The Holy Spirit in the Old and New Testaments

Jack C. Whytock

Preface

What follows is the skeleton of a lecture given for the African Pastors’ Conference held in the Eastern Cape, South Africa in 2013. Skeletons were once required for submission as part of yearly trials or examinations for the ministry. This skeleton focuses upon the theme of the Holy Spirit in the Old and New Testaments. The skeleton or outline has as its goal to summarize, systematize, and to survey the subject. Relevant Scripture references are included. This is not exhaustive but hopefully will help one conduct their own study on the subject. Each point and sub-point could form the basis for a study class or sermon. A select bibliography has been placed at the end of the skeleton for further study. Also, a separate section has been included as a reference to the great evangelical and Reformed Confessions/Catechisms and newer Statements of Faith.

Select Bibliography

An excellent entry-level article to read as an overview on the subject, before readers explore the wider range of written materials on the subject, is J. I. Packer’s article in The New Dictionary of Theology:

Comments have been kept to a minimum on the entries which follow as most titles are self-explanatory. I have only made comment to clarify when needed.
