

4. Does the monkish garden of Gethsemane meet our requirements?
 5. Does the monkish site of the Holy Sepulchre?

These questions have of course a close bearing upon the site of the crucifixion; the notices of it all convey the idea of an intervening gorge or valley.

The women watched "beholding afar off" (ἀπὸ μακρόθεν), Matt. xxvii. 55. St. Mark describes the centurion in command as standing "over against him" (ἐξ ἐναντίας), xv. 39; and he and St. Luke also describe the women as "watching afar off" (ἀπὸ μακρόθεν).

I should fancy that the site of the crucifixion must be sought along the Bethany road, on the eastern side of the valley of Jchoshaphat.

INSCRIPTION FROM JERASH.

THE following inscription was copied by Captain Warren on his visit to Jerash in 1867. Accident led to the discovery that the Rev. R. B. Girdlestone had a copy taken ten years before Captain Warren's visit, and when the stone was in better preservation. He very kindly placed his copy, with conjectural restoration of some parts wanting, in the hands of the Secretary of the Fund.
