In considering the problem of the Second Epistle of St. John we shall make the word ἐκλέκτη (verse 1) our starting-point.

Assuming, as we fairly may, that ἐκλέκτης in the closing verse is used in the same sense as in verse 1, we observe that the occurrence of this word at the beginning and at the end of 2 John finds a close parallel in 1 Peter, in which ἐκλεκτοῖς is used at the beginning, συνεκλέκτη at the end. The parallel is seen to be still closer when it is observed that the word occurs in both Epistles in the salutations. That the συν in συνεκλέκτη in 1 Peter is to be taken as referring to ἐκλεκτοῖς will appear only natural if we suppose that the closing salutation was composed with conscious reference to that with which the Epistle had opened. When we consider the importance of the communication which the Apostle had to make, and that it was destined to be circulated over a large area, careful attention to form, especially at the beginning and at the end, is seen to be natural under the circumstances. Even a certain elaborateness of style and phrase is a priori probable. To hold that the closing salutation of 1 Peter was written with reference to the opening greeting involves little more than to suppose that it was written, not, as in a private letter, with unstudied spontaneity, but consciously and with deliberation. If then the συν in συνεκλέκτη refers to ἐκλεκτοῖς, the parallel with 2 John is seen to be complete.

It follows that the problem before us is not so much

1 An upward movement of the eyes to the top of the scroll would suffice.
2 How far the Apostle would be responsible for this himself we need not inquire.
3 So Lightfoot, Clement of Rome, ii. 491, quoted by Bigg, St. Peter and St. Jude, p. 77.
what is the meaning of ἐκλεκτὴ in 2 John i. as why did St. Peter and St. John make use of this particular word?

In determining this question we turn to ἐκλεκτὸς in 1 Peter i. 1.

Now ἐκλεκτὸς occurs along with ἁγιοι and ἡγαπημένοι in Colossians iii. 12, and is there explained by Bishop Lightfoot to be a term "transferred from the Old Covenant to the New." That this is also the explanation in 1 Peter i. 1 will be apparent when we consider that both παρετιθέμενος and διασπορᾶς are adapted from the Old Testament. There can be no question that the primary associations of ἐκλεκτὸς were Jewish. But if ἡ...συνεκλεκτὴ refers to ἐκλεκτὸς, as has been shown to be probably the case, then the associations of ἡ...συνεκλεκτὴ will also be Jewish, much more so those of ἡ ἐν Βαβυλῶνι συνεκλεκτὴ. For to say that by "Babylon" was signified "Rome" does not alter the fact that the associations of Babylon were primarily Jewish, and that in the case of any one familiar enough with the Jewish Scriptures to understand the opening words of the Epistle, the mention of Babylon could hardly fail to suggest the thought of the Captivity. We conclude that the atmosphere of the closing salutation, as of the opening, is Jewish.

In answering therefore the question who is intended by "the woman" implied in ἡ συνεκλεκτὴ, we turn naturally to the Old Testament.

Now it is characteristic of the prophets that while they constantly address the inhabitants of Jerusalem in the plural number, they hardly less frequently speak of Jerusalem under the figure of a woman. We find this in Isaiah (liv. lv.), Jeremiah (iv. 30-end, vi. 2, vii. 29, xiv. 17, xxii. 13, xxii. 20, etc.), and Ezekiel (xvi. and xxiii.); also in Hosea

(ch. ii.), Micah (iv. 8, 10, 13), Zephaniah (iii. 1, 10, 14) and Zechariah (ii. 7, 10, ix. 9). Even Amos, the herdman of Tekoa, uses it (v. 1). The figure was clearly part of what may be described as the common stock of prophetic imagery. Nor is it confined to the Canonical Books. We meet with it in the book of Baruch (see chaps. iv. and v.).

Reserving for the moment a more thorough investigation of the treatment of this figure in the prophetical writings, we must draw attention to the fact that when the term ἐκλεκτοὶ was applied by St. Peter to Christians, it was applied to people who were actually members of a number of separate communities. Not that he is to be supposed as thinking of his readers in this way, but that it was none the less the fact that in one important respect the circumstances of the Jewish nation had not been reproduced in the case of Christianity. What is meant is that it was no longer possible to gather up individual Christians into a collective whole and address them as an individual without including all Christians in every place. In the case before us St. Peter could not (had he desired to do so) have made use of the figure of a woman in addressing the Christians to whom he was writing. But there was nothing to prevent his transferring the figure to a particular community of Christians. This transference would be helped partly by the fact that other communities besides the Jewish were spoken of under the figure of a woman, e.g. Samaria and Sodom (Ezek. xvi. and xxiii.), Egypt (Jer. xlvi. 44); partly too, in the case before us, by the designation of the city from which he wrote as "Babylon." To speak of a woman in Babylon was to speak in language which at once recalled such expressions as "the captive daughter of Zion." No Jewish Christian would find difficulty in understanding why St. Peter had chosen such an expression, for was it not true that the relation of the chosen people to Babylon was only too faithfully reproduced in the relation of a Christian Church to a heathen city?

From 1 Peter we pass again to 2 John. And we begin by noting with regard to ἐκλεκτῇ (1) that the absence of the article is paralleled by its omission before ἐκλεκτοῖς in 1 Peter i. 1, (2) the feminine termination by συνεκλεκτῇ in 1 Peter v. 13. We observe also that ἐκλεκτῇ by itself would be perfectly good Greek for "To an elect woman."

Leaving ἐκλεκτῇ we ask what is the meaning of κυρία? The chief point is that κυρία is not a substantive but an epithet. The use of κύριος as an epithet is common not only in the Old Testament but in profane Greek. Thus we find it applied (with the article) as a title to certain gods and goddesses (e.g. θυ Κύριος to ten gods, e.g. once to Kronos, ten times to Hermes, etc.; ἡ κυρία to five goddesses, e.g. three times to Artemis, thirty-two to Isis, etc., C.I.G. Index iii.). We also find it (without the article) in an inscription: Λ(υγόουσα) κυρίας Ἀγριπεινας, C.I.G. 7061, and (as was shown by Professor Rendel Harris in the Expositor for March, 1901) in more than one place in the Oxyrhynchus papyri, e.g. κυρία μου Σερπνία and κυρία μου νιό (quoted on page 197). The use of κύριε and κυρία in the vocative is also obviously adjectival. We reserve for a moment the question as to the precise shade of meaning to be given to κυρία and κυρία in 2 John. What we wish to emphasize is that κυρία can quite well be taken as an epithet. Can ἐκλεκτῇ κυρίᾳ, taken as two epithets, stand? Unquestionably. The meaning will be "To an elect woman". Something like this is found in an inscription (C.I.G. 3858) in which one Nicias is described as a priest Σεβαστῆς Εὐβούσιας. Here Εὐβούσιας (an epithet

1 The letters within the brackets are conjectural.
2 Or we may say that ἐκλεκτῇ is practically equivalent to a substantive, and is qualified by κυρία.
3 We purposely avoid the rendering "lady."
of Demeter) corresponds to ἐκλεκτή, Σεβαστῆς to κυρία. The instances are not quite parallel, inasmuch as Ἐυβουνίας is the epithet of a particular individual, ἐκλεκτὴ is a generic epithet. But the collocation is instructive, since in each case we have a distinctive title joined with a general title.

We pass on to consider the words καὶ τοῖς τέκνοις αὐτῆς. Now it has been felt by some that the presence of these words is an indication that the writer of 2 John was addressing a literal individual. The rendering “lady” has helped in the same direction. With a western mind the insertion of “and to her children” does certainly carry weight. It is to be remembered however that for anything we know to the contrary the readers of this Epistle were as familiar with the Jewish Scriptures as we have seen reason to believe the readers of 1 Peter to have been. Assuming that this was the case, we proceed to draw attention to the fact that in the prophets the metaphor of a woman referred to above is treated with considerable elasticity. We may distinguish two groups of passages. In one group the woman is thought of as a daughter (LXX., θυγατρὶς as in Zechariah ii. 7, 10, etc.). In the other group the woman appears as a mother with her children. The two passages which the present writer has studied are Isaiah liv., lv., and Baruch iv., v.; in both cases the figure underlies the whole passage. Now a close scrutiny of the language in these two passages makes it evident that three varieties of expression are used according to the point of view of the writers. (1) Usually they speak of a mother and her children. But (2) they sometimes speak of the mother only, as in Isaiah lv. 5. And (3) they sometimes speak of the children only. See, for example, Isaiah liv. 13,

1 Σεβαστῆς was also applied to mortals, e.g. the wife of Septimus Severus is styled Σεβαστῆ.

2 Cf. fact that there are quotations in 1 Peter from eight chapters of Isaiah; also from Hosea, Jeremiah, Daniel, etc. (See the list in W. and H., one vol. edition, p. 607).
THE SECOND EPISODE OF ST. JOHN.

Καὶ πάντας τοὺς νόιον σου διδάκτους Θεοῦ, καὶ ἐν πολλῇ εἰρήνῃ τὰ τέκνα σου. In Baruch iv. 25 we have a verse in which varieties (2) and (3) occur in close proximity. The words are: Τέκνα μακροθυμήσατε τὴν παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐπελθοῦσαν ὑμῖν ὄργην, κατείδωξε σὲ ὁ ἔχθρος, καὶ οὖσε, etc. Now in regard to these varieties it is clear that while the figure in its completeness includes both mother and children, yet that since the mother implies the children and the children the mother one or other of the parts of the figure may be used. One more point must be noticed in the two passages before us, viz. that the figure is frequently dropped and then resumed. In Isaiah lv. the figure appears only in the 5th and in the 11th verse (Ἐθνή ὁ οὐκ οἴδασί σε . . . and εὐδοκῶσω τὰς ὁδοὺς σου). In the last verse of chapter liv. the figure is dropped at the end of the verse, and we read: καὶ ἤμεις ἐσεσθέ μοι δίκαιοι. Contrast this with the opening words of the verse, πᾶν σκεῦος σκευαστῶν ἐπὶ σὲ . . .

Turning to the Second Epistle of St. John we find (1) that the opening salutation is sent to a woman and her children, and that both the mother and the children are referred to in the 4th verse. (2) That in the 5th and 13th verses the woman only is brought before us. (3) That in the 13th verse a greeting is sent from the children only of the elect sister. Thus we find in 2 John phenomena which correspond with those which we have observed in Isaiah and in Baruch.

We also observe that from verses 5 (last sentence) -12, i.e. in the main part of the Epistle, the plural is used throughout, the figure entirely disappearing. In regard to this it is worth noting that where the writer uses the first person plural in verses 5 and 6 (ἀγαπῶμεν, περιπατῶμεν) he is identifying himself with those whom he is addressing. This is clear from the transition to the second person plural which immediately follows in verse 6 (καθὼς ἥκουσατε ἀπ’ and finds an exact parallel in the similar use of the first person plural in the First Epistle, e.g. iii. 11 (ὅτι αὐτῇ ἐστὶν ἡ ἀγγελία ἦν ἥκούσατε ἀπ’ ἀρχῆς, ἦν ἀγαπῶμεν ἀλλήλους) followed by the second person (ἡ θαυμάζετε) in verse 13, and again by the first person in verse 14.

1 Cf. also Baruch iv. 6, 7. 2 On τῆς ἀδελφῆς see below.

Before drawing a conclusion we may linger a moment on the 13th verse of the Epistle. It has been noticed as strange that the closing salutation contains no greeting to the children of verse 1, and no greeting from the sister. The words are, Ἀσπάζεται σε τὰ τέκνα τῆς ἀδελφῆς σου τῆς ἐκκλησίας. With the passages in the prophets before us the difficulty vanishes. The σε implies the children, the τέκνα (of the sister) imply their mother. If it be asked why St. John should not have written Ἀσπάζεται τὰ τέκνα σου ἡ ἀδελφή, etc., the answer is that he might have done so, but that since the mother had been addressed in the 4th and 5th verses it was more natural to select the mother for greeting in the 13th also. This being so, Baruch iv. 32 is suggestive, where the words are Δείλαι τι πόλεις αἰς ἐδούλευσαν τὰ τέκνα σου, δείλαια ἡ δεξαμένη τοὺς νιόν σου. Here the one city (i.e. Babylon) is described as a woman who receives the children of the other (Jerusalem). We submit that in 2 John 13 the choice of the expression τὰ τέκνα τῆς ἀδελφῆς, rather than ἡ ἀδελφή, is merely a matter of style.

We have already implied that we regard “the sister” also as a woman representing a Church. Nor need there be any difficulty about this view if we remember that the figure, as used by the prophets, was not limited to Jerusalem. The instances quoted above from Ezekiel are specially instructive, viz. chapter xvi., where Samaria and Sodom are spoken of as sisters (LXX., ἀδελφαί) of Jerusalem (vv. 46 and 55), and chapter xxiii., where Jerusalem and Samaria appear as sisters (v. 4, where again ἀδελφαί is the word).

From all these correspondences with the prophetic writings we draw the conclusion (which was suggested by our study of ἡ ἣν...συνεκλεκτή) that in 2 John as in 1 Peter the prophetic figure of a woman to represent a community has been transferred to a Christian Church.

We may now decide the precise shade of meaning to be given to κυρία and κυρία. In view of the conclusion at which we have just arrived, we do not hesitate to take this word as a title of dignity. With regard to the instances adduced from the papyri in the article referred to above, we submit that, however valuable they are as illustrating the adjectival use of the word κύριος in letters, they cannot be regarded as proving that it was impossible for the word to be used formally, i.e. as a title of dignity. We might with equal justice argue that, because "sir" and "my lady" are sometimes used with us in an informal and half playful sense, they can therefore never be used as formal titles. To take the word as a title expressing respect is in harmony (1) with the use of κύριος and κυρία (with the article) applied to gods and goddesses; (2) with the use of κύριε in such passages as John xii. 21, xvi. 30; (3) with the frequent use of κυρία in the Shepherd of Hermas (the γυνὴ to whom it is used by Hermas is πρεσβυτία); (4) with the inscription quoted above, with which may be compared the later use of Δόμνα as a title, e.g., of the wife of Septimius Severus, who is styled Ἱούλια Δόμνα Σεβαστή (cf. also 1 Pet. iii. 6, κύριον αὐτῶν καλοῦσα, and the passage from Ἑπίκτητος quoted in Grimm's Lexicon). It is not so easy to fix upon a translation of κυρία; neither "respected" nor "esteemed" really represents the meaning adequately, though both renderings come near the sense.

If the conclusion at which we have arrived be the correct one, it would seem that the truest description of 2 John is to call it a Prophetic Epistle, i.e. the (deliberately thought out and carefully composed) utterance of one who realized that he was a successor of the prophets of the Old Covenant, and who framed his message after their manner. Nor will this seem improbable when we consider the resemblance which the messages conveyed in the Epistles to the Seven Churches bear to many of the prophetic utterances. Still less improbable will it seem when we consider that the very circumstances of the diffusion of Christianity gave a new importance to the Epistle as a means of conveying the truth of God.

In Jeremiah¹ we have a Prophetic Epistle written to the exiles in Babylon. In 1 Peter we have a Prophetic Epistle written to “sojourners of the dispersion.” And we submit that the same is true of the Second Epistle of St. John also, and that, as in the Apocalypse so in the Epistle, the voice is the voice of a Prophet.

NOTES ON THE TEXT OF THE PSALMS.

69. 11. read ארהו (which is a less change than אעש). This appears to have been the reading of the Syr. as in 10. 10.

69. 21. read אן חיה קרו ואנשחה ואנקה. This reading would favour the hypothesis that the Psalm is Jeremiah’s [see the Academy, vol. i. p. 256].

69. 33. Read the verbs as imperatives.

71. 7. read כמיה נאם כנפה as in 31. 13, which Psalm is closely connected with 71.

71. 20. read מฯ ית ככסי י. or read ככסי י as in 18. 18, which would remove the difficulty.

71. 20. read [so Olshausen, Wellhausen, Duhm].
