Academy it was noticed some three or four months ago, and even then not too appreciatively. The professors went on with their lectures meantime, and still found means of assisting students "outside the formal way." The second volume appeared in 1890. Ad. Neubauer, F. H. Woods, G. H. Gwilliam, and W. Sanday, of those who wrote in the first, appear again. The new names are C. H. Turner, M.A.; C. Bigg, D.D.; Ll. J. M. Bebb, M.A.; and H. J. White, M.A. The preface is signed by S. R. Driver, T. K. Cheyne, and W. Sanday.

They speak of it as a publication which has but little prospect of being remunerative. They have learned this since the first came out. But they are not disappointed. Studia Biblica is not a popular publication. It is not by it that England will be shaken and a new Oxford movement take visible shape before all men's eyes. The points discussed in Studia Biblica are too minute and technical for that. But they know that "it is just these minor points which often furnish the clue for wider investigations, and so either change the face of familiar history or enable us to penetrate into regions hitherto unexplored." Of the Oxford movement of to-day the original as well as most characteristic exponent is not Lux Mundi but Studia Biblica.

THE GREAT TEXT OF FIRST CORINTHIANS.

1 Cor. xvi. 13.

"Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong."

EXPOSITION.

In these four vigorous exhortations, together with that in ver. 14, the Apostle sums up the whole duty of the Corinthian converts in the trying times, and amid the varied temptations in which this epistle would find them. That duty is set forth as involving five different graces:-(1) Watchfulness; spiritual brightness and alacrity, opposed to "sleeping" (1 Thess. v. 6), (2) Stedfastness in the faith, ever a sure test whether baptismal grace is working within; contrast 2 Thess. ii. 12, "Had pleasure in unrighteousness." (3) Christian manliness; Vulgate, viriliter agile. (4) Spiritual
