Reformation & Revival Journal is published four times each year by Reformation & Revival Ministries, Inc., a not-for-profit teaching ministry organized in the state of Illinois in 1991. The ministry is committed to the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments as the infallible Word of God and is in essential agreement with the confessional statements of historic Reformation theology. The purpose of this ministry is centered in its name:

1. To encourage reformation in the local Christian churches worldwide,
2. To promote the cause of revival and spiritual awakening through prayer and the provision of resources to aid Christian leaders.

The conviction of the staff and editors of the Reformation & Revival Journal is that awakening, of the kind seen in the First Great Awakening in America, wedded to the doctrinal concerns of the historic Protestant Reformation as expressed in the terms sola scriptura, sola gratia, and sola fide, is needed in our generation.

EDITOR'S INTRODUCTION

John H. Armstrong

What is true revival? How do I know when claims of the Spirit's unique work in revival are false? In an age gone virtually mad with talk about revival is there any good reason to still use the term? These questions set the context for this issue of Reformation & Revival Journal.

True revival is still the hope of many who pray for the recovery of an exhausted and weak church in our time. But it seems as if almost everyone is talking about revival these days. Christian leaders ought to be exercised by the need for revival, and pray accordingly. They also should be troubled by the growing false claims of revival. And they ought to be able to tell the difference. It is imperative that godly leaders be enabled to separate the wheat from the chaff in terms of revival claims.

Clearheaded biblical discernment appears to be missing in many corners of the church in our generation. On the one hand we have so many professions of faith and reports of the Spirit moving in powerful revival that you would think these were the greatest days in the entire history of the church. On the other hand we have a number of confessional church bodies and leaders who steadfastly resist the idea of revival as a positive thing for the church in our time. Some even insist that revival is no longer possible. The editorial staff of this publication disagrees with these two reports. Whereas we believe that revival is God's gift we also believe in the need to call men and women to seek the face of God in true repentance. We long to see God stir up His people and "rend the heavens" (Isa. 64:1) once again. We are also convinced that if God grants a true revival it will result in a recovery of the power of God in the message of the gospel. Nondoctrinal, or theologically unsound, revivals are never the answer to the church's immediate problems.

Will you join us in praying that the truth which has been trampled down in the streets of our age will be restored? And will you join your effort with ours to seek our holy, sovereign God for another outpouring of His mercy upon the church? My personal prayer is that this issue of the Journal will stir your soul to these ends.
