THE GREEK TRANSLATORS OF THE PROPHETICAL BOOKS.

In preceding numbers of the Journal I have given reasons for believing that the task of translating the books of Jeremiah and Ezekiel into Greek was in each case divided between two translators. The striking fact that the break in each book comes at nearly the halfway point suggested that this division of labour was the result of the collaboration of two contemporary translators. It must, however, be admitted that another explanation is not impossible, namely that the earliest Greek version of both books was an incomplete one, which was afterwards supplemented by another worker. The question as to which of these views is correct could only be decided by the discovery of some sure linguistical criteria for distinguishing a Greek translation made in the second century B.C. from a translation belonging to one of the succeeding centuries.

May we equate any of the four hands which we have traced in these two books? The second hand in Jeremiah (Jer. β) and the second hand in Ezekiel (Ez. β) each present certain distinctive features of their own, and can certainly not be equated, nor (apart from the reappearance of Jer. β in the book of Baruch) is there any trace of either of these two hands elsewhere in the prophetical books of the Greek Bible. But the earlier portion of the Greek Jeremiah (Jer. α) and the remaining portion of Ezekiel (Ez. α and γ) together with the version of the Minor Prophets show a considerable affinity in their vocabulary, which renders it not improbable that they were all produced at about the same time, if not actually by one and the same hand.

In dealing with large groups of books such as this, it is difficult to prove identity of translators. All that can be attempted here is to show that these books or portions of books have very many details in common, and that as translations they are sharply distinguished from the Greek Isaiah.

The following, though not unicus, must also be mentioned here: 39. 'at' omitted before 'placatus accipias,' R, 2956. 40. dispone (for 'disponas') R and Sacr. Godlguad (see Ménard, Notae, p. 15, Migne P. L. lxviii 276). 41. Simile modo Bo, Gell. 42. novi acterni testamenti, R, S, Gell (and Bergamo MS of Ambros.). 43. effunditur Bo, Gell. 44. praecellae majestatis Bo, Gell, 45. benedices et praestas, Bo, Gell. 46. opem misericordiae, Bo, Gell.

1 J. T. S. vol. iv, pp. 245 ff., 398 ff.
With regard to the Minor Prophets, the discovery of the two hands in Jeremiah and the two in Ezekiel had led me to expect to find a similar division of labour in this group also. In this, however, I have been disappointed. The Greek versions of the Minor Prophets are linked together by the recurrence in the opening and closing books and throughout the collection of certain rare words and usages. I have failed to detect any clear indication of the work of more than one hand. The following are some instances of words and uses which occur in more than one of the Minor Prophets but not elsewhere in the LXX.

1. Aποστολάκειν (Am.\(^1\) Jl.\(^1\)): ἀρτῆ = ῥύθ (Hb.\(^1\) Zech.\(^1\)): διώκειν = ἔρυθ (Am.\(^1\) Hb.\(^3\) Hg.\(^1\)): κατακοβάλεισθ (Am.\(^1\))—κατοβαλεῖσθ (Am.\(^1\) Mal.\(^1\))—κατοβαλεῖσθ (Zeph.\(^1\)):

2. Πρόβαλεια (Am.\(^1\) Zeph.\(^1\)): σκοπῶς as the equivalent for ἡράβος 'a first-ripe fig' (Ho. ix 10, Na. iii 12): χίος = Μί (Mi.\(^1\) Zech.\(^1\)).

A noteworthy connecting link between the versions of Jeremiah and the Minor Prophets is found in their rendering of the Divine name 'Lord of hosts' (יְהֹוָה הַשָּׁמְשֹׁת), a phrase in the rendering of which a well-marked distinction in the books of the LXX may be observed. It is rendered (1) Κύριος σαβαὼκ in 1 Kings (five times), and Isaiah (about fifty-seven times)\(^1\), (2) Κύριος τῶν διώκεων in the Psalms (passim) and in some few passages elsewhere, (3) Κύριος Παρηγγέλτωρ in Jeremiah (in both parts, about fifteen times in all: in numerous instances the phrase 'Lord of hosts' occurs in the Hebrew where it is omitted in the Greek), the Minor Prophets (Hos. Am. Mic. Na. Hab. Zeph. Hag. Zech. Mal.), in some few passages in 2 and 3 Kings and 1 Chron., and in the Greek books. The Hebrew phrase, it should be noted, is absent from Ezekiel. In this case, it will be seen, Jeremiah \(\alpha\) and \(\beta\) are not distinguished from each other.

I have already in Table I in my first paper\(^4\) noted several instances where the first portion of Jeremiah agrees in its renderings with Ezekiel (the agreement is usually confined to Ezekiel \(\alpha\) and \(\gamma\)) and the Minor Prophets. Thus, in the second of the instances there quoted, we find that the two words τάσσειν and ἀφανεῖσθ (Zeph. xiii 2 (om. σαβ. AQ), Jer. xxvi 10 AQ (om. σαβ. BN)).

that the version of Isaiah had been already made, and that the rest of the prophetic group or the bulk of it was then translated en bloc. It is quite possible that a closer examination than I have yet made will reveal divergences of rendering within the group, but the general agreement is, I think, unmistakable.

The following table contains a selection of some of the most striking examples where Jer. a, Ezek. a and γ, and Min. Prophets or two of these three books (the Minor Prophets in the Greek must, as was said, be treated as a single book) stand alone 1, or nearly alone in their rendering of a Hebrew word or phrase, or in their employment of the same Greek word 9.

(a) Jer. a Ezek. a and γ and Minor Prophets.

1. דָבָא
   - Jer. 6: chaps. xxvi, xxx. xxviii [xii 14] (Lam.): Ezek. 7 (a' β): Min. 7 (Am. Jl. Ob. Zech.).
   - The Greek word occurs elsewhere in Hist. books 1. Maccab. 6. The Heb. is rendered elsewhere by σῶκειν, δισώκειν and (Psalms) πίστεια.

2. יוֹם
   - Jer. (xii 12): Ez. 6: Min. 8 (Ob. Zech.).
   - The verb occurs in Joshua.

3. תָּמָן
   - Jer. a': Ez. a: Min. 8 (Hos. Mi. Hb. Zeph. Zech.).
   - Only else in Greek books.

4. עַדְּרֵי
   - Jer. 12 (to xxviii 52): Ez. a 9 (to xxv 12): Min. 11. The verb is not common in other translated books. Is. has it once only (= בסו).

5. משי
   - Jer. a: Ez. a passim γ: Mal. 1. Else only in Ezek. 1Ch. 1, 2, Sir.

6. דִּבְּרֵי
   - See Table III 2.

9 It will be seen that Lamentations agrees with this group in some renderings. Both the recent Bible dictionaries (s.v. 'Lamentations') assert that this book cannot have been translated by the 'translator of Jeremiah.' The original authority for this statement is Nöldeke (Die alttest. Literatur, 1868, p. 144). The only reason which gives is that 'die [Uebersetzung] der Klageblieder ist recht wörtlich, die des Jeremia frei und sehr nachlässsig,' and this dictum is unsupported by any examples. I was at first inclined to think that Lamentations might belong to the group containing Jeremiah a. So far as vocabulary goes, they have a certain amount in common: witness the use of ἐπιθύμεις, ἐπιθυμοῦσα, ἐφάνης, ἐφανεῖται, κατάγης, κατάγειν δέχεται. But some differences, e.g. the regular rendering of מ in Lamentations by κα γά, and the rendering of παρά by βάρα (Jeremiah a uses ἄρμοδος and θερμόδος), now led me to think that the Greek of Lamentations is the work of another and a later hand.

This positive evidence may be supplemented by a certain amount of negative evidence, namely the absence from this group of books of such common words as καθά (one doubtful instance in Ez. α and one in Jonah), οὔ, παύεια, παύει (one instance in Jer. a), παραγωγικά, παίνει (one instance at the end of Jer. a), ποιεῖ, εμπορεύεται, εμπορεύεται, εμπορεύεται.

In some instances Jeremiah α diverges from the group, and Ezekiel and the Minor Prophets seem to be somewhat more closely related to each other than they are to Jeremiah. Thus, the following, which are used in common by Ez. α and γ and the Minor Prophets, are absent from Jer. a: ἔξοχον (οὐ - α), κατάκειται, ἐν τρόπον, ἑπηράνει.

The instances given above in Table IV may not in themselves be sufficient to establish identity of translators. Some of them might be due to imitation. I think, however, that the general agreement in vocabulary existing in these prophetical books affords strong cumulative evidence that we have here another group answering to that earlier group of the five books of the Greek Pentateuch for which the earliest tradition and all intrinsic evidence indicate a common origin.

As to the position of the Greek Isaiah, its rendering of 'Lord of hosts' is sufficient by itself to distinguish it from the group which we have been considering. The translator is, moreover, less competent on the whole than the translator or translators of the Jeremiah group, though he tries to hide his ignorance by paraphrase or abbreviation, occasionally giving the general sense of a passage, while omitting to render the difficult words. Such deliberate deviation from the original is quite foreign to the translators of the other prophetical books, who honestly, although often with little success, try to find an equivalent for every word in the Hebrew. On the other hand, the Isaiah translator, while careless about producing a literal rendering, employs a Greek which much more nearly approaches the classical style than the Greek of the more painstaking translators of the other prophetical books. This may be illustrated by his use of connecting particles. καί, δέ, γάρ are freely inserted, where there is no corresponding Hebrew word; we may note also the use of καί τῶν, διότι τῶν (iii 8), τοίνυν (iii 10, v 13), τοίνυν διά τούτο (xxvii 4), τῶν δέ (xxvii 28), ἀλλὰ τῶν (iii 13), τούκαμπτον (v 26), οὐ γάρ . . . ἀλλά (v 24). The greater ease of style, and the tendency to give a free rather than a verbatim rendering, are, I think, marks of a comparatively early date. Another characteristic of the Isaiah translation, which perhaps also points to an early date, is the agreement which it shows in some of its renderings with the book of Exodus. An ephah is rendered by μέγρα τρία only in Ex. xvi 36 and Is. v 10; τῶ (usually rendered πάροῦκα or προσήπτα) is represented by the strange word γιώρας (γεύρας) only in Ex. xii 19 (ii 22, Philo, De Confus. Ling. 17) and Is. xiv 1; the anthropomorphism by which Jehovah is called 'a man of war' is avoided by the same paraphrase συντρίβων πολίμων in Ex. xv 3, Is. xliii 13. Cf. also the use of the words θησαυρός and κόσμιον, and the phrase εἰς τὸν αἰώνα χρόνον (Ex. xiv 13, Is. seven times). With Genesis the Isaiah translator uses κόσμον and συναγωγή ὦδας (Is. xix 6, xxxvii 25, Gen. i 9).

Further results may, I believe, be obtained in the grouping of the 2 Swete, Introd. to O. T., p. 316.

3 A characteristic phrase of the Isaiah translator is μεγάς καὶ μέγας (ἀστρ. μέγας ἐκ μεγάλου). He seems to have recourse to this when in doubt as to the meaning of the Hebrew. It occurs as the equivalent of five different Hebrew phrases (ix 14 (13), xxii 5, 24, xxxiii 4, 19), none of these being the common ὑψος τινὸς ὄνομα which the Greek phrase ordinarily renders in other parts of the LXX.
books of the LXX by a careful study of their style and vocabulary. As an instance of this I should like, in concluding this note, to mention that, just as the Greek Isaiah stands apart from the other prophetic books, so 1 Kingdoms seems to stand apart from the other three Books of Kingdoms and the Book of Judges. Although, owing to a large admixture of Hexaplaric readings, it is difficult to arrive at the earliest text in these books, and there is no clear evidence of so close a connexion as appears to exist between the later prophetic books, yet there are certain features common to, and practically confined to 1, 2, 3 and 4 Kingdoms, in which, as in other respects, they are distinguished from 1 Kingdoms. Thus, the peculiar use of ἐγὼ εἰμι (=ōn) before a finite verb (ἐγὼ εἰμί ἢγομαι and the like) is practically confined to 1, 2 K., 3 K., 4 K. (seven times: also vii 29 ὧν ἢδηκονομα, 3 K. (once), 4 K. (three times)). Keptariπα for 'trumpet' (ῥῆψις) is confined to 1, 2 K. (B text five times, A text once), Ruth, 2 K. (seven times: also vii 29 ὧν ἢδηκονομα, 3 K. (once), 4 K. (three times)). 1 Kingdoms uses μόνος, which is found along with μονότιτα in 2, 3 and 4 K. Note also the use of the following in 1 K.: βεσαρων (= ΒΕΣΙΜ 'guilt-offering'), the transliteration γιδαφος (=ΡΟΣ: 2, 3, 4 K. render by μονότιτα, ἢδηκονομα, σύντριμμα, δικέων and δικαίων (ΟΔΕ: Jd, Ruth, 2, 3, 4 K., &c., use κρίνεω, κρίνης), the adjective λομός to render ' (sons of) Belial' (παράκοφος in Dt., Jd., 2, 3 K., &c.). Many of the renderings in Jd., 2, 3, 4 K. mentioned above find attestation in some part of the Hexapla. I should be inclined to say that the original Greek of these books, when all due allowance has been made for the subsequent intrusion of Hexaplaric readings, was akin in many respects to that of the later Greek versions (Aquila, &c.), and that the versions of these historical books were made at a comparatively late date. 1 Kingdoms represents the first attempt to translate 'the earlier prophets' (ἡλεόθοροι καὶ ἱεροφάνειαι), as the Greek Isaiah exhibits the first attempted rendering of 'the later prophets' (ὁμοίως οἱ ἄρτιοι). It is curious to note that it is only in these two books that the Divine title τὸ θεὸν is consistently represented by Κυρίος σαβαωθ. As an instance I should like, in concluding this note, to mention that, just as the Greek Isaiah stands apart from the other prophetic books, so 1 Kingdoms seems to stand apart from the other three Books of Kingdoms and the Book of Judges. It may be worth while briefly to state the conclusions reached:—

1. Isaiah was the first of the prophetical books to be rendered into Greek.

2. The first half of Jeremiah, the greater part of Ezekiel, and the whole of the Minor Prophets were afterwards translated en bloc, possibly by a single hand, possibly by a small group of collaborateurs.

3. The remaining portions of Jeremiah and Ezekiel exhibit a style quite distinct from that which is found in the last-named group. These portions may have been made at the same time as the last group (this part of the work, with a view to expediting the translation of these two long books, being entrusted to persons not conversant with the methods of the translator or translators of the rest of the group), or they may be the work of a still later date, the earliest versions of these books having been only fragmentary.

4. In the case of Ezekiel, and possibly in other books, the rendering given of the lessons read on the great festivals, such as Pentecost, in the synagogues at Alexandria, formed the basis on which a complete translation was afterwards engrafted.

5. 1 Kings was like the Greek Isaiah, a first attempt at rendering one of the main divisions of the Hebrew Bible, and exhibits a different style from that of the later versions of 2, 3 and 4 Kings.

ON SOME CHRISTIAN GRAVESTONES FROM OLD DONGOLA.

A few months ago Mr. Carl Armbruster, of King's College, Cambridge, and now of the Nubian Civil Service, sent to Cambridge three fragmentary gravestones with Greek inscriptions which had been long used as building material near Old Dongola. They are of interest as coming from so far up the Nile, for Old Dongola is about halfway between the great dam of Aswān and Khartum itself. There is also a further feature of interest arising from the fact that one of the stones is dated 812 A.D., a curiously late date for a Greek inscription from the heart of Nubia. The other two stones, however, look earlier, and may be assigned to the seventh and eighth centuries. But in any case they seem to be later than the Mohammedan conquest of Egypt.
