that Jael was inside the tent, and therefore probably out of sight: for she came out to meet Sisera.

I notice with regret the theological bias which, lying on the surface of his paper, hides from the writer the extreme unlike­ness of his explanation. This is revealed in the "sense of relief and gratitude" with which he welcomes Captain Conder's sug­gestion. A real explanation of Deborah's commendation of Jael's treachery would be indeed welcome to many. But we must care­fully sift all relief offered, and ruthlessly reject whatever fails under our scrutiny. Many Bible difficulties test most severely our loyalty to strict scientific methods. But, in time, truth will vindicate itself. And to wait for that vindication is the only course worthy of the servants of Him who said, "I am the Truth."

NOTE ON PERSONAL "REMINISCENCES OF EDWARD IRVING" BY THE WRITER OF THEM.

In the September Expositor (p. 220) an expression occurs re­garding Mr. A. J. Scott's religious beliefs which I regret having used. It expressed indeed what information from more than one quarter seemed to put beyond doubt. But even if so, it had better have been unsaid of one of rare ability and undoubted sincerity in everything. From information since received I have been led to understand that those who are themselves very true Christians, and knew Mr. Scott well in his later days, regarded him in an entirely different light from what is there expressed. To me this is a far more pleasant recollection of Mr. Scott than that which my information had unhappily left; and as I gladly embrace it, I could wish the expression deleted.
