Daniel viii. 9–14.

PROF. G. F. MOORE.

ANDOVER, MASS.

In vs. 10 we read: “And it (the horn) waxed great, even to the host of heaven; and it cast to the earth some of the host and of the stars, and trampled on them.” The interpretation which has obtained, almost without dissent, from the earliest commentators to our own time is, that the host of heaven here symbolizes the Jews, as the people of God; and that, by the casting down of some of the host and trampling on them, the religious persecution of the Jews by Antiochus Epiphanes is meant.¹ No distinction is intended between the host and the stars; most modern scholars take the conjunction explicatively, even the stars.²

That the host of heaven should stand in this way for the Jewish people is strange, even in the symbolism of these visions, and without any parallel in the Old Testament.³ But the decisive argument against this interpretation seems to me to be found in the following verses. In vs. 11 f. the horn in its pitch of pride attacks even the ruler of the host. Here נבער הוא, as most interpreters have rightly felt, cannot be the head of the Jewish people;⁴ it is God himself. The analogy of וָנָּבָר, and the author's predilection for such titles as God of Heaven, Lord of Heaven, King of Heaven, show

¹ So, with differences in details which need not be discussed here, Ephrem (specifically, the priesthood), Polychronius, Jerome, Theodoret. This is also the Jewish exegesis, the earliest witness to which is perhaps the Targ. Isa. xiv. 13; see Rashi, Aben Ezra, al.
² Chr. B. Michaelis.
³ It is quite a different thing when it is promised that the descendants of Abraham shall be as (numerous as) the stars (Gen. xxii. 17, adduced by Jewish commentators); or when it is said that wise and good men shall shine as the stars forever (Dan. xii. 3; cf. Enoch civ. 2; Matt. xiii. 43).
⁴ Ephrem, consistently with his interpretation of vs. 10, the High Priest, Onias III. So also Grotius, Houbigant; cf. Gall. According to Polychronius, the angel set over the Jewish people; so also Aben Ezra (Michael). that the name is not equivalent to ‘the Divine Ruler of the Jewish people’, but signifies ‘the God who does according to his will in the host of heaven,’ as among the inhabitants of the earth (iv. 32); the Supreme Ruler (םיינש וּלְוָי, vs. 25). The host of heaven in vs. 10 are, therefore, as elsewhere, the heavenly bodies, especially as the objects of heathen worship, and as the celestial rulers of the heathen world.

The full significance and climactic force of the passage comes to light when we understand it thus. Antiochus extends his empire by conquest toward the South (Egypt) and the East (Media and Persia); he makes war, not only on kingdoms and nations, but on their religions, and actually overthrows some of their gods; he even dares to attack the Supreme God, to profane his altar and inhibit his worship. This interpretation is sustained by the parallel passage, xi. 36 ff., where we read that Antiochus, in his arrogance, exalted himself against every god, and uttered monstrous things against the God of gods; that he had no regard for the god of his fathers, or for the great goddess, or for any other deity, but exalted himself against all; and that he was devoted to the worship of some new and foreign divinity. In 1 Mac. i. 41 f. the suppression of the religion of the Jews is represented as part of the general imperial policy. The king issued a decree to all his empire, that all should be one people, and each nation should give up its distinctive religious institutions ( valida). According to some reports the death of Antiochus was the direct or indirect consequence of a sacrilegious attack upon the temple of the goddess Nanaea in Elymais.

This explanation is not at variance with vs. 23 ff. Unlike the preceding verses, 20–22, which are explicit enough, this part of the interpretation of the vision is somewhat enigmatical, and the obscurity is enhanced by the palpable corruption of the text. But the most natural exegesis is that which refers שְׁאוֹל, vs. 24, to the powerful Gentile nations or rulers which Antiochus conquered, in distinction from “the holy people”; here also the climax is the attack on the Supreme Ruler (שְׁאוֹל). The crimes of Antiochus against religion are 5 Theodoret.

6 See Isa. xxiv. 21 ff.; Enoch lxxv. ff.; cf. also Deut. iv. 19, xxxii. 8. This was the oldest interpretation of the verse, if we may judge from the translation of the LXX. and the allusion in 2 Mac. ix. 10. In modern times it has been maintained by Smend, Z.A.T.W. iv. 201, Altt testamentliche Religionsgeschichte, p. 395.

not emphasized in vs. 23-25 as they are in the vision; but the accord is otherwise complete.

At the beginning of vs. 12 the word קזָאָא creates insuperable difficulties. Its gender forbids us to take it as the subject of the verb; yet no other construction is possible. Nor should we gain much if we were bold enough to ignore the grammatical discord, or to bring the verb into agreement. For after the repeated use of the word in vs. 10 f. (ֵֽֽקֶּזֶּזֶּא, ֵֽֽקֶּזֶּזֶּא, ֵֽֽקֶּזֶּזֶּא), it is only a desperate exegesis which can ascribe to קזָאָא in vs. 12 a wholly different significance, whether 'military force' or 'priestly service.' Even thus, commentators have been unable to make sense of the passage, as a glance at the various renderings proposed suffices to show. The most recent interpreters therefore give up the verse as incurably corrupt. Neither LXX. nor Theod. renders the word; and Bertholdt (1808) cancelled it as an accidental intruder. At the end of vs. 13 קזָאָא is grammatically unobjectionable, but the exegetical difficulty is the same as in vs. 12; here also it is not found in LXX. The conjecture may perhaps be hazarded that in both places the word was originally written קזָאָא, and intended as a gloss to the preceding, שֵּׁדֶּא, שְׁדֵּא. Thus in vs. 11: and overthrew the seat of his sanctuary [and the delectable sc. land]; in vs. 13: How long shall . . . the holy place [and delectable land] be trodden under foot? After the repetition of קזָאָא in vs. 10, a scribe might very easily write קזָאָא instead of קזָאָא at the end of vs. 12; vs. 13 would then be conformed.

In vs. 11 the masc. gender of the verbs would not in itself give us any difficulty; we might say that the author was thinking, not of the symbol (ךֵֽֽכֶּדֶּא fem.), but of the thing symbolized, Antiochus himself; but we should not expect him to fall back into the feminine again, as our text does in vs. 12. The tense of קזָאָא is more serious; for the proper sequence is otherwise preserved. If the verse be 9 This difficulty may not be removed by attributing a 'double sense' to קזָאָא in vs. 10 f., as even Bevan, following older commentators, feels constrained to do.

10 Bevan; Marti, in Kautzsch, A.T.

11 What Hebrew word, if any, is represented in both these places by LXX. ἐφημωθησεται does not appear.

12 See vs. 9 end; xi. 41, 45; Jer. iii. 19; Ezek. xx. 6, etc.

13 Cf. 1 Mac. ii. 12, τὰ δυνάμει καὶ ἡ καλλονὴ ἡμῶν καὶ ἡ δύναμις ἡμῶν ἐφημωθήθη. Smend thinks that קזָאָא is genuine in vs. 13.

14 The Heb. manuscript from which Theod. translated had the same error at the end of vs. 9: ποῦ τῆς δύναμος is קזָאָא פָּרָה. See also Vg. contra fortitudinem.

genuine, as both the sequel and the interpretation in vs. 24–26 seem to imply, we must make bold to read מַעַל הַמַּעַל, מַעַל הַמַּעַל. 16

In vs. 12, since we cannot, with LXX. and Theod., make מַעַל (masc.) subject of מַעַל, and this verb would naturally have the same subject as those before it in vs. 11 and מַעַל in vs. 12b, we are led to emend, מַעַל הַמַּעַל, and it (the horn) put on the daily sacrifice the Iniquity. The reference is to the altar of Jupiter which Antiochus erected on the great altar of burnt-offering in the temple in Jerusalem, on which, instead of the daily sacrifice to Yahwe (דָּמוֹת), he offered sacrifice to the heathen deity. Vs. 13 (םָכְסָא שַמֵּשׁ) shows that the Iniquity is the same which elsewhere is called the Abomination (שַמֵּשׁ, etc.), that is, the altar or cult of Jupiter. 18 The perfects at the end of the verse, מַעַל הַמַּעַל, cannot well be either future 19 or frequentative. It may perhaps be suspected that the words have been repeated here from vs. 24 f.

In vs. 13 it is necessary to supply after מַעַל הַמַּעַל, מַעַל הַמַּעַל, 20 or better מַעַל הַמַּעַל, as in xii. 11; cf. I.XX. Theod., מַעַל הַמַּעַל.
21 The clauses are in apposition to מַעַל הַמַּעַל: For how long is the vision — the taking away of the daily sacrifice, and the setting up of the Desolating Iniquity, and the trampling under foot of the Holy Place? The position of the infinitives is unusual, but not impossible; compare Jer. x. 13, מַעַל הַמַּעַל.
22 It is possible that all after מַעַל הַמַּעַל may be a gloss from xii. 11; in which case there would be even less reason to stumble at the construction. 23 The use of infinitives in such a parenthetic recapitulation is less difficult to explain than the participles which many critics (following LXX. Theod.) would substitute for them.

16 See Vg., Syr. The passive pronunciation of the verbs in M. T. may have been occasioned by the discord in gender.
17 Cf. מַעַל in xi. 31, xii. 11. Gall conjectures, מַעַל הַמַּעַל. Kamphausen tries to save מַעַל at the beginning of the verse by reading, מַעַל מַעַל מַעַל מַעַל בָּאָב מַעַל בָּאָב.
18 See ix. 27, xi. 31, xii. 11.
19 These perf. led to the punctuation מַעַל הַמַּעַל in a future sense (cf. Vg.); see Driver, Tenses, p. 216.
20 Graetz; cf. מַעַל מַעַל vs. 11.
21 Bevan emends, מַעַל מַעַל; see also Kautzsch, A.T.: but this involves further changes in the text which seem to me unnecessary.
22 Cited by Hitzig; see also Ewald, LB. § 307 b.
23 The parallel to xii. 11 — whether xii. 13 is a gloss or not — prevents our adopting the conjecture of Bevan: מַעַל מַעַל מַעַל מַעַל מַעַל מַעַל מַעַל מַעַל.
Gall emends, מַעַל מַעַל מַעַל מַעַל מַעַל מַעַל מַעַל מַעַל.
