A Quarterly for Church Renewal

VOLUME 14 · NUMBER 1 · 2005

Justifying faith is not only a penitent faith, but also an obedient faith.

NORMAN SHEPHERD

There is only one way of obtaining eternal life, and there has always been only one way.

P. ANDREW SANDLIN

The New Testament documents, throughout, reveal the same ambiguity in the evaluation of the law that we [find] in Jesus. Just as they reveal a parallelism between Moses and Christ, which is sometimes antithetic (John and Hebrews) and sometimes synthetic (Matthew and Paul, broadly speaking), so they find in the law both the passing shadow of the gospel to come and that which is completed or fulfilled "in Christ." They all affirm that the law, insofar as it is the expression of the holy will of God, remains valid, radicalized, and at the same time relativized, by the absolute claim of love.

W. D. DAVIES

That the Old Testament concept of law is, in fact, the biblical concept of law is nowhere seen more clearly than in the continuance throughout the Bible of the same pillars of true religion: grace and law. For the purpose of God remains the same, the obedience of his people, and it remains true that those who thus walk in the light find that the blood of Jesus Christ keeps cleansing them from all their sin.

A SELECT ANNOTATED BIBLIOGRAPHY

John H. Armstrong

- *Bahnsen, Greg L., Walter C. Kaiser, Jr., Douglas J. Moo, Wayne G. Strickland, and Willem A. VanGemeren. Law, the Gospel, and the Modern Christian: Five Views. Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1993. This remains one of the finest overviews of five nuanced and well-argued approaches to law and gospel within evangelical theology. A careful reading of this type of volume will demonstrate that there is not one simple solution to the issue.
- *Bruce, F. F. Paul: Apostle of the Heart Set Free. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1977. The insight, clarity and sheer biblical sanity of the late F. F. Bruce is refreshing. His insights into law and gospel are remarkably helpful.
- Calvin, John. The Institutes of the Christian Religion. Translated by Ford Lewis Battles. Philadelphia: Westminster Press, 1960. John Calvin's views on law and gospel are the historic gold standard for Reformed theologians. Even where he is wrong the reader needs to at least consider his magisterial thought in the light of modern exegetical work.
- Carson, D. A., Peter T. O'Brien, and Mark A. Seifrid, editors. Justification and Variegated Nomism, Volume One: The Complexities of Second Temple Judaism. Grand Rapids: Baker, 2001. This volume contains an important treatment of issues related to the current debate about the meaning of "Second Temple Judaism."
- Douma, J. The Ten Commandments: Manual for the Christian Life. Translated by Nelson D. Kloosterman. Phillipsburg, New Jersey: Presbyterian & Reformed, 1996. This is an insightful and important conservative Dutch work that will reward a diligent reading.

- Dunn, James D. G. Jesus, Paul and the Law. Louisville: Westminster/John Knox, 1990. You will find this a very important treatment by a very important New Testament scholar who has contributed widely to the so-called New Perspective.
- Dunn, James D. G., editor. Paul and the Mosaic Law. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 2001. Sixteen front line New Testament scholars make noteworthy contributions to the subject, including N. T. Wright, Martin Hengel, and Richard B. Hays.
- *Dunn, James D. G. The Theology of Paul the Apostle. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1998. This is a major work which clarifies and expands the field of Pauline studies by using the "New Perspective" as a lens through which to understand the dichotomy between faith and "the works of the law." It is an important academic work.
- *Fuller, Daniel P. Gospel and Law. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1980. This little book challenges Calvin and Luther in dealing with Galatians and Romans and should be readily at hand if you want to get a sense of the modern evangelical debate about law and gospel.
- Fuller, Daniel P. The Unity of the Bible. Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1992. This is a much debated attack upon the presuppositions of both the dispensational and covenantal hermeneutical systems. It is fair, well argued, and an important challenge to be reckoned with by students of the Bible.
- *Garlington, Don B. Faith, Obedience and Perseverance: Aspects of Paul's Letter to the Romans. Tübingen: J. C. B. Mohr (Paul Siebeck), 1994. This rigorously academic work has been very important in helping me come to grips with the relationship of obedience to faith in Paul's theology.
- Garlington, Don B. "The Obedience of Faith": A Pauline Phrase in Historical Context. Tübingen: J. C. B. Mohr (Paul Siebeck), 1991. Like the above title, this is an immensely valuable academic and exegetical study.

- Hesselink, I. John. Calvin's Concept of the Law. Allison Park, Pennsylvania: Pickwick Publications, 1992. This is an exceptional work for anyone interested in Calvin studies. Karl Barth wrote of it, "Insofar as I understand Calvin, the author has introduced us not only to the magnitude but also the problematic of Calvin's concept of the law. This merits our gratitude all the more."
- House, Paul R. Old Testament Theology. Downers Grove, Illinois: InterVarsity Press, 1998. House is a solid biblical theologian and his work offers good material on law and gospel issues.
- Kaiser, Walter C., Jr. Toward an Old Testament Theology. Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1978. Kaiser has attempted to write a serious biblical theology that reckons with the weaknesses of traditional systems.
- McGrath, Alister E. Justification by Faith. Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1988. McGrath offers the best treatment we have of the historic debates regarding justification by faith. This is his more popular treatment of the subject.
- Ridderbos, Herman. Paul: An Outline of His Theology. Translated by John Richard De Witt. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1975. This is, for my money and time, the finest overall treatment of Paul's theology produced by a conservative Reformed author in the late twentieth century.
- Robertson, O. Palmer. The Christ of the Covenants. Phillipsburg, New Jersey: Presbyterian & Reformed, 1980. This is a standard treatment from the Reformed side that is important for arguments on both sides of the contemporary debate.
- Sanders, E. P. Paul, the Law, and the Jewish People. Minneapolis: Fortress, 1983. This is one of the earlier seminal works advocating the newer view of Second Temple Judaism.
- *Sandlin, P. Andrew, editor. Backbone of the Bible: Covenant in Contemporary Perspective. Nacogdoches, Texas: Covenant Media Press, 2004. This collection of papers, given at a 2004 symposium in California, is a gold mine for thinking through the theological implications addressed. The chapters by Sandlin and Shepherd are particularly noteworthy.

Schreiner, Thomas R. The Law & Its Fulfillment: A Pauline Theology of Law. Grand Rapids: Baker, 1993. Schreiner has a good grasp of the basic arguments and defends a fairly traditional understanding well.

Schreiner, Thomas R. Paul: Apostle of God's Glory in Christ. Downers Grove, Illinois: InterVarsity Press, 2001. This is a conservative and Reformed work that grapples with the important themes in Paul's thought in the light of the central theme, which Schreiner believes to be the revelation of "God's glory in Christ."

Shepherd, Norman. The Call of Grace: How the Covenant Illuminates Salvation and Evangelism. Phillipsburg, New Jersey: Presbyterian & Reformed, 2000. This is a very little book with a very big idea. All who agree, or disagree, with Norman Shepherd should read this book with an open mind.

Sproul, R. C. Getting the Gospel Right: The Tie That Binds Evangelicals Together. Grand Rapids: Baker, 1999. Sproul, an effective and clear teacher, argues for the centrality of "merit" in salvation and the idea that we are saved by Christ earning our redemption through his perfect keeping of the law in our place. Sproul concludes, following one type of covenantal theology, that we are saved by works, the works of Christ earning God's salvation outside of us.

Thielman, Frank. Paul & the Law. Downers Grove, Illinois: InterVarsity Press, 1994. This is a solid work, another important conservative Reformed argument for the post-Reformation understanding of law and gospel.

*Thompson, Michael B. The New Perspective on Paul. Cambridge, England: Grove Books Limited, 2002. This is the finest short introduction to the subject, which employs simple and easy to follow outlines for ordinary readers.

Westerholm, Stephen. Perspectives Old and New on Paul: The "Lutheran" Paul and His Critics. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 2004. Westerholm provides the most important and academically rigorous defense of the "Lutheran" position on Paul as over against the "New Perspective."

*Wright, N. T. What Saint Paul Really Said: Was Paul of Tarsus the Real founder of Christianity? Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1997. For the ordinary reader this is the place to get into Wright's views of law and gospel in Pauline theology. His chapter on justification is extremely important to the modern discussion.
