Son of man is betrayed! good were it for that man if he had never been born.

And as they did eat, Jesus took bread, and blessed, and brake it, and gave to them, and said, Take, eat: this is my body. And he took the cup, and when he had given thanks, he gave it to them: and they all drank of it. And he said unto them, This is my blood of the new testament, which is it would fail to attract any notice whatever, and could only be a sign to the Apostle of Love. Then aloud, as we may believe, the Holy One uttered His final warning to the Traitor, and pronounced words of immeasurable woe on him by whom He was about to be betrayed, "It were good for that man if he had never been born." But the last appeal had no effect upon him. "Rabbi, is it I?" he inquired, steeling himself to utter the shameless question. "Thou hast said," replied the Saviour, in words probably heard only by those close by, and gave him "the sop," and Satan entered into him, as St John tells us (xiii. 27) with awful impressiveness. "That thou doest, do quickly," the Saviour continued; and the traitor arose and went forth, and it was night (John xiii. 27—30), but the night was not darker than the darkness of his soul.

22. And as they did eat] On the departure of the Traitor the Saviour, as though relieved of a heavy load, broke forth into words of mysterious triumph (John xiii. 31—35), and then, as the meal went on, proceeded to institute the Holy Eucharist.

Jesus took bread] that is one of the unleavened cakes that had been placed before Him as the Celebrant or Proclaimer of the Feast.

and blessed] giving thanks and pronouncing the consecration, probably in the usual words, see above, verse 16.

this is my body] St Luke adds, “which is being (or on the point of being) given for you;” St Paul (1 Cor. xi. 24), “which is being (or on the point of being) broken for you,” while both add, “do this in remembrance of Me.”

23. he took the cup] probably the third Cup, and known as the “Cup of Blessing.” See above, verse 16.

24. This is my blood of the new testament] or rather, Covenant. Some of the best MSS. here omit “new.” He reminds them of the old Covenant also made in blood with their fathers in the wilderness (Exod. xxiv. 8).

which is shed for many] i.e. which is being (or on the point of being) shed for many. St Matthew (xxvi. 28) adds, “unto the remission of sins,” St Paul adds (1 Cor. xi. 25), “Do this, as oft as ye shall drink it, in remembrance of Me.” Thus did our Lord ordain Bread and Wine to be the “outward part” or “sign” of the Sacrament of our Redemption by His shed for many. Verily I say unto you, I will drink no more of the fruit of the vine, until that day that I drink it new in the kingdom of God.

And when they had sung an hymn, they went out into the mount of Olives. And Jesus saith unto them, All ye shall be offended because of me this night: for it is written, I will smite the shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered.

But after that I am risen, I will go before you into Galilee. But Peter said unto him, Although all shall be offended, yet will not I. And Jesus saith unto him, Verily I say unto thee, That this day, even in this night, before the cock crow dead. In the ordinary Paschal Feast these elements had been subordinate. He now gives to them the first importance. In the ordinary Paschal Feast the Lamb occupied the chief place. Now the type was succeeded by the Antitype; now the “very Paschal Lamb” was come, and was about to offer Himself from the altar of His Cross for the sins of the whole world. Of the Jewish Paschal Lamb, therefore, no word is said, but in its place our Lord puts the Bread and Wine, the Sacramental Symbols of His Body and Blood. Gradually and progressively He had prepared the minds of His disciples to realise the idea of His death as a sacrifice. He now gathers up all previous announcements in the institution of this Sacrament.

26. when they had sung an hymn] In all probability the concluding portion of the Hallel. See above, note on verse 16.

27. And Jesus saith unto them] These words really were uttered as they sat at the table just after the institution of the Holy Eucharist.

for it is written] The words are taken from Zech. xiii. 7. The Good Shepherd quotes the allusion to Himself in His truest character (John x. 4).

28. after that I am risen] The Angel afterwards referred to these very words at the open Sepulchre on the world’s first Easter-Day (Mark xvi. 6, 7).

29. But Peter said unto him] Ardent and impulsive as ever, the Apostle could not endure the thought of such desertion. His protestations of fidelity are more fully given in Matt. xxvi. 33 and John xiii. 37.

30. in this night] Before the dawn of the morrow should streak the eastern sky, and in the darkness the cock should twice have crowed, he who had declared he would never be offended, would thrice deny that twice, thou shalt deny me thrice. But he spake the more vehemently, If I should die with thee, I will not deny thee in any wise. Likewise also said they all.

32—42. The Agony in the Garden of Gethsemane.

And they came to a place which was named Gethsemane: and he saith to his disciples, Sit ye here, while I shall pray. And he taketh with him Peter and James and John, and began to be sore amazed, and to be very heavy; and saith he had ever known his Lord. St Mark, as usual, records two points which enhance the force of the warning and the guilt of Peter, viz. (a) that the cock should crow twice, and (b) that after such warning he repeated his protestation with greater vehemence.

61. If it be necessary for me to die with Thee; as Wyclif renders it, "if it bihoue me to dye to gidere wi~ ~ee." After this the Lord engaged in earnest conversation with His Apostles, not as at the ordinary Passover on the great events of the Exodus, but on His own approaching departure to the Father and the coming of the Comforter (John xiv. 1-31); of Himself as the true Vine and His disciples as the branches (John xv. 1-6); of the trials which the Apostles must expect and the assured aid of the Comforter (John xvi.); and at the close lifting up His eyes to heaven solemnly committed them to the care of the Eternal Father, and dedicated to Him His completed work (John xvii.). Then the concluding part of the Hallel (Pss. cxv.—cxviii.) was sung, i.e. chanted, and the little company went forth into the darkness towards the Mount of Olives. A perusal of these Psalms will reveal their appropriateness to this solemn occasion.

32—42. The Agony in the Garden of Gethsemane.

32. And they came] They would pass through one of the city gates, "open that night as it was Passover," down the steep side of the Kidron (John xviii. 1), and coming by the bridge, they went onwards towards a place which was named Gethsemane] The word Gethsemane means "the Oil-Press." It was a garden (John xviii. 1) or an olive orchard on the slope of Olivet, and doubtless contained a press to crush the olives, which grew in profusion all around. Thither St John tells us our Lord was often wont to resort (xviii. 2), and Judas "knew the place." Though at a sufficient distance from public thoroughfares to secure privacy, it was yet apparently easy of access. For a description of the traditional site see Stanley's Sinai and Palestine, p. 455.

33. he taketh with him] the three most trusted and long-tried of the Apostolic body, who had been before the privileged witnesses of the raising of the daughter of Jairus and of the Transfiguration.

began to be sore amazed] "To drede," Wyclif. We have already met this word in ch. ix. 15, where it was applied to the amazement of unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful unto death:

35 tarry ye here, and watch. And he went forward a little, and fell on the ground, and prayed that, if it were possible, the hour might pass from him. And he said, Abba, Father, the people when they saw the Lord after the Transfiguration, and we shall meet with it again in ch. xvi. 5, 6, where it is applied to the holy women at the Sepulchre. St Mark alone applies the word to our Lord's sensations at this crisis of His life.

to be very heavy] “to heuye,” Wyclif. The original word thus translated only occurs (1) here, (2) in the parallel, Matt. xxvi. 37, and (3) in Phil. ii. 26, “for he (Epaphroditus) longed after you all, and was full of heaviness.” Buttmann suggests that the root idea is that of being “away from home,” and so “confused,” “beside oneself.” Others consider the primary idea to be that of “loathing” and “discontent.” Truly in respect to His human nature our Lord was far from home, far from His native skies, and the word may be taken to describe the awfulness of His isolation, unsupported by a particle of human sympathy,—a troubled, restless state, accompanied by the keenest mental distress.

34. My soul is exceeding sorrowful] Here again we have a remarkable word. We met with it before (ch. vi. 26), where Herod is said to have been “exceeding sorry” at the request for the Baptist’s head; St Luke also uses the word (xviii. 23, 24) to describe how the rich young ruler was “very sorrowful” when he was bidden to sacrifice his wealth. It points here to a depth of anguish and sorrow, and we may believe that he, who at the first temptation had left the Saviour “for a season” (Luke iv. 13), had now returned, and whereas before he had brought “to bear against the Lord all things pleasant and flattering, if so he might by aid of these entice or seduce Him from His obedience, so now he thought with other engines to overcome His constancy, and tried Him with all painful things, as before with all pleasurable, hoping to terrify, if it might be, from His allegiance to the truth, Him whom manifestly He could not allure.” Trench’s Studies, pp. 55, 56, and above, i. 12.

and watch] “with Me” adds St Matthew (xxvi. 38). Perfect man, “of a reasonable soul and human flesh subsisting,” He yearned, in this awful hour, for human sympathy. It is almost the only personal request He is ever recorded to have made. It was but “a cup of cold water” that He craved. But it was denied Him! Very Man, He leaned upon the men He loved, and they failed Him! He trod the winepress alone; and of the people there was none with him (Isaiah lxiii. 3).

35. forward a little] “about a stone’s throw” (Luke xxii. 41), perhaps out of the moonlight into the shadow of the garden.

36. Abba] St Mark alone has preserved for us this word. St Peter could not fail to have treasured up the words of murmured anguish, which, “about a stone’s throw” apart, he may have caught before he was overpowered with slumber. It is used only twice more in the New Testament, and both times by St Paul, Rom. viii. 15.
all things are possible unto thee; take away this cup from me: nevertheless not what I will, but what thou wilt. And he cometh, and findeth them sleeping, and saith unto Peter, Simon, sleepest thou? couldest not thou watch one hour? Watch ye and pray, lest ye enter into temptation. The spirit truly is ready, but the flesh is weak. And again he went away, and prayed, and spake the same words. And when he returned, he found them asleep again, (for their eyes were heavy,) neither wist they what to answer him. And he cometh the third time, and saith unto them, Sleep on now, and take your rest: it is enough, the hour is come; behold, the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners. Rise up, let us go; lo, he that betrayeth me is at hand.

"we have received the spirit of adoption, whereby we cry Abba, Father," and Gal. iv. 6, "God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying Abba, Father." In Syriac it is said to have been pronounced with a double b when applied to a spiritual father, with a single b when used in its natural sense. With the double letter at all events it has passed into the European languages, as an ecclesiastical term, 'abbas,' 'abbot.' See Canon Lightfoot on Gal. iv. 6.

Father] St Mark adds this probably to explain the Aramaic word, after his wont.

37. and saith unto Peter] who had made so many impetuous promises.

38. the flesh is weak] It is not of course implied that His own "will" was at variance with that of His Father; but, very Man, He had a human will, and knew the mystery of the opposition of the strongest, and at the same time the most innocent, instincts of humanity. The fuller account of the "Agony" is found in St Luke xxii. 43, 44.

40. their eyes were heavy] "so ἧν earnestly," Wyclif. Even as had been the case on the Mount of Transfiguration. The original word supported by the best MSS. only occurs here, and denotes that the Apostles were utterly tired, and their eyes "weighed down."

neither wist they what to answer him] A graphic touch peculiar to the second Evangelist, just as the imperfect tense equally graphically implies that the eyes of the Apostles were constantly becoming weighed down in spite of any efforts they might make to keep awake. Comp. the scene at the Transfiguration, Mark ix. 6.

41. the third time] The Temptation of the Garden divides itself, like that of the Wilderness, into three acts, following close on one another. Sleep on now, for ever if ye will. The words are spoken in a kind of gentle irony and sorrowful expostulation. The Golden Hour for watching and prayer was over.

it is enough] Their wakefulness was no longer needed.
And immediately, while he yet spake, cometh Judas, one of the twelve, and with him a great multitude with swords and staves, from the chief priests and the scribes and the elders.

And he that betrayed him had given them a token, saying, Whomsoever I shall kiss, that same is he; take him, and lead him away safely. And as soon as he was come, he goeth straightway to him, and saith, Master, master; and kissed him.

And they laid their hands on him, and took him. And one

43. And immediately, while He yet spake, the garden was filled with armed men, and flashed with the light of numerous lanterns and torches, though the Paschal moon was at the full, for "in the rocky ravine of the Kidron there would fall great deep shadows from the declivity of the mountains and projecting rocks, and there were caverns and grottoes in which a fugitive might retreat." Lange, Life of Christ, IV. 292.

Judas. During the two hours that had elapsed since he had gone forth from the Upper Room he had not been idle. He had reported to the ruling powers that the favourable moment had come, and had doubtless mentioned "the Garden" whither his Master was wont to resort. He now returned, but not alone, for with him a great multitude with swords and staves These consisted partly (a) of the regular Levitical guards of the Temple, the apparitors of the Sanhedrim, and partly (b) of the detachment from the Roman cohort quartered in the Tower of Antonia under the "chiliarch" or tribune in command of the garrison (John xviii. 3, 12). The high-priest, we may believe, had communicated with Pilate, and represented that the force was needed for the arrest of a false Messiah, dangerous to the Roman power.

44. a token] Judas had never imagined that our Lord would Himself come forth to meet His enemies (John xviii. 2—5). He had anticipated the necessity of giving a signal whereby they might know Him. He had pressed forward and was in front of the rest (Luke xxii. 47). The word translated "a token," Wyclif, only occurs here.

45. and kissed him] Rather, kissed Him tenderly or fervently. The customary kiss of a disciple to his teacher. The same word in the original with its intensifying preposition is used to express (i) the kissing of our Lord by the woman who was a sinner (Luke vii. 38, 45); (ii) the kissing of the prodigal son by his father (Luke xv. 20); and (iii) the kissing of St Paul by the Christians on the sea-shore of Miletus (Acts xx. 37). The Latin compound, having the same force, is "deoosculari," or "exosculari."

46. And one of them that stood by] This we know from St John was Simon Peter (John xviii. 10), displaying his characteristic impetuosity to of them that stood by drew a sword, and smote a servant of the high priest, and cut off his ear. And Jesus answered and said unto them, Are ye come out, as against a thief, with swords and with staves to take me? I was daily with you in the temple teaching, and ye took me not: but the scriptures must be fulfilled. And they all forsook him, and fled. And there followed him a certain young man, having a linen cloth cast about his naked body; and the

the end. Some think the Apostle's name was omitted by the Synoptists lest the publication of it in his lifetime should expose him to the revenge of the unbelieving Jews.

* a servant of the high priest] In none of the Synoptic Gospels do we find mention of his name either. This we are told by St John was Malchus. St John was an acquaintance of the high-priest's, and probably a frequenter of his house; hence he knew the name of his servant.

* his ear] Both St Mark and St John use a diminutive = little ear. St Luke alone (xxii. 50) tells us it was his right ear. Perhaps it was not completely severed, for St Luke, who alone also records the healing, says that our Lord simply touched it and healed him.

* answered and said unto them] Those to whom He now spoke were, as we learn from St Luke xxii. 52, some chief priests and elders and officers of the Temple guard, who had been apparently watching His capture.

* a thief] Rather, a robber or bandit. See above, note on ch. xi. 17.

* the scriptures must be fulfilled] Rather, but that the Scriptures may be fulfilled all this has come to pass.

* they all forsook him, and fled] Even the impetuous Peter who had made so many promises; even the disciple whom He loved.

* a certain young man] This forms an episode as characteristic of St Mark as that of the two disciples journeying to Emmaus is of St Luke. Some have conjectured he was the owner of the garden of Gethsemane; others Lazarus (see Professor Plumptre's Article on "Lazarus" in Smith's Bible Dict.); others Joses, the brother of the Lord; others, a youth of the family where Jesus had eaten the Passover. It is far more probable that it was St Mark himself, the son of Mary, the friend of St Peter. The minuteness of the details given points to him. Only one well acquainted with the scene from personal knowledge, probably as an eyewitness, would have introduced into his account of it so slight and seemingly so trivial an incident as this.

* having a linen cloth] He had probably been roused from sleep, or just preparing to retire to rest in a house somewhere in the valley of Kidron, and he had nothing to cover him except the sindôn or upper garment, but in spite of this he ventured in his excitement to press on amongst the crowd. The word sindôn in Matt. xxvii. 59, Mark xv. 46 and Luke xxiii. 53 is applied to the fine linen, which Joseph of Arimathæa 52 young men laid hold on him: and he left the linen cloth, and fled from them naked.

53—65. The Jewish Trial.

53 And they led Jesus away to the high priest: and with him were assembled all the chief priests and the elders and the scribes. And Peter followed him afar off, even into the palace of the high priest: and he sat with the servants, and warmed himself at the fire. And the chief priests and all the council sought for witness against Jesus to put him to bought for the Body of Jesus. The LXX. use the word in Judg. xiv. 12 and in Prov. xxxi. 24 for "fine under garments."

the young men] This is omitted by Lachmann, Tischendorf, and Tregelles. The crowd was probably astonished at the strange apparition.

52. naked] This need not imply that he was absolutely naked. It may mean, like the Latin nudus, "with only the under robe on." Comp. 1 Sam. xix. 24; John xxi. 7; Virg. Georg. i. 299.

53—65. The Jewish Trial.

53. And they led Jesus away] They bound Him first (John xviii. 12), and then conducted Him across the Kidron and up the road leading into the city.

to the high priest] This we know from St John was Caiaphas. But our Lord was first brought to the palace of Annas his father-in-law (John xviii. 13). This was either at the suggestion of some of the ruling powers, or in accordance with previous arrangement, that his "snake-like" astuteness as president of the Sanhedrin might help his less crafty son-in-law. The palace seems to have been jointly occupied by both as a common official residence, and thither, though it was deep midnight, the chief priests, elders, and scribes repaired.

54. And Peter] Before the palace or within its outer porch appears to have been a large open square court, in which public business was transacted. Into it Peter and John ventured to follow (John xviii. 15). The latter, as being acquainted with the high-priest, easily obtained admittance; Peter, at first rejected by the porteress, was suffered to enter at the request of his brother Apostle.

and warmed himself] The night was chilly, and in the centre of the court the servants of the high-priest had made a fire of charcoal, and there Peter, now admitted, was warming himself at the open hearth.

55. And the chief priests] St Mark passes over the details of the examination before Annas and the first commencement of insult and violence, recorded only by St John (xviii. 19—24). He places us in the mansion of Caiaphas, whither our Lord was conducted across the courtyard, and where a more formal assembly of the council of the nation had met together.

sought for witness] By the Law they were bound to secure the agreement of two witnesses on some specific charge. Before Annas an death; and found none. For many bare false witness against him, but their witness agreed not together. And there arose certain, and bare false witness against him, saying, We heard him say, I will destroy this temple that is made with hands, and within three days I will build another made without hands. But neither so did their witness agree together. And the high priest stood up in the midst, and asked Jesus, saying, Answerest thou nothing? what is it which these witness against thee? But he held his peace, and answered nothing. Again the high priest attempt had been made to entangle the Accused with insidious questions. A more formal character must now be given to the proceedings.

56. but their witness agreed not together] “he witnessingis weren not counenable,” Wyclif. The Law required that at least two witnesses must agree. See Deut. xvii. 6, xix. 15. But now some who came forward had nothing relevant to say, and others contradicted themselves.

57. And there arose certain] Two at last came forward, whose evidence appeared likely to be more satisfactory.

58. We heard him say] The statements now made are given with more detail by St Mark than any other of the Evangelists. He alone tells us they said that they had heard our Lord declare, “He would destroy the Temple made with hands and in three days build another made without hands.” In the opposition made with hands and made without hands we have proof of the falseness of the accusation.

59. neither so] The utterance of words tending to bring the Temple into contempt was regarded as so grave an offence that it afterwards formed a capital charge against the first martyr, Stephen (Acts vi. 13). But dangerous as was the charge, it broke down. The statements of the witnesses did not tally, and their testimony was therefore worthless. Their memories had travelled over three years to the occasion of the first Passover at Jerusalem and the first cleansing of the Temple. But they perverted the real facts of the case (John ii. 18—22). St Mark alone notices the disagreement of their testimony. “The differences between the recorded words of our Lord and the reports of the witnesses are striking: ‘I can destroy’ (Matt. xxvi. 61); ‘I will destroy’ (Mark xiv. 58); as compared with ‘Destroy...and I will raise’ (John ii. 19).” Westcott’s Introduction, p. 326 n.

60. And the high priest stood up] The impressive silence, which our Lord preserved, while false witnesses were being sought against Him (Matt. xxvi. 62), was galling to the pride of Caiaphas, who saw that nothing remained but to force Him, if possible, to criminate Himself. Standing up, therefore, in the midst (a graphic touch which we owe to St Mark alone), he adjured Him in the most solemn manner possible (Matt. xxvi. 63) to declare whether He was “the Malcha Meschicha”—the King Messiah, the Son of the Blessed.
And Jesus said, I am: and ye shall see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven. Then the high priest rent his clothes, and saith, What need we any further witnesses? Ye have heard the blasphemy: what think ye? And they all condemned him to be guilty of death. And some began to spit on him, and to cover his face, and to buffet him, and

62. And Jesus said, I am] Thus adjured, the Lord broke the silence He had hitherto maintained. His answer to such a question must be liable to no misinterpretation. Peter in an ecstatic moment had declared He was the King Messiah, "the Son of the living God" (Matt. xvi. 16), and He had not refused the awful Name. Thousands also of Galilean pilgrims had saluted Him with Hosannas in this character through the streets of Jerusalem. But as yet He had not openly declared Himself. The supreme moment, however, had at length arrived, and He now replied, "I AM—the Messiah, the Son of God, the Son of Man—and hereafter ye shall see Me sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven." Comp. Dan. vii. 13; Ps. viii. 4, ex. 1.

63. Then the high priest] Caiaphas had now gained his end. The Accused had spoken. He had criminated Himself. All was uproar and confusion. The high-priest rent his linen robes. This was not lawful for him to do in cases of mourning (Lev. x. 6, xxii. 10), but was allowable in cases of blasphemy (see 2 Kings xviii. 37). It was to be performed standing, and so that the rent was to be from the neck straight downwards. The use of the plural "his clothes," by St Mark, seems to intimate that he tore all his clothes, except that which was next his body.

64. they all condemned him] Worse than false prophet, worse than false Messiah, He had declared Himself to be the "Son of God," and that in the presence of the high-priest and the great Council. He had incurred the capital penalty. But though they thus passed sentence, they could not execute it. The right had been taken from them ever since Judæa became a Roman province. The sentence, therefore, needed confirmation, and the matter must be referred to the Roman governor.

65. And some began] It was now about three o'clock in the morning, and till further steps could be taken our Lord was left in charge of soldiers of the guard and the servants and apparitors of the high-priest.

to spit on him] In those rough ages a prisoner under sentence of death was ever delivered over to the mockery of his guards. It was so now with the Holy One of God. Spitting was regarded by the Jews as an expression of the greatest contempt (Num. xii. 14; Deut. xxv. 9). Seneca records that it was inflicted at Athens on Aristides the Just, but it was only with the utmost difficulty any one could be found willing to do it. But those who were excommunicated were specially liable to this expression of contempt (Isaiah I. 6).
to say unto him, Prophesy: and the servants did strike him with the palms of their hands.

66—72. The Denial of our Lord by St Peter.

And as Peter was beneath in the palace, there cometh one of the maids of the high priest: and when she saw Peter warming himself, she looked upon him, and said, And thou also wast with Jesus of Nazareth. But he denied, saying, I know not, neither understand I what thou sayest. And he went out into the porch; and the cock crew. And a maid saw him again, and began to say to them that stood by, This is one of them. And he denied it again. And a little did strike him with the palms of their hands] “The hands they bound had healed the sick, and raised the dead; the lips they smote had calmed the winds and waves. One word and His smiters might have been laid low in death. But as He had begun and continued, He would end—as self-restrained in the use of His awful powers on His own behalf as if He had been the most helpless of men—Divine patience and infinite love knew no wearying.”

66. And as Peter [During the sad scene enacted in the hall of trial above, an almost sadder moral tragedy had been enacted in the court below.

67. warming himself] This seems to have been shortly after his entrance, as related above. The maid who approached probably was the porteress who had admitted him.

68. but he denied] Thrown off his guard and perhaps disconcerted by the searching glances of the bystanders, Peter replied at first evasively, that he neither knew nor understood what she meant. See Lange, Life, IV. p. 316. Others think it means, “I know Him not, neither understand I what thou sayest.”

69. a maid saw him again] Recognised at the porch, Peter seems to have returned once more towards the fire, and was conversing in his rough Galilean dialect with the soldiers and servants when, after the lapse of an hour, another maid approached.

70. And he denied it again] This denial was probably addressed to those round the fire. But escape was hopeless. “Surely,” said one, after, they that stood by said again to Peter, Surely thou art one of them: for thou art a Galilæan, and thy speech agreeth thereto. But he began to curse and to swear, saying, I know not this man of whom ye speak. And the second time the cock crew. And Peter called to mind the word that Jesus said unto him, Before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny me thrice. And when he thought thereon, he wept.

I—15. The Examination before Pilate.

15 And straightway in the morning the chief priests held a "this fellow is one of them;" "Thou art a Galilæan," said another, "and thy speech agreeth thereto." These last words are omitted by Lachmann, Tischendorf, and Tregelles. "Thy speech bewrayeth thee" are the words used by St Matthew (xxvi. 73). The Galilean burr was rough and indistinct. Hence the Galileans were not allowed to read aloud in the Jewish synagogues.

71. he began to curse and to swear] Assailed by the bystanders just mentioned and by the kinsman of Malchus (John xviii. 26), the Apostle now fell deeper still. With oaths and curses he denied that he had ever known the Man of whom they spoke, and at that moment, for the second time, the cock crew, and at the same moment the Lord, either (a) on His way from the apartments of Annas across the courtyard to the palace of Caiaphas, or (b) thrust back into the court after His condemnation, turned and looked upon Peter (Luke xxii. 61).

72. And Peter called to mind] That glance of sorrow went straight to the Apostle’s heart; all that his Lord had said, all His repeated warnings rushed back to his remembrance, and lit up the darkness of his soul. He could contain himself no longer, and when he thought thereon] for so we have rendered the original word. Others render it (i) abundantly=“he wept abundantly,” as in the margin; others (ii) “he began to weep;” others (iii) “he threw his mantle over his head;” others (iv) “he flung himself forth and wept,” he wept] Not with the remorse of Judas, but the godly sorrow of true repentance. Observe that the Apostle has not lessened his fault, for it is from him, doubtless, through St Mark, we are informed “that the first crowing of the cock did not suffice to recal him to his duty, but a second was needed.” Lange.

CH. XV. 1—15. The Examination before Pilate.

1. And straightway] As the day dawned, a second and more formal meeting of the Sanhedrim was convened in one of the halls or courts near at hand. A legal Sanhedrim it could hardly be called, for there are scarcely any traces of such legal assemblies during the Roman period. In theory the action of this august court was humane, and the proceedings were conducted with the greatest care. A greater anxiety was manifested to clear the arraigned than to secure his condemnation, especially in matters of life and death. It was enacted (i) that a majority of at consultation with the elders and scribes and the whole council, and bound Jesus, and carried him away, and delivered him to Pilate. And Pilate asked him, Art thou the King of least two must be secured before condemnation; (ii) that while a verdict of acquittal could be given on the same day, one of guilty must be reserved for the following day; (iii) that no criminal trial could be carried through in the night; (iv) that the judges who condemned a criminal to death must fast all day; (v) that the sentence itself could be revised; and that (vi) if even on the way to execution the criminal reflected that he had something fresh to adduce in his favour, he might be led back and have the validity of his statement examined. See Ginsburg's Article on The Sanhedrin in Kitto's Biblical Cyclopaedia, III. 767. But the influence of the Sadducees, who were now in the ascendancy, and were Draconian in their severity, had changed all this, and it was resolved to endorse the sentence already pronounced, and deliver over the Great Accused to the secular arm.

carried him away] Either (i) to one of the two gorgeous palaces which the first Herod had erected, or (ii) to a palace near the Tower of Antonia, for hither the governor had come up from Cæsarea “on the sea” to keep order during the feast.

to Pilate] The Roman governor roused thus early that eventful morning to preside in a case, which has handed down his name through the centuries in connection with the greatest crime committed since the world began, was Pontius Pilate. (i) His name Pontius is thought to indicate that he was connected, either by descent or adoption, with the gens of the Pontii, first conspicuous in Roman history in the person of C. Pontius Telesinus, the great Samnite general. His cognomen Pilatus has been interpreted as = (a) “armed with the pilum or javelin,” as = (b) an abbreviation of pileatus, from pileus, the cap or badge of manumitted slaves, indicating that he was either a libertus (“freedman”), or descended from one. He succeeded Valerius Gratus A.D. 16, and brought with him his wife Procla or Claudia Procula. (ii) His office was that of procurator under the governor (propretor) of Syria, but within his own province he had the power of a legatus. His headquarters were at Cæsarea (Acts xxiii. 23); he had assessors to assist him in council (xxv. 12); wore the military dress; was attended by a cohort as a body-guard (Matt. xxvii. 27); and at the great festivals came up to Jerusalem to keep order. When presiding as judge he would sit on a Bema or portable tribunal erected on a tesselated pavement, called in Hebrew Gabbatha (John xix. 13), and was invested with the power of life and death (Matt. xxvii. 26). (iii) In character he was not insensible to the claims of mercy and justice, but he was weak and vacillating, and incapable of compromising his own safety in obedience to the dictates of his conscience. As a governor he had shewn himself cruel and unscrupulous (Luke xiii. 1, 2), and cared little for the religious susceptibilities of a people, whom he despised and could not understand.

2. And Pilate asked him] This was a private investigation within the prætorium, after the Jews, carefully suppressing the religious grounds the Jews? And he answering said unto him, Thou sayest it. And the chief priests accused him of many things: but he answered nothing. And Pilate asked him again, saying, Answerest thou nothing? behold how many things they witness against thee. But Jesus yet answered nothing; so that Pilate marvelled. Now at that feast he released unto them one prisoner, whomsoever they desired. And there was one named Barabbas, which lay bound with them that had made on which they had condemned our Lord, had advanced against Him a triple accusation of (i) seditious agitation, (ii) prohibition of the payment of the tribute money, and (iii) the assumption of the suspicious title of “King of the Jews.” This was a political charge, and one which Pilate could not overlook. Having no quaestor to conduct the examination, he was obliged to hear the case in person.

Thou sayest it] St Mark does not mention here what we know from St John, (a) the inquiry of our Lord of Pilate why he asked the question, and (b) His explanation of the real nature of His kingdom (John xviii. 37, 38). He brings out our Lord’s acknowledgment of His regal dignity, though Pilate could not understand His meaning.

3. And the chief priests accused him] After the first examination Pilate came forth to the Jewish deputation, standing before the entrance of the palace, and declared his conviction of the innocence of the Accused (John xviii. 38; Luke xxiii. 4). This was the signal for a furious clamour on the part of the chief priests and members of the Sanhedrim, and they accused our Lord of many things, of (1) “stirring up the people,” and (2) “teaching falsely throughout all Judæa, beginning from Galilee even to Jerusalem” (Luke xxiii. 5).

4. And Pilate asked] These renewed accusations led to further questions from Pilate, but our Lord preserved a complete silence. This increased the procurator’s astonishment, but he thought he had found an escape from his dilemma, when he heard the word “Galilee.” Galilee was within the province of Herod Antipas, and he sent the case to his tribunal (Luke xxiii. 6—12). But Herod also affirmed that the Accused had done nothing worthy of punishment, and Pilate finding the case thrown back upon his hands, now resolved to try another experiment for escaping from the responsibility of a direct decision.

6. Now at that feast] Rather, at festival time. There is no article in the Greek (or in Luke xxiii. 17; Matt. xxvii. 15), and the apparent limitation of the custom to the Feast of the Passover is not required by the original words, or by the parallel in John xviii. 39. It seems to have been a custom, the origin of which is unknown, to release to the people on the occasion of the Passover and other great Feasts any prisoner whom they might select. The custom may have been of Jewish origin, and had been continued by the Roman governors from motives of policy. Even the Romans were accustomed at the Lectisternia and Bacchanalia to allow an amnesty for criminals.

7 one named Barabbas] There lay in prison at this time, awaiting insurrection with him, who had committed murder in the insurrection. And the multitude crying aloud began to desire him to do as he had ever done unto them. But Pilate answered them, saying, Will ye that I release unto you the King of the Jews? For he knew that the chief priests had delivered him for envy. But the chief priests moved the people, that he should rather release Barabbas unto them. And Pilate answered and said again unto them, What will ye then that I shall do unto him whom ye call the King of execution, a celebrated bandit or robber named Barabbas. This word is a patronymic, and means (i) according to some, Bar-Abbas = son of Abba = "son of the father," or (ii) according to others, Bar-Rabbas = "son of a Rabbi." In three MSS. of Matt. xxvii. 16, his name is given as "Jesus Bar-abbas," and this reading is supported by the Armenian and Syriac Versions and is cited by Origen.

Barabbas had headed one of the numerous insurrections against the Roman power, which were constantly harassing the procurators, and giving untold trouble to the legionary troops quartered at Caesarea and other places. In this particular insurrection blood had been shed, and apparently some Roman soldiers had been killed.

But Pilate answered them] The proposition of the people that he should act according to his usual custom concurred with Pilate's own wishes and hopes, and he resolved deliberately to give the populace their choice.

He could not doubt who were the ringleaders in the tumultuous scene now being enacted, or what was the motive that had prompted them to bring the Accused before his tribunal—nothing more or less than envy of the influence He had gained and the favour He had won throughout the land. He hoped, therefore, by appealing directly to the people to procure our Lord's release.

But the chief priests] It was probably at this juncture that he received the message from his wife imploring him to have nothing to do with "that just person" (Matt. xxvii. 19) standing before him. His feelings, therefore, of awe were intensified, and his resolve to effect the release increased. But the chief priests stirred up the people, and urged them to choose Barabbas, the patriot leader, the zealot for their country, the champion against oppression. The word translated "moved" only occurs here and in the parallel, Luke xxiii. 5. It denotes (i) to shake to and fro, to brandish; (ii) to make threatening gestures; (iii) to stir up, or instigate. Their efforts were successful, and when Pilate formally put the question, the cry went up, "Not this Man," the Holy and Undeified, Whom they had lately welcomed with Hosannas into their city, but the hero of the insurrection, Barabbas (John xviii. 39, 40).

What will ye] This question seems to have been put in disdain and anger; disdain at their fickleness, anger at the failure of his efforts to stem the torrent.
the Jews? And they cried out again, Crucify him. Then Pilate said unto them, Why, what evil hath he done? And they cried out the more exceedingly, Crucify him. And so Pilate, willing to content the people, released Barabbas unto them, and delivered Jesus, when he had scourged him, to be crucified.

whom ye call the King of the Jews] He may have hoped that the sound of the title might have not been in vain on the ears of those who had lately cried, “Blessed is the king that cometh in the name of the Lord,” “Blessed is the kingdom of our father David” (Luke xix. 38; Mark xi. 10). But he was bitterly deceived.

13. Crucify him] was the cry that now fell upon his ears, prompted by the chief priests, re-echoed by the crowd. Still the procurator did not yield, though already at Caesarea he had had proof of the invincible tenacity of a Jewish mob, whom not even the prospect of instant death could deter (Jos. Antiq. xviii. 3. 1). He resolved to make another direct appeal to the excited crowd. “Why should he crucify Him?” “What evil had He done?”

14. But they cried out the more] “Why and wherefore?” There were no questions with them. They were resolved to have His life. Nothing else would satisfy. The cry was kept up unbroken, Away with this man, Crucify Him! Crucify Him! In vain Pilate expostulated. In vain he washed his hands openly before them all (Matt. xxvii. 24) in token of his conviction of the perfect innocence of the Accused. His wavering in the early stage of the trial was bringing on its terrible consequences.

15. And so Pilate] One hope, however, the procurator still seems to have retained. Irresolution indeed had gone too far, and he could not retrace his steps. He thought he must content the people, and therefore released Barabbas unto them. But he imagined there was room for a compromise. Clamorous as was the crowd, perhaps they would be satisfied with a punishment only less terrible than the Cross, and so he gave the order that He, Whom he had pronounced perfectly innocent, should be scourged.

willing to content the people] “willinge for to do ynow to be peple,” Wyclif. Here we have one of St Mark’s Latinisms. The Greek expression answers exactly to the Latin satisfacere=to satisfy, appease, content.

when he had scourged him] Generally the scourging before crucifixion was inflicted by lictors (Livy, xxxiii. 36; Jos. Bell. Jud. ii. 14. 9; v. xii. 1). But Pilate, as sub-governor, had no lictors at his disposal, and therefore the punishment was inflicted by soldiers. Lange, rv. 356 n. The Roman scourging was horribly severe. Drops of lead and small sharp-pointed bones were often plaited into the scourges, and the sufferers not unfrequently died under the infliction. Compare the horrible flagellum of Hor. Sat. i. iii. 119; and “flagrum pecunis ossibus catenatum,” Apul. Met. viii. That the soldiers could not have per-

16. the hall, called Prætorium] "in to be floor of be moot hall," Wyclif. The building here alluded to is called by three of the Evangelists the Prætorium. In St Matthew (xxvii. 27) it is translated "common hall," with a marginal alternative "governor's house." In St John (xviii. 28, 33, xix. 9) it is translated "hall of judgment" and "judgment hall," with a marginal alternative "Pilate's house" in the first passage; while here it is reproduced in the English as "prætorium." In Acts xxiii. 35 it is rendered "judgment hall," and in Phil. i. 13, where it signifies "the pretorian army," it is rendered "palace." This last rendering might very properly have been adopted in all the passages in the Gospels and Acts, as adequately expressing the meaning. See Professor Lightfoot on the Revision of the New Testament, p. 49.

17. clothed him with purple] Instead of the white robe, with which Herod had mocked Him, they threw around Him a scarlet sagum, or soldier's cloak. St Matthew, xxvii. 28, calls it "a scarlet robe," St John, xix. 2, "a purple robe." It was a war-cloak, such as princes, 18 put it about his head, and began to salute him, Hail, King of the Jews! And they smote him on the head with a reed, and did spit upon him, and bowing their knees worshipped him. And when they had mocked him, they took off the purple from him, and put his own clothes on him, and led him out to crucify him. And they compel one Simon a Cyrenian, who passed by, coming out of the country, the father of Alexander and Rufus, to bear his cross. And they bring him unto the place Golgotha, which is, being inter-

20. and led him out] The place of execution was without the gates of the city.

21. they compel] The condemned were usually obliged to carry either the entire cross, or the cross-beams fastened together like the letter V, with their arms bound to the projecting ends. Hence the term \textit{furcifer} = "cross-bearer." "Patibulum ferat per urbem, deinde affigatur cruci." This had a reference to our Lord being typified by Isaac bearing the wood of the burnt offering, Gen. xxii. 6. But exhausted by all He had undergone, our Lord sank under the weight laid upon Him, and the soldiers had not proceeded far from the city gate, when they met a man whom they could "compel" or "impress" into their service. The original word translated "compel" is a Persian word. At regular stages throughout Persia (Hdt. viii. 98; Xen. \textit{Cyrop.} viii. 6, 17) mounted couriers were kept ready to carry the royal despatches. Hence the verb \textit{angariare} (Vulg.) denotes (1) to despatch as a mounted courier; (2) to impress, force to do some service. It occurs also in Matt. v. 41, "Whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain."

Simon a Cyrenian[1] The man thus impressed was passing by, and coming from the country (Luke xxiii. 26). His name was Simon, a Hellenistic Jew, of Cyrene, in northern Africa, the inhabitants of which district had a synagogue at Jerusalem (Acts ii. 10, vi. 9).

the father of Alexander and Rufus[1] St Mark alone adds this. Like "Bartimæus, the son of Timæus," these words testify to his originality. From the way they are mentioned it is clear that these two persons must have been well known to the early Christians. Rufus has been identified with one of the same name saluted by St Paul, Rom. xvi. 13.
preached, 'The place of a skull.' And they gave him to drink wine mingled with myrrh: but he received it not. And when they had crucified him, they parted his garments, casting lots upon them, what every man should take.

to bear his cross] The cause of execution was generally inscribed on a white tablet, called in Latin titulus ("qui causam pere indicaret," Sueton. Calig. 32). It was borne either suspended from the neck, or carried before the sufferer. The latter was probably the mode adopted in our Lord's case. And Simon may have borne both title and Cross. St Mark does not mention our Lord's words on the way to the women (Luke xxiii. 28—31).

22. the place Golgotha] St Mark gives the explanation of the Hebrew word "Golgotha." St Luke omits it altogether. It was a bare hill or rising ground on the north or north-west of the city, having the form on its rounded summit of a skull, whence its name. It was (a) apparently a well-known spot; (b) outside the gate (comp. Heb. xiii. 12); but (c) near the city (John xix. 20); (d) on a thoroughfare leading into the country (Luke xxiii. 26); and (e) contained a "garden" or "orchard" (John xix. 41). From the Vulgate rendering of Luke xxiii. 33, "Et postquam venerunt in locum, qui vocatur Calvariae" (=a bare skull, "be place of Calvariae," Wyclif), the word Calvary has been introduced into the English Version, obscuring the meaning of the Evangelist. There is nothing in the name to suggest the idea that the remains of malefactors who had been executed were strewn about, for the Jews always buried them.

wine mingled with myrrh] It was a merciful custom of the Jews to give those condemned to crucifixion, with a view to producing stupefaction, a strong aromatic wine. Lightfoot tells us (Hor. Heb. ii. 366) it was the special task of wealthy ladies at Jerusalem to provide this potion. The custom was founded on Rabbinic gloss on Proverbs xxxi. 6, "Give strong drink to him that is perishing, and wine to those whose soul is in bitterness."

but he received it not] The two malefactors, who were led forth with Him, probably partook of it, but He would take nothing to cloud His faculties.

24. when they had crucified him] The present tense appears to be here the preferable reading, they crucify Him and part His garments among them. There were four kinds of crosses, (i) the crux simplex, a single stake driven through the chest or longitudinally through the body; (ii) the crux decussata (X); (iii) the crux immissa (†); and (iv) the crux commissa (T). From the mention of the title placed over the Saviour's Head, it is probable that His cross was of the third kind, and that He was laid upon it either while it was on the ground, or lifted and fastened to it as it stood upright, His arms stretched out along the two cross-beams, and His body resting on a little projection, sedile, a foot or two above the earth. That His feet were nailed as well as His hands is apparent from Luke xxivv. 39, 40.

25—38. The Death.

25. And it was the third hour, and they crucified him. And the superscription of his accusation was written over, THE KING OF THE JEWS. And with him they crucify two thieves; the one on his right hand, and the other on his left. And the scripture was fulfilled, which saith, And he

xii. 4), for each sufferer, detailed, according to the Roman custom, ad excubias, to mount guard, and see that the bodies were not taken away.

26. And the superscription] The dice doubtless were ready at hand, and one of their helmets would serve to throw them.

27. two thieves] Rather, two robbers, or malefactors as St Luke calls them (xxiii. 33). See note above, xi. 17. It is more than probable that they belonged to the band of Barabbas and "had been engaged in one of those fierce and fanatical outbreaks against the Roman domination which on a large scale or a small so fast succeeded one another in the latter days of the Jewish commonwealth." This explains the fact that we read of no mockery of them, of no gibes levelled against them. They were the popular heroes. They realized the popular idea of the Messiah. See Trench's Studies, p. 294.

28. And the scripture was fulfilled] The reference here is to Isaiah liii. 12, but the verse is omitted in some MSS.
was numbered with the transgressors. And they that passed by railed on him, wagging their heads, and saying, Ah, thou that destroyest the temple, and buildest it in three days, save thyself, and come down from the cross. Likewise also the chief priests mocking said among themselves with the scribes, He saved others; himself he cannot save. Let Christ the King of Israel descend now from the cross, that we may see and believe. And they that were crucified with him reviled him. And when the sixth hour was come, there

29. railed on him] The instincts of ordinary pity were quenched in the fierceness of malignant hatred and religious bigotry.

that destroyest the temple] This saying of our Lord at His first cleansing of the Temple was never forgotten. Perhaps some of the false witnesses of the previous night were now present.

31. the chief priests] whose high dignity and sacred office should have taught them better than to descend to the low passions of the mob.

mocking said] "scornyng he, ech to oher, wip scribis, seiden," Wyclif. The ordinary bystanders blaspheme (v. 29), the members of the Sanhedrim mock, for they think they have achieved a complete victory.

32. they that were crucified with him] At first both the robbers joined in reproaching Him. The word rendered here "they reviled him" is rendered "cast the same in his teeth" in Matt. xxvii. 44. One of them, however, went further than this, and was guilty of blaspheming Him (Luke xxiii. 39), but, as the weary hours passed away, the other, separating himself from the sympathies of all who stood around the Cross, turned in unexampled penitence and faith to Him that hung so close to him, and whose only "token of royalty was the crown of thorns that still clung to His bleeding brows," and in reply to his humble request to be remembered when He should come in His kingdom, heard the gracious words, "To day shalt thou be with me in paradise" (Luke xxiii. 43). Thus even from "the Tree" the Lord began to reign, and when "lifted up," to "draw" men, even as He had said, unto Himself (John xii. 32).

33. And when the sixth hour was come] i.e. 12 o'clock. The most mysterious period of the Passion was rapidly drawing near, when the Lord of life was about to yield up His spirit and taste of death. At this hour nature herself began to evince her sympathy with Him Whom man rejected. The clearness of the Syrian noontide was obscured, and darkness deepened over the guilty city. It is impossible to explain the origin of this darkness. The Passover moon was then at the full, so that it could not have been an eclipse. Probably it was some supernatural derangement of the terrestrial atmosphere. The Pharisees was darkness over the whole land until the ninth hour. And at the ninth hour Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, Eloi, Eloi, lama sabachthani? which is, being interpreted, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? And some of them that stood by, when they heard it, said, Behold, he calleth Elias. And one ran and filled a spunge full of vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink, saying, Let alone; let us see whether Elias will come to take him down. And Jesus cried with a loud voice, and gave up until the ninth hour] i.e. till 3 o’clock. A veil hides from us the incidents of these three hours, and all the details of what our Lord, shrouded in the supernatural gloom, underwent “for us men and for our salvation.”

34. And at the ninth hour] the hour of the offering of the evening sacrifice,

Jesus cried with a loud voice] He now gives utterance to the words of the first verse of the xxii\textsuperscript{nd} Psalm, in which, in the bitterness of his soul, David had complained of the desertion of his God, and said,

“Eloi! Eloi! lama sabachthani?”

This is the only one of the “Seven Sayings from the Cross,” which has been recorded by St Mark, and he gives the original Aramaic and its explanation. Observe that of these sayings (i) the first three all referred to others, to (a) His murderers, (b) the penitent malefactor, (c) His earthly mother; (ii) the next three referred to His own mysterious and awful conflict, (a) His loneliness, (b) His sense of thirst, (c) His work now all but ended; (iii) with the seventh He commends His soul into His Father’s hands.

35. Behold, he calleth Elias] They either only caught the first syllable, or misapprehended words, or, as some think, spoke in wilful mockery, and declared He called not on Eli, God, but on Elias, whose appearance was universally expected. See note above, ix. 11.

36. full of vinegar] Burning thirst is the most painful aggravation of death by crucifixion, and it was as He uttered the words, “I thirst,” that the soldier ran and filled a sponge with vinegar, or the sour wine-and-water called posca, the ordinary drink of the Roman soldiers.

and put it on a reed] i.e. on the short stem of a hyssop-plant (John xix. 29).

Let alone] According to St Mark, the man himself cries “Let be;” according to St Matthew, the others cry out thus to him as he offers the drink; according to St John, several filled the sponge with the sour wine. Combining the statements, together we have a natural and accurate picture of the excitement caused by the loud cry.
the ghost. And the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom.

39—41. The Confession of the Centurion.

And when the centurion, which stood over against him, saw that he so cried out, and gave up the ghost, he said,

37. And Jesus cried with a loud voice saying, "It is finished." The three Evangelists all dwell upon the loudness of the cry, as it had been the triumphant note of a conqueror.

and gave up the ghost] saying, "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit," and then all was over. The Lord of life hung lifeless upon the Cross. "There may be something intentional in the fact that in describing the death of Christ the Evangelists do not use the neuter verb, 'He died,' but the phrases, 'He gave up the ghost' (Mark xv. 37; Luke xiii. 46; John xix. 30); 'He yielded up the ghost' (Matt. xxvii. 50); as though they would imply with St Augustine that He gave up His life, 'quia voluit, quando voluit, quomodo voluit.' Comp. John x. 18." Farrar, Life, II p. 418 n.

the ghost] Ghost, from A. S. grayt, G. geist, = spirit, breath, opposed to body. "The word has now acquired a kind of hallowed use, and is applied to one Spirit only, but was once common." Bible Word-Book, p. 224. Compare (a) Wyclif's translation here, "deiede or sente out the bre~;" (b) "ghostly dangers" (=spiritual dangers), "our ghostly enemy" (=our spiritual enemy), in the Catechism; (c) Bishop Andrewes' Sermons, II. 340, "Ye see then that it is worth the while to confess this [that Jesus is the Lord], as it should be confessed. In this sense none can do it but by the Holy Ghost. Otherwise, for an ore tenus only, our own ghost will serve well enough." Bible English, p. 265.

38. And the veil of the temple] the beautiful thick, costly veil of purple and gold, inwrought with figures of Cherubim, 20 feet long and 30 broad, which separated the Holy Place from the Most Holy, was rent in twain] For the full symbolism of this see Heb. ix. 3, x. 19. For the earthquake which now shook the city, see Matt. xxvii. 51. Such an event must have made a profound impression, and perhaps was the first step towards the change of feeling which afterwards led a great number of "the priests to become obedient to the faith" (Acts vi. 7).

that he so cried out] The whole demeanour of the Divine Sufferer, the loudness of the cry, and the words He uttered, thrilled the officer through and through. Death he must have often witnessed, on the battle-field, in the amphitheatre at Cæsarea, in tumultuous insurrec-40 Truly this man was the Son of God. There were also women looking on afar off: among whom was Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James the less and of Joses, and Salome; (who also, when he was in Galilee, followed him, and ministered unto him;) and many other women which came up with him unto Jerusalem.

41 In an ecstacy of awe and wonder "he glorified God," he exclaimed, "In truth this man was righteous" (Luke xxiii. 47); nay, he went further, and declared, "This Man was a (or the) Son of God." It is possible that on bringing the Lord back after the scourging, which he superintended, the centurion may have heard the mysterious declaration of the Jews, that by their Law the Holy One ought to die, because He made Himself the Son of God (John xix. 7). The words made a great impression on Pilate then (John xix. 8). But now the centurion had seen the end. And what an end! All that he had dimly believed of heroes and demigods is transfigured. This man was more. He was the Son of God. Together with the centurion at Capernaum (Matt. viii.) and Cornelius at Cæsarea (Acts x.) he forms in the Gospel and Apostolic histories a triumvirate of believing Gentile soldiers. The words, I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me, had been already fulfilled in the instance of the penitent malefactor. They are now true of this Roman officer. The "Lion of the tribe of Judah" was "reigning from the Tree."

40. There were also women] forerunners of the noble army of Holy Women, who were, in the ages to come, throughout the length and breadth of Christendom, to minister at many a death-bed out of love for Him Who died "the Death."

Mary Magdalene] Mary of Magdala, out of whom had gone forth seven demons (Luke viii. 2). This is the first time she is mentioned by St Mark.

Mary the mother of James the less] The "Mary of Clopas" (John xix. 25) who stood by the cross, and "Mary of James the Less" (comp. Matt. xxvii. 56), are the same person; she was the sister of the Blessed Virgin, and had married Clopas or Alpheus.

James the less] James the Little, so called to distinguish him from the Apostle St James, the son of Zebedee. Some think he was so called (a) because he was younger than the other James; or (b) on account of his low stature; or (c) because, when elevated to the bishopric of Jerusalem (Gal. ii. 12), he took the name in humility, to distinguish him from his namesake, now famous in consequence of his martyrdom (Acts xii. 2).

Salome] See note above, x. 35.
And now when the even was come, because it was the preparation, that is, the day before the sabbath, Joseph of Arimathea, an honourable counsellor, which also waited for the kingdom of God, came, and went in boldly unto Pilate, and craved the body of Jesus. And Pilate marvelled if he waited for the kingdom like Simeon (Luke ii. 25) and Anna (Luke ii. 38). went in boldly He is no longer a secret disciple. He casts away all fear. The Cross transfigures cowards into heroes. “It was no light matter Joseph had undertaken: for to take part in a burial, at any time, would defile him for seven days, and make everything unclean which he touched (Num. xix. 11; Hagg. ii. 13); and to do so now involved his seclusion through the whole Passover week—with all its holy observances and rejoicings.” Geikie, ii. 576. craved the body of Jesus It was not the Roman custom to remove the bodies of the crucified from the cross. Instead of shortening their agonies the Roman law left them to die a lingering death, and suffered their bodies to moulder under the action of sun and rain (comp. Cic. Tusc. Quest. i. 43, “Theodori nihil interest humine an sublime putrescat”), or be devoured by wild beasts (comp. Hor. Epist. xvi. 48, “Non hominem occidi: non pases in cruce corvos”). The more merciful Jewish Law, however, did not allow such barbarities, and the Roman rulers had made an express exception in their favour. In accordance, therefore, with the request of the Jewish authorities, the legs of the malefactors had been broken to put them out of their misery (John xix. 31), but our Lord was found to be dead already (John xix. 33), and the soldier had pierced His side with a spear, the point of which was a handbreadth in width, thus causing a wound which would of itself have been sufficient to cause death, whereupon there had issued forth blood and water (John xix. 34). Thus the Holy Body was now ready for its entombment. And Pilate marvelled] Death by crucifixion did not generally supervene even for three days, and thirty-six hours is said to be the earliest period when it would be thus brought about. Pilate, therefore, marvelled.
were already dead: and calling unto him the centurion, he asked him whether he had been any while dead. And when he knew it of the centurion, he gave the body to Joseph.

And he bought fine linen, and took him down, and wrapped him in the linen, and laid him in a sepulchre which was hewn out of a rock, and rolled a stone unto the door of the sepulchre. And Mary Magdalene and Mary the mother of Joses beheld where he was laid.

at the request of Joseph, and required the evidence of the centurion to assure himself of the fact.

45. he gave the body to Joseph] The word translated "gave" only occurs in the New Testament here and in 2 Peter i. 3, 4; "according as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness;" "whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises." It means more than simply to give, and = "to give freely," "largi." The word appears to be used designedly by St Mark, implying that Pilate, who from his character might have been expected to extort money from the wealthy "counsellor," freely gave up the Body at his request, placing it at his disposal by a written order, or a verbal command to the centurion.

46. And he bought fine linen] Thus successful, Joseph purchased fine (probably white) linen, the original word for which has been already explained in the note on ch. xiv. 51, and then he repaired to Golgotha, where he was joined by Nicodemus, formerly a secret disciple like himself, but whom the Cross had emboldened to come forward and bring a mixture of myrrh and aloes, about an hundred pound weight (John xix. 39), to do honour to the Lord of life.

wrapped him in the linen] Thus assisted, Joseph took down the Holy Body, laid it in the fine linen, sprinkled the myrrh and aloes amongst the folds, and wound them round the wounded Limbs.

a sepulchre] He then conveyed the Body to a new Tomb, wherein as yet no man had ever been laid, and which he had hewn out of the limestone rock in a garden he possessed hard by Golgotha (John xix. 41).

He was anxious probably himself to be buried there in the near precincts of the Holy City. Here now they laid the Holy Body in a niche in the rock, and

47. Mary Magdalene] and Mary the mother of Joses (see note above, v. 40) and the other women (Luke xxiii. 55), "beheld," i.e. observed carefully, the place where He was laid, and where, surrounded by all the mystery of death,

"Still He slept, from Head to Feet
Shrouded in the winding-sheet,
Lying in the rock alone,
Hidden by the sealed stone."
And when the sabbath was past, Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James, and Salome, had bought sweet spices, that they might come and anoint him. And very early in the morning the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulchre at the rising of the sun. And they said among themselves, Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre? And when they looked, they saw that the stone was rolled away: for it was very great. And entering into the sepulchre, they saw a young man sitting thereon. Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James, and Salome, bought sweet spices, that they might come and anoint him. And very early in the morning the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulchre at the rising of the sun. And they said among themselves, Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre? And when they looked, they saw that the stone was rolled away: for it was very great. And entering into the sepulchre, they saw a young man sitting thereon.

1. And when the sabbath was past] Friday night, Saturday, and Saturday night passed away, three days according to the Jewish reckoning (comp. (a) 1 Sam. xxx. 12, 13; 2 Chron. x. 5, 12; (b) Matt. xii. 40; John ii. 19; Matt. xxvii. 63), and He, Who had truly died, lay also truly buried.

bought sweet spices] Meanwhile the holy women, whom a love stronger than death had drawn to observe the spot on the evening of His burial, had returned in order that they might complete the embalming of the Body, which had necessarily been done in haste, as the Sabbath drew on (Luke xxiii. 54).

2. And very early in the morning] while "it was yet dark" (John xx. 1), before the dawn streaked the eastern sky on the first day of the week] the world's first Easter-Day, our Lord's Day (Rev. i. 10), they came] or rather, come (observe again the graphic present of the Evangelist), draw near, to the sepulchre.

3. And they said among themselves] Unaware of the deputation of the Jewish rulers, which had gone to Pilate, and secured the sealing of the Stone and the setting of the watch over the Tomb (Matt. xxvii. 62—66), their only anxiety was, Who shall roll away the stone from the door of the sepulchre?

4. And when they looked] But as they drew nearer amidst the glimmering light, the earth quaked beneath their feet (Matt. xxviii. 2), and looking up they saw that all cause of anxiety was removed, for the stone was already rolled away. Observe the force of the expression "when they looked." It means when they "looked up," an accurate and graphic detail.

for it was very great] About this fact there could be no doubt. The stone which had closed the entrance was "very great," and even at a distance on looking up to the height, on which the rock-tomb lay, they could see it was not in its place, but had changed its position.

5. And entering into the sepulchre] This emboldened them all to enter into the tomb, except Mary of Magdala, who, seeing in the rolling away of the stone the confirmation of her worst fears, fled away to the Apostles Peter and John; and there they saw ting on the right side, clothed in a long white garment; and they were affrighted. And he saith unto them, Be not affrighted: Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified: he is risen; he is not here: behold the place where they laid him. But go your way, tell his disciples and Peter that he goeth before you into Galilee: there shall ye see him, as he said unto you. And they went out quickly, and fled from a young man] or as some of them may have specified, two (Luke xxiv. 4), sitting on the right hand. (Comp. Luke i. 11.)

and they were affrighted] On the force of the Greek word thus rendered, see above, ch. ix. 15. The sight of the heavenly visitants (Luke xxiv. 4) filled them with the utmost terror and amazement, "pei weren ahaist," Wyclif.

6. he is risen] When exactly He had risen no man knoweth, for no man saw. But that it was true did not admit of doubt. When the Apostles Peter and John visited the tomb an hour or so afterwards (John xx. 3—10), they went in undismayed, but it was empty. The Holy Body was gone! There were no traces of violence. All was order and calm. The linen bandages lay carefully unravelled by themselves. The face-cloth that had covered the Face lay not with them. It was folded up in a place in the empty niche by itself. But He was not there. He had risen even as He had said.

behold the place] where, indeed, He had been laid by kindly hands, but which did not contain Him now.

7. go your way] Practical action must take the place of vague astonishment. There was a message to be borne.

and Peter] No wonder it is in the Gospel of St Mark we find this wondrous touch. Who afterwards would have been so likely, as the Apostle himself, to treasure up this word, the pledge of possible forgiveness, after the dreadful hours he must have spent during Friday night, Saturday, and Saturday night? What story would he have so often told to his son in the faith either in Eastern Babylon or the capital of the West?

he goeth before you] as a true Shepherd before His sheep. It is the same word which (a) He Himself used on the evening of the Betrayal, "After I am risen again, I will go before you into Galilee" (Matt. xxvi. 32; Mark xiv. 28); which (b) is applied to the star "going before" the Magi at His nativity, and (c) to His own "going before" His Apostles on the road towards Jerusalem, where He was to suffer. See note above, ch. x. 32.

8. they went out quickly] At present the holy women were overwhelmed with alarm at the sight they had witnessed and the words they had heard.
the sepulchre; for they trembled and were amazed: neither said they any thing to any man; for they were afraid.

9—11. The Appearance to Mary Magdalene.

Now when Jesus was risen early the first day of the week, he appeared first to Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had cast seven devils. And she went and told them that had they trembled] Literally, for trembling and amazement possessed them, or as Wyclif renders it, "forsope drede and quakynge hadde assay lid hem." The original word = "amazement," has been already the subject of comment above, ch. v. 42. The word rendered "trembling" occurs nowhere else in the Four Gospels.

neither said they any thing to any man] That is, on their way to the Holy City they did not open their lips to any passers by they chanced to meet. Joy opened them freely enough afterwards to the Apostles (Matt. xxviii. 8).

for they were afraid] In a tumult of rapture and alarm they fled back from the tomb towards the Holy City. The occurrence of the morning was so new to them, great, and unheard of, that they ventured not as yet to publish it.

9—11. The Appearance to Mary Magdalene.

9. Now when] On this section from 9—20, see Introduction, pp. 15, 16.

he appeared first] As yet, it will be observed, no human eye had seen the risen Conqueror of Death. The holy women had seen the stone rolled away, and the empty tomb, and had heard the words of the Angels, and announced all that had occurred to the Eleven, but their words appeared to them as "idle tales" (Luke xxiv. 11). The Apostles Peter and John also, when they visited the Sepulchre, beheld proofs that it was indeed empty, but "Him they saw not." The first person to whom the Saviour shewed Himself after His resurrection was Mary of Magdala. After recounting to the Apostles Peter and John the rolling away of the stone, she seems to have returned to the sepulchre; there she beheld the two angels in white apparel, whom the other women had seen (John xx. 12), and while she was in vain solacing her anguish at the removal of her Lord, He stood before her, and one word sufficed to assure her that it was He, her Healer, and her Lord.

out of whom he had cast seven devils] That He should have been pleased to manifest Himself first after His resurrection not to the whole Apostolic company, but to a woman, and that woman not His earthly Mother, but Mary of Magdala, clearly made a strong impression on the early Church.

10. she went and told] In the fulness of believing faith she hurried back to Jerusalem and recounted her tale of joy to the Eleven and the rest.
been with him, as they mourned and wept. And they, when they had heard that he was alive, and had been seen of her, believed not.

12, 13. The Appearance to Two of them.

After that he appeared in another form unto two of them, as they walked, and went into the country. And they

as they mourned and wept] Desolate at the loss of their beloved Master, and unable to realize the wonderful accounts of His resurrection. "Weylinge and wepynge" is Wyclif's rendering.

11. had been seen of her] The original word here translated "had been seen" occurs nowhere else in St Mark except here in this section and in verse 14.

believed not] So incredible to them did the whole story appear.

12, 13. The Appearance to Two of Them.

12. After that] On the world's first Easter-Day the risen Saviour manifested Himself first to Mary Magdalene, then to the other ministering women. The Evangelist now proceeds to relate the appearance to the two disciples journeying towards Emmaus, which is more fully described by St Luke (xxiv. 13–35).

he appeared] "he is scheuid," Wyclif. This word in the original is applied to our Lord's "manifestations" of Himself after His resurrection (a) by St Mark twice, here and xvi. 14; (b) by St John three times, xxi. 1, 14; (c) by St Paul to our "manifestation" in our real character at the Last Judgment, 2 Cor. v. 10 (comp. 1 Cor. iv. 5); (d) by the same Apostle to the "manifestation" of Christ at His second coming, Col. iii. 4. The word points here to a change in the Person of our Lord after His resurrection. He is the same and yet not the same. (a) The same. There are the well-known intonations of His voice, and the marks in His hands and feet (John xx. 20, 25); and He eats before His Apostles, converses with them, blesses them. And yet He is (b) not the same. His risen Body is no longer subject to the laws of time and space. He comes we know not whence. He goes we know not whither. Now He stands in the midst of the Apostles (John xx. 19); now He vanishes out of their sight (Luke xxiv. 31). He knows now of no continued sojourn on earth. He "appears from time to time" (Acts i. 3); He "manifests" Himself to chosen witnesses, as seemeth Him good.

in another form] It is plain from St Luke xxiv. 16 that He was not at the time recognised. This appearance would seem to have been vouchsafed early in the afternoon of the day of the Resurrection.

unto two of them] The name of one was Cleopas = Cleopatros, not the Clopas of John xix. 25, and another whose name is not known. Some have conjectured it was Nathanael, others the Evangelist St Luke.

as they walked] from Jerusalem in the direction of the village of Emmaus. St Luke says it was sixty stadia (A.V. "threescore furlongs"), or about 7½ miles from Jerusalem. From the earliest period it was identified by Christian writers with the Emmaus on the border of the plain of Philistia, afterwards called Nicopolis (1 Macc. iii. 40), situated some 20 miles from Jerusalem. Afterwards it was identified with the little village of el-Kubeibe, about 3 miles west of the ancient Mizpeh, and 9 miles from Jerusalem. The true site has yet to be settled.

13. they went and told it unto the residue] No sooner did they recognise our Lord in the breaking of the bread (Luke xxiv. 35), and He had vanished out of their sight (Luke xxiv. 31), than they returned in haste to Jerusalem, ascended to the Upper Room, found ten of the Apostles met together (Luke xxiv. 33), and whereas they thought they alone were the bearers of joyful tidings, they were themselves greeted with joyful tidings, “The Lord has risen indeed, and appeared unto Simon” (Luke xxiv. 34; 1 Cor. xv. 5). When this appearance was vouchsafed to St Peter we are not told. It certainly occurred after the return from the sepulchre, but whether before or after the journey to Emmaus cannot be determined.

neither believed they them] The Ten, as we have just now seen, announced that the Lord had appeared to Simon, and this they at the time believed. When the two disciples arrive, they announce that He had appeared to them also. Unable to comprehend this new mode of existence on the part of their risen Lord, that He could be now here and now there, they were filled with doubts. They had refused to believe the evidence of Mary Magdalene (Mark xvi. 11), and even now hesitation possessed them, and they could not give credence to the word of the two disciples. The Evangelists multiply proofs of the slowness of the Apostles to accept a truth so strange and unprecedented as their Lord’s resurrection, and that not to a continuous sojourn, as in the case of Lazarus, but to a form of life which was manifested only from time to time, and was invested with new powers, new properties, new attributes. The Resurrection, it is to be remembered, was unlike (a) any of the recorded miracles of raising from the dead, (b) any of the legends of Greece or Rome. It was “not a restoration to the old life, to its wants, to its inevitable close, but the revelation of a new life, foreshadowing new powers of action and a new mode of being.” See Westcott’s Gospel of the Resurrection, pp. 154—160.

14—18. THE APPEARANCE TO THE ELEVEN.

14. Afterward] That is on the evening of the day of the Resurrection, when the two disciples returning from Emmaus had recounted their tale of joy, and the others had told them of the appearance to St Peter.

as they sat at meat] On this occasion, when they were terrified at His sudden appearing (Luke xxiv. 37), and thought they were looking at a of heart, because they believed not them which had seen him after he was risen. And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned. And these signs shall fol-

hardness of heart] Compare His words (a) after the feeding of the Five and Four Thousand, and (b) to the disciples journeying towards Emmaus, Luke xxiv. 25.

them which had seen him] Of the five appearances after the Resurrection vouchsafed on the world’s first Easter-Day four had already taken place before this interview. (i) To Mary Magdalene, (ii) to the other ministering women, (iii) to the two journeying to Emmaus, (iv) to St Peter.

15. And he said unto them] St John informs us that on this occasion the Risen Saviour breathed on the Apostles, and gave them a foretaste of the bestowal of the Holy Ghost, with power to remit sin and retain sin. St Mark tells us of very important words, which He went on to utter, anticipating the final charge recorded by St Matthew (Matt. xxviii, 16—20).

Go ye into all the world] Or, as it is expressed in St Matthew’s Gospel, “make disciples of all nations” (xxviii. 19), and comp. Luke xxiv. 47; Acts i. 8. Contrast these injunctions with those to the Twelve during His earthly ministry, Matt. x. 5, 6, “Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not: but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel.”

every creature] i.e. to the whole creation, the whole world of men, not Jews only or Samaritans, but Gentiles of all nations. Comp. Rom. viii. 21, 22.

16. He that believeth and is baptized] Not faith only, but baptism also is required by the Lord. Compare the words of Philip the deacon to the Ethiopian eunuch, Acts viii. 37.

he that believeth not] He addeth not and is baptized here. This would have been superfluous. He who refuses to believe will refuse to be baptized.

shall be damned] See note above, ch. xii. 40. He who wilfully rejects the Gospel message, when duly offered him, shall have no share in its saving mercies, but shall be left to the condemnation due to him for his sins.

17. And these signs] For this word applied to Miracles see note, ch. vi. 2.
low them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover.

19, 20. The Ascension.

So then after the Lord had spoken unto them, he was shall follow] Literally, shall proceed along with. The same word in the original is used by St Luke, i. 3, “It seemed good to me also, having had perfect understanding of all things” (literally, having carefully followed up).

them that believe] i.e. those that shall have believed, shall have adopted the Faith and been baptized.

In my name shall they cast out devils] As is afterwards recorded to have been done by Philip the deacon in Samaria (Acts viii. 7), by St Paul at Philippi (Acts xvi. 18) and Ephesus (Acts xix. 15, 16).

they shall speak with new tongues] as all the Apostles did on the day of Pentecost, and the Gentile friends of Cornelius (Acts x. 46), and the twelve disciples at Ephesus (Acts xix. 6), and many afterwards in the Church of Corinth (1 Cor. xii. 10).

18. they shall take up serpents] And so we read of St Paul shaking off the viper at Malta (Acts xxviii. 5), Comp. Luke x. 19.

and if they drink] As is related of St John that he drank the cup of hemlock which was intended to cause his death, and suffered no harm from it, and of Barsabas surnamed Justus (Eusebius, Eccl. Hist. III. 39).

they shall lay hands on the sick] As St Peter did on the lame man at the Beautiful Gate of the Temple (Acts iii. 7), and St Paul on Publius in the island of Malta (Acts xxviii. 8). “Gifts of healing” are mentioned both by this last Apostle (1 Cor. xii. 9) and by St James (v. 14, 15) as remaining in the Church.

19, 20. THE ASCENSION.

19. So then after the Lord] Some MSS. here insert the word Jesus. Combined with Lord, it would be a term of reverence.

spoken unto them] This does not mean immediately after our Lord had uttered the last words, but after He had on different occasions during the “Great Forty Days” spoken unto them of “the things pertaining to the kingdom of God” (Acts i. 3). The original word here rendered “had spoken unto them” has a much wider signification. It signifies to teach, to instruct by preaching and other oral communication. Compare its use in Mark xiii. 11; John ix. 29, “We know that God spake unto Moses,” i.e. held communications with Moses; John xv. 22, “If I had not come,” says our Lord, “and spoken unto them,” i.e. preached to them. So that here it denotes after our Lord had during the forty days fully instructed His Apostles by His oral teaching in all things appertaining to His kingdom and the planting of His Church.

20 And they went forth, and preached every where, the Lord

he was received] The original word only occurs here in the Gospels. It is applied three times in the Acts (i. 2, 11, 22) to the Ascension, and is so applied by St Paul, 1 Tim. iii. 16, "received up into glory."

into heaven] What St Mark records thus concisely in his short practical Gospel for the busy, active, Christians of Rome, St Luke has related at much greater length. From him we learn how one day the Lord bade His Apostles accompany Him along the road from Jerusalem towards Bethany and the Mount of Olives; how, full of hopes of a temporal kingdom, they questioned Him as to the time of its establishment; how their inquiries were solemnly silenced (Acts i. 7); and how then after He had bestowed upon them His last abiding blessing, while His Hands were yet uplifted in benediction (Luke xxiv. 50, 51), "He began to be parted from them, and a cloud received Him out of their sight."

and sat on the right hand of God] The Session at the right Hand of God, recorded only by St Mark, forms a striking and appropriate conclusion to his Gospel, and "conveys to the mind a comprehensive idea of Christ's Majesty and Rule." Our Lord was "taken up," and bore our redeemed humanity into the very presence of God, into "the place of all places in the universe of things, in situation most eminent, in quality most holy, in dignity most excellent, in glory most illustrious, the inmost sanctuary of God's temple above" (Barrow's Sermon on the Ascension). There, having led "captivity captive, and received gifts for men" (Ps. lxviii. 18; Eph. iv. 8), He sat down on the right Hand of God, by which expression we are to understand that in the heaven of heavens He now occupies the place of greatest honour, of most exalted majesty, and of most perfect bliss, and that God hath conferred upon Him all preeminence of dignity, power, favour, and felicity. See Pearson on the Creed, Art. vi.

20. And they] i.e. the Apostles.

went forth] Not immediately. They were commanded not to "depart from Jerusalem," but to "tarry" there until at Pentecost they should be endowed with power from on high (Luke xxiv. 49; Acts i. 4). But when the day of Pentecost had come, and the Comforter had been bestowed, they went forth on their career of conquest, and preached every where] St Mark himself when he wrote his Gospel had witnessed the spread of the Church from Babylon in the distant East to the City of the Seven Hills in the West.

the Lord working with them] according to His promise, "Behold I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." The word translated "working with them" only occurs here in the Gospels, but is used by St Paul, Rom. viii. 28, "all things work together for good to them that love God;" 1 Cor. xvi. 16, "to every one that helpeth with us;" 2 Cor. vi. 1, "we then as workers together with Him, beseech you also that ye receive not the grace of God in vain;" and by St James (ii. 22), "seest thou how faith wrought with his works?"

confirming] The original word here employed denotes (1) to make firm to the tread, (2) to make steadfast, (3) to establish, confirm. It occurs nowhere else in the Gospels, but it is found five times in St Paul's Epistles, and twice in the Epistle to the Hebrews. Thus St Paul writes to the Romans (xv. 8), "Jesus Christ was a minister of the circumcision....to confirm the promises made unto the fathers;" and to the Corinthians (i. 8) that God will "confirm them unto the end, that they may be blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ;" and to the same Church again (2 Cor. i. 21), "now he which stablisheth us with you....is God;" and he exhorts the Colossians (ii. 6, 7), "to walk, rooted and built up in [Jesus Christ], and stablished in the faith." And for illustrations of the confirmation of the Apostolic commission compare (i) Acts iv. 29, 30; (ii) Acts v. 12; (iii) Acts xiv. 3.

following] The original word thus rendered denotes more than merely to follow, and = to follow close upon, to follow in the track of another. St Paul uses it in 1 Tim. v. 10, speaking of the condition of a "widow indeed," "if she had diligently followed every good work;" and in 1 Tim. v. 24, "Some men's sins are open beforehand....and some men they follow after." St Peter uses the word in one place (1 Pet. ii. 21), "Christ also suffered for you, leaving you an example, that ye should follow His steps." The word is very expressive here, and denotes that the "signs" followed close upon, and were the immediate result of, the continued operation of Him, Who, clad in majesty ineffable, sitteth at the right hand of God, and hath promised to be with His Church "even unto the end of the world" (Matt. xxviii. 20). The Evangelist does not conceive of Christ's Session as a state of inactive rest. (i) As the High Priest of His Church He pleads with the Father the merits of His wondrous sacrifice (Rom. viii. 34; Heb. iv. 14; vii. 25; 1 John ii. 2). (ii) As the Prophet, He teaches, inspires, and guides His Church into all truth (Deut. xviii. 15; Luke xxiv. 19). (iii) As King of kings and Lord of lords, He sways the destinies of the universe, and employs the agency of heaven and earth for the government and defence of His people, till He shall have subdued all things unto Himself (Phil. iii. 21), and the last enemy, even death, shall be destroyed (1 Cor. xv. 26), and the victory, for which all Creation waits, shall be finally and completely won (Rom. viii. 10-23).

Amen] This is wanting in the best MSS. For some remarks respecting the apotheosis of the Cæsars at the era of the Ascension, see Abp Trench's Hulsean Lectures, and compare the striking fact that "on public buildings at Ephesus, Augustus is found, from inscriptions on recently discovered buildings there, to have been described by the singular title Tîos Theòs, "Son of God." With this revelation of the great Conqueror, the true divus Cæsar, seated at the right hand of God—of which glorious reality the divine honours paid to the emperors at the very time he was writing from Rome were the dark shadow—the second Evangelist brings his Gospel to a close. He has portrayed the Son of Man and the Son of God as He wrought on earth, in all the fulness of His living Energy, "going about doing good" (Acts x. 38); He leaves us to realize, and realizing to believe in, His continued operation in the very heaven of heavens, in behalf of His Church and the Humanity He came to save.

"The golden censer in His hand,
He offers hearts from every land,
Tied to His own by gentlest band
Of silent love:
In act to move."
